Now for finding the ſignification of the Hebrew words, beſides the ordinary Dictionaries, which are more common, the reader will ſometimes find cited R. David Kinchi's Radices, or Roots, a dictionary in Hebrew by him compiled for the words uſed in the ſcripture, from whom our ordinary Lexicographers borrow much, and again Abu Walid, an ancienter author than he, whom he often cites by the name of Rabbi Jonah, as Aben Ezra doth by the name of R. Marinus, his name at length being Abu Walid Marun Ebn Jannahi Cordubenſis, a very learned man, and of great credit among them, called, Prince of Grammarians, who wrote divers tracts about Grammatical matters, the laſt of which is his book of roots or dictionary, expounding the Hebrew in Arabick, in which language he wrote all. There is nothing of his, that I know, printed, that which is cited is manuſcript; ſo is alſo another dictionary of R. Tanchum, which we made uſe of, though not properly compoſed for ſcripture words, but for ſuch as occur in the Miſnaioth (or text of the Talmud) and Maimonides, and an old Hebrew and Arabick gloſſary. Add to theſe the heads of the Hebrew concordance compiled by R. Nathan, which have been tranſlated into Latin by Antonius Reuchlinus, and alſo by the learned Mr. Nicolas Fuller, whoſe tranſlation is not printed, but in his own hand writing remains in the Bodleian Library. Under this head may come alſo ſome Arabick Lexicons, which it was neceſſary to make uſe of, for ſeeking after the ſignification of divers Hebrew words, by comparing them with the ſame roots in the Arabick: a way neceſſary to be taken in regard that that copious language continuing in greater latitude than the Hebrew (from which it had its original, and retains that affinity to that in the opinion of [h] ſome of the learneſt Jews, it may paſs rather for only a dialect of it than a diſtinct language from it) affords often the genuine ſignifications of divers roots, which are now loſt in the Hebrew, and of ſeveral words which occur ſo ſeldom in the original text, (which is all that we have left of that language in its purity, and cannot contain all words) that it will be hard to find the right meaning of them without that help, which therefore the moſt learned of the Rabbins take and direct to, by making ſearch into that neighbouring language wherein they will be often found more common, and the meaning of them be manifeſtly declared by the known uſe of them therein. What is ſaid of the Arabick language, is to be ſaid of the Syriack and Chaldee, they alſo, together with the Hebrew, being ממשפחה אחת of one family, as Aben Ezra ſpeaks, only that they are not, as now left, ſo copious as the forementioned.

Theſe helps being uſed for finding of the ſignification of ſingle words, on which the ſenſe mainly depends, it was yet farther convenient for giving the meaning of them in the context or ſentence in which they are placed in conſtruction with others, to conſult expoſitors or commentators, and thoſe of ſeveral ſorts, Jews and Chriſtians: the Jews becauſe, though they have now ſo far loſt their own ancient language, that it is not any more common to them as a vernacula, or mother tongue, but, what they have of it, they learn, as others that ſtudy it do; yet do thoſe of them who will get any learning, ſo make that their whole ſtudy from their child-hood, that they are more than ordinary verſed in it, and get more ſkill in the letter of the ſcriptures, than uſually any others; at leaſt did ſo, when thoſe writers which we have to deal with flouriſhed; ſo that their comments are, and have been always thought to be, very helpful for attaining the literal meaning of the text, except in ſuch places as are prophecies concerning Chriſt, or make for the chriſtian religion againſt them: in ſuch they being obſtinately ſet on maintaining their traditions received from their fathers, and with them combining againſt Chriſt, will be ſure to wreſt them as far as they can from the right meaning. But then, that is another reaſon why we ſhould look narrowly into them, that where they pervert any ſuch text, we may vindicate and reſcue it out of their hands, that they may not ſecurely triumph among themſelves, as if they had the ſcripture on their ſide againſt us. And that hath been indeed no ſmall part of my buſineſs in ſuch places, which hath made me perhaps ſometimes ſo long to dwell on them, as to make me ſeem tedious to the reader: but I knew not how well to avoid it without betraying the cauſe, or giving up the buckler to them.

Thoſe that we eſpecially make uſe of, are Rabbi Salomo Jarchi, R. Abraham Ezra, R. David Kinchi, and Iſaac Abarbinel, (or as ſome call him, Abrabaniel) who are all well known by name, as being printed and given account of by Buxtorf and others, whoſe expoſitions, where they might ſeem to the purpoſe, I have as far as I could, laboured to give a faithful account of, though to prolixity, that if we be not always directly holpen by them in finding the truth, we might ſee how and wherein they err from it, and ſo by the diſcovery thereof, be more earneſtly ſtirred up to ſeek after it and embrace it. Beſides theſe, the reader will find often cited one R. Tanchum, an Hieroſolymitan, who is leſs known, becauſe never yet printed, although, as far as I can judge, he might as well deſerve to be ſo as ſome of the reſt, as as much conducing in divers places to the underſtanding of the text, as any of them. He wrote notes in the Arabick language on the whole Old Teſtament (as himſelf declares) though I have not had the happineſs to ſee them on divers of the books thereof; on the Prophets (all but Iſaiah) I have. When he lived I know not, only it appears he was after the time of Moſes Maimonides, whom he often cites, and follows in many things. To theſe may be added Talkut, a book ſo called, being a collection of divers allegorical expoſitions on the ſcripture. What other Hebrew books are cited, and are printed, I ſhall not need give particular account of, ſeeing any that deſires it may have it in Buxtorf's Bibliotheca Rabbinica, and others. The Chriſtian expoſitors, or Other writers, Greek,

[h] See Notæ Miſcell. ad Portam Moſis, c. 1. p. 5.

Greek, Latin, or Others that are made uſe of and cited, are ſuch as are well known to all that look into ſuch books, and any may know what concerns their works by looking into them, and ſeeing what account they give thereof in their prefaces. That they are of different profeſſions, it matters not in this buſineſs. We had to examine how far they help for finding out the true meaning of the text, not what their opinions otherwiſe were, it being more to be regarded what is ſaid, than who ſaid it, and the truth abſtracted from conſideration of the perſon and his authority, to be received at any hand. Their difference in their expoſitions ſends us again to look more narrowly into the text, and to ſee what that will bear, and which of them beſt agrees to that by which all muſt be tried. And that they ſhould ſo much differ among themſelves is no wonder, if we conſider how great variety of opinions in explication of things there often is, where they are uttered in the plaineſt terms, and the moſt known language and uſual phraſe of the times: how much more then, when this original language here uſed, is ſo long time ſince grown out of uſe, and many expreſſions in it, then doubtleſs, even by the vulgar well underſtood, ſeem now as ſo many riddles, and much of the hiſtory and cuſtoms of thoſe times quite forgotten? and even then in the prophetick writings, there were ſome things that ſeemed dark, according to what we read, Ezek. xx. 49. Ah Lord, they ſay of me, Doth not he ſpeak parables? So that all helps for the making things plain that we have, though improved to the higheſt, are little enough, if at beſt ſufficient. One may perhaps do more than another, yet none ſo much as not to leave more for others to do. It may not ſeem ſtrange therefore, that after ſo many learned commentaries written, others ſhould yet endeavour to make ſome things plainer, at leaſt, and more known, by the help of their labours, and by addition perhaps of ſome other helps which they had not the uſe of; there will be room in this field while the world laſteth, till we come where that tongue which is now ſo far loſt, ſhall, as ſome think, be again the univerſal language.

As to this preſent work, the thing firſt propoſed was to have given the meaning of the text in brief marginal notes; but upon ſecond thoughts, it was deemed more convenient, that firſt a larger expoſition, wherein things might be diſcuſſed, and the reaſons and grounds of differing opinions, as to the interpretation of doubtful places, laid open, leſt what ſhould be otherwiſe poſitively ſaid, might ſeem too magiſterially ſpoken; which being done, out of it may ſhorter notes (if occaſion ſerve) be taken, and the reader be referred for the juſtifying of them to the larger; and in them perhaps he may in ſome places find, that I dare not paſs judgment for preferring one expoſition before another, and there it is referred to him to take his own choice, or make uſe of either as occaſion ſhall ſerve, when more are agreeable to the words and analogy of faith, and give a good meaning.

I have not meddled with drawing from the words inferences and concluſions. That will be every man's own work when he hath a ſettled meaning to ground on, without which, they will be as a ſuperſtruction without a foundation. But what I have done, the reader, whoſe candour I beg wherein I have erred, or been defective, or ſuperfluous (as oft having to deal with ſo many different Expoſitors, whoſe opinions I had to look into and give account of, I have, I doubt, been inforced to be) will judge. If I have contributed any thing, though never ſo little, in this kind, which may be to God's glory, and the churches good, I have the utmoſt of my deſire, and humbly thank God alone for ſo far inabling me.

AUTHORS

AUTHORS cited in the PREFACE and following WORK.

Abarbinel.
Abendana.
Michlal Yophe.
Aben Ezra.
Abu Walid.
Ainſworth.
Arabick verſion printed.
R. Azaias.
Arabick Verſion MS.
Biblia Buxtorphiana.
Biblia Bombergiana.
Biblia Complutenſia.
Doway Bible.
Bochartus.
De Animalibus.
Peleg.
Brennius.
Buxtorfius, Vindiciæ contra Capellam,
Lexicon Rabbinicum, Grammatica Heb.
Calvinus.
Calviſius.
Capella.
Critica Sacra.
Chriſtophorus à Caſtro.
Caſtalio.
Chaldee Paraphraſt.
Chryſoſtome.
Cozari.
Cyrillus Alexandrinus
Lud. De Dieu.
Diodati.
Druſius.
Dutch Notes.
Ebn Chalican.
St. Ephraim (or Aphreim as in [Syriack)
Eſtius.
Flacius Illyricus.
Nicolaus Fullerus, Miſcellanea.
R. Gedaliah.
Glaſſius.
Gloſſarium Hebræo Arabicum.
Golius.
Greek Verſion of the LXXII.
Gregorius Abulpharagius.
Grotius.
Hackſpan.
Biſhop Hall.
Hammond.
Hieronymus.
Hotinger.
R. Japhet.
Jonathan Paraphraſt.
R. Judah.
Junius.
Ramùs an Arabick Dictionary.
R. David Kimchi.
Liber Radicum.
Comment.
R. Joſeph Kimchi.
Vulgar Latin Tranſlation.
Cornelius à Lapide.
R. Lipman.
Nitzachon.
Lyra.
Maimonides.
Moreh Nebochim.
Yad Hachazekah, &c.
Mareſius.
Mead.
Menochius.
Arias Montanus.
Munſterus.
Nobilius.
Oecolampadius.
Olympiodorus.
Onkelos Paraphraſt.
Origen.
Pagninus.
Paræus.
Pelicanus.
Petrus à Figueira.
Piſcator.
Polychronius.
Ravanella.
Raimundus.
Ribera.
Emmanuel Sa.
R. Saadias.
Sanctius.
Sandys.
Schindler.
Schultingius.
Sionita.
Soaded.
R. Solomon Jarchi, which from the firſt letters of his name is likewiſe called Raſhi.
Stokes.
Syriack Verſions, two.
Al-Tacriti.
Talmud.
R. Tanchum.
Targum.
Tarnovius.
Tertullian.
Theodoret.
Theodotion.
Theophylactus.
Thomas Heracleenſis.
Thorndike's various readings of the Syriack.
Tigurin Tranſlation.
Tirinus.
Tremellius.
Various readings of the Greek in the Francfort edition.
Vatablus.
Yalkut.
Zamachſhari lib. Aſas.

A COMMENTARY ON THE PROPHECY OF MICAH.

CHAP. I.

VERSE 1. The word of the Lord that came to Micah the Moraſthite, in the days of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he ſaw concerning Samaria and Jeruſalem.

THIS prophet is by the ſame name and title mentioned, Jer. xxvi. 18. called the Moraſthite from the name of his city or place, where he was born or lived, which, whether it were Moreſheth mentioned ver. 14. [a] as ſome think, or Mareſhah, ver. 15. and Joſh. xv. 44. [b] as many others will have it, or ſome other place of that name, as 'tis hard to determine, ſo not very material. That it was pertaining to the tribe of Judah, and not of Ephraim, as [c] Some think, is more than probable, becauſe in aſſigning the time of his prophecy, he nameth only ſuch kings of Judah, under whom he propheſied, not any king of Iſrael, which, if he had been a ſubject to them, 'tis probable he would have done, (as [d] a learned Jew notes) eſpecially ſeeing his prophecy concerneth not Judah alone, but the ten tribes alſo, as thoſe of Hoſea and Amos do. Another [e] Jew ſays, 'tis manifeſt, that his country was of thoſe places, that belonged to the kings of Iſrael, for what reaſon he ſheweth not.

Samaria and Jeruſalem.] The firſt was the chief city of the kingdom of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, the other of the kingdom of the other two tribes, viz. Judah and Benjamin, and ſo under them is comprehended the whole of both kingdoms [f]. God being provoked by their ſins declares, that he will proceed with great ſeverity in judgment againſt them, and doth it in ſuch terms, as might juſtly rouze them up from ſecurity, and awaken them to a ſpeedy repentance.

2. Hear, all ye people, hearken, O earth, and all that therein is, and let the Lord God be witneſs againſt you, the Lord from his Holy Temple.

By people may be underſtood (as by moſt is) either the people of thoſe countries, or of all others; and ſo by earth either particularly that land, or the whole habitable world, and the fulneſs thereof, that is, as 'tis well expreſſed, all that therein is, all the inhabitants thereof, which fill it, and occupy it. The people of that land are more peculiarly ſpoken to, and his judgments particularly denounced now againſt them: yet what is ſaid or done to them, is for example to all others, [g] and they may be looked on as ſummoned to take notice thereof, and to conſider the juſtice of God's judgments, and his way of proceeding againſt obſtinate ſinners.

O earth.] Though by earth may well be underſtood the people on the earth, yet becauſe of the words that follow it may ſeem to note the earth it ſelf, and ſo ſheweth, that ſuch is the terror of the judgments that God denounceth, as that the earth it ſelf ſhould be ſo moved, as if it were ſenſible thereof; and ſo reproveth their great [h] ſtupidity, in that ſenſeleſs creatures are called on, as if they would would ſooner hear than they. See Iſaiah i. 2. and xxxiv. 1. Jerem. vi. 19. and xxii. 29. the like expreſſions: as alſo, chap. vi. 2. and elſewhere.

[a] Junius and Tremellius. [b] Rab. Tanchum. [c] Chriſtophorus à Caſtro. [d] Abarb. [e] R. Tanchum. [f] Vatablus. [g] Pelicanus, Oecolamp. Calvin. Deodat. [h] Calvin.

Let the Lord God be witneſs againſt you.] When thoſe evils, that I denounce, ſhall come upon you, he ſhall thereby convince you, that I faithfully declared his will unto you, [i] and forewarn'd you of what ſhould certainly be, except you did repent; and conſequently that you periſhed through your own wilful obſtinacy, and your refuſing to give ear to my meſſage from his part delivered to you. For illuſtrating the expreſſion, ſee Pſal. l. 7. and eſpecially Ruth i. 24. and Malach. iii. 5.

From his holy temple.] Tho' this might in a convenient ſenſe be underſtood of the temple at Jeruſalem, and is ſo by ſome, yet is by others a reaſon given againſt that, becauſe the temple was at Jeraſalem, [k] and belonging then only to the kingdom of Judah, whereas the judgments here denounced concern the ten tribes alſo, who then had nothing to do with the temple. Altho' this reaſon ſeemeth not ſufficient [l] to others. However, by the moſt it is underſtood of heaven, called his temple (as Pſal. xi. 4.) [m] of which the earthly temple was a repreſentation, God being alſo ſaid to dwell in it, Solomon ſaying that he built it for an houſe for the Lord to dwell in, 1 Kings viii. 13.

3. For behold, the Lord cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth.

The Lord cometh forth out of his place, &c.] God, who is every where preſent, filleth all places, and is bounded by none, is yet more particularly ſaid to be there, where he exhibiteth more peculiarly his majeſty and glory, as in his proper place; ſo in the heavens, and ſo of old in the temple of Jeruſalem: and he is [n] ſaid to come forth out of his place, and to come down to any other place, [o] when he ſhows there more apparent tokens of his taking notice of what is done there by men, (which before they might think him not to do, and to be abſent from them) and effects of his preſence and power there by acts either of mercy or judgment, for executing of which he is therefore here ſaid to [p] come forth, and to come down. Some, that in the former words by his temple underſtand the temple at Jeruſalem, here by his place underſtand the ſame, and by his coming [q] forth out of it, the withdrawing the gracious tokens of his majeſtatick preſence, which he was wont there to afford: and that he would not be confined (as it were) to that place, but from his [r] throne of mercy betake him to his throne of judgment, and ſhow forth his power every where in puniſhing them.

And tread upon the high places of the earth.] [s] All that is higheſt, exalted in the land, or among the people. Their towers, and ſtrong places, their princes, and chief ones ſhall he bring under, as a thing that is moſt weak, and contemptible, troden upon, or cruſhed by the foot: none of them ſhall be able to reſiſt him, or ſtand before him; [t] or ſhewing himſelf to be high above the higheſt on earth, as a man is above what he treads under his foot.

4. And the mountains ſhall be molten under him, and the valleys ſhall be cleft: as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down a ſteep place.

And the mountains, &c.] Farther to expreſs the terror, with which God will proceed in judgment againſt them, he repreſents him as a conſuming fire (as he is ſaid to be, Deut. iv. 24. and ix. 3. and Hebrews xii. 29.) or as accompanied with a fire that ſhall devour before him, and a great tempeſt round about him, (as Pſal. l. 3.) or with burning coals going forth at his feet, Hab. iii. 5. for, ſaith he, the mountains ſhall be molten under him, ſhall be conſumed, ſaith the ancient Latin, ſhall be moved, or tremble, the Greek and Arabick, which tho', as to what is meant, they come all much to one paſs, yet as the word properly ſignifieth to melt or be melted, ſo that it ought ſo to be here rendred, appeareth by what is ſubjoined, as wax before the fire. Neither may this expreſſion, that mountains and rocks ſhould be molten, ſeem improper, if we conſider, what hath of late time been ſeen in the eruptions and flowings of Mount Ætna, and is ſeen in other places (as Strombelo, &c. from which continual ſtreams of fire, and molten matter iſſue down) or what thoſe that make experiments that way will tell us may be done by fire on the hardeſt marble.

And the valleys ſhall be cleft.] [u] Hab. iii. 9. 'tis ſaid, thou didſt cleave the earth with rivers, ſo perhaps it may be here underſtood, that the valleys ſhould be cleft or rent with thoſe fiery ſtreams, that ſhould come down from thoſe molten mountains, or, ſhall be rent and broken into pieces. By ſome it is rendred, ſhall be diſſolved, (ſo the Greek and Arabick) but the proper notion of the word is to cleave or to be cleft. The ſame word is uſed, Gen. vii. 11. where 'tis ſaid, the fountains of the great deep were broken up. That theſe words are not here literally to be underſtood, and according to what they properly ſound, as if theſe things, which are ſaid, ſhould really ſo be done, is manifeſt, but by way of ſimilitude, to expreſs, that as great things ſhould be done, as thoſe mentioned, viz. that God ſhould in executing his judgments appear with ſuch irreſiſtible power, that no perſons, or places, tho' they might ſeem as ſtrong as the mountains, as firmly fixed as the earth, ſhould be able to reſiſt, or endure before it, any more than wax before the fire, or, ſubſiſt and keep together, and ſtand in their place, any more than waters poured down a ſteep place; but as eaſily be brought down and deſtroyed, as wax wax is molten before the fire, as ſpeedily as waters run down in ſuch a place. By mountains [w] ſome underſtand, thoſe that dwell on the mountains, [x] or, cities on the mountains; [y] Others, ſuch as were of higheſt degree, greateſt power, and eminency among them: and ſo on the contrary, by valleys, they underſtand the inhabitants of the valleys, or towns in lower places, or thoſe of lower condition: that the ſcope may be, that none of any condition, or in any place, high or low, ſhall be able to reſiſt, or eſcape his puniſhment; it ſhall find them out, and reach them all. Theſe threats were made good in the deſtruction of Iſrael by Salmanaſer, of Judah by Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar.

[i] Tarnovius. Ab Ezra. R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi. [k] Druſius & Tarnovius. [l] Abarb. [m] Deodat. [n] Moreh Neb. lib. 1. c. 10. and 23. [o] Vatablus, Grotius, Tarnovius. [p] Iſaiah xxvi. 21. [q] Abarb. Calv. [r] Raſhi. [s] Amos iv. 13. [t] R. Tanch. on Amos iv. 13. [u] Compare 2 Pet. iii. 10, 12.

5. For the tranſgreſſion of Jacob is all this, and for the ſins of the houſe of Iſrael. What is the tranſgreſſion of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jeruſalem?

For the tranſgreſſion of Jacob is all this.] Of all this, that is threatned, the cauſe is on their part, viz. the many provoking ſins, of which the whole family of Jacob, conſiſting now of the two kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael, are guilty. Jacob and the houſe of Iſrael, are both names, which may comprehend the whole twelve tribes, as denominated from their Father Jacob, who was alſo called Iſrael. They are ſometimes more particularly uſed to expreſs the ten tribes as diſtinct from Judah and Benjamin. Here all the twelve tribes ſeem ſpoken of, Judah as well as the others being accuſed and threatned. [z] Some think by Jacob to be meant all the twelve tribes, and by the houſe of Iſrael more particularly the ten; [a] Others on the contrary, by Jacob the ten tribes, and by Iſrael, Judah with Benjamin, becauſe in the following words Jacob and Judah are diſtinctly named. Yet Others alſo by both of them [b] think only the ten tribes here meant, and that they are named becauſe they were moſt in number. It will not much concern us nicely to diſpute about this, ſeeing the judgments are denounced againſt them all; and when the words were ſpoken, we ſuppoſe they all of them knew, how by theſe names they were meant and ſpoken to, Iſaiah viii. 14. they are called both the houſes of Iſrael, and in this prophecy, chap. iii. 1. and 9. we read, the heads of the houſe of Jacob, and princes of the houſe of Iſrael, when the princes of Judah are manifeſtly ſpoken of, who built up Zion with blood.

What is the tranſgreſſion of Jacob?] Here by Jacob ſeem particularly denoted the ten tribes, becauſe Samaria was the chief city of their kingdom. Yet [c] Others would have this name here alſo to comprehend all the twelve tribes, becauſe, ſay they, Samaria was the cauſe of idolatry, not only to thoſe tribes, who were properly under the kingdom of Iſrael, but to Judah alſo, which thence took the infection.

What is? or, [d] as Others think it more properly rendred, Who is the tranſgreſſion? i. e. Who is the cauſe of the tranſgreſſion of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? that is, the king, or inhabitants of Samaria? which being the chief city of the kingdom at that time, corrupted all the other places thereof by its ill example. So, who is the high places of Judah? that is, who is the cauſe that in ſeveral places of Judah high places, contrary to the law, are built for falſe worſhip? Is it not Jeruſalem the royal city? that is, the king, and inhabitants of Jeruſalem, who having firſt built ſuch there, the infection thence ſpread it ſelf through the whole land of Judah, and they alſo did what they ſaw done at Jeruſalem: for looking on that as an holy city, they ſuppoſed nothing would be done there which they ought not to follow.

6. Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard; and I will pour down the ſtones thereof into the valley, and I will diſcover the foundations thereof.

Samaria as an heap of the field.] Samaria having been firſt in ſin, ſhall be firſt in puniſhment: which puniſhment is here deſcribed. He who, for the wickedneſs of the inhabitants, maketh of a city an heap, of a defenced city a ruin, Iſaiah xxv. 2. will cauſe her by the Aſſyrians his inſtruments to be made [e] as an heap of the field, or a waſt hillock, or heap of rubbiſh in the field; And as plantings of the vineyard, ſuch places as are planted with vines, which they uſe to plant on hillocks, as beſt thriving in ſuch places: ſo that the place where Samaria ſtood ſhall be as ſuch a field only, and for ſuch uſe, as if there never had been there a populous inhabited city. This ſhall be brought to paſs by their rowling or throwing down the ſtones thereof (for it ſtood on an hill) into the valley, when they ſhall have raſed it to the very foundation, and plucked up even the loweſt ſtones that were covered with the earth, ſo that there be not left one ſtone ſtanding upon another, Mat. xxiv. 2. Luke xix. 44. (where the like deſtruction of the temple and Jeruſalem is deſcribed.) The Latin renders it, as an heap of ſtones in the field, where a vineyard is planted: [f] and ſo ſome expound an heap of the field, an heap of ſtones gathered out of the field, that they may not hinder them that work; and thrown up together, afterwards to be thrown out of the field, and diſperſed; [g] Others ſomewhat differently; but all make the ſcope to be the expreſſion of utter deſtruction and deſolation. Compare chap. iii. 12. and Jer. xxvi. 18. where the ſame thing that here is meant, is expreſſed in terms tending to the ſame purpoſe.

[w] Tarnov. [x] Grot. [y] R. Tanchum. Vatabl. Abarb. Hieron. [z] Abarb. [a] C. à Caſtro. Rib. [b] R. D. Kimchi. [c] Abarb. [d] R. Tanch. Ab. Ezr. R. D. Kimchi. [e] R. Tanch. [f] Calvin. Jun. and Trem. [g] R. D. Kimchi. Abarb. &c.

would ſooner hear than they. See Iſaiah i. 2. and xxxiv. 1. Jerem. vi. 19. and xxii. 29. the like expreſſions: as alſo, chap. vi. 2. and elſewhere.

Let the Lord God be witneſs againſt you.] When thoſe evils, that I denounce, ſhall come upon you, he ſhall thereby convince you, that I faithfully declared his will unto you, [i] and forewarn'd you of what ſhould certainly be, except you did repent; and conſequently that you periſhed through your own wilful obſtinacy, and your refuſing to give ear to my meſſage from his part delivered to you. For illuſtrating the expreſſion, ſee Pſal. l. 7. and eſpecially Ruth i. 24. and Malach. iii. 5.

From his holy temple.] Tho' this might in a convenient ſenſe be underſtood of the temple at Jeruſalem, and is ſo by ſome, yet is by others a reaſon given againſt that, becauſe the temple was at Jeraſalem, [k] and belonging then only to the kingdom of Judah, whereas the judgments here denounced concern the ten tribes alſo, who then had nothing to do with the temple. Altho' this reaſon ſeemeth not ſufficient [l] to others. However, by the moſt it is underſtood of heaven, called his temple (as Pſal. xi. 4.) [m] of which the earthly temple was a repreſentation, God being alſo ſaid to dwell in it, Solomon ſaying that he built it for an houſe for the Lord to dwell in, 1 Kings viii. 13.

3. For behold, the Lord cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth.

The Lord cometh forth out of his place, &c.] God, who is every where preſent, filleth all places, and is bounded by none, is yet more particularly ſaid to be there, where he exhibiteth more peculiarly his majeſty and glory, as in his proper place; ſo in the heavens, and ſo of old in the temple of Jeruſalem: and he is [n] ſaid to come forth out of his place, and to come down to any other place, [o] when he ſhows there more apparent tokens of his taking notice of what is done there by men, (which before they might think him not to do, and to be abſent from them) and effects of his preſence and power there by acts either of mercy or judgment, for executing of which he is therefore here ſaid to [p] come forth, and to come down. Some, that in the former words by his temple underſtand the temple at Jeruſalem, here by his place underſtand the ſame, and by his coming [q] forth out of it, the withdrawing the gracious tokens of his majeſtatick preſence, which he was wont there to afford: and that he would not be confined (as it were) to that place, but from his [r] throne of mercy betake him to his throne of judgment, and ſhow forth his power every where in puniſhing them.

And tread upon the high places of the earth.] [s] All that is higheſt, exalted in the land, or among the people. Their towers, and ſtrong places, their princes, and chief ones ſhall he bring under, as a thing that is moſt weak, and contemptible, troden upon, or cruſhed by the foot: none of them ſhall be able to reſiſt him, or ſtand before him; [t] or ſhewing himſelf to be high above the higheſt on earth, as a man is above what he treads under his foot.

4. And the mountains ſhall be molten under him, and the valleys ſhall be cleft: as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down a ſteep place.

And the mountains, &c.] Farther to expreſs the terror, with which God will proceed in judgment againſt them, he repreſents him as a conſuming fire (as he is ſaid to be, Deut. iv. 24. and ix. 3. and Hebrews xii. 29.) or as accompanied with a fire that ſhall devour before him, and a great tempeſt round about him, (as Pſal. l. 3.) or with burning coals going forth at his feet, Hab. iii. 5. for, ſaith he, the mountains ſhall be molten under him, ſhall be conſumed, ſaith the ancient Latin, ſhall be moved, or tremble, the Greek and Arabick, which tho', as to what is meant, they come all much to one paſs, yet as the word properly ſignifieth to melt or be melted, ſo that it ought ſo to be here rendred, appeareth by what is ſubjoined, as wax before the fire. Neither may this expreſſion, that mountains and rocks ſhould be molten, ſeem improper, if we conſider, what hath of late time been ſeen in the eruptions and flowings of Mount Ætna, and is ſeen in other places (as Strombelo, &c. from which continual ſtreams of fire, and molten matter iſſue down) or what thoſe that make experiments that way will tell us may be done by fire on the hardeſt marble.

And the valleys ſhall be cleft.] [u] Hab. iii. 9. 'tis ſaid, thou didſt cleave the earth with rivers, ſo perhaps it may be here underſtood, that the valleys ſhould be cleft or rent with thoſe fiery ſtreams, that ſhould come down from thoſe molten mountains, or, ſhall be rent and broken into pieces. By ſome it is rendred, ſhall be diſſolved, (ſo the Greek and Arabick) but the proper notion of the word is to cleave or to be cleft. The ſame word is uſed, Gen. vii. 11. where 'tis ſaid, the fountains of the great deep were broken up. That theſe words are not here literally to be underſtood, and according to what they properly ſound, as if theſe things, which are ſaid, ſhould really ſo be done, is manifeſt, but by way of ſimilitude, to expreſs, that as great things ſhould be done, as thoſe mentioned, viz. that God ſhould in executing his judgments appear with ſuch irreſiſtible power, that no perſons, or places, tho' they might ſeem as ſtrong as the mountains, as firmly fixed as the earth, ſhould be able to reſiſt, or endure before it, any more than wax before the fire, or, ſubſiſt and keep together, and ſtand in their place, any more than waters poured down a ſteep place; but as eaſily be brought down and deſtroyed, as wax wax is molten before the fire, as ſpeedily as waters run down in ſuch a place. By mountains [w] ſome underſtand, thoſe that dwell on the mountains, [x] or, cities on the mountains; [y] Others, ſuch as were of higheſt degree, greateſt power, and eminency among them: and ſo on the contrary, by valleys, they underſtand the inhabitants of the valleys, or towns in lower places, or thoſe of lower condition: that the ſcope may be, that none of any condition, or in any place, high or low, ſhall be able to reſiſt, or eſcape his puniſhment; it ſhall find them out, and reach them all. Theſe threats were made good in the deſtruction of Iſrael by Salmanaſer, of Judah by Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar.

[i] Tarnovius. Ab Ezra. R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi. [k] Druſius & Tarnovius. [l] Abarb. [m] Deodat. [n] Moreh Neb. lib. 1. c. 10. and 23. [o] Vatablus, Grotius, Tarnovius. [p] Iſaiah xxvi. 21. [q] Abarb. Calv. [r] Raſhi. [s] Amos iv. 13. [t] R. Tanch. on Amos iv. 13. [u] Compare 2 Pet. iii. 10, 12.

5. For the tranſgreſſion of Jacob is all this, and for the ſins of the houſe of Iſrael. What is the tranſgreſſion of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jeruſalem?

For the tranſgreſſion of Jacob is all this.] Of all this, that is threatned, the cauſe is on their part, viz. the many provoking ſins, of which the whole family of Jacob, conſiſting now of the two kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael, are guilty. Jacob and the houſe of Iſrael, are both names, which may comprehend the whole twelve tribes, as denominated from their Father Jacob, who was alſo called Iſrael. They are ſometimes more particularly uſed to expreſs the ten tribes as diſtinct from Judah and Benjamin. Here all the twelve tribes ſeem ſpoken of, Judah as well as the others being accuſed and threatned. [z] Some think by Jacob to be meant all the twelve tribes, and by the houſe of Iſrael more particularly the ten; [a] Others on the contrary, by Jacob the ten tribes, and by Iſrael, Judah with Benjamin, becauſe in the following words Jacob and Judah are diſtinctly named. Yet Others alſo by both of them [b] think only the ten tribes here meant, and that they are named becauſe they were moſt in number. It will not much concern us nicely to diſpute about this, ſeeing the judgments are denounced againſt them all; and when the words were ſpoken, we ſuppoſe they all of them knew, how by theſe names they were meant and ſpoken to, Iſaiah viii. 14. they are called both the houſes of Iſrael, and in this prophecy, chap. iii. 1. and 9. we read, the heads of the houſe of Jacob, and princes of the houſe of Iſrael, when the princes of Judah are manifeſtly ſpoken of, who built up Zion with blood.

What is the tranſgreſſion of Jacob?] Here by Jacob ſeem particularly denoted the ten tribes, becauſe Samaria was the chief city of their kingdom. Yet [c] Others would have this name here alſo to comprehend all the twelve tribes, becauſe, ſay they, Samaria was the cauſe of idolatry, not only to thoſe tribes, who were properly under the kingdom of Iſrael, but to Judah alſo, which thence took the infection.

What is? or, [d] as Others think it more properly rendred, Who is the tranſgreſſion? i. e. Who is the cauſe of the tranſgreſſion of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? that is, the king, or inhabitants of Samaria? which being the chief city of the kingdom at that time, corrupted all the other places thereof by its ill example. So, who is the high places of Judah? that is, who is the cauſe that in ſeveral places of Judah high places, contrary to the law, are built for falſe worſhip? Is it not Jeruſalem the royal city? that is, the king, and inhabitants of Jeruſalem, who having firſt built ſuch there, the infection thence ſpread it ſelf through the whole land of Judah, and they alſo did what they ſaw done at Jeruſalem: for looking on that as an holy city, they ſuppoſed nothing would be done there which they ought not to follow.

6. Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard; and I will pour down the ſtones thereof into the valley, and I will diſcover the foundations thereof.

Samaria as an heap of the field.] Samaria having been firſt in ſin, ſhall be firſt in puniſhment: which puniſhment is here deſcribed. He who, for the wickedneſs of the inhabitants, maketh of a city an heap, of a defenced city a ruin, Iſaiah xxv. 2. will cauſe her by the Aſſyrians his inſtruments to be made [e] as an heap of the field, or a waſt hillock, or heap of rubbiſh in the field; And as plantings of the vineyard, ſuch places as are planted with vines, which they uſe to plant on hillocks, as beſt thriving in ſuch places: ſo that the place where Samaria ſtood ſhall be as ſuch a field only, and for ſuch uſe, as if there never had been there a populous inhabited city. This ſhall be brought to paſs by their rowling or throwing down the ſtones thereof (for it ſtood on an hill) into the valley, when they ſhall have raſed it to the very foundation, and plucked up even the loweſt ſtones that were covered with the earth, ſo that there be not left one ſtone ſtanding upon another, Mat. xxiv. 2. Luke xix. 44. (where the like deſtruction of the temple and Jeruſalem is deſcribed.) The Latin renders it, as an heap of ſtones in the field, where a vineyard is planted: [f] and ſo ſome expound an heap of the field, an heap of ſtones gathered out of the field, that they may not hinder them that work; and thrown up together, afterwards to be thrown out of the field, and diſperſed; [g] Others ſomewhat differently; but all make the ſcope to be the expreſſion of utter deſtruction and deſolation. Compare chap. iii. 12. and Jer. xxvi. 18. where the ſame thing that here is meant, is expreſſed in terms tending to the ſame purpoſe.

[w] Tarnov. [x] Grot. [y] R. Tanchum. Vatabl. Abarb. Hieron. [z] Abarb. [a] C. à Caſtro. Rib. [b] R. D. Kimchi. [c] Abarb. [d] R. Tanch. Ab. Ezr. R. D. Kimchi. [e] R. Tanch. [f] Calvin. Jun. and Trem. [g] R. D. Kimchi. Abarb. &c.

poſe. [h] That Samaria was thus ruin'd by the Aſſyrians ſeems manifeſt out of the 2 Kings xvii. 24, &c. where the people brought up by the king of Aſſyria, are ſaid to be placed in the cities of Samaria, not in Samaria it ſelf.

7. And all the graven images thereof ſhall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof ſhall be burnt with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay deſolate: for ſhe gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they ſhall return to the hire of an harlot.

And all the hires thereof.] That we may know what is meant here by hires, compare Hoſea ii. 12. where the idolatrous people are taxed for ſaying of their vines and figtrees, Theſe are my rewards (or hire, for the word is of the ſame root with this here, and differs only in the laſt letter) that my lovers, that is, my idols have given me. Add out of ver. 5. for ſhe ſaid, I will go after my lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oyl and my drink.---And what God ſaith, ver. 8. ſhe did not know that I gave her corn and wine, and oyl, and multiplied her ſilver and gold, which they prepared for Baal, viz. for preſents to Baal, or wherewith they made Baals, as chap. viii. 4. it is ſaid, of their ſilver and their gold have they made them idols. Theſe expreſſions being conſidered, it will appear that by hires, may be conveniently underſtood all their wealth and good things, which they looked on as the gifts of their idols, and rewards of their ſervice to them; or, thoſe precious things and rich donaries, which having receiv'd and gain'd from their own people, or others their friends and partners with them in their idolatry, they dedicated to their idols, or made images of, or adorned them and their temples with. And according to this laſt interpretation [i] Some will have the idols to be compared to harlots, and the idolaters to their lovers, who beſtow gifts on them for their hire and recompence of their lewdneſs: [k] but this is by Others excepted againſt, becauſe otherwhere in ſcripture the idolaters are compared unto ſtrumpets, which proſtitute themſelves and their idols to their lovers, or ſuch to whom they proſtitute themſelves. This ſcruple will be taken out of the way, if we conſider what is ſaid, Ezek. xvi. 31, 34. (concerning Jeruſalem) Thou haſt not been as an harlot, in that thou ſcorneſt hire. And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, in that thou giveſt a reward [or hire] and no reward is given thee: and again, ver. 41. I will cauſe thee to ceaſe from playing the harlot, and thou alſo ſhalt give no hire any more. The ſame word being in thoſe places uſed that is here, makes manifeſt that 'tis uſed not only for ſuch gifts and hire, as adulterers give to harlots, but for ſuch alſo as more unſatiable harlots give to men, to hire them to commit lewdneſs with them: and ſo if it be here underſtood of ſuch gifts as Iſrael gave to, not received from, her idols, ſhe may ſtill be looked on as the harlot, and the idols her lovers, and the gifts the hire of an whore, not received, but given by her. Theſe ſhall be all burnt with fire, except ſuch as the enemy ſhall ſee fit to carry away. And ſo the meaning of the following words will either be, and all the idols thereof will I lay deſolate, [l] that is, take them out of the way, that they be no more worſhipped; [m] or, as Others, will have by idols meant, the temples of their idols will I deſtroy; for ſhe gathered them of the hire of an harlot: all thoſe preſents and rich gifts, with which ſhe made, or adorned her idols, and their temples, ſhe gathered of the hire of an harlot, viz. from ſuch as ran on whoring after thoſe idols, and proſtituted themſelves to falſe Gods; and they ſhall return to the hire of an harlot, [n] ſhall fall into the hands of thoſe who are given to the like idolatry, and by them (namely, the Aſſyrians) be employed in the worſhipping and adoring of idols; as of the calf of Bethel 'tis ſaid, It ſhall be carried unto Aſſyria for a preſent to King Jareb, Hoſea x. 6. or elſe, according to the firſt interpretation, [o] all the wealth that they looked on as a reward of their idols to them, ſhall return or be given to ſuch, who ſhould likewiſe look thereon as gifts beſtowed on them by their idols, who, they thought, gave Samaria and all its ſpoils into their hands, (as Belſhazzar and his Lords, who drinking in the veſſels that were brought out of the temple at Jeruſalem, praiſed their gods of gold and ſilver, &c. as if they had beſtowed them on them, Dan. v. 3, 4.) [p] Others think it needleſs ſo nicely to proſecute the words, but that they be underſtood as a proverbial ſpeech, that all their wealth which they acquired in or by their idolatrous worſhip, and looked on as rewards from their idols with which they committed ſpiritual fornication, as it was like the hire of an harlot, ſo ſhould come to the ſame paſs, as uſually the hires of harlots do, which by the curſe of God on them come to nought, and do them no good. [q] There is another rendring of the words by ſome given, viz. Becauſe of the hire of an whore ſhe gathered [them,] and while there is the hire of an whore, they are turned away, that is, they impute their wealth, and ſuch things as they enjoy, to their idols, (as their hires or rewards from them) and while theſe things remain to them, they are turned away from me, who indeed have given them all, and forſake my ſervice. But this ſeems more harſh.

8. Therefore I will wail and howl, I will go ſtript and naked: I will make a wailing like the dragons, and mourning as the owls.

I will go ſtript and naked.] That is, as one ſpoiled and ſtript of his garment, whether by others, and ſo left naked, [r] or having himſelf, in in token of extream heavineſs and ſorrow, caſt off at leaſt his upper garment, wherewith he was uſually adorned. [s] Some expound it as one ſpoiled of his right mind and underſtanding, diſtracted through extremity of affliction and anguiſh of mind, and ſo caſting away his clothes, (which ſenſe, viz. of fooliſh or diſtracted, they will have the ſame word [שולל Sholal] to have Job xii. 17, 19.) whether the prophet ſpeaks this of his own perſon, [t] that in compaſſion to them he cannot but conceive the greateſt ſorrow, and ſo will in all outward ſigns expreſs it: or whether he ſpeaks it as in their perſon, to ſhew what great affliction they ſhall be brought to, or in his own perſon repreſenting what ſhall befal them, as ſo Iſaiah xx. 2. is bid to go naked and barefoot for a ſign to the Egyptians and Ethiopians, that they ſhould be forced to do ſo, and therefore the Greek and the Chaldee Interpreters expound theſe words of the people in the third perſon, not as of the prophet in the firſt, that they ſhould ſo go ſtript and naked, and make a wailing, &c.

[h] Ethnah, Ethnan. [i] Abarb. Vatab. [k] Rib. [l] Chaldee Par. [m] R. D. Kimchi. [n] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanch. Abarb. [o] Rib. [p] Calvin. [q] Jun. and Trem. Tarnov. [r] Vatab. Tarnov.

I will make a wailing like the dragons, &c.] So almoſt all Interpreters render the word תנים Tannim, Dragons, only the ancient Syriack tranſlation renders it by ܝܥܘܪܘ yoruro, which in that language, as their own authors tell us, ſignifies a kind of wild beaſts like a dog, between a dog and a fox, or a wolf and a fox, which the Arabians call from the noiſe that they make, ابن اوي Ebn Awi or wawi واوي and our Engliſh travellers, and other Europeans, by a name borrowed from the people of thoſe countries, where they are more known than in Europe, Jakales, which abiding in the fields and waſte places, make in the night a lamentable howling noiſe, in ſo much that travellers unacquainted with them would think that a company of people, women or children, were howling one to another, as none that have travelled in the night in thoſe parts of Syria, &c. can be ignorant. And with him agreeth an Arab verſion of Rabbi Saadias (as is probable) rendering it بنات اوي Benat awi, that is, Jakales. This tranſlation ſeems to carry more reaſon with it, then the rendering it dragons; becauſe of the hiſſing of dragons, as other ſerpents, we hear and read, but no where in any creditable author of their howling, or making ſuch a noiſe, as may be called wailing, or like to it. And the ſame will be confirmed by the authority of a learned [u] Jew, who obſerves it for an error in Expoſitors, that in this, and ſome other places, they render dragons, where they ſhould render Jakales, viz. the beaſt which we mentioned. His note on this place is this, the trueſt interpretation is, that 'tis a beaſt called ابن اوي Ebn Awi, the property of which beaſt is, to gather together in the night, and to anſwer one another in crying and howling, ſo that wailing is compar'd to the noiſe that they make. Much like he notes on Jeremiah ix. 11. where what is rendered a den of dragons, according to him ought to be, an habitation of Jakales (as there likewiſe the Syriack hath it, as alſo chap. x. 22.) and on Mal. i. 3. he alſo notes, that there it ought to be ſo rendred Jakales, not dragons of the wilderneſs; as likewiſe; Lam. iv. 3. Thoſe wild beaſts, not ſeamonſters (as ours) or dragons (as others:) for, ſaith he, ſerpents (as dragons are) have no breaſts, and in both thoſe places the Syriack renders it by the ſame word, which it here (as we ſaid) uſeth. That which was cauſe of this miſtake in that laſt place he ſaith is, becauſe the word which ſignifieth Jakales in the plural number, is in writing the ſame with that which ſignifieth a dragon in the ſingular, both תנין Tannin, and ſo they took them for one in ſignification: and the ſame cauſe we may think every where to have given occaſion to this miſtake, viz. the likeneſs of the words of ſo differing ſignifications. To prevent ſuch miſtake, from what he hath ſuggeſted to us a rule may be thus ſummed up, that whereſoever we meet with תנים Tannim, or תנין Tannin, or תנות Tannoth (for they are all one in ſenſe) as plurals, they ſignify thoſe howling wild beaſts inhabiting waſte deſolate places. But where תנים Tannim (as Ezek. xxix. 3. and xxxii. 2.) with ם M. in the ſingular (which Rabbi Tanchum ſaith is ſubſtitute for ן N.) or תנין Tannin in the ſingular, or תנינים Tanninim in the plural, they are to be rendred, dragons, or ſerpents, or ſea-monſters, or whales, or the like, according as they are ſpoken either of ſuch creatures as are on the land, or in the waters. This rule is confirmed by the Syriack tranſlation which we mentioned, in that uſually (I think every where except Pſalm xliv. 19. where it rendreth תנים Tannim by ܬܢܝܢܐ Tenyono, which ſignifieth calamitous or dolorous, as the learned Sionita there notes,) where either of thoſe three forms of the firſt rank is found, there it renders it conſtantly by that word ܝܥܘܪܘ yoruro, which we ſaid ſignifies that howling beaſt; but where either of the latter, [w] there it uſeth another word, viz. ܬܢܝܢܐ Tanino, which ſignifieth a dragon, or ſerpent-like creature. And that theſe words ſo like in the letters in the Hebrew, may have theſe different ſignifications, may be farther made evident from the like uſe of the Arabick tongue, in which as תנין Tennin ſignifies a dragon or great ſerpent, ſo תינן Tinan ſignifies a wolf, to which the beaſt we ſpeak of is much like in kind, ſhape and conditions. [The Arabick verſion likewiſe in ſeveral places renders it بنات اوي Benat awi, Jakales.] It may be obſerv'd that uſually where the Syriack puts ܝܥܘܪܘ Yoruro, there the Chaldee, which is but a different dialect of the ſame tongue, puts ירודא Yaruda with the letter ד D. in the laſt place, which the tranſlators render dragon, but probably for no other reaſon than becauſe they thought the Hebrew word, which was rendred by it, ſo to ſignify. But it is not unlikely, that it ought ought to be rendred as the Syriack is: becauſe in thoſe places, wherein the Hebrew word manifeſtly ſignifies a dragon, there he uſeth another word, as the Syriack doth. Probably therefore the Chaldee ירורא Yaruda may in that dialect ſignify the ſame, that ירורו Yoruro in the Syriack, the one dialect pronouncing that by ד D. what the other doth by ר R. Or it is not impoſſible, that the ד D. crept into the place of ר R. by the miſtake of ſuch as tranſcrib'd it out of the firſt ancient copies, reading and ſo writing ד D. for ר R. it being well known how little difference there is between thoſe two letters, both in the Hebrew alphabet, in which letters the Chaldee is written, and likewiſe in the Syriack: ſo that it might be eaſy ſo to miſtake, if this may not ſeem too bold a conjecture.

[s] Raſhi. Ab. Ez. R. D. Kimch. [t] Munſt. [u] R. Tanch. [w] Job vii. 12. Iſaiah xxvii. 1. and li. 9.

And mourning as the owls.] Or Oſtriches, for ſo the ancient Interpreters generally render it. Some more modern render owls, which ſome [x] learned men prefer and defend. [y] Others again very learned are for retaining the old. They bring probable arguments on both ſides. But it is but conjecture againſt conjecture, there being no way of certainly knowing by other helps, what the word did ſignify among the Jews in ancient times, when the ſcriptures were written; only it ſeems manifeſt, [z] that it was a bird keeping in deſert places, and making a doleful and mournful noiſe: and ſuch that ſome ſort of owls make is well known. But it is affirm'd alſo by [a] travellers of good credit, that Oſtriches make a fearful ſkreeching lamentable noiſe: ſo that it will be hard to determine. Mr. Fuller who would have it rendred owls, and perhaps more particularly ſkritchowles, thinks that the word ſhould be more properly written ſtritcheowl: ſo we find in the Doway Engliſh-Bibles Striches in this place: but perhaps the letter O is by the Printers fault left out, and it ſhould be Oſtriches, for they render out of the vulgar Latin.

9. For her wound is incurable, for it is come unto Judah: he is come unto the gate of my people, even to Jeruſalem.

For her wound is incurable, [or grievous] or ſhe is grievouſly ſick of her wounds.] The cauſes of this lamentation are in the former words expreſſed, viz. 1. The deſperateneſs and incurableneſs of the wounds of Samaria, or the grievouſneſs of what ſhe ſuffered or ſhould ſuffer by the ſword, famine, plague, and captivity, every one of which was a ſore evil, with which ſhe was grievouſly afflicted. 2. The extent or far ſpreading of this wound, or theſe evils. They did not ſeize on Samaria, or Iſrael alone, and there ſtop, but proceeded and went on as far as to reach Judah alſo. [b] Some look on this as denoting that evil, which was brought on the cities of Judah by Sennacherib, who ſo far proceeded as to beſiege Jeruſalem it ſelf, ſome years after that Shalmaneſer had taken Samaria, and carried Iſrael captive, 2 Kings xviii. 9, 10, 11 and 13, 17. and 2 Chron. xxxii. 1, 2, &c. But others think this not enough [c] for the meaning of the words, becauſe this wound was not incurable to Jeruſalem, which God delivered from the hand of Sennacherib, wonderfully deſtroying his army by the hand of an angel, and bringing on him alſo deſtruction, as appears 2 Kings xix. 35, &c. and 2 Chron. xxxii. 21, 22. and [d] therefore will have here the final deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the carrying the Jews into captivity by Nebuchadnezzar to be pointed out, and to ſignify, that as now Samaria and Iſrael, ſo afterwards Jeruſalem and Judah ſhould be grievouſly afflicted and deſtroyed, none being able to cure their wound, to reſcue them from deſtruction.

He is come unto the gate of my people.] That is, the enemy, though not expreſſed, becauſe the verb is of the maſc. gender, whereas the preceeding nouns and verbs are of the feminine. [e] Others, it is come, viz. the thing or evil condition, the whole matter ſpoken of, which may be in either gender uttered.----Of my people, ſo Interpreters ſay the prophet ſpeaks, becauſe he was of the tribe of Judah.

10. Declare ye it not at Gath, weep ye not at all: in the houſe of Aphrah roul thy ſelf in the duſt.

Declare ye it not in Gath.] The like words are us'd, 2 Sam. i. 20. in David's lamentation over Saul and Jonathan, whence [f] Some look on it as an uſual form in lamentations for ſome great national calamity, intimating the greatneſs of it, being ſuch as their enemies would rejoice at, and therefore wiſhing it might be concealed, if poſſible, from them, and counſelling them not to make it known to them by any publick expreſſion of ſorrow, as weeping, &c. Gath was a city of the Philiſtines, enemies to Iſrael and Judah, [g] although then in poſſeſſion of the kings of Judah, and ſuch as would rejoice to hear what evil had befallen them.

In the houſe of Aphrah (i. e. duſt) roll thy ſelf in duſt.] [h] Aphrah, a place (as ſome will) not far from Jeruſalem, (perhaps the ſame with Ophrah which is reckon'd among the cities of the tribe of Benjamin, Joſh. xviii. 23.) There, [i] farther off from the Philiſtines, and that they may not take notice of it, ſilently mourn, or roll thy ſelf in duſt or aſhes (for the word ſignifieth either.) [k] Others, for the houſe or houſes of and belonging to Aphrah. [l] Others within Aphrah, viz. within thy own land, taking by this name to be deſign'd the whole land of Judah, which being laid deſolate ſhould be all duſt and dirt. [m] Others think the land of Ephraim to be ſignified by it, whoſe houſes ſhould be ruined or turned to duſt, or filled with it. The prophet, in this and [x] Full. Miſc. lib. 6. c. 7. [y] Bochart. de Animal. [z] R. D. Kimchi in Rad. [a] Sandys's Travels, p. 139.

[b] Abarb. [c] Tarn. Grot. &c. [d] Abarb. [e] R. Tanchum. [f] R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. Druſius. Grotius.
[g] Abarb. Vatablus. [h] R. Tanchum. [i] Abarb. [k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] בירח Abarb. [m] Grotius.

and the following verſes, reckoneth up ſeveral places whether belonging to Iſrael or Judah) by alluding to the names of which he expreſſeth the preſent or future condition, which they ſhould be brought to, together with others not named, even the whole land. [n] Others, becauſe ſome of thoſe names are not elſewhere found in ſcripture, think, that they were not the uſual proper names of the cities of the land, but names put upon them by the prophet, by which, and by deſcanting on them, he might declare, what he had to ſay of, or to the people, for making them ſenſible of what ſhould befal them. Some Interpreters therefore retain them as proper names, [o] Others render the meaning of thoſe names, our's do both, in the text giving us the names, and in the margin, the ſignifications of moſt of them.

Roll thy ſelf, &c.] Here (as in ſome other places) there are in the original Hebrew two readings, one in the text, which is called Cetib, i. e. that which is written; the other in the margin, which is called Keri, viz. that which is read, that which is read is התפלשי Hithpalleſhi, according to which 'tis generally by Interpreters rendred as the word ſounds, Roll thy ſelf, as the words of the prophet ſpeaking to the people: that which is written is התפלשתי Hithpallaſhti, and ſounds, I have rolled my ſelf; as if he ſpeaking of himſelf told them, what he did in his own perſon, mourning in ſecret for the calamities hanging over the land, and ſo ſhewed them, by his own example, what they ſhould do. Either ſenſe is good, and both aim at the ſame end, whether taken, as a precept, or an example.

11. Paſs ye away thou inhabitant of Saphir, having thy ſhame naked; the inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel, he ſhall receive of you his ſtanding.

Paſs ye away thou inhabitant of Saphir, &c.] Saphir ſignifieth fair or elegant. It is by ſome taken for a proper name of a city ſo called. By others as an epithet of ſome place, thereby noted for its fair ſituation or beauty, and [p] they will have Samaria to be meant by it. [q] Others underſtand it of the daughter of Judah, or Jeruſalem, which was beautiful for ſituation, Pſalm xlviii. 2. To this place or city, whatſoever it be that is called by this name, 'tis denounced in theſe words, that to it and its inhabitants ſhall be for their former beauty and glory now ſhame and confuſion. The other names alſo ſome apply to Samaria and Jeruſalem, but the expoſition will be plainer by taking them for proper names of places.

The inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel.] Of Zaanan in the margin is of the country of flocks. Others the going out, for ſo the Vulgar Latin hath it, She went not out that dwelleth in the going out; the word being by Some deriv'd from a noun צאן Zon, that ſignifieth ſheep or herds of little cattle, by Others from a root that ſignifieth to go out, even that by which here is an alluſion to it made. But the ſimpler interpretation will be to look on it, as a proper name, as the text of our Bibles doth. Saint Hierome long ſince noted theſe paſſages of the prophet in the preceding, this, and the following verſes, to contain ſuch difficulties as that there is great need of the aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit to explain them. He knew not how to reconcile the Greek verſion and his own, and fit them to the original, which were all that he had then to do with. How much more difficult will it be to reconcile ſo many tranſlations as have ſince come forth? The diverſity between them ariſeth from the different acception of the words, ſome taking them to ſignify one thing, ſome another, and from their different placing them in the conſtruction. Our tranſlators endeavour to keep as near the words in the original as they can, and the meaning of them according to their rendring ſeems this, That when Beth-ezel (which was firſt taken by the enemy) was led away mourning, the inhabitants of Zaanan came not forth to bewail with them, or comfort or help them, as ſtanding on their own guard for fear of the enemy, or, [r] knowing that the ſame calamity ſhould quickly befal themſelves, and ſo they ſhould have enough to do to bewail themſelves. [For] He ſhall receive of you his ſtanding, of you, O inhabitants of Zaanan, though you remain longer than thoſe of Beth-ezel, [yet] he, that is, the enemy, ſhall receive his ſtanding, that is, the reward for his labour, and time ſpent in beſieging, and taking you: your ſpoil ſhall be his recompence. [s] So both among the learned of the Jews and Chriſtians, do diverſe explain theſe words. And according to this expoſition Beth-ezel is look'd upon as firſt taken and deſtroy'd. There is by [t] another learned Jew another rendring given, whereby Zaanan is ſaid to be firſt deſtroy'd: he with ſome alteration, thus gives the meaning: The inhabitants of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel [or had not opportunity to come forth, &c.] which received its ſtanding more than you, or remained longer than you, or after you, that is, whereas they of Zaanan expected to have ſeen thoſe of Beth-ezel gone before them, and to have bewailed their calamity, 'tis come to paſs otherwiſe, and they retain their ſtanding more than you of Zaanan, or after you, and ſhall ſee your ruin and bewail you. He alſo citing Aben Ezra's expoſition gives this ſenſe of it, the inhabitants of Zaanan went not forth to mourning [and alſo] Beth-ezel ſhall take or learn of you its ſtanding, that is, to keep it ſelf at home, and not go forth to bemoan, or help its neighbours; but he rejects it, as going contrary to Grammar, and the punctation, in ſeparating למספד Lemiſpad, to mourning, from Beth-ezel in conſtruction, beſide that Beth-ezel keeping, or kept in by reaſon of its ſiege, as he ſuppoſeth it to be, cannot be ſo properly ſaid to learn, what it did not of its own choice, but was forced to. But this ſeems different from what our printed copies of Aben Ezra have. There is yet another expoſition, which offers it ſelf thus. The inhabitant of Zaanan ſhall not go free or eſcape, for ſo the word יצא Yatſa is uſed alſo to ſignify; the mourning of Beth-ezel, ſhall take from you (O inhabitants of Saphir or of Zaanan) its ſtanding, or its meaſure, or conjecture, that is, by ſeeing what you ſuffer, they of that place ſhall take gueſs, or learn what ſhall befal them. This expoſition ſeems to keep as cloſe to the letter as any, and is confirm'd as to the firſt part of it by the Chaldee Paraphraſe, as to the latter by ſome of the learned [u] Jews. It may be brought nearer to the foregoing thus. The inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel: he ſhall take his gueſs from you, that is, by you (of Beth-ezel or Saphir) learn what ſhall be his own condition. In theſe expoſitions the names are taken as proper to places ſo called, (which ſeems the plaineſt way) againſt which is denounced, that the like evils ſhall overtake them; the others look on them rather as epithets, or names put only in reſpect to the preſent occaſion, to denote Samaria, or Jeruſalem, or Judah, or others. [w] A learned Jew of that opinion to this purpoſe; that as for the daughter of Judah, which would not ſtir abroad to condole with her neighbour, but kept at home ſtill and quiet, the enemy ſhould take from them the quiet and tranquillity of their kingdom, and remove them away into captivity; ſo rendring that which ours render ſtanding, by ſtability, tranquillity or quiet habitation. To the ſame purpoſe ſome Chriſtians alſo, as Arias Montanus. Junius and Tremellius thus render, The inhabitant of the place abounding with flocks (or cattle) ſhall not go forth, there ſhall be mourning in the places near adjoining, which receive from you their ſubſiſtence. The Vulgar Latin thus, ſhe went not out, that dwelleth in the going out; the houſe adjoining ſhall receive lamentation of you, which ſtood to her ſelf. In ſuch variety of expoſitions (and more may be found) the reader may have liberty of chooſing: he will be hardly able to reconcile them.

[n] Deodat. [o] Lat. Vulg. [p] Rib. Grot. &c. [q] Abarb. Mont. [r] R. D. Kimchi. R. D. Kimchi. Michlal Yophi. Vatabl. Druſ. &c. [s] R. Tanchum.

12. For the inhabitant of Maroth waited carefully for good, but evil came down from the Lord unto the gate of Jeruſalem.

For the inhabitant of Maroth waited carefully, &c.] That is, [x] expected, that good ſhould come, but it came not, but on the contrary evil came, &c. The margin has was grieved, the word ſignifying both to expect, or wait for, and to be grieved or be in pain or ſorrow as a woman in travel. They were ſeized on with grief or ſorrow, becauſe (for ſo the particle כי Ci properly ſignifies) evil came down, &c. Maroth therefore ſeems to be a city in the neighbourhood of Jeruſalem, or one that had dependence on it, and ſo could not but be involved in calamity, when that was diſtreſſed; and ſo grieved for good, that is, for its want, and being deprived of that good which it hoped for, or once enjoy'd, by the coming of evil down unto the gate of Jeruſalem, or as far as the chief city, Jeruſalem it ſelf. See ver. 9. The name of Maroth, [y] Some will have here by tranſpoſition of letters, put for Ramoth, viz. the cities ſingly called Ramah, of which there were more in the lands of Judah, and Benjamin, and ſo to comprehend them all, put in the plural number, and called Maroth, bitter, or bitterneſſes, from the bitter calamities that ſhould befal them. Others tranſlate the word [z] Rough places, [a] Others Bitterneſſes. [b] Others think the whole kingdom of Judah by this name deſign'd, in reſpect to the many evils in her, and ſorrows that were to come upon them. But the taking it otherwiſe than for the proper name of a city, doth (as in the forenamed and following places) but open a way to more uncertain conjectures, and doubtful interpretations.

13. O thou inhabitant of Lachiſh, bind the chariot to the ſwift beaſt: ſhe is the beginning of the ſin to the daughter of Zion: for the tranſgreſſions of Iſrael were found in thee.

O thou inhabitant of Lachiſh, bind the chariot to the ſwift beaſt, &c.] Lachiſh is ſaid to [c] have been a city of Judah, nigh to the border of the ten tribes, and ſo reckoned up among the cities belonging to Judah, Joſh. xv. 39. againſt which Sennacherib King of Aſſyria laid ſiege, 2 Kings xviii. 13, 14. and Iſaiah xxxvi. 1, 2. and ſaid to have been one of the laſt defenced cities that remained of the cities of Judah, when Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up with his armies to fight againſt Jeruſalem, and againſt all the cities of Judah that were left, Jer. xxxiv. 7. denouncing againſt this city the evils that were to come upon it, he bids the inhabitants thereof to bind the chariot to the [d] ſwift beaſt (as horſes, mules, or the like) or ſaddle the ſwift beaſt, that is, ſay [e] Some with good probability, prepare for ſpeedy flight from the enemy which ſhall come upon you, or to go away out of your country. [f] Others think, that 'tis ſpoken to them by way of deriſion, you that were wont ſo to do, viz. to bind the chariot to the ſwift beaſt, ([g] as formerly abounding in ſuch things, and priding themſelves therein) do ſo now; as much as to ſay, that the caſe was now altered with them, [h] and they were not able to do as they were wont to do, when they could at pleaſure call for their chariots and horſes. [i] Others take it as if they were bid to make ready chariots riots at the command of the conquering enemy, to convey his meſſengers from Lachiſh to Jeruſalem, to demand the city to be rendred up to him, (as he did, Iſaiah xxxvi. 2.) The verb רתם Retom rendred bind, is no where elſe found in ſcripture, but ([k] as a learned Jew ſaith) the ſenſe requires that it be ſo taken. The Latin tranſlation indeed renders the words otherwiſe, viz. Tumult of the chariot of aſtoniſhment to the inhabitants of Lachiſh. But why the author thereof ſhould render this word רתם Retom, Tumult, or the Greek, a noiſe, or the following word רכש Receſh, aſtoniſhment, no reaſon is given by thoſe that follow that tranſlation. As for the firſt word, wherever, beſides in this place, a noun of the ſame root is found, it ſignifies a plant, whether Broom, a pliable plant that is eaſily bound, or as Others will, Juniper, but never any thing like tumult or noiſe. And as for the ſecond, it is not found but [l] in the ſignification either of horſes, or ſuch like ſwift beaſts, or elſe of wealth and riches, whether in cattle or other goods. But it may be obſerv'd as to the firſt, that the ſame theme רתם Ratam, in the Arabick tongue, which is of great affinity with the Hebrew, ſignifies both to break, or daſh and beat in pieces (from which the notion of tumult, and noiſe, or craſhing is not much different) and alſo to tye or bind on. For the ſecond word רכש Receſh, whether he took it to be of nigh ſignification to the word רגז Regez not much different in ſound, and ſignifying fear, trembling, and great commotion, or what other reaſon he had to render it as he does, is uncertain; for the Greek takes it for horſes, or horſemen, as in the Syriack alſo it ſignifies, and is here put.

[u] Abu. Walid, (and ſee Ab. Ezra) R. Tanchum in libro Murſhed in the roots עמד and אמד. [w] Abarb. [x] R. Tanchum. [y] Grot. Stokes. [z] Jun. Trem. [a] Vulg. Latin. [b] Abarb. [c] R. Tanchum. [d] R. Tanch. Gloſs. Heb. Ar. [e] R. D. Kimchi, Munſter. [f] R. Tanch. [g] Abarb. [h] Aben Ezra. [i] Grot. Stokes.

She is the beginning, &c.] The crime laid to the charge of the inhabitants of Lachiſh, is, that She was the beginning of the ſin to the daughter of Zion, or Jeruſalem, viz. that ſhe, being firſt infected with idolatry receiv'd from Iſrael (on whoſe land ſhe bordered,) ſpread it abroad in the reſt of the country, even as far as Jeruſalem it ſelf. Thoſe ſins, whereby Iſrael tranſgreſſed, were found in her, and propagated from her, or by her. In the firſt part of the verſe 'tis ſaid, She is, and in the latter, in thee, with a change of perſons, though ſpeaking of the ſame. This is the expoſition by the moſt given, and is more eaſy and probable than that which [m] Some bring, viz. that the ſin objected to Lachiſh is their rebellion againſt King Amaziah, wherein they conſented with, if not gave occaſion to Jeruſalem, according to the hiſtory, 2 Kings xiv. 18. and ſo were tranſgreſſions in her like thoſe of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, which rebelled againſt the houſe of David from Jeroboam's time and after.

14. Therefore ſhalt thou give preſents to Moreſheth-Gath: the houſes of Achzib ſhall be a lie to the Kings of Iſrael.

Therefore ſhalt thou give preſents to Moreſheth-Gath.] For theſe thy evil doings ſhalt thou be brought to that condition, that thou ſhalt be fain to ſend preſents to thoſe that are thine enemies, as Moreſheth-Gath, a place or city of the Philiſtines, to obtain aſſiſtance from them, (which ſhall be in vain to thee:) or, as [n] Some by way of deriſion, give now preſents, &c. as thou wert wont; or, as the margin hath it, for Moreſheth-Gath, that is, [o] to redeem and obtain favour for thy ſelf, and thy neighbour city, if poſſible. But the learned Jews will not have על Al, here rendred, for, but to ſignify the ſame that אל El, to, as in ſeveral other places it doth. In this way Moreſheth-Gath is taken for the name of a place, or city, probably nigh or belonging to Gath, a place often mentioned. Others conſidering the word Moreſheth as coming from the root ירש Yaraſh, which ſignifies to inherit, accordingly tranſlate it [p] to the inheritance of Gath, and the word שלוחים Shilluchim, which we render preſents, they render emiſſaries (the word being from the root שלח Shalach, to ſend) [q] they taking it to be as applicable to perſons, as things ſent; which if they take [r] for meſſengers ſent to implore aſſiſtance from them, the ſenſe will be much to the ſame purpoſe; but if, as Divers [s] expound it, for ſcouts, or ſpoilers, as if the meaning were, that Lachiſh being taken ſhould afford to the King of Aſſyria ſoldiers, which he ſhould together with his own ſend to make inroads on the poſſeſſions of Gath, it ſeems more harſh: and more yet to interpret it, that the King of Aſſyria [t] ſhould ſend ſpoilers, &c. for it is ſpoken to, or of Lachiſh, that ſhe ſhould give. Nor ſeems it plain with others to expound, [u] To the inheriter of Gath, that is, to the Aſſyrian, which hath taken that city for his inheritance and poſſeſſion, thou ſhalt give preſents. [w] Others yet, Thou עיל Al, together with Moreſheth-Gath (or the town ſo call'd, which once belong'd to Gath, but was now in the poſſeſſion of the Benjamites) give preſents to make thy peace. [x] Others to Gath, that was once the inheritance of Judah, taken by David, ſince again retaken and the inheritance of the Philiſtines, even thither thou ſhalt be compelled to ſend preſents. But the firſt expoſition ſeems the plaineſt.

The houſes of Achzib ſhall be a lie, &c.] Though the houſes of Achzib were ſtrong, and in them the Kings of Iſrael might put their truſt, and hope for help of defence, yet they did, or ſhall (for the time is not expreſſed whether meant of the paſt, or preſent, or to come) fail their expectation, and be but a lie unto them. Achzib is the name of a town named together with Mareſheth, Joſh. xv. 44. and the ſame, or another of the ſame name mention'd, Joſh. xix. 29. and Judg. i. 31. as belonging to, or bordering upon the lot of the tribe of Aſher. This name agrees with, or is deriv'd from the word כזב Cazab, which ſignifies to lie, and therefore is by [y] Some here rendred the houſes of lying, or vanity, which were for deceit, or in vain, to the Kings of Iſrael, as if it were a farther epithet or deſcription of Gath, or how they ſhould prove to the Kings of Iſrael, by whom [z] Some think here meant the Kings of Judah, not of Iſrael as diſtinct from them: ſo Ahaz, King of Judah, is call'd King of Iſrael, 2 Chron. xxviii. 19. [a] Some think the cities of the Philiſtines denoted by the houſes of Achzib, ſo called, becauſe of their falſeneſs to Iſrael; or elſe the cities of Judah which failed Iſrael, when they expected help from them; or any other towns, countries, or nations, as Egypt or Aſſyria, from which Iſrael or Judah deſired help, but were deceived by them. However, to the name of Achzib, here is an alluſion in the following word אכזב Aczab, which is rendred a lie, to ſhew what they ſhould prove to them that truſted in them. [b] There be alſo, who by the houſes of Achzib, that ſhould be a lie to the Kings of Iſrael, think meant the houſes of falſe worſhip in that city, wherein they worſhipped idols, from which they in vain expected help.

[k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] Abu Walid. [m] Jun. Trem. [n] R. Tan. [o] Calv. Stokes. [p] Greek and Vulg. Lat. [q] Rib. [r] Menochius. [s] Ribera, Doway Bible. [t] Tirinus. [u] Grot. [w] Jun. Trem. [x] Abarb.

15. Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareſhah: he ſhall come unto Adullam, the glory of Iſrael.

Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareſhah.] He threatens, that yet, or farther yet, he will proceed to bring unto the inhabitants of Mareſhah an heir, viz. an enemy that ſhall take poſſeſſion of them, and all they have, as if it were his inheritance, and thruſt them out; (for the word ירש Yaraſh ſignifies both to inherit, and to diſinherit, or thruſt out.) The name Mareſhah including in it the ſignification of inheritance, here is, in what is denounced againſt it, an alluſion to its name. This city, by [c] moſt ſuppoſed to be the country of the prophet, is mention'd among the cities belonging to Judah, Joſh. xv. 44. and ſee 2 Chron. xi. 8.

He ſhall come unto Adullam the glory of Iſrael.] That this is the literal rendring of the words as they lye in order, there is no doubt, and ſo giveth plainly this ſenſe, [d] that the enemy, that heir of Mareſhah, ſhould proceed and come as far as to Adullam, which is called the glory of Iſrael. Againſt which nothing may be excepted, but that Adullam was a place of meaner condition than to be called the glory of Iſrael; but, perhaps, there might be then reaſon either from its ſituation, or its ſtrength, or beauty, why it was ſo called, tho' now unknown. Many therefore like not this interpretation, but rather follow that, which our tranſlators alſo give in the margin. The glory of Iſrael ſhall come unto Adullam. But then in telling what is meant by the glory of Iſrael, they do not agree. [e] Some take glory as ſpoken by way of irony and deriſion, or of antiphraſis, or expreſſing things by their contrary, and to intimate diſgrace and diſhonour. The ſame honour which Iſrael had, ſhall Adullam alſo have, viz. ſhame, ruin, and deſtruction. If this ſenſe be embraced, then may the word כבוד Cabod be looked on according to another ſignification [f] which it hath of weight or heavineſs, as if he ſhould ſay, the heavy weight of calamity, or burden, under which Iſrael is preſſed, ſhall fall even on Adullam alſo. 2. [g] Others think, that the word heir is here again underſtood, the heir of, or he that hath ſeized on the glory of Iſrael, ſhall come as far as Adullam. 3. [h] Others, the glory of Iſrael, that is, their wealth and riches, [i] or peculiarly their children, ſpoken of in the next verſe (which are the glory of their parents) being taken away by the Aſſyrian conqueror, ſhall come, or be brought by him to Adullam, whether he ſhall proceed to take that alſo. 4. [k] Others think the Aſſyrian to be called the glory of Iſrael, as he in whoſe friendſhip the Iſraelites formerly gloried, but now have all their glory taken away by him. 5. [l] Others by it think to be meant Jeruſalem, which was the glory, both of that land, and all the earth: then the words muſt ſound according to the firſt rendring in our tranſlation, he, that is, the heir (or conquering enemy) ſhall come unto Adullam, and to the glory of Iſrael, or, as Some [m] reading it in the Vocative caſe, he ſhall come unto Adullam, and ſo near to thee, or beyond thee, O glory of Iſrael, O Jeruſalem. [n] Some, the glory of Iſrael ſhall come to be but as Adullam, an obſcure cave, or ignoble place, that cave where David flying from Saul, hid himſelf, 1 Sam. xxii. 1. and where at other times he was, 2 Sam. xxiii. 13. and 2 Chron. xi. 15. But it is mentioned not only as a cave, but as a city, a royal city, Joſh. xii. 15. taken by Joſhua and Iſrael, and transferred to the tribe of Judah, Joſh. xv. 35. made a city of defence by Rehoboam, 2 Chron. xi. 7. a city that had villages belonging to it, Nehem. xi. 30. ſo that for all that is ſaid, it might, for reaſons then well known, be call'd the glory of Iſrael. It may farther be conſidered [o] whether by the glory of Iſrael, may not be meant God himſelf, as if he ſhould ſay, that he by his juſtice on them manifeſting his glory, would come even as far as to Adullam, in the inmoſt part of the kingdom of Judah, giving all into the hand of the enemy. And while Adullam, and the other particular places are named, [p] no doubt, the whole land is underſtood thereby, and God's judgments denounced to all of it, and ſo the next words will be directed, not to the laſt particular city named, but to the whole land.

[y] LXX. Lat. [z] R. D. Kimchi. [a] Abarb. [b] R. D. Kimchi. and ſee Targ. and Hieron. [c] Aben Ezra. [d] R. Tanchum, Pelican, Calvin. [e] Abarb. Hieron. Ribera. Sa. [f] Rib. C. à Caſtro. [g] Ab. Ez. R. D. Kimchi. R. Tanchum. Vatabl. &c. [h] Mareſius's French Notes. [i] Michlal Yophi. [k] Grotius, Stokes. [l] Jun. Trem. Tarnov. [m] Druſius. [n] In Calvin. [o] Oecolamp. [p] See Abarb. who ſaith, Mareſhah and Adullam here are names by which the whole kingdom of Judah is deſigned.

16. Make thee bald, and poll thee for thy delicate children, enlarge thy baldneſs as the eagle, for they are gone into captivity from thee.

Make thee bald, &c.] God's judgments being thus gone out againſt thee, O thou land of Judah, nothing remains, but that thou give up thy ſelf wholly to ſorrow and mourning, and expreſs thy grief in all outward ſigns thereof; which, according to the cuſtom of thoſe times, was by plucking and cutting off the hair, even to the bringing of baldneſs on themſelves. See Jer. vii. 29. Amos viii. 10. Job. i. 20. The occaſion of ſorrow to her was very great, viz. becauſe the choiceſt of her people, call'd her delicate children, thoſe that were tenderly and delicately brought up by her, and moſt dear unto her, ſhould partly be ſlain, partly carried away captive by the enemy; and ſhe (ſpoken to as a mother) is bid to ſhew great ſigns thereof, even to inlarge her baldneſs as the eagle which hath loſt her feathers; as of eagles in [q] general 'tis ſaid, that at certain times they do: except we may think ſome kind of eagle, which is naturally bald, particularly alluded to. [r]

CHAP. II.

VERSE 1. Wo to them that deviſe iniquity, and work evil upon their beds: when the morning is light, they practice it, becauſe it is in the power of their hand.

WO unto them, &c.] How juſtly deſerved thoſe judgments were, which before, and after, are denounced againſt Iſrael and Judah, the prophet makes manifeſt, by a declaration of ſome of thoſe ſins, which the inhabitants of them were guilty of. As here firſt, becauſe the powerful ones among them (for which a wo is denounced againſt them) did in the [a] night upon their beds, when they ſhould have [b] communed with their own hearts, (and examined their ways to ſee what they had done amiſs, that they might amend it) deviſe iniquity and plot evil; not to conceal it, as a work of darkneſs, [c] but that they might be ready to act it as ſoon as the morning light ſhould give them opportunity: and then did, without delay, practiſe it openly in the light, and face [d] of the ſun, without fear or ſhame, with all their might, as far as it was in the power of their hands; becauſe there was none, who by executing juſtice did reſtrain them, but they were ſuffer'd to do what they could, and would. It may be obſerv'd that the word אל El, which is rendred power, doth alſo ſignify God, and that is the reaſon, why the ancient Vulg. Latin renders, becauſe their hand is againſt God: but the like expreſſion being elſewhere uſed, as Gen. xxxi. 29. Deut. xxviii. 32. Prov. iii. 27. he renders it by having ſtrength, or being able: and ſo that here it ought to be rendred, is the more general opinion of Interpreters; and that thoſe, that interpret the words otherwiſe, as ſome other [e] ancient verſions likewiſe do, interpret them wrong.

2. And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houſes, and take them away: ſo they oppreſs a man and his houſe, even a man and his heritage.

They covet fields, &c.] What they covet in their mind, [f] they ſtrive to poſſeſs themſelves of, by the force of their hands, whether [g] their poorer neighbour's lands, or houſes, that lye convenient for them; which if they will not part with to them on their own terms, they ſpare not to uſe toward them all [h] fraudulent or violent courſes, till they have gotten, what they have a mind to, from them: according [i] to the dealing of Ahab towards Naboth for his vineyard.

3. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord, behold, againſt this family do I deviſe an evil, from which ye ſhall not remove your necks, neither ſhall ye go haughtily: for this time is evil.

Againſt this family, &c.] i. e. This whole nation, the family, or poſterity of Jacob, this wicked people, do I deviſe or intend an evil of puniſhment, for the evil of ſin which they plot or deviſe; from which you ſhall not remove your necks, nor be able, by any means, to free your ſelves, but ſhall be preſſed down with it, ſo that you ſhall not henceforward carry your ſelves proudly and haughtily with heads lifted up: for the time ſhall be ſo evil and calamitous, that you ſhall have no occaſion, no heart, or power ſo to do.

4. In that day ſhall one take up a parable againſt you, and lament with a doleful lamentation, and ſay, We be utterly ſpoiled: he hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed it from me? turning away he hath divided our fields.

In that day ſhall one take up a parable againſt you.] One is here ſupplied, as in ſuch manner of ſpeech elſewhere. So Gen. xlviii. 1. one told Joſeph, and ver. 2. and one told Jacob. So that it may be rendred to the ſame ſenſe, as the Vulgar Latin hath it, There ſhall be taken up a parable, or, Men ſhall take up a parable, a doleful ſong with parabolical and figurative expreſſions.

And lament with a doleful lamentation.] The margin ſaith, that in the Hebrew it is, with a lamentation of lamentations. There are here three words in the Hebrew eloquently joined of much like ſound, or agreement between themſelves, viz. נהה Nahah, נהי Nehi, נהיה Nihjah. Of the rendring the two former of which [q] Bochart. de Animal, part 2. lib. 2. cap. 1. [r] Kamus in انوق and رخمة. Heb. רחם and רחמה Levit. xi. 18.

[a] Pſalm xxxvi. 4. [b] Pſalm iv. 4. [c] R. Tanchum. [d] Abarb. [e] Syriac. Greek. [f] R. D. Kimchi.
[g] Abarbi. [h] Aben Ezra. [i] 1 Kings xxi.

which, there is no doubt but the firſt, as a verb, ſignifies ſhall lament, the ſecond, as a noun, lamentation; but concerning the third doubt is made, Some taking it as a noun ſubſtantive, to ſignify the ſame with the ſecond, viz. lamentation; and ſo the ſame ſignification repeated [k] will be but as much as to ſay a great, or doleful lamentation. [l] Others take it for an epithet added to the ſecond, from another root of ſomething different ſignification, which ours, Dan. viii. 27. renders, I fainted. Others was broken; and ſo 'twill be as much as broken, or grievous, and will ſtill very well agree with that in the text of our Engliſh Bibles, a doleful lamentation. [m] Others take it as ſignifying, He that is then preſent or remaining, from the word הָיָה Hajah, that ſignifies, to be; and then 'twill expreſs who it is that ſhall take up that parable and make that lamentation, viz. he that ſhall then be, or remain: or [n] may it not as ſo be taken for an epithet, and rendred a being lamentation, a lamentation that is, i. e. that hath being, or, is durable, or, is taken up in the world. Others from the ſame root and ſignification render it, It is ſo, [o] or it is done, and come to paſs, ſhall be ſay, we be utterly ſpoiled, &c. or [p] as Others, ſhall lament with a lamentation for what is done, and ſay, &c. Theſe then being the ſignifications, which the word as here written is capable of, whereas the Latin renders A ſong ſhall be ſung with ſweetneſs, 'tis manifeſt it ought to be underſtood no otherwiſe, than [q] that it ſhould be a mournful ſong, or ditty, elegantly or muſically compos'd, and ſung in an artificial tune: not that it ſhould be pleaſant, as to the matter, which was a doleful lamentation: ſweet it might be to the enemy, and pleaſing, but to the ſufferers no further, than as thereby by venting the grief of their hearts [r] they might ſomething allay, and aſſwage it. 'Tis diſputed who it is that is ſaid, ſhall take up this parable and make this lamentation, or mournful ſong. [s] Some ſay the falſe prophets, ſeeing their promiſes of good to come to nothing, or to be turned clean contrary; [t] Others, thoſe that were oppreſſed by the more potent, and ſpoiled, ſpoken of in the foregoing words; [u] Others, the inſulting enemy; Others, every one, or all of them, on whom theſe calamities ſhould come. But the words being in the original text put indefinitely, 'twill be convenient ſo to take them, as that they, or, any that ſhall look on what they ſuffer'd, ſhall have occaſion thus to ſay, as in their perſon, (for the words are ſpoken as in their perſon,) or according to Some, as we ſaid, whoſoever ſhall be then preſent, and with any concern look on, what hath befallen them.

We are utterly ſpoiled, &c.] [x] Some will have it found, we are utterly ſpoiled of, or by our ſelves.

He hath changed the portion of my people.] i. e. Their land; i. e. God hath taken it from them, and given it to others, changed the owners thereof: which to expreſs the Latin renders [y] The part, or portion, of my people is changed, rather then as the Doway tranſlation hath it more obſcurely, part of my people is changed. [z] Some will have this to be read with an interrogation, as the following words are by way of admiration! How doth, (or, ſhall) he change the portion of my people? Or elſe, by the portion of my people, to be meant God, who is call'd the portion of Jacob, Jer. x. 16. and the meaning to be, ſhall the portion of my people change them, for another people, whom he ſhall cauſe to prevail over them?

How hath he removed it from me!] That is, the portion of my people. Turning away he hath divided our fields, viz. [a] God, or the enemy by his permiſſion, or, as in the margin, inſtead of reſtoring, he hath divided (or, divideth) our fields. The words in the original being in this verſe very conciſe, are for that reaſon obſcure; the latter words as to a verbal tranſlation lie thus, how ſhall, or how doth he remove to me, to turn, or to return, our fields he divideth: which words though then, when they were ſpoken, and when the Hebrew language was in common uſe, and the things ſpoken of before their eyes, known to all, they were doubtleſs well underſtood, yet now that they may be put into another language, and in it made plain and intelligible, will require ſome change of order, or a ſupply of ſomething underſtood. In that rendring which is in the text [b] of our Bibles, there is not much alteration, only to turn or return it expreſſeth by turning away, i. e. in or by turning away, and the ſenſe is plain; except it be made a doubt, whether it be meant, turning away our fields, or turning away himſelf from us. As to that in the margin, there is intimated, and briefly expreſſed in the word inſtead a ſupply of what [c] is by ſome in more words given, thus, when I expected, that he ſhould have reſtored our fields, he hath divided them (to the enemy, or given them to the enemy that divideth them,) or, How is it, that he, (that is, the enemy) taketh away that which is mine? Inſtead of reſtoring our fields, as we hoped, he divideth them among his own ſoldiers or people. Others yet ſomething otherwiſe make their ſupplies, [d] Some making this their meaning, how doth he take away me, that is, my people ſpoken of, or that he may turn over, or give up to the enemy our fields, that they may divide them, or he divideth them to others, or to the enemy; thinking it neceſſary to underſtand either to the enemy, or to ſtrangers, or ſome ſuch word. This is the interpretation and opinion of a learned Jew. [e] Another more ancient, and of great repute among among them, give this as the ſenſe of this whole lamentation; we are utterly ſpoiled, ſo that the enemy taketh away the fields [or lands] of my people from them. Ah and alas, how ſhamefully or grievouſly hath he remov'd us by driving us out, and divided our fields violently taking them from us! He notes that the word לשובב Leſhobeb (which Ours interpret in the text, turning away, and in the margin, inſtead of reſtoring, and he renders by removing, or driving out,) is to be joined to the foregoing words, and the following to be taken by themſelves apart, and then the word ימיר Yamir, which Ours render, he hath changed, (though he ſaith it properly ſignifies ſo,) he taketh here to be in the ſame ſenſe with the following word ימיש Yamiſh, which Ours render removed it, (becauſe changing is nothing but removing a thing from its place;) the note of exclamation, how, he looks on, as an expreſſion of the grievouſneſs, ſhamefulneſs, or diſgracefulneſs of a thing, with admiration at the ſtrangeneſs of it, here as in other [f] places. Of ſuch tranſlations as are in the hands of Chriſtians, ſome ancient ones depart farther from the words in the original, ſo that they cannot be eaſily reconcil'd; as the Greek which renders, we are made very miſerable, the part or lot of my people hath been divided by cord, or meaſuring line, and there was none that hinder'd him, that he might turn away, or, that he might reſtore, as the Arabick: and the Syriack as wide, the robber ſhall ſpoil us, and ſhall, with a meaſuring line, divide the part of my people, neither is there any that reſtoreth our part by a meaſuring line. Thoſe that are in Latin, and more modern languages, keep cloſer to the words, yet is there no ſmall variety among them. The ancienteſt Latin renders, [g] part, or, the part, of my people is changed. How ſhall he depart from me, whereas he returneth, that will divide our regions! Others differ from it, and among themſelves, yet all ſo as to look on the words to have in their root the ſame ſignifications. But then in rendring them as here placed actively or paſſively, or applying them to different ſubjects, or making their pauſes or diſtinctions diverſly, make ſome difference in the ſenſe. When the reader ſhall have viewed them all, he will probably find good reaſon to like thoſe rendrings in our Engliſh Bibles given, as well as any, and acquieſce in them, having his liberty given him of chuſing either that in the text, or that in the margin. But it may be farther obſerv'd, that whereas the word שובב Shobeb, which is by Ours rendred in the text, turning away, and in the margin reſtoring, and by moſt in one of theſe ſignifications, hath alſo, in the ſame manner, written another ſignification in the ſcripture, viz. [h] of rebellious, perverſe, or refractory. Some other learned Jews will have it here to be taken in that ſenſe, and to be an epithet of the ſpoiler, or enemy. [i] So one of them, taking theſe as the words of ſuch as were oppreſſed and had their fields and houſes by violence taken from them (as ver. 2.) gives the meaning thus (and is therein followed by a learned [k] Chriſtian) the great ones of the land ſpoil us of our inheritance, and ſo are we ſpoiled by our ſelves; and for the iniquity of this violent oppreſſion, my people ſhall change their portion, going captives into another land. How, that is, to what profit, doth he take away mine inheritance, ſeeing within few days the perverſe rebellious one, viz. the enemy, the King of Aſſyria, that blaſphemeth God, ſhall divide our fields, and give them all to his ſervants? This Interpreter would have the particle or letter, ל L. prefixed to שובב Shobeb, and uſually ſignifying to, or for, here to ſignify nothing, but to ſupply only the place of the article of the nominative caſe to wit ה H. [l] Another embracing the ſame ſignification of the word, שובב Shobeb, but taking the lamentation to be utter'd by ſome falſe prophet, who ſaw all things ſucceed contrary to what he promiſed, thus expounds the words, Shall we be utterly ſpoiled by our enemies? Will he change the portion of my people? How can it be that he ſhould put and remove me from mine inheritance, ſeeing I am his people and inheritance, to give it to a perverſe rebellious one, a people that blaſphemeth God, which ſhall divide our fields? But if the words be taken indefinitely, and not particularly applied either to the poor oppreſſed, or to the falſe prophets, but to any that ſhall take up this lamentation as in the perſon of the people, which ſeems better, then that word, שובב Shobeb, being taken in this laſt ſenſe, all things will be regular without addition or alteration, and the plain meaning this, He divideth (or hath divided) our fields to a rebellious or obſtinate one, i. e. the idolatrous enemy, the Aſſyrian: Or with an interrogation, Will he divide our fields to a rebellious one? And ſo [m] Some of them alſo, who take the word in another ſignification, put an interrogation at the end, Doth he divide our fields to reſtore them? Or, that they ſhould be reſtored? i. e. Shall our fields which are divided to, or by the enemy, return or be reſtored to us again? [n] Others without an interrogation, in returning, or when he, (i. e. the enemy) returneth, he ſhall divide our fields. And ſo in thoſe interpretations that our tranſlators give, and others.

[k] Rab. Tanch. [l] So ſome Jews. [m] See R. Tanch. [n] See R. Solomon & Paræus. [o] De Dieu. [p] Abarb. R. Tanchum. [q] Menochius. Tirinus. See Greek Tranſl. [r] Chr. à Caſtro. [s] R. D. Kimchi. [t] Abarban. Montanus, Ch. à Caſtro. [u] Diodat. Oecolamp. Ribera. Tarnov. [x] R. Judah. Itin. Kimchi in Radic. שרר. [y] Sa. Rib. Menoch. [z] R. Tanch. [a] R. Tanch. [b] And ſo Jun. Trem. [c] R. D. Kimchi. Vatablus & Michlal Yophi. [d] R. Tanchum. [e] Abu. Walid. in the root שבב.

5. Therefore thou ſhalt have none that ſhall caſt a cord by lot in the congregation of the Lord.

Therefore, &c.] Here is not much difference about the ſignification of the words, but only about the perſon to whom they were ſpoken: [o] Some looking on them, as directed to the falſe prophets, who were the cauſe of error, and miſchief to the people, that this ſhould be for a puniſhment to them, that when the Lord ſhould reſtore his people to their country, they ſhould have none of their poſterity left to challenge any lot or part in the land, by cord or meameaſuring line again to be divided among them. [p] Others, as directed to the oppreſſors ſpoken of, ver. 2. as a threat to them, or a curſe of the oppreſſed on them, that it ſhould be for a juſt puniſhment to them, and ſo it will be [q] continued with the word therefore going before, ver. 3. [r] Others take it as a curſe denounced againſt the whole family before mentioned, ver. 3. or the whole kingdom of Iſrael, that they ſhould have no more any tribe return thither into that land, [s] which ſhould by their judges have it by lot and line divided to them, as it was of old in the [t] time of Joſhua. [u] Some think this ſpoken of the Aſſyrians: but that ſeems not to accord ſo well with the context. The plaineſt way ſeems to look on it, as ſpoken to the whole people, denouncing to them the irrecoverable loſs of their country, and that they ſhould no more return to it to be therein the congregation of the Lord, which ſhould divide it among themſelves. A cord by lot, or a line and lot, or, a line with a lot, or for a lot, whereby to meaſure out a lot: [w] the ſame word that ſignifies a cord, is itſelf uſed for a lot or portion.

[f] Pſalm lxxiii. 18. Iſaiah x. 4. 13. [g] Doway Bible. [h] Iſaiah lvii. 17. Jer. iii. 14. and 22. [i] Abarb. [k] Arias Mont. [l] Aben Dana. [m] De Dieu. [n] Stokes. [o] R. D. Kimchi.

6. Propheſy ye not, ſay they to them that propheſy: they ſhall not propheſy to them, that they ſhall not take ſhame.

Propheſy ye not, ſay they to them that propheſy, &c.] There is in expounding this verſe alſo great variety among Interpreters, the ground of which will be ſeen by conſidering the order and import of the words in the Hebrew: in that there is one word thrice repeated with little difference in the form, as אל תטיפו יטיפון לא יטיפו Al Tattiphu Yattiphun Lo Yattiphu, the prime ſignification of which word according to its root, is to drop, or diſtil and flow, and to cauſe to drop or flow; and, from fluid things tranſlated to ſpeech, it ſignifies to inſtil words, to ſpeak to, and particularly to propheſy to, as much as to ſay, to drop words one after another to, and in this ſenſe 'tis manifeſtly here, as elſewhere, oft uſed. In the firſt place 'tis put in the ſecond perſon as a command given to ſome, do not ye ſpeak, or propheſy; in the ſecond place in the third perſon, as ſpoken of what ſome did, or would, or, ſhould do: and ſo in the laſt place alſo with a negative put before it, as ſhewing what they did not, or would not, or ſhould not do: and ſignify, put together, barely thus much, do not, or ye ſhall not, ſpeak, or propheſy; they do, will or ſhall, ſay, or propheſy; they ſhall not, or do not, ſpeak, or propheſy, without mentioning by whom theſe words are utter'd, or to whom directed. Concerning the ſignification therefore of the words, there is not much diſpute amongſt Interpreters, but in applying them to the perſons by whom they ſhould be utter'd, and to whom directed, and of whom ſpoken, and for what reaſon, is much difference; and ſo the ſupplies, which they add to make the ſenſe clear according to their mind, divers. Some take them to be partly the words of the people, partly the words of God, or the prophet from God, but then differing in the parting them. Ours, as it appears by their adding ſay they to them that, make the firſt words to be the words of the people, loath to hear God's judgments denounced againſt them for their ſins, and therefore forbidding them that propheſied, that is, the prophets of God, to ſpeak or propheſy to them ſuch things as they did; and the next words they ſeem to take for God's ſaying, by way of conceſſion, to what they would have, they ſhall not propheſy to them: but then the latter words rendred, that they ſhall not take ſhame, are ſomewhat obſcure, whether do they mean, they ſhall not ſay to them, as their falſe prophets did, that ſhame and confuſion ſhould not come upon them, though they continued in their evil ways; or that they may not take ſhame, and ſo repent of their wicked courſes, and prevent that confuſion which ſhall fall upon them; or, that they themſelves, viz. the prophets may not take ſhame, i. e. be ſhamefully or contumelioufly uſed: for this ſenſe ſome [x] Interpreters give. In the margin we have another reading, propheſy not as they, viz. the falſe prophets, propheſy, and then the words will be to be looked on as God's words, and the following to be underſtood in the firſt ſenſe with a change of the perſon, as if God forbad his prophets to ſooth them up in their ſins. A [y] much approv'd Latin tranſlation takes them all as the words of the people, and thus renders them, Inſtil not, ſay they, i. e. the people to the true prophets, Let theſe, viz. the falſe prophets, inſtil, they do not inſtil or propheſy according to them, i. e. as our prophets, the falſe prophets, who ſay, that ſhame ſhall not cleave to the people, i. e. that they ſhall not be put to that ſhame, which God's prophets threaten to them. In which tranſlation are many things ſupplied which make it ſomewhat harſh; from which [z] a late very learned man ſo far differs, as to take them all for the words of God, or his prophet, and thoſe directed either to the falſe prophets, to this ſenſe, propheſy not; ſhould they propheſy? they ſhall not propheſy to theſe, ſhame ſhall not depart from them, i. e. they ſhall not propheſy, for ſhame is decreed to them, which ſhall not depart or be remov'd from them; or elſe to the true prophets, to this purpoſe, propheſy not my prophets to this rebellious people; ſhould they propheſy to them? They ſhall not propheſy to them, leſt ſhame ſhould be removed or depart from them, which ought not to be removed. He gives both theſe expoſitions, but prefers the former. But it may be conſider'd that as yet no mention hath been made of falſe prophets. This learned man alſo differs from the former, in that he takes the word יסג Yiſſag, not to have the ſignification of apprehending, taking hold on, or overtaking; but of departing from, as [a] Some others alſo do, as, particularly, Druſius, and and an ancient Arabick tranſlation out of Hebrew, which hath, propheſy not as they propheſy; they ſhall not propheſy to theſe: ſhame ſhall not depart from them: and, indeed, it hath both thoſe ſignifications; but the moſt, both of Chriſtians and Jews, take it in the former: ſo the ancient Latin Interpreter which to this ſenſe renders the words, according to the Doway Engliſh Tranſlation, ſpeak not ſpeaking, which is of doubtful ſenſe, whether they mean ſpeaking, i. e. ſaying ſpeak not, or ſpeak not by, or in ſpeaking, as [b] Some, and according to [c] Others ſhould rather be rendred, ſpeak not ye that ſpeak, i. e. ye prophets, it ſhall not drop upon theſe, confuſion ſhall not apprehend them. It, that is, ſay Some, the wrath by you denounced ſhall not fall on them (as if ſpoken by ſome that did not believe the prophets) nor any ſuch confuſion. Others, your propheſying ſhall not prevail on them, ſhall not work any ſhame in them: as if ſpoken by God or ſome man counſelling the prophets. This variety there is in the tranſlations which are in the hands of Chriſtians; and much more yet, for ſome interpret the word, לאלה Laelleh, which is rendred to them or theſe, as not to belong to perſons but to things, thus, propheſy not, or if they propheſy, let them not propheſy [d] ſuch things, leſt they take ſhame. [e] Others, propheſy not ye prophets of the Lord, they ſhall propheſy, viz. Iſaiah, Oſee, Joel, Micah, &c. they ſhall not propheſy, i. e. there ſhall come a time when the prophets ſhall ceaſe to propheſy to you. What other modern tranſlations or expoſitions any ſhall meet with, he may examine and judge, by comparing them with theſe mention'd, and by what hath been ſaid of the ſignification of the words. The Jews alſo in their expoſitions differ among themſelves. [f] One of them and he one of the ancienteſt, thus gives his ſenſe of theſe words, he ſaith, that they take in ill part, or deteſt the admonitions of the prophets, and bid them to deſiſt from ſpeaking to them, and to leave off their admonitions by way of reproof from God of them for their rebellions, as elſewhere he ſaith, Amos v. 10. they hate him that rebuketh in the gate: this is that which he ſaith of them, propheſy ye not, i. e. that they forbad the prophets to admoniſh and inſtruct them; which is like to what they, with whom Iſaiah had to do, ſaid to him, Get you out of the way, turn aſide out of the path, cauſe the holy one of Iſrael to ceaſe from before us, Iſaiah xxx. 11. But the prophets did not hearken to them, nor leave to warn, admoniſh, and rebuke them, that is it which he ſaith of them, they do or will ſpeak, or propheſy, i. e. they ſay to them propheſy, or ſpeak not, but they do propheſy, or ſpeak; then of what he ſaith לא יטיפו לאלה Lo Yattiphu Laelleh, they do not propheſy to theſe, the meaning is, but it is all one as if they did not propheſy to theſe, nor direct their admonitions to them, for they do not incline their ear to them. Then afterward he ſaith, ver. 11. If a man walking in the ſpirit and falſhood, do lye ſaying, I will propheſy to thee of wine, &c. he ſhall be the prophet of this people, i. e. to him will they hearken and give ear, to what he ſaith. The laſt words, ſhame ſhall not, or doth not, apprehend them, according to him import, that no reproofs of the prophet work on them, elſe for ſhame they would ceaſe from their rebellions. [g] Others of them take יטיפון Yattiphun, in the ſecond place, in ſomething a different ſenſe, viz. a more general, for ſpeaking or ſaying: and then [h] One, taking what is ſpoken as the words of the poor oppreſſed, gives this meaning, Propheſy ye not, ſay they, i. e. thoſe oppreſſed ones to the prophets, they ſhall, or ſhould, not propheſy to theſe (oppreſſors) for they will not take ſhame, not be mov'd to ſhame by any thing that the prophets ſay to them. This he prefers before that of Others, who [i] interpret them as if the wicked of the people ſhould ſay to the prophets, Propheſy ye not: Let them not propheſy to theſe (wicked people,) that they be not put to ſhame (for their labour.) [k] Another of them thus renders the words, taking them as a farther deſcription of thoſe wicked ones, of which 'tis ſaid, ver. 2. they covet fields, &c. that they alſo did ſay this to the prophets, thus, propheſy ye not, ſay they; they ſhall not, or, let them not propheſy (with change of the perſon repeating again their prohibition of them, as if they inſtantly and continually ſaid it both to the prophets and amongſt themſelves) ſhall not ſhame overtake theſe? i. e. will not they be aſhamed of ſuch doings? or ought not ſhame to be brought on ſuch as theſe? This Interpretation keeps cloſe to the words, but diſtinguiſheth them otherwiſe than Others do, who think the accent requires that לאלה Laelleh, rendred, to theſe, be joined to the foregoing words, not to the following; but he thinks that not neceſſary always to be obſerved, but if the accent be obſerved, then he ſaith the meaning will be, They that propheſy not to theſe ſhall not take ſhame, that is, ſhall be free from that ſhame and contumely which they would put on them. In this multitude of opinions and judgments, the reader will ſee it neceſſary to uſe his own, and that without danger of great error, none of theſe expoſitions being contrary to the analogy of faith or ſound doctrine. It may, ſeeing we are forced to be tedious, be farther obſerved, that ſome ancient verſions take the word, which all theſe render ſpeaking, or propheſying, in another ſenſe, viz. to ſignify weeping. So the Greek, Weep not with tears, neither let him weep over theſe: for he ſhall not put away ſhame. And ſo the Syriack and Arabick, as to that word. And, indeed, weeping is not far from that notion of dropping, or flowing, which we ſaid the root of the word hath. But no modern Interpreters think it meet to follow them in this place.

[p] Aben Ezra. Abarb. [q] R. Tanch. [r] Abarb. [s] Grot. [t] Joſh. xiii, &c. [u] Druſius. [w] R. Tanch. [x] R. D. Kimchi. [y] Jun. Trem. [z] De Dieu. [a] Dru. and the Arab. Verſion.

The Syriack joins the laſt words to the following verſe, Let that ſhame overtake you which is ſpoken or denounced to the houſe of Jacob.

7. O

[b] Pelican. [c] Menoc. Tirinus. Ribera, Sa. Men. [d] Caſtalio. [e] Grot. [f] Ab. Walid, in root נטף. [g] Aben Ezra, R. D. Kimchi. [h] Abarb. [i] R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi. [k] R. Tanchum.

7. O thou that art named the houſe of Jacob, Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned? are theſe his doings? do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?

O thou that art named the houſe of Jacob, &c.] The meaning of theſe words as conſequent on the former will be in a brief paraphraſe thus, O thou that art named the houſe of Jacob, but doſt not in thy doings make good that name, Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned? Is his mercy, his will or power of promiſing by his prophets good things, and effecting them, now reſtrained more than formerly, when he did both, that now thou receiveſt only threatning meſſages by his prophets? Are theſe his doings? was he wont thus to deal? or, Are theſe puniſhments and judgments that he denounceth, his conſtant works, or thoſe that he delighteth to do? Do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly? Doth he not promiſe good things, and give them to him that is upright and walketh in good ways? Do ye not perceive by his different dealings, in that he wrought wonderful things for you while you walked in obedience to him, and now forſaketh you and giveth you up to evil, now that ye forſake him and rebel againſt him, that the cauſe of this change is from your ſelves, and that he always doth good, but to them that ſtrive to do good, and walk in his right ways? And even now if ye would by theſe menaces of the prophets be wrought on to amend your ways, for which they are intended, would not theſe alſo be for good to you, and a means of ſaving you from that deſtruction which you for that end are warned of by them? The words ſo underſtood, are plainly inferr'd from the foregoing words, as an anſwer to them who forbad the prophets to ſpeak to them ſuch harſh things as they did, as if either they deliver'd not to them rightly God's meſſage, or had not receiv'd a full meaſure of his Spirit, or that 'twere in their power to ſpeak otherwiſe than God bad them ſpeak: and ſo their folly is diſcover'd, in that they laid it not to heart, that the cauſe why ſuch ſevere things were by God's prophets denounced to them contrary to ſuch gracious promiſes, which had been made formerly to the true houſe of Jacob, was not from any ill mind in the prophets, nor any change in God, who ſtill continued to do good to them that continued to walk uprightly in his ways; but from themſelves, who were ſo changed, that they retain'd nothing of Jacob but the bare name, and by their wickedneſs made themſelves uncapable of receiving better meſſages, or that God ſhould deal better with them. And this ſeems the plaineſt meaning of the words. Others differently interpret them, as Some, who in rendring the words agree, but then give the meaning thus, [l] Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned, ſo as that you ſhould ſilence his prophets? as if he were not able to direct them what to ſay, or ſhould not have liberty to cauſe them to propheſy and denounce what he pleaſeth? or ſhould not have power by them to pronounce againſt you evil things, and to bring them to paſs? [m] Are theſe his works? Theſe things which you do ſuch works as he requires from you, or is pleaſed with; or, Are theſe ſuch works as become the houſe of Jacob? and do my words no good with him that walketh aright? are they not pleaſing to him, promiſing to him good, and inſtructing and correcting him for his good? That they are not ſuch to you is through your own fault. [n] Others, Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned, that he cannot now ſend prophets as well as formerly, tho' you enjoin ſilence to them? [o] Others differ in rendring the firſt words. Some thus, Is this ſaid among you, O houſe of Jacob? Or, as Some, Is it thus ſaid? Ought it thus to be ſaid? or, What is this that is ſaid, O houſe of Jacob? or, What is the ſaying of the houſe of Jacob? and then go on in the expounding the following words, [p] Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned, as that, if you ſilence theſe prophets, he cannot ſend others with as ſevere meſſages? Are theſe evils denounced the works of God, or, are they not the effects of your ſins? But [q] a learned Jew will not have the words ſo read interrogatively, becauſe then the following ſhould be without an interrogation, as expreſſing what he wonders to hear them ſay, viz. The Spirit of the Lord is ſhortned: yet the Chaldee paraphraſt ſeems ſo to take it, rendring, Is it right which the houſe of Jacob ſay? And the author of the Vulgar Latin ſeems to take it as ſounding, (as the Tigurine verſion hath it) Is it not ſaid by the houſe of Jacob? Or, without an interrogation, That which is ſaid by the houſe of Jacob, is, &c. While he renders [r] the houſe of Jacob hath ſaid: and then the following words are looked on as the words of the houſe of Jacob, and expounded to this ſenſe, Why do ye, O prophets, threaten ſuch hard things to us? Is the Spirit of the Lord ſtraitned, his mercy reſtrained, that he will not do good to us? [s] Are theſe his thoughts and works? viz. to proſecute revenge ſo as to deſtroy us his people, and forget to be good to us? and then the next words, as the words of God in anſwer to them, That he is good, and his promiſes good, and he will do good, but to thoſe that are good, not to ſuch wicked ones as they are. [t] A later learned divine differeth from theſe foregoing, in the rendring of the laſt words, inſtead of, Do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly? reading it, Are not my words good? viz. theſe words that I the prophet ſpeak, that he walketh with the upright: or, Shall not my words pleaſe you? they would pleaſe you if you were upright, for he, that is God, walketh with the upright. The cauſe of this difference he taketh from a Grammatical nicety, becauſe, ſaith he, if thoſe words הישר הולך Hayaſhar Holec were to be rendred rendred him that walketh uprightly, the article or note of emphasis ה Ha ſhould be joined with the participle הולך Holec, and that put before the other noun thus, ההולך ישר Haholec Yaſhar. But the firſt expoſition is not liable to this exception, for in that ישר Yaſhar is not taken as a noun, but a verb, and ה Ha put before it ſignifieth which; as manifeſtly elſewhere it is put with a verb in that ſenſe, [u] as, Joſh. x. 24. ההלכו Hehalecu, which went with him, and, 1 Chron. xxvi. 28. ההקדש Hahicdiſh, rendred which Samuel the ſeer had dedicated, and ſo Ezek. xxvi. 17. And ſo the literal rendring will be, he that is upright walking, or, going on in the ways of God, the plain ſenſe of which is, him that walketh uprightly: or, if it be taken as a noun, it is ſalved by underſtanding דרך Derec, way, i. e. that walketh in the right way: ſo Aben Ezra, and R. David Kimchi. The ancient MS. Arab verſion, which we cited, renders the whole thus, It is ſaid among the houſe of Jacob, Is the power of the Lord ſhortned? Were theſe his properties? Do not my words do good to him that is upright, walking after obedience to God? Abarbinel and Arias Montanus following him, take them to be the words of God to the people, who wondred that the prophet ſhould ceaſe from reproving the oppreſſors. The firſt expoſition ſeemeth the plaineſt.

[l] Dutch Notes, Diodat. [m] Jun. Trem. Paræ. [n] Vat. [o] Arab. MS. R. Tanchum. [p] But he approves it not. Chriſt. à Caſtro. [q] R. Tanchum. [r] See Abarb. [s] Chriſt. à Caſtro. Sa. Menochius, Tirinus, Ribera, Pelicanus. [t] Lud. de Dieu.

8. Even of late my people is riſen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe with the garment, from them that paſs by ſecurely, as men averſe from war.

Even of late, Marg. Yeſterday.] The ancient Latin tranſlator makes of ואתמול Veethmul the word ſo tranſlated two words, or one compounded of two, and renders it And on the contrary. Nor is he alone in this, [w] An ancient and learned Jew ſo alſo takes it to be, tho' they differ in their applying it to the following words: The Latin rendring the whole verſe thus (according to the Doway Engliſh tranſlation thereof) And on the contrary my people is riſen up as an adverſary: from above the coat you have taken away the cloke, and them that paſſed ſimply you turned into battle, or war: but that learned Jew to this ſenſe, And againſt my people he, that is, the potent oppreſſor before ſpoken of, or, every one of you, hath ſet up [x] an enemy. It is, ſaith he, in ſenſe all one as if he had ſaid, ye have ſet up an enemy, one perſon being put for another, as ſometimes elſewhere, i. e. ye cauſe to have power over them, and you ſet in wait for them ſuch who ſhall evil intreat them, and ſpoil them, according to what is elſewhere ſaid, chap. iii. 3. Who eat the fleſh of my people, and flay their ſkin from them, and Pſalm xxii. 18. They part my garments among them. Then, he ſaith, over-againſt you (i. e. wherever ye go, whoever ye come towards, or whomſoever ye meet with) ye ſtrip or ſpoil of his garment and robe, ſo that of them that paſs by ſecurely, there are thoſe who are like men returning from war, viz. in as bad a condition, by your ill dealing ſpoiled and robbed. This expoſition is given by that ancient Grammarian, of great note among them, upon particular examination of the words, and it gives a good meaning, viz. Againſt my people ye ſet an enemy: whoever ye meet with ye ſtrip of his garment and covering, ſo that of them who paſs on ſecurely there are thoſe who are become as [y] men turning from war. Yet is he not, that I find, followed by others, who generally take אתמול Ethmul for one word, and to ſignify Yeſterday, or, of late, or, before now; and then in expounding the other words they differ among themſelves. One expoſition given by ſome learned Jews, runs thus, [z] But Yeſterday, or before now, my people, i. e. Iſrael behaving themſelves as my people, ſtood up againſt the enemy, were able to reſiſt and prevail againſt him, but now having forſaken God, you are ſo far from this, that at the ſight of a garment at a diſtance, taking it for the enemies colours or enſign, or for an enemy coming to ſet on you, you ſtrip off your clothes, and caſt from you your garments, that you may fly the lighter. And if you eſpy any but paſſing ſecurely and quietly on the way, you preſently flee for fear of them with all ſpeed, as men that return flying from war, or the battle, for fear of the enemy purſuing them. And ſo may it be compared with what is ſaid, Lev. xxvi. 36. The ſound of a ſhaking leaf ſhall chaſe them, and they ſhall flee as fleeing from a ſword, and they ſhall fall where none purſueth; [a] or, you taking them for ſuch as return from war, take fear and flee before them. [b] A learned Chriſtian alſo embraceth this interpretation; only that the latter words he expounds, that thoſe that paſs on quietly in their way, ſeem ſuch as return from war, i. e. You for fear caſting away your garments, the traveller that mindeth no ſuch thing, finding them in the way, cometh home with them as if he returned loaden with ſpoils from the war. To this alſo may our tranſlators ſeem to point in their marginal reading, viz. over-againſt a garment. [c] Another expoſition is this, That God having before declared that his words do good, that he promiſeth and giveth good things to him that walketh uprightly, ſheweth now how incapable they are of hearing or receiving good from him, by deſcribing their ways contrary to his: as if he ſhould ſay, But not to you (whom yet he termeth my people) who are become as enemies to me, reſiſting or ſetting your ſelves againſt my commandments both before and till now; viz. in that you do wrong and violence for a robe or garment, which injuriouſly ye take away from them that paſs on in the ways, thinking themſelves ſecure, as if they fled in the time of war, and were gotten out of the reach of the enemy; or, who are glad when they are eſcaped out of your hands alive, after you have taken thoſe goods they had, as they uſe to do who are fled out of wars. And this expoſition is confirmed firmed by what follows after in verſe 9. The women of my people ye caſt out, &c. as if he ſaid, Theſe injuries ye do abroad in the ways; but within the cities ye do them in another way, deſtroying houſes through whoredom. To the ſame ſcope tend generally the modern tranſlations, as taking the words for a deſcription of the perverſeneſs, violence and rapine of that people, though among themſelves they ſomething differ in expounding and applying them. [d] Some, They that were Yeſterday, or heretofore, my people, now riſe up in hoſtile manner againſt me: ye take away the mantle from above their coat, i. e. ye ſtrip the poor both of their upper and under garment; they that paſs by peaceably are to you as thoſe that return from war, i. e. are taken in war and brought captives, whom ye may uſe as you pleaſe. Others, Yeſterday of late, or, before now, my people is riſen up as an enemy; againſt me, ſay Some, [e] Others among themſelves and againſt one another, referring it to the quarrels of one of the two kingdoms, Judah and Iſrael, againſt the other, and the injuries and violences done in each of them, by the oppreſſion and rapine of the rich and potent, againſt the poor and weaker: [f] Others, before now, a good while ſince, my people hath raiſed up, or made, me their God, an enemy unto them, by thoſe their doings, the mention of which follows. Ye pull off the robe with the garment. [g] Others, differently diſtinguiſh the words, He that was before my people, as if he were an enemy, riſeth up againſt a garment; ye pull off the robe from them that paſs confidently, or ſecurely, i. e. if ye ſee any in a garment that likes you, ye riſe up in an hoſtile manner to take it away; [h] Others, when there is a robe ye pull off the garment, i. e. tho' ye have a garment of your own, not for need, but through meer injurioufneſs, you pull off the robe or clothes from them that paſs by ſecurely, as [i] men averſe from war, not intending to enter into contention, or meaning to wrong any; Others, not much differently, being quiet from war, thinking now all things quiet and ſafe; Others, whereas ye are removed from wars; Others, returning from the battle or war, having eſcaped thence, and ſo now no farther fearing any enemy; [k] Others, as men returning (i. e. you being as ſoldiers returning) from war bloody and inſolent. [l] A modern learned Divine thinks the words may thus be rendred, But of late he, i. e. God, hath given up my people to the enemy. Together with the mantle take away the robe from thoſe that paſs on ſecurely and return from war; caſt out the women of my people, &c. as if they were God's commiſſion and command unto the enemy. But this ſeems harſh. Diodati renders thus, Moreover, heretofore, my people lifted themſelves up againſt the enemy, but now ye laying wait againſt, or, for garments, ſpoil of their mantle paſſengers, which were in ſecurity, being in quiet from war. To ſome of theſe forementioned, I ſuppoſe, will be reduceable what other modern tranſlations any ſhall meet with. Some more ancient, as the Greek, Syriack, and printed Arabick, are ſo wide from them, that they will not eaſily be adjuſted either with any of them or with the original Hebrew. The Chaldee uſeth his liberty as a Paraphraſt. Among all none ſeems to give to the words their force better than that firſt of the Jewiſh Grammarian. It will not be needful nicely to enquire into the difference between the two words, one of which is rendred robe, the other garment. The firſt, [m] שלמה Salmah, ſeems to denote a looſer garment caſt over the reſt, the ſecond, אדר Eder, a cloſer, more fitted to the body. If we compare theſe words with thoſe of our Saviour, [n] Mat. v. 40. where is firſt named coat the under, and after cloak the upper garment, and, Luke vi. 29. where, on the contrary, firſt, cloak, then coat, this will look much like a proverbial ſpeech, and the naming of them both, whether one or the other, firſt or laſt, will ſignify the greedy violence of the enemy ſtripping the poor man not in part, but of all that he hath. A manuſcript Arab tranſlation thus renders, Yeſterday my people reſiſted their enemy, but now over-againſt a garment, or, at ſight of a garment, ye pull off (the garment) from (perhaps, he means their clothes, becauſe of, or, for fear of) thoſe that paſs by ſecurely, being turned back from war. Or otherwiſe, perhaps, his meaning may be, Heretofore, they made war with their enemies, but now at ſight of a garment they fall to ſtripping thoſe that paſs by, &c. they from being valiant ſoldiers in war, are turned only thieves and robbers in time of peace.

[u] See R. Tanch. and R Kimchi. [w] Abu Walid. See Abarb. [x] He takes Lamed for a note of the accuſative caſe. [y] Raſhi. [z] R. Tanchum. Abarb. [a] Abarb, [b] Ar. Mont, [c] R. Tanch.

9. The women of my people have ye caſt out from their pleaſant houſes, from their children have ye taken away my glory for ever.

The women of my people have ye caſt out from their pleaſant houſes, &c.] The different expoſitions given of theſe words are reduceable to theſe two, [o] Firſt, that they did by violence caſt out the wives or widows of thoſe poor men whom they oppreſſed and ſpoiled of their poſſeſſions and inheritance, or had ſlain, or driven away from their houſes, wherein they had lived with their huſbands and children with comfort and content: and likewiſe by the ſame means took away from their children the glory of God for ever, i. e. [p] thoſe rights and privileges which God in his law had given them, or that glorious inheritance which God had given them for a perpetual poſſeſſion, and brought them to ſo low and contemptible a condition, that the honour of being God's children and people did no more appear in them: or, as Others, by depriving them of their ſubſtance and patrimony, by enjoying of which they ſhould have had occaſion to give praiſe and glory to me perpetually, you cauſe them, being deprived thereof, to curſe you, and murmur againſt me. Others, by hinhindring them, being robbed and ſpoiled from ſuch honourable marriages, whereby they might have left a [q] poſterity to my glory: [r] Others, by ſeducing them to idolatry, and cauſing them to follow it, ye have cauſed my glory to ceaſe among them for ever, [s] that glory which I ſhould have had from them, ſo that they think no more of worſhipping me. My glory, ſaith one, i. e. [t] my temple, which by your ſins, ye have cauſed to be deſtroyed. But what had thoſe of the ten tribes to do with the temple? The ſame hath another expoſition, ye have cauſed that no children be left to praiſe me. Or may it not be? My glory from them, the glory that I ſhould receive from them, or the glory that they ſhould receive from me. [u] Some render the laſt words, and that for ever, i. e. this ye continually do. [w] A learned Jew interpreting the former part of the verſe, as we have ſaid, diſtinguiſheth the words differently, and otherwiſe reads the latter part, thus, The women of my people have ye caſt out from their pleaſant houſes together with their children, (that ye might take and poſſeſs their houſes and their inheritance:) ſhall ye take (poſſeſs, or retain) my glory for ever? i. e. with ſuch your evil doings ſhall ye continue in my choſen land my glory the glory of all lands? No: as ye have caſt out others from their pleaſant houſes, ſo will I caſt you out from my land, Ariſe ye and depart, &c. The ſecond way, which other expoſitors follow, is by interpreting what is ſaid, the women of my people have ye caſt out, &c. [x] concerning divorce and parting betwixt man and wife, which ſome expound of the cauſeleſs divorces by which thoſe lawleſs men ſpoken of did caſt their own wives out of their houſes in which they had lived long with content, and thoſe wives not ſtrangers or captives, but of their own kindred and nation, which God called his own people, and ſo took from them his glory, the glory of his covenant between man and wife, which redounded [y] to the children born in lawful wedlock, and was taken away by the reſcinding and breaking that covenant: or in that they loſt thoſe privileges, which from the good agreement of their parents would have redounded to them. [z] Others, of ſuch divorces which they cauſed between other men and their wives, by committing lewdneſs and adultery with them, or by [a] giving their huſbands occaſion to ſuſpect them, while without their leave they violently went into the houſes of the poor (who are called by God his people) where their wives were, to rob and ſpoil them, ſo that the huſbands there finding them, ſuſpected their wives of lewdneſs with them, and ſo they caus'd them to divorce them and put them away out of their houſes, in which they took delight, and ſo from their little children, whom by this means they deprived of his glory, [b] i. e. that grace, and that ſanctity, which reſided among them while they lived in obedience to God, to which condition they ſhould never again be reſtored by reaſon of that their ſeparation and diſperſion, which theſe wicked men were cauſe of. Or, by glory, [c] Some will have meant that conjunction between man and wife by God inſtituted for thoſe ends, which rightly obſerved are, as all his works and ordinances, his glory for which and by which men praiſe him. The Greek verſion of this verſe, and printed Arabick, are far different from all other, and from the words in the Hebrew. A manuſcript Arabick tranſlation (I ſuppoſe Rab. Saadias) the women of my people ye thruſt out of the houſes of their delightfulneſs (or wherein they ſhewed themſelves delightful and pleaſing to their huſbands;) from their children ye take my glory for ever.

[d] Calv. Gro. [e] Jun. Trem. Tar. Aben Ez. R. D. Kim. [f] De Dieu. R. Sal. Jar. [g] Pagn. edit. Tig. Chriſt. à Caſtro. Vatab. Dutch Notes. [h] Jun. Trem. Tar. [i] Dutch Notes. [k] Vatablus. [l] Lud. De Dieu. [m] See De Dieu. [n] See Grotius. [o] Abarb. See Vatab. [p] Jun. Trem. Tarnov. Deodat.

10 Ariſe ye and depart, for this is not your reſt, becauſe it is polluted, it ſhall deſtroy you even with a ſore deſtruction.

Ariſe ye and depart, &c.] According to this rendring the ſenſe is plain, [d] Prepare you for departure and removal from this land, for it may not be, or, is not convenient that it ſhould be a reſting place to you after ſuch wickedneſſes committed by you in it, but it ſhall deſtroy you, becauſe it is polluted by you, and that with a ſore deſtruction: and the words will bear this rendring. It is, perhaps, [e] the beſt: yet do ſome differently render, eſpecially the latter words. The ancient Vulgar Latin hath to this ſenſe, Ariſe and go, becauſe you have no reſt here; for the uncleanneſs thereof it ſhall be corrupted with a ſore putrefaction; ſo the Doway verſion hath it. The greateſt difference in this from Ours is, that the word טמאה Tameah, which Ours renders as a verb is polluted, is in it taken for a noun, [f] as it is by Others alſo, and rendred uncleanneſs; and the verb תחבל Techabbel, which Ours render actively, ſhall deſtroy you, in it is rendred intranſitively or paſſively, as [g] Some think it ought here to be taken, ſhall be corrupted or deſtroyed: which they might be the more induced to do, becauſe otherwiſe you is to be underſtood, for there is nothing to ſignify it expreſſed in the original. And for that reaſon may it be alſo, that [h] Others render, Becauſe pollution corrupteth, or, as another, becauſe of pollution, which corrupteth even with a great corruption; otherwiſe the meaning in both is much one, and reſpect is had to the ſame ſignification of the root or verb חבל Chabal, which hath, beſide this of deſtruction or corruption, other ſignifications alſo, which Some chuſe to follow: as, namely, חבל Chebel, ſignifieth a cord, and the author of that well approved Tigurin Latin tranſlation following this, renders, becauſe it is polluted and corrupted, and the cord too much ſtretched: but he might have done well farther to have explained his his meaning: he is not, for ought I find, followed by any other. It ſignifies alſo a company, and in this ſignification a noted Rabbin (Salomon Jarchi) taking it, expounds the words, that it may be polluted, it gathers companies, which companies being met, declare their counſels: and for confirmation of his taking it in this ſignification, he alledgeth the authority of the Chaldee, [i] who paraphraſeth the words: Ariſe and be gone, this land is not an houſe of reſt to the wicked: that they may pollute it they do corruptly; that you may defile it ye gather in companies to it, or againſt it. But neither is this by many followed. It hath the ſignification, laſtly, of grievous pains and pangs, ſuch as of a woman in travel, and the verb, to conceive and be in pains or pangs of travel, with pain to bring forth; and this here hath place in the opinion of ſome learned Jews. [k] One of them, taking the verb תחבל Techabbel in the firſt ſignification, and the noun חבל Chebel in this laſt, interprets the words thus, Becauſe it is polluted by you it ſhall deſtroy you, and there ſhall be ſore pains, viz. to it, i. e. to you its inhabitants; [l] or, ſaith he, the verb alſo may be taken in the laſt ſenſe, and then interpreted, becauſe it is polluted by whoredom, viz. ſpiritual, (that is, idolatry) and carnal, pains ſhall come upon it, and thoſe pains or pangs ſharp, or grievous. And ſo doth the manuſcript Jewiſh Arab tranſlation render them, Ariſe and be gone, this is not a reſting place for you; becauſe it is polluted, it ſhall be in pangs, and the pangs ſhall be ſharp. And the meaning thus will be good and agreeable to the ſcripture way of denouncing puniſhments to a ſinful nation, viz. that the land defil'd by their idolatries and abominable lewdneſs, and all manner of wickedneſs, ſhall be pained as it were a woman in travel and in pangs, deſirous to be eaſed of them her burden, and not be at quiet till ſhe be delivered of them, and they caſt forth of her. By the pains and ſorrows attributed to the land are noted thoſe evils that [m] ſhall ſeize on the inhabitants thereof. The like expreſſions ſee Jer. xiii. 2. and xlix. 24. Pſalm xlviii. 6. Hoſea xiii. 13. Iſaiah xiii. 8. with many other. As for the meaning of the judgment here denounced, either according to the firſt or this laſt interpretation, it may be compared with Lev. xviii. 25. 28. and xx. 22. the meaning is, that this land, which God had given them for a reſt, and they promiſed to themſelves for a ſure reſting place, now being by them contrary to his command defiled, ſhould no longer bear them, but as a foul ſtomach corrupting what it hath in it, violently vomit and caſt them forth, or, as a woman at her full time deſirous to be eaſed of her burden, ſhould be grievouſly pained, till it were rid of them, as being weary of them.

[q] Chriſt. à Caſtro. Tirinus. [r] Grot. [s] Stokes. [t] Peli. [u] Jun. Trem. Tig. [w] Abarb. [x] Tar. [y] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [z] R. Tanch. [a] R. Kimch. [b] R. Tanch. [c] R. Kimchi. [d] R. Tanch. [e] It is that which R. D. Kimchi followeth. [f] Jun. Trem. [g] Schind. in חבל, and ſee Abarb. Oecolamp. Caſtal. [h] See Syriack and Tig. Schindl. in מרץ.

11. If a man walking in the ſpirit and falſhood, do lie, ſaying, I will propheſy unto thee of wine and ſtrong drink, he ſhall even be the prophet of this people.

If a man walking in the ſpirit and falſhood, do lie, ſaying, &c.] Or, as in the margin, walk with the wind, and lie falſly. Theſe interpretations are all one in ſenſe; for if רוח Ruach be render'd ſpirit, then will it be, a man that pretends to the ſpirit of propheſy, whereas he hath it not, but follows his own falſe ſpirit, which is no better than wind, and vanity; [n] and the word ſignifies as well wind as ſpirit: ſo that the meaning will be, [o] if any falſly pretending to the ſpirit of propheſy and inſpiration from God, but, indeed, walking with the wind, and following what is vain, and falſe, ſhall forge a lie, and ſay, he hath commiſſion to propheſy unto them of wine and ſtrong drink, i. e. to bid them drink and be merry, and to enjoy themſelves, not fearing thoſe evils, which the true prophets denounced to them, [p] or that they ſhall have plenty of wine, and all good things, or, ſhall ſay, I will propheſy to thee for wine, and ſtrong drink. i. e. [q] If thou wilt give me a cup of wine, I will propheſy and foretel good things to thee, not deſtruction and calamity, as thoſe do that tell thee, they are ſent with ſuch ſad meſſages from God, Even he ſhall be the prophet of this people, him will they readily accept of for ſuch a prophet as they would have, and hearken unto him, whereas they will not hearken unto, or endure the true prophets, who reprove them, and denounce God's judgments againſt them, if they will not repent of their ſins, and turn from them, but ſilence them, as ver. 6. and ſee Iſaiah xxx. 10. This way of expounding theſe words is ſo evidently agreeable to them in the original, that to enquire after others would rather make them obſcure, than add light to them. For, as for that rendring of the Vulgar Latin: [r] would God I were not a man having the ſpirit, and that I did ſpeak a lie? it can hardly be fitted to the words in the original. The particle לו Lu, doth indeed ſignify would God as well as if. But then, what ground is there to add the negative I were not? it would in this ſenſe rather ſound, would God I were a man, &c. Again, by what interpretation can this be made a wiſh befitting the prophet? He might, perhaps, wiſh that no ſuch ſevere meſſage had been ſent by him, as of deſtruction to thoſe his people, out of his compaſſion to them; but to wiſh that what by God's command he ſpake, were a lie, would be an injury, not to himſelf only, but to the Spirit by which he ſpake, the Spirit of truth, with whom falſhood is not to be mentioned, much leſs either in word or wiſh attributed to him. If he had only wiſhed, that himſelf by his ſuffering might might have redeemed them, it had been an act of charity; but not to wiſh that God had ſent a lie by him. St. Paul ſaith he could wiſh himſelf even accurſed from Chriſt for his brethrens ſake, Rom. ix. 3. i. e. ſuffer any evil to ſave them, and win them to Chriſt, but not that the goſpel or doctrine that he taught them were a lie, rather than that they might ſuffer for refuſing it.

[i] It may be enquired whether here be not two rendrings in Chaldee clapt into one out of different readings: that which is cited by Rab. Salomon is only the latter. [k] Abu Walid. R. D. Kim. in Rad. Mich. Yophe. [l] R. Tanch. and ſee Ab. Ezra. [m] R. Tanch. [n] See Ezek. xiii. 3. Hoſea ix. 7. Jer v. 13. [o] Abu Walid. R. Salo. Jar. Ab. Ez. Abarb. R. Tanchum. [p] Tarnovius, Diodati, Druſius. [q] R. D. Kimchi, Vatablus, Druſius. [r] Doway Tranſlation.

12. I will ſurely aſſemble, O Jacob, all of thee, I will ſurely gather the remnant of Iſrael, I will put them together as the ſheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midſt of their fold; they ſhall make great noiſe by reaſon of the multitude of men.

13. The breaker is come up before them: they have broken up, and have paſſed through the gate, and are gone out by it, and their king ſhall paſs before them, and the Lord on the head of them.

I will ſurely aſſemble, O Jacob, all of thee, &c.] Very different opinions are there concerning the ſcope and meaning of theſe two verſes, Some taking them as a denunciation of judgment and utter deſtruction to them, as both before and after is threatned by the prophet from the Lord: Others as a promiſe of mercy and reſtauration after diſperſion, as 'tis uſual in the prophets to mingle promiſes of mercy with threatnings of judgment. Others, thirdly, make them the words of the falſe lying prophets mentioned in the foregoing verſe, bidding them not believe the true prophets threatning them with ſevere judgments, but telling them, that however they threatned the contrary, it ſhould be well with them. The firſt of theſe ways is taken by divers learned men, both [s] Jews and Chriſtians; and the words muſt then be expounded to this purpoſe; That God threatens, that he will gather together the whole poſterity of Jacob, and the remnant of Iſrael, (for many of them had already been deſtroyed, or carried away captives) i. e. all that remained both of the ten tribes, and alſo the two other of Judah, and Benjamin, in great multitudes, as flocks of ſheep in Bozrah, a place noted for abundance of ſheep; that as a flock are gathered into their fold, and there ſhut up, ſo they ſhould be gathered into their cities and towns, that they might be taken together, and there, by reaſon of the multitude of them that were ſhut up, beſieged, and diſtreſſed together, ([t] or by reaſon of the enemies that in ſuch great number ſurrounded them,) ſhould make great noiſe, and be much troubled, as a great flock of ſheep ſhut up in a fold, are diſturbed [u] when any comes in upon them: viz. becauſe the breaker, i. e. the ſoldiers of the enemy, who ſhould break down their walls, ſhould come upon them, and make free paſſage for themſelves, by breaking open their gates, to paſs in and out; or for themſelves to enter, and to lead them out to captivity: and their king, viz. the enemies king, ſhould paſs before his army to lead them on; and not only ſo, but the Lord himſelf in the head of them, to give them victory over thoſe whom he hath given up to be deſtroyed by them: and ſo this prophecy may be looked on as fulfilled in the taking of Samaria by the King of Aſſyria, 2 Kings xvii. 6. and of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings xxv. 1, &c. Others, who yet look upon it as then fulfilled, do differently expound the laſt verſe, to wit, that [w] by the breaker ſhould be underſtood the enemy, but then that for fear of him they ſhould make breaches themſelves in their walls to get out at, and paſs out at the gates, to eſcape if they could by flight, their king himſelf leading them the way, (as [x] of Zedekiah 'tis ſaid, 2 Kings xxv. 4.) but being taken, ſhould be carried captive, and they after him; and all this becauſe the Lord was in the head of them, i. e. the enemies, to execute the judgments that he had denounced againſt that people. But this ſeems harſh to interpret them, in before them, firſt of the Iſraelites, then in the ſame continued ſentence, on the head of them, of the enemies. Others therefore expound it, ſhall [y] be on the head of them, i. e. over them for evil, and to execute his vengeance on them, and to ſee that they ſhall not eſcape. Others, and the Lord ſhall in the head, or beginning, i. e. before, forſake them, and withdraw his preſence, by which he was wont to protect and defend them; which [z] a learned Jew notes to be a far fetch'd interpretation.

The ſecond expoſition, viz. that in theſe words is a gracious promiſe of reſtauration to Iſrael after their diſperſion, is preferred [a] by many learned men, both Jews and Chriſtians; with this difference, that the Jews (the modern at leaſt) underſtand it as a temporal reſtoring of the kingdom of Iſrael; the Chriſtians of a ſpiritual deliverance by Chriſt, and the calling them into his kingdom, and gathering them into his church, together with the called of the Gentiles, as one flock into one fold under one ſhepherd. See John x. 16. The words being ſo taken, we need not (ſaith [b] a learned Jew) look after any connexion with the foregoing, or following, it being not unuſual to have gracious promiſes ſo mingled with threatnings of judgments, where ſeems no coherence betwixt them. Or elſe the connexion may be made thus, [c] ſaith another, God having before threatned ſevere things againſt the people, both in this and the former chapter, as that their inheritance ſhould be laid waſte, and they caſt out of it, be deſtroyed, and carried away captives; leſt they ſhould utterly deſpair of deliverance or ſalvation, intermingles this merciful promiſe of a gracious reſtauration, that he will again after the diſperſion with which he hath threatned them, gather them together in as great multitudes as the ſheep ſheep of Bozrah, and as flocks are gathered together into their fold; ſo that there ſhall be a great noiſe by reaſon of their concourſe, as if their place were too ſtraight and narrow for them. Iſaiah xlix. 19, 20. And then a flouriſhing, or mighty growing king, [d] according to one ſenſe of the word פרץ Porets, or, a breaking king, ſhall break through all impediments (according to another ſignification of that word) and beat down the enemies; ſo that they following him ſhall, breaking through all difficulties of gates ſhut againſt them, paſs in and out as they pleaſe, their king going before them, and the Lord being on the head of them, as leader of the Vauntguard, i. e. to protect, and help them by his providence and mighty wonders, and to hinder the enemies from hurting them. Thus a learned Jew, underſtanding the words literally; who in the mean while notes, though theſe words be of the preterperfect tenſe, have broken up, have paſſed, are gone out, yet that they are to be underſtood as in the future, ſhall break up, ſhall paſs, ſhall go out; as ſuch change of tenſes is not unfrequent. And ſo [e] do others of them, who follow the ſame way, take it as a prophecy לעתד Leatid, belonging to the time to come, i. e. to the times of the Meſſiah, which they deny yet to be come, and vainly expect, promiſing to themſelves great carnal felicity therein. The [f] Chriſtian Interpreters, who look upon theſe words as a prophecy of good things, do look, as taught in the goſpel, after a more ſpiritual meaning, interpreting them as made good by Chriſt's calling, and gathering together, into his church, his fold, the Iſrael of God, his diſperſed flock, who were before as ſheep going aſtray; in which they ſhould grow into great numbers, like the flocks of Bozrah. The comparing with theſe words, John x. to ver. 18. will ſerve much for the illuſtration of them in this ſenſe underſtood. And in what numbers they came at firſt into the church, the hiſtory of the firſt times, as Acts xi. 41. and iv. 4. and elſewhere, and of ſucceeding times all the world over, teſtifies. They uſually underſtand by the breaker, and by their king, the ſame perſon, viz. Chriſt, to whom that title of breaker may well agree, for his breaking down all obſtacles, the middle wall of partition betwixt Jews and Gentiles, Eph. xi. 14. [g] breaking open the gates of death, and hell it ſelf, ſo that neither he himſelf could be detained by them, nor his [h] be hinder'd by them, from following him into the kingdom of heaven, the gates of which having conquered death, and triumphed over all enemies, he ſet open to them, ſo that they might without hindrance go in and out, and find paſture, John x. 9. he going before them, and his ſheep following him, ver. 4. and the Lord protecting them. It may be obſerved too, that if the word הפרץ Haporets, be taken in that other ſenſe mentioned, as it may ſignify one that increaſeth, or groweth to power, it may likewiſe aptly be attributed to Chriſt the King of the church, who is called the branch, Zech. iii. 8. and vi. 12. and of whom it is ſaid, that of the increaſe of his government there ſhall be no end, Iſaiah ix. 7. and the rod of the ſtemm of Jeſſe, and a branch that ſhould grow out of his roots, Iſaiah xi. 1. and a root of Jeſſe, whoſe reſt ſhould be glorious, by whom God would ſet his hand again, to recover the remnant of his people; and that he ſhould ſet up an enſign for the nations, to aſſemble the outcaſts of Iſrael, and gather together the diſperſed of Judah, ver. 10, 11, 12. To him that was promiſed to be as ſuch, and was exhibited as ſuch, and hath made good in himſelf what was promiſed, well may the title of הפרץ Haporets, in this, or indeed in both ſenſes agree. But if any think, that by הפרץ Haporets, the breaker, and מלכם Malcam, their king, ſhould be meant two diſtinct perſons, let him hear, what the ancient Jews (as cited [i] by the modern) ſay, for expoſition of this place. Haporets, the breaker, that is, Elias, and Malcam, their king, that is, the branch, the ſon of David; and then obſerve, what our Saviour himſelf hath taught us, that John Baptiſt was that Elias which was to come, Mat. xi. 14. and xvii. 12, 13. and what the angel ſaith of him, Luke i. 16, 17. that many of the children of Iſrael he ſhould turn unto the Lord their God, and that he ſhould go before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias, without fear, and with courage, as he, [k] rebuking ſin, and removing it out of the way, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord: and how the prophecy of Iſaias is applied to him preaching repentance, viz. that he was, as he ſaith alſo of himſelf, John i. 23. the voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtraight: every valley ſhall be filled, and every mountain and hill ſhall be brought low, and the crooked ſhall be made ſtraight, and the rough ways ſhall be made ſmooth, Luke iii. 4, 5. and what our Saviour ſaith, This is he, of whom it is ſaid, Behold, I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee; and that from the days of John the Baptiſt, the kingdom of heaven ſuffered violence, and the violent took it by force, Mat. xi. 10, 12. men breaking as it were, and paſſing through the gate, by his preaching repentance laid open, that they might go in and out: and it will be eaſy to apply to him this title of the breaker: and ſo ſhall we have in the words, a moſt illuſtrious prophecy of Chriſt, and his forerunner John the Baptiſt, which it will be no reaſon to let go, ſeeing the Jews themſelves ſo readily yield it to us. Eſpecially, when the words moſt nicely examined, will be more punctually appliable to this expoſition than any other that is brought, obſerving only to look for theſe promiſes to be ſpiſpiritually performed, which the Jews expect only as carnal; and becauſe they have not yet had any ſuch temporal deliverance, think the prophecy not yet fulfilled. Neither is it by divers Chriſtians looked upon as yet compleatly fulfilled, but, in another regard, viz. becauſe it reſpects Chriſt's calling, and gathering of his, not only here, into the fold of the church militant, the kingdom of grace, [l] but hereafter into the church triumphant, the kingdom of glory; in the heavenly Jeruſalem. This needs not be looked on as a new expoſition, but a completion of the former, which it neceſſarily preſuppoſeth. The third way of expounding the words is, of a learned [m] Jew, who taketh the former of the two verſes to be the words of that lying prophet, ſpoken of in the foregoing verſe, as if he ſhould ſay to them, Drink and be merry, and fear not, for the Lord hath put into my mouth to ſay unto you, that he will ſurely gather together all that are diſperſed of you, and you ſhall be in your cities in great multitudes, as flocks of ſheep in their proper folds and paſtures; and thus the falſe prophet leading them the way, they follow like ſheep one after another, when one of them hath gone out of a gap, and even their king likewiſe doth the like, the Lord, at their firſt breaking out from his obedience, removing his preſence, and providence from them. Thus he is explained, by another [n] of his nation, who yet rejects his opinion, becauſe theſe words were ſpoken before the diſperſion of the Iſraelites by captivity; ſo that if they had been a promiſe from their falſe prophets, they ſhould rather have told them, that they ſhould not be ſcattered, nor go at all into captivity, as the true prophets denounced, and not have propheſied to them of a return after captivity. Yet, do [o] Some Chriſtian Interpreters alſo ſo far follow him, as to think the former of the two verſes, to contain the words of the falſe prophets, but ſo as retorted by God upon them; that whereas they promiſed them, that they ſhould be gathered together, he would indeed ſo gather them, but not for good, as they falſly promiſed them, but for evil, and a general deſtruction. It may be here obſerv'd, that whereas the moſt take Bozrah for the proper name of a place, noted for abundance of flocks, mentioned Iſaiah xxxiv. 6. and Jer. xlviii. 24. yet by Others, it is not taken for a proper name, but tranſlated [p] in a ſheep cote, or fold, taking it to be in ſignification like מבצר Mibzar, a fence, or, place of defence; [q] Others, in tribulation, or ſtreights. Why Abarbanel and Montanus ſhould take Bozrah for Rome, there is no reaſon, tho' it might be of old a place for feeding ſheep.

[s] R. D. Kimchi, Calvin. Paræus, Druſius, De Dieu, Tirin. Grot. [t] Grotius. [u] De Dieu. [w] Tarn. Joſeph Kimchi. [x] Jer. xxxix. 4. and ſee Ezek. xii. 12. [y] Druſ. R. Joſeph Kimchi in R. D. Kimchi. [z] R. Tanch. [a] Chald. Paraph. R. Sol. Jarchi. R. Tanch. Abarb. [b] R. Tanch. [c] Abarb.

[d] R. Tanch. [e] R. D. Rim. and Raſh. in MSS. for in Bux. Bibles theſe words are left out. [f] Pelic. Oecolamp. Diodat. Riber. Sa. Menoch. [g] See Col. xi. 15. [h] See Mat. xvi. 18. [i] R. D. Kimchi and Abarb. [k] Grot. Mat. xi. 14.

CHAP. III.

VERSE 1. And I ſaid, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the houſe of Iſrael: Is it not for you to know judgment?

2. Who hate the good, and love the evil, who pluck off their ſkin from off them, and their fleſh from off their bones.

3. Who alſo eat the fleſh of my people, and flay their ſkin from off them, and they break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot, and as fleſh within the cauldron.

THAT it may appear, how juſtly deſerved God's judgments, which he threatned to execute on Iſrael, are, he proceeds to declare more particularly, the great corruptions that were among them; and, firſt, the avarice and cruel oppreſſions, exerciſed by ſuch as had the government over them. They who by their office ought to know juſtice and judgment, and to direct the people in the ways thereof, and encourage thoſe that walked accordingly, and to ſhow love and favour unto them; were ſo far from doing according to their duty, that on the contrary, they hated thoſe that were good, and favoured, and encouraged, thoſe that were evil, [a] or, hated to do good, and loved to do evil: yea, inſtead of cheriſhing the good, did themſelves pluck off their ſkin from off them, &c. by which figurative expreſſions are ſet forth their great oppreſſion of them, and the ſavage cruelty they uſed towards them, in reſpect both of their perſons and eſtates, extorting from them, and violently and unjuſtly ſpoiling them of all that they had to live by, that which was unto them as their ſkin, their fleſh, and their marrow; and in ſo doing, ſhewed in themſelves, [b] by their ſeveral ways of extortion and oppreſſion, as great cruelty, as would be in a ſhepherd, who ſhould deal with the flock which he were to feed, according to the literal expreſſion of the words, that ſo thereby he might luxurioufly glut and feed himſelf.

4. Then ſhall they cry unto the Lord, but he will not hear them: he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themſelves ill in their doings.

Then ſhall they cry unto the Lord.] What ſhall be the end or iſſue to them, whoſe wickedneſs he hath declared, he ſheweth, viz. [c] that thoſe heavy judgments, which he before denounced, ſhall certainly ſeize on them; and then they not able to free themſelves from them, and deſtitute of all other helps, ſhall cry unto him for deliverance, as acknowledging him alone able to ſave them; but all in vain, for in that time he will not hear their cry, but be as one that turneth his face away from ſuch as put up their ſuit to him, denying to ſhow any regard to them. And he addeth the reaſon of ſuch his averſation, or turning away from them, viz. becauſe they behaved themſelves ill in their doings: by which illneſs of their behaviour (by reaſon of the particle כאשר Caaſher, ſignifying as, or even as, and be-becauſe God often proportioneth the puniſhment to the ſin, rendring, as the Jews ſpeak, [a] meaſure for meaſure) may well be meant their ſtopping their ears againſt the cry of the poor, whom they themſelves oppreſſed, or would not deliver from their oppreſſors, as they ought to have done, and their turning away their faces from them, having no regard to them in their need: according to which their inflexibility, will God now with great ſeverity, in the time of their great need, behave himſelf as regardleſs of them, and ſhow himſelf inexorable for all their cries. He will ſend againſt them an enemy [e] which ſhall deal as cruelly, and as unmercifully with them, as they did with the poor; or more generally, as you formerly turned the back to him, [f] and would not hearken to him calling on you, ſo will he then behave himſelf towards you, James xi. 13.

[l] Chriſt. à Caſtro. [m] Ab. Ezra. [n] R. Tanch. [o] Jun. Trem. Grot. &c. [p] Chaldee Par. Vulg. Lat. [q] Septuag. Syriack. Arabick. [a] R. D. Kimchi. [b] Abarb. [c] Grot.

5. Thus ſaith the Lord concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace: and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war againſt him.

That bite with their teeth, &c.] Here God proceedeth to declare the iniquity of the falſe prophets, of whom mention was made, chap. ii. 11. and to denounce his judgments againſt them. Although the ſignification of the words be clear, yet as to the meaning of them there are different expoſitions. By their biting with their teeth, [g] Some, will have meant their bitter inveighing againſt the true prophets who denounced God's judgments, whereas they on the contrary promiſed peace. [h] Others, that while they ſpeak peace to that ſinful people, and bid them to expect it, and flattered them in their wicked ways, they did indeed bite them, and occaſioned hurt and miſchief to them by thus deluding them. [i] Others, that they were ſuch, who while they had given to them what they might bite with their teeth, or feed on, propheſied peace to ſuch as fed them: which may ſeem confirmed by the following words, ſhewing that againſt ſuch as did not ſo treat them, they propheſied evil, war and deſtruction, and ſet themſelves, and ſtirred up others againſt them, to do them all the miſchief they could, which is called their preparing war againſt them; ſhewing that they propheſied for gifts and rewards, as ver 11. and according to the rewards that they received, proportioned what they propheſied either for good or bad.

6. Therefore night ſhall be unto you, that ye ſhall not have a viſion, and it ſhall be dark unto you, that ye ſhall not divine, and the ſun ſhall go down over the prophets, and the day ſhall be dark over them.

7. Then ſhall the ſeers be aſhamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they ſhall cover their lips, for there is no anſwer of God.

Therefore night ſhall be unto you, &c.] Of the judgment in theſe words denounced againſt the falſe prophets, the plaineſt meaning ſeems this, That ſuch confuſion ſhall ſeize upon them, by reaſon of the great calamities that ſhall befal them, expreſſed by terms of night, and darkneſs, and the going down of the ſun, and the day being dark upon them: it ſhall be with them as with men in utter darkneſs, who know not which way to turn themſelves, much leſs can pretend to direct others, or ſhow them which way to go: and when things ſhall be ſo with them, they ſhall be aſhamed and confounded, their impoſtures being made manifeſt to all: and that what they pretended as meſſages from God promiſing peace, being ſo far from being made good that the clean contrary is hapned: were meer deluſions of their own, and being ſo now diſcovered, [k] they ſhall not dare to proceed in their former ways of falſe divinations, nor pretend any revelation from God, but cover their lips, as men put to ſilence, not able to ſay any thing that ſhall be accepted, or daring once to open their mouths. For it cannot be interpreted, as if God ſhould now ceaſe to put his words in their mouths, or to ſend any meſſage by them, for they never were before employed by him, but pretended falſly to have received from him what they ſpake; which falſhood of theirs being now by the contrary events diſcovered, they ſhall be ſo confounded with ſhame, as not to dare any more to open their mouth to the people. [l] So that thoſe laſt words, for there is no anſwer of God, ſeem not ſo much a reaſon, why they now ſhould hold their peace, viz. becauſe God now refuſed to anſwer or ſpeak by them (for he had not at all done ſo) as to declare, that theſe things which now came to paſs, diſcovered that they never ſpake by the Spirit of God, and this diſcovery brought neceſſary ſilence with ſhame to them. Covering the lip was a cuſtom of Lepers, Lev. xiii. 45. confeſſing their uncleanneſs, a ſign of ſorrow and ſhame, a token of ſorrow, Ezek. xxiv. 17, 22. Here it ſeems to ſignify the [m] ſtopping of their mouths from ſpeaking.

8. But truly I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, and of judgment, and of might, to declare unto Jacob his tranſgreſſion, and to Iſrael his ſin.

But truly I am full of power, &c.] He oppoſeth himſelf to thoſe ſeducers, his commiſſion, his faithfulneſs in executing of it, and his behaviour to theirs. They being not inſpired by God's Spirit, nor having any meſſage or or anſwer from him, but led by their own erroneous ſpirit, directed all that they ſpake to their own ends and advantage, and flattered ſuch as fed them and made much of them, and promiſed good unto them, with thoſe that did not ſo, dealing otherwiſe: but he is truly inſpired by God, full of his Spirit, and by virtue of that full of power, freely and without fear or partiality, without any ſelf reſpects or by-ends to utter the meſſage with which he is ſent from God; and of judgment, by which to [n] diſcern between right and wrong, and what and when to ſpeak; and of might without fear of men or their greatneſs to ſpeak it, even to declare unto Jacob his tranſgreſſion, and to Iſrael his ſin, not reſpecting perſons or ſoothing any in their evil ways, but boldly and freely reproving all of what condition ſoever, that ſo they may turn to God by repentance, or elſe know what judgments they are to expect. And ſo by the word full of judgment, [o] Some underſtand the judgments of the Lord to be denounced, as if he were by the Spirit moved to denounce them; though [p] Others prefer the notion of ability in diſcerning between things, and ſo rightly applying what he ſhould ſpeak, and knowing how and when to do it.

[a] Abarb. [e] R. D. Kimchi. [f] Tirinus. [g] Chriſt. à Caſtro. (although it be not Kimchi's expoſition, as he would have it) Tirin. [h] Ab. Ezra. R. D. Kimchi. R. Tanchum, Prov. xxviii. 6. [i] Raſhi. R. D. Kim. R. Tanch. Abarbinel. [k] Aben Ezra. R. D. Kimchi. [l] R. Tanchum. [m] R. Tanchum.

9. Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the houſe of Jacob, and princes of the houſe of Iſrael, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

Hear this, ye heads of the houſe of Jacob, and princes of the houſe of Iſrael.] The like compellation we had, ver. 1. That it may well agree to the whole twelve tribes is no doubt, though after the diviſion of them into two kingdoms, the name of Iſrael be often particularly given to the ten tribes. See note on chap i. 5. Here in this chapter in both places theſe titles ſeem to many Interpreters to be attributed to the ſame, viz. thoſe that were in dignity and authority in both kingdoms: but [q] a learned Jew, conſidering that the judgments denounced in the former verſes may well concern the kingdom of Iſrael, thinks by the princes of the houſe of Iſrael, in the firſt verſe, to be meant thoſe of that kingdom as diſtinct from Judah, and in thoſe following this verſe, ſeeing Zion and Jeruſalem are expreſly named, and the judgments particularly concern them, by the heads of the houſe of Jacob, and the princes of the houſe of Iſrael, to be meant particularly thoſe of Judah, and them to be called by the ſame title with the others, becauſe they were like them in ſins; as Iſaiah i. 10. they are termed rulers of Sodom, and the Jews the people of Gomorrah, becauſe their deeds were like to theirs.

The power of the Spirit of the Lord in him he ſheweth, by daring, even to thoſe of greateſt authority, to declare their tranſgreſſions without fear of their greatneſs, and to reprove them, for that whereas they ought to have known judgment, (as he ſpeaketh, ver. 1.) to have themſelves walked in the ways thereof, and cauſed others to obſerve them, they did clean contrarily abhor it, and perverted all equity, all that was right, even ſetting themſelves to do what was contrary thereto as things hateful to them, and ſcorning to be guided by the rules thereof which were contrary to their ends.

10. They build up Zion with blood, and Jeruſalem with iniquity.

They build up Zion with blood.] So according to the ſenſe it is rendred, as being a farther deſcription of the ſins of thoſe ſpoken to; otherwiſe the word, being in the ſingular number, and ſounding he buildeth up, may be expounded [r] Every one of them buildeth, &c. or, [s] as ſtill ſpeaking to them, O thou which buildeſt, &c. or, Every one of you which buildeth up Jeruſalem, i. e. build therein houſes and palaces with blood (or, that think it ſhall be built and inhabited when ſuch things are done in it.) With blood, that is therein ſhed, ſaid the Chaldee, i. e. with wealth gotten by the murdering violently or unjuſtly, putting to death the owners thereof, which they did ſo frequently, that blood touched blood, Hoſea iv. 2. or [t] by money which they took of murtherers to ſave them contrary to the law, which required life for life, blood for blood. Others [u] think that the word blood is not neceſſarily here to be properly taken, but more largely, as elſewhere, for bloody hainous things of ſeveral ſorts; and [w] Others more particularly for violence, fraud and oppreſſion, by which the goods, which are taken from the poor owners, that ſhould thereby ſuſtain the life of themſelves and their families, were [x] as their blood, and the taking them from them as ſhedding their blood.

[y] Others refer the word build, not to thoſe unjuſt rulers ſpoken of, but to God the builder of Zion, and to be ſpoken by way of admiration or interrogation to this ſenſe, Shall God (or, ſhall I? as in the perſon of God) build up, or eſtabliſh Zion with blood, and Jeruſalem with iniquity? that is, when ſuch ſins are committed in it: [z] or, Did he build Zion with blood, or Jeruſalem with iniquity? And this ſenſe would well agree with what precedes and follows; but the other meaning is more received.

11. The heads thereof judge for reward, and the prieſts thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the Lord, and ſay, Is not the Lord among us? no evil can come upon us.

The heads thereof judge for reward, &c.] He proceeds to declare the ſins of all ſorts of thoſe, by whom the people ought to have been governed and directed in the right way. The heads, (who were by the law forbidden to take any gift, leſt they ſhould be perverted, according to what is ſaid, Exod. xxiii. 8. Thou ſhalt ſhalt take no gift, for the gift blindeth the wiſe, and perverteth the words of the righteous; and, again, to the very ſame purpoſe, is repeated, Deut. xvi. 19.) do judge for reward, and accordingly for gain wreſt judgment, being guided in their ſentence by the bribe they receive, and not by the merits of the cauſe. The prieſts, whoſe lips ſhould keep knowledge, and at whoſe mouths they ſhould ſeek the law, as being the meſſengers of the Lord of Hoſts, and by him given for teachers and right interpreters of his law, Mal. xi. 7. They teach for hire: their mouths are opened only to thoſe that will give to them: and then will teach them not ſo much the truth as pleaſing things, ſuch as they ſhall deſire, not what they ought to hear. And whereas no prophet ſhould undertake that function but ſuch as were ſent by God, and ſuch ſhould impartially deliver his meſſage, without reſpect of perſons, fear or flattery, or any by-ends, there were among them many that pretended to be prophets, who divined for money, and that they might get thereby, vented falſe viſions, and feigned meſſages from God who never ſent them. See Ezek. xiii. 6, &c. (following the ways of Balaam, who loved the ways of unrighteouſneſs, 2 Pet. xi. 15.) To any that would believe them and put into their mouths, ver. 5. and reward them for it, they would undertake to foretel ſuch things as ſhould beſt like and pleaſe them, and ſooth them up in their ways; to others the clean contrary: in ſumm, all theſe, in that corrupt ſtate ſo without regard to juſtice and truth, made their gain not God's glory their end, and yet for all this would [a] flatter themſelves with vain hope of ſecurity and confidence in God and his preſence among them. He had own'd them for his people, choſen Sion for his habitation, promiſed to dwell in the temple at Jeruſalem; [b] they had there the ark of his covenant, and the ſigns of his majeſtatick preſence, ſo that they thought him even tied to a perpetual reſidence among them; and ſo long as he was among them, they thought themſelves ſure that no evil could come upon them, he would not caſt off his people, nor let his city and his temple be deſtroyed. Such vain confidence in the Lord by them who forſook the Lord and his ways, and yet hoped not to be forſaken by him, ſee deſcribed likewiſe, Jer. vii. 4, 8, &c. where he ſheweth on what terms only he would continue his preſence with them and defend them; which conditions ſeeing theſe here obſerved not, how vain and groundleſs their confidence is, the iſſue ſhall ſhew, and that is in the next words declared.

[n] Grot. Tarn. [o] Ribera, Sa, &c. [p] Tarn. [q] Abarb. [r] Aben Ezra, Kimchi. [s] R. Saadi. Arab. Verſion MS. R. Tanchum. [t] Kimchi. [u] R. Tanchum. [w] Kimchi. [x] See Eccluſ. xxxiv. 21, 22. See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [y] R. Tanch. [z] Abarb.

12. Therefore ſhall Zion for your ſake be plowed as a field, and Jeruſalem ſhall become heaps, and the mountain of the houſe, as the high places of the foreſt.

Therefore ſhall Zion for your ſake, &c.] They ſeem'd to think for Zion's ſake, and Jeruſalem's, and the houſe of the Lord's ſake, they ſhould be ſecure, however they behaved themſelves; but God declareth, that on the contrary, for their ſakes, and the evil of their doings, whereby they had made thoſe places which ſhould have been kept holy to him [c] a den of robbers, of murderers, adulterers, idolaters, and the like, even thoſe places themſelves ſhould be given up to utter ruin and deſtruction; his anger toward the people ſhould extend it ſelf even to the place it ſelf which was defiled by them, it no longer retaining its holineſs than they continued holy. For your ſake ſhall Zion be plowed as a field, &c. Theſe words are cited, Jer. xxvi. 18. where it is ſhewed that they were ſpoken in the days of King Hezekiah. Plowed as a field, the buildings thereof being all thrown down, it ſhall be laid plain as a field which ſhall be plowed, or [d] which the enemy ſhall plow up, that he may leave no ſign of a place ever inhabited, or a ſign that it ſhould never more be inhabited; and Jeruſalem as an heap of ſtones, the ſtately buildings thereof being demoliſhed, not one ſtone left in order on another, but all thrown down, Mat. xxiv. 2. and laid in rude heaps. And the mountain of the houſe, the mount Moriah, on which the glorious temple ſtood, as the high places of the foreſt, as hillocks on which trees and weeds ſhould grow, as in a wild place, not regarded or inhabited by men, but only by wild beaſts, Hoſea ii. 12. All theſe are expreſſions of utter ruin and deſolation. The latter words rendred, high places of the foreſt (or of a wood) a [e] learned Jew ſaith may be rendred, as high places of the [f] boar of the foreſt, in reference to what was done to that place by Adrian the emperor, who to make the place more odious to the Jews, [g] ſet up in ſeveral places of the city the images of hogs and other things deteſtable to them; and he would have this prophecy to reſpect what was by the Roman emperors done when they deſtroyed Jeruſalem, when one under Titus who deſtroy'd it, [h] plowed up the ground where it ſtood, in token that none might, without the emperor's leave, build any more any houſe there, and when ſuch things were done by Adrian, who built there a city which he called Ælia, and built up and down in ſeveral places idols temples. But, however, this prophecy may ſeem to him and others to [i] extend it ſelf ſo far, and then to the utmoſt of the letter to have been fulfilled, or the whole of what is here ſaid done, yet we may juſtly look upon it as limited to a ſhorter time, and ſufficiently, as to making good theſe deſcriptions of great deſolation, fulfilled in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the temple by the Chaldeans, by whom the city and temple were made heaps of rubbiſh or duſt, Neh. iv. 2. 2 Kings xxv. and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19. in the time of King Zedekiah, till when, though it was before ſpoken, it ſeems to have been differed on their repentance, as is intimated in the forecited Jer.

[a] Iſaiah xlviii. 2. [b] Kim. Abarb. Grotius. [c] Jer. vii. 9, &c. [d] Grot. Chriſt. à Caſtro. [e] Abarb. [f] Pſalm lxxx. 13. [g] Calviſius an. Chriſti. 135. [h] Calv. an. 123. [i] See Chriſt. à Caſtro.

Jer. xxvi. 19. though to the other alſo, in reſpect of the things done agreeable to theſe expreſſions, it may not unfitly be applied. See alſo R. Saadias his Arab tranſlation, And the mountains of the houſe ſhall be chapels, or houſes of other worſhips, or, as ſome ſay, a wood.

CHAP. IV.

VERSE 1. But in the laſt days it ſhall come to paſs, that the mountain of the houſe of the Lord ſhall be eſtabliſhed in the top of the mountains, and it ſhall be exalted above the hills, and people ſhall flow unto it.

BUT in the laſt days it ſhall come to paſs, that the mountain of the houſe of the Lord, &c.] According to God's uſual method, in the midſt of judgment remembring mercy, here are to thoſe grievous judgments before denounced, ſubjoined gracious promiſes of great mercy. In the foregoing words he threatneth an utter deſolation to the mountain of the Lord; here he promiſeth a gracious reſtauration, eſtabliſhment and exaltation: in thoſe the obſtinate ſinners are given to underſtand the ſeverity of God's unavoidable judgments to them; in theſe penitent believers are given to expect his mercies, that never fail thoſe, who are qualified to receive them. How far the mountain of the houſe in the foregoing words, and the mountain of the houſe of the Lord in theſe, agree or differ, in what is ſignified by that expreſſion, will appear in what ſhall follow.

In the laſt days, &c.] That by the laſt days (though more generally may be ſignified any time to come after, yet) are here meant the days or time of Meſſiah or Chriſt, is ſo far agreed on both by [a] Some Jews of as good authority as any, (giving, I ſuppoſe, the common receiv'd opinion among them) and moſt Chriſtians, that if any think otherwiſe, we have not reaſon to be ſwayed by their authority. But though both Jews and Chriſtians ſo far agree to the ſignification of the words, yet in their applying them is there great difference; the Jews denying the promiſed Meſſiah to be yet come, the Chriſtians believing, and acknowledging him to be long ſince come: the Jews looking for his kingdom as of this world; the Chriſtians looking on it as ſpiritual: and ſo what the Jews ſay is not performed, underſtanding the words literally according to the outward ſound, the Chriſtians acknowledge to have been already made good, and according to the true meaning and import of the words in an higher and ſpiritual meaning, underſtood as they ought to be, performed. All the advantage that we may expect from the Jews, is a conceſſion that ſuch or ſuch paſſages have reſpect to the promiſed Meſſiah, or to Chriſt and his times, how they are accompliſh'd we muſt learn from the hiſtory of the New Teſtament and Chriſtian Interpreters.

In Iſaiah ii. 2, &c. we have much the like expreſſions as here, as if one of theſe prophets had borrowed words from the other. Whether one did make uſe of the others expreſſions, as of words already known to the people, or for what end, we need not further enquire; 'tis ſufficient to know, that God's prophets did not ſteal his word one from another, as 'tis ſaid of thoſe prophets, Jer. xxiii. 30. but that being all full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, chap. iii. 8. they ſpake as they were moved by that Spirit, which repreſenting to them ſometimes like viſions, moved them to utter and declare them in like words and expreſſions. So Iſaiah and Micah here: ſo in Obadiah, ver. 4, &c. and Jer. xlix. 9. and 16. and in the one and other are they the words of the ſame living God, ſuggeſting to them what to ſpeak, and inſpiring them to declare the ſame things in the ſame language.

The mountain of the houſe of the Lord, &c.] That is, according to the letter, the mountain on which the temple, call'd the houſe of the Lord, ſtood, viz. mount Sion, or that part called mount Moriah. Of this the Jews underſtanding it (the ſoberer of them) to omit ſome wilder and abſurd expreſſions at leaſt (though we may think they meant not to be underſtood literally, as if hill ſhould be ſet on hill for exalting it) obſerve, that by ſaying, it ſhall be eſtabliſhed on the top of the mountains, and exalted above the hills, is not to be underſtood that it ſhould be increaſed in meaſure of height, but ſhould be made illuſtrious by glorious privileges confer'd on it, tokens of God's peculiar grace and favour and preſence in it, and the temple on it: in conſideration and admiration of which, many people ſhould with reverence and reſpect look towards it, and in great multitudes flow unto it; for the word נהרו Naharu in the original ſeems to ſignify both theſe; firſt, to look, or ſet the eyes upon, and ſecondly, to flow like waters of a river continually flowing: in this latter ſenſe it is, as by our, ſo [b] by moſt Interpreters rendred: but ſome learned [c] Jews prefer the former. The ſcope of both will be much one, viz. to ſhew what great reſpect, and regard, and affection people ſhall have to it, as to a place more eminent and deſirable than all others, by reaſon of the glory that God ſhall confer on it, and the privileges that he ſhall beſtow on, and in it. Thoſe privileges here promiſed are ſo great, as [d] that the Jews, minding temporal concerns, do not acknowledge to have been under the ſecond temple after their return from captivity made good, and therefore yet expect the coming of a Meſſiah, under whom they ſhall enjoy them. But Chriſtians looking on them as concerning ſpiritual things, acknowledge them to be already made good by the coming of Chriſt, and ſetting up his ſpiritual kingdom by the preaching of the goſpel, and the gathering of peeople to it. If we look on the place here called the mountain of the houſe of the Lord according to the ſound of the letter, ter, even that was highly exalted and made illuſtrious, filled with his glory at his coming, the glory of the latter houſe ſtanding on that (according to what is propheſied, Haggai xi. 9.) greater than of the former, made ſo, [e] not ſo much by the external pomp of it, as by his preſence, and the miracles by him and his Apoſtles wrought, and the Holy Ghoſt, and many graces by him confer'd in it. And with what reſpect people may be ſaid to have looked up to it and flowed unto it, appears by that early converſion of ſo many out of every nation under heaven, as are reckon'd up, Acts ii. 5, 9, 41, 46, 47. chap. iv. 4. This, if we ſhould ſo far reſtrain the name of the mount of the houſe of the Lord, ſufficiently proves this prophecy in great meaſure made good in reſpect to what was done in it, and about it. But that we may ſee the more evident fulfilling of the whole, it will be convenient to take thoſe words in a larger acception, with many, if not moſt of Chriſtian Interpreters, ſo as to denote the church or [f] kingdom of Chriſt, which from thence had its riſe, and of which that mountain and houſe of the Lord, or temple was a type, ſo that it may well bear its name: which alſo, in the words of Chriſt, [g] Mat. v. 14. may be compared to a city that is ſet on an hill, more illuſtrious indeed than Jeruſalem it ſelf, or any the moſt eminently placed and exalted cities, yea kingdoms: and then in the large ſpreading of the doctrine of it, by ſo many converts and ſo many nations looking and flocking unto it, will the utmoſt that can be expected from the words be made good. What is ſaid, ſhall be eſtabliſhed, a learned [h] Jew obſerves to be an expreſſion denoting continuance and perpetuity, that it ſhall continually remain on its ſettlement; and this well agrees to the church of Chriſt, of which he ſaith, Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it, Mat. xvi. 18. Some of great note from of old, by the mountain of the Lord's houſe, will have Chriſt himſelf to be here underſtood: but whether it be underſtood of Chriſt the head, or the church his body (that temple built upon the foundation of the apoſtles and prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf [i] being the chief corner-ſtone, in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple of the Lord) [k] as they are one, ſo the ſcope and meaning will be one; although the former acception of the words is moſt followed.

[a] R. D. Kimchi. Abarbinel. Tanchum. [b] R. Solo. Ab. Ezra. R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [c] R. Saadias, Abu Walid, R. [d] R. Tanch.

2. And many nations ſhall come, and ſay, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the houſe of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law ſhall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jeruſalem.

And many nations ſhall come and ſay, Come let us go up, &c.] In what multitudes and what zeal and affection, not only Jews but Gentiles alſo, whom God promiſed to Chriſt for his inheritance, Pſalm ii. now made one willing people of God, Pſalm cx. 3. the middle wall of partition, which before ſeparated them, being broken down, ſhould flock to the church of Chriſt, he here expreſſeth, in that they ſhould mutually exhort one another, ſaying, Come, &c. The thing ſignified being done, [l] though thoſe words ſhould not be expreſly by them ſpoken, is that which makes good the expreſſion; although we cannot doubt, but oft among them ſuch exhortations to ſtir up one another to embrace the doctrine of Chriſt, have been in words us'd, as well as we hear, [m] Andrew exhorting his brother Simon, and [n] Philip Nathaniel, and [o] the woman of Samaria thoſe of that city to come unto Chriſt. Nor need we look on it as any ſufficient ground of cavil for the Jews, that all theſe nations came not in perſon up to Jeruſalem, and the mountain where the temple ſtood; that is not the thing required; but the coming in to Chriſt, and embracing the goſpel, which began firſt to be preached at Sion, and from thence went forth into other nations, is (though done at the greateſt diſtance from Jeruſalem,) a going up to the mountain of the Lord, exalted above all other mountains, the church, which now extends it ſelf wide on the face of the whole earth, where they may now as properly and acceptably worſhip God, as formerly in the court of the Gentiles, at the mount of the material houſe of the Lord. That hour is now come, John iv. 21, 23. The houſe of God is the church, 1 Tim. i. 15.

And he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, &c.] The end which they are to propoſe in their coming into the church, is here ſhewed to be, not that they may obtain wealth, wordly honour and dignities, but that they may learn his will, that they may know how they ought to walk; and accordingly they muſt reſolve to walk in his ways, which lead to ſalvation and true happineſs, which he alone teacheth. They ſeek not temporal but ſpiritual good things; for his kingdom (as he declareth) is not of this world, John xviii. 36. The miſtake of thoſe things, which were to be expected from Chriſt at his coming, did at firſt keep the Jews from acknowledging him, and ever ſince hinders them from coming in to him. To learn of his ways and walk in his paths is not that felicity which can ſatisfy their expectations from him; but here we are taught, that that ought to be the chief thing deſired in his church and kingdom, that we may know his ways, and be happy in practiſing and doing accordingly, otherwiſe to know them will be vain.

For the law ſhall go forth of Zion, &c.] Theſe words, which by moſt are taken for the words of the prophet, (though [p] by Others for the words of thoſe people ſpeaking among themſelves; the matter will be all one) declare the reaſon why they ſhould go up to the mountain tain of the Lord that they might learn his ways, viz. becauſe there only ſhould be had, and thence proceed the true and clear knowledge of God and his ways. Of old the law went forth from mount Sinai, and then ſeated it ſelf as it were in Sion, and was even the peculiar of the Jews, for then he ſhewed his word unto Jacob, his ſtatutes and judgments unto Iſrael; but dealt not ſo with any other nation; and as for his judgments they were not known to them, Pſalm cxlvii. 19, 20. But in the laſt days here ſpoken of, the times of Chriſt, it was to go forth of Zion, and from Jeruſalem, there firſt to be divulged, but not confined to it, but to be preached all the world over, and communicated to all nations, according to our Saviour's commiſſion to his diſciples, that they ſhould go and teach all nations, Mat. xxviii. 19. which being accordingly by them (who were to be witneſſes to him both in Jeruſalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt parts of the earth) executed, their ſound went into all the earth, and their words to the ends of the world, Rom. x. 17, 18. And that law, that word, viz. the goſpel, which by this means went forth of Zion, and Jeruſalem, muſt all of all nations, that will learn of the ways of God, and be inſtructed rightly to walk in his paths, embrace and attend to, as the only doctrine that teacheth what ought to be known of him and his will, and how to pleaſe him, and ſo to obtain thoſe good things promiſed to the obedient ſubjects of his kingdom.

[e] See Grotius in Haggai. [f] See Paræus, Iſaiah ii. [g] See Dr. Hammond. [h] Abarb. [i] Eph. xi. 20, 21. [k] See Tirinus on Iſaiah xi. 2. and Paræus on Micah. [l] Ribera, Tar. [m] John i. 45. [n] Ver. 46. [o] John iv. 29. [p] Abarbinel.

3. ¶ And he ſhall judge among many people, and rebuke ſtrong nations afar off; and they ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares, and their ſpears into pruning-hooks: nation ſhall not lift up a ſword againſt nation, neither ſhall they learn war any more.

And he ſhall judge among many people and rebuke, &c.] Who is this that ſhall judge and rebuke? The Lord, [q] ſay Some, mentioned laſt in the foregoing words; his word, [r] ſay Others, there likewiſe mentioned: which, without doubt, ſhall be done by the mediation of one conſtituted by him, which ſhall divulge ſuch truths as ſhould be received from him: [s] Others, Sion, or the mountain or houſe of the Lord, that is, the church. Some Jews of great learning and authority among them expreſly ſay, Meſſiah, though not expreſſed, is here meant (according [t] to the manner of ſcripture, leaving the perſon which is neceſſarily underſtood, unnamed) that he is the teacher, in the former words, the judge and rebuker in theſe ſpoken of; and ſo diverſe Chriſtians; and this way taken comprehends all the reſt, God in the church judging by Chriſt, and he by his word: for the Father having ſet Chriſt as king upon his holy hill of Sion, Pſalm ii. 6. hath committed to him all judgment, and the ſcepter by which he judgeth or rebuketh among people is his word, by which he inſtructeth them in his ways and governeth them; and by this he ſhall judge, diſtinguiſh, and teach them to diſcern between right and wrong, that they may walk in the ways, and obſerve the rules of juſtice and charity, whenſoever, or whereſoever they be or live, and rebuke them that do otherwiſe than they ought, that they may amend their ways. The King Meſſiah (ſaith a [u] learned Jew) ſhall, as Lord over all nations, judge among them, ſo as that if any have quarrels or differences with others, they ſhall make addreſſes, or refer the matter to him, and he ſhall bid him that hath done wrong, to do right to his neighbour. He ſhall compoſe all quarrels and differences between them. He ſhall [w] judge and rebuke not by the ſword or ſpear and violence, but by his word and Spirit. The effect of which his ſo judging and rebuking ſhall be, that being wrought on and diſciplinated by his word, they ſhall lay aſide all animoſities and diſſenſions, and deſire to live in peace one with another, which is expreſſed by ſaying, they ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares, &c. i. e. they ſhall be ſo averſe from war one with another, that they ſhall turn their inſtruments of war, (as having no more need of them, or reſolving no more to uſe them) into ſuch as are proper and neceſſary for times of peace, (an expreſſion contrary to what is us'd, Joel iii. 10. for expreſſing times of war and tumult, Beat your plow-ſhares into ſwords, &c.) This being promiſed as the effect of Chriſt's reigning and the preaching of the goſpel, which we call the word of God, the Jew, who acknowledges not Chriſt to be yet come, requires us to ſhew how this hath been made good under the goſpel, that ſo we may prove this prophecy to have been made good, and ſo Chriſt to be come? For anſwer to which objection ſeveral things are ſaid, as, firſt, [x] that theſe words are figuratively to be underſtood, not preciſely according to the ſound of the letter, not ſo much of outward peace in the world, as of inward peace of conſcience, that peace which being juſtified by faith we have in God, Rom. v. 1. that which Chriſt promiſeth to his, that they ſhall have in him though they have trouble in the world, John xvi. 33. and this peace have Chriſtians always found, and ſhall find in Chriſt: he left it with his and will continue it to them.

Secondly, that the goſpel is a doctrine of peace, commending it to men and diſpoſing their minds to it; ſo that whoſoever as much as lieth in them live not peaceably with all men, Rom. xii. 18. live not according to the rules thereof, and animoſities, wars, and diſſenſions argue a deficiency of faith in men, and that they [y] have not aſcended up to the mountain of the houſe of the Lord, nor learned (as they ought) his ways to walk in them. But ſeeing the word of Chriſt inſtructeth to bear wrongs and not to revenge, &c. and diſpoſeth to peace, and requireth it, it may be well ſaid, that that by the preaching thereof men ſhould be ſo diſpos'd, as [z] that they ſhould beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares, &c. that they ſhould not levy war any more.

[q] R. Tanchum. [r] Abarb. See Chriſt à Caſtro. [s] Ribera. [t] R. D. Kimchi, Aben Ezra. [u] R. D. Kimchi. [w] Chriſtoph. à Caſtro. Abarb. [x] Tar. [y] Paræus.

Thirdly, Some [a] think this made good in that about the time of Chriſt's coming, there was peace in the known world under Auguſtus, in token of which the gates of the temple of Janus at Rome were ſhut, as after again under Nero, &c. but that peace ſeems to others not much to reſpect this peace, as not being an effect of preaching the goſpel.

Fourthly, it may ſeem rather to have been fulfilled in what is ſaid, that when great multitudes were converted to Chriſt by the preaching of the goſpel, [b] they were all of one heart, and one ſoul, Acts iv. 32. and as the doctrine farther diffus'd it ſelf, ſo did alſo peace and charity, among all thoſe many and of different nations that received it, ſo far as that it was a note and character of Chriſtians [c] acknowledged by the unbelieving heathens, who were forced to ſay of them with envy and admiration. See how they mutually love one another. If it continued not ſo, it argues (as we ſaid) in men a falling as from their firſt love, ſo too much from the faith, and is a ſign of thoſe perilous times that the Apoſtle foretold ſhould come in the laſt days, 2 Tim. iii 1, &c. They that faithfully adhere to Chriſt, and ſincerely love him, will ſtill be known to be his by their loving one another, and living peaceably as far as is poſſible with all men: and of ſuch only [d] to ſome ſeems this prophecy to be ſpoken, and to have reſpect not generally to all men, but to the godly, and true believers, who have always endeavoured, and always will endeavour to make it good, and ſhew it fulfill'd in themſelves. If any think not theſe anſwers ſufficient, but expect a more literal fulfilling of the words by a general peace in the world, they muſt expect [e] what time will hereafter produce; and if they be the Jews, that this anſwer may ſuffice them, and that there is no force from the argument to prove that the Meſſiah is not yet come, will appear from what diverſe of their own doctors ſay, that the time or kingdom [f] of Meſſiah laſteth on earth many thouſands of years, (doubtleſs to the end of the world.) So that if ought ſpoken as concerning his time be not yet fulfill'd, it may be longer expected without denying him to be yet come. Again, as to them, their doctors alſo ſay, [g] that weapons of war ſhall not ceaſe even in the days of Meſſiah, but only in the world to come: and ſo do ſome [h] Chriſtians interpret theſe words, as that they are to have their full completion in the world to come after the ſecond coming of Chriſt. But the prophecy may ſeem rather to reſpect what ſhall be done in this world than that to come, and we may well reſt ſatisfy'd that it is already perform'd, even in reſpect [i] of that outward concord, which followed among many different nations on the preaching of the goſpel.

4. But they ſhall ſit every man under his vine, and under his fig-tree, and none ſhall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of Hoſts hath ſpoken it.

But they ſhall ſit, &c.] A figurative expreſſion of great ſecurity and tranquillity, [k] elſewhere likewiſe uſed, the effect and ſign of peace; and ſo is to be underſtood, as the former promiſe of peace, whether of outward or inward tranquillity: which that they may without doubting expect, is added for confirmation, that the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it, who can and will make good whatſoever he ſaith without fail, however improbable at preſent it may ſeem.

5. For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever.

For, &c.] This particle ſhews theſe words to have dependence on ſomething before ſaid, and to give a reaſon of what was ſaid; and they ſeem ſpoken by the prophet in the name of thoſe, who ſhould go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the houſe of the God of Jacob, and learn of his ways, and walk in his paths, and had promiſe of peace and ſecurity to them; rendring a reaſon why they might certainly expect a performance of thoſe good things promiſed to them, viz. from their acknowledging him only for their God; adhering to him, and conſtantly walking in obedience to him, and affiance in him. For as all people will walk every one in the name of him, whom they take for their God, and uſe ſo to do; ſo they by a conſtant walking in the name of the Lord, will evidence, that they acknowledge him for their God, and ſo have reaſon to expect the good things which he hath promiſed, and will without fail perform to thoſe that (as they reſolv'd to do) conſtantly cleave to him, faithfully ſerve him, rely and depend on him, and his protection and favour. This expoſition may be illuſtrated by what is ſaid, Jer. ii. 11. Hath a nation chang'd their gods, which are yet no gods? But my people have chang'd their glory for that which doth not profit. It was formerly the perverſeneſs of Iſrael according to the fleſh, that they would forſake the name of God, and his worſhip, and follow vain idols; but here the true Iſrael of God, the faithful members of his church (out of what nation ſoever call'd) unanimouſly profeſs conſtantly and for ever to adhere to him alone, as conſtantly as other people did to their gods, and in ſo doing may juſtly promiſe to themſelves the benefits of his providence and protection, out of which they will not, by their own fault and defection from him, put themthemſelves. And according to this expoſition the word ואנחנו Veanachnu, rendred by many, But we, will be rather rendred as it is by ours, And we, as it properly ſignifies. A [l] learned Man gives the meaning thus, No marvail that God ſhould have ſo ſingular a care over us: for other nations, for performance of their matters, call every one on their gods; but we do and ever will walk in the name of our God the true God. [m] Another, No marvail that we ſhall be ſafe, or ſecure, ſeeing we have God for our protector, againſt whom neither our enemies, nor any other gods can prevail. The ſenſe, I ſuppoſe, according to them, muſt thus be made up, As long as we adhere to the true God, no fear but we ſhall have his promiſes of ſecurity made good to us; ſeeing the nations that are againſt us truſt in falſe gods, which can neither help them, nor annoy or hurt us, under the protection of our God, to whom we conſtantly cleave. Some of the [n] Jew doctors thus expound the words, Till that time all people ſhall walk in the name of their gods, for they ſhall not return to the right way, till that time when the King Meſſiah ſhall turn them into the right way: but we of the houſe of Iſrael will walk in the name of our God for ever; though the temple be deſtroyed, and we led captives out of our land, yet will we not change our God for another, but walk in his name always. [o] Another thus, For all people, which now walk every one in the name of his God, and we alſo the ſons of Iſrael, all of us, both we and they, in that time will walk in the name of our God, &c. The connexion of inference, I ſuppoſe, in all theſe muſt ſtill be the ſame, viz. that therefore they will faithfully expect that thoſe bleſſings of peace and ſecurity, which God hath promis'd, ſhall be made good to them: which profeſſion the Prophet makes in the name of thoſe that are ſpoken of, that ſhall come in to God, as joining himſelf to them. [p] Some give the meaning thus, Although other people ſhall worſhip other gods, yet the faithful believers will conſtantly acknowledge and worſhip the one true God, and ſerve him alone. And by them the particle כי Ci, (which we render, for) is taken (as ſometimes it is) for a word of aſſeveration only, as much as to ſay, certainly, or although. Vatablus in his notes in the edition in folio by Robert Stephens ſaith, that this expreſſion of walking in the name of God, or the Lord, &c. is an Hebraiſm, (why it need ſo be called I know not) he ſaith that the meaning of it is, to worſhip or ſerve God. The like expreſſion occurs, Zach. x. 12. they ſhall walk up and down in his name, and there in the leſſer editions of thoſe notes in 4*to* and 8*vo* he ſaith the meaning is freti auxilio Dei, truſting on the help of the Lord. And, indeed, both thoſe doth it manifeſtly ſeem to imply, 1. To own God for their God, and to cleave only to him, and him duly and faithfully to worſhip, invocate, ſerve and obey, and to conform their lives to his will and precepts, which is called walking with God, Gen. v. 22. or before him, Gen. xvii. 1. as the contrary behaviour, walking contrary to him, Levit. xxvi. 21. 2*ly*, To have affiance in him to place their truſt and confidence in him, and on him, whoſe name is a ſtrong tower, Prov. xviii. 10. to rely profeſſing that their help is in the name of the Lord, Pſalm cxxiv. 8. Theſe notions of walking in his name, however they may be conſidered as diſtinct, yet cannot be ſevered in the ſubject ſo as that they ſhould be one without the other. For he that doth not rightly own God, and cleave to him alone, and faithfully ſerve him, cannot have any grounds to rely or truſt on him for good and protection, but he that doth adhere to him, and duly ſerve him, may with confidence depend on him, and ſhall find from him aſſured protection. Theſe meanings will eaſily be made out of the uſe of the ſingle words, which they have beſides their proper ſignification, as walking is uſed for living or framing the courſe of ones life, or converſation, behaving or deporting oneſelf, or continuing in any courſe of living, and as the name of the Lord is uſed either for his doctrine, worſhip, religion, will and commandment, or elſe his power, aſſiſtance, bleſſing and protection. They will live in conſtant fear of him, and obedience to him, and without fear of any others in confidence of his aſſiſtance and protection. To walk in the name of God will be to give up their ſelves to him, either as the object of their worſhip, or of their confidence: the expreſſion here we look on as including both theſe, and that ſeems the full import of it.

[z] See Sanc. [a] Rib. See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [b] See Acts ii. 42. and 44, &c. [c] See Tertullian's Apology, p. 35. Edit. Rigalt. [d] Ribera. [e] See Grot. de Verit. [f] Chelec. p. 361. Edit. Cochi. [g] See Raimund out of Shabat. [h] See Diodati, &c. Iſaiah ii. See Chriſt. à Caſtro, Paræus. [i] See Jerom. to Sunia and Fretela. [k] 1 Kings iv. 25.

6. In that day, ſaith the Lord, will I aſſemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted.

In that day, ſaith the Lord, &c.] In that day, at that time, (ver. 1. call'd the laſt days) when God in his judgment remembring mercy, ſhall graciouſly viſit and redeem his people, he ſaith, that he will aſſemble, or gather, or, as Some will, [q] heal (for in [r] that ſignification alſo is the word uſed, and may here well enough be applied,) her that halteth, or is [s] lame, broken or maimed, i. e. ſuch of Iſrael as are weak and helpleſs, inwardly and outwardly afflicted, ſo that they are not able to bear up and ſupport themſelves, and ſo juſtly likened to a poor, lame, maimed ſheep, that is not able to go upright, or keep her way. This ſeems a more ſimple interpretation than that of [t] Some, who would have this epithet given to them as the poſterity of halting Jacob, Gen. xxxii. 31. and, perhaps, than that of Others too, who would [u] have it to denote their wavering or unſtedfaſtneſs in their religion, and the ſervice of God, in which regard they are elſewhere where ſaid to halt, 1 Kings xviii. 21. though the word be there different in the original; (although ſuch halting was cauſe of their other halting or fainting under afflictions thereby pulled on them.) The word here us'd, is elſewhere alſo us'd for fainting, or failing for want of ſtrength to go upright, as Pſalm xxxviii. 17. and Jer. xx. 10. And in Zephaniah iii. 19. the ſame epithet is us'd that is here, and in the ſame ſenſe, and hath the ſame word ſubjoined to it, viz. her that is driven out, &c. I will gather her that is driven out from her own country, and from the more viſible preſence of God, and his protection, which they had in manifeſt manner formerly enjoyed, caſt out by God, and from him, [w] whom being her huſband ſhe had like an adultereſs forſaken and diſperſed among the nations: And her that I have afflicted, ſent evils and afflictions upon, and evil intreated, for the ſins of my people (as the Chaldee adds.) Theſe epithets here being in the feminine gender, it may be inquired what the perſon, or ſubſtantive underſtood, to which they are to be applied, is, whether the houſe of Jacob, or, the kingdom of Iſrael, (without diſtinguiſhing between that of Judah, and that of the ten tribes, as ſome [x] Jews do, applying the firſt to the one, and the ſecond to the other) or [y] ſynagogue, or congregation, or [z] daughter of Sion, or Jeruſalem, mentioned ver. 8. Or elſe whether the feminine gender here be put (as uſually) for the neuter, and ſo may be rendred or underſtood, whatſoever halteth, &c. i. e. all that halt, and are driven out, all Iſrael, all or any of them who are in ſuch condition. But (which will ſtill be to the ſame ſenſe and purpoſe) if we ſhall (as a [a] learned Jew directs) for the better perceiving the meaning of theſe words, compare them with what is ſaid, Ezek. xxxiv. 16. I will ſeek that which was loſt, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will ſtrengthen that which was ſick, &c. where the epithets are as here in the feminine gender, her that was loſt, &c. and manifeſtly agree to ſheep, or cattle, to which the weak of God's flock, that is, of the people of Iſrael are compar'd; and withal conſider how it is the uſual cuſtom of the ſcriptures to call God's people, his ſheep, and to compare ſuch as are diſtreſſed, or go aſtray among them, to ſilly weak or loſt ſheep, as Jer. l. 6. My people hath been loſt ſheep, and ver. 17. Iſrael is a ſcattered ſheep: conſidering, I ſay, theſe things, it may ſeem very agreeable to underſtand here likewiſe, ſheep, or cattle, the weak or diſtreſſed of Iſrael (God's peculiar flock:) and then will this prophecy appear manifeſtly to be fulfilled in what Chriſt ſaith, Mat. xv. 24. that he was ſent to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael; and his commanding his apoſtles to go to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, and to preach to them, ſaying, the kingdom of heaven is at hand; and to heal the ſick, to cleanſe the lepers, to raiſe the dead, and to caſt out devils, Mat. x. 6, &c. This his bringing them into his fold, the church, by his own preaching, and that of his apoſtles and diſciples, was a more ſignal and illuſtrious aſſembling of her that halted, and gathering her that was driven out and afflicted, than any reſtauration of theirs, or bringing them home to their own country from among the nations where they were diſperſed. That did but make way for this greater healing of their breaches, and better benefit to them; in deſcription of which proceeding, he ſays, ver. 7.

[l] Grotius. [m] Sanct. [n] R. D. Kimchi MSS. and ſee Aben Ezra. [o] Abarb. So Montanus alſo diſtinguiſheth the words, and compares Galatians iv. 8. and 9. and Epheſians ii. 11, 12. [p] See Montanus and Sanctius. [q] R. Solomon Jarchi. [r] 2 Kings v. 3, 6. [s] R. Tanchum. Septuagint. Arab. Verſion. [t] Abarb. Ar. Montanus. [u] Hierom. Ribera, Menochius.

7. And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was caſt far off, a ſtrong nation: and the Lord ſhall reign over them in mount Zion, from henceforth even for ever.

And I will make her that halted a remnant, &c.] God reſerving them for better things, though they be diſtreſſed and diſperſed, will not ſuffer them utterly to fail and be loſt, or periſh, but ſo preſerve them, that there ſhall be a remnant that ſhall return and increaſe: yea tho' now they be caſt far off, and ſeemingly in a loſt condition, they ſhall become a ſtrong nation. Which promiſe may appear manifeſtly made good in the flouriſhing and growing condition of the church, from beginnings low in the ſight of men, growing to ſuch a height and greatneſs, as it hath attained both for extent, multitude and power, by the calling into it, firſt, the loſt ſheep of Iſrael, that remnant according to the election of grace that ſhould be ſaved, Rom. ix. 27. and xi. 3. in ſo great multitudes, as appears by the hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles, and then thoſe of the Gentiles alſo, which were before aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, and ſo every way far off, out of all parts of the world, in ſuch abundance, as it is ever ſince to this day, as that in all regards they may be juſtly call'd, not only a remnant which ſhould continue without fear of failing, but a ſtrong nation, againſt which the gates of hell it ſelf have never ſince been, or ever ſhall be able to prevail: (that we may not confine this appellation of a ſtrong nation only to the apoſtles, who were for the effecting of this [b] endued with power from on high, and with a mouth and wiſdom, which no adverſaries were able to gainſay or [c] reſiſt (as [d] Some ſeem to do;) nor [e] yet to the ſtrength and undaunted courage of the martyrs; but extend it, as due, to the whole church, in regard to their multitude above any nation, and their ſpiritual ſtrength.)

This part of this prophecy, though it might ſeem (as Some will) partly fulfill'd in the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity, and [f] that form of a kingdom which under Zorobabel they were reſtored to, and under the ſecond temple which was then built; yet do the following words plainly ſhew that it cannot be ſaid to have been wholly then fulfill'd, and that what was then done in the reſtoring of Jews and and Iſraelites from their diſperſion, was but to prepare and make way for greater things after to be done under Chriſt, for the making good of what is here promiſed; for it follows, and the Lord ſhall reign over them in Sion from henceforth even for ever. Now that this hath not been according to the letter, and in any temporal reſpect fulfill'd to the Jews, is manifeſt; all form of government being long ſince cut off from them, and Zion (that place properly ſo called) in the hands of their enemies; ſometimes one nation, ſometimes another having born rule there. But take Zion (as it is uſual) for the church, and in that God hath from the firſt beginning reigned, and ever doth, and for ever ſhall reign over his in Chriſt in it. It is ſaid of Chriſt, Luke i. 33. that he ſhould reign over the houſe of Jacob (his church) for ever, and that of his kingdom there ſhall be no end. Wherefore [g] Some not abſurdly make theſe words an argument for proof of the divinity of Chriſt, becauſe he is here call'd by Jehovah the proper name of God. It will be all one to ſay, the Lord, i. e. God the Father in Chriſt ſhall reign, or Chriſt the Lord ſhall reign, or reigneth over his in Sion, he and his Father being one. What hath been intimated in theſe words will farther be confirm'd in the next verſe.

[w] Tarnovius. [x] Abarbinel. [y] Ribera, Menochius, Tarnovius. [z] Dutch Notes. [a] R. Tanchum.
[b] Luke xxiv. 49. [c] Luke xxi. 15. [d] Rib. Sa Menoc. [e] Hierom. Tar. [f] R. Tanch. Tirinus.

8. ¶ And thou, O tower of the flock, the ſtrong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee ſhall it come, even the firſt dominion, the kingdom ſhall come to the daughter of Jeruſalem.

And thou, O tower of the flock, the ſtrong hold of the daughter of Zion, &c.] O tower of the flock. The word rendred flock, and ſo otherwiſe ſignifying, being in the Hebrew עדר Eder, there is ſome difference between expoſitors concerning the interpretation of it; Some looking on it as the proper name of a place. A place ſo call'd is mentioned, Gen. xxxv. 21. [h] beyond which it is ſaid Iſrael, i. e. Jacob ſpread his tent, after he had journeyed from Bethlehem, (about a mile's diſtance from it) where they conceive the ſhepherds to have been abiding, when the [i] angel brought to them the good tidings of Chriſt's birth, and ſo of that his kingdom, that firſt dominion here ſpoken of. Others taking Bethlehem it ſelf to be meant by it, will have what [k] is here propheſied, to be the ſame that is repeated chap. v. 2. and there to be explained. But others think it the name of a tower at the gate in the walls of Jeruſalem, [l] call'd the ſheep gate, Neh. iii. 32. through which [m] Some conceive Chriſt to have rid into Jeruſalem when he was received with Hoſanna's. But by Others more probably is here thought to be deſigned the tower of David, [n] or rather all Jeruſalem it ſelf, which was as it were the tower and fold of God's flock, Iſrael, becauſe (ſay Some [o] of the Jews) all Iſrael there convened, or were gathered together three times in the year, as a flock in their [p] fold: and the ſame to be likewiſe called in the words ſubjoined, the ſtrong hold of the daughter of Sion. The word rendred ſtrong-hold is עפל Ophel, which beſide this ſignification, is alſo the proper name of a place at Jeruſalem, or in the wall thereof, as Neh. iii. 26, &c. and 2 Chron. xxvii. 3. and xxxiii. 14. It hath alſo the ſignification of obſcurity and darkneſs, attributed by Some to it, as אפל Aphal, another word of like ſound ſignifies, and is accordingly here [q] interpreted, though to no perſpicuous ſenſe, which we ſhall not here therefore inſiſt on, but take it, as by Ours well rendred, to denote whole Jeruſalem, though perhaps properly ſignifying a part thereof. And that which then we are to take notice of is, that as the name Jeruſalem it ſelf and Zion are taken in the prophetical ſcriptures not only preciſely for thoſe places properly ſo called, but for the church of Chriſt, of which they were [r] types and figures, and which had its firſt viſible riſe and beginning in or from them, and thence ſpread itſelf; ſo that theſe, and other like denominations, and appellations given to them, ſometimes may and ought to be applied to that and underſtood of it: and that the prophecies, ſeeming to be ſpoken to them, do contain more than can be reſtrained, or limited to them, and neceſſarily are to be expounded of it: and in ſuch latitude muſt theſe appellations of tower of the flock, and ſtrong hold of the daughter of Sion, be here taken. And, indeed, they more deſervedly agree to that which is the fold of Chriſt's ſheep, and that mountain eſtabliſhed in the top of the mountains, and exalted above all hills, ver. 1. that temple ſo firmly built on a rock, that nothing can ſhake it, nor the gates of hell prevail againſt it, than they ever did to that Jeruſalem of mens building, though in its time the glory of the whole earth, and after by man again deſtroyed. This it will be neceſſary to do, that we may ſee how the following promiſe hath been made good. To this it evidently hath, but not to that: and to this therefore 'twill appear more properly to belong, than to that. The promiſe made is, Unto thee ſhall it come, &c.

Unto thee ſhall it come, even the firſt dominion of, &c.] [s] Some of the Jews, by a nice obſervation of the accent in the word, rendred ſhall it come, ſo diſtinguiſh the words, as if this word had reference to the remnant of halting Iſrael, of her that was caſt far off, mentioned in the foregoing verſe; and ſo the words to ſound, Unto thee ſhall it, that is, that remnant that halted, or of her that halted, &c. come, and to thee ſhall come the firſt dominion, which is the kingdom of the daughter of Jeruſalem. But [t] Others of them will not have here any conſideration to be had of that diſtinction, but rather the two verbs of the

[g] Munſter. [h] Chriſt. à Caſtro. Tirinus. [i] Luke ii. 8. [k] Grot. [l] Jun. Tremel. Diodati. [m] Tirinus. [n] Ab. Ezra. [o] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [p] Some think it ſo called from its poor condition. See Calvin. [q] Chald. Greek, Vulg. Lat. [r] Jun. Tremel. Diodat. [s] R. Sol. Jarchi. See Abarbinel. [t] Aben. Ezra, R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum.

the ſame ſignification to be referred to the ſame ſubject, to wit, the firſt dominion, only for confirmation ſake, and to ſound, Unto thee ſhall arrive and come the firſt dominion, &c. i. e. Unto thee ſhall certainly come the firſt dominion, [u] which ſhall be the kingdom to the daughter of Jeruſalem, or, [w] ſuch as was the kingdom of the daughter of Jeruſalem. And this emphaſis is well expreſſed in our tranſlation by ſome little tranſpoſition of the words, and underſtanding the laſt as a repetition of the former, that this kingdom or dominion ſhould come to the daughter of Jeruſalem. But this makes no great difference or difficulty. It is to be enquired what is meant by the firſt dominion, and how that came to Jeruſalem, or in whom what is promiſed was to be made good. By the firſt dominion may be underſtood ſuch a dominion and kingdom as was at firſt to them under David and Solomon, (ſo the Jews moſtly underſtand it;) or the chief dominion; or, thirdly, that the dominion ſhould in that firſt place come to the daughter of Zion or Jeruſalem. Now how in any of theſe ſenſes or all of them, it came, or it was to come to them, and in whom it was ſeated, or in whom it was to be, or is, made good to them, is the main enquiry. In Zorobabel firſt (ſay ſome [x] Jews) and under the ſecond temple it was made good to them. But ſure Zorobabel never ruled in that greatneſs and ſplendour as to be compared to David and Solomon, or that his dominion might be equalled to theirs over Iſrael. And he that relates that opinion of theirs, confeſſeth that in theſe propheſies are greater things (as thoſe in the firſt verſe) ſpoken, then can be ſaid in him to have been fulfilled, or under the ſecond temple, though this and ſome other paſſages he thinks to belong to thoſe times, but that the other are yet to be expected; and ſays withal, that by Some all theſe prophecies are looked on as belonging to the times of Meſſiah, the ſpeedy coming of whom he and they earneſtly deſire. And that indeed ſeems the opinion of moſt of them, viz. that theſe are things not yet fulfilled, looking on them as carnal and temporal promiſes of an earthly glorious reign of Meſſiah on earth, wherein he ſhall rule over all Iſrael, all the twelve tribes, as [y] David and Solomon did, having his ſeat at Jeruſalem, which ſhall never more be deſtroyed, which ſtate of his power they look on as ſignified by the firſt [z] dominion. And that this prophecy was antiently looked on as reſpecting the Meſſiah, is plainly declared by the Chaldee paraphraſt (of great antiquity and authority among them) who makes him by the name it ſelf of tower of the flock to be deſcribed, thus rendring it, And thou, O the Meſſiah, or Chriſt of Iſrael, which art hidden becauſe of the ſins of the congregation of Zion, unto thee ſhall the kingdom come, and the firſt (or antient) dominion ſhall be to the kingdom of the congregation of Jeruſalem. So that on all hands, as well the moſt of the Jews as Chriſtians, will it be agreed that this prophecy was to be fulfilled in the Meſſiah, and reſpects his kingdom, and the times under him; but with a vaſt difference between them, the Jews looking on it (as we ſaid) as a promiſe of an earthly kingdom in this world which is not yet come, nor any Meſſiah, in earthly pomp and ſplendour to aſſert it, yet revealed, for their ſins as the Chaldee intimates retarded; but that ſuch a one ſhall come, and make good what they expect agreeable to the literal ſenſe of the words according to their interpretation: but Chriſtians firmly believing the promiſed Chriſt to be already come, and to have made good all that by virtue of the prophecies was to be expected in that way that they are to be underſtood, to wit, in a ſpiritual way, and of better things than the things of this world. And to him do we ſay, and to the Sion and Jeruſalem here meant, viz. the church, that the words may, as they ought to be, in their beſt and higheſt ſenſe and full latitude be applied. To him, and in him, to Jeruſalem did the firſt dominion, i. e. that of David and Solomon, come. So the angel of him, that the Lord God ſhould give unto him the throne of his Father David, and that he ſhould reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever, Luke i. 32, 33. over the whole houſe of Jacob, all the twelve tribes; and not only over them, but that his kingdom (he ſet by God on his holy hill of Sion) ſhould take in the heathen alſo for his inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for his poſſeſſion, as David propheſieth of him, Pſalm ii. 7, 8. So that under him is no difference between Judah and Iſrael, no nor between Jew and Gentile, all believers in him being as one all the Iſrael of God, Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11. Epheſ. ii. 12, &c. To him was given dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, ſhould ſerve him, and his dominion be an everlaſting dominion, Dan. vii. 14. Unto all whom the ſound of his kingdom went forth, Rom. x. 18. And ſo in the ſecond notion the firſt, that is, the chief dominion came to the tower of the flock to Jeruſalem, in and by him, a dominion and kingdom greater and larger than that of David or Solomon, or any other. David in Spirit therefore called him his Lord, Pſalm cx. 1. Mat. xxii. 44. and of himſelf he witneſſeth, and his witneſs is true, that he was greater than Solomon, Mat. xii. 42. and hath therefore deſerved a name given him, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, Rev. xvii. 14. and xix. 16. Prince of the kings of the earth, chap. i. 5. None of their dominions were ever like his for extent or duration. David's and Solomon's were in all their greatneſs but types of his, their kingdom being even quite overthrown; and the [a] tabernacle of David, which was fallen down, was in him raiſed up to a greater height and more excellent manner than ever it was in under the Jews. Thirdly, to the tower of the flock, to Sion and Jeruſalem, to the nation of the Jews, in and by our Lord Chriſt, came the the firſt dominion, i. e. there it was firſt ſet up and divulged by the preaching of the goſpel of the kingdom to the Jews and loſt ſheep of Iſrael, there he himſelf proclaimed it, and ſhewed his diſciples, that repentance and remiſſion of ſins ſhould be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jeruſalem, Luke xxiv. 47. and ſo St. Paul tells the Jews, that it was neceſſary the word of God ſhould have been firſt ſpoken to them, Acts xiii. 46. And it may perhaps not be impertinent to obſerve, that he was even at firſt acknowledged for the expected King at Jeruſalem by much people, when riding on an aſs into the city (whether through that gate which was called the ſheep gate, and properly denoted by מגדל אדר Migdal Eder, the tower of the flock, [b] as Some think, or not, it will not concern us nicely to enquire; by which fact of his is ſaid to be fulfilled what was ſpoken by the prophet, Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold thy King cometh to thee meek, and ſitting upon an aſs, &c.) he was received by the acclamations of great multitudes, ſaying, Hoſanna to the Son of David, &c. Mat. xxi. 4, 5, &c. or, as St. John hath it, Hoſannah, Bleſſed is the king of Iſrael that cometh in the name of the Lord, John xii. 17. or as in St. Mark xi. 10. Bleſſed be the kingdom of our Father David that cometh in the name of the Lord, which cometh nearer to theſe words of the prophet here, and ſo Luke xix. 38. So far were they convinced by the great miracles that he ſhewed, ſuch as were before never ſhewed, and his power not only over men (as when he drave out of the temple thoſe that profaned it) but over ſeas, and winds, and devils themſelves, that they could acknowledge him no leſs; and therefore, had he not declined it, would have by force made him a king in another manner than he would be ſo acknowledg'd, viz. an earthly king, John vi. 15. And ſo far it appears, this opinion of him prevailed among the people, that it was put in as an accuſation againſt him by thoſe that would not acknowledge him, that he ſaid he was a king, Luke xxiii. 2. though it was not he himſelf but the people that ſaid it; and in reſpect to that common vote did Pilate ſay, bringing him forth to the Jews, Behold your King, and put for the ſuperſcription of his accuſation on the croſs, The king of the Jews, (Mark xv. 26. and the other Evangeliſts) giving him indeed, though but in ſcoff, his juſt title; at which the chief prieſts offended, deſired him to change it, and not to write, the king of the Jews, but that he ſaid, I am the king of the Jews, John xix. 21. though he never ſaid it, nor challenged to himſelf any ſuch kingdom as they pretended contrary to Ceſar's; but only ſuch, as he himſelf told Pilate, that was not of this world, John xviii. 36. And that was it indeed which was his crime with them, becauſe he challenged only ſuch a kingdom. Had he come in the lower power and ſplendour of an earthly king, they would, the chief of them, have been as forward as the common people were to have acknowledged him; whoſe dominion, becauſe he did not ſo, they rejected, and for the ſame reaſon do their poſterity ſtill deny and reject it, and ſo will not acknowledge thoſe prophecies, as this and other like, concerning his kingdom to have been in our Lord Chriſt fulfilled, but ſtill vainly look for another in whom they ſhould be fulfilled to them, in a kingdom that is of this world, wherein keeping his ſeat in an earthly Jeruſalem reedified, he ſhould rule over Judah and Iſrael, by force of arms ſubjecting the reſt of the world to them. But we having learned from himſelf the nature and manner of his kingdom wherein he ruleth, and which he, beginning at Jeruſalem, ſo miraculouſly propagated through the whole world, not by carnal arms and force, but by the power of his Spirit and Word, do ſee and cannot but acknowledge the utmoſt of what by virtue of this prophecy could be expected, made good in and by him; and that it plainly belongeth to him. After all this, may be taken notice of yet another conſtruction of the words, by Some [c] followed, yet tending ſtill to the ſame purpoſe, Thou, O tower of Eder (or the flock) that is, Bethlehem, that art obſcure, to thee ſhall come the daughter of Zion, and there ſhall come from thee the firſt dominion, that is, the kingdom to the daughter of Jeruſalem, ſuch a king or kingdom which ſhall bear rule in Jeruſalem, i. e. in thee Meſſiah the king of Jeruſalem ſhall be born: which, though ſome ſay, may be partly applied to [d] Zorobabel, yet no otherwiſe they ſay than as he was a type of Chriſt, who was to ſpring of the ſame race. In ſumm, theſe words, however they be interpreted, are a prophecy concerning Chriſt and his kingdom, which cannot be eluded: in him and by him, are they in the amplieſt manner, and in none other perſon ever yet were fulfilled: he it is that ſhould come, and in vain do the Jews look for another to come and bring an earthly dominion and kingdom to them.

[u] Abarb. [w] Kimchi. [x] R. Tanchum. [y] Abarb. [z] Kimchi. [a] Acts xv. 16.

9. Now why doſt thou cry out aloud? Is there no king in thee? Is thy counſellor periſhed? for pangs have taken thee, as a woman in travail.

Now why doſt thou cry aloud, &c.] Having in the latter end of the former chapter denounced very heavy judgments againſt the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and in the foregoing verſes of this made very gracious promiſes of great good things, now in what follows he ſo mingleth a repetition of both threats and promiſes, as to ſhew, that the one does not hinder nor croſs the performance of the other, but that both ſhall in their time have their due accompliſhment, ſucceſſively one after the other, firſt, the judgments, then the promiſes, though by the evils which they ſhould ſuffer, they might ſeem to have cauſe to deſpair of ever ſeeing good again. In the firſt place, to ſhew the certainty of the evils to come on them, them, he, to whom all things to come are preſent, and whatſoever he has determined is as already done, ſpeaketh to them as if they were already befallen them, and expoſtulates with them concerning their behaviour under them, as ſavouring too much of infidelity and diſtruſt.

[b] Tirinus. [c] Grot. Stoker. [d] Grot.

Now why, &c.] What is the cauſe of all thy ſad complaints, of thoſe expreſſions of grief, like thoſe of a woman's pangs in travail in child-birth? (which is in the ſcripture an uſual expreſſion of great ſorrows.) Is it becauſe the enemy hath deprived thee of thy king and counſellors, under whoſe conduct and government thou formerly enjoyed'ſt tranquillity and comfort? This ſeems the moſt literal and ſimple ſenſe of the words, and in this way they may be compared with what is ſaid, Hoſ. xiii. 10. as the words are by many rendred, and well bear, Where is thy king now that he may ſave thee, or thy judges, &c. The hiſtory of their being bereaved of king and counſellors, is read in chap. xxiv. and xxv. of the ſecond book of Kings. And from the words ſo expounded, may be inferred and will be included that, which [e] Others give as the ſenſe of them, Is there no King in thee? that is, Is not God, for all this that thou ſuffereſt being deprived of thy earthly king, thy king and thy counſellor, ſo that thou mighteſt in him find ſtrength and comfort to ſupport thee, and from him counſel to direct thee, and by him be at laſt delivered from all theſe evils? But at preſent ſhe, i. e. Jeruſalem, or the church of the Jews, deprived of all viſible comfort, hath no king of her own nation to protect her, no ſenate nor counſel to direct her, and God her heavenly King hath for the preſent withdrawn the wonted ſigns of his viſible and gracious preſence and protection from her; and therefore may ſhe ſeem to have juſt cauſe of bemoaning her condition in moſt paſſionate ſigns of grief: and therefore by way of conceſſion beſpeaks he her in the next verſe.

10. Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now ſhalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou ſhalt dwell in the field, and thou ſhalt go even to Babylon: there ſhalt thou be delivered, there the Lord ſhall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, &c.] Or as ſome change the imperative into the future, by way of aſcertaining her that theſe things ſhe muſt for a while endure, Thou ſhalt be in pain, thou ſhalt be as in labour, or, as a woman in travail, in great anguiſh. For thou ſhalt certainly go forth out of the city; ſhe ſhall be forced to lye abroad in the fields, without houſe or home of her own, and then led into captivity as far as to Babylon: ſo that indeed ſhe hath viſible occaſions of great ſorrow. But thoſe ſorrows, though great as of a woman crying out in labour and travail, yet ſhall be as hers alſo in another reſpect, viz. that they ſhall end in joy, John xvi. 21. for there even in Babylon, where ſhe might fear utterly to periſh, and that her name and poſterity ſhould utterly be cut off, doth the Lord promiſe to ſave her, and redeem her out of the hand of her enemies, that had done ſuch deſpite unto her. So that here is joined to a certain denunciation of judgment, a certain promiſe of deliverance again from it: that they may not deſpair under what they ſhall ſuffer, but with patience and comfort expect the joyful iſſue in God's good time; which is alſo the ſcope of the following words. But before we proceed to them, we may take notice of a different expoſition of the ninth verſe, from what has been given, which we then omitted that we might not interrupt the ſenſe; it is [f] of Jewiſh Interpreters of good authority among them, faſtening another ſignification on the word rendred cry aloud, to wit, Why doſt thou ſeek to make friends to thee, viz. the Ægyptians and Aſſyrians, that they may ſave thee from thoſe evils which God for thy rebelling againſt him hath threatned to ſend on thee, and why does the approach of the enemy affright thee? Doſt thou not conſider that he is thy King and counſellor, and that in turning to him would be thy only ſafety? But now forgetting him and ſeeking to others, and finding them not able to ſave thee, pangs have taken hold on thee, and thou art greatly diſtreſſed? and thou haſt great cauſe ſo to be. Be in pain therefore, and bow down thy ſelf as fainting under ſorrow; for now, according as he hath determined, ſhalt thou go into captivity; but he then that is thy King ſtill, when he hath ſo humbled thee, will in the midſt of judgment remember mercy and deliver thee, &c. This according to that rendring would be the neareſt meaning: but this Interpretation though antient is by few followed. But following our tranſlation, (with which moſt others agree) there may alſo be given another expoſition, ſomething different from the former, Now why doſt thou cry out, &c. Is there not a King in thee? Haſt thou not counſellors and directors, to ſave thee? Theſe ſhe once aſked, Give me a King and Princes, Hoſ. xiii. 10. and ſhe had them, and in them truſted; but now doubting that they are not able to ſave her, and fearing the force of her enemies, ſhe is in anguiſh as a woman in travail; and deſervedly, for for all that they can do to help her, She ſhall be driven from her home, and led away captive to Babylon. Yet that ſhe may not deſpair, ſhe is aſſured of help from the Lord, who, when ſhe hath been made to know, how vain all other helps are, will ſhew his power in delivering her, even then, when there ſeemed no hope to be left to her: and ſo will there be a plain connexion alſo between theſe and the following words. But the firſt expoſition may ſeem the plaineſt.

11. ¶ Now alſo many nations are gathered againſt thee, that ſay, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion.

[e] Aben Ezra. R. D. Kimchi, Druſius. [f] Chaldee Paraphraſt. R. Sol. Jarchi. and ſee Abarb.

Now

Now alſo many nations, &c.] In theſe words and the following, he gives a farther repreſentation to her of what evil ſhall befal her for a time, and then an aſſurance that ſhe ſhall in the end overcome all that afflict her, and by the might of the Lord prevail over them, and bring them under. But though this be evidently the ſcope of this and the following verſes, yet (for making it plain) are ſome difficulties to be cleared: as, firſt, who thoſe many nations were that are ſpoken of: ſecondly, when they here ſpoken of had theſe promiſes of victory made good to them: and before ſome forms of expreſſion in the words are to be explained for the better underſtanding the ground of theſe queries, and the ſolving of them. Thoſe many nations that are gathered againſt Zion ſhall ſay, Let her be defiled. [g] The word ſignifieth ſometimes, pollution, or, defilement by ſin, ſo Jer. iii. 1. Shall not the land be greatly polluted? and Numb. xxxv. 33. Ye ſhall not pollute the land wherein ye are, for blood it defileth the land. And this ſignification ſeem they to reſpect not only who render it as Ours; or they more manifeſtly [h] who render, She ſhall ſin, or, be wicked; and they again who render ſhall be condemned, or, be guilty, or, be obnoxious: but they alſo who render, [i] Let her be ſtoned, viz. as a defiled adultreſs: and perhaps the Greek alſo, who looking not ſo much on the ſignification of the words, as their meaning, render it, Let us inſult, (although they change both number and gender.) For what will be the intent of all theſe but as much as to ſay, Let her be looked on as defiled with ſins and made loathſome to her God, and ſo being forſaken by him let her be dealt with as ſuch, deſpitefully uſed and deſtroyed, that we may inſult over her; we cannot now doubt of being able ſo to uſe her. But then defiled here will be referred not only to expreſs her guilt, but rather the miſerable condition they hope to bring her to, in polluting her with blood and ſlaughter, and contemptuouſly uſing her, without reſpect to her former holineſs, and as much as in them lies aboliſhing all ſigns thereof. In much like ſenſe ſeems the word defiling (though the word in the Hebrew be differing, yet of like ſignification) to be taken for contemptuous uſing or deſtroying, as it is ſaid, Joſiah defiled the high places, 2 Kings xxiii. 8. and Ezra vii. 24. God threatens, that their holy places ſhould be defiled by the heathen, and Pſalm lxxxix. 39. Thou haſt profaned his crown, by caſting it to the ground. In much like ſenſe may the word here be underſtood. It has alſo another ſignification, of doing hypocritically, or, being an hypocrite; and Some [k] here chuſe to take that. So the Tigurine verſion, ſhe was an hypocrite. The intention muſt ſtill be, Let her have the condemnation or puniſhment of, or, be uſed as a profane hypocrite (for the word is not of the pretertenſe but of the future, and is rather after this notion to ſound She is, or let her be, then She was, or hath been.) In fine, it is an expreſſion of their deſires, that all manner of miſchief and ſhame might befal her to her utter deſolation (like theirs, Pſalm cxxxvii. 7.) and their hopes to ſee it that they may rejoice at it and inſult over her, as is farther expreſſed by the next words, and let our eye look upon Zion, let us ſee our deſire upon her, as the word is likewiſe uſed, Pſalm liv. 7.

12. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord neither underſtand they his counſel: for he ſhall gather them as the ſheaves into the floor.

13. Ariſe, and threſh, O daughter of Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs braſs, and thou ſhalt beat in pieces many people: and I will conſecrate their gain unto the Lord, and their ſubſtance unto the Lord of the whole earth.

But they know not the thoughts of the Lord, &c.] So they thought, and ſo they wiſhed, as was aforeſaid, that Zion ſhould by their hands be laid perpetually deſolate; but the Lord had other ends; to chaſtiſe his people by them, but then to return their malice on their own heads, and to bring that final deſtruction, which they intended to others, on themſelves. Such difference betwixt God's counſel and thoughts, and the thoughts of the enemies of his people which he makes uſe of ſometimes, for humbling and chaſtiſing his people, ſee likewiſe deſcribed, Iſaiah x. 5. and following verſes. He when he hath done his work by his enemies, ſhall again in mercy receive his people into favour, and deſtroy thoſe to whom for a time he gave power over them; which deſtruction he expreſſeth by ſaying, he will gather them as ſheaves into his floor, and bidding the daughter of Zion in his might, to ariſe and threſh them, trample on and triumph over them, for that he will enable her ſo to do; for that end he will make her horn iron, and her hoofs braſs, that ſhe may beat in pieces many people, that is, he will give her irreſiſtible ſtrength and power ſo to do. In theſe expreſſions, the like to which are elſewhere uſed, is manifeſtly alluded to the cuſtom in thoſe countries, both of old and ſtill, to bring the corn, after it is gathered in, made up in ſheaves, into a floor in an open place, and then laying the ſheaves in order, to lead about oxen over them, drawing after them a pair of dented iron wheels, or, as in ſome places, planks ſtuck with ſharp flints driven into them, that ſo the corn may be trodden or forced out by the hoofs of the oxen, and the ſtraw by the wheels or flints broken in ſmall parts like chaff; and then the corn purged from the ſtraw is laid up for the uſe of men, and the ſtraw for the ordinary food for their cattle. This cuſtom is elſewhere alluded to in ſcripture, Deut. xxv. 4. This being obſerved, it eaſily will appear to be the meaning (as was ſaid) ſaid) that their enemies ſhould be gathered for deſtruction, and they ſhould have power given them, to bring them under and utterly ſubdue them. Some [l] learned men, becauſe the expreſſion is borrowed from the treading out of corn, which the oxen do not by the uſe of their horns, but their feet and hoofs, think it more convenient here, not to underſtand by horn the horns on the head, (although by theſe ſtrength is elſewhere rendred) but the horny ſubſtance on the feet of the cattle, to wit, their hoofs, which by ſaying he will make iron and braſs, is meant (as alſo if the word horn be properly underſtood) that he will give them unwearied ſtrength and irreſiſtible power in ſubjecting and prevailing over their enemies. The Chaldee therefore without mentioning horn, or hoof, renders, I will make the people in thee ſtrong as iron, and their remnant firm as braſs. The ſubduing of their enemies ſeems farther expreſſed by the following words alſo, and I will conſecrate their gain unto the Lord, &c. Of conſecrating or devoting ſpoils and goods taken from enemies, read in Numb. xxxi. 28, 50, &c. and Joſhua vi. 17, 19. and to omit the cuſtom of other nations in conſecrating ſpoils taken from their enemies to their gods, Nebuchadnezzar may ſeem to have conſecrated the veſſels taken out of the Lord's houſe to his idols; for he carried off the veſſels out of the houſe of the Lord to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7. in the houſe of his gods, Ezra i. 7. That which we take notice of is, that the conſecrating and devoting the goods and ſpoils of the enemies, imports and is a ſignal and memorial of their defeat and deſtruction. So that the words are a repetition, or continuation of God's promiſe of victory to his people over thoſe many nations which ſhould be gathered againſt them, and of his denunciation of deſtruction to thoſe nations. But then who are by thoſe nations meant, and how, or when this prophecy was, or was to be, made good on them, are the things to be inquired: and they may be joined together. Firſt, as for thoſe nations [m] Some inſiſting on the particle now, in what is ſaid, Now alſo many nations are gathered againſt thee, as if it denoted ſomething nigher at hand than the Chaldeans coming againſt Jeruſalem and to be done before that, will have to be underſtood thoſe that came up in the army of Senacherib King of Aſſyria in the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, whoſe gathering together, and taunting inſulting ſpeeches, and threats againſt Jeruſalem are deſcribed in Iſaiah x. and xxxvi. and xxxvii. as alſo, 2 Kings xviii. 19. And that the prophcey of deſtruction to thoſe nations with its expreſſions was made good on them, they prove from the hiſtory in the forecited places, which ſaith, that when they were gathered together to ſet upon Jeruſalem, the angel of the Lord went forth, and ſlew in the night an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand in the camp of the Aſſyrians, and all the leaders and captains, ſo that Senacherib, after all his proud brags and inſultations, returned home with ſhame unto his own land. To what may be objected, that here the daughter of Zion is bid to ariſe and threſh, &c. and that ſhe ſhould beat in pieces many people, but that ſhe had no hand in this, but all was done by the angel of the Lord; it may be anſwered, that what was done by the Lord for her ſake, though by other inſtruments, [n] is not unfitly attributed to her, and ſhe is called to trample on and triumph over them, whom in her behalf, and for her ſake, he had brought under her feet; and it may be well ſaid that the Lord had by his utter deſtruction of them, [o] devoted them and their gain and ſubſtance to himſelf. So that we need not inquire after the truth of what [p] Some affirm (perhaps without any good grounds) that Hezekiah conſecrated to the Lord many ſpoils taken from thoſe Aſſyrians; though it may be taken notice of, what is ſaid, 2 Chron. xxxii. 23. that upon the victory many brought gifts unto the Lord to Jeruſalem. But Others think, that there ought not that ſtreſs here to be put on the particle now, as to the deſigning of the time, but [q] that the import thereof here is for aſſurance, that what is ſpoken ſhall as certainly come to paſs in the time by God determined, as if it were already done, and therefore that to be ſaid to be done now, which was a good while after without fail to be done. [r] Some Others therefore underſtand by the many nations, ſuch as were in the army of the Chaldeans, by whom Jeruſalem was taken and deſtroyed, and the Jews carried away to Babel. But what victory had the Jews ever over them? (the like objection to what was againſt the former opinion.) The anſwer muſt be, God gave them into the hands of the Medes and Perſians to be threſhed and deſtroyed, ſo that the Jews then in captivity under them might juſtly inſult and triumph over them, and what God did by others for their ſakes be attributed to them. And the conſecrating their gain to the Lord, [s] Some think to be made good by God's bringing it to paſs, that the veſſels by them taken out of the houſe of the Lord were ſent back again. Others, looking on this as no ſatisfactory completion of this prophecy alone, [t] think it ought to be extended to the times of the Maccabees, and that in their hiſtory may be found that, whereby all that is here ſpoken may be well ſaid to have been fulfilled. But with none of theſe are the Jews ſatisfy'd, and therefore look on this prophecy as not yet fulfilled, but to belong to the times of the reſtoring their captivity, the bringing down all their enemies, and reeſtabliſhing their kingdom under the Meſſiah, whom they yet expect, and [u] by thoſe many nations underſtand, Some, of them which at that time ſhall come up with Gog and Magog, being, being, though they promiſe to themſelves the deſtruction of Zion, [w] by God ſtirred up and gathered together, that they may be themſelves deſtroyed: Others, the armies of the Romans, by whom Jeruſalem was ſacked, and the ſecond temple deſtroyed, and alſo ſuch [x] armies of the Chriſtians and Saracens alſo, as afterwards invaded, or ſhall hereafter at that time of reſtoring the captivity, be gathered by God to that place, and there be deſtroyed, or, (as before) the armies of Gog and Magog; and according to their ſeveral fancies expect the fulfilling of all theſe things here ſaid: whoſe dreams as Chriſtians do deſervedly reject, ſo in this do they (at leaſt divers of them) join iſſue with them, that whatever elſe may be ſaid otherwiſe to have been done towards the fulfilling of the things here ſaid, as to the deſtruction of the Aſſyrians, or the Chaldeans, or thoſe of diverſe nations in the times of the Maccabees, yet the full completion of them to belong to the times of Meſſiah or Chriſt, (not yet to be expected, as the Jews would have it, but already come) under whom they have been and are manifeſtly fulfilled. But then things are ſpiritually (as before was obſerved) not carnally to be underſtood, and the daughter of Zion not to be the earthly Jeruſalem, but the church of Chriſt, which indeed (as was above ſaid) from Jeruſalem took its firſt riſe, and thence ſpread it ſelf over the face of the earth, and brought under many nations and much people. With what rage and malice both at the beginning and in ſucceeding times they gathered themſelves againſt her, is manifeſt: yet were they by the power of Chriſt, the ſword of his Spirit, and ſceptre of his Word, and by thoſe whom he imploy'd furniſhing them with weapons, not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, and to the caſting down imaginations, and every high thing that ſhould exalt it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, and to the bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt, gathered into his floor, brought down, and put under his feet, willingly ſubjecting themſelves in obedience to him, and conſecrating and dedicating themſelves and their ſubſtance to his honour. Did we look on things after the fleſh, or according to worldly concerns, it might not be hard to ſhew that the Chriſtians (under godly emperors) have had ſo great victories over the inſulting enemies of the church, as might according to the letter of this prophecy be juſtlier ſaid to have been a fulfilling thereof than any things by thoſe of the Jewiſh church: but Chriſt having declared his kingdom not to be of this world, we are not ſo much to judge of his conqueſts by what hath been wrought by the arm of fleſh, though by his power and in his name, as by thoſe wrought by the ſword of the Spirit, not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities and powers, againſt the rulers of the darkneſs of this world, againſt ſpiritual wickedneſs in high places, Eph. vi. 12. againſt the rebellious minds of obſtinate men to the ſubjecting all to himſelf. It is obſerved by [y] Some concerning this prophecy, that it is to be in fulfilling to the ſecond coming of Chriſt, (for he muſt reign till he hath put all things under his feet, 1 Cor. xv. 25.) In that day certainly will it appear how the things here ſpoken (as every other word of God) have without the failing of one tittle, been fully made good, though perhaps till then, men will not well agree concerning the manner how, or time when.

[g] R. Tanch. [h] Vatab. Calvin. See Chald. Paraph. R. Solomon Jarchi, Kimchi, Munſt. [i] Vulg. Lat. [k] See Arias Montanus and Chriſt. à Caſtro.

[l] Diodat. Ludovicus de Dieu. [m] Chriſt. à Caſtro, Menoch. Tirinus. [n] Diodat. [o] According to the notion of the word החרמתי Hecheramti. [p] Tirinus out of Joſephus, but in Joſephus no ſuch thing is expreſſed. [q] R. D. Kimchi. [r] Rib. Grot. [s] Grot. [t] Sanctius. [u] Ab. Ezra.

CHAP. V.

VERSE 1. Now gather thy ſelf in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid ſiege againſt us: they ſhall ſmite the judge of Iſrael with a rod upon the cheek.

NOW gather thy ſelf in troops, O daughter of troops, &c.] It will not be eaſy in few words to give account of the different expoſitions of theſe words, which are found in Interpreters, or to paſs judgment between them. They differ in giving the ſignification of ſome of them; and then in applying them. The grounds of which that we may ſee, it is to be obſerved that the root גדד Gadad (from whence is the word תתגדדי Tithgodedi, rendred by Ours, Gather thy ſelf in troops, and the word גדוד Gedud rendred troops) hath two ſignifications uſually attributed to it, one of gathering together in troops, the other of cutting, and hence have Interpreters, according to their different judgments, taken occaſion of different interpretations. As for the firſt word [a] Some taking it from the firſt of thoſe ſignifications, render it, Now ſhalt thou gather thy ſelf together, or, Gather thy ſelf together in troops, or, Troop together; Others, [b] Thou ſhalt be compaſſed and beſet with troops, or, invaded by troops, or, [c] Now ſhalt thou go forth in troops, or, Thou [d] ſhalt make an impreſſion, or, give an onſet, and the like. To this ſeems the Greek alſo to have reſpect, rendring it, Now ſhall be ſhut or blocked up the daughter with a ſhutting or blocking up, that is, ſo ſhut or blocked up with troops ſurrounding her, [e] that ſhe ſhall not be able to go forth. Although if we ſhould take their meaning from the Arab printed verſion, which moſtly follows the Greek, and here renders, Now ſhall be hedged up the daughter of Ephraim with an hedge, one might think, that by miſtake of a letter, they deriv'd it from גדר Gadar, which ſignifies to hedge, or, wall about, inſtead of גדד Gadad, to gather in troops, putting ר r for ד d, which differ in the Hebrew very little. Others preferring the latter ſignification, render, [f] Some, Thou ſhalt be deſtroyed, or, ſpoiled; [g] Others, Thou ſhalt be cut off; [h] Others, Thou ſhalt be wounded. The ſame word, in the form here uſed, is alſo elſewhere uſed for cutting ones ſelf in in token of ſorrow or mourning, Deut. xiv. 1. and may perhaps in that ſenſe be appliable, Now cut thy ſelf, &c.

[w] R. D. Kimchi. [x] Abarbinel. [y] Calvin. [a] Pagninus, Raſhi, Jun. Tremel. &c. [b] Michlal Yophe, Munſter. Druſius, and ſee Kimchi. [c] Interlineary. [d] Caſtalio. [e] Calvin. [f] Vulg. Lat. [g] Grot. [h] R. Tanch. Abarb.

Accordingly do they differ in rendring the noun, Some rendring, O [i] daughter of troop, or troops; (or, Thou that haſt an army, or armies,) Others, [k] Of the ſpoiler, or robber, [l] Others, Daughter of the cutter off.

More difference yet is there in the application of the words as to the perſon ſpoken to. To Jeruſalem, ſay Some, are they directed, and all of them concern her, ſo as to ſhew what ſhall befal her and the reaſon why, to this ſenſe, O Jeruſalem, daughter of the ſpoiler, or robber, (which art full of ſpoilers and robbers, or which haſt great ſtore of military troops,) now ſhalt thou be ſpoiled, thou which didſt lay ſiege againſt, or in hoſtile manner deal with us, [m] the prophets and meſſengers of God, and in which they ſhall ſmite the judge of Iſrael, Chriſt himſelf, with a rod on the cheek. This ſenſe is harſh in reſpect both to the conſtruction and to the coherence. For if there be any coherence between theſe and the following words (as there manifeſtly is) theſe things muſt be fulfilled before Chriſt was to be born in Bethlehem, and ſo he that was after to be born could not be he that is here ſaid ſhould be ſmitten. (Which exception lies againſt all Others [n] who would have by this judge of Iſrael to be underſtood the Meſſiah, or Chriſt, however differently they expound the former words.)

It is a clearer ſenſe which is given by Others, who taking Jeruſalem for the perſon ſpoken to, in the former part of the verſe, take their enemies as ſpoken of in the latter part; ſo making it a repetition or farther declaration of thoſe evils above threatned to Jeruſalem, which ſhe ſhould certainly expect to undergo; and telling by whom, and in what manner, or how far they ſhould be inflicted on her: and that, whether the former words be interpreted in that ſignification already mention'd, or in the Others alſo above ſpoken of. If in the ſame ſignification that thoſe Expoſitors already mentioned take them, then thus, Now, ere long, thou ſhalt be ſpoiled, [o] O daughter of the ſpoiler, or robber, &c. for he, that is, the enemy, hath laid ſiege, i. e. ſhall certainly do it, (ſpeaking of the thing [p] as already done, in token of the undoubted certainty of it in its time by God determined:) and ſhall ſo far prevail, and bring them under, as by way of contempt to ſmite the judge (or judges, taking here the ſingular in the ſenſe of the plural,) i. e. the chief men, the governours and rulers of the people of Iſrael, with a rod upon the cheek, as being in their power to abuſe them and deal with them as they pleaſed.

Of the ſame concern as to the Jews do Others alſo make this paſſage, who yet render the firſt words in the other of the two ſignifications mentioned, viz. of being gathered in troops, whether thus, Now thou ſhalt be invaded or compaſſed by hoſtile troops, O Jeruſalem, therefore [q] deſervedly called daughter of troops, i. e. the aſſembly or rendezvous, and meeting place of troops that come againſt thee: he (the enemy) hath laid ſiege againſt us, (of Jeruſalem) i. e. ſhall certainly, in that time determined, beſiege, &c. Or, [r] Now ſhalt thou be gathered in troops, or, all thy troops be gathered, and ſhut up together in thee, not able to go forth, O daughter of troops, (which hadſt, and wert wont to ſend forth many troops:) for he, (that is, the enemy) hath laid ſiege, &c. Or, imperatively, (as the future indifferently may be rendred either as future or imperative) Now, (things being thus ordered by God) gather thy ſelf in troops, thou daughter of troops, [s] that wert wont to have and ſend out many troops to ſpoil others, now aſſemble thy troops, and gather all thy forces together, to reſiſt the enemy, and ſave thy ſelf if thou canſt: all ſhall be in vain; for he, the enemy, hath laid ſiege, ſhall as certainly lay ſiege as if it were already done, againſt us (the prophet ſpeaking in the perſon of the people, or making himſelf one of them;) and ſhall ſo far prevail, as to ſmite even the judge of Iſrael, with a rod on the cheek, i. e. moſt contumeliouſly uſe the chief among us, abuſe and vilify them; which is the import of that expreſſion.

According to theſe expoſitions, Jeruſalem, or the people of the Jews, is here bid to expect thoſe evils before intimated, chap. v. 9, 10, 11. and told that they ſhall certainly and inevitably befal them before they ſhall enjoy thoſe good things, and obtain that redemption and victory promiſed there, ver. 10, 12. God hath threatned the one in the firſt place, and promiſed the other after to ſucceed, and in making good both in their due time, will he ſhew his veracity. This verſe concerns the evils that they ſhall ſuffer, and then in the following is farther aſſurance given of their redemption, and Redeemer, or, Saviour. Againſt theſe latter interpretations, there is no apparent objection from either the ſignification, or conſtruction, or coherence of the words, with either what preceeds or follows; yet do Others prefer a different way of expounding them, by underſtanding, the perſon ſpoken to of the enemy, not of Jeruſalem it ſelf. But great variety is there between them in aſſigning who is the enemy then meant. It will not be needful to inſiſt on that expoſition, though of a very [t] learned man, which would have theſe words directed againſt Gentiliſm, or Heatheniſm in general, all thoſe falſe religions which ſet themſelves againſt Chriſt and Chriſtianity, and contumeliouſly uſed and derided them, and perſecuted them, to tell them, that though they abounded in troops and number, yet they ſhould be brought to nought by the preaching of the Apoſtles, and the prevailing power of the goſpel: for this rather ſhews how the words may be applied, plied, than gives the prime literal meaning of them, which we ſeek for. But who is then the enemy ſpoken to and of? Rome, or the Romans ſay [u] Some, and their forces under Titus which ſacked Jeruſalem, to this ſenſe, Now thou ſhalt aſſemble thy troops, O daughter of troops, (Rome, that haſt ſo many troops) that thou mayeſt lay ſiege againſt Jeruſalem, and thy men ſhall ſmite, &c. Or, as Others, [x] Now ſhalt thou be ſpoiled or cut off, or compaſſed with troops, O Jeruſalem, daughter of troops: for, thine enemy, viz. the Romans, ſhall lay ſiege and prevail againſt thee; or as a [y] learned Jew, Now cut and make bald thy ſelf (viz. in token of ſorrow, as Deut. xiv. 1.) for the many evils that thou ſhalt ſuffer, O daughter of troops, thou which ſenteſt ſo often many troops to diſtreſs Jeruſalem and lay her waſte (viz. the Romans and other nations with them;) for God at length in his appointed time, ſhall bring thee there to take vengeance of thee, in the place where thou didſt that miſchief. [z] Which vengeance, he ſaith, God will bring on them for two cauſes mentioned. Firſt, becauſe they laid ſiege againſt Jeruſalem, when they took it, and deſtroyed the ſecond temple. Secondly, becauſe they uſed contumelioufly the chief of the Jews, whom they carried captives, as is ſhewed by the expreſſion of ſmiting with a rod upon the cheek. Theſe, though otherwiſe differing, yet in this agreeing, that they underſtand by the enemy ſpoken of, the Romans who took Jeruſalem and deſtroyed the temple, are all liable to a common objection, viz. that the things here ſpoken according to the ſeries of the words, were to be fulfilled before that ruler in Iſrael, propheſied of in the words next following, to wit, the Meſſiah, was to come forth out of Bethlehem, that is, to be born there; whereas the ſiege and deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the temple were after Chriſt's time. To the ſame exception, lies open alſo the opinion of other [a] Jews, who by the enemy here pointed out underſtand the numerous armies of Gog and Magog, which they will have to be yet to come againſt Jeruſalem long ſince deſtroyed. But if they ſay this objection toucheth them not, becauſe they hold the Meſſiah is not yet come, we muſt anſwer, that we are aſſured by the fulfilling as of all other prophecies concerning him, ſo of that immediately following, (as in the conſideration of it will appear) that he is already come, and that Jeſus our Chriſt was he, and therefore their obſtinate denying of that truth, doth not juſtify their error or miſtake in this interpretation, which perhaps they therefore take up, that they may ſeem to have ſome colour for that grand error and their obſtinacy in it, by ſaying ſuch things ought to be done before the coming of the Meſſiah, which are not yet done, and that therefore they cannot believe him to be yet come. As for what [b] Some anſwer here, that the particle now, ſeems to import a time nearer to the prophet's uttering this prophecy, than the coming of the Roman armies was, it is perhaps not much to be inſiſted on, becauſe that [c] may be interpreted of its due time, or time determined for it by God, to whom even what was fartheſt off, was then as preſent. [d] But Others therefore more probably by the enemies here meant underſtand the Aſſyrians under Senacherib (whom alſo they underſtand by thoſe many nations mentioned, chap. iv. 11.) and that theſe words are a threatning of cutting off, or deſtruction to them. What is elſewhere threatned to them, ſee Iſaiah x. 12, &c. and xxxiii. 1. and what deſtruction befel them, chap. xxxvii. 36, &c. as likewiſe, 2 Kings xix. 35, &c. Againſt this expoſition, appears nothing in the words, or context, which may be objected, if Senacherib's ſending a great army to Jeruſalem by Rabſhakeh, and Rabſhakeh's inſolent carriage towards the king and his meſſengers, and reproachful language, and Senacherib's own blaſphemous letter to the ſame purpoſe, may ſeem ſufficient to make good what is ſaid, he hath laid ſiege againſt us, they ſhall ſmite the judge of Iſrael with a rod on the cheek; and [e] then may the former words be expounded either, [f] Now in the mean while ſhalt thou gather together thy troops, O Aſſyria, daughter of troops, and bring thy army which ſhall lay ſiege, &c. or in the other ſignification, Now ſhalt thou be cut off, or deſtroyed, O daughter of troops, or, the ſpoiler [g] that uſeſt to ſend out thy troops to ſpoil others. Yet do Others prefer to apply what is ſaid, to the Babylonians or Chaldeans, who with numerous armies did both beſiege and take Jeruſalem, and deſpitefully uſed the King Zedekiah, and ſlew his ſons, and then put out his eyes, and bound him with fetters of braſs, and carried him to Babylon, and ſlew alſo their prieſts and nobles, 2 Kings xxv. 1. and that whether the former words be expounded according to the one of the forementioned ſignifications, or the other, either to this ſenſe, Now gather thy ſelf in troops, or, prepare thy army, O daughter of troops, which may lay ſiege againſt us and ſmite, &c. for ſo far ſhalt thou prevail: but then thoſe judgments denounced, chap. iv. 12. ſhall befal thee, and Iſrael ſhall have a Redeemer, as follows here in the next verſe: Or, Now in the time appointed ſhalt thou be ſpoiled, O daughter of troops, or owner of that army which laid, (or ſhall lay) ſiege againſt us, and which ſmote (or, ſhall ſmite, &c.) or, Now ſhalt thou be cut off, or, ſpoiled, O Babylon, daughter of the cutter off, or, ſpoiler, (viz. [h] Nimrod the greater ſpoiler) who haſt laid ſiege to us and ſmitten, &c. or, [i] Now ſhalt thou cut and tear thy ſelf for ſorrow, O daughter, &c. But among all that go this way (againſt which lies no apparent exception) none more perſpicuouſly makes out the ſenſe, together with the coherence and conſtruction, than a learned [k] Jew, thus. Having deſcribed what ſhould befal them, that they ſhould be led captive to Babylon, and how the [u] Vatablus. [x] Lyra. Chriſt. à Caſtro. [y] Abarb. [z] Abarb. [a] R. D. Kimchi, Michlal Yophe. [b] Ribera, Chriſt. à Caſtro. [c] See Kimchi and Abarb. [d] Chriſt. à Caſtro. Menochius, Tirinus. [e] Chriſt. à Caſtro. [f] Tirinus. [g] Chriſt. à Caſtro. [h] Grot. [i] Pelicanus. [k] R. Tanchum.

[i] R. Tanchum. [k] Vulg. Lat. [l] Grot. [m] See in Chriſt. à Caſtro. [n] Aben Ezra. Capell. Crit. Sac. p. 246. [o] Pelicanus. [p] Tanch. [q] Kimchi. [r] Calvin. [s] Diodat. Dutch Notes. [t] Arias Montanus.

the Chaldeans ſhould prevail over them, and then promiſed that in a ſhort time they ſhould be releaſed, he declares that it ſhould be by cutting off the empire of the Chaldeans, as it came to paſs; and therefore, as addreſſing his ſpeech to them, ſaith, Thou ſhalt be wounded, or Be thou alſo wounded, or cut with the ſword of the enemy, that is, taſte of that which thou haſt made us taſte, O daughter of troops, i. e. owner of that army which hath laid, i. e. ſhall ſurely lay (for it was not yet done, according to the uſual language of the prophets, ſpeaking of what ſhall certainly be as already done) ſiege againſt us, and which ſhall ſmite the judge of Iſrael with a rod on the cheek, meaning their contumelious uſage of their King Zedekiah, i. e. this ſhall befal thee, becauſe thou haſt done theſe things in beſieging us, and deſpitefully uſing our prince and king. And then having intimated what contempt ſhall befal the houſe of David, he ſubjoins (according to God's uſual method) a declaration of what dignity they ſhall again attain to, in the time of their reſtauration, ſaying, But thou Bethlehem, &c. So will the coherence of the words one with another be manifeſt, and that there is in theſe words a prophecy of the firſt (i. e. the Babyloniſh) captivity, and the firſt reſtauration, i. e. that from that captivity, and not meant as ſome other, as we have ſeen, would have it, of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and ſecond captivity, as they call it, by the Romans, from which they are not reſtored. And what he ſubjoins, And thou Bethlehem Ephratah, &c. will be a promiſe to the houſe of David of the return of the kingdom to them, to be expected in the time of the Meſſiah. And ſo according to this way of expoſition, is a plain way made, to the conſideration of thoſe words, which concern the kingdom of the Meſſiah, whom they expect, and we ſay is already come, viz.

2. But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thouſands of Judah, yet out of thee ſhall he come forth unto me, that is to be ruler in Iſrael: whoſe goings forth have been from of old, from everlaſting.

But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, &c.] Theſe words being a prophecy concerning him, in and by whom God would make good to his people that redemption, and thoſe good things promis'd to ſucceed the evils, which they ſhould firſt ſuffer, deſcribe him by the place of his nativity, and condition of his perſon; as will appear by conſidering them in order. Thou Bethlehem Ephratah, i. e. Bethlehem of Judea, Mat. ii. 1. or which was in the land of Judah, as there, ver. 6. where theſe words are cited, it is called, and ſo alſo Bethlehem Judah, Judges xvii. 7. xix. 1. and Ruth i. 1, &c. in which book, chap. iv. 11. is the name of Ephratah alſo mentioned, both being names of the ſame town, as appears from Gen. xxxv. 19. and both here joined diſtinguiſh it from another town called by one of them, to wit, Bethlehem, which was in the lot of the tribe of Zabulon mentioned, Joſhua xix. 15. In this town here ſpoken of did David's father live, and he was born, 1 Sam. xvii. 12. John vii. 42. Though thou be little among the thouſands of Judah. Theſe words cited, Mat. ii. 6. are there read, Thou art not the leaſt among the princes of Judah, which ſenſe ſeems almoſt contrary to what is here read, according to the ordinary tranſlations (art little.) To ſolve the ſeeming contrariety, Expoſitors have ſought out ſeveral ways, amongſt which are theſe. Firſt, that which our tranſlation gives, by ſupplying the word though as underſtood. Secondly, that of Others reading the words interrogatively, Art thou little? and that of [1] Others, It is little that thou be, &c. By all which the ſenſe will be brought to be near the ſame in both places. But the plaineſt way of reconciling them ſeems that which [m] a learned Jew, who probably never knew what is written in St. Matthew, and would certainly never have ſtrained to ſay what ſhould make for juſtifying the goſpel, or advantage of Chriſtians, gives us, which is this, that the word צעיר Tſair here uſed in the Hebrew, and by Interpreters uſually rendred little, hath two ſignifications, viz. little, and great, or of great note and eſteem, and that in this latter ſenſe it is here to be underſtood in this place. That the word hath both theſe ſignifications (as many other words have both in the Hebrew and other languages, and in contrary ſenſes) he proves [n] by inſtancing in other places, in which though frequently it ſignifies little, it is to be rendred, great, or chief, or prince. (The ſame is affirmed [o] by Others of good autority and among the chief maſters of their language.) His words are to this purpoſe; Whereas others take this as ſpoken by way of diminution to that city or family of that tribe, as if it were not worthy to have the kingdom over Iſrael peculiar to it, unleſs God had peculiarly choſen David becauſe he was acceptable in his ſight, from whom their grandfather they inherited that right, it is a better way to underſtand the word, צעיר Tſair, in the contrary notion, of chief, or ruler, that the meaning may be, thou ſhalt be chief, prince, or ruler among the thouſands of Judah. So that if that rendring of their ancients in reporting this prophecy in St. Matthew, viz. not leaſt (which is all one with great in renown) had been ſhewed him, he muſt have acknowledged it to be the true meaning of the word in the Prophet. And with great emphaſis ſeems that word here put which ſignifies at once both little and great, or, of great renown, to ſhew that as ſome other things which are little in bulk or quantity, are yet in other regards of more eſteem and value above others in ſight greater, ſo it was with Bethlehem, though perhaps otherwiſe little in number, bigneſs, or account, among the thouſands of Judah,

[1] De Dieu. [m] R. Tanch. [n] See Porta Moſis, Chaldee Paraph. and Zach. xiii. 7. in Syriack and Greek, and Arab. [o] Abu Walid. Gloſs. Heb. Arab.

Judah, or, as in St. Matthew, among the princes of Judah, which in ſenſe is all one, alluding to the cuſtom of the Iſraelites [p] of dividing their tribes into thouſands (as among us the ſhires are divided into hundreds) over every one of which thouſands was a prince or chief: ſo that to ſay among the thouſands, or princes (viz. of thoſe thouſands) is all one. The ſame word which is here uſed and ſignifieth a thouſand, Judges vi. 15. is rendred family, and ſo here is by Some [q] Jews expounded families, by [r] Others, cities. To ſay then, thouſands, or princes of thouſands, or families, or cities, will be in this regard as to the meaning all one. And though in any regard Bethlehem among theſe might according to the one ſignification of the word be accounted little, yet indeed the other ſignification did deſervedly agree to that place, of being not leaſt, yea great and illuſtrious, even chief and prince among them. That by which it was ſo ennobled follows, becauſe, out of thee ſhall he come forth unto me, that is to be ruler in Iſrael, i. e. that it was to be the birth place of the great ruler by God promiſed to Iſrael to ſave them.

Out of thee ſhall he come forth. That is, in thee ſhall be born, for ſo this word that ſignifieth to come forth is [s] elſewhere uſed, as Gen. xxv. 25. and Iſaiah xi. 1. And that in this ſenſe it is here to be taken appears by that anſwer, which by the chief prieſts and ſcribes of old was given to Herod the King, enquiring of them where Chriſt ſhould be born, Mat. ii. 5, 6. they readily anſwer to him, that he was to be born in Bethlehem of Judea, becauſe it was ſo ſpoken in the prophet here, that out of Bethlehem ſhould come a governour that ſhould rule God's people Iſrael; and likewiſe by what we read, John vii. 41, 42. where ſome by miſtake thinking that Chriſt, becauſe he had been much converſant in Galilee, was born there, thought that a ſufficient proof to deny him to be the promiſed Meſſiah, becauſe (as from this prophecy I ſuppoſe they had their only ground which they took for undoubted) that he was to come of the ſeed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem where David was. None could they then acknowledge for the Chriſt, who was not born in that town. And to their interpretation muſt we ſtick that we may not give advantage to the latter Jews, who think it ſufficient for the fulfilling what is here ſaid, that he was to have his extract from Bethlehem, [t] from the lineage of David who was there born, though himſelf was born elſewhere; probably to avoid that argument of the Chriſtians of old, who thought it a proof, (as appears out of [u] Tertullian) that Chriſt was already come, becauſe Bethlehem was now brought to ruin and not inhabited by the Jews, that there might be any probability of any other Chriſt than him whom we acknowledge to be born there. In our Lord Chriſt did both theſe concur, that he was both a [w] branch out of the root of Jeſſe the Bethlemite, [x] of the houſe and lineage of David, and alſo (God ſo directing it by his providence) born in Bethlehem. So that in him all that can be by this expreſſion in this prophecy underſtood or expected, was fully completed: as alſo what is farther expreſſed, that he, that was to come forth out of Bethlehem, to have his riſe thence, and that for the place of his nativity, was to be ruler in Iſrael. Who he is, that is ſpoken of as ſo, is inquired. An ancient [y] Commentator mentioning ſome, who would have it Hezekiah, ſaith of them, that they do more Judaize than the Jews themſelves, for ſo little do the things here ſpoken of agree to Hezekiah who was not born in Bethlehem, (if he were not born before this promiſe of one to be born, as probably he was) that the Jews themſelves would not go to attribute them to him. And the ſame cenſure will in great part take hold on thoſe who attribute them to Zorobabel, who neither was born there, and in whom ſuch other things as are here ſpoken [z] cannot by any means be ſaid to have been made good. For though by what is delivered by ſome [a] ancient Fathers of the Chriſtian church, we may think that heretofore ſome Jews did avow the perſon here ſpoken of to be Zorobabel: yet, thoſe [b] who better conſidered the matter, and have given us their mind in writing, ſay no ſuch thing, but unanimouſly (none we ſuppoſe contradicting) affirm, that perſon to be the Meſſiah, or King Meſſiah: in which ſo far they agree with us Chriſtians, but with great difference otherwiſe, they affirming the words to note ſuch a Meſſiah, as is not yet come, and labouring from theſe and the following words to prove it, we, that he that is here promiſed, the true Meſſiah, is already come, and that theſe words prove that he is ſo, and that it appears from them, that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is he that ſhould and did come forth of Bethlehem, and be ruler in Iſrael. As this is here foretold of our Saviour Chriſt, ſo when he was now to be born into the world, the angel bringing to his mother the good tidings thereof, ſaith, Luke i. 32, 33. The Lord ſhall give unto him the throne of his Father David, and he ſhall reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there ſhall be no end; and this was made good in him. But here the [c] Jews object, Jeſus ruled not in, or over Iſrael, but they ruled over him, and put him to death, and as yet neither do believe in him or ſerve him. The anſwer to which is eaſy: they did indeed and had power over him ſo far, but not to hinder or impair his dominion over them here promiſed: but more to diſcover the true nature of it, which they were, and continue miſtaken in, and

[p] See Hammond on Mat. ii. and ſee 1 Sam. x. 19. Exod. xviii. 25. [q] Raſhi, Abarb. [r] R. D. Kimchi. [s] Grotius. [t] R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [u] His book againſt the Jews, chap. 13. edit. Rigalt. [w] Iſaiah xi. 1. [x] Luke ii. 4. [y] Lyra. [z] For ſo R. Tanchum confeſſeth on ver. 3. [a] Theophylact on the ſecond of Matthew. [b] Chaldee Paraphraſt, R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. R. Tanchum, Nitzachon. [c] R. D. Kimchi, Nitzachon.

and to further the manifeſtation and propagation of it, not only over Iſrael in the narrow ſenſe wherein they appropriate it themſelves alone, who are Iſrael according to the fleſh only, but over the whole Iſrael of God, all thoſe that truly know him and believe in him, and are his choſen people. Herein was the miſtake of their anceſtors, and is ſtill theirs, that they expected him to be a carnal ruler, whereas his dominion was to be ſpiritual, as he declares that his kingdom was not of this world, which duly obſerved is an anſwer to all their cavils. Had his kingdom been of this world, his ſervants would have fought that he ſhould not have been delivered to the Jews, John xviii. 36. and whoſe ſervice could he not in that kind, have commanded, whoſe [d] command even the winds and waves, yea the devils themſelves obeyed? who by his word cured the blind, deaf, dumb, and lame, and every way impotent, raiſed men from death to life, and could have obtained from his Father more than twelve legions of angels for his guard, Mat. xxvi. 53. Or could he not by the bare breath of his mouth, have made all his enemies fall to the ground, as he did ſome of them that came to take him? John xviii. 6. But then how ſhould the ſcriptures have been fulfilled, Mat. xxvi. 56. thus far it behoved him to ſuffer, for fulfilling them, and through [e] ſuffering, enter into his glory. It behoved him to be lifted up upon the croſs that he might draw all men to him, John xii. 32. His ſo far ſubmitting himſelf did not diminiſh but increaſe the glory of his dominion. That blaſphemous ſcoff of the ancient Jews, Mat. xxvii. 42. [f] If he be the King of Iſrael let him now come down from the croſs, and we will believe in him, could not then hinder many as well of the Jews as of other nations from coming in to him, and believing that he was truly the King of Iſrael, and the obſtinacy of many of their poſterity in ſtill perſiſting to ſay, we will not have this man whom our anceſtors crucified [g] to reign over us, muſt not beat us off from acknowledging this prophecy ſo far fulfilled in him, as that he was the perſon here ſpoken of, that ſhould come forth to God out of Bethlehem and be ruler in Iſrael; but, conſidering how all the other prophecies ſeeming to them to croſs this, were together reconciled and jointly fulfilled in and by him, to infer with the Apoſtle Peter, Acts ii. 36. therefore let all the houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus, whom ye crucified, both Lord and Chriſt. Thoſe that do otherwiſe, and will not acknowledge him ſo, do not prove him not to be ſo, but themſelves not to be the [h] Iſrael of God, though inſiſting on the outward privileges of the fleſh they call themſelves Iſrael. That is the true Iſrael in which he ruleth, not by a carnal ſceptre or weapons, but by his word, of which his ſceptre the greateſt part of the world hath ſo many years ſeen and acknowledged the power: and that therefore which moſt concerns us, is, not being moved by the groundleſs cavils of Jews, or any other againſt his dominion, by yielding him willing obedience, to approve our ſelves in the number of thoſe, in and over whom he ruleth, ſo ſhall we approve our ſelves to be the [i] true Iſrael of God, whilſt other falſly and in vain ſo call themſelves. Where he is not ruler, there is no true Iſrael.

Whoſe goings forth have been from of old, from everlaſting, or, (as in the margin) the days of eternity. He goes on in deſcribing of him, who, he ſaith, ſhould come out of Bethlehem, and be ruler in Iſrael, by another more eminent coming or going forth than that from that place, even before that place was, from all eternity, which is ſo ſignal a deſcription of the divine generation before all time, or, that going forth from everlaſting of Chriſt the eternal Son of God, God of the ſubſtance of the Father begotten before all worlds, and afterwards in time (according to what is ſaid, that he ſhould come forth of Bethlehem) made Man of the ſubſtance of his Mother and born in the world, as that it appears that this prophecy belongs only to him, and could never be verified of any other. Yet the [k] Jews who deny the divinity of Chriſt, endeavour to put us off from this proof of it, or, our ſo applying the words to him by another interpretation, viz. that theſe words import no more, than that his going forth, viz. his extraction, ſhould be from David, between whom and him here promiſed ſhould be a long time, a great number of years and ages, and ſo according to them it ſhould ſo only be rendred, from of old, from days of age, or, antiquity, i. e. a long time ſince, and not from everlaſting or before time, (and ſo [l] Others who are not Jews following their expoſition, think that the words may well enough be applied to Zorobabel, who was of the poſterity of David, who was originally from Bethlehem, and ſo had anciently his extraction thence. But this the Jews themſelves do not ſay, who (as was before ſhewed) do not apply them to him, but to a Meſſiah, whom they yet expect to come of the lineage of David.) Another [m] Jew expounds them in ſomething different words, viz. the cauſes of whoſe production have been from of old, and who hath been from long time foretold of and promiſed. But the ſame anſwer will ſerve to all theſe, that we may not let go the plain meaning of the words, which our tranſlation gives us, as an evident proof of Chriſt's eternal generation, and ſo of his divinity, ſeeing he that is eternal, muſt confeſſedly be God. Our anſwer will beſt be framed by taking the words in order, and, firſt, that the מוצאתיו Motſaothaw, rendred whoſe goings forth, doth manifeſtly and properly ſo ſignify it cannot be denied, and that it neceſſarily implies, in the perſon of whom it is ſpoken, an having been or gone forth actually, when or before the prophet ſpake theſe words. In the former words where he ſpeaks of his being born in after-time (which was to come to paſs after the the uttering this prophecy) he puts the future tenſe [ſhall come forth,] but here ſpeaking of a going forth, which was before that time from of old, the preter tenſe muſt needs be underſtood, and is well ſupplied in our tranſlation, by [have been,] the verb ſubſtantive being according to the uſual property of the Hebrew language not expreſſed but underſtood. We ſay it is well ſupplied by the tenſe denoting the time paſt; for the future can here have no place: it will be no ſenſe to ſay a thing ſhall be from of old: that would be to confound paſt and to come in one. This going forth having been from of old, cannot be ſaid to have been made good, by the being of the perſon ſpoken of in his anceſtors loins, nor by the cauſes of his being having been of old. That would note only that there was then a poſſibility of his coming forth, not be properly called an actual going forth, as it is here called, no more than 'twould be proper to ſay, that in Adam's time all men had their goings forth, or were then born and in actual beings, becauſe they were all then in Adam's loins, and there were then cauſes which ſhould in after-times produce them. To ſay then that the perſon here ſpoken of had his goings forth, becauſe he was to come forth out of the family of David, after this was ſpoken, can be no proper expoſition of this word, becauſe it denotes goings forth that had actually been, not that were to come. Neither if he had been actually born in David's time, or any of his anceſtors before him (although neither he nor any of his anceſtors are here expreſſed) could this make good what follows in the next words, from of old, from everlaſting, or, from days of eternity. But then the rendring of thoſe words alſo muſt be vindicated from the gloſſes of the Jews, who would have them to ſignify only from ſome long time ago, (ſome hundreds of years) and not from eternity, or before time properly ſo called. We ſay therefore, that as the words here uſed, (to wit, קדם Kedem, by our tranſlators rendred of old, and עולם Olam, rendred everlaſting) do ſometimes ſignify, the firſt, time long ſince, and the latter, long duration of time, whether paſt or to come; ſo they do alſo ſignify eternity, of days and time, (that we may ſo, in the language of ſcriptures, which ſpeak to men in their own way of ſpeaking, call that eternal continuance which was before time or days properly ſo called.) We need not ſeek far for proofs of this. That in Proverbs viii. 22, 23. may ſuffice for a teſtimony of both, where the heavenly wiſdom ſaith, God poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, קדם מפעליו מאז Kedem Miphalau Meaz, before his works of old, and I was ſet up, מעולם Meolam, from everlaſting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. That both thoſe words there ſignify eternity is manifeſt by the context, this being ſaid to be before the earth was: and it is manifeſtly to be expounded, [n] as one of their own there gloſſeth it, before the creation of the world, or, as [o] another underſtands it, of priority of eternity, by priority of neceſſary exiſtence, not of time properly ſo called, becauſe time was afterwards created. To this may be added, as for this uſe of the former word קדם Kedem, that in Pſalm lv. 19. He that abideth קדם Kedem, of old, i. e. from eternity: and for the ſecond, i. e. עולם Olam, what is ſaid, Pſalm xc. 2. מעולם עד עולם Meolam ad Olam, neceſſarily rendred from everlaſting to everlaſting: to omit the many other places, where it is neceſſary ſo to be underſtood. And as for that word too which is rendred from days, that alſo is uſed ſometimes to ſignify that eternity in which was no diſtinction of days or parts of time; ſo Iſaiah xliii. 13. מיום אני הוא Miyom ani hu, word for word [p] from the day I am he; that is, as the Jews themſelves interpret, and Ours rightly render, before the day was, i. e. from eternity. And ſo God is called according to the uſual expoſition, the ancient of days, Dan. vii. 9. not that he is circumſcribed by days of the greateſt number or antiquity, but eternal. Now if theſe words ſingly, any of them, may denote eternity; how much more, being all put together, in that order as here, muſt they increaſe and heighten the ſignification; and ſhew that, of the perſon here ſpoken of, as having actual goings forth, the nature of which is ſo deſcrib'd when the words were ſpoken, they are in the moſt improv'd ſignification to be taken? Which will be farther confirmed by adding that advantage, which is not only urged by [q] divers Chriſtians, but ſuggeſted by that [r] Jew himſelf, who moſt earneſtly endeavours to deprive us of this proof for Chriſt's being God of the ſubſtance of the Father, coëternal with his Father. To this he argues, That the Chriſtians concluding from theſe words, that Jeſus is God, becauſe he had his goings forth from of old, &c. and their ſaying, Who is from days of old but God? is falſe, becauſe God was before the days of old; and whereas they ſay his goings forth were from of old, from days of Olam, (age or long ago) implies that then he went forth; but God is ancient, (or, eternal) without beginning: and what is ſaid from Olam to Olam, i. e. from age or antiquity, and to age, thou art God, ſignifies from before age or the world, as he ſaith there, before the mountains were brought forth: and ſo what is ſaid, Prov. viii. 23. I was ſet up Meolam, from Olam, or age, or antiquity, is, before Olam, or age, or the world, as he there adds or ever the earth was. In this his obſcure way of arguing is to be obſerved, that he miſreports the opinion of the Chriſtians, as if they ſaid, Then, in age or ancient time, Chriſt went forth (i. e. had his beginning and was not before) whereas God had no beginning: whereas we do not ſay ſo, but that he had his going forth or emanation from the Father, his eternal generation without beginning of time, or priority; but ſo as that he is coëternal with the Father. And ſo what he ſaith, as if we give to Chriſt a beginning of his going forth, comes to nothing, nothing, as a meer fiction of his own. But what he adds, is that which makes wholly to our advantage, i. e. that the prepoſitive letter or particle Mim, which is here put to theſe words, may be, and in the places cited ought to be underſtood, as ſignifying not only from, but before. And ſo then may it here alſo be underſtood, and ſo is [s] by divers learned Chriſtians; and will ſo prevent any advantage, that may by any be taken from attributing here to Kedem, of old, or, Yeme Olam, days of age, any narrower ſignification, than that of eternity; by rendring it, before what was of old, or, the beginning; or before days of age, (before any days or age began,) which then will be all one with from everlaſting; and ſo our concluſion ſtill be confirmed, that the perſon here deſcribed by his goings forth, of that nature as the words neceſſarily require, muſt be eternal. No other ſenſe will agree to the words ſpoken of goings forth, which were in actual being when the Prophet ſpake this; nor can they agree to any that then were not in being, as hath been ſhewed. And that the words are to be applied to our Lord Chriſt, and were ſpoken of him, hath been alſo ſhewed. All the cavils and objections of the Jews have nothing in them that may ſhake our principles, or weaken our belief in him, but rather confirm them; and at once ſhew, with what vain hopes they deceive themſelves, while they will have theſe words to be a promiſe of a Meſſiah, and yet, denying the true Meſſiah, in whom they are fully made good, expect one by virtue of them, to whom they can by no means agree, viz. one who had had no actual goings forth, when theſe words were ſpoken, nor yet hath, and they do not expect that he ſhould have, till he take his whole actual being, as other men do, at the time of his birth, being till then only in the loins of his ancient ſtock: whereas theſe words cannot be verified of any perſon, but ſuch a one as may ſay, as Chriſt of himſelf, John viii. 58. Before Abraham was (much more before David, yea, before Adam, before the ancienteſt of times) I am, by an eternal being. Out of what hath been ſaid may likewiſe appear (although Calvin doth not deny that Chriſt's eternal being and divinity may hence be proved) the invalidity of another expoſition, [t] by Some, though interpreting the words concerning Chriſt, ſo expreſſed, as to give advantage to the Jews, viz. that theſe goings forth of Chriſt, are ſtill to be underſtood, as the former words, of his being made Man and born at Bethlehem, which is ſaid to have been from days of eternity, becauſe from all eternity it was decreed, that there in time he ſhould be born. But, why theſe goings forth, from of old, from everlaſting, which the perſon ſpoken of is ſaid to have had when this was ſpoken, cannot be the ſame with that coming forth which he ſhould have afterwards in time to come, out of Bethlehem, by being born there, hath been ſhewed. Again, it cannot with any propriety of ſpeech be ſaid, That God's decree maketh things actually to have been, before ever they were produced in the time determined for their production, (except other circumſtances make it neceſſary ſo to underſtand it, as according to ſome, Rev. xiii. 8. but of that place, ſee Dr. Hammond, who otherwiſe underſtands it.) Though by virtue thereof all things are preſent to God, and as certain to be as if they already were; yet it will not be language intelligible to men, by taking away all diſtinction of times, to ſay, ſuch a man hath been already born into the world, becauſe God hath decreed he ſhould be born. Add, that if it were ſufficient ſo to underſtand the words, here would be nothing more ſaid of this eminent perſon here ſignally pointed out, by ſome great thing peculiar to him, by which he ſhould be known and diſtinguiſhed from all others, than might be ſaid of any other ever after born in Bethlehem, of all which it might be alſo verified, that their goings forth thence had been from of old, &c. becauſe their anceſtors lived there, and God had decreed they ſhould be born there. This expoſition then cannot be ſufficient or ſatisfactory. Whoſoever will ſoberly and ſeriouſly and without partiality conſider the words, ſhall perceive in this verſe, the perſon ſpoken of (who is Chriſt the true only Meſſiah) deſcribed, by a twofold emanation, coming, or going forth; the firſt in order of the words his birth as Man, in time, after this prophecy uttered, at Bethlehem; the other his eternal emanation or generation from the Father, which he had when this was ſpoken, and from all eternity, before the beginning of times or days properly ſo called. The firſt of theſe though ſingular to him, in that it was without concurrence of an earthly father, yet in this common to him with Others, in that he was born of a woman in time, and in Bethlehem, and ſo ſhews him to be a Man: but the other wholly peculiar to himſelf and diſtinguiſhing him from all Others, becauſe it was from eternity before all time, and ſo ſhews him to be God eternal and one with the Father. Before we paſs from the words, one thing more may be obſerved, to wit, concerning the wonderful aptneſs and ſuitableneſs of the word, מוצאת Motſaoth, or goings forth here uſed, to the thing ſpoken of, in as much as the ſame word, מוצא Motſa, coming, or, going forth, is uſed for expreſſing a word, which is the production and going forth of the mouth, as Deut. viii. 3. מוצא פי Motſa Pi, and מוצא שפתים Motſa Shephataim, the going forth of the lips; it is therefore very appoſitely and ſignificantly here uſed to expreſs the going forth, or eternal generation, of him who is called the word of God, of whom it is ſaid, John i. 1. In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God, the ſame was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, &c. Which words ſhew the ſame that here is ſaid, that Chriſt (there called the word) had his goings forth before all time without beginning to be, being eternal with the Father, and gave certain evievidence and demonſtration of that his eternal being, or goings forth before time, by creating and giving goings forth to time it ſelf, and all things that are dated or meaſured by time; which [u] Some alſo will have here ſignified: though doubtleſs his own eternal being, as diſtinct from his birth at Bethlehem, is the thing here chiefly deſcribed, and not only the manifeſtation of it in his works in time even at the beginning of it.

[d] Mat. vii. 27. Luke viii. 25. [e] Luke xxiv. 26. [f] Mark xv. 32. [g] Luke xix. 14. [h] See Romans ix. 6. [i] Galat. vi. 16. [k] R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel. [l] Grotius. [m] R. Tanchum.

[n] R. Solomon Jarchi. [o] Aben Ezra. [p] Compare Pſalm ii. 7. [q] Tarnovius, Glaſſius, Hacſpan. [r] Kimchi.

[s] Hacſpan. Tarnovius, Glaſſius. [t] Calvin, Bren.

3. Therefore will he give them up, until the time that ſhe which travaileth hath brought forth: then the remnant of his brethren ſhall return unto the children of Iſrael.

Therefore will he give them up, until the time that ſhe which travaileth hath brought forth, &c.] How theſe words are inferred from the foregoing, as the word therefore ſhews them to be, will be the better perceived, when we ſhall have inquired into the meaning of them. Many and different expoſitions are given of them: that we may ſee which to prefer, ſome of them are to be taken notice of. [w] The Jews report a ſaying of ſome of their ancient Doctors grounded on what is here ſaid, That the Son of David, i. e. the Meſſiah, ſhould not come till the kingdom of wickedneſs (or, [x] as Others read, the fourth kingdom) had overſpread the whole world for nine months, as it is ſaid, therefore will he give them up, until the time that ſhe that travaileth hath brought forth, &c. [y] This the latter Jews cite, but do not much inſiſt on the explication of it. Perhaps they received ([z] ſaith One) by tradition from the days of the Prophets, that exactly ſo long the trouble ſpoken of ſhould endure, according to the time of a woman's going with child. But ſeeing they labour not farther to inquire, or cannot tell us, what their anceſtors meant, it will not concern us to trouble our ſelves about it; but rather to look, what expoſitions they themſelves give. Such are, Firſt, [a] That God will leave Iſrael, or deliver them to their enemies, till their condition ſhall be like the condition of one that is with child near her time of bringing forth; and then ſhall the (promiſed) ruler, and his near relations appear, and return to be, or become a ruler over the children of Iſrael, as he ſaith, with the remnant of his brethren ſhall return unto the children of Iſrael. Or, as [b] Others expreſs it, In the day of ſalvation (when God will bring ſalvation to Iſrael) he ſhall deliver them into great tribulation, ſo that pangs ſhall take hold of them, as pangs of a woman in travail, as he ſaith in Daniel xii. 1. and there ſhall be a time of trouble, ſuch as never was ſince there was a nation even to that ſame time: then the remnant of his brethren, i. e. of the Meſſiah, i. e. the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, which were left, when the ten tribes were led captive, ſhall return unto, i. e. with, the children of Iſrael, the ten tribes, viz. they and theſe, all of them ſhall return to their land, and the King Meſſiah ſhall rule over them. Or, as [c] another ſaith, the ten tribes ſhall go up firſt into the land of Iſrael to war againſt the Chriſtians, and other people of the Eaſt, and North, and then their brethren of Judah and Benjamin ſhall return, or come unto them, according to his fanciful explication of ſome foregoing paſſages, as chap. iv. 13. and the firſt verſe of this chapter.

The conſtruction of the words according to this expoſition muſt be with a ſupply, unto a time like the time of her [i. e. a woman] that bringeth forth [or was with child] and hath brought forth. But this ſupply of like the time is harſh, and hath no grounds for it; as neither to ſay, that this denotes a time of ſorrow and pangs. Thoſe are yet while ſhe is in travail, and hath not yet paſſed her labour, and brought forth. When ſhe hath once brought forth, and is delivered of the child, her anguiſh is turned into joy, becauſe [d] a man is born into the world. And here is nothing in theſe words, that ſignifieth pain or anguiſh, but it is only ſaid word for word, until the time that ſhe that beareth hath brought forth. Secondly, [e] another expoſition, by ſome of them given, is, by expounding He not of the Lord, but of the ruler promiſed to come forth out of Bethlehem, and the word, ſhall give them up, by ſhall permit, or ſuffer, or leave, or let alone, (as it is uſed, Gen. xx. 6. therefore ſuffered I thee not to touch her, word for word gave I thee not, &c.) Thus the Meſſiah ſhall ſuffer them, i. e. ſhall defer his coming to them [or helping of them] till ſuch a time, as in the former explication. Or, as Thirdly, Others give the meaning, Till the time that ſhe that beareth hath brought forth, i. e. till the time of birth be come, the time of appearance for him, and them; according to what is ſaid in Iſaiah ix. 6. Unto us a child is born, &c. or, as he ſaith, Iſaiah lxvi. 8. Zion travailed, ſhe brought forth her children. Or, yet, Fourthly, ſomething different, as [f] another hath it, He ſhould give them up, i. e. that they ſhall continue in captivity, till the time that ſhe that travaileth, &c. i. e. Zion, of which he ſaith, chap. iv. 10. be in pain and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail, and that in Iſaiah lxvi. which we have ſeen, without farther explication of the meaning of this bringing forth: and then, that the meaning of the words, and the remnant of his brethren ſhall return unto the children of Iſrael is, that they all ſhall be comprehended under [the name of] Iſrael, and ſhall not be any more as two nations, nor any more divided into two kingdoms. Theſe expoſitions have we from the Jews, which we have thus more largely related, becauſe it is in a prophecy concerning the Meſſiah, in which is the great controverſy between them and us, leſt it may be ſaid, that we follow our own opinions without taking notice of what they ſay. Beſides theſe, there is alſo another expoſition tion hinted by Abarbinel, as extravagant as any of the other: viz. Therefore, i. e. becauſe the children of Iſrael forſook the houſe of David (of which the ruler ought always to have been) God ſhall give them up into their captivity, until the time that ſhe which travels hath brought forth, in many diſtreſſes and ſorrows, ſo declaring that the deſtruction of the ten tribes ſhould be for that ſin; and as for Judah and Benjamin, which did not forſake David their King, yet they alſo ſhall go into captivity as well as the other, wherefore he ſaith, and the remnant of his brethren ſhall return unto the children of Iſrael, i. e. to go into captivity as they went. Thus he ſaith the words may be alſo interpreted; but I ſuppoſe none elſe will ſo think, except ſome who as he will ſeek to ſay any thing, without conſidering whether it agrees with the words, or makes any probable or tolerable ſenſe (as this expoſition plainly doth neither) rather than embrace the true meaning, if it make againſt what they are obſtinately ſet on.

[u] Jun. Tremel. Pet. à Fig. See Tarnov. [w] Talmud. lib. Yoma. c. 1. [x] Yalkute. [y] Kimchi. [z] Abarb. [a] R. Tanch [b] R. D. Kimchi, Michlal Yophi. [c] Abarbinel. [d] John xvi. 21. [e] R. Tanchum. [f] Lipman in Nitzakon.

Now as for Chriſtian Expoſitors there is among them alſo great difference in giving the meaning of this verſe, [g] Some ſo giving it, as if it ſhould ſignify, That therefore, becauſe things ſhould be ſo ordered, as before ſpoken, by God, he would give up the Jews for a while to be grievouſly afflicted; but their afflictions ſhould have a joyful iſſue, as the ſorrows of a woman in travail, which when ſhe hath brought forth are turned into joy; and that to ſuch a woman he compareth the body of the people of the Jews: ſo that their ſufferings under the hand of their enemies are, [h] according to them, compared to the pangs of a travailing woman, their deliverance to a happy birth. Or, 2ly, that before the coming of the Meſſiah (Chriſt) the Jews ſhould be delivered up for a certain time to ſuffer great afflictions, and then Meſſiah ſhould ſtand up, &c. [i] Others, he ſhall deliver them up unto the time, that the church ſhall by a ſpiritual birth ([k] the converſion of the Gentiles by the preaching of the goſpel) bring forth, and the remnant of the Jews alſo with thoſe of the ten tribes ſhall turn unto him. [l] Others, far otherwiſe as to the firſt words, Therefore will he permit them, that is, bear with the Jews, and ſuffer them (who were afterwards to be deſtroyed by the Romans) ſo long to live and remain in their country being returned from the Babyloniſh captivity, till the church by the preaching of the goſpel hath brought in many brethren of the Gentiles, as well as Iſraelites, in the time betwixt the paſſion of Chriſt and the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; or much to that purpoſe, as One in few words gives it, [m] till the ſynagogue hath brought forth Chriſt, or the church, or till [n] Gentiliſm hitherto barren, hath brought ſons to God, brethren to Chriſt.

And there is yet another Interpretation brought, in which by theſe words, until the time that ſhe that travaileth hath brought forth, is underſtood the Bleſſed Virgin's bearing, and bringing forth Chriſt: which though [o] Some look on as forced, yet is by Others preferred before the reſt, and will perhaps upon the examination be found the moſt ſimple proper and genuine among them. To the farther explanation of it may be premiſed, that the word rendred therefore, may ſignify alſo, but yet, notwithſtanding, or nevertheleſs, agreeable to its ſignification in the Arabick tongue, and as [p] Some obſerve it ſometimes to ſignify in the Hebrew; and then the words yield this meaning, Becauſe God hath determined, that that ruler in Iſrael, whoſe goings forth have been from of old, from everlaſting, ſhall in time come forth out of Bethlehem, and be there being made Man born of a woman; therefore till that time, till ſhe which is to bring him forth hath there brought forth, will he give them up to be afflicted, and troubled, and not preſently ſhow to them his promiſed ſalvation in full manner: but then after that he is come forth and manifeſted, his brethren the converted Gentiles by faith being become children of Abraham, and ſo brothers to this ruler, and [q] to the true Iſrael, ſhall return unto him, and be altogether faithful ſubjects and members of his kingdom, and he ſhall ſtand, and feed, or rule them all, &c. Or elſe, Though God hath certainly decreed and promiſed to give ſalvation unto Iſrael, by him whoſe goings forth have been from of old, from everlaſting; yet he hath determined withal, that he ſhall come forth unto him out of Bethlehem: and therefore notwithſtanding the certainty of this ſalvation by him promiſed, it ſhall not preſently be manifeſted to them, but he will defer it, till ſhe that ſhould bring him forth, hath there brought him forth; and then ſhall it be manifeſted by his calling into his kingdom the remnant of his brethren, the Heathen, that ſhall be converted to him, who ſhall together with thoſe of Iſrael turn unto him, and he ſhall ſtand, and feed, or rule among them in the ſtrength of the Lord, &c. What is there in this explication that is forced either as to the plain and proper ſignification of the words, by all agreed on, or as to the connexion? And this prophecy ſo underſtood will well agree with that of Iſaiah vii. 14. where, as a ſign of ſalvation to them, and to point out the time when it ſhall be brought to them, it is ſaid, Behold a virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a Son, which is the ſame that is here promiſed, and ſaid to have been made good by the Bleſſed Mother of Chriſt, her bringing him forth in Bethlehem, Mat. i. 22, 23. Theſe two Prophets, Iſaiah and Micah, lived at the ſame time, and in their prophecies were directed by the Spirit of God to ſpeak ſometimes the ſame things, as appeareth by what we have ſeen, chap. iv. 1, 2. and ſo both agree concerning the birth of Chriſt of a Virgin, or Mother in Bethlehem, that he might be the Saviour of the Iſrael of God all the world over: for the pro-

[g] Calvin. [h] Grotius. [i] Munſter. Vat. edit. Steph. in fol. [k] See Dutch Notes. [l] Vatabl. Ed. 4to and 8vo Hierom. Lyra, Tarnov. See Caſta. [m] See Chriſtoph. à Caſtro and Pelican. [n] Ribera. [o] Calvin. [p] R. Tanchum on Hoſea ii. 14. [q] Diodat.

promiſe of God was not only to Iſrael according to the fleſh, but to all alſo that were afar off, even as many as the Lord our God ſhould call, Acts ii. 39. and all theſe are called the remnant of his brethren, even thoſe that were before aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and afar off, are now in Chriſt made one with them, Eph. ii. 12, &c. all brethren among themſelves, and all brethren to Chriſt their ruler. Having taken on him their nature in the fleſh, he is not aſhamed to call them ſo, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Heb. ii. 11. confirming it out of Pſalm xxii. 22. where in the perſon of Chriſt he ſaith, I will declare thy name unto my brethren. And there is no reaſon to take the name of brethren here in a narrower ſenſe than to comprehend all the remnant, whom the Lord ſhall call, Joel ii. 32. whether the Jews or Gentiles, and to reſtrain it with ſome only to the Jews, though they were nigher of kin to him according to the fleſh, and were firſt invited to come in. We are taught of Chriſt himſelf to give the word this latitude, when to the Jews who appropriated that name to thoſe who were meerly related unto him in the fleſh, he gives anſwer, that whoſoever ſhould believe in him, and do the will of God, is his brother, and ſiſter, and mother, [r] Mat. xii. 46, &c. or as Luke viii. 22. My brethren are theſe which hear the word of God and do it. Now he, that great ruler in Iſrael, whoſe goings out were from everlaſting, being come out in the time appointed out of Bethlehem, and being there born of a woman, and ſo [s] God manifeſted in the fleſh, and having called thoſe his brethren unto him, and ſet up his ſpiritual kingdom among men, it is added,

4. ¶ And he ſhall ſtand and feed in the ſtrength of the Lord, in the majeſty of the name of the Lord his God, and they ſhall abide: for now ſhall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

And he ſhall ſtand and feed, &c.] He ſhall perſiſt, and continue to feed, or ſet himſelf to feed, i. e. he ſhall with all care, and prudence, watchfulneſs, and diligence, and tenderneſs, rule, and guide, and conduct, and provide for, and ſupply with neceſſaries his ſubjects, which are his flock, as a good ſhepherd (to which good princes, and rulers are uſually likened) doth his ſheep. And this he ſhall do in the ſtrength of the Lord, not as an ordinary man, but as one, who hath extraordinary, and plainly divine power conferred on him from the Lord to enable him ſo to feed and rule, not to be hindred, or overpowered by any that would oppoſe him, or do wrong, or violence, and prejudice unto his flock under his protection: and in the majeſty of the name of the Lord his God, ſo as plainly to evidence, that the majeſtick [t] name of the Lord his God is in him, that God hath glorified him, and is glorified in and by him; and under the protection of his great power and majeſty, they his ſubjects ſhall abide, be in a ſure and ſtedfaſt condition, ſecure againſt all other powers: for now, when he ſhall enter on his rule, ſhall he be great unto the ends of the earth, extending his name, glory, and dominion as wide as the world, and to the utmoſt parts thereof. Theſe expreſſions (ſaith a [u] learned Jew) evince, that the ruler here ſpoken of can be no other than the Meſſiah; not Zorobabel, who never attained to this height and happineſs. So ſay we; and that our Lord Chriſt is the here and elſewhere promiſed Meſſiah, and that all here ſpoken evidently agrees to him as fulfilled in and by him, who is that ruler in Iſrael, that [w] good and great ſhepherd of God's flock, which ſtandeth and feedeth them continually, that in [x] ſafety they go in and out, and find paſture, and defendeth them in the ſtrength of the Lord (all power being given to him in heaven and in earth, Mat. xxviii. 18.) ſo that they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any pluck them out of his hand; for no man is able to pluck them out of his Father's hand, who is greater than all; and He and his Father are one, John x. 28, 29, 30. In his name doth he keep them, ib. ver. 11, 12. and they ſhall therefore abide, never miſcarry under his protection. For he is and will be with them alway unto the end of the world, Mat. xxviii. 20. and in gathering and guiding his, will ſhew and extend the greatneſs of his power and his glory [y] unto the ends of the earth, among all nations, as it is this day, and ever ſhall ſo be. He ſhall be great, that is, the name of the Meſſiah, ſaith Kimchi.

But while we apply theſe words to our Lord Chriſt, another [z] Jew ſteps in and endeavours to raiſe cavils and objections out of them againſt us. Having ſaid that Chriſt is not acknowledged as ruler by Iſrael, which hath been already anſwered; he adds and argues from what is ſaid, in the majeſty of the name of the Lord his God, that therefore he (here ſpoken of) hath a God, and therefore is not himſelf God: and if they ſay this is ſpoken of him as Man, or in reſpect of his manhood, Was Man from of old, from everlaſting? Again, This King hath brothers; again, Is it not ſo that at his birth no new thing happened? Only they ſay that at the hour of his death he reigned. Further, His dominion is not to the ends of the earth, &c.

His words are ſhort, but ſo as his meaning appears; and he thence infers that hence is proved, that the promiſed Meſſiah is not yet come. But theſe are ſlight cavils, and ſignify nothing to us, who profeſs that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, is God and Man, God of the ſubſtance of the Father begotten before the worlds, and Man of the ſubſtance of his Mother born in the Word, perfect God and perfect Man, equal to the Father as touching his Godhead, and inferior to the Father as touching his Manhood. In theſe words is nothing that may croſs what we hold and believe, but but fully confirms it. In that the Meſſias here ſpoken of had his goings forth from of old from everlaſting, it is manifeſt that he is God, as hath been before ſhewed: in that he was in time to come forth out of Bethlehem, and God is called his God, and men his brethren, it is manifeſt that he is alſo Man, partaker of fleſh and blood. But do we therefore ſay, that man, or fleſh and blood was from everlaſting, or eternal? By no means, but that he that was eternal God before time, was in time made Man, and ſo though in the firſt reſpect one with the Father, coequal to him, God himſelf, yet in the latter reſpect, after him and inferior to him: ſo that one Chriſt is both God and Man, yet without confuſion of ſubſtance and natures. So that if what is affirmed of him according to one nature ſhould be objected as not agreeing to the other, and ſo a proof againſt its being in the ſame perſon, will be no more, than if any ſhould object againſt him that affirms, the reaſonable ſoul of man is incorruptible, that therefore he affirms the body, which together with that ſoul makes one man, to be alſo incorruptible. As he is one God with the Father, ſo is he the Lord and God of men, (as Thomas acknowledged him, John xx. 28.) as he is man inferior to the Father, ſo he calleth men his brethren, and their God his God, John xx. 17.

[r] See likewiſe Mark iii. 35. [s] 1 Tim. iii. 16. [t] Exod. xxiii. 21. [u] R. Tanchum. [w] John x. 14. [x] Ib. ver. 9. [y] Mat. xxviii. 19. Acts i. 8. Rom. x. 18. [z] R. Lipman in Nitzachon.

Why he ſhould here take occaſion of objecting, that no new thing happened at his birth, I know not. Had there not, it might be an anſwer to him, that [a] his own greateſt Doctors tell him, that no new alteration in the world ought to be expected at the coming of the Meſſiah. But we know there did happen ſuch ſtrange things as never did at the birth of any other, as (not to mention that he was born of a Virgin without father on earth, as never any other was) that ſtrange ſtar, the appearance of which made thoſe wiſe men from the Eaſt coming to Jeruſalem to aſk without doubt or more ado, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Mat. ii. 1, 2. and that glorious apparition of the Angel, Luke ii. 10. proclaiming to the ſhepherds, I bring you tidings of great joy, which ſhall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David (which is Bethlehem here ſpoken of, and the thing here ſpoken of it) a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord. What he adds, only at the hour of his death (or concerning the hour of his death, for his words are obſcure) they ſay that he reigned, ſeems to intimate, as if he fancied that Chriſtians, becauſe they could not avoid that objection, That no ſtrange thing happened at his birth, did therefore date his kingdom from his death; or elſe that he upbraids us, that we ſay, that he that was overcome by death reigneth. Be his meaning what it will, his objection is of no force againſt us, who profeſs that Chriſt was both born King, and all the time of his living on earth evidently ſhewed himſelf ſo, by ſuch means, as we have formerly ſeen; inſomuch that Nathaniel convinced by what he ſaw, plainly confeſſeth him ſo, Rabbi, that thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael, John i. 49. and the people not doubting of it, would needs have taken him by force to make him a temporal king as he ſhewed himſelf a ſpiritual one, John vi. 15. beſides their openly proclaiming him ſo, Mark xi. 10. Luke xix. 38. and that his death whereto he humbled himſelf, did not (notwitſtanding the blaſphemous ſcoffs of the chief among the Jews, Mat. xxvii. 42. Mark xv. 32.) evidence that he was not a true King or put an end to his kingdom, but more advanced it, and did but ſerve to draw his ſubjects (even a great part of the world) all men unto him, John xii. 32. And at that too, as ignominious as they ſought to to make it, happened ſuch ſtrange and unuſual things, as made the centurion, and thoſe that were with him watching Jeſus, to confeſs him not an ordinary King, but to ſay, Truly this was the Son of God, Mat. xxvii. 54. Mark xv. 36. So far was he from having his power leſſened by his death, that by it he overcame death it ſelf, and deſtroyed him, that had the power of it, that is the devil, Heb. ii. 14. and in his croſs triumphed over them, and all infernal powers, openly and diſcernably to all that would not ſhut their eyes, Col. ii. 15. Then his reſurrection after his death (that not being able to hold him, Acts ii. 24.) which he made evident by ſo many ways, as we find in the goſpels, and by appearing ſo many times, and to ſo many witneſſes, (as is recorded, 1 Cor. xv. 4, 5, &c.) and then his aſcending viſibly into heaven in the ſight of his Apoſtles, Acts i. 9. Mark xvi. 19. make it moſt evident, that the ſame Jeſus, whom they crucified, God made both Lord and Chriſt, Acts xxi. 36. and that he is the Meſſiah, the ruler in Iſrael here propheſied of, and that we are to look for no other. But ſaith he, his dominion is not unto the ends of the earth. Here call we in the whole world to witneſs againſt him. He living in Germany (far enough from the land of Iſrael) could not but know how far and wide over the face of the earth the dominion of Chriſt hath ſpread it ſelf, and in how many nations he is acknowledged as Lord, and King, and his name adored, and magnified: ſo that he would not have made this cavil, except he had willingly ſtopt his ears, and ſhut his eyes, or would not underſtand what he heard, or perceive what he ſaw; ſuch obſtinateneſs doth his way of arguing diſcover. There is nothing therefore in what he hath ſaid, that may take us off from applying theſe words of the prophecy hitherto to our Lord Chriſt, and affirming them to be all in him fulfilled in their true and utmoſt meaning. His cavils out of the following words are of like nature, as in due place will appear.

But before we paſs from theſe words one thing more may be obſerved, viz. that the word וישבו Veyaſhabu, by Ours rendred, and they ſhall abide, is [b] by ſome Others rendred ſhall return, or, ſhall be converted: into the reaſon of which it will not be needful nicely to ininquire, whether it were becauſe inſtead of what is now read וישבו Veyaſhabu, which ſignifies and ſhall abide, they did read וישובו Veyaſhubu, which ſignifies they ſhall return; or whether reading it, as it is now read, they thought it to ſignify the ſame that ישובו Yaſhubu, taking the words שוב Shub, and ישב Yaſhab, to agree in the ſignification of turning alſo, as they ſometimes do in the other of abiding, as appears by what we read, Pſalm xxiii. 6. where ושבתי Veſhabti, by conſent of all, is rendred abide, or, dwell, though the theme שוב Shub, moſt uſually denotes to return. They that follow this interpretation make the meaning to be, That many ſhall be turned and flock in to Chriſt, becauſe now he ſhall be great, or that now he may be great, unto the ends of the earth. But there is no reaſon to forſake our tranſlation, and the expoſition before given.

[a] Maimonides, Yad. Tract. Melchim. cap. ult. [b] Chaldee Paraphraſe, Vulg. Latin.

5. And this Man ſhall be the peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come into our land: and when he ſhall tread in our palaces, then ſhall we raiſe againſt him ſeven ſhepherds, and eight principal men.

6. And they ſhall waſte the land of Aſſyria with the ſword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof: thus ſhall he deliver us from the Aſſyrian when he cometh into our land, &c.

And this Man ſhall be, &c.] A learned Jew [c] ſaith of theſe words, that though the ſignification of the words be plain, yet the meaning and ſenſe of the whole is very abſtruſe. In this they and Chriſtians agree, that what is ſpoken in them agrees to the Meſſiah and his times or kingdom. But in the application thereof muſt needs be a vaſt difference, they ſaying that the promiſed Meſſiah is not yet come, and ſo (the moſt of them) that the things here ſpoken of are not yet fulfilled, but are to be accompliſhed, when the Meſſiah ſhall come: we, that the Meſſiah, who is our Lord Chriſt, is already come, and ſo the things by him and under him fulfilled, and in fulfilling, as they ought to be underſtood, and that no other Meſſiah is to be expected, nor other accompliſhing of theſe prophecies. The truth will appear by going over the words in order.

This man ſhall be the peace. There is nothing in the original text expreſſed that ſignifieth man; but the words barely ſound, This ſhall be peace, without mention of perſon or thing, which hath cauſed difference among Expoſitors according to their different underſtanding of what is to be ſupplied, as pointed to by the particle this. Some underſtand it of the perſon before ſpoken of, as our Tranſlators, who therefore add man, This man ſhall be peace. The ſame do many other Expoſitors underſtand, both Chriſtians and Jews alſo. So [d] one of them, It is to be underſtood of the Meſſiah, becauſe he ſhall be the cauſe of peace, as it is ſaid, and he ſhall ſpeak peace to the nations, Zech. ix. 10. that great bleſſing was he to be the author of to his: and therefore our Lord Chriſt being the only true Meſſiah, of him is, agreeably to the words, here ſaid, He is our peace, Eph. ii. 14. At his birth, was by the heavenly hoſt proclaimed peace on earth, Luke ii. 14. and he entring on his miniſtry, while he was on earth, came and preached peace to them which were afar off, and to them that were nigh, Eph. ii. 17. and when he was again to leave the world, he bequeathed peace to his, gave it to them, and left it with them, John xiv. 27. So that well might it be ſaid of him by way of prophecy, This man ſhall be peace, or, the peace.

And this ſupply of the perſon may ſeem as agreeable to the meaning of the words as any.

But then of us, i. e. of Chriſtians, who thus underſtand the words as affirming that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhall be peace, or, the peace, may be demanded by the Jews or Others, what peace we mean; or, how that peace, which we ſay he is the author and eſtabliſher of, may agree with that deſcription, which is given of it in this and the following verſe, to wit, ſuch as ſhould be made good by repelling the Aſſyrian, by raiſing againſt him ſeven ſhepherds, and eight principal men, by waſting the land of Aſſyria with the ſword, and the land of Nimrod, &c. and by delivering from the Aſſyrian, &c. To which we have to anſwer, that theſe expreſſions are figurative, and ſo the literal ſignification of every word is not nicely to be inſiſted on, ſo we may but have the whole meaning appoſitely given.

That diverſe expreſſions of ſuch benefits as were promiſed to be made good under the Meſſiah are figuratively to be taken, is that which cannot be denied, and by the learnedeſt of [e] the Jews themſelves confeſſed: as for inſtance, that which is likewiſe a deſcription of the peace by him to be effected, that [f] the wolf ſhall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard lye down with the kid, the calf with the young lion, and a little child ſhould lead them, &c. and the lion ſhould eat ſtraw with the ox, &c. and all this ſhould be becauſe the earth ſhould be full of the knowledge of the Lord, which none will ſay thoſe beaſts are capable of, or expect there ſhould be ſuch a ſtrange change in their nature. And it muſt therefore be confeſſed, that the expreſſions are figurative, and denote only that great change in the natures and diſpoſitions of men which ſhall be wrought by the Doctrine of Chriſt, and that mutual accord in love and meekneſs which thereby they ſhall be diſpoſed to. And why may not theſe words be underſtood ſo too, i. e. figuratively? They muſt needs ſo be, if we read, This man ſhall be peace, that is, the peace here deſcribed ſhall be wrought by the Meſſiah (for reaſons which will by and by appear.) And ſo figuratively taken, what do they but, under the type of a compleat temporal peace to the Jews, repreſent to us us that more excellent ſpiritual peace, that comprehenſive bleſſing of peace with God, peace among themſelves (and as far as in them lies, peace with all men) and peace within themſelves, not to be diſturbed by the aſſaults of any enemies thereof, which is by Chriſt given to his church and the members thereof, the ſubjects of his kingdom, and wrought by the preaching of the goſpel, maugre all that ſhall oppoſe it?

[c] R. Tanchum. [d] R. D. Kimchi. [e] Maim. in Melac. cap. ult. and in his Epiſtle of the Reſurrection. [f] Iſaiah xi. 6, &c.

The Aſſyrians and Chaldeans were then the known enemies of the Jews, ſuch as invaded their land, and trod in, or entred into their palaces, and waſted all things; if now God ſhould raiſe unto them any, under whoſe conduct they ſhould not only repel thoſe enemies, but purſue them, and waſte their land, and wholly ſubject them ſo as that they ſhould no more have cauſe to fear them, would not this be a very great bleſſing, a bringing in and eſtabliſhment of a moſt deſirable peace, and a thing marvellous in their eyes, the greateſt they could then wiſh for? By repreſenting this therefore to them to be done, he figures out that greater bleſſing, that deſirable peace, which that Meſſiah, whom in the foregoing words he had promiſed, and deſcribed, ſhould be the author of, and make good by conqueſt of more malicious and potent enemies than the Aſſyrian or Chaldean, even Satan himſelf with all his infernal hoſt (whom with his own weapons and in his own territories he hath vanquiſhed; through death [g] having deſtroyed him that had the power of death, and given to his the victory over death, and the ſting of it, ſin) and the principalities and powers and rulers of the darkneſs of this world and ſpiritual wickedneſs in high places, Eph. vi. 12. and all the world that lies in wickedneſs, and the enemies of the truth which with unappeaſable malice conſtantly ſeek to invade the church and infeſt the members thereof, and to diſturb their peace. Againſt all theſe, and all that can be named, will he ſecure it to them, and continually raiſe up ſuch a ſufficient number of ſuch as ſhall maintain his truth and beat down whatſoever ſhall oppoſe it, and furniſh them with the irreſiſtible power of his Spirit for that end, ſo that none ſhall be able to take from his that true peace which he giveth. With him is power alſo to ſecure to his an outward peace, and to raiſe up ſuch as ſhall bring under all that ſhall infeſt that alſo.

And this alſo he often doth by wonderful means, as he ſeeth moſt for his glory and the good of his church. But that we do not look on as the thing here principally meant or promiſed, but that ſpiritual peace of a more divine nature, which we have ſpoken of, according to what he promiſeth, John xvi. 33. that in him they ſhould have peace, though in the world they ſhould have tribulation, bidding them therefore to to be of good cheer, becauſe he hath overcome the world; which words of his ſeem a ſummary of what is here ſpoken and propheſied of.

If any of ſuch who ſo read the words, This man ſhall be peace, that is, the Meſſiah, like not of this way of expounding them, but ſay, whether Jews or Others, that under the Meſſiah, they ought according to the proper ſound of the letter to be fulfilled, [h] St. Hierom teacheth us thus to argue with them, Theſe things ſpoken here as to be effected by Meſſiah are either fulfilled, or yet to be expected and not fulfilled. If they ſay, they be fulfilled, let them give us the hiſtory thereof by authority of ancient books confirmed, and tell us when the Aſſyrians and Chaldeans were ever ſubjected to the Jews, conquered and governed by them; (we may add, if they ſay they are, let them then confeſs that the Meſſiah, who they confeſs was to be the author of that peace, by the conqueſt of thoſe enemies, and delivering them from them, is already come.) But 'tis not likely, that they will ſay this. If then they ſay that they are not yet fulfilled, nor Meſſiah yet come, as they do, [i] but that they expect that they ſhall be, according to the ſound of the letter, fulfilled when he ſhall come, and that if the Aſſyrian ſhould offer to invade them, (as in the Prophet's time he did) the Meſſiah with his princes and chieftains, denoted here by ſeven ſhepherds, and eight principal men, ſhall ſo ſubdue them, as to deliver them from all further fear of annoyance from them, we then demand, Where are their palaces in any land, that they may call their own, for the Aſſyrian to enter into and tread in? Where (if they had ſuch) any Aſſyrians (they being ſo long ſince cut off from being a nation) to tread in them? Shall the Meſſiah, that he may fulfil theſe things according to the letter, build up for them palaces, which may be troden in, and raiſe Aſſyrians out of the duſt, who have ſo long ceaſed to be a known nation, to come and tread in them, that ſo he may drive them out of Iſrael's land, and waſte theirs with the ſword? This would be ſuch a ſtrange miraculous change in the courſe of the world, as the greateſt of their Doctors (as we have ſaid) will not admit them to expect at the coming of the Meſſiah: and for this reaſon is it that, as above we intimated, theſe words muſt neceſſarily be underſtood figuratively, if underſtood as to be effected by Chriſt, becauſe that before his coming theſe nations, viz. Aſſyrians and Chaldeans, had been ſo utterly deſtroyed, as not to be reckoned among nations, much leſs to be in any ſuch power as to invade the land of Iſrael, and annoy them in hoſtile manner: and much more now ſtands the caſe ſo.

This objection ſeems [k] to one among the Jews (no leſs learned nor obſervant of his own advantages than others) ſo evidently preſſing and ſo unanſwerable, that he plainly profeſſeth, that what is here ſpoken cannot be looked on as a promiſe of things yet to come, and to be expected: There is, ſaith he, no ſignification (or place) for a promiſe that Aſſur (or the Aſſyrians) ſhall in time to come be cut off or deſtroyed by the ſword, ſeeing they are periſhed and cut off already, ſo that there is now no remainder of them, by which they are known to be: and this makes him look after other ways, by which the words may be expounded, ſo as not to ſuſpend their fulfilling on the coming of the Meſſiah; as, firſt, not referring the word this to the perſon before ſpoken of, or what is before ſaid of him, but to what is after in the following words deſcribed, and ſo ſupplying thing, or time, viz. this thing ſhall be our peace, or the condition of our peace, at that time by this ſhall our peace be procured, or eſtabliſhed, viz. that when the Aſſyrian ſhall come, &c. then we ſhall raiſe, &c. So making it a conſolation to Iſrael in thoſe days, who ſtood in fear of the Kings of Aſſyria, and were threatned that they ſhould be led into captivity by them, but are here promiſed (to fortify them againſt that fear and put an end to it) that after that another nation ſhould riſe up againſt them (that is, againſt the Aſſyrians) with many princes and commanders, who ſhould revenge their quarrel on them, intimating, that the King of the Chaldeans ſhould prevail over them and deſtroy them; as, ſaith he, it is expreſly foretold in the prophecies of the Prophets in many places, and as it was actually brought to paſs: (for otherwiſe this promiſe can ſignify nothing, if it be interpreted of the many commanders and captains of the forementioned ruler, as if they ſhould with their ſword deſtroy thoſe, who were already deſtroyed, long before that ruler was born.) Or elſe he ſaith, there may be another expoſition given, by reading the word, שלום Shalom, which is rendred peace, in the ſignification of recompence, or reward, as שלם Shillam, שלום Shillum, שלמון Shalmon, other forms from the ſame root do ſignify, that ſo the words may ſound, and this ſhall be the recompence of Aſſur, who, or becauſe he, (taking כי Ci, when, to denote here as much as Aſher, who or becauſe he) ſhall come into our land, viz. that there ſhall riſe up againſt him ſuch as ſhall bring him to ruin as before: and this expoſition he likes of, and thinks that no objection ought to be made againſt it from grammar rules concerning change of vowels in conſtruction, and diſtinction of accents, ſeeing they are rules that do not always unalterably hold.

a

[g] Heb. ii. 14. 1 Cor. xv. 57. [h] On Micah v. [i] Judæi in adventu Chriſti quem ſibi ſimulant hæc omnia juxta literam futura eſſe contendunt. Hieronymus, and ſee R. Sol. Jarchi, and R. D. Kimchi and Abarbinel. [k] R. Tanch.

This Rabbin plainly denies and takes away from thoſe of his own nation and ſect all ground of any argument from theſe words, whereby they would prove againſt Chriſtians, that the Meſſiah is not yet come, becauſe that is not done by our Lord Chriſt, which they expect ſhould be done by the Meſſiah; but doth not in his expoſitions ſay any thing which may contradict what we believe, that our Lord is the Meſſiah ſpoken of in the foregoing verſes, and that all that by virtue of this prophecy was to be expected from the Meſſiah hath had its due accompliſhment, though he do not look on theſe preſent words as ſpoken of his perſon; in which ſome among Chriſtians agree with him alſo, and do not underſtand by this, this man, or perſon, but [l] Some taking it for a note of time, This time ſhall be a time of peace, or, then ſhall be peace and proſperity, when, i. e. after, the Aſſyrian and Chaldean ſhall have invaded our land, &c. for then we ſhall raiſe, (to wit, by our prayers to God) againſt him ſeven ſhepherds, viz. Cyrus, with other kings, and eight principal men, viz. great peers or captains, and rulers, Jer. li. 28. and they ſhall ſubdue with their weapons the land of Aſſyria, and Babylon, and free us, ſo that we ſhall not any more fear their coming into our land, and treading in our borders, as we did before. Others not much from the ſame purpoſe, ſo joining that particle with peace, as to denote the condition of it, as after deſcribed, viz. [m] This ſhall be our peace, or thus the condition of it, and it thus acquired, viz. by the deſtruction of the Aſſyrian army, which invaded Iſrael, by the Angel of the Lord (they might add, and of his kingdom by the Chaldeans) and of the Chaldeans who ſacked Jeruſalem, and led them captives, by Cyrus and Darius, and thoſe many princes with them (whom by their prayers to God they raiſed up, that they might perform this work) who ſubdued and deſtroyed both Aſſyria and Chaldea. And then ſome take it as to the connexion to depend on what went before, viz. For now ſhall he be great unto the ends of the earth, as if this here were promiſed before hand to come to paſs [n] as a pledge of that promiſe of Chriſt and his greatneſs, that ſeeing this come to paſs, they might not doubt of that.

But if this expoſition be followed, the words ſhould ſeem rather to have reſpect to what is before promiſed, chap. iv. 10, &c.

Among all theſe expoſitions, that of the Chriſtians firſt of all mentioned is moſt followed, and (as we have ſhewed) hath nothing in it why it ſhould be excepted againſt; but withal there is no danger in following any of the reſt, except that only of ſuch of the Jews, who expect yet a literal fulfilling of theſe things by the Meſſiah, and would therefore prove him not to be yet come, becauſe they are not yet ſo fulfilled. The vanity and abſurdity of which opinion hath been ſufficiently ſhewed, and is evident.

Having thus at large ſpoken of different opinions concerning the meaning of theſe two verſes in general, occaſioned chiefly by their different applying of the firſt word This, it will be convenient to look more particularly into the import of ſome other of the words in them, to ſee how they are, or may be accommodated to thoſe different meanings, that we may accordingly judge thereof.

And, firſt, concerning Aſſur, (or the Aſſyrian) and the land of the Aſſyrian, and the land of Nimrod, ſome take theſe to be both as one,

[l] Druſius, Grotius. [m] See LXX. and ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro. [n] Idem ex Theo.

one, and that by the land of Nimrod, is meant no other [o] than Aſſyria, viz. Nineveh, and its territories or provinces. Others diſtinguiſh them ſo, as by the land of Aſſyria to underſtand that diſtinctly, which was uſually ſo called, under the dominion of Nineveh and the kings thereof; and by the land of Nimrod, [p] that of the Chaldeans in the land of Shinar under the kings of Babel, in which Nimrod began firſt to reign, Gen. x. 10. and out of that land went into Aſſyria, and built Nineveh (according to the Margin in our Bibles, which tranſlation a very learned man [q] prefers, and is of the firſt opinion.)

As the name of Aſſyria is ſometime ſo uſed as to comprehend [r] both theſe, ſo it is manifeſt that at other times they are taken as diſtinct kingdoms, and came ſeverally to invade the Jews; firſt, the Aſſyrians, who took Samaria, and deſtroyed the kingdom of the ten tribes, and then the Babylonians or Chaldeans, who took Jeruſalem and captivated the Jews; and they themſelves were ſeverally deſtroyed, but both many years before Chriſt's being born at Bethlehem; and therefore theſe names (as we have ſeen) by thoſe who underſtand the words here ſpoken as a deſcription of things to be done by Chriſt after his coming in the fleſh, are not properly underſtood according to the letter, but ſo as to denote any enemies, eſpecially ſpiritual, repreſenting them as terrible, fierce and malicious, as the Aſſyrians were then to the Jews; [s] nothing could then expreſs a greater enemy, or in higher terms, than the name of Aſſyrian, a name moſt formidable to them.

A Jew of great note, [t] who properly underſtands theſe words, and expects the prophecy yet literally to be performed by his Meſſiah, and ſo interprets them, as to denote that in the latter days the Aſſyrians and Babylonians ſhall be at peace with Iſrael, and come no otherwiſe than peaceably into their land, and ſhall be obedient to their king, having Jeruſalem for his Metropolis, and ruling over the whole world, ſtarts occaſionately a queſtion, Why thoſe nations are here named, and not Edom (which in his language are the Romans, or generally Chriſtians?) and makes his anſwer to this purpoſe, Becauſe Edom, or the Edomites, are the chief of their enemies, and therefore they ſhall have no mercy, but be utterly cut off, whereas the others on their ſubjecting themſelves ſhall be received to terms of peace. So he ſhews his good will and deſires, but confers nothing to the true meaning of the words.

Such [u] as by Aſſyrians and Babylonians take here to be meant Gog and Magog, ſeem to have no good ground for their opinion from the words, nor will it be eaſily made appear that they are here meant.

When Aſhur ſhall come.] The particle כי Ci, rendred when, and ſo properly ſignifying, yet having other uſes, is by [w] Expoſitors differently taken, by Some for when, by Others for if, by Others after that, by Others, becauſe, or for that, as they can beſt ſuit it to their ſeveral expoſitions, and in the ſixth verſe, by Some [x] leaſt that, and ſo in this alſo by a Jewiſh Arabick Tranſlator.

Seven ſhepherds and eight principal men. That is, [y] many, ſay Interpreters; ſeven it ſelf being ſometimes put for an indefinite number denoting many, and much more eight being added to it, as in like manner the ſame expreſſion is uſed, Eccl. xi. 2. Give a portion to ſeven, and alſo to eight, and Others not unlike elſewhere of the number of ſeven and ſeventy; for to take theſe preciſely to ſignify the number expreſſed, is that which Interpreters agree to be no way neceſſary or agreeing to the ſcope of the words.

Some ancient Jews indeed ſeem ſo to take them, and reckon them up by name, viz. the ſeven ſhepherds to be, David in the midſt, [z] Adam, Seth, and Methuſalem, on his right hand, Abraham, Jacob, and Moſes, on his left; then the eight principal men, Jeſſe, Saul, Samuel, Amos, Zephaniah, [a] Zedechiah, Elias, and Meſſiah; but the latter Jews wonder on what ground or tradition they did this; and whatever it were, [b] one of them plainly ſaith that it makes nothing to the expoſition of the preſent words (and therefore though in ſeveral books and copies there be ſome difference in reckoning up thoſe names, it is not material, one name may ſerve as well as another, none of them ſerving to the purpoſe.)

[c] What ſome alſo think, that in the naming of ſeven ſhepherds or rulers, there is an alluſion to the number of ſeven princes and counſellors of the Perſians, mentioned, Eſther i. 14. and Ezra vii. 14. may ſeem alſo an obſervation of more nicety than much to be inſiſted on.

That which on all hands both by Jewiſh and Chriſtian Expoſitors will be agreed on, is, that the import of the expreſſion in this place is, that God ſo ordering it there ſhall not want many, and thoſe ſufficiently qualified with ſuch endowments and power as is requiſite, to maintain and make good againſt all oppoſers and enemies thereof, that peace which is here promiſed, to thoſe to whom it is promiſed; and thoſe ſo qualified are here called ſhepherds, and principal men, or princes of men.

Both theſe titles [d] Some take to ſignify the ſame thing, viz. rulers, governours, commanders, chieftains, chief men: which they that more literally expound the words, underſtand of military men, or warlike commanders; [e] they that expound them figuratively, of governours vernours and paſtors of the church of God, and miniſters of the good thereof, and propagators and defenders of the truth, and endowed with the Spirit of God, and thereby enabled for performance of that office. That difference which [f] Some make, as if the latter (viz. נסיכי אדם Neſiche Adam, princes of men) did denote ſuch as were taken out of the common ſort of men, becauſe Adam, the common name of a man, is often taken for an ordinary man, in diſtinction from איש Iſh, a man of greater quality, and ſo did import, that God ſhould from the meaneſt of the people raiſe up many, who ſhould be ſo qualified and enabled, as that they ſhould be able to perform that, which is here ſaid they ſhould, maugre all the oppoſition of moſt potent enemies, however true it is in it ſelf, yet may perhaps to ſome not ſeem to be of that weight, as that it may be much preſſed or inſiſted on as a neceſſary meaning of the words undeniably concluded from them.

[o] R. Tanchum, Bochart. Peleg. p. 260. [p] R. D. Kimchi, Aben Ezra, R. Sol. &c. [q] Bochartus. [r] Grotius. [s] See Caſtalio. [t] Abarbinel. [u] Mead. [w] Solomon, R. D. Kimchi. [x] Grot. and ſee R. Kimchi. [y] See Aben Ezra. D. Kimchi, Tanchum, Abarbinel, and ſee Ribera. [z] In Kimchi, Seth, Enoch, and Methuſala; but in a manuſcript as we have put it. This is had out of the Talmud, Succah. cap. 5. fol. 52. [a] In Kimchi and Lipman, Ezekiah; ſo that the books and copies differ: and Yalkut for Amos hath Amram. [b] R. Tanchum. [c] Tarnovius. [d] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [e] See Dutch Notes and others.

Theſe, whoever they be, it is ſaid ſhall be raiſed againſt him, i. e. againſt the enemy, denoted by the name of Aſſur or the Aſſyrian. Or, ſaith a learned [g] Jew, it may be rendred with him, that is, with the Meſſiah before ſpoken of, as to denote, that they ſhould by him be ſet on work, and be employed under or with him in that work which he hath to do.

But this interpretation is neither by himſelf preferr'd, nor by others followed; however, it would alter nothing in the ſcope and meaning of the words: as neither will that much which is by [h] Some ſaid, That by the naming this number Shepherds and Princes, is ſignified, that this promiſed Meſſiah ſhould be a greater defence to them, than the help and force of ſeven Shepherds or Princes, which were Men, could be; ſo that it ſhall be abundantly ſufficient that they have him to oppoſe againſt all enemies, and in confidence of that they are introduced as ſuppoſing themſelves to have ſuch forces.

Theſe alſo, whoever be underſtood by them, it is ſaid that they ſhall waſte the land of Aſſyria with the ſword, &c.

They ſhall waſte. In the Margin of our Engliſh Bibles, is put, Heb. Eat up. The word רעו Raau, in the Hebrew is ſuch as may indifferently be deduced either from the word רעה Raah, to feed, feed on, or, eat up, or from רעע Raa, to break, and accordingly by ſome is taken in the one, by ſome in the other of thoſe notions. [i] Some therefore would have it rendred ſhall break (i. e. deſtroy or rule over with tyranny,) Others, ſhall feed, i. e. feed on, or eat up, i. e. likewiſe deſtroy; for [k] that feeding, which is for the good of the cattle that feed, is the deſtruction and conſuming of that which they feed on, or eat up.

So that the meaning here of the word as taken from either of thoſe roots, will be the ſame in effect, ſtill deſtruction, and is well expreſſed by our Tranſlators by the word waſte.

And the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof. In the Margin our Tranſlators read, or with their own naked ſwords. The word in the original, פתחיה Petacheah, being from the ſame root with פתחות Petechoth, Pſalm lv. 21. rendred drawn ſwords, and with פתחים Petachim, which ſignifies, doors, gates, or, entrances, makes Interpreters doubt which to take. Our Tranſlators, as loath to determine, put one in the text, the other in the margin.

If it be rendred ſwords, then to ſay with their own ſwords, will be as much as to ſay, they ſhall turn their own ſwords upon them, or conquer them with t[illegible] own weapons, ſuch as they find in their own [illegible], for the word with that affix which it hath put to it, will literally ſound, with the ſwords of it, that is, of their own land, and not with their ſwords, i. e. the ſwords of the conquerors; or elſe (as one [l] notes in a little different ſignification of the word, which he ſuppoſeth it to have) with the edges of that ſword mentioned, for ſo he thinks the word alſo to ſignify the mouth, or edges of the ſword. So as that the meaning may be, They ſhall deal with their land or with them according to their own dealings, ſo make uſe of the ſword toward them, as they have uſed it towards others. If it be rendred entrances, [m] then will the meaning be, that they ſhall conquer their land, and ſlay them in their own gates, and entrances of their own country.

Yet ſome of the Jews, who are for a literal interpretation of the words, and a fulfilling them accordingly, will not have it ſo far literally underſtood, as that they ſhould by virtue of what is ſaid, deſtroy and cut them off with the ſword; for, ſaith [n] one of them, the Prophet here promiſeth peace and not war, and therefore the meaning only is, that they ſhall openly and manifeſtly every where rule over them in their land and cities.

[o] Another of them ſaith, that by Swords here ſpoken of are to be underſtood thoſe puniſhments that ſhould come on them, viz. the Aſſyrians, from heaven by virtue of the prayers of Iſrael, according to what is ſaid, Iſaiah xxxi. then ſhall the Aſſyrian fall with the ſword, not of a mighty man, and the ſword not of a mean man ſhall devour him, &c. viz. becauſe he was deſtroyed by an Angel. So that though hence may ſeem to be concluded, that even after the coming of the Meſſiah there ſhall be wars, yet it is probable, that theſe ſeven ſhepherds and eight princes of men, ſhall have no need of uſing the ſword againſt Aſſur; ſo that [p] they themſelves here do not think that the literal ſignification of every word ought ſtrictly to be inſiſted on.

But according to that figurative acception of the words embraced by moſt Chriſtians, which we in the firſt place mentioned, the meaning will be evident, That by the might and power of Chriſt, and ſuch as ſhall be by him qualified and and commiſſioned for the ſpreading and maintaining of his truth, all that oppoſe it ſhall be brought under and made to yield as evidently, as when an enemy (ſuch as the Aſſyrian then was to Iſrael) is by many commanders and their forces beaten in his own country, and with his own weapons, forced from him and turned back upon himſelf, ſo that he ſhall not be able to create farther diſturbances.

[f] Jun. Tremel. Tarnov. De Dieu. [g] Kimchi. [h] Paræus, and ſee Diodati. [i] R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi. [k] R. Tanchum. [l] R. Tanchum. [m] Idem. [n] Abarbinel. [o] R. Tanchum. [p] R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel, and Chriſtian Interpreters.

And he ſhall deliver, i. e. the Meſſiah or ruler in Iſrael, Chriſt, by his own power, and the miniſtry of thoſe whom he ſhall qualify and employ for maintaining his truth and his peace, ſhall deliver us from the hands of ſuch enemies as ſhall aſſault us, that we ſhall not have need to fear them. They ([q] ſaith he that rendreth it recompence inſtead of peace, as we have ſeen) i. e. thoſe denoted by the ſeven ſhepherds and eight principal men, (ſo taking the verb here put in the ſingular number to ſtand for the plural הציל Hitſil, for הצילו Hitſilu,) ſhall deliver us from the Aſſyrian that invadeth us and maketh incurſions on us; or, that he may no more come, &c. [r] as Some. Thus may it ſeem convenient to take notice of the ſignification of ſome of the words, that ſo they may be adjuſted and accommodated to that expoſition which ſhall be embraced, as the ſcope ſhall direct and require. Our tranſlation renders, thus ſhall he deliver us, i. e. by theſe means: but that which they render thus, properly ſignifieth, and, and is ſo by moſt rendred, though the meaning will be one.

7. And the remnant of Jacob ſhall be in the midſt of many people, as a dew from the Lord, as the ſhowers upon the graſs, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the ſons of men.

8. ¶ And the remnant of Jacob ſhall be among the Gentiles, in the midſt of many people, as a lion among the beaſts of the foreſt, as a young lion among the flocks of ſheep, who if he go thorow, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

And the remnant of Jacob ſhall be, &c.] [s] A learned Jew maketh here a queſtion, whether theſe words are by reaſon of the note of connexion and, to be joined with the words immediately preceding, viz. (as he would have it rendred) and this ſhall be our peace, or, (as he rather thinks it ſhould be underſtood) and this ſhall be the reward of Aſſur, &c. and ſo to be underſtood of the happy condition, which they enjoyed after their return from their Babyloniſh captivity under the ſecond temple, or to be referr'd and bear reſpect to the other words that went before, viz. the ſixth verſe, and he ſhall ſtand and feed, &c. and ſo to be looked on as a promiſe, the fulfilling of which is yet to be expected, when their yet expected Meſſiah, ſhall be come: no inconvenience or abſurdity he thinks will be, to which ſoever it be applied.

This obſervation of his concerning the connexion of the words, it will not be amiſs to obſerve, becauſe among Chriſtian Expoſitors [t] there are Some, who interpret what is here ſaid, as to refer it to the Jews that returned from the Babyloniſh captivity, and their condition before Chriſt's coming: and if their opinion be followed, then perhaps will the connexion be more proper with the words immediately foregoing. Others, to the times of Chriſt after his coming in the fleſh: and then may they be referred to all, not from the fourth verſe only, but from the ſecond alſo in a continued ſeries, but with difference from what that Jew would have it, not as a promiſe which is not yet fulfilled, but which hath been already made good, and is ſtill in making good, and ſhall be ſo till Chriſt's coming again at the end of the world.

The remnant of Jacob, &c.] In chap. iv. 7. he promiſeth, that ſhe that halteth, or was afflicted, ſhould be made a remnant. By the remnant of Jacob here [u] Some underſtand thoſe that ſhould of them return from Babylon; [w] Others thoſe of them, that ſhould any where be left of them among the nations, and could not return home; [x] Others, thoſe of them that ſhould remain with God after they were tried or refined in the furnace of affliction, according to what he ſaith, Zech. xiii. 19. And will refine them as ſilver is refined. [y] Diverſe of Chriſtian Interpreters expound it of the Apoſtles, and apoſtolick men, and ſuch as ſhould ſucceed them in the church for propagating the knowledge of Chriſt and his goſpel. But probably this title may be extended to as many as the Lord ſhould call, to all to whom the Apoſtle ſaith the promiſe was, Acts ii. 39. That remnant which ſhould be ſaved, Rom. ix. 27. the remnant according to the election of grace, Rom. xi. 5. thoſe whom our Saviour calls his little flock, Luke xii. 32. by a title well anſwerable to this of remnant of Jacob, or in a word, to the whole church and true members thereof, which in reſpect to the many, that are out of it, are but a remnant, and that remnant a remnant of Jacob, though not all according to the fleſh ſprung from him (as the firſt of them who were called were) yet all by faith the Iſrael of God.

To this remnant (however taken) are here great promiſes made, and peculiar privileges attributed, and thoſe ſet forth under two ſimilitudes of differing nature in different reſpects, in one they being compared to dew, in the other to a lion. 1. They ſhall be in the midſt of many people, as the dew from the Lord, as the ſhowers upon the graſs, &c. Of theſe words are two ſomewhat different expoſitions given, the one of which maketh them a deſcription of the condition of that remnant of Jacob in reſpect to themſelves, how it ſhall be with them by

[q] R. Tanchum. [r] David Kimchi, Chaldee and Syriack. [s] R. Tanchum. [t] Grotius, Tirinus. [u] Grot. [w] Aben Ezra, Abarbinel, and ſee Pelican. [x] R. D. Kimchi. [y] Vatablus edit. 4to and 8vo, Ribera, Menoch. Chriſt. à Caſtro.

by the bleſſing of God; the other in reſpect to others, or how they ſhall be to others among whom they are; the firſt [z] attributing thoſe latter words, that tarrieth not for man, &c. as an epithet not to graſs, but to dew from the Lord and ſhowers upon the graſs, and maketh out the meaning to this purpoſe; That as the dew and bigger rain, which falleth on the graſs, is only from God, and [a] ſo diſpoſed of as he will, without man's help or diſpoſal, ſo the remnant of Jacob ſhall depend only on God, and his goodneſs, not on man's help or contrivance, or aſſiſtance, and by his help and bleſſing ſhall in the midſt of many people, many enemies encompaſſing and expoſing them, be yet preſerved and maintained, ſo as ſtill to ſubſiſt and wonderfully on encreaſe to the admiration of thoſe many that ſhall behold them. According to this expoſition it will not perhaps be amiſs (as a Divine of [b] great note obſerveth) by dew, or rain on graſs, to underſtand graſs, or fields of graſs, nouriſhed, or refreſhed by dew and rain, without the help and cultivation of men, by the ſole hand and bleſſing of God.

The ſecond way of expoſition is, by referring thoſe words that tarrieth not for man, to the graſs, by God's watering it with dew and rain from heaven, cheriſhed and cauſed to grow and flouriſh; and ſo the meaning will be, [c] that that bleſſed remnant ſhall be in the midſt of thoſe many people, among whom they are diſperſed, by whom they are entertained, and received, and hearkened to, as beneficial to them, as dew from the Lord, as ſhowers on the graſs, which cauſe them to grow, and flouriſh without the help of man; their doctrine ſhall drop on them as rain, their ſpeech diſtil as the dew, as the ſmall rain on the tender herbs, as the ſhowers on the graſs, Deut. xxxii. 2. ſo they by their heavenly doctrine and good example and communicating of ſpiritual bleſſings, ſhall cauſe them, who are otherwiſe as uncultivated herbs and plants, to grow in grace and flouriſh in the houſe of God, and bring forth fruit unto him only by his bleſſing, and not by any art of man; Or, (as [d] a learned Jew thinks the words may be expounded) without expecting reward from men. To which may be added perhaps not unfitly, that they ſhall be thus beneficial to all among whom they live, by drawing down God's bleſſings on them for their ſakes, as Laban confeſſed, that God bleſſed him for Jacob's ſake, Gen. xxx. 27. and by cooling and mitigating God's wrath, which otherwiſe would ſpeedily burn them up, if theſe were away, as the moiſtning dew and ſhowers preſerve the graſs and herbs from the ſcorching of the ſun (ſee Gen. xviii. 26, &c. and xix. 22. and Mat. xxiv. 22. Mark xiii. 20.) This may be looked on as comprehended in, though not the main intention of the words.

A Jewiſh [e] Doctor expounding theſe words in this manner alſo, viz. as deſcribing how the remnant ſpoken of ſhall be in behaviour towards theſe many people in the midſt of which they are, makes the meaning of them to be, That they ſhall be loving to, and deal kindly with, thoſe that deal courteouſly with them, and do good to them, as dew doth to the graſs, and that of their own good nature, without reſpect to profit or reward: to them, he means, and to them alone, being of contrary behaviour to others, as will appear by what he ſaith on the next words. And if this be all, that he thinks meant, ſurely he falleth far ſhort of ſhowing the duty and property of true Iſraelites (who by this remnant are meant) who are taught to do good to all men, Gal. vi. 10. to love not only thoſe that love them, but alſo even their enemies, and to do good to them that hate them, Mat. v. 44. that they may be children of their heavenly Father, who ſendeth rain on the juſt, and on the unjuſt. So muſt they be as the dew from the Lord, and as rain by him given in the midſt of many people, ſtriving to extend their good to all thoſe many, that as many as are capable of receiving good by them may receive it. Mean while he may ſuggeſt to us another property, which the comparing them to dew and ſhowers requires in them, viz. ſoftneſs and gentleneſs in their behaviour, in the midſt of thoſe, or amongſt thoſe, that will receive them, and hear them; which will the better bring us to the conſideration of what is meant in the ſecond ſimilitude, which is, that they ſhall be as a lion, &c. They, which ſhall be gentle and ſoft in their behaviour, as communicative of all good to thoſe that will receive the truth, ſhall againſt all that oppoſe it, though many and ſtrong, be of a lion-like courage, and by God be enabled with power to beat and tread down all before them, and prevail over them, ſo as none may reſiſt them, as a lion doth over the beaſts of the foreſt, and a young lion over the flocks of the ſheep. This their power may well be deſcribed by the words of the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. x. 4, 5, 6. in that by the weapons of their warfare, which are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, they caſt down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, and bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt: ſo hath Chriſt promiſed to them, a mouth and wiſdom, which all their adverſaries ſhall not be able to reſiſt, Luke xxi. 15. This was made good in the Apoſtles, and ſuch as have ſince ſucceeded them in their employment, and adminiſtration of Chriſt's kingdom, and others the true members thereof, and he will never leave his church deſtitute of a remnant of ſuch valiant defenders of the truth and conquerors (through the power of his Spirit) of what is contrary to it: though all the powers of hell join their forces againſt them, they ſhall diſperſe them.

[f] Some learned men refer what is here ſpoken to the times after the Babyloniſh captivity, and eſpecially eſpecially thoſe of the Maccabees, wherein the Jews under valiant commanders overcame diverſe ſtrong enemies, and with lion-like courage ſet on them and brought them under; which though it may be granted, and their victories looked on as a fulfilling what is here ſpoken in part, yet ſure it will appear to have been more evidently and fully made good ſince Chriſt's coming into the world, and ſetting up his ſpiritual kingdom among men by theſe conqueſts by his little flock obtained over the devil and the world, ſin and error, never ſo deeply rooted and ſtrongly backed, and all that may be comprehended under thoſe names by the Apoſtle given them, Eph. vi. 12. of principalities, powers, rulers of the darkneſs of this world, and ſpiritual wickedneſs in high places.

[z] R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel, Munſter, Grotius, Diodati. [a] Compare Pſalm cx. 3. and ſee Flac. Illyr. and Ravan. [b] Calvin. [c] Vatab. edit. 4to and 8vo, Ribera, Menoch. Dutch Notes, Chriſt. à Caſtro. [d] Abarbinel. [e] Abarbinel. [f] Tirin. Grot.

The conquering and diſperſing theſe (as by the church of Chriſt in the power of his might and invincible force of his Spirit hath been wonderfully done) and converting rebellious ſinners, are things of a higher nature, and ſigns of a greater ſtrength and courage, than any that is ſhewed in the conquering and deſtroying the greateſt and moſt potent nations that ever were on the earth, as to any temporal dominion or concerns, in as much as the bringing the minds of men into ſubjection is harder than the forcing their bodies. And ſure though God's remnant have promiſes of temporal things as well as of ſpiritual, yet where ſuch are mentioned as concern them as members of Chriſt's kingdom (as the things here ſpoken of from the ſecond verſe all along have been ſhewed to be) it is manifeſt, that they chiefly relate to their ſpiritual eſtate, the things thereto pertaining being the peculiar privileges of his church and flock as ſo, being a kingdom not of this world, and the happineſs of that and them being according to thoſe to be valued, whereby their dignity may be made appear not ſo much by their being great in this world, as their being great in the kingdom of heaven, and their prevalency not over temporal and carnal, but over ſpiritual enemies, which are worſe, and require a greater force than thoſe to ſubdue them; in the conquering of theſe is the ſtrength of the lion of the tribe of Judah chiefly ſeen.

[g] The Jew laſt cited ſaith, that as Iſrael ſhall deal kindly with thoſe that have ſhewed kindneſs to them, ſo on the contrary ſhall they deal with their enemies that have done ill to them, behaving themſelves towards ſome of them, to wit, the Aſſyrians, as a lion among the beaſts of the foreſts, killing whom they pleaſe; and towards others, viz. the Edomites, (ſo they call Romans or Chriſtians) to whom they have greateſt hatred, as a young lion among the flocks of ſheep, utterly deſtroying them, and ſuffering none to eſcape. You may ſee in them ſtill the leaven of their old doctrine in their falſe interpreting of the law, by Chriſt reproved, Mat. v. 43, 44. Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy; but the Jews generally [h] in expounding theſe words run on in their old error, which they will not retract, viz. that the things here ſpoken concern a time not yet come, viz. when thoſe nations by this man mentioned, or, (as others of them) when Gog and Magog ſhall come to fight againſt Jeruſalem; becauſe they will not acknowledge the Meſſiah, on whoſe coming the fulfilling of them depends, to be yet come: and again in that they expect them to be fulfilled, only in a groſs literal ſenſe, by a bloody maſſacre of their enemies with the edge of the material ſword. We may make uſe of them as for finding out the ſignification of the words, as in other places, ſo in ſuch paſſages of the Prophets alſo as concern Chriſt, his coming, and kingdom, and the privileges thereof; but as to the ſenſe in ſuch we muſt expect to have it as wide from the truth, as they can wreſt it, being obſtinately reſolved not to acknowledge him as yet come.

9. Thine hand ſhall be lift up upon thine adverſaries, and all thine enemies ſhall be cut off.

Thine hand ſhall be lift up, &c.] Thine hand (O remnant of Jacob.) That ſeemeth the neareſt perſon to be underſtood, Thou ſhalt have the upper hand or victory over all that oppoſe thee. Others refer it to God, Thy hand [i] O God, [k] or, O Chriſt: it will come all to one paſs; they doing what they do by the power of his might, and he being exalted and magnified in them by what they do by his power. What is to be underſtood here by the cutting off of the enemies [l] may be taken from the former verſe, they ſhall be cut off from being enemies, all (if underſtood of men) that makes them enemies to Chriſt, and his church, their ſins and errors taken out of the way. Some [m] of the Jews read, let thy hand be lift up, underſtanding the enemies as before, viz. adverſaries to denote the ſons of Eſau, and Iſmael, ſtill looking for what is ſpoken as yet to come, as we have ſaid.

10. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, ſaith the Lord, that I will cut off thy horſes out of the midſt of thee, and I will deſtroy thy chariots.

11. And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy ſtrong holds.

12. And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand, and thou ſhalt have no more ſoothſayers.

13. Thy graven images alſo will I cut off, and thy ſtanding images out of the midſt of thee: and thou ſhalt no more worſhip the work of thine hands.

And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, ſaith the Lord, &c.] Here, that the connexion of the words may appear, is queſtionable, what is the time deſigned by that day, and who the perperſon, or perſons here ſpoken to are. Some among [n] Chriſtians think, that the connexion is between theſe words and the firſt verſe, as if all coming between were a parentheſis, and that the day here ſpoken of is the ſame with that wherein the things there mentioned were to be made good, and that the perſon here ſpoken to is the ſame that there, namely, Babylon, and that what here follows are threats and comminations to her, anſwerable to thoſe things, that are elſewhere in Jeremy, and other Prophets threatned to her.

[g] Abarbinel. [h] R. D. Kimchi. [i] Druſius, Chriſt. à Caſtro. [k] Sa. Menoch. [l] See Hierom. Ribera and Tarnov. [m] Abarbinel.

[o] A learned Jew thinks the words to be coupled not with the promiſes immediately preceeding, but with the threats, that were before by our Prophet denounced againſt the Jews, and Iſraelites, as containing farther threats, and ſo the time to be the ſame, in which the things before in this prophecy threatned againſt them ſhall have effect by their enemies coming on them, and they ſtill the perſons ſpoken of and to, and the words alſo to have connexion with what followeth, chap. vi. 1. Hear ye now what the Lord ſaith.

But to Others both Jews and Chriſtians (the moſt of them) this breach ſeeming wider than ſo to reſume the connexion of the words; they refer what is now ſpoken to the words immediately preceding, and will have the time to be that wherein the things therein mentioned ſhould be fulfilled, and the perſons ſtill ſpoken to, Iſrael (or the remnant of Jacob) and the words, though ſeeming to have the form of a threat, yet to be indeed a gracious promiſe of that peace, and ſecurity, which they ſhall enjoy, and have no need of ſeeking other helps, ſuch as they and other nations then ordinarily made uſe of, but relying on God alone, and cleaving faithfully to him, ſhall find him all-ſufficient to them, [p] yea therefore will he take from them ſuch things, that they may learn to depend upon him: [q] ſo the Jews to this ſenſe, I will cut off thy horſes, &c. i. e. I will by giving thee firm and ſecure peace cauſe that thou ſhalt have no need of multiplying horſes, or chariots, or walled cities, or ſtrong holds: or, for fear of the enemies to fly to witchcrafts, and inchantments, or to ſoothſayers to direct thee when to fight with ſucceſs, nor for want of help in me to betake thy ſelf to idols, and to worſhip them. So that the cutting off, and deſtroying thoſe things to them, and depriving them of them, will be in their ſenſe the cutting off and deſtroying their enemies, the fear of whom made them formerly fly to them.

They do likewiſe cite their Chaldee Paraphraſe, who goeth in a different ſtrain, rendring, I will cut off the horſes of ſtrangers from among thee, and their chariots, and the cities of the people, and deſtroy all their ſtrong towers, and I will cut off alſo witches from amidſt thee, and thou ſhalt have no ſoothſayers, I will alſo cut off the images of the people, and their ſtatues out of the midſt of thee, and thou ſhalt no more ſerve the works of thine hands, and I will root out the plantations of the Gentiles from amidſt thee, and deſtroy thine enemies. This paraphraſe [r] they cite, as in confirmation of their own expoſitions; with which it agreeth indeed as to that, which they make the ſcope in general, to denote, that they ſhall enjoy peace and ſecurity, and truſt in God, and ſerve him alone; but in this, much differs from it and from the text, in that what is attributed according to them, to Iſrael, is in it attributed to their enemies, their horſes called their enemies horſes, of which they give no reaſon; perhaps they might think they meant Iſrael themſelves, tho' in reſpect to them they inſtead of their name put in their enemies, &c. leſt the words, that ſeemed to import ill unto them, might be joined with it, as elſewhere [s] by the enemies of David they will have to be underſtood David, as 1 Sam. xxv. 22. and by the enemies of the Lord, the Lord himſelf, 2 Sam. xii. 14. making there the meaning to be, thou haſt provoked the Lord, whereas the letter ſounds the enemies of the Lord.

But a [t] Chriſtian Interpreter makes farther uſe of the Paraphraſt's expreſſion, viz. for confirmation of his opinion, that theſe things here ſpoken belong to the times after Chriſt, and that the perſons ſpoken to are not only thoſe of Iſrael, but of all other nations, that ſhould be converted to Chriſt, becauſe elſe an objection might be made againſt it, for that after the return from the Babyloniſh captivity, and when Chriſt came, and ſince, the Jews were not guilty of idolatrous worſhips and witchcrafts, &c. that they ſhould be promiſed to have them cut off from them, and that therefore the words cannot be looked on as a promiſe of good to them, and therefore that the horſes and cities, and witchcrafts, and idols, are to be underſtood of ſuch as were among other nations, who were to be converted to Chriſt, and ſo be made the remnant, and Iſrael of God, i. e. that thoſe things in which they did before truſt, and ſo hardly receive the goſpel, he would now take away, or at leaſt make them no longer to be the cauſe of their reſiſting the goſpel, but that all ſhould yield and give place to it. But though that which he ſaith be true as to the main, viz. that God's Iſrael comprehends as well the Gentiles that were to be called into Chriſt's church, as the Jews, and that there were among the Jews no idols, or idol worſhip at Chriſt's coming, and that this promiſe was to be fulfilled as well to the believing Gentiles as Jews, yet that there is need to interpret the words therefore, as if by the things named were to be underſtood thoſe among the Gentiles, becauſe at Chriſt's coming no ſuch were among the Jews, or that the Chaldee Paraphraſt meant them of thoſe, is neither evident, or need to be inſiſted on, or ſcrupled at, becauſe the Prophet ſeems to ſpeak of things as they were in thoſe times when when he ſpake, and to ſay that in future time, when God would fulfil his word here ſpoken by the Prophet, he would cauſe that it ſhould be otherwiſe; they whom he ſpeaks of ſhould not make uſe of or confide in ſuch things as they now did. That in the Prophets time ſuch things were among the Jews, and they peccant in forſaking God to rely on them, appears by what is ſaid in the Prophet Iſaiah who was contemporary with Micah, Iſaiah ii. 6, &c. Therefore thou haſt forſaken thy people the houſe of Jacob, becauſe they be repleniſhed from the Eaſt and are ſoothſayers, &c. Their land alſo is full of horſes, neither is there any end of their chariots, their land alſo is full of idols, they worſhip the work of their own hands.

[n] Grot. and ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro, and Stokes. [o] R. Tanchum, ſo Cyril. Alexand. [p] Calvin, Druſius. [q] R. Sol. Jarchi, Ab. Ezra, R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel, and R. Tanchum mentioneth this way of interpreting though he approveth it not. [r] R. D. Kimchi. [s] Kimchi. R. Tanch. &c. See Kimchi de Rad. in עור. [t] Ribera; and ſee Sa. Menoch. and Tirinus.

Where we ſee are reckoned up ſuch things, as are here mentioned, and their ſin ſhewed to be their relying on and pleaſing themſelves in them to the neglect of God and his ways; ſo that well may here be underſtood that he ſaith, that for the future, the time here pointed at, he would cauſe that it ſhould not be ſo with them, (and hence by the way may be taken another conjecture why the Chaldee Paraphraſt ſhould inſtead of thy horſes and chariots, &c. put the horſes of ſtrangers, &c. viz. becauſe theſe things they had from other people. (So [u] Some expound thy horſes, i. e. the help of Egypt which thou relieſt on to furniſh thee with horſes) or learned the uſe of them from other people, and uſed them as they did. But we need not be much inquiſitive after his meaning, that being to be reduced to the text, and not the text to that. Meanwhile, that theſe words are to be looked on, as a promiſe for good to thoſe whom they concern, viz. a promiſe of peace and ſecurity in God alone, and encouragement to rely on him alone, without dependence on any human helps or ways, rather than a menace of evil to thoſe ſpoken to, we may well be inclined to think by the application of much the like words to the peaceable condition of the kingdom of Chriſt, [w] Zech. ix. 10. I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horſe from Jeruſalem, and the battle bow ſhall be cut off, and he ſhall ſpeak peace unto the Heathen.

14. And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midſt of thee: ſo will I deſtroy thy cities.

And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midſt of thee.] Of what uſe conſecrated groves were anciently, in the times of idolatry, we may eaſily perceive out of the ancienteſt records, viz. the books of Moſes, as Exod. xxxiv. 13. where Iſrael being forbidden to make any covenant with the Amorites and Canaanites, and other idolatrous nations, are commanded to deſtroy their altars, break down their images, and cut down their groves (as wherein they worſhipped, or did honour to their idols) as appears again, Deut. xii. 2, 3. Ye ſhall utterly deſtroy all the places wherein the nations, which ye ſhall poſſeſs, ſerved their gods, upon the high mountains and upon the hills, and under every green tree, and you ſhall overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire. So we read that Iſrael ſerved Baalim and the groves, Judges iii. 7. and again, chap. vi. 25, 28. we read of Baal's grove; and the Iſraelites to keep them from idolatry are commanded not to plant a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the Lord their God, Deut. xvi. 21. notwithſtanding which command, as Iſrael afterwards fell to idolatry, ſo they fell alſo to planting of groves to the honour of idols, and worſhipping them in them. So Maacah the mother of Aſa, made an idol in a grove, 1 Kings xv. 13. And Ahab ſetting up the worſhip of Baal made a grove, 1 Kings xvi. 33. and had his Prophets of the groves, chap. xviii. 19. ſo of the grove in Samaria we have mention, 2 Kings xiii. 6. and that the Iſraelites doing things that were not right againſt the Lord, ſet them up images and groves, ibid. chap. xvii. 9, 10. and made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove, ver. 16. and that Judah left the Lord their God, and ſerved groves and idols, 2 Chron. xxiv. 18. by comparing which and like places will here eaſily be underſtood what is meant when he ſaith, He will pluck up their groves, viz. that he will take away thoſe parts of idolatry alſo, whether the words be taken with ſome as directed to the Chaldeans, or with others to the Iſraelites, the uſe of groves in the worſhip of their idols having been common to both.

So will I, (or and I will, for ſo in the Hebrew) deſtroy the cities. In the Margin is put, or enemies, and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt takes it. The word עריך Áreca, in the Hebrew, ſignifieth both theſe, cities, and enemies, and ſo is that meaning to be given to it, which the ſenſe of the place requires, or ſhows to be moſt convenient. Here therefore according to their ſeveral judgments ſome take one, and ſome the other. It is not unfitly obſerved by a [x] learned Jew, that if here the words be taken as a menace, or denouncing evil, then it muſt neceſſarily to make congruous ſenſe be rendred cities, but if it be taken as a prediction of good, then it may be rendred either way. To what may be ſaid, that it is not here to be taken for cities (though diverſe Interpreters ſo take it) becauſe he had before ſaid, I will cut off the cities of thy land, ver. 11. ſome anſwer, that [y] there are meant cities of defence, here cities of idolatrous worſhip, in which were their groves and idols temples.

15. And I will execute vengeance in anger, and fury upon the Heathen, ſuch as they have not heard.

And I will execute vengeance upon the Heathen ſuch as they have not heard.] On that former expoſition of moſt Chriſtians, which interpret the preceding words from ver. 10. as a promiſe of good unto the church and believers, this will kindly follow, as ſhowing how how much contrary it ſhall be with ſuch as receive not his doctrine and refuſe to obey. Having ſo diſpoſed of things for the good and ſecurity of his ſubjects, on his enemies he will execute vengeance. But then moſt of them render the laſt words which have not heard, or will not hear, hearken to his word, or doctrine, or becauſe they would not hear the law, ſaith the Chaldee, the preaching of the goſpel, ſay Chriſtians, and ſo refer the relative which to the Heathen. But the words are capable of that rendring which Ours give, and is by [z] Some others alſo approved, by referring it to the vengeance ſpoken of, viz. which or ſuch as they have not heard of.

[u] R. Solomon. [w] See R. Sol. and R. D. Kimchi on that place. [x] R. Tanch. [y] Chriſt. à Caſtro. See Ab. Ezra.

That [a] Jew which (as we ſaw) takes the foregoing words as a threat againſt Iſrael, on the Jews here doth not take גוים Goim, (nations, or people) for the Heathen, but for the people of Iſrael, or thoſe nations and people, (viz. Iſrael and Judah,) that God would take vengeance on them for their refuſing to hearken to him, making it a continuation of the commination.

That [b] other Jew which expounded Iſrael's being as dew, &c. of their being kind and profitable to them that dealt kindly with them, expounds this, that God will ſeverely puniſh thoſe that would not hearken to them to pity and ſhow kindneſs to them. Such as make the Babylonians or Chaldeans the perſons ſpoken to, and here threatned with deſtruction: by thoſe [c] that will not hear, underſtand ſuch of thoſe nations under that empire as ſhould oppoſe Cyrus, and refer to Iſaiah xlv. 1, &c.

There is another [d] Tranſlation of great note, which making the words from the tenth verſe to the end, a promiſe of good by Chriſt to his Church, gives yet a different conſtruction of them from what we have ſeen, viz. For it ſhall be in that day, ſaith the Lord, when I ſhall have cut off thy horſes out of the midſt of thee, &c. (i. e. have much afflicted thee, and ſo purged thee from thy wicked doings and the inſtruments thereof) that I will deſtroy thy adverſaries, and execute vengeance on the nations which have not heard. But this conſtruction ſeems much more harſh, than that which is commonly received, and by Ours given; although Ours ſeem to expreſs much the ſame that thoſe Tranſlators would have, by putting ver. 14. So will I deſtroy, inſtead of what Others put, and I will deſtroy, eſpecially if, as in the Margin, we read, their enemies.

CHAP. VI.

VERSE 1. Hear ye now what the Lord ſaith, Ariſe, contend thou before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

2. Hear ye, O mountains, the Lord's controverſy, and ye ſtrong foundations of the earth: for the Lord hath a controverſy with his people, and he will plead with Iſrael.

HEAR ye now what the Lord ſaith, &c.] Although it be not neceſſary perhaps to ſeek for a connexion between every chapter, or all other paſſages in the books of the Prophets, in as much as they ſpake them at ſeveral times, and ſo when they committed them to writing, ſet them down as they were ſpoken, without neceſſary dependence of every part one on another, and ſo this might be looked on, as [a] a new addreſs (as the Prophet was by the Spirit moved,) to the People: yet of the coherence between it and the foregoing parts of this prophecy, we may not unfitly take an hint from a Jewiſh [b] Doctor to this purpoſe; that whereas God had ſometimes threatned to them heavy judgments to the deſtruction both of Samaria and Jeruſalem, Iſrael and Judah, and then again given them gracious promiſes, of victory over their enemies, and great tranquillity and proſperity, leſt any ſhould thence take occaſion to ſuſpect, that his ways were not equal, and he not conſtant in his purpoſes, but various and changeable, one while intending and declaring one thing, then another, and repenting him at one time of what he had ſaid or done at another; he here bids the Prophet to declare the methods of his proceedings to them, by rehearſing what he had done for them, and their forefathers, and what juſt things no way grievous were required of them, and how they behav'd themſelves towards him, and laying open what tranſgreſſions they were guilty of, that ſo it may appear, that he was always inclin'd to mercy and to do them good, but that they by the unequal temper of their behaviour, and perverſe rebellious carriage, provoked him to uſe ſeverity towards them, and to deal with them in judgment, that he might not ſeem a patronizer of wickedneſs; the cauſe was from themſelves and not from any inconſtancy in him, the change in them, not in him, who was ſtill the ſame, the Lord, the Lord God merciful and gracious, &c. but that will by no means clear the guilty, &c. Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7.

For making this evident therefore, the Prophet thus begins and beſpeaks them, Hear ye now, ye people of Judah and Iſrael, what the Lord ſaith, &c. The Lord ſaith it, and therefore it requires their due attention, the Lord ſaith unto him, Ariſe, (O Micah) contend thou before the mountains, &c. The Margin hath, with the mountains, for ſo the particle את Eth, more uſually ſignifies, but it is by the Hebrew [c] Grammarians obſerv'd here to denote as much as אל El, to, or before, in preſence of the mountains. The mountains and hills (ſaith a [d] learned Jew) are dead inanimate things, and cannot be guilty of ſin, why then ſhould he reprove them? The ſenſe then muſt be (ſaith he) rebuke and reprove the ſin of this people with ſuch vehemence, publickly, and with ſo high a voice, that even thoſe inſenſible creatures the mountains and hills may hear it; as much as to ſay, Contend with or rereprove this people in the preſence of the mountains, and that ſo loudly and vehemently, as if thou would'ſt make even thoſe things, that have no ſenſe of hearing, the very hills, to hear thy voice.

[z] Calvin, Druſius. [a] R. Tanchum. [b] Abarb. [c] Grot. [d] Jun. and Tremel. [a] Grot. [b] Abarbinel. [c] R. David Kimchi. [d] Abarb.

[e] Some render, with the mountains, and let theſe hills hear, i. e. thoſe of Judæa that mountanous country: and then the mountains and hills may be taken for [f] the inhabitants of them. [g] Others think them cited as if they were guilty, becauſe on them they worſhipped idols and committed abominations. Others again [h] both Jews and Chriſtians, by mountains and hills take the princes and great ones to be meant, as ſometimes in ſcripture they are by thoſe names deſigned, and then the particle with, muſt in its uſual ſenſe be underſtood, (but the controverſy ſeems more general with all people.) The Chaldee Paraphraſe is cited by the [i] Jewiſh Expoſitors as rendring mountains by fathers, and hills by mothers; as if he ſhould call on Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and Sarah, Rebeccah, Leah and Rachel, in their graves, to hear how ill they had requited the Lord for all his goodneſs ſhewed to them, (and ſo in ſome [k] Editions of the Chaldee it is read: but in others, and thoſe more common, otherwiſe, viz. mountains and hills, as in the Hebrew.)

But there is no need of taking mountains and hills in any other than their proper ſignification, [l] it being agreeable to the language of the Scripture [m] elſewhere, when God ſpeaketh, or any thing is ſpoken from him, and in his Name, the more to affect the hearts of men, and make what is ſpoken to ſink into them and be attended to, to call in heaven and earth and lifeleſs inſenſible creatures as witneſſes againſt them, and judges between God and them, for the ſolemnity of the matter, and to ſhow the juſtneſs of what he doth or ſaith, and how more ſenſeleſs and ſtupid they are in not hearkning and obeying than any of thoſe lifeleſs creatures, which obey all his will as readily as if they had ears and were of quickeſt hearing. As they ſpeak loudly without voice to declare [n] the glory of God, and witneſs to his truth, ſo do they hear without ears when the Lord ſpeaks. Iſrael therefore refuſing to hearken to the Lord, out of theſe doth he raiſe up ſuch as ſhall hearken to him, and call on them ſo to do.

Hear ye, O mountains, the Lord's controverſy, and ye ſtrong foundations of the earth. Inſtead of hills in the firſt verſe, here in the ſecond verſe is put ye ſtrong foundations of the earth (or, ye ſtrong ones the foundations of the earth:) ſo are the mountains and hills called, as the ſtrongeſt and firmeſt parts of the earth, and therefore [o] likened to the pillars or foundations thereof. [p] They that by mountains underſtand the kings and princes of the world, ſeem by theſe to underſtand their deputies and magiſtrates, who do as it were ſuſtain the pillars thereof, Pſalm lxxv. 3. But it ſeems moſt convenient, as declaring the majeſty of God, to retain (as we ſaid) the proper ſignification of the words, mountains and hills.

Theſe being ſummoned (as fit witneſſes for their conſtancy and ſtability) to hear, he declares what they are called on to hear, viz. the Lord's [q] controverſy with his people, and his impleading them for matters between him and them. He that is ſovereign Lord of all, and cannot do any unjuſt thing, nor could be accuſed of injuſtice in doing what he will with his own, much leſs in puniſhing them who have done otherewiſe than they ſhould, in rebelling againſt him and tranſgreſſing his commandments, yet with wonderful condeſcenſion, puts himſelf as it were on equal terms with this rebellious people, and [r] chuſing rather to manifeſt his juſtice and equity than the right and power of his dominion, calleth in all creatures to be witneſſes and judges between himſelf and them, of the juſtneſs and even neceſſity of his proceeding with them. That he may before all be juſtified in what he ſpeaks, and [s] cleared in his judging (or contending) even themſelves being judges, he gives in his reaſons, and calls on them to give in theirs, or any arguments they can produce for themſelves in their behalf, according to what he elſewhere ſaith, Iſaiah xliii. 26. let us plead (or [t] let us be judged) together, declare thou, that thou may'ſt be juſtified; if thou haſt any thing whereby thou mayeſt juſtify thy ſelf, produce it, and let it be heard.

3. O my people, what have I done unto thee, and wherein have I wearied thee? teſtify againſt me.

O my people, what have I done unto thee, &c.] Thus he begins his plea with them, by calling on them to produce what exceptions they have againſt him and his ſervice; for their forſaking it might ſeem to import, as if he had ill treated them, and been an hard maſter to them. He bids them therefore, if they have any thing to ſay for themſelves againſt him in that kind, to produce it. O my people, what have I done unto thee, and wherein have I wearied thee? [u] Some for explication add, What evil have I done unto thee? viz. that thou ſhouldſt thus behave thy ſelf towards me, as thou doſt: Wherein have I wearied thee? What commands have I given thee, or what have required to be done of thee, the doing of which might be a trouble and weariſomneſs unto thee? becauſe they were apt to ſay, What a wearineſs is it? Mal. i. 13. So that to this expreſſion, will be agreeable what we have in the New Teſtament, His commandments are not grievous, 1 John v. 3. and what our Saviour ſaith, Mat. xi. 30. My yoke is eaſy and my burden light.

Others much [w] differently expound the firſt words, not underſtanding evil, but good, What, [e] Jun. Trem. [f] Grot. [g] A. Lapide, Tirin. Tarnov. [h] R. Tanchum, Vatab. Ribera. [i] R. D. Kimchi. Abarb. and ſee R. Tanchum, and R. Solom. [k] See Bib. Reg. Buxt. Polyglot, &c. [l] Ainſw. in Deut. xxxii. 1. [m] Iſaiah i. 2. Micah i. 2. [n] Pſalm xix. 3. Luke xix. 40. Hoſea ii. 21. [o] Compare Deut. xxxii. 22. and Pſalm xviii. 7. [p] Abarb. [q] See Hoſea iv. 1. [r] Grot. Pelican. [s] Pſalm li. 4. [t] Vulg. Lat. [u] Aben Ezra, R. D. Kimchi. [w] R. Solomon, Abarbinel.

What, i. e. how much, good have I done unto thee? how great mercies ſhew'd to thee? And then the following words much as before: and wherein I have wearied thee by my commandments, what trouble thou haſt been put to in doing them, teſtify thou and declare. The Chaldee paraphraſeth the former part of the verſe, what good have I ſaid that I would do to thee, and have not done it? which meaning may agree with either of the foregoing: and the latter part thus, and what hard [or grievous] infirmity have I multiplied upon thee? [x] as if he had reſpect to his preſerving them continually in health in all their travel through the deſert: and ſo ſome Others underſtand this, not ſo much of God's not wearying them with his commandments, as of his [y] not having in any kind put them to hardſhip and difficulties in their coming out of Egypt, and travel in the deſart, through which he bare them as on eagles wings, Exod. xix. 4. and Deut. xxxii. 11, &c. and led them through the deep as an horſe in the wilderneſs, that they ſhould not ſtumble, Iſaiah lxiii. 13, &c.

But the firſt of theſe expoſitions, as to the whole verſe ſeems more naturally to flow from the words, and may be compar'd with and confirmed by what he ſaith, Jer. ii. 5. What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone from me? &c. and ver. 31. Have I been a wilderneſs unto Iſrael, and a land of darkneſs? the meaning of which a [z] learned Jew thus gives, Have I put upon them any great difficulty, or burdened them with any hard command, that they are fled from mine obedience?

Teſtify againſt me.] He challengeth them to produce their grievances, if they have any againſt him, before thoſe mountains and hills ſummoned in to witneſs between them. If they have no ſuch things on their part to produce, he hath his great benefits conferred on them and their forefathers, by which he deſerved and might juſtly challenge their faithful obedience, to produce on his part: which therefore, to convince them of their great ingratitude, he proceedeth to recite.

4. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the houſe of ſervants, and I ſent before thee Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam.

5. O my people, remember now what Balak King of Moab conſulted, and what Balaam the ſon of Beor anſwered him from Shittim unto Gilgal, that ye may know the righteouſneſs of the Lord.

For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, &c.] For the particle כי Ci, ſo rendred, [a] Others render otherwiſe, as, 1. When, 2. But, ſurely, 3. Although, and the like: but the coherence is by none made plainer than by reading it For, as it plainly ſignifies.

I brought thee up, &c. and redeemed thee out of the houſe of ſervants, i. e. out of the houſe or place of [b] ſervitude or bondage, where thou wert a ſervant. The words are the very ſame, that are uſed in the preface of the ten commandments, both Exod. xx. and Deut. v. and there rendred the houſe of bondage, and hath the ſame meaning here.

Diverſe [c] both Jews and Chriſtians mention here another reaſon of this appellation of houſe of ſervants, viz. that Egypt may be called ſo in reſpect of the Egyptians themſelves, who were inheritors of that curſe laid on their forefather Cham, and his ſon Canaan, that he ſhould be a ſervant of ſervants unto his brethren, Gen. ix. 25. But this (however otherwiſe true) ſeems here rather a nicety not much to be inſiſted on, [d] though this may ſeem to heighten the greatneſs of the benefit of his redeeming them thence, where they were in moſt vile bondage and low condition, ſervants to ſervants.

And I ſent before thee Moſes, Aaron and Miriam.] The Chaldee thus paraphraſeth theſe words, And I ſent before thee three Prophets, Moſes to teach the tradition, (or way, ſo I ſuppoſe מסירה Meſirah, rather is, than tradition which is מסורה Maſorah) of judgments, i. e. to give them laws; Aaron to make propitiation for the people; and Miriam to inſtruct the women. (Aaron hath the title of Prophet given him, Exod. vii. 1. and Miriam of a Propheteſs, Exod. xv. 20. where ſhe went before the women in ſinging praiſes to the Lord for their deliverance from the Egyptians; and they both ſeem to challenge that title, as belonging to them, as well as unto Moſes, Num. xii. 2.) Theſe he ſaith he ſent before them, i. e. gave them for guides to them to go before them, to conduct, inſtruct, lead, and aſſiſt them, both in their going forth of Egypt, and in their paſſage through the wilderneſs.

[e] Some by his ſaying, that he ſent them before them, underſtand, that he before hand, before their going forth out of Egypt, ſent them to give them the joyful news of their deliverance, and prepare them for it. Theſe being both true, and the word comprehending both, both may be looked upon as meant, to the minding them of all thoſe benefits, that God made theſe three his inſtruments of conferring on the Iſraelites, from the firſt beginning of his great work of his redemption of them out of Egyptian bondage, as long as they continu'd together amongſt them, which was even till the time of the next great work or benefit here particularly mentioned, viz. what concerns the ſtory of Balak and Balaam, and ſo all from their firſt moving to come out of Egypt, until they came to Shittim, all God's wonderful works and mercies towards them, as in the books of Moſes recorded; for before what is mentioned of Balak, Miriam died, Num. xx. 2. and ſo did Aaron, Num. xx. 28.

The putting them in mind therefore of what was done as well after their deceaſe as before, is uſhered uſhered in with a new addreſs, O my people, remember now what Balak King of Moab conſulted, &c. conſulted, i. e. [f] what counſel he took, viz. how he might by any means bring about their deſtruction. The ſtory of what was agitated betwixt Balak [g] King of Moab, and Balaam the [h] Soothſayer is recorded, Num. xxii. xxiii. xxiv. Balak finding himſelf unable to accompliſh his deſigns on Iſrael by force of arms, thought to do it by bringing God's curſe upon them, for which end he ſends for Balaam (who it ſeems had then the repute of an holy man and great Prophet) to come and curſe them, for I wot, ſaith he, that he whom thou bleſſeſt is bleſſed, and he whom thou curſeſt is curſed, Num. xxii. 6.

[x] See Deut. vii. 15. viii. 4. Exod. xv. 26. [y] Ch. à Caſtro. [z] R. Tanchum. [a] 1. Jun. Trem. 2. Kimch. 3. R. Solom. Jar. [b] Chald. Greek, &c. [c] Kimchi, Abarb. Vatabl. and others. [d] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [e] R. D. Kimchi.

How willing Balaam was to have complied with him in this pernicious deſign, is manifeſt by his carriage in the relation of the hiſtory, but God would not ſuffer either of them to have their will. Balak hired againſt Iſrael Balaam to curſe them, nevertheleſs the Lord their God would not hearken unto Balaam, but turned the curſe into a bleſſing unto them, Deut. xxiii. 4, 5. Joſhua xxiv. 10. Whenſoever by building altars and offering ſacrifice he ſought to procure a curſe againſt them, the meſſage that was put into his mouth to return to Balak was a bleſſing, which he could not chuſe but utter. So that he being forced to it ſaid, how ſhall I curſe whom God hath not curſed, or how ſhall I defy whom the Lord hath not defied? Num. xxiii. 9. and, behold I have received commandment to bleſs, and he hath bleſſed, and I cannot reverſe it, ver. 20. He confeſſed that no inchantment could prevail againſt Iſrael, ver. 23. and in fine, therefore inſtead of curſing them, plainly pronounceth bleſſings upon them, and curſes and deſtruction to thoſe who would have had them curſed and deſtroyed, Num. xxiv. 15, &c. So that Balak's deſign in getting Balaam to curſe Iſrael [i] ſeems that which is intimated by, remember what Balak conſulted; and Balaam's bleſſing them inſtead of curſing them, that referred to by thoſe words, and what Balaam the ſon of Beor anſwered him.

But there is one thing more in that hiſtory to be taken notice of for the fuller underſtanding of what is here ſpoken, and that is, that though Balaam could not by his curſes prevail to hurt Iſrael, yet he ſought and taught Balak by another way to attempt it, viz. by ſeducing them to do that, which if done by them ſhould certainly pull down God's curſe on them, viz. fornication and idolatry. [k] This is by Some thought to be intimated in what he ſaith to Balak, Num. xxiv. 14. I will advertiſe or counſel thee. But though no ſuch counſel is there more fully expreſt, yet it is afterwards, chap. xxxi. 16. where Moſes reproving the people for ſaving alive the Midianitiſh women, ſaith, behold, theſe cauſed the children of Iſrael through the counſel of Balaam, to commit treſpaſs againſt the Lord in the matter of Peor, to which alſo reference is made, Rev. ii. 14. where 'tis ſaid that Balaam taught Balak to caſt a ſtumbling block before the children of Iſrael, to eat things ſacrificed to idols, and to commit fornication. That counſel of his is there called the doctrine of Balaam, and that may, not perhaps unfitly, be here included in what Balaam anſwered to Balak, as calling to mind, as a great ſin of their forefathers, ſo together a ſignal mercy of God, in not ſuffering that counſel to prevail to the utter deſtruction of them, but to end in the puniſhment of part of them only (viz. twenty-four thouſand, Num. xxv. 9.)

And this [l] Some look on as chiefly here referred to, joining with theſe words the following, namely, from Shittim to Gilgal, making the meaning thus to be, And what pernicious council Balaam gave for working miſchief to them in their paſſage betwixt Shittim and Gilgal, viz. that in all that way (as far as his dominions extended) he ſhould ſend into the camp of Iſrael of the faireſt of his women, to entice them to fornication, and conſequently to idolatry; that ſo by that means, which he could not do by any inchantments, he might prevail to bring God's curſe upon them: which counſel if it had taken effect, had certainly done what he intended. For being begun to be practis'd in Shittim, we ſee how it provoked God to ſend a plague among the people to the deſtruction of twenty-four thouſand, Num. xxv. 9. and had it been ſeconded or continued in their further march toward Gilgal, had probably brought deſtruction on the whole people before they could arrive there, but was defeated by God's ſo timely taking notice of it, and by the early puniſhment of thoſe that were at firſt ſeduced, and afterwards by the [m] cutting off the Midianitiſh women, who were intended to be a ſnare to them. So that the plot was dangerouſly on Balaam's part laid, and God's great mercy in defeating it was very conſpicuous, and worthy to be had in remembrance.

But Others do otherwiſe expound theſe words, [n] ſome taking by the words, from Shittim to Gilgal, to be denoted the ſeveral ſtations to which Balak took Balaam, that he might view the camp of Iſrael, and curſe them, (viz. thoſe named, Num. xxii. 41. and xxiii. 14, 28.) but [o] thoſe places were not between Shittim and Gilgal, but eaſtward of Shittim to the weſt of which Gilgal was: and if it be ſaid, that it is meant, that thence he might ſee their camp, as it lay between Shittim and Gilgal, it will be again anſwered, that the camp then [p] pitched in the plains of Moab, did not reach farther than Shittim, nor ſeems to have been extended farther towards Gilgal.

Others therefore, [q] both Jews and Chriſtians, disjoining the words, from Shittim unto Gilgal from theſe, and what Balaam anſwered him, and repeating the word, remember, as again having influence on theſe, thus ſupply the ſenſe; And remember thoſe things which I did for thee in the way from Shittim to Gilgal, from [f] Abarb. [g] Num. xxii. 4. [h] Joſhua xiii. 22. Num. xxxiv. 16. [l] Ribera, Menochius, Tirinus. Caſtro, and Ribera. [p] Num. xxii. 1. and xxv. 1.

[i] Ab. Ezra, R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel. [k] Ainſ. on [m] Num. xxxi. 17. [n] Tanchum. [o] See Ch. à from Shittim in the plains of Moab eaſt of Jordan, where they ſinned, (in the matter of Peor, Num. xxv. 3, 18.) and deſerved all to be cut off, had not God been merciful to them, unto Gilgal on the other ſide of Jordan in the promiſed land. [r] At Shittim they abode till after Moſes's death. From thence after Moſes's death Joſhua conducted them over Jordan (the waters of which were, as formerly the waters of the Red Sea under the conduct of Moſes, miraculouſly divided to let them paſs through as on dry land) unto Gilgal, where they firſt encamped in, and took firm poſſeſſion of that promiſed land, which ever ſince they had enjoy'd: and there God renewed his covenant with them by renewing circumciſion, which had been omitted in their journeyings through the wilderneſs, and ſo rolled away from off them the reproach of Egypt; for which cauſe the place had its name Gilgal, (which ſignifieth rolling.) Joſh. v. 9.
[q] R. D. Kimchi, Munſter, Vatablus, Grotius, Abarbinel.

So that as in the former words they are put in mind of all the great things, that God did for them under the conduct of Moſes, and in his time, ſummed up, Joſh. xxiv. 6, &c. ſo in theſe of thoſe under the conduct of Joſhua and after his death: and ſo, in ſumm, of all that he did from his firſt beginning to redeem them from bondage, and bringing them out of Egypt through the Red Sea, through the deſert and through Jordan, till he had ſettled them in the promiſed land: and ſo conſequently of all that he did afterwards for them there, in driving out of their enemies and ſettling them in it till this very time, wherein they had ſo far provoked him by their unthankful and rebellious behaviours, that he thought of caſting them again out of it, and threatned by the mouths of this and other Prophets ſo to do, except they ſhould prevent it by ſerious and ſpeedy repentance, and new obedience, which all the Prophets, calling on them in his name, could not perſwade them to.

All theſe things with the notorious circumſtances attending them, and variety of tranſactions, whereby God manifeſted his infinite wiſdom, power, juſtice, mercy, and truth, in his miraculous preſervation of them, and deſtruction of, and defeating the counſels of their enemies, in his puniſhing them ſometimes for their rebellions, yet in great mercy ſparing and preſerving the main body of them, and not ſuffering any good promiſe, that he had made to their fathers to fail, till he had fulfilled all, do theſe comprehenſive heads of the ſtory expreſſed put them in mind of. There was no need of reciting all particulars, they being things that they could not be ignorant of, being recorded in the books of the law and Joſhua, and by mouth from the fathers, (according to God's command) all along from the time that they were firſt done, related to them; only they laid them not to heart, to make that uſe of them as they ought to have done, thence to take occaſion of continued thankfulneſs, expreſſed in faithful adherence and obedience to God; ſo that they might juſtly be thought and ſaid to have forgotten them: and therefore are by a brief mention of theſe main heads put in mind of them, and bid to remember them, that ſo they might know the righteouſneſs of the Lord.

Righteouſneſs.] צדקות Righteouſneſſes; a word of latitude, according to ſeveral acts in which [s] righteouſneſs ſhews it ſelf, as of giving or doing what is right and juſt, uprightneſs in dealing, juſtice in judgments, and in diſpenſing puniſhments, and rewards, mercy, and beneficence, fidelity, and veracity, and juſtneſs in a cauſe: and to all 'tis appliable according as the place where it is uſed requires, and is here therefore indifferently interpreted by [t] Expoſitors; Some, his juſt dealings in all matters betwixt Iſrael and their enemies, and in what concerned them among themſelves according to their different behaviour, when they rebelled and when they obeyed, when they ſinned and when they repented; [u] Some, the great mercies of the Lord ſhewed to them, and benefits conferred on them; [w] Some, the faithfulneſs of the Lord in making good all his promiſes made to their forefathers, notwithſtanding all thoſe impediments, which ſtood in their way, through the enemies endeavours and their own rebellions and ſins. Whichſoever of theſe be taken, the thing will be true, and the word may well be taken in its full latitude as it comprehends all theſe and ought of like kind, for examples of all its meanings and all that it can import, will be afforded in the hiſtories pointed out, and they will inſtruct them to know the righteouſneſs of the Lord taken in what ſenſe or notion you will; yea, though we ſhould not look back on all thoſe paſſages from Egypt to Gilgal, but only on thoſe from Shittim to Gilgal; as ſome ſeem more particularly to refer theſe words only to them. So the Chaldee Paraphraſe. Have not great things been done for you, from the plain of Shittim to the houſe, or place, of Gilgal, that the righteouſneſs of the Lord might be made known? [x] and ſome Chriſtian Interpreters, who for making the words as they ſuppoſe the plainer, (though the uſual reading ſeem more plain) render thus, that thou mayeſt acknowledge the righteous dealings of the Lord from Shittim to Gilgal, and ſay, &c.

But though all theſe may (as we ſaid) agree to the ſenſe of the words, and be looked on as true, yet if we look to the words foregoing, wherein God ſaith that he hath a controverſy with Iſrael, and calls on them, as it were to plead the caſe, and debate the matter with him, before witneſſes, that it may appear on which part the right ſtood, or the fault lay, that he hath taken up a quarrel againſt them, and it will ſeem perhaps a cloſer and more natural way of making the inference, or giving the meaning to expound them, that ye may know (or that it may be known, for the word is only only למען רעת Lemaan Daat, to know; or, for knowing, without expreſſing the perſon) the righteouſneſs of the Lord, i. e. [y] that the right of the cauſe is on his ſide, and he is very juſt in what he doth now, in accuſing thee of ingratitude, and threatning to puniſh thee for it, that there is no injuſtice in his doings (and ſo may it be compared with that expreſſion, Pſalm li. 4. above-mentioned.) Thoſe great things done for them which he calls to their mind, and pleads, are manifeſt evidences on his part againſt them, to juſtify him: they having nothing to anſwer for themſelves, or teſtify againſt him, what ſhall they do but as men wholly convicted, and in great confuſion, ſay as follows.

[r] Joſh. iii. 1. [s] Moreh Nevochim. Nic. Fuller concord. [t] Piſc. Tarnov. Dutch Notes; ſee R. Tanchum. [u] Cal. Diodat. Grot. Druſius, R. Tanchum. [w] Vat. Ribera Tirinus, Menoch. Sa. Diodat, &c. and Chriſt. à Caſtro. [x] Junius and Tremellius.

6. ¶ Wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord, and bow my ſelf before the high God? Shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves of a year old?

7. Will the Lord be pleaſed with thouſands of rams, or with ten thouſands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my firſt born for my tranſgreſſion, the fruit of my body for the ſin of my ſoul?

Wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord, &c.] This abrupt, paſſionate, form of ſpeech ſeems to require ſomething to be underſtood, and ſupplied, whereby it may be joined to the preceding words, and that [z] Some would have to be and mayeſt ſay: which then muſt be underſtood with ſome caution, not as if the Prophet ſhould ſuggeſt to them words, which he thinks convenient that they ſhould, or he would have them to ſay (becauſe they are ſuch as he could not but know were not to be ſaid, being not agreeable to the ways of worſhip for making atonement, and pacifying God, by God himſelf in the law preſcribed, who would not be pleaſed with any other things than what he himſelf choſe, being not profited by any, nor accepting of any, but what himſelf approved) but rather mentioning them as ſuch, which probably they would be ready to ſay, being convinced of God's righteouſneſs in his plea, and having nothing to teſtify againſt him, or anſwer for their own juſtification: as if they ſhould ſay, We confeſs God's righteouſneſs, and acknowledge all that he hath ſaid to be true, and that he hath better deſerved at our hands, than we have repayed him, and would be glad therefore by any means, and on any terms to make our peace with him. If offering thoſe ordinary oblations, which the law required (which as ſpeaking in their perſon he may ſeem to intimate they would ſay they had not failed in) will not ſuffice, what elſe ſhall we do? be it offerings of things never ſo expenſive (as by thoſe hyperbolical expreſſions of thouſands of rams, and ten thouſands of rivers of oil ſeems denoted) or things never ſo dear, or precious to us, our children, yea the deareſt of them, our firſt born, all of theſe would we willingly offer for making atonement for our ſins, whereby we have provoked him, and for appeaſing him, if all would do.

Not much different as to the meaning will be what [a] Others ſupply, viz. If any of you (or every one of you for his particular) ſhall ſay, wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord, &c. On all hands it will be agreed that the words are ſpoken by the Prophet, as in the perſon of the people (agreeable to what their behaviour ſhewed to be the thoughts of their hearts) as a reply to what God hath ſaid in his plea againſt them for evidencing his own righteouſneſs, and their great ingratitude, whether we look on them as an acknowledgment, that they are convinced of their own guiltineſs, and deſire to acknowledge their ſins, and repent of them, which they would teſtify by any means, if they knew what would be accepted, or ſuffice in that kind: tacitly implying that he had not wearied them in any ſervice, but [b] that there was nothing ſo weariſome, or troubleſome, or expenſive, which for pleaſing him they ought not to do, or would not willingly do; or whether as a juſtifying of themſelves, [c] That all was true indeed that God had ſaid; and as for themſelves if they had been defective in their duty, and ſo diſpleaſed him, it was through ignorance, becauſe if they might be informed what would pleaſe him, were it never ſo great a matter, they would willingly do it.

However it be, the Prophet by putting this queſtion in their name in theſe terms, [d] makes way for informing and inſtructing them in the true means of pleaſing God, which, as in anſwer to their queſtion, he declares in the following words. But before we come to thoſe words, wherein he poſitively ſets down, what things God required, and was to be pleaſed with, we muſt neceſſarily ſuppoſe a denying the things in this queſtion on their parts expreſſed to be pleaſing, or acceptable to him, viz. multitude of oblations and ſacrifices above what he required in his law, as if by the greatneſs and preciouſneſs of them their pardon were to be bought out. Offerings and ſacrifices were indeed in the law of God's own inſtitution, but thoſe all of ſuch nature as God might, for all that he had commanded, juſtly aſk, wherein have I wearied thee? They were neither ſo coſtly, nor ſo many, as that they had reaſon much to be aggrieved at; they were all of ſuch things as were at hand eaſy to be gotten, and of the ſtore wherewith he had bleſſed them, ſo that [e] if any were poorer than others, in many of them regard was had to his poverty. And that they might know, that it was not the value or great price of the offering that he looked after, appears, in that for greater ſins oblations [f] of leſſer value were enjoined, and for [g] ſome great ſins none at all; that thereby the heinouſneſs of them might ap-appear. And to think therefore, that by adding to the ſacrifices, which God had preſcribed in the law, as by changing ſingle beaſts into thouſands of the beſt ſort, or inſtead of beaſts to offer, to ſacrifice, the deareſt of their children, could be no ſafe rule to go by in ſeeking to appeaſe the wrath of God for their ſins, and preſent themſelves acceptable in his ſight [h]. They were not to add to, no more than to diminiſh from what he commanded, Deut. iv. 2. and xii. 32. Therefore did their offerings even of ſuch things as he allowed and required to be offered at any time pleaſe him, becauſe offered in obedience to his commands, and of ſuch things, for ſuch ends, and in ſuch a manner, and with ſuch a mind in them rightly prepared and diſpoſed according to his will in his word declared, not for any thing otherwiſe of intrinſick goodneſs in the things themſelves, or the value or multitude of them which he eſteemed. And for this cauſe, becauſe they thought otherwiſe, and neglecting thoſe other circumſtances, whereby the offerings were to be made acceptable, and were never without them, thought to pleaſe him with ſacrifices, and oblations, as if the bare offering them and external performance, were as much as he required, and a ſufficient performing of their duty, whereby they ſhould gain his favour, is it that we often hear him reproving them even for their legal ſacrifices, and rejecting them with indignation, as things which he delighted not in, but even loathed and hated, as Iſaiah i. 11, &c. lxvi. 3. Jer. vi. 20. Amos v. 22, &c. and as things that though by them he thought good under the law to exerciſe them in obedience to him, and [i] to inſtruct them and bring them to repentance and faith, yet were not [k] his prime and main intention, nor things which meerly of themſelves could pleaſe him; as appears, Jer. vii. 21, 22, &c. Here therefore is moſt true what [l] Some ſay, though it ſeem not the proper conſtruction, or interpretation of the words, while they would thus read and expound them, Shall I give, or offer in ſacrifice my firſt born? This would be my tranſgreſſion, (it would be a very great wickedneſs and not fit for me to do;) or ſhall I offer for a ſacrifice the fruit of my body? this would be the ſin of my ſoul; and how ſhall I do this great wickedneſs? It is certain, that however with the greateſt zeal and ſhew of deſire to be reconciled to God, they ſhould have pretended, and been willing to have done any ſuch thing, (and ought if he had required to have been willing) yet this (as the caſe ſtood) had been but more and more to provoke, not to appeaſe him, by offering ſuch things never by him required, as though of the greateſt eſteem in their own eyes, yet were to him an abomination, [m] however in their idolatrous worſhips they were commended and looked on as moſt meritorious acts. And therefore this queſtion, for what end ſoever put by the Prophet in their perſon doth ſo neceſſarily include a negative anſwer [No, thou ſhalt not come before the Lord with ſuch things; he will not be pleaſed with thy giving ſuch things] that taking it as granted, he doth not farther inſiſt on it, but proceeds in poſitive terms, to inſtruct them what is pleaſing to God, and what good for them to do, and required, that they may in acceptable manner come before him, and that they may find acceptance with him.

[y] The word righteous is ſo uſed, Gen. xxxviii. 26. Deut. xxv. 1. Jer. xii. 1. [z] Junius Tremellius, Grot. and ſee R. Tanchum. [a] R. D. Kimchi, Aben Ezra, Ch. à Caſtro. [b] See Abarbinel. [c] See Paræus. [d] R. Tanchum, Corn. à Lapide. [e] See Levit. v. 11. chap. xii. 8. and chap. xiv. 21. [f] Moreh Nevochim. lib. 3. cap. xlvi. Grot. on Levit. iv. 3. [g] Grot. de ſatisfactione, cap. x. and on Pſalm li.

8. He hath ſhewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do juſtly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?

He hath ſhewed thee, O man, what is good, &c.] This is an anſwer given by the Prophet to the queſtion in the preceding words, put as in the perſon of the people, or any of them, and gives a full reſolution to the main of the queſtion, viz. what it is wherewith the Lord would be pleaſed, though not ſuch as perhaps they who would put the queſtion in ſuch terms as it is put, did, or would expect, for they make their queſtion concerning things without themſelves, by what in that kind they might pleaſe him, as taking it for granted that by ſuch things God was to be pleaſed: not making queſtion of any thing within themſelves, or how their own hearts and minds were to be diſpoſed, and their converſation was to be ordered. But the anſwer reſpects only this, with excluſion of the other, as without this not worth the mentioning, and of no value, yea rather abominable in the ſight of God. Their whole flocks and herds, yea their deareſt children would they part withal to make ſatisfaction for their ſins, [n] but mention not the parting with thoſe ſins, or rectifying their inward man, and amending their ways. This in their eyes was a great offer, a way to gain acceptance, but he ſhews them that in this they were clear miſtaken, God looking to them and their behaviour, not the greatneſs, or coſtlineſs of their offerings; and therefore that if they would in acceptable manner come before him, and have him pleaſed, they muſt bring with them, not what ſeems good in their own eyes, but what he hath ſhewed them to be good, and hath required, ſo that without that it is in vain to talk of, or pretend to offer any other gift, though never ſo coſtly, or of things without themſelves, never ſo dear to them.

This, except willingly, they could not be ignorant of, ſo that they might have made themſelves anſwer, or not needed at all to put this queſtion, for he had ſhewed it to them, and declared it in his law, wherein he had plainly ſet down all that he required of them. Yet doth the Prophet ſummarily repeat it to them, and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do juſtly, &c. What but theſe things? ſo as that all other things required are but in order to theſe, or with ſuppoſal of theſe, and without theſe neither good nor required; ſo where he ſeems to reject thoſe ſacrifices which otherotherwiſe the law enjoined, as by them offered, he doth explain what was the main thing by him intended, and required, ſo as that without it the outward performances ſignified nothing. So Iſaiah i. 11, &c. when he had ſhewed that the multitude of their ſacrifices to him was to no purpoſe, &c. he ſaith, Waſh ye, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes, ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well, ſeek judgment, relieve the oppreſſed, &c. So Jer. vii. 22, 23. telling them that he ſpake not to their fathers concerning ſacrifices, he adds, but this thing commanded I them, ſaying, Obey my voice, &c. And ſo Amos v. 22, &c. telling them, that he will not accept their burnt-offerings, &c. that they may know, wherewith to be accepted, he adds, ver. 24. But let judgment run down as waters, and righteouſneſs as a mighty ſtream. To the ſame purpoſe, Hoſea vi. 6. ſaith he, I deſired mercy and not ſacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt-offerings: as Samuel told Saul, 1 Sam. xv. 22. Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt-offerings and ſacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord? [o] Behold, to obey is better than ſacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

[h] Prov. xxx. 6. [i] Calv. [k] Moreh Nevochim. lib. 3. c. xxxii. See Abarb. [l] And ſo the Syriack and Arabick Tranſlations. [m] Jer. vii. 31. [n] See Calv.

Theſe and the like places all aim at the ſame thing that the words of the Prophet here, though the terms be different, all ſhewing that the offering of a man's ſelf to God, by forſaking his ſins, and ordering his converſation aright before him, is that which is good and acceptable in his ſight, and required more than, and preferred before, all oblations, and outward pompous ceremonious performances or ſhew of worſhip to him; and all ſpeak that which was before ſaid in the law (and is noted in the Margin of our Bibles in this place,) And now Iſrael what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to ſerve the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, to keep the commandments of the Lord and his ſtatutes, &c. Deut. x. 12, 13. There being put the ſame queſtion that here, what doth the Lord require of thee? but, with what follows as in anſwer to it, ſhews the duty required in both places to be the ſame, and the words to aim at the ſame thing, though in ſound they differ.

Now the whole of that duty is here comprehended in three parts, or ſummed up under three heads. Firſt, To do juſtly. Secondly, To love mercy. Thirdly, To walk humbly with God. To which will eaſily be reduced all the commandments of the law; thoſe concerning our duty to our neighbour, and our behaviour towards him to the two former; thoſe concerning our duty to God and our carriage before him to the laſt. To do juſtly, to give to every one, whether ſuperiors, equals, or inferiors their due, to do in all things what is equal and right, not oppreſſing any, nor defrauding them, in dealing with them in any kind, not to hurt them by word, or deed, nor injure them in their perſons, eſtates, or good name, or any thing belonging to them.

It comprehends (ſaith a [p] learned Jew) all thoſe commands, which are concerning a man's behaviour, or dealing, between a man and his neighbour. [q] Another, ſaith that what it imports is juſtice and equity, and implies the taking away all fraud and injurioufneſs between men, and likewiſe comprehends the avoiding ſuch greedineſs in following the deſires, or luſts, as is hurtful to the ſoul, and ſuch exceſs in purſuit even of ſuch things as are needful, as is hurtful to the body, in as much as משפט Miſhphat, judgment, right, or juſt dealing, is the bringing of every one that hath right to his right.

[r] Some Chriſtians ſo far extend it as to comprehend all that is due from a man to God, to men, and to himſelf, that in all theſe he give to each what is his due and right, and perform what juſtice requires. [s] Others reſtrain it to a man's doing juſtice, or judgment in judging himſelf impartially for his ſins, not indulging to them, or ſparing them for his own ſake, or the love he hath to them, but condemning them in himſelf, and himſelf for them, and ſo labouring by judging himſelf, by caſting away his ſins and repenting of them, to prevent that he be not judged of the Lord.

In all theſe ways the word may be perhaps not unfitly applied, and in other like which it may in its latitude comprehend, and ſo (as [t] Some will have the meaning to be) to require obedience to God in all that he requires to be done (all his commandments being true, juſt and righteous, and the perfect rule of juſtice.)

But comparing theſe words with thoſe that follow, ver. 10, 11, 12. we may think doing juſtly to be more particularly here referr'd to what is required in mens dealings between themſelves, and others, or their behaviour in their dealing with them, and ſo are a ſumming up of the duties of all the commandments of the ſecond table, containing our duty towards our neighbour, and requiring the performance of them, according to the rule of juſtice.

And if there be ought, which the rule of charity may add in the performing of them, above what men willing to do no more than in rigour of juſtice they may think required of them, that is ſhewed in the next words to be amongſt that good which God alſo requires of them: viz. To love mercy, not only to give to every one what they might in juſtice [u] according to mens laws and known right require, but to be kind, merciful, pitiful, exerciſing all acts of charity and beneficence, which the letter of the law would not force them to, whereby they might be in any kind helpful to any, and remitting of their own right for the good of others, not being harſh, cruel, hard hearted toward them, or exacting upon them; and this willingly, cheerfully, and out of choice, and without expecting recompence from them, as the

[o] See Pſalm l. 14. [p] R. D. Kimchi [q] R. Tanchum. [r] Tirinus. [s] Ribera, Ch. à Caſtro. [t] See Tarnovius. [u] לפני משורת הדין Abarb.

the word love imports. And this alſo refers to the commandments of the ſecond table, as the meaning of them is ſummed up by our Saviour, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, Mat. xxii. 39. Mark xii. 31. agreeable to that comprehenſive rule of his, All things whatſoever you would that men ſhould do to you, do ye even ſo to them, Mat. vii. 12. and to that precept of the Apoſtle, To do good, and to communicate forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed, Heb. xiii. 16. Such he here requires. For the queſtion being put concerning what ſacrifices would be acceptable to God, the anſwer mentioneth not any ſuch as were named, as by them intended, but ſhews this [w] to be good, and required.

Theſe two heads ſeeming thus to refer to, and comprehend the duties of the ſecond table, the third comprehends thoſe of the firſt, viz. And to walk humbly with thy God [or to humble thy ſelf to walk, or in walking with thy God.] To walk with God is to frame the life and converſation in reſpect to God, or for what concerns a man's behaviour before him, or towards him in all things, that may concern a man betwixt him and God, or pertain to his duty towards him: ſo the ſenſe here ſeems to require that it be underſtood, though elſewhere it may ſeem to ſignify to adhere to God, and [x] to pleaſe him, as Gen. v. 24. it is ſaid Enoch walked with God, which by the Apoſtle is interpreted he pleaſed God, Heb. xi. 5.

In, or for, ſuch walking, it is required of a man, that he humble himſelf. This humbling himſelf or humility is requiſite and is to be ſhewed, in his doing, in his ſuffering, and in his aſſent, or believing. 1ſt. In doing, by his ready taking on him his yoke, and ſubmitting to all his commandments without grudging, or reſiſting ([y] contrary to that ſtiff-neckedneſs ſo often complained of in the Jews) and not looking on his own performances as profitable to God, or deſerving ought [z] from him, but ſaying when he hath done all, I am an unprofitable ſervant, I have done what was my duty to do (as our Saviour teacheth us to ſay, Luke xvii. 10.) [a] contrary to pride, or confidence in his own doings, and requiring an abaſement of himſelf, out of conſciouſneſs of his own ill deſervings, and a reliance only on God's mercy and goodneſs for acceptance, and ſo working out his ſalvation with fear and trembling, Phil. ii. 12.

Secondly, In ſuffering, viz. [b] that he take in good part whatſoever God ſhall pleaſe to lay on him, and humble himſelf in the ſight of God, James iv. 10. and under his mighty hand, 1 Peter v. 6. and in whatſoever he ſhall ſuffer according to the will of God, committing the keeping of his ſoul to him in well doing, as unto a faithful creator, 1 Peter iv. 19. without grudging and repining againſt him, as if he ſuffered more than he deſerved.

Thirdly, In his aſſent, and believing, by not replying in any thing againſt God, Rom. ix. 20. not murmuring, not diſputing againſt any of his commands, Phil. ii. 14. but readily aſſenting to all that he hath ſaid, or required to be believed, as undoubtedly true, and to whatſoever he hath commanded, as neceſſary to be obeyed, and performed, however contrary the one may ſeem to man's reaſon, or the other to his intereſt, [c] not raiſing doubts, or ſcruples againſt either, and acquieſcing in his revealed truths and will, without ſearching after the hidden things of God, or things too high for men to comprehend.

Others (moſt [d] of the Jews) render the word (according to a ſignification of it uſed in their Rabbins) to walk in ſecret, i. e. in ſincerity, and uprightly, as heedfully in ſecret, where no eye of man ſees, as in publick in the ſight of all, ſo making it their end to pleaſe God and approve themſelves to him, not to make a Phariſaïcal ſhew before men, or gain applauſe from them. Such behaviour as our Saviour commends in alms, prayer, faſting, and conſequently all ſuch acts of piety, as require, not men, but God, which ſees in ſecret, to be Witneſs to, and Judge of them, Mat. vi. 1, &c.

This little differs from the former meaning; they neceſſarily go together, ſincerity and humility, and they cannot be one without the other, both excluding all pride, and oſtentation, and ſtubbornneſs, and contradicting.

There are other Tranſlations which render [e] to walk ſolicitous with God, [f] Others to be ready or prepared to walk with God. We need not go to prove, that the word hath theſe ſignifications, as well as the two former, for as long as it ſignifies either of the former, either of theſe will be included in the meaning, and not ill expreſs it: for whoſoever walketh humbly, or ſincerely with God, will be very ſolicitous in the performance of his duty, that he avoid all things offenſive to God, contrary to his will, or word, and be very diligent alſo in ſerving him, ready to aſſent to all that he ſhall ſay, and to ſubmit to all that he ſhall require his obedience in.

The words however taken, manifeſtly (as we ſaid) refer to the commandments of the firſt table, comprehending, as [g] a learned Jew notes, the acknowledging of one God, and the loving him with all the heart, and with all the ſoul; and ſo plainly agree with that ſum of that table given by our Saviour in the forecited Mark xii. 29, 30. The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy ſtrength. The performance of which, together with the other (ſumming up the ſecond table) which there follows, but is here put in the firſt place, (as they cannot be ſeparated by any that will pleaſe God, and walk uprightly with him) the ſcribe there ſaith, agreeable to what is here intimated, is more than all burnt-offerings and ſacrifices, which were never required, nor accepted, cepted, but as ſubſervient to theſe neceſſary duties, at all times and at all places good and required, whereas thoſe were not in themſelves abſolutely good, nor required, nor accepted, but with regard to time and place and other circumſtances, yea, when not rightly offer'd, [h] abominated, even ſuch as were otherwiſe permitted by the law, how much more ſuch which [i] God commanded not, neither came into his heart, ſuch as ſome in the foregoing verſe mentioned. Now the Jews, or Iſraelites, as appears by the following verſes, ſtood guilty of the neglect and breach of all theſe duties of doing juſtly, ver. 10, &c. of loving mercy, ver. 12. of walking humbly, ſincerely, or carefully with God, ver. 16. and ſo long as they continued ſo, it was in vain for them to enquire with what ſacrifices they may come before the Lord, or he may be pleaſed and appeaſed. If they ſhould offer all things moſt dear to them, they ſhall not be able to appeaſe him, or turn away his wrath: He continues to cry out againſt them for their ſins, and threaten them with his ſevere judgments, as [k] the following part of the chapter declares.

[w] See Hoſea vi. 6. above cited. [x] Ribera. [y] Aben Ezra. [z] Ch. à Caſtro. [a] Calvin. [b] Heb. xii. 5. Tarnovius. [c] Abarbinel. [d] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum, Abarbinel. [e] Vulg. Lat. [f] Greek, Syriack, and Arabick. [g] R. Sol.

9. The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wiſdom ſhall ſee thy name: Hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.

The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wiſdom ſhall ſee thy name: Hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.] That there is difficulty in this verſe appears by the different expoſitions that are given of it, according to the ſeveral judgments of Interpreters. The plaineſt amongſt which ſeems that, which is given by divers both Jews and Chriſtians, agreeable to what our Tranſlators read in the text, which a learned [l] Jew thus expounds; By the city is meant either Samaria, or Jeruſalem: and whereas in the text is ſaid only wiſdom, there is to be ſupplied man [the man of wiſdom] will ſee thy name, i. e. will apprehend the greatneſs of thy power, and learn it; and that which he cries, or proclaims, is what is ſaid, Hear the rod, i. e. take notice of the puniſhment, and know who hath ſtirred it up, and prepared or ordered it, uſing the name of rod for puniſhment, becauſe puniſhment is inflicted by it, or it is an inſtrument of puniſhing. [m] Another much to the ſame purpoſe, The Lord's voice, that is, the word of the Prophet propheſying in the name of the Lord, cries to the city, that is, the people of the city, viz. Jeruſalem, or Samaria, calling on them to return by repentance; but when I the Prophet, ſays he, proclaim thy words in the midſt of that city, only he that is a man of wiſdom among them will ſee in the midſt of his heart thy glorious name, and that it is meet to bow before it when the Prophet mentions it, and mentions his word; but other men will not ſee: and that man of wiſdom ſaith to them, Hear the rod, i. e. the rod of puniſhment, ſaying, hear how grievous this decree is, and hear who hath appointed this decree to bring it, for he that hath appointed it, can bring it to paſs, as he hath appointed it, becauſe there is power in his hand.

Theſe explications ſeem to give the meaning of the words in the plaineſt ſenſe, and moſt agreeable to the letter of the words, of any; yet will it be expedient for the judging of this, to take notice of others given by Interpreters both ancient and of great authority.

The Chaldee Paraphraſe thus expounds them, [n] With their voice the Prophets of the Lord cry unto the city, and the teachers fear the name [of the Lord.] Hear, O king and rulers, and the reſt of the people of the land.

A Jewiſh [o] Rabbin notes, that he interprets not according to the letter: yet need we not therefore with [p] Some, who approve the ſenſe by him given, conjecture that he read the words in the Hebrew text, otherwiſe than they are now given: he might take the liberty of a paraphraſer, to give more at large (not tying himſelf cloſe up to the words) that which he took to be the meaning. Only we may obſerve, that what thoſe before rendred [q] to ſee, he will have to ſignify fear; and ſo do Others alſo (as we ſhall ſee;) and what is by them rendred rod he ſeems to take for ſcepter (as it ſeems elſewhere taken) as Pſalm cx. 2. and ſo to denote the king, or ruler to whom it belongs, and then perhaps he might take the following words to ſignify, And he who (or whoſoever) eſpouſes, or owns it, i. e. acknowledges himſelf a ſubject to that ſcepter, or to thoſe that hold it, which are the reſt of the people of the land. This ſeems nearer than to introduce a different reading (as Grotius doth for ומי יעדה Umi yeadah, reading רמי ועדה Rame veadah.) But this man hath the liberty of a paraphraſt.

Among thoſe that only tranſlate, the LXX. or Greek render, The voice of the Lord ſhall cry to the city, and ſhall ſave thoſe that fear his name. Hear, O tribe, and who ſhall adorn the city? The Vulgar Latin, The voice of the Lord crieth unto the city, and ſalvation ſhall be unto them that fear thy name. Hear, O tribe, and who will approve it?

In theſe it is manifeſt, that what is in the firſt mentioned Tranſlation rendred wiſdom, viz. תושיה Tuſhiah, is taken for ſalvation, or ſafety, not becauſe they read the word in the Hebrew otherwiſe than now it is, as [r] Some think, but becauſe they took it to ſignify ſalvation, as it is elſewhere alſo rendred in the Greek, as John xxx. 12. and Prov. ii. 7. both in the Greek and Vulgar Latin. That likewiſe which is rendred ſee, they take to ſignify fear, as the Chaldee doth, the words that ſignify the one and the other being very near in ſound, and differing only in the laſt letter, for as יראה yireh, with ה He, in the end doth ſignify nify ſhall ſee, ſo יראי yire with yod in the end ſignifies thoſe that fear, or are fearing. And it was anciently an opinion of [s] a Jew of note, that the ה He or H in the end was but ſubſtituted for i or yod (as quieſcent letters having the ſame ſound are not unfrequently put one for the other without change of the ſignification) and the word had the ſignification of fear, and the ſenſe to be, they will learn wiſdom, that fear thy name. Though Aben Ezra thought he was out, yet many we ſee of great authority are of the ſame opinion with him, ſo far as to take the word in the ſignification of fear.

[h] Prov. xxi. 27. [i] Jer. vii. 31. [k] See Aben Ezra, of this way of connexion. [l] R. Tanchum. [m] R. D. Kimchi. [n] Or perhaps, the voice of the Prophets of the Lord cry unto the city. [o] R. Solomon. [p] Grot. [q] Viz. יראה yireh. [r] Capellus, Crit. ſac. p. 277. See Buxtorf. Vindic. p. 681.

Then as to the word מטה Matteh, which is rendred rod, they preferring another ſignification, which it elſewhere often hath, render it tribe. The laſt word alſo which we render appointed it, the Greek rendring ſhall or will adorn, may ſeem to refer it to another root, viz. as if it were a future tenſe from עדה Adah, to adorn; yet it may be probable enough that they might think the word יעד yaad, which more uſually ſignifies to appoint, order, or prepare, might ſo far extend it ſelf, as to ſignify alſo to adorn. And the Latin gives to it the ſignification of approving, and the Syriack of teſtifying to, rendring the whole verſe, The voice of the Lord upon the city preacheth doctrine to thoſe that fear his name, Hear, O tribe, him who witneſſeth; although theſe alſo may ſeem to refer the word to another root, as a more [t] modern Tranſlator, who gives it the ſame ſignification, doth ſeem to Some to have done, viz. [u] to that root from whence is עד Ed, a witneſs, and is by them blamed, in regard that no ſuch form, as the word is now read in, can thence be regularly deduced. But the author of that modern tranſlation ſhews them to be out in their conjecture concerning his reaſon of ſo rendring it, ſeeing he in a [w] Dictionary by him compiled, doth to the root or verb יעד yaad, for which they ſuppoſed him by miſtake to have taken another, give in the firſt place, as the prime of all, the ſignification of witneſſing, as he will have a word from the ſame root alſo to ſignify, Job ix. 19. as the Vulgar Latin there alſo ſo rendreth it: ſo that if he be miſtaken it is not becauſe he miſtook the root, but becauſe he gave to the root a ſignification that they think it hath not, but he thought it to have.

Farther yet, by reaſon of the different acception of the words, much variety is there among Interpreters, both Jews and Chriſtians. As for the Jews, [x] one of good antiquity who tranſlated the Scriptures out of Hebrew into Arabick, renders the words, The voice of the Lord of the worlds crieth or proclaimeth to the city, and he that hath wiſdom [or underſtanding] will proclaim in thy name باسمك beſmeka, or will declare thy name, Hear the rod, and who hath threatned it [or with it.] The greateſt difference in this is, that the word rendred, ſhall ſee, he ſeems to render ſhall ſhew, or declare, or make known, although otherwiſe the word which he uſeth ينادي yonadi, in another way of conſtruction, viz. not with the preposition Be, but with an accuſative caſe may ſignify ſhall, or will know, or ſee, as well as to make known or declare; and in which ſenſe he took it may be doubted.

Another of good note (viz. R. Solomon Jarchi) thus expounds the words to this meaning, The voice of the Prophets of the Lord to the city, who preach to them repentance, and the Prophet crieth or preacheth to them [תושיה Tuſhiah] wiſdom, [even the Prophet] which ſees thy name, that ſets his heart to underſtand and ſee thy ways, [ſo that תושיה Tuſhiah, wiſdom, is referred to the word crieth going before]: Incline your ear, and hear the rod of revenge or puniſhment which ſhall be upon you or chaſtiſe you, which the Prophets warn you of, and hear who it is which hath appointed that revenge (or puniſhment) whether he hath power to make good what he hath decreed. This expoſition differs but little from what we ſaw in the other Jews, and takes the words much in the ſame ſignification.

But another, [y] a learned man, and of ſome antiquity, differs much in the acception of one word, viz. לעיר lair, which Others render to the city, and interprets it to awaken or ſtir up, viz. to repentance: and that the word may ſo ſignify, and (as to the preſent verſe, if taken by it ſelf) would make a good ſenſe, is no doubt, but that the conſtruction of the words ſo ordered, as to refer to it in ver. 12. require that it ſhould be a noun, and ſignify to the City, it being there ſaid the rich men thereof, or of it, i. e. the City called unto and ſpoken of; and none elſe of them therefore follow his opinion.

There is yet [z] another Jew of great name among his nation, yet of later ſtanding than any of the aforementioned, and who had ſeen what they ſaid (and perhaps the ancient Latin too) who cavils againſt the firſt mentioned interpretation, and then gives another much different from it, and all the reſt. His cavils againſt that interpretation are, that there is no need of ſaying the voice of the Lord crieth to the city, if it be underſtood that the Prophets of the Lord ſpake and preached concerning (or againſt) the city Jeruſalem or Samaria, ſeeing it is known that this whole book is propheſies of the Prophet. Then that if the word יראה yireeh, ſhall ſee, be referr'd to the noun תושיה Tuſhiah, wiſdom, it ought to have been תראה Tireeh, in the feminine gender, as the noun is. Then that wiſdom hath not eyes to ſee with, and a name is not a thing to be ſeen: and if it be ſaid that here is underſtood איש Iſh, the man, which is of the maſculine gender, it will yet be to be objected, how it can be ſaid that the man of wiſdom ſhall ſee his name; it ſhould be rather ſaid, ſhall hear (or, hear of) thy name. The expoſition that he, rejecting this, himſelf gives, taking the word מטה Matteh, which we render rod in a clean difdifferent ſignification, which it is alſo capable of, is to this purpoſe: That thoſe of Judah and Jeruſalem above all ought to do juſtly, and all that God requires, becauſe the city Jeruſalem was that to which above all other cities the voice of the Lord cried, i. e. to which the privilege of prophecy was even peculiarly belonging; and thy name, O Jeruſalem, intimates or imports wiſdom, making the words יראה שלם yireeh ſhalem, of which he ſays the name of Jeruſalem is compounded, viz. from what Abraham ſaid, the Lord, יראה yireeh, will ſee, and ſhalem, as the city was called in Melchiſedek's time, and יראה תושיה yireeh Tuſhiah, ſhall ſee wiſdom, to import the ſame thing, and citing in confirmation of his opinion what their Doctors ſay, The air of Jeruſalem makes wiſe. Hear ye,] both he that perverteth or turneth aſide the voice of the Lord, and declineth or turneth aſide himſelf from doing thoſe things which are in the foregoing verſe ſhewed to be good and required; and he that hath eſpouſed or addicted himſelf to wiſdom, or that godly courſe; or elſe, and him that hath appointed it to come upon them, ſo that the meaning is, He that perverteth the voice of the Lord, and turneth it contrary to what it commands, he is truly a wicked perſon, and worthy of much puniſhment, but he that eſpouſeth or taketh to himſelf wiſdom ſhall be delivered from it. This is the import of his words, in which his cavils or objections againſt the former interpretation, are frivolous. To the firſt he cannot himſelf diſſemble that there is an anſwer before-hand given by ſupplying the man, which he cannot deny to be allowable here as well as in אני תפלה Ani Tephillah, I am prayer, i. e. a man of prayer, Pſalm cix. 4. and as for the other, viz. that it were proper to ſay ſhall hear, not ſhall ſee thy name, it ſeems captiouſly ſought, that by diſparaging that interpretation he might make way for his own; for he well knew that the word ſignifying ſee, is not reſtrained only to the ſight of the eyes, but taken as well for the ſight of the mind, [a] to perceive, to underſtand, to be aware of, to take notice of, to obſerve, to conſider, and the like, yea even to hear alſo, and what is the office of other ſenſes, as well as of the ſeeing, or elſe why may he not as well quarrel at what is ſaid, Jer. ii. 31. See ye the word of the Lord; and Exod. xx. 18. and all the people ſaw קולות Koloth, the voices, or, thunderings, and, ſee the ſmell of my ſon, Gen. xxvii. 27. As for his own expoſition, it is ſo far fetched and ſo harſh, that few we may ſuppoſe will embrace it: and we had not need to have mentioned it, but for the great name and credit of the man, leſt any ſhould think that ſo famous an Expoſitor had ſaid ſomething better than Others, which had not been taken notice of. It is his cuſtom to cenſure Others, and to ſtrive to bring ſomething that Others had not ſaid, but not always better, as manifeſtly here.

[s] R. Japhet in Aben Ezra and R. Tanchum. [t] Munſter. [u] See Tarnovius. [w] Munſter in his Hebrew Dictionary יעד teſtificatus eſt. [x] I ſuppoſe R. Saadias, though he put not his name. [y] R. D. Kimchi ſays his father ſo interpreted it. [z] Abarbinel.

There is yet difference betwixt modern Chriſtian Interpreters, ſome taking the words in the ſame way and order of conſtruction as they are in the text of our tranſlation; and the difference betwixt them is from the different ſignifications that they take the words in. The firſt word תושיה Tuſhiah, which is rendred the man of wiſdom [by ſupplying the man] [b] Others making the ſame ſupply, render the man of ſafety, or ſalvation ſhall ſee thy name. [c] Others without that ſupply, wiſdom ſhall, &c. Of the proper ſignification of the word more ſhall be ſaid by and by.

Then the word rendred ſhall ſee [d] Others render ſhall fear, which one thus explaineth [e], When the voice of the Lord crieth to the city it is wiſdom (or the part of wiſdom) if any ſhall (or for any to) fear thy name, i. e. revere or dread thy majeſty. They ſeem to think it more proper to ſay one ſhall fear thy name, than ſhall ſee, &c. yet in this is no impropriety, ſeeing having thoſe acceptions which we have before ſeen; and to ſay they ſhall ſee his name in the Prophet that cries in his name, i. e. perceive that the name of his God is in him, that the word is not the word of man, but the word of God, and evidenceth his power and majeſty; is very intelligible language, and will amount to as much as to fear, and neceſſarily produce it. But it cannot be doubted that the word יראה yireeh, more regularly and grammatically ſignifies ſhall or will ſee, than fear.

Farther, the words rendred who hath appointed, [f] Some of them render who calls for it, [g] Others who atteſts it, or bears witneſs to it, and the like: but theſe are without difficulty reconciled.

[h] Others do beſide the different acception of ſome words clean invert the conſtruction, in the middle part of the verſe, putting that laſt which Others put firſt, and rendring it, and thy name ſhall ſee, or doth ſee that which is, i. e. as ſome of them explain it, whatſoever is done in the city, in as much as all things are open to thine eyes, and thou ſeeſt all the wickedneſs that is committed in the city, or the very being of whatſoever is, as it is, and whatſoever is moſt ſecret and hidden in it, therefore thou crieſt unto it, i. e. the inhabitants of it, and reprehendeſt them, and threatneſt them for their evil doings, and they ought to hearken, thoſe reprehenſions and threats ought to be heard, hearkened, and attended to.

That which makes them chuſe thus to place the words in the conſtruction, and to prefer this rendring before the other, ſeems to be, becauſe that they ſuppoſe it to be more agreeable to analogy of grammar, becauſe in joining יראה yireeh to תושיה, and rendring it wiſdom ſhall (or will) ſee, the noun rendred wiſdom is the feminine gender, and the verb ſhall ſee the maſculine; but to this we ſuppoſe a ſufficient anſwer hath been [i] already given by ſaying that איש Iſh, a man, or the man, which is of the maſculine gender is here underſtood, and ſo the verb anſwers to that. And it would be eaſy to illuſtrate it by other examples beſides that already cited out of Pſalm cix. 4. in which the thing expreſſed implies and denotes the perſon in whom it is, or to whom it pertains, as Prov. xiii. 6. wickedneſs overthrows ſin, i. e. the man [k] of ſin or ſinner, and Prov. xx. 1. wine, for a man of wine, with other like taken notice of by [l] Grammarians. And again, it is not unuſual to find a verb of the maſculine gender coupled with a noun of the feminine form, as in אמר קהלת Amar koheleth, if that be to be accounted a feminine, Eccl. i. 2. and vii. 8. A gift deſtroyeth the heart. The noun מתנה Mattanah ſignifying gift is feminine, and the verb יאבד yeabbed, deſtroyeth, maſc. with many Others alſo which [m] Grammarians obſerve: ſo that here ſeems no objection in prejudice to that tranſlation.

[a] See R. Tanchum on Jer. ii. 31. [b] Munſter. [c] See Chriſt. à Caſtro, and ſee Ar. Mont. [d] Ar. Mont. [e] Grot. [f] Jun. Tremell. [g] Munſt. Calvin. [h] Jun. Tremell. Capell. Tarnov. Dutch Notes. [i] See Tarnovius and Buxtorf. Vindic. p. 682.

As for the ſignification of תושיה Tuſhiah, which in our text is rendred wiſdom, and they render that which is, it will be convenient to ſpeak ſomething, becauſe it will have influence on all the tranſlations for adjuſting them. It is taken to come from a verb ישה yaſhah (though not in uſe, but יש yeſh put for it) which ſignifies to be or exiſt, or be in being, or have exiſtence, and this noun thence derived to ſignify primarily being, exiſtence, ſolidity, or firmneſs, and thence to be tranſlated to ſignify the law and wiſdom, and any good and right action, becauſe, ſays [n] Kimchi, the law and wiſdom remain firm and permanent when all other things turn to nothing. It is ſometimes tranſlated by our Tranſlators wiſdom, as here, and ſo Job vi. 13. and xii. 16. and Prov. xviii. 1. ſometimes ſound wiſdom, as Prov. ii. 7. and iii. 21. and viii. 14. ſometimes ſubſtance, as Job xxx. 22. or as in the Margin wiſdom, ſometimes enterprize, or as in the Margin any thing, Job v. 12. ſometimes the thing as it is, Job xxvi. 3. or that which is, as Job. xi. 6. and here in the Margin; ſometimes working (or work) as Iſaiah xxviii. 29. Theſe are moſt, if not all, of the places in which this word occurs in the Scriptures, in which how it is by other Tranſlators rendred who pleaſes may ſee, and judge which comes neareſt the ſignification of the root. It is enough to our preſent purpoſe to ſee how Ours have done it: and then when it ſhall be obſerved that it is equally agreeable to grammar rules, which of the two nouns be put firſt in the conſtruction, whether the noun תושיה Tuſhiah, which the firſt interpretation puts foremoſt, as it ſtands in place ſo in conſtruction, rendring the man of wiſdom ſhall ſee thy name, or שמך Shemĕca, thy name, which the laſt puts firſt in the conſtruction, Thy name ſhall or doth ſee that which is, it will be left to the reader to chuſe which he will to follow: for among all the tranſlations cited, theſe two ſeem the ſimpleſt and leaſt forced. [o] Divers, as we ſaid, prefer the latter; our Tranſlators, that the reader may have his liberty, give both, the one in the text, the other in the Margin; by putting the firſt in the text they ſeem moſt to incline to that, and upon due conſideration it may ſeem reaſon to agree with them in it to this ſenſe, The voice of the Lord by the Prophet crieth unto the city to ſtir them up to repentance, and whoſo is wiſe will, O Lord (and cannot but) ſee thy name in that Prophet, and acknowledge him to be the meſſenger, and the word in his mouth to be thy word, and not his own, while he crieth, [p] Hear the rod, and who hath appointed it, hear what ſevere judgments are threatned againſt you, and who it is that threatneth them, he that is able to bring to paſs whatſoever he ſays, that ſo being aware hereof you may ſeek to make your peace with him by timely repentance, for as the caſe ſtands, you are in manifeſt danger. There are grievous ſins with you to provoke him to uſe great ſeverity, and the judgments that he hath determined to bring upon you, except you prevent him by breaking off your ſins by repentance, are very ſevere. That God's juſtice and righteouſneſs may [in all this controverſy, ver. 2.] appear, both their ſins contrary to what God requires of them, ver. 8. and his judgments that he denounceth againſt them, are in the following verſes declared, [q] all that he might bring them into the right way, and they might eſcape the danger being warned of it.

10. Are there yet the treaſures of wickedneſs in the houſe of the wicked, and the ſcant meaſure that is abominable?

Are there yet the treaſures of wickedneſs in the houſe of the wicked? &c.] Such difference is there between Interpreters in the rendring of this verſe alſo, that it cannot but ſeem ſtrange, till the reaſon and ground of that variety be looked into. That rendring which our Tranſlators put in the text is agreeable to what the Chaldee Paraphraſt, the ancienteſt of Jewiſh Interpreters hath (underſtanding in him as well as in the Hebrew in, viz. in the houſe, or at the houſe, otherwiſe his words may ſound, Is there yet the houſe of the wicked, treaſures of wickedneſs?) and to what an ancient Arabick tranſlation done out of the Hebrew hath, and ſome of the beſt [r] Hebrew Grammarians, as well ſkill'd as any in their own language direct to, and diverſe modern [s] Interpreters follow. But our Tranſlators give in the Margin another rendring alſo, viz. [Is there] yet unto every man an houſe of the wicked? The difference betwixt this and the former is from hence, that what is in the former rendred, are there, is

[k] Aben Ezra. [l] See Glaſſ. Gram. p. 488. [m] See Buxt. Gram. lib. 2. cap. 10. [n] R. D. Kimchi here, and in Rad. where Elias Levita ſays according to R. Levi Ben Gerſom, that this noun properly ſignifies any right, or good way, or law, which it is convenient for a man to conform himſelf to, and that therefore the law and wiſdom are denoted by that name תושיה Tuſhiah. [o] And ſee Diodat. and the Dutch Tranſlation. [p] It would not be far from this to render, with a modern Jew, The voice of the Lord crieth, and the man of wiſdom which ſees thy name (i. e. the Prophet) crieth, Hear, &c. Aben-dana in Michlal Yophe. [q] See Calvin on ver. 6, &c. [r] Abu Walid, R. Solomon, D. Kimchi. [s] Munſter, &c.

is in this rendred every man; and that interpretation of the word is by many likewiſe, both Jews and Chriſtians abetted, viz. the rendring of the word by man, and then making the conſtruction ſo as it is in the marginal rendring, or [Is there] yet a man of a houſe of the wicked, &c. any that hath, or, hath any man, or, every man [t] an houſe gotten by wicked means, and treaſures heaped together by rapine, unjuſtice, and like ways, &c. or to like purpoſe. Another, every man in the city is not only wicked by himſelf, [u] but hath alſo ſcant meaſure. Another, [w] O man, is there yet in the houſe, &c. Some by the ſame word take to be ſignified not barely a man, [x] but a man of greater degree and dignity, and expound it, Is the man of renown and dignity, or great place among them, (or without an interrogation, the man of, &c. is, &c.) yet in the houſe of the wicked, taking part or going ſhares with him in raking together by fraud and oppreſſion, and for this means uſing falſe and ſcant meaſure, which is abominable, hateful, and diſpleaſing unto the Lord? [y] Or, notwithſtanding all that the Lord hath cried, his houſe is ſtill as the houſe of the wicked, filled with treaſures wickedly gotten, &c.

[z] A modern Jew takes it to ſignify the man, i. e. ſays he, that man of wiſdom, viz. the Prophet, ſpoken of in the foregoing verſe, and then in reference both to the preceding and following words thus expounds it, The man of wiſdom that ſees thy name, crieth aloud to them in the ſtreets and open places, Hear the rod, and who hath appointed it; and beſides this he goes into the houſes of the wicked to reprove them for their doings, and to warn them, and yet they give not heed unto him to turn from their evil ways; that is it which he ſays, yet the man is in the houſe of the wicked, as much as to ſay, while as yet the Prophet is in the houſe of the wicked, wherein are treaſures of wickedneſs and ſcant meaſure, which is abominable, crying with (or uttering) the voice of the Lord, and reproving him for his iniquity, and ſaying unto him, Shall I count them pure, &c. and threatning him with evil from the Lord, ſaying, thou ſhalt eat but not be ſatisfied, &c. even then this very while, while the man, the Prophet, reproves and warns the wicked in his houſe, the ſtatutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the houſe of Ahab, and ye walk in their evil counſels, and leave the good counſel of the Prophet, and will have none of his reproofs. This expoſition, as novel and differing from all others, I thought good to ſet down at large, that the reader might judge of it; perhaps he will find ſome harſhneſs in it.

Another acception of the word we have yet in ſome verſions very ancient, and of great authority, in which it is rendred fire. So the Greek, coupling it with the preceding words according to their verſion, who ſhall adorn the city? Shall fire and the houſe of the wicked treaſuring up treaſures of wickedneſs? &c. [a] So the Vulgar rendring it, as yet there is fire in the houſe of the impious, treaſures of iniquity, and a leſſer meaſure full of wrath. So the Syriack alſo, and the printed Arab, who follows here the Greek, take it to ſignify fire; and a [b] learned Jew alſo, who expounds it, There ſhall be yet, or perpetually, a fire in the houſe of the wicked, by reaſon of the treaſures of wickedneſs, &c. i. e. thoſe treaſures unjuſtly gotten ſhall be as perpetual fire to conſume him, and all that he hath. This of his expounding it will be convenient to obſerve, that it may not be thought neceſſary to ſay, that thoſe others which take the word in this ſignification did read otherwiſe than is now uſually read in the Hebrew, viz. אש Haeſh inſtead of איש, for it is certain that he did not, and why ſhould it be thought they did? That he did not we ſhall preſently ſee, in giving the reaſon of this variety of rendrings: the reaſon is a ſeeming ambiguity in one word, viz. אש Haiſh, in which ה ha makes not in it ſelf ought as to the ſignification, but as it is ſubſervient to the following ſyllable אש Iſh, either as a particle of interrogation or admiration, according to Some, [c] who ſay that the vowel pathach which it hath, ſhews it here to be; or as an article put before a noun according to Others. Then the word אש Iſh written only with aleph, having the vowel Chirek, that is (i) under-writ, for being a conſonant in the Hebrew language (though put as anſwering to A the firſt letter of our alphabet, which is it ſelf a vowel) hath no ſound of it ſelf, but according to the vowel that is joined with it, and therefore as having here the vowel Chirek (i. e. i) it is read אש Iſh, ſo if it had the vowel Tzeri (i. e. e) it would be read אש Eſh, which undoubtedly ſignifies fire, and the [d] forementioned learned Jew thinks it, though read with Chirek, or i, to have here the ſame ſignification, as other words that he inſtanceth in, viz. [e] חן chen, and חן chin, בן ben and בן bin, have the ſame ſignification when written with tzere, i. e. e, and when written with Chirek, i. e. i, the firſt grace, the ſecond a ſon, and ſo therefore he would have it to be rendred fire, as likewiſe Others (as we ſaid) not becauſe they read it otherwiſe than it is now uſually read. But Others think the difference of the ſound and vowel to import a difference in the ſignification too, and therefore looking more to the ſound than the letters, take it here to be the ſame in ſignification with the word איש, which ſounds, as this doth Iſh, and ſignifies a man, [f] though that be uſually written with another letter, viz. yod [or i] between א and ש, which ſerves only to make the vowel longer, and otherwiſe makes no difference in the ſound, for that it is not unuſual to have have that letter omitted in the expreſſing the vowel without altering the ſignification. And that ſo it is both here and alſo 2 Sam. xiv. 19. the only other place where the word is found thus written; and in both they would therefore have it ſignify man (and there our Tranſlators ſeem ſo to have taken it.) Others, thirdly, ſeeing it is neither written as אש Eſh, fire, nor איש man, take it to have a different ſignification from either of them, viz. the ſame with the word יש yeſh, and to denote that which in our language, is agreeing to it in ſound, is, or is there, or in the plural number are there: ſo both here and in that other place (2 Sam. xiv.) will they have it [g] to ſignify: (and by the way it may be obſerved, that in that place the Greek and ancient Latin ſo render it, though here otherwiſe, It is not (i. e. not poſſible) to turn.) And for confirmation of this makes not only the authority of the ancient Chaldee Paraphraſt, who, as we ſaid, ſo here renders it, but the word alſo which he in that dialect expreſſes it by, viz. איתי Ith, which (as alſo the ſame [h] in the Syriack dialect) ſeems made from this, only by changing ש ſh into ת t, as is uſual in words taken in thoſe dialects out of the Hebrew, as alſo ايس Ais [i] in the Arabick here uſed in the ancient MS. tranſlation, which all write this word with Aleph in the beginning, as here it is written, and uſe it to ſignify is. (It may be obſerved alſo that איש [k] written full, with all the letters that it uſually hath when it ſignifies a man, is by ſome of the Jews ſaid to ſignify is, or are, or there be, Prov. xviii. 24. and ſo there rendred by the Chaldee and Syriack Interpreters.) This rendring hath as good authority, and as probable proofs for it as any, and therefore do we look on it as well preferred to be read in the text by our Tranſlators, ſeeing it makes the cleareſt ſenſe of any; and ſo the words of this verſe are (as indeed according to any of the tranſlations) a reproof of thoſe ſpoken to, or of, for notorious injuſtice, and ſins, contrary to what God requires in the firſt place, ver. 8. viz. to do juſtly, and that whether ſpoken [l] by way of queſtion, or admiration, that after ſo much calling on, and warning, they ſhould perſiſt in their wickedneſs, and continue to do ſuch things as they are charged withal; or whether as if God, in the perſon [m] of a Judge, did queſtion and examine them concerning thoſe things, that ſo their guilt, and his juſtice in puniſhing them, might be made manifeſt. The things they are charged with are, that they retain ſtill in their houſes treaſures of wickedneſs, goods gotten by ill and unjuſt means, and that for lucre's ſake they keep ſcant meaſures, whereby to give forth in their ſelling leſs than they ſhould, and as it is added in the next verſe, wicked or falſe balances, and deceitful weights, [n] light ones to ſell with, and heavy ones to buy with. For the ſcant meaſure our Tranſlators put in the Margin meaſure of leanneſs, to ſhew that the word ſo ſignifies literally in the Hebrew, but by that every one will eaſily perceive to be meant that which is ſcant, or leſs than it ſhould be, not of juſt bigneſs: and ſuch meaſure is ſaid to be abominable, hateful to the Lord, and highly provoking him to anger, as alſo are falſe balances and deceitful weights, as Prov. xi. 1. A falſe balance is an abomination unto the Lord, and Prov. xx. 10. Divers weights and divers meaſures, both of them are alike abomination to the Lord. And ſo falſe balances are not good, ver. 23. So Amos viii. 5. they are reproved for making the Ephah (which is the word here rendred meaſure, it being the name of the meaſure chiefly [o] of dry things) ſmall, and the ſhekel great, and falſifying the balances by deceit. All theſe are contrary to the expreſs commandment of God, Levit. xix. 35, 36. Ye ſhall do no unrighteouſneſs in judgment, in mete-yard, in weight, or in meaſure: juſt balances, juſt weights, and a juſt Ephah, and a juſt hin ſhall ye have; and Deut. xxv. 13, 14, 15, 16. Thou ſhalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a ſmall, nor in thine houſe divers meaſures, &c. For all that do ſuch things, and all that do unrighteouſly, are an abomination unto the Lord thy God, they cannot be in themſelves pure or juſtifiable, nor will God in any wiſe juſtify them, or account them juſt, as in the next words follows.

[t] Grot. [u] Abarbinel. [w] Abu Walid. [x] R. Tanchum. [y] Ab. Ezra. [z] Abendana in Michlal Yophe. [a] Doway Tranſlat. [b] R. Joſeph Kimchi, R. D. Kimchi's father. See Kimchi in lib. Rad. in אי"ש. See James v. 3. See Ribera. [c] Kimchi. [d] Kimchi Rad. in אי"ש. [e] Job xli. 12. though it be there written חי"ן. [f] It is a Rabbinical deſcant of Abarbinel, that perhaps it is here written without that letter, to intimate that in the houſe of the wicked man, ſhall be a fire not blown, Job xx. 26. which ſhall conſume it.

11. Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances? &c.] In the Margin our Tranſlators put, or, ſhall I be pure with? &c. The word אזכה Ezceh, in the form that it is here put, may ſeem moſt regularly to ſignify I ſhall be pure or juſt intranſitively; and if ſo here taken, muſt be underſtood, as if the Prophet ſhould ſpeak in the perſon of any of the people, [p] or to ſhew what every one of them ought to ſay with himſelf, the queſtion importing a denying of the thing, and to be as much as to ſay, I cannot certainly be pure or juſt with ſuch things, and ſo implying, As I would be counted pure therefore, I ought to put them from me, or elſe I ſhall juſtly be puniſhed by God, or [q] as Some think the letter ה He prefixed, ſignifies rather an affirmation than a queſtion, a report of what every one of them did ſay, Certainly I ſhall be pure, though I uſe falſe balances, &c. or with a ſupply of, Wilt thou ſay I ſhall be pure, &c. or as if the Prophet ſhould ſpeak in his own perſon, [r] Should I, though a Prophet, and taking heed to the reſt of my ways, be pure if I uſed falſe balances, &c. no ſurely; much leſs then, they who are otherwiſe alſo wicked, and add this to their many other tranſgreſſions hereafter mentioned, with which alone it were im-impoſſible they ſhould be looked on as pure or innocent.

[g] See R. Sol. Jarchi, R. Iſaiah, R. Levi on the 2 Sam. xiv. [h] See de Dieu on the place. [i] See Kamûs and Golius in ايس. [k] See Kimchi. Rad. in איש and Schindler. [l] R. Solomon Jarchi, Kimchi on this place, and in Rad. Vatabl. [m] Calvin. [n] Chald. Kimchi, Grotius. [o] Grot. [p] R. D. Kimchi. [q] R. Tanchum. [r] Abarbinel.

The Chaldee, and Greek, and Syriack changing the perſon, Shall they, or he, be juſtified, ſeem to have had regard to the meaning more than to the word, which is in the firſt perſon, Shall I, &c.

[s] Others, both Jews and Chriſtians, as Ours in the text, take the word here to ſignify tranſitively, and to be ſpoken as in the perſon of God, Shall I juſtify or account them pure, and deal with them as ſo? [t] A Chriſtian Interpreter of great note, who takes the words in the ſame ſignification that Ours do, yet propoſeth another meaning, which he ſays will perhaps be preferable, to this purpoſe, Are there yet, &c. i. e. yet a little while and the treaſures of wickedneſs ſhall not be found in the houſe of the wicked, &c. for they ſhall be violently taken from them, for God will not juſtify them, nor defend them in ſuch doings, but will ſeverely puniſh them for them. But the former ſenſe ſeems plainer.

12. For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have ſpoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

For the rich men thereof are full of violence, &c.] Theſe doings of theirs, here charged on them, are [u] contrary to that ſecond head of thoſe good things which God requires of them, ver. 8. viz. to love mercy, for to that is violence (ſuch as he deſcribed, chap. ii. 2.) apparently contrary. For, or [w] as for the rich man, &c. or, ſo it is that the rich men thereof are, &c.

[Thereof] i. e. of the city mentioned, ver. 9. are full of violence, i. e. [x] have their houſes filled with goods taken away from others by violence and oppreſſion, or are wholly given to violence and oppreſſion, even they who have enough of their own, and need not to take from others; and the inhabitants thereof, the other inhabitants thereof, ſaith a learned [y] Jew, that have not ſo much power in their hands, for any advantage to themſelves, ſpare not to lie and ſpeak deceit.

[z] Another expounds this of the inhabitants thereof in general, that they ſpeak againſt God, or falſly concerning him, ſaying, The Lord ſeeth us not, or the Lord hath forſaken the earth, as thoſe, Ezek. viii. 12. and ix. 9. or as he ſays, Hoſea vii. 13. they have ſpoken lies againſt me, and ſo he makes what is here ſpoken contrary to that third thing required, ver. 8. viz. to walk humbly or ſincerely with God: but of their ſinning, contrary to that, he ſeems more clearly to ſpeak ver. 16.

13. Therefore alſo will I make thee ſick in ſmiting thee, in making thee deſolate, becauſe of thy ſins.

Therefore alſo will I make thee ſick in ſmiting thee, &c.] Having declared ſome of thoſe ſins for which he cried unto the city, he now in part deſcribes that rod which he bad them to hear, thoſe puniſhments with which he appointed to chaſtiſe them.

I will make ſick thee, O city, or inhabitant of the city, ſo [a] ſupplying the perſon which in the Hebrew is not expreſſed; in ſmiting thee, I will ſo ſmite thee as to make thee ſick. As thou by uſing violence and oppreſſion hadſt made ſick the heart of the poor oppreſſed, ſo will I by my [b] grievous and ſevere puniſhments make thee ſick, or afflict thee, by a grievous ſtroke, and by bringing deſolation on thy ſins, or on thee for ſuch thy iniquities, [or as [c] Some according to another ſignification, to cauſe men to wonder and be aſtoniſhed at my ſevere puniſhing thee for thy ſins.] Inſtead of I will make thee ſick, ſeveral ancient [d] Interpreters render, I alſo will begin to ſmite thee, or I have began to ſmite thee, and ſo alſo ſome more [e] modern; the occaſion of which ſeems a likeneſs between חלל Chalal and חלה Chalah, the roots of thoſe verbs, whereof one ſignifies to make ſick, the other to begin: ſo that they thought the ſame ſignification to belong to both. For ſo Munſter in his Dictionary ſhews himſelf to have done, putting this word, as he ſays, according to the opinion of ſome under the root חלל Chalal, yet reading it, as it is uſually now read, whereas more regularly it ſhould belong, as Others put it, to חלה.

14. Thou ſhalt eat, but not be ſatisfied, and the caſting down ſhall be in the midſt of thee, and thou ſhalt take hold, but ſhalt not deliver: and that which thou delivereſt, will I give up to the ſword.

Thou ſhalt eat, but not be ſatisfied, &c.] He here more particularly [f] reckons up ſome of thoſe puniſhments with which he will ſtrike them, and make them ſick, and to languiſh or be waſted even to deſolation. And for puniſhment of their greedineſs of heaping up more than enough by unlawful means, he threatneth that they ſhall eat, but not be ſatisfied, viz. the curſe of God going along with what they eat, it ſhall [g] not ſatisfy nor nouriſh with wholeſome nouriſhment, but ſhall, as the Chaldee and ſome other [h] Jews add for explication of the following words, breed in thee [i] evil diſeaſes, and pains in thy bowels, which ſhall bow thee down, and cauſe thee to couch and ſtoop. It is not meant, ſays [k] one of them, of want or ſcarcity of what they might eat, but that the digeſtive faculty in them ſhould be vitiated, weakned, and corrupted, that it ſhould not perform its duty, and ſo, though they eat, they ſhould not be ſatisfied. Both theſe are elſewhere called the break- breaking of the ſtaff of bread, viz. the not giving virtue to nouriſh, and taking away ſufficiency. But [l] Others underſtand it of ſcarcity and want of what may ſatisfy them; that which they have to eat ſhall not be ſufficient for that purpoſe: and ſo where the very ſame words occur, Levit. xxvi. 26. it ſeems to be underſtood: and the following words, thy caſting down ſhall be in the midſt of thee, [m] Others take as a deſcription of a differing puniſhment from the former, expounding in the midſt of thee, not of their bowels, but of their city or own country, in that thou ſhalt be brought low before thy carrying into captivity, there thou ſhalt with many evils, which ſhall bring thee down, be afflicted in the ſiege; or, the cauſe of your deſtruction ſhall not be ſo much from without from Others, as from within your ſelves, [n] your own ſins ſhall pull it on you, or, [o] though no enemy from abroad ſhould infeſt thee, there ſhall befal thee evils at home, as in thy own bowels, by which thou ſhalt be conſumed, and brought down through the curſe of God upon thee. Theſe ſenſes are not ſo different, but that they may all be comprehended in the words.

2

[s] Vulg. Lat. See R. Tanchum, Munſter, Jun. Tremel. Grot. [t] Calvin. [u] Abarbinel. [w] R. Tanchum. [x] R. D. Kimchi. [y] R. D. Kimchi. [z] Abarb. [a] Vatab. [b] Abarb. [c] Kimchi. [d] Greek, Syr. Arab. Vulg. Lat. [e] Munſt. [f] Abarb. [g] Kimchi. See Druſ. [h] See R. Solomon, and ſee Tarnov. [i] Verſ. Syriac. [k] Abarbinel.

Thou ſhalt take hold, but ſhalt not deliver, &c.] What they ſhall take hold of, and what not deliver, or what is the meaning of theſe phraſes, is queſtioned. The [p] Jews for the moſt part expound it of taking hold of ſeed or conception, and not delivering to be not bringing forth a mature birth, but miſcarrying by abortion, not being ſafely delivered; as if he ſhould ſay, Thy women ſhall conceive and be with child, but ſhall miſcarry, and not bring forth. The word תסג Taſſeg is ſuch as may be rendred either in the ſecond perſon maſculine, Thou ſhalt take hold, or in the third perſon feminine, ſhe ſhall take hold, and ſo the other verb תפליט Taphlit, either thou ſhalt not deliver, or ſhe ſhall not deliver: and [q] ſome learned men like well that it ſhould ſo be taken in the third perſon ſhe, i. e. the woman, or thy wife. But this need not nicely to be inſiſted on, as making a difference; for if it be ſaid of a nation or inhabitants of a city, Thou ſhalt conceive, but not bring forth, it will eaſily be underſtood to be meant, thy women in thee, and ſo, and that which thou delivereſt, i. e. thoſe children which thy women bring forth, or are delivered of, will I give up to the ſword to be ſlain by the enemy, and ſo will the ſecond perſon be kept, as in the other words, Thou ſhalt eat, &c. Thy caſting down, &c. thou ſhalt ſow, &c.

[r] Another Jew, who makes the ſenſe much the ſame, yet refers this word תסג to another root, ſo as to ſignify [s] ſhalt encompaſs or ſhut up, meaning their wombs ſhould through corrupt humours be as ſhut up. (So it is ſaid, Gen. xx. 18. that God had cloſed up all the wombs of the houſe of Abimelech.) But this, though coming to the ſame purpoſe, yet as to the derivation of the word ſeems far fetched.

[t] Others by that which they ſhould take hold of, think meant their goods, or part of them, if they could: but it is manifeſt that what is ſpoken of muſt be perſons from what follows, that they ſhall be given up to the ſword. [u] Others, therefore, underſtand it of their children. [w] Others rendring the word a little differently, Thou ſhalt overtake the enemies, which lead away thy ſons and daughters into captivity, but ſhalt not reſcue them, and if thou reſcue any of them, their end ſhall be to be deſtroyed by the ſword. [x] Others yet, underſtanding the things ſpoken of to be their wives and children, and what is moſt precious to them, yet interpret the verb in a far different ſenſe, viz. Thou ſhalt remove them out of the way, and hide them, to ſave them if thou canſt, but ſhalt not be able to ſave them from the enemies hand; and what thou ſaveſt for a while, I will at laſt deliver to the ſword: and it is manifeſt that the word is uſed in both theſe ſignifications, whether written with ס Samech or ש Shin, as we ſaid, chap. ii. 6. [y] Others make the perſon ſpoken to, the land or city, that ſhall endeavour to hold faſt and keep ſafe her people, but not be able to do it.

15. Thou ſhalt ſow, but thou ſhalt not reap: thou ſhalt tread the olives, but thou ſhalt not anoint thee with oil; and ſweet wine, but ſhalt not drink wine.

Thou ſhalt ſow but ſhalt not reap, &c.] The like judgments are threatned, Levit. xxvi. 16. and Deut. xxviii. 30. and forward to ver. 38, 39, 40, 41, &c. Amos v. 11. Hagg. i. 6. [z] Sweet wine, i. e. grapes to make ſweet wine; for they are them that are trodden, not the wine it ſelf. Abarbinel goes particularly to adapt the judgments to their ſins againſt what is required, ver. 8. but not ſo fully to the purpoſe.

16. ¶ For the ſtatutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the houſe of Ahab, and ye walk in their counſels, that I ſhould make thee a deſolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hiſſing: therefore ye ſhall bear the reproach of my people.

For the ſtatutes of Omri are kept, &c. In the Margin our Tranſlators put, or He doth much keep the ſtatutes, &c.] The reaſon is becauſe the word ישתמר yiſhtammer is ſuch as may ſignify either paſſively it is kept, or it ſhall be kept, for it is the future tenſe, but that is uſed to ſignify the preſent, and ſometime alſo the time paſt, eſpecially when it hath the letter ו V before it, which ſignifies and; or elſe he doth warily keep or ſhall keep it. And whereas the verb is of the ſingular number, and the noun joined with it (according to the firſt rendring) of the plural, that is eaſily ſalved by an uſual obſervation in ſuch caſes, by underſtanding every one of the ſtatutes, which a would would be the ſingular, and ſo it is by the [a] Jewiſh Interpreters ſalved: and ſo in the ſecond rendring, He doth much keep, &c. to make it agree with what precedes ſpoken to them in the ſecond perſon, and with what follows and ye walk (in the plural number and ſecond perſon) may be ſupplied, [b] every one of you doth keep.

[l] Ribera, Grotius. [m] Kimchi, Dutch Notes. [n] Ribera, Menoch. [o] Calvin. [p] Ab. Walid, Ab. Ezra, R. D. Kimchi. [q] Calvin. [r] Abarb. סיג. [s] See Cant. vii. 2. [t] Diodat. [u] Ribera, Sa. [w] R. Sol. [x] Jun. Tremel. Piſc. Tarnov. [y] Calvin. [z] Kimchi.

A learned Jew here obſerves, that when a nation or people is ſpoken to, they are ſometimes ſpoken to or of, in the maſculine gender, ſometimes in the feminine, ſometimes in the ſingular number, ſometimes in the plural; and we may add that it is likewiſe not unuſual to [d] change perſons without interruption in the ſentence, ſo as that the ſame perſon may ſeem to be ſpoken of, as abſent, and to, as preſent in the ſame ſentence: and this being obſerved, will keep the reader from being troubled with ſuch ſeeming difference, where it occurs; and therefore the Vulgar Latin and Syriack, though not obſerving the third perſon uſed in the original, but rendring in the ſecond Thou haſt kept, may be thought to have given the meaning well enough. What [e] Others give for the meaning, literally rendring the word in the future, The ſtatutes of Omri, &c. will be kept, as if it were by way of prediction, and he ſhould ſay, that notwithſtanding all that had been or ſhould be ſaid, or done to them, they would continue ſtill in their perverſeneſs, and run on in their wicked idolatrous courſes; ſeems not ſo proper to the place, wherein they ſeem charged with ſins that they were already guilty of, rather than to tell them what God ſaw they would do, till they had pulled upon themſelves utter deſtruction.

The ſins that they are here accuſed of, are the keeping the ſtatutes of Omri, and the works of the houſe of Ahab, and walking in their counſels, by which what is meant will eaſily be diſcerned, by looking into the hiſtory of thoſe two Kings of Iſrael, as ſet down in the 16th Chapter of the firſt Book of Kings, where is ſhewed how both Omri and his ſon Ahab ſet up and eſtabliſhed ſuch ways of idolatry, as Jeroboam had brought into Iſrael; and did even worſe things to the perverting and extirpating the true worſhip of God, and from them did the Kings of Judah learn to do the like, and eſtabliſh, as by a law, the like wicked ways and things as they did, among the Jews alſo: for ſo of Jehoram, King of Judah, it is ſaid, that he walked in the way of the Kings of Iſrael, as did the houſe of Ahab, 2 Kings viii. 18, 27. of his ſon Ahaziah, that he did evil in the ſight of the Lord, as did the houſe of Ahab, as alſo, 2 Chron. xxv. 6, &c. and xxvi. 3. ſo of Ahaz, 2 Kings xvi. 3. ſo of Manaſſeh King of Judah, 2 Kings xxi. 3. ſo that whereas there is difference betwixt Interpreters, whether the things here ſpoken be meant of Samaria or Jeruſalem, or Iſrael or Judah, or both, from the words themſelves there is no certain direction, for determining either on the one ſide or the other, except there were ſome way to ſhew whether this particular part of the prophecy were ſpoken before the taking of Samaria, or after it (as [f] Some think it was) inaſmuch as our Prophet propheſied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah (in the 6th year of whoſe reign Samariah was taken, 2 Kings xviii. 10.) both concerning Samariah and Jeruſalem; and it is manifeſt that both kingdoms were guilty of theſe ſins, of keeping the ſtatutes of Omri, and all the works of the houſe of Ahab, and walking in their counſels, as it is ſaid of Ahaziah, that he walked in the ways of the houſe of Ahab, becauſe his mother was his counſellor to do wickedly; and that he did evil in the ſight of the Lord, becauſe they were his counſellors, after the death of his father to his deſtruction, and he walked after their counſel, 2 Chron. xxii. 3, 4, 5.

As for theſe ſins, they are manifeſtly contrary to what is required in the third place, ver. 8. viz. to walk humbly or ſincerely with God. Whereas he required that they ſhould acknowledge him alone the only true God, and worſhip him in thoſe ways by himſelf preſcribed, they forſaking him, ſet up and worſhipped falſe gods, according to the ſtatutes and ways by thoſe wicked kings introduced, and followed therein their counſels, directions and preſcriptions. What heavy judgments on their ſo doing ſhould enſue the next words declare, viz.

That I ſhould make thee a deſolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hiſſing, &c. Therefore ye ſhall bear, &c.] Here is that change of perſons and numbers and genders, which we before mentioned. Thee in the ſecond perſon ſingular, inhabitants thereof (i. e. of that city) in the third perſon and feminine gender, and ye ſhall bear, the ſecond perſon plural maſculine, all ſpoken of the ſame perſon, viz. the city or the inhabitants thereof.

That I ſhould make thee.] That doth not here denote the final cauſe or intention, as if for this end God would have it ſo, that they ſhould do ſuch things that he might bring them to deſtruction, or that it was [g] their intention by ſo doing to pull on themſelves deſtruction, but to ſhew the neceſſary conſequence from their wicked doings to his judgments, that ſeeing they continued perverſely in ſuch their doings, it would neceſſarily follow (juſtice ſo requiring) that they ſhould by him be ſo puniſhed, and he would make them a deſolation, or as the Margin [h] an aſtoniſhment, which will neceſſarily follow on the other, viz. when all that behold how a nation lately ſo flouriſhing was made deſolate, ſhould be aſtoniſhed (as Jer. xviii. 16. and xix. 6.) (the word indifferently ſignifying, and ſo including both) and the inhabitants thereof an hiſſing: That they that ſee what is befallen them, ſhall hiſs at them in token of ſcorn and deriſion. The like expreſſions preſſions are uſed in ſeveral other places, as Deut. xxviii. 37. 1 Kings ix. 7, 8. 2 Chron. xxix. 8. Jer. xxv. 9, 18. and xxix. 18. and xlix. 17. and li. 37. Lam. ii. 15, 16.

[a] Aben Ezra, Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [b] See Piſc. [c] R. Tanch. [d] Glaſſ. Gram. ſacr. p. 910. [e] See Varabl. Calvin, Ch. à Caſtro. [f] Abarb. [g] Druſ. Tarnov. [h] So the Syriack.

Therefore ye ſhall bear the reproach of my people.] As to the ſignification of theſe words, Interpreters do not at all differ, yet in the giving of the meaning of them in other words do much differ, [i] Some thus expounding them, Reproach, in lieu of that reproach wherewith ye have reproached my people, i. e. the poor innocent oppreſſed ones [which the violent oppreſſing rich and great men have reproachfully and contumeliouſly uſed] the reproach which the Heathen ſhall caſt upon you ſhall be a recompence or puniſhment of that. [k] Others, That reproach wherewith in my law I threatned my people if they ſhould forſake me; and thoſe whom I had choſen to my ſelf for a peculiar people, and done ſo great things for, as are called to their mind, ver. 4, 5. juſtly deſerve for their unthankfulneſs and rebellions againſt me. [l] Others, ye (O ye rich men, ver. 12.) ſhall bear the reproach of having pulled all thoſe evils on my people; they ſhall lay the reproach and ſhame on you for it. [m] Others looking on this as ſpoken to the kingdom of Judah and Jeruſalem, after that Samaria was taken, and the Iſraelites, or ten tribes carried captives, take it as a threat that the like ſhould befal Jeraſalem as had befallen Samaria, and that the ſame reproach which the ten tribes (whom they think meant by my people) had ſuffered, the other two ſhould alſo ere long bear, and ſhamefully be led into captivity, as they already were, and their kingdom alſo be laid waſte. [n] Or that they ſhould not think to wear out the ſhame of their evil doings among other nations, but ſhould ſtill continue to be reproached, for that being the people of God, they had forſaken him, and by their evil doings had provoked him to caſt them out of his land. [o] Some by reproach underſtand thoſe greater puniſhments which they ſhould bear, for that having been by God owned for his people, they had not eſteemed as they ought their privilege, nor behaved themſelves worthy of it; (compare Amos iii. 2.) or as the Reverend Diodati expreſſes it, the ignominious puniſhment for having profaned the name and title of being my people and church by your ſins, according to what is ſaid, Ezek. xxxvi. 20. And when they entred unto the Heathen whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they ſaid to them, theſe are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of his land (and ſee Rom. ii. 24.) and Others perhaps otherwiſe give the meaning; ſo that the words plainly ſignifying as they are in our tranſlation rendred, it will be left to the judgment of the reader to take that expoſition, which he conceives to give the moſt genuine and fulleſt meaning of them. What additions to, or difference from other tranſlations are in this verſe found in the Greek, and [p] ſuch as follow them, will not be to our purpoſe much to inſiſt on, or inquire into, that intended by us being to ſee what expoſitions the Hebrew, as now read (of the ſincerity and incorruptneſs of which reading we make no doubt) will admit, that ſo the reader may take his choice, ſeeing [q] they that make it their buſineſs to adjuſt and juſtify that verſion, give no good account of it; only whereas ſome, becauſe they render not of my people, but of the peoples, think they read not עַמִּי Ammi, as is now read, which uſually ſignifies my people, but עַמִּים Ammim, which moſt frequently is uſed for peoples; it is by [r] Others manifeſtly proved that there is no neceſſity to ſay ſo, in as much as plural numbers, though more regularly ending in ם M, yet often are without it.

CHAP. VII.

VERSE 1. Wo is me, for I am as when they have gathered the ſummer-fruits, as the grape-gleanings of the vintage: there is no cluſter to eat: my ſoul deſired the firſt-ripe fruit.

WO is me, for I am as when they have gathered the ſummer-fruits, &c.] The Prophet in the former part of this chapter (whether in his own perſon, or in the perſon of the church, and company of the true worſhippers of God, as the ſtate of things in thoſe times which he deſcribes ſtood) ſadly complains of the great and general corruption of thoſe times, which hath made [a] Some to think, that he rather ſpake by way of prediction of things as they ſhould be in the following times of Manaſſeh, than as they were in the days of Hezekiah, that good king and great reformer of religion, under whom he ſeems to have ſpoken theſe things: for he propheſied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. But if we conſider that Ahaz was a very wicked king, and promoted to the utmoſt both idolatry and all abominations of the Heathen, and the ways of the Kings of Iſrael, 2 Kings xvi. 2, 3, &c. we may well think, that not only in his time (in which alſo our Prophet lived and uttered part of his prophecies) but in the ſucceeding times of Hezekiah alſo (at leaſt till the reformation by him made) there were great corruptions of manners among the people, as well of Judah as Iſrael (to both which it is ſaid he propheſied) as appears out of the hiſtory, and the great need there was of a reformation, both of their worſhip and manners, and the great pains and care that Hezekiah was put to in effecting it, as appears, 2 Kings xviii. 4. and 2 Chron. xxix. 3, &c. and his declaration of their great wickedneſs, and the heavy judgments that they had thereby pulled on Judah and Jeruſalem, expreſſed there, ver. 8, 9. in much like terms as we have here, chap. vi. 16. viz. that the Lord delivereth them to trouble,

[i] R. Tanchum, Ab. Ezra, D. Kimchi, Vatabl. [k] Jun. Tremel. Tarn. &c. [l] Grot. Stokes, Ribera. [m] Abarbinel. [n] Id. and ſee Calv. [o] Calvin. [p] Arab. [q] Nobilius, Capellus, p. 251. [r] See Buxt. vind. p. 626. and Not. Miſcel. ad Port. Moſis, c. 4. p. 60. Aven. Gramm. p. 422. [a] Grot. Stokes.

ble, to aſtoniſhment, and hiſſing, &c. So that as our Prophet Micah even in the times of Hezekiah propheſied, and ſpake to all the people of Judah, ſaying, That Zion ſhould be plowed like a field, and Jeruſalem ſhould become heaps, by which means Hezekiah was moved to fear, and beſought the Lord, and to the utmoſt of his power ſought to reform what was amiſs, and the Lord repented him of the evil which he had pronounced againſt them, Jer. xxvi. 18, 19. ſo may it be perceived, that in the times before Manaſſeh, there was occaſion enough for the Prophet to utter this complaint. But whatever the times that he particularly ſpeaks of were, the corruption of them it appears was very great, which he thus both bewaileth and deſcribeth,

Wo is me, for I am as when they have gathered the ſummer-fruits, &c.] Or as in the Margin, as the gatherings of ſummer, as likewiſe the Syriack verſion hath it. Some of the ancient tranſlations otherwiſe. The [h] Greek, as he that gathereth ears let fall in the harveſt; the [c] Vulgar Latin, as he that gathereth in Autumn the cluſters of the vintage, and modern [d] Interpreters alſo differently, as when the ſummer-fruits are intercepted or taken away (ſo that a traveller ſeeking ſuch wherewith to refreſh himſelf, can find none.) Theſe all, however they differ in the expreſſion of their meaning, yet ſeem not much to differ about the ſignification of the words in the Hebrew, but all do take the firſt word, אספי Aſphe, to have in it the ſignification of gathering, and the ſecond, קיץ Kaits, the ſignification of ſummer or ſummer-fruits: and in the intention of the expreſſion they likewiſe, as they are uſually expounded, ſeem to agree, viz. that it is to denote the paucity of godly men then among them, that there were no ſuch remaining among them, as were to be accounted of. So that if the words be looked on, as ſpoken in the Prophet's own perſon, it will ſeem a complaint much like that of Eliah, 1 Kings xix. 10. That he, even he was left alone, that truly and ſincerely worſhipped God, and he could ſcarce find any other: or a bewailing of his condition that it was his lot to live or propheſy in ſuch a time, wherein [e] there were very few good and pious men to be found. It was as hard and rare to find them as good figs or grapes [f] after the time of in-gathering or vintage. Which makes him wiſh that he had lived in thoſe former times, when there were ſuch as were like the firſt ripe fruits, excelling in their kind, and they not a few, but as a full harveſt or vintage. Or if as ſpoken in the perſon of the people of God, or his church, or nation (as a learned [g] Jew ſpeaks) which ſeems moſt convenient and agreeable to the place, then will it be a complaint of that church or company of the paucity of truly pious men in her, as rare and hard to find, as good fruit after the ſummer-fruits are diligently gathered in, or cluſters of grapes after the vintage: few will be found, and thoſe not very good. For ſo we may well ſuppoſe the quality and imperfection of thoſe that are to be found to be in theſe words complained of, as well as their paucity for number. This the fore-mentioned learned Jew well ſuggeſts to us by his ſaying, that by the gatherings of the ſummer, or ſummer-fruits, are meant or ſignified ſuch fallings or fruits as are gathered up by the poor, which either falling in time of gathering, and ſo being fouled, ſullied, marred, or ſtained, or otherwiſe nought, the owners think not worth the taking up, or gathering them in, but leave them behind for who ſo will to take them up. [h] So that here by this ſimilitude ſeems intimated not only, that there were but few good men left, but that thoſe few alſo that went for ſuch, and had ſome good thing in them, yet came far ſhort of thoſe good men in former ages, as ſhort as fallings or refuſe fruits left behind, of thoſe that were carefully gathered for their goodneſs, or ſome few ſower grapes left on a vine do of ſuch a cluſter as a man would chuſe to eat. (So R. Solomon obſerves, the Chaldee Paraphraſt by the gatherings of ſummer-fruits to have underſtood while he renders the laſt figs ill refuſe figs.) Better might be deſired, but ſcarce found, that is it which he ſays, my ſoul deſires the firſt-ripe fruit, i. e. ſuch truly virtuous men as the primitive times did produce, ſuch as excelled other men, as far as the firſt and kindly ripe fruits do ſuch after-growing, unkindly fruits as come not at all to maturity and perfection. That by firſt ripe fruit ſuch of the beſt ſort and moſt grateful in their kind are meant, is manifeſtly more agreeable to the uſe of the like expreſſion, Hoſea ix. 10. and to the ſenſe of the place, than with [i] Some to underſtand it of unripe fruit, not yet come to maturity: as if the Prophet ſhould ſay, that ſeeing the ſcarcity of good men and difficulty to find them, he was content even with ſuch as he could find, for he rather with earneſt longing doth deſire better than he could find. What reaſon he had for his complaint thus made in his own or the Churches name in figurative terms in the next words he farther explains, ſaying,

2. The good man is periſhed out of the earth; and there is none upright among men: they all lye in wait for blood: they hunt every man his brother with a net.

The good man is periſhed out of the earth (or as in the Margin) the godly or merciful man.] Our Engliſh word good well anſwers to the Hebrew word in the original, חסיד Chaſid, which ſignifying both a holy godly or pious man, or a kind merciful man, hath occaſioned ſome little difference betwixt Interpreters: [k] Some rendring it the holy or godly man: [l] Others the kind or merciful man. To both theſe is the Hebrew word appliable, and ſo is our our Engliſh to ſuch a one as hath regard both to his duty to God, and expreſſes that in an holy and godly converſation, and to his duty to man expreſſing that in acts of charity or mercy and doing good to others; both theſe in obſervance of the commandments concur to the making up חסיד Chaſid, a good man; they will not, where there is ſincerity, be ſeparated, and ſuch the Prophet deſires to find, but can find none of them, they are periſhed out of the earth or land, (for of that part of the earth, that country where he lived of Judah and Iſrael he ſpeaks:) ſuch have formerly been, but now are dead and gone, and 'tis in vain to ſeek for them, for there is none upright among men, among ſuch as are now living in the land, i. e. [m] ſcarcely any to be found. For that we may ſo underſtand it as to the greater part, and not preciſely, that there was not any one ſingle ſuch man on the earth, we may obſerve what the Lord anſwered to Eliah, complaining in like manner that he was left alone, and there was none that feared God, 1 Kings xix. 14, 19. and Rom. xi. 3, 4. and ſo is this complaint like thoſe which we have, Pſalm xii. 1. and xiv. 3. and Rom. iii. 10, 11, 12. which at leaſt import the great paucity and ſcarceneſs of good and upright men, which are ſo few in reſpect of thoſe which are otherwiſe, that it may in reſpect of the generality be ſaid there are none ſuch, they are loſt among the multitude. That he hath juſt reaſon to ſay ſo, he farther makes evident by deſcribing the contrary behaviour of the generality, viz. [n] That they all lay wait for blood, and hunt every man his brother with a net.

[b] Druſ. [c] Doway Tranſl. [d] Jun. Tremel. Piſc. Tarn. [e] Abarb. [f] Compare this expreſſion with Iſaiah xvii. 6. [g] R. Tanch. [h] So Jer. xxiv. good men are repreſented to the Prophet by good figs, and evil men by evil figs. [i] Hierom. Pelican. See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [k] Vulg. Latin, Greek. [l] Jun. Tremel. Pagnin. Tig.

Lie in wait for blood.] i. e. to take away the lives of men, or, as [o] Some, to ſpoil them of their ſubſtance, and what they have, which is to them as their blood, and wherewith their life is ſuſtained: probably both are comprehended in the name [p] bloods (for it is the plural number) and coveting of other mens goods and rapine, often endeth in cruelty and murder. That men greedy of gain may obtain their prey they will not ſpare to take away the life of the owners thereof, [q] Prov. i. 19. and by all crafty cunning and hidden means do they ſeek, and take occaſion to effect this.

They hunt every man his brother with a net.] As a hunter, fowler, or fiſher that ſpreads his net, uſes all arts to get his prey into it, that he may catch it, and deſtroy it, ſo do theſe uſe all poſſible arts, whereby they may inſnare any, by whoſe deſtruction they may gain ought to themſelves. This rendring is plain and proper, and the meaning of it perſpicuous; yet do ſome (and thoſe of the ancienteſt Interpreters) render otherwiſe, viz. they hunt every man his brother to death or deſtruction, [r] ſo the Chaldee, Syriack, and Vulgar Latin. The reaſon of this diverſity is manifeſt to be from hence, becauſe the word חרם Cherem ſignifies a net and alſo deſtruction, and it cannot be thought that they who rendred it according to one ſignification, were not aware of the other, becauſe in other places they uſe it, but took that which they thought here moſt agreeable to the ſenſe and meaning of the place. So they that here render it deſtruction or death, Hab. i. 15. render it net. Here they thought, it ſeems, that of deſtruction more agreeable to what goes before, They lay in wait for blood, and tending to the ſame ſenſe. They that render with a net, underſtand the prepoſition ב Be (as if it were בחרם) they that to deſtruction, the letter ל L, as if it were לחרם [s] Lecherem.) The [t] Greek rendring the words they afflict with affliction, or ſtraiten with ſtraitning every one his neighbour, ſeem rather to have given the meaning, than to have attended to the literal ſignification of the words. They that ſeek after various readings, might perhaps ſay, that here inſtead of יצודו yatſudu, they hunt, they ſeem to have read יצורו yatſuru, they ſtraiten, or afflict, and inſtead of חרם Cherem, a net, הרב Hereb, much, or ſome other word: but ſuch conjectures are no ſafe or ſure way of ſolving difficulties, or reconciling differences. The meaning will be otherwiſe well enough made up, by ſaying, that by ſtraiten with ſtraitning, or afflict with affliction, they would expreſs what is by the Prophet in figurative terms expreſſed, inaſmuch as the hunter's intention by laying his net, is to bring thoſe creatures, which he would catch, into a ſtrait, that ſo he may have them at his pleaſure, and uſe them how he will.

3. ¶ That they may do evil with both hands earneſtly, the prince aſketh, and the judge aſketh for a reward: and the great man uttereth his miſchievous deſire: ſo they wrap it up.

That they may do evil with both hands earneſtly, the prince aſketh, &c.] In theſe words, wherein he farther taxeth the great corruption, avarice, and cruelty, of ſuch eſpecially who were in authority, and ought to have done juſtice, and ſeen it done, and thoſe that were rich and potent, there is ſome difficulty. A learned [u] man well verſed in the language of the Scripture, confeſſeth that this place did long and much perplex him, that he could not ſatisfy himſelf in the interpretation of it, and perhaps was not at laſt ſatisfied. And ſuch different expoſitions are brought of it, that the reader who takes notice of them, will perhaps be put to uſe his beſt judgment and diſcretion, to chooſe which he may prefer and ſatisfy himſelf with. The former part of the verſe, in which is the chief difficulty, conſiſts briefly of theſe words, על הרע Al Haraa, for evil, or to do evil, כפים Cappaim, hands, or both hands, להיטיב Libeitib, to do or make good, or to do well. From the underſtanding of theſe words, and joining them in conſtruction one with another, and either taking them, ſo as to make a diſtinct period of themſelves, or or in conjunction with the following words, the prince aſketh, &c. ariſeth that diverſity of interpretations: the more ancient Tranſlations thus rendring, viz. the Greek, for evil do they prepare (or make ready) their hands, and ſo the Arabick following them; the Vulgar Latin, the evil of their hands they call good. The Chaldee Paraphraſe, they do evil with their hands, and do not do good. The Syriack accordingly, their hands are prepared (or ready) to do evil, and they do not do good. Among more modern Interpreters there is yet more variety. Of the Jews [w] Some thus expound the firſt words by themſelves, alſo, For the evil (or for a reward of the evil) of your hands, do ye hope that he will do good unto you? (or, as a MS. copy reads, that I will or ſhall do good unto you?) [x] Others taking the Letter ל L prefixed to the laſt word, to import here, as ſometimes it doth, for, or inſtead of, thus, for the evil of your hands, becauſe it is to you inſtead of doing good, is, or ſhall this come: or as [y] another expounds it, For evil two hands, i. e. two portions, inſtead of doing good, i. e. they render double of evil, for, or inſtead of, good. This ſeems very obſcure, and would be plainer thus, for doing, or to do evil, i. e. They do of evil twice as much as they do of good, or double evil to what, or inſtead of what, they ſhould do of good.

[m] See Eſtius, Doway Bible, Grotius. [n] See Hoſea iv. 2. [o] Chriſt. à Caſtro, Vatablus. [p] See Note on c. iii. 10. [q] See Diodati's Notes on Prov. i. 19. [r] So Verſ. Tig. [s] See Druſ. and Schindler in חרם. [t] Ἐκθλίζωσιν ἐκθλιςῆ. [u] Druſius.

[z] Others will have the words to be thus expounded, They ſet themſelves as for the evil that is in their hands, that they may do it well, i. e. confirm it, or do it effectually or throughly, that they may take bribes: ſo that in their opinion the meaning of the word, to do well, is to do firmly and throughly. Againſt which [a] another of them excepts, becauſe it is improper to ſay, a man may do ill well; but to that may ſeem an eaſy anſwer, that the doing it well, imports not any goodneſs in the thing that is done, but earneſtneſs and putting to force in doing it: which in other [b] languages is not unuſual to ſay, that a man doth ſuch a thing well, when he throughly and earneſtly doth it, though the thing it ſelf be not good. And therefore do Ours with other [c] modern Tranſlators and Expoſitors take this meaning. The meaning which he that excepts againſt this, gives, is, When any deſires to have any evil, that is in the hands of any, or is done him by the hands of any, rectified, any wrong or injury done to him redreſſed by thoſe that are in authority, they to do him right, require bribes and gifts; ſo that the remedy ſhall be worſe to him than the damage that he hath ſuffered, and deſires to have made good to him, and will coſt him more. This meaning doth a late learned [d] man likewiſe give, viz. that it cannot be obtained of thoſe that are in authority and place of judicature, to defend and do right to an innocent oppreſſed man againſt him that is of wicked hands, without giving them bribes and rewards; ſo that the words may run, to do good or right againſt him that is of wicked hands, the prince aſketh, &c. or, Is good and right to be done againſt him that is of wicked hands? (i. e. if right be to be done, &c.) or the hands are (i. e. ought to be) for doing good, or right, againſt evil, or interrogatively are the hands for doing right againſt evil? but they abuſe their hands, inſtead of doing right with them, they uſe them only to take bribes, the prince aſketh, &c. But there ſeems no reaſon to depart from that ſenſe which our Tranſlators follow; underſtanding by earneſtly, fully, with diligence, and the utmoſt of their power. It ſeems well to agree to the words, except we ſhall think it a plainer way to render it, for evil (or to do evil) two or both hands [viz. [e] are ready] or they hunt with both hands, but to do good, the prince aſketh, &c. that the meaning may be, They are ready with both hands, i. e. with all their might to do evil, they have two hands for that, but muſt be hired and largely bribed to do good. Whereas the Chaldee (as likewiſe the Syriack) renders, and do not do good, a learned [f] man thinks that inſtead of להיטיב Leheitib, which ſignifies to do good, he read לא הטיב Lo hetib, in two words, which ſignifies he hath not done good, but there is no neceſſity to ſay ſo, but rather that he read it as it is now uſually read, and took the letter ל L to import, as we ſaid ſome think it to do, as much as, for or inſtead of, and ſo gave the meaning of it in equivalent terms; for to ſay they do evil and do not do good, is all one with, they do evil inſtead of doing good.

The prince aſketh, and, &c.] Here are three ſorts of perſons accuſed of combining together for the perverting of juſtice, deſcribed by their ſeveral titles, the Prince, the Judge, the Great One. Firſt, [g] the Prince, i. e. either King or chief Ruler, or the Magiſtrate, he that ſhould overſee all, and look that judgment be impartially done, even he looks after bribes, and requires preſents from thoſe that ſeek for juſtice. [h] Others by the Prince underſtand ſuch as are in chief authority under the King, who, becauſe it were a ſhame for him to aſk, do aſk gifts for him. Secondly, the Judge, he that ſhould determine the cauſe and pronounce ſentence according to right, without reſpect to perſons in judgment, Deut. i. 17. and not take any gift, Deut. xvi. 19. he is [i] for a reward, or aſketh a reward, and is ſwayed by what he hopes to gain, or that which ſhall come to his [k] ſhare of the money given, not by the merits of the cauſe. And the great man, i. e. ſay [l] Some, he that is great in the King's court, [m] Others the Advocate, the Pleader, or he that is to ſet things in order for a legal proceeding, and to inform the judges, and inſtruct thoſe that have ſuits in law, and order their plea to the beſt advantage. [n] Others, any great, potent, or rich man. He uttereth his miſchievous deſire, or as in the Margin, the miſ- miſchief of his ſoul, i. e. either the miſchief which he hath conceived within himſelf, or as [o] Some, that which ſhall be, or prove miſchief to himſelf, or as divers [p] ancient Tranſlations, the deſire of his ſoul. If the great man be taken in either of the two former ſignifications, the meaning will be, either, that theſe three one under another, jointly conſpire to ſet juſtice to ſale, not as right, but as their own gain and advantage ſhall require, and be advanced by, though it will end in the deſtruction of their ſouls; or as [q] Some, (though perhaps not ſo appoſitely to the place) that whatſoever the Prince, though never ſo illegally, requires from any, both the judge and the great man do further his deſire in it, and care not what, how contrary to law, right, and juſtice, ſoever they ſay, or pronounce in his behalf for effecting his deſigns, out of hope of advantage to themſelves too, and that they may ſhare in the gain. But if it be taken in the third ſignification, then the meaning will be, that the great or rich man, who hath in his mind or deſire to get any thing by wrong from any other [r] poorer or weaker than himſelf, and who hath done wrong in any kind, ſeeing both the prince and judge have both their hands open to receive gifts and bribes, is not afraid or aſhamed to utter what miſchievous deſign he hath in his mind, being ſure of their aſſiſtance in whatſoever he deſires; and ſo how unjuſt ſoever the cauſe be, yet by their mutual compliance, they make it firm on his ſide, or ſo wrap it up and involve it, that the right ſhall not appear. The verb יעבתוה yeabbetuha, rendred they wrap it up, being in the plural number [s] ſeems to include the three ſorts of perſons mentioned, viz. the prince, the judge, and the great man, ſhewing that they all conſpire in that which is done. The ſignification of it may be taken either from עבות Aboth, firſt, as it ſignifies a cord ſtrongly twiſted, whence is ſaid, [t] Iſaiah v. 18. that draw ſin, as with a cart-rope, and ſo it will be to twiſt ſtrongly together, ſo as it cannot be eaſily undone or broken; and ſo the meaning will be, that the matter however weak in it ſelf, as being altogether unjuſt, is by theſe three twiſting it up made as firm and ſtrong as a [u] threefold cord, that it ſhall prevail againſt right, and not by any that hath better right on his ſide be diſſolved; or, ſecondly, as it is ſpoken of a tree or bough with many thick branches or leaves folded, and as it were twiſted one with another, and ſo to ſignify they branch out or divide into many branches the matter (as ſome learned [w] Jews expound it) or probably, they make intricate the matter, as thick branches of trees complicated and wrapped together, ſo that men may not eaſily diſcern between the right and the wrong, nor diſtinguiſh one from the other. Agreeable to which meaning ſeems the rendring of the Vulgar Latin, they trouble it, i. e. confound, or, make confuſed the matter: and this ſignification is agreeable to that of the word عبث Abatha in Arabick, to mingle together or confound, in which language likewiſe عفث Aphatha, with change of the b into p or ph is to twiſt or wreſt, although in this ſignification alſo it may be underſtood as the former, to make difficult or hard to be ſolved. Then the pronoun affixed to that verb which ſignifies it, is regularly appliable, ſo חות נפשו Havoth Napſho, [x] rendred his miſchievous deſire, or miſchief of his ſoul, i. e. that miſchievous unjuſt deſign which the great rich man hath conceived in himſelf, and now utters, that by the aſſiſtance of the prince and judge whom he hath gained by promiſe of bribe, it may be juſtified and made to prevail againſt any that oppoſe it.

[w] R. Solom. ſee Abarb. [x] Ab. Ezra, from R. Marinus. and ſee Abarb. [y] R. Tanch. [z] R. David Kimchi, and Miclal Yophi. [a] Abarb. [b] See Druſ. [c] Jun. Trem. Tig. Druſ. Tarnov. and ſee Dutch Notes. [d] Lud. de Dieu. [e] Grot. Stokes. [f] Grot. [g] Abarb. [h] Kimchi. [i] R. Tanch. [k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] Idem. [m] Abarb. [n] Calvin, and R. Tanch.

This ſignification of miſchief, or naughtineſs, or calamity, or deſtruction, or the like, is agreeable to the often uſe of it in the Scripture; that other, which ſome ancient Interpreters (as we ſaid) give it, is confirmed by the frequent uſe of the ſame word هوا Hawa, in the Arabick tongue, in that notion of deſire.

[In the Francfort Edition of the Greek Bible 1597, it is obſerved in the notes or various lections, that this verſe, &c. in the Greek differs much from the original Hebrew, and ſo it doth both from that and all other Tranſlations (except ſuch as were out of the Greek) that it will be in vain to ſeek to reconcile them; it being there read, and the judge ſpeaks peaceable words, it is the deſire of his ſoul, and I will take away, &c. But it is more our buſineſs to ſee what the Hebrew will bear, and what rendrings beſt agree with it.]

4. The beſt of them is as a briar: the moſt upright is ſharper than a thorn-hedge: the day of thy watchmen, and thy viſitation cometh; now ſhall be their perplexity.

The beſt of them is as a briar, &c.] Of them, whether of thoſe forenamed, the prince, the judge, and the great man (as [y] Some) or more [z] generally, of all the whole multitude of the people, of the preſent generation (agreeably to what was ſaid, ver. 2.) is like a briar, or thorn; and he that is the moſt upright among them, is as a bough of thorns [a] out of an hedge made of thorns, or ſharper (as is well ſupplied) than a thorn-hedge. Both theſe words rendred briar and a thorn-hedge are joined together, Prov. xv. 19. and there rendred an hedge of thorns. So miſchievous are they, that there is no dealing with them without receiving hurt from them, as he that [b] meddleth with thorns, or handleth, or goes through a thorn-hedge, cannot eſcape either having his hands pricked, or his fleſh or clothes rent, or receiving ſome miſchief.

The day of thy watch-men and thy viſitation cometh, &c.] The word מצפיך Metzappeh, as

[o] Kimchi, R. Tanch. [p] Chald. Greek, Syriack and Latin. [q] Ribera, and Chriſt. à Caſtro. [r] See chap. ii. 1, 2. [s] Aben Ezra refers it to the people that hear it, and readily confirm it with their ſuffrages. [t] See Eccleſ. iv. 12. [u] See Grotius. [w] Ab. Walid. and R. Tanch. [x] R. Tanch. [y] Abarb. [z] Vatab. in fol. [a] Chald. R. Tanch. Vulg. Latin. [b] Compare it with 2 Sam. xxiii. 6.

as likewiſe צופה Tzopheh, (from the ſame root ſignifying to look abroad, or about, to ſpy, and ſometimes to look for, or expect, &c.) properly ſignifying a watch-man, one that is ſet in ſome eminent place to look about and ſpy what he can diſcover, as the approach of enemies, or other comers to a place, or any likelihood, or occaſion of danger, and give report thereof to the inhabitants, that they may be aware of it, is in the Scripture applied to Prophets from the likeneſs of their office, who were alſo anciently called ſeers, 1 Sam. ix. 9. as Ezek. iii. 17. and xxxiii. 7. as for the ſame reaſon it may be attributed to other [c] teachers or governors, who have overſight and care of people, or ought to watch for their good, and take care, or warn them to take care to prevent any evil, that they may ſee coming on them: and of ſuch governors, is the word by ſome underſtood. Now what titles or epithets ſoever did belong to true Prophets, no doubt, falſe Prophets did pretend to and take to themſelves, and thoſe that were deluded and ſeduced by them would attribute to them. Accordingly is this name here underſtood by ſome of true Prophets, by ſome of falſe ones. Thoſe that underſtand it of the true Prophets, thus give the meaning; The day of thy watch-men, i. e. which the Prophets, whom God gave as watch-men to thee to warn thee of the danger and deſtruction, which, if thou ſhouldſt continue in thy ſinful courſes, would certainly come upon thee; did forewarn and tell thee of, is now (becauſe thou obſtinately goeſt on in them) [d] come, is now at hand, and thy viſitation, the time that God will viſit and puniſh thee for thy iniquities, is (according to their words) come.

Now (ſuddenly) ſhall be their perplexity, either of thoſe [e] mentioned, the prince, the judge and great man, and ſuch as before indulged all liberty and freedom of wickedneſs to themſelves, and perplexed others, or, more [f] generally, as if he had ſaid to the people, now ſhall your perplexity be, now ſhall you be be brought to confuſion; ſuch change of perſons being not unuſual in ſpeaking to, or of any. Thoſe that underſtand it of the falſe Prophets, give it either thus, 1. The day of thy falſe Prophets, who made thee truſt on lies, thou ſhalt now ſee what it will prove, whether good or bad. For behold the day of viſitation for thine iniquities is come, now ſhall be their perplexity, i. e. [g] the perplexity of thoſe falſe Prophets: or as [h] Others explain the ſame meaning, in the day wherein thy falſe Prophets ſaid that all things ſhould be happy and proſperous unto thee, ſhall thy viſitation come, i. e. God ſhall puniſh thee, and now ſhall they be perplexed in mind, i. e. God ſhall puniſh them for the injury done by them to the poor. And to this interpretation ſeems reduceable the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and [i] Others explaining it, in the day that thou didſt expect or look for good, the day of the viſitation of thy wickedneſs cometh. Or elſe, 2*ly*. [k] The day of thy falſe Prophets, the day wherein they ſhall be puniſhed, ſhall come; for ſhortly ſhall come the day of thy viſitation. To which is reduceable the expoſition of others, who explain it in the day of, i. e. [l] when thou ſhalt ſee the day, that is, the deſtruction of thy Prophets, know that thy puniſhment is come: (where by Prophets I ſuppoſe he muſt mean falſe Prophets.) The like way of conſtruction follow [m] they, who (as we ſaid) underſtand by watch-men, the governors, princes, or magiſtrates. To either of theſe expoſitions agree the words, as in our tranſlation read. But a [n] Jew of later ſtanding, who had ſeen what thoſe antienter ſaid, pretends to give a properer meaning of the words, and denying the word which is rendred watch-men, to be put here as a title either of true or falſe Prophets, will have the words thus rendred (as ſtill having reſpect to thoſe afore-named, the prince, the judge, the great man, joining together in ſeeking for bribes and gain, and ſetting juſtice to ſale.) In the day (or all the time) that they are looking after, (for ſo ſometimes the word may ſignify, viz. to expect or look for,) or expect thee to bring to them gifts or rewards: heed ſhall be given to thee, cogniſance of thy cauſe ſhall preſently be had, and no longer: when they have gotten all they can, and they expect no more from thee, thou mayſt ſeek for juſtice, but no regard ſhall be had to thee, or notice taken of thy cauſe. But now the land being laid deſolate, they ſhall be in perplexity, and have no more occaſion of ſpoiling in matter of judicature. This man (as hath been elſewhere ſaid) loves to go different from others, and to pretend to underſtand the words better than they did: but however his meaning may pleaſe any, his conſtruction of the words here ſeems harſh. Another [o] Jew ancienter than he (but whoſe works have never yet been printed) taking the word watch-men, in its more literal ſenſe, thus expounds it, The day cometh, or is at hand, that thy watch-men (thoſe that are ſet on high places, to ſpy or diſcover afar off what is coming and give report thereof) [p] ſhall ſay, thy viſitation cometh, i. e. the enemy or thy puniſhment cometh. Or elſe, ſaith he, the day of thy watch-men, i. e. the enemies who expected or waited for thy deſtruction, i. e. the time that they waited for, and the day wherein thou ſhalt be viſited with puniſhments for thy evil doings. Now ſhall you be brought to perplexity and confuſion. With this man (as to the firſt way) agrees alſo a Chriſtian [q] Interpreter of good note, who expounds it, The day of war, when thou ſhalt ſet watch-men on thy walls, cometh, ſuddenly ſhall men be in a hurry or tumult. If this meaning pleaſe any, the words in our Tranſlation may be accommodated to it alſo.

5. ¶ Truſt

[c] Calv. Paræus. [d] Ab. Ezra, Druſ. Grot. Rib. &c. [e] Ab. Ezra. [f] R. Tanch. [g] R. D. Kinchi. [h] Vat. edit. 4to and 8vo. [i] R. Solomon Jarchi. [k] Vatab. in fol. and Munſt. [l] Lud. de Dieu. [m] Calv. Par. [n] Abarb. [o] R. Tanch. [p] So alſo may Ab. Ezra's words be underſtood. [q] Caſtalio.

5. ¶ Truſt ye not in a friend, put ye not confidence in a guide; keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy boſom.

Truſt ye not in a friend, put ye not confidence in a guide, &c.] The word אלוף Alluph rendred a guide, is [r] elſewhere put to ſignify a prince, a great man, a chief man, or leader, &c. and ſo is by [s] Some here taken. Againſt which a learned [t] Jew excepts, as not well agreeing to this place, where he complains of the defect of faithfulneſs, and friendſhip amongſt men, and the falſeneſs and fraud that was amongſt thoſe who were of neareſt relation, and had greateſt ties of friendſhip betwixt them: and thinks therefore the word here to be much of like ſignification with the foregoing, friend, and to denote a companion, or familiar friend and acquaintance, with whom a man hath uſed moſt familiarly to converſe. Which is the mind alſo of a learned Chriſtian, viz. [u] Lud. de Dieu. Another learned [w] Jew, underſtands it of an elder brother, viz. as he that ought to be the leader and director of the reſt of the family. [x] Another takes it to ſignify here an huſband, who is by that title elſewhere called in reſpect of the wife, viz. אלוף Alluph, the guide of her youth, [y] Prov. ii. 16. that ſo as in the next words, the huſband is counſelled not to truſt his wife; ſo in theſe, the wife ſhould be cautioned not to truſt her huſband, [z] to ſhew the great corruption of the times, when man and wife muſt beware of one another. This expoſition may ſeem perhaps too nice, though of a ſerious man. To any of theſe ſignifications, will our Engliſh word, guide, well fit, whether any ſuperior by whom we ought to be faithfully directed, or any equal, whoſe advice we would take and truſt, and repoſe our ſelves with confidence in.

That Jewiſh Doctor, Abarbinel, who, as before we ſaid, loves to go different from other Expoſitors, here by a friend, underſtands, the judge before mentioned, by a guide, the prince, and that theſe he forbids to put any truſt in, yet withal warns a man not to ſpeak ill of them, or curſe them, not ſo much as in the greateſt privacy, betwixt himſelf and his wife, according to what is ſaid, [a] curſe not the king, no not in thy thought, and curſe not the rich in thy bed-chamber. Which expoſition of his, as we can ſee no reaſon to follow, though ſome [b] Chriſtians follow it, ſo much leſs, thoſe allegorical ones, which he brings out of former Rabbins, enigmatically applying the words to the evil concupiſcence, to God, and to the ſoul, and the like; which it will be much beſides the purpoſe to rehearſe, much more to make uſe of.

Keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy boſom.] i. e. Utter not even to thy wife that which thou wouldeſt have to be kept ſecret, leſt ſhe divulge it to thy prejudice: for ſo wicked and falſe are all, neglecting all obligations, that even ſhe that is one with thy ſelf, will deceive and betray thee.

6. For the ſon diſhonoureth the father, the daughter riſeth up againſt her mother, the daughter-in-law againſt her mother-in-law; a man's enemies are the men of his own houſe.

For the ſon diſhonoureth the father.] Not only thoſe that are equal with a man, but thoſe alſo that are inferior to him, and depend on him, and are by all laws of duty moſt bound to reſpect him, and to endeavour to preſerve his ſafety and reputation, caſt off all the reſpects that they owe by the laws of God and nature, as in theſe relations here mentioned: and are ready to do him all diſgrace, deſpite and miſchief. So that he need fear not only enemies from abroad; in his own houſe and family he ſhall find them, even among thoſe from whom he might expect the greateſt love and reſpect. Much the ſame expreſſions in which the Prophet here bewails the corruption of his times, doth our Saviour uſe in declaring ſuch perilous times as ſhould be under the goſpel alſo, [c] Mat. x. 21, 35, 36. And his counſel to be wiſe as ſerpents, and harmleſs as doves, and to beware of men (there ver. 16, 17.) agrees well with our Prophet's caution here, not to truſt in any of them. By the enumeration of theſe ſeveral inſtances is made good what was ſaid, ver. 2. the good man is periſhed out of the earth, and there is none upright among men, and that may ſeem ſufficient for the connexion between theſe and the preceding words. Yet others (not unfitly) make theſe words to follow as a more full explication of that perplexity which, ver. 4. he ſaid ſhould be upon or among them, viz. that ſo great it ſhould be, as ſhould make them forget all bonds of relation, all duties owing from one to another, and every one ſhifting for themſelves, and looking after their own concerns and ſafety, take no care of, nor ſhew any reſpect to thoſe, whom they owed moſt to, but ſo behave themſelves towards them, as if they were ſtrangers and enemies, ſo that there was need of cautioning them that would be ſafe, not to put confidence in any of them. (What ſome would have this caution to import, that they ſhould not truſt or put confidence in their falſe Prophets, [d] who by fair ſpeeches would deceive them, and with feigned words make merchandiſe of them, may by way of inference be accommodated, viz. [e] If the neareſt relations ſhall not be faithful, much leſs will it be ſafe to put truſt in thoſe whoſe end is to deceive; but is not that which the letter ſeems to aim at.)

[r] N. Fuller Conc. MS. [s] Græc. Vul. Lat. Lyra, Vatab. [t] R. Tanch. See Chal. Par. and Syriack. [u] On the place, and on Pſalm lv. 13, 14. [w] R. D. Kimchi. See Munſt. Vat. Grot. [x] Ab. Ezra. See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [y] See Jer. iii. 4. [z] See Abarb. [a] Eccleſ. x. 20. [b] Ar. Mont. See Ch. à Caſtro. [c] Mark xii. 12. Luke xxi. 16. Compare 2 Tim. iii. 1, 2, 3, &c. [d] Rom. xvi. 18. 2 Pet. ii. 3. [e] Lyra, ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro, Ribera, Pelic.

7. Therefore I will look unto the Lord: I will wait for the God of my ſalvation: my God will hear me.

Therefore will I look unto the Lord, &c.] The times being ſo corrupt, and ſuch danger from all ſort of men, no fidelity in, no ſecurity from, even thoſe who ought to be a man's greateſt helps, and ſupports, what ſhall a man do? whither ſhall he betake himſelf for refuge? The Prophet ſpeaking as of himſelf, in the perſon of any [f] godly and prudent man, or of the true [g] Iſrael, or God's people, or Jeruſalem, or in the [h] perſon of that nation in captivity, leads by his example the way, and ſhews that God alone is to be truſted on in ſuch times of difficulty, who is a rock of ſalvation, a ſure refuge, and in his due time will not fail to hear and anſwer them, who wait on him, as ſhall be beſt for them; he will not fail or fruſtrate their expectation, they ſhall not in vain rely on him.

The Prophet having hitherto denounced judgments, now (according to the cuſtom of the Prophets) [i] draws towards his concluſion with conſolatory words and promiſes.

8. ¶ Rejoice not againſt me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I ſhall ariſe; when I ſit in darkneſs, the Lord ſhall be a light unto me.

9. I will bear the indignation of the Lord, becauſe I have ſinned againſt him; until he plead my cauſe, and execute judgment for me: he will bring me forth to the light, and I ſhall behold his righteouſneſs.

Rejoice not againſt me, O mine enemy, &c.] It will eaſily be conceived that the Prophet here ſpeaks in the perſon of the church, or nation of the Jews, looking on her ſelf, as now under hard preſſures, and in that captivity under the hand of her enemies, which the Prophets had foretold, and bid her to expect; and in that regard comparing her ſelf to a poor, diſtreſſed, dejected woman, and her enemies to a proud, imperious, inſolent dame, inſulting over her, as quite caſt off, and given up irrecoverably to deſtruction, and deſtitute of all hope. Who is her enemy that ſhe ſpeaks to? Babylon, ſay [k] many, more particularly, [l] which led her captive, and triumphed over her. Others underſtand it rather of Idumæa, or the Edomites, who are every where ſet forth as the moſt inveterate enemies of Iſrael, that had [m] a perpetual hatred againſt them. And though they themſelves were not able to do them ſo much miſchief as others, yet they made it up in ſpite, and whenever any calamity befel them, rejoiced greatly at it, and inſulted over them, and did the beſt they could to help againſt them. Obad. ver. 10, 11, &c. That both of theſe may be here well joined under that title, may appear by what is ſaid reſpecting of them both. Pſalm cxxxvii. 7, 8. Nor will it be inconvenient to take in with them any other that did ſhew like hatred to the Jews at that time, and rejoiced at their calamity, all thoſe her enemies, whoſe behaviour towards her is deſcribed, Lam. ii. 16, 17.

Some of the Jews will have particularly to be meant [n] Rome, or the Romans (whom they uſually call Edomites, and under that name comprehend other Chriſtians) whom they look on as their [o] greateſt enemies, and expect and pray for their deſtruction more earneſtly than for that of the Mahometans or any other, and have much leſs kindneſs for. But there is more than expreſſion of their hatred to them in this their interpretation, for from this granted they would make an argument to perſwade, that the Meſſiah is not yet come: at whoſe coming they expect that theſe their enemies ſhall be totally deſtroyed. That which ſhe ſaith to her enemy is, Rejoice not againſt me? &c. She repreſſeth the enemies taunts, and takes comfort to her ſelf from her aſſurance that things ſhall not always continue in that condition with either of them, as they now are, but there ſhall be a change, to her for better, by the mercy of God to whom ſhe will turn by repentance, and ſtedfaſtly cleave, and to her inſulting enemy who contemned God and deſpitefully uſed his people, for the worſe, by his juſtice in due time exerting it ſelf, though for a while conniving at them, or making uſe of them for the correction of his children, and bringing about his ends for his own glory, not to give them cauſe of boaſting of themſelves, and their own might. Of ſuch God's method in correcting his people, and taking vengeance on thoſe whom he makes uſe of as his inſtruments for that end when they grow proud and inſolent, ſee Iſaiah x. 5, 12, &c. and xxxiii. 1. Jer. xxx. 8, 10, &c. and other like places. As for her ſelf ſhe ſaith, when I fall I ſhall riſe, [p] when, if, or though, I fall from my dignity, be deprived of power, or fall into calamity, I ſhall by God's help be reſtored and raiſed again.

I ſhall ariſe.] The word is of the preterperfect tenſe, and word for word ſignifies, I have riſen, to ſhew the certainty which ſhe hath of it, [q] according to the uſual expreſſion of the prophetical ſtile, ſpeaking of thoſe things, which by virtue of God's promiſe or word are to be expected, as of things already done or come to paſs. This is the uſual and received expoſition; but there is among the Jews [r] one, who thinks it more convenient to take the words, I have fallen and I have riſen, as they are in the form, ſo in the ſignification of the preterperfect tenſe, thus, Rejoice not againſt me, O mine enemy, becauſe of my captivity, in which I now am, as thinking that I ſhall not come out of it any more, ſeeing the wrath of God is kindled againſt me, for behold I have formerly many times fallen into captivity, as in Egypt and Babylon, and have riſen or recovered from thoſe falls, and returned ed from thoſe captivities, and ſo ſhall it now be, That although I ſit in darkneſs, the Lord ſhall be a light unto me, and, after this darkſome night, ſhall ariſe (to me,) a bright light, as at other times it hath been, becauſe this my fall hath not been a thing that hath come by chance, but by the providence of God for puniſhment of my ſins, to which is a determined time, and therefore when I ariſe he will redeem me. 'Tis true, that I do in this my captivity, bear the indignation of the Lord, becauſe I have ſinned againſt him, but this is not to be perpetual, but ſtill he hath pleaded with me his controverſy, and inflicted on me that puniſhment which I ought to bear according to mine iniquities. And ſo likewiſe is to be underſtood, and execute my judgment, i. e. that judgment which it was due to execute on me. And when he hath made an end of doing this, then ſhall he bring me forth to the light, from the darkneſs of my captivity, and then ſhall I behold his righteouſneſs, viz. the righteouſneſs and mercies that he will exerciſe towards me. To this purpoſe he. But though a convenient meaning might be made of the words by interpreting thoſe words in the preterperfect tenſe, and from help formerly afforded from God, faithful penitents may have aſſurance upon unfeigned repentance of finding the like again, when any calamities befal them, and they may to that purpoſe make uſe of theſe words on occaſion: yet we cannot here go along with that Doctor in as much as he ſeems to drive at a falſe end, (as we have already ſaid on this preſent verſe) and taking the deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity, which ſeems here particularly intended, only by the way, looks for the completion of this prophecy by a deliverance and reſtauration from the captivity or exile that they are now ſince Chriſt's time under, by a deſtruction of the Romans or Edomites, as he calls them (as we ſaid) which he hath not from theſe words any ground to expect.

[f] Druſ. Grot. [g] R. D. Kimchi. [h] R. Tanch. [i] R. Kimchi. [k] R. Solom. Hierom. and may others. [l] Jer. l. 11. [m] Ezek. xxxv. 5. [n] See Vatab. Edit. 4to and 8vo. [o] D. Kimchi, and eſpecially Abarbinel, of whoſe opinion ſee alſo on chap. v. 5, 6. [p] R. Tanch. [q] R. D. Kimchi. [r] Abarb.

When I ſit in darkneſs, &c.] Darkneſs is often put in Scripture to ſignify adverſity, miſery, calamity or trouble, as on the contrary light, for proſperity, joy and happineſs. [s] Here the unhappy condition of captivity may ſeem called, and compared to, darkneſs, by reaſon of the withdrawing of God's providence, or its ſeeming to be intercepted, in compariſon of what appears of it, in the time of ſalvation, [t] although it in it ſelf be ſtill remaining, and ſhall, that darkneſs being diſpelled, again with much luſtre ſhew it ſelf to the comfort of the penitent and patient ſufferer. The Lord, who now ſeeming to be withdrawn from him, hath left him as in darkneſs, ſhall again lift up the light of his countenance upon him, and be a light and comfort unto him. In aſſurance of this ſhe ſaith, I will bear the indignation of the Lord, i. e. [u] ſhe will patiently bear the puniſhment, that he hath ſeen fit to inflict on her, as being ſenſible that ſhe hath juſtly deſerved it, (ſaying, becauſe I have ſinned againſt him,) and will expect, till being reconciled to her, he ſhall plead her cauſe, and execute judgment for her ſake on her enemy, who being by God made an inſtrument for correcting her, inſulted over her, as if ſhe were worſe than her ſelf, and uſed the occaſion put into her hand to wreak her own ſpite, not to execute God's command. When he hath thus performed his whole work of chaſtiſement upon her, then will he return in mercy to her, bring her forth to light, reſtore to her comfort, and the joy of his ſalvation, and ſhe ſhall behold his righteouſneſs, which he will exerciſe toward her in delivering her, and recompencing vengeance on her enemy; [w] or his goodneſs, loving kindneſs, and faithfulneſs, the word including all. Having thus declared her own condition, and what ſhe aſſures her ſelf of, ſhe proceeds to declare what her enemy is to expect.

10. Then ſhe that is mine enemy ſhall ſee it, and ſhame ſhall cover her which ſaid unto me, Where is the Lord thy God? mine eyes ſhall behold her: now ſhall ſhe be trodden down as the mire of the ſtreets.

Then ſhe that is mine enemy ſhall ſee it, and ſhame ſhall cover her which ſaid, &c.] She that now [x] inſults over me, as if I were utterly forſaken and caſt off by God, and derides me for ſtill putting my truſt in him, who, ſhe thinks, either cannot or will not deliver me, ſeeing the good hand of God upon me, in my gracious reſtauration, ſhall in that ſtrange alteration, which ſhe ſhall ſee in things concerning me contrary to her deſire, whereby the Lord will approve himſelf ſtill my God; have enough to cover her with ſhame, by being fruſtrated in her expectation, but much more from what ſhall befal her ſelf: for from the height of her pride ſhall ſhe be caſt down into the loweſt and baſeſt condition, to be even trod down and trampled upon with all contempt, as the very dirt and mire of the ſtreets. And whereas now ſhe cannot pleaſe her eyes more with any thing than her looking on my miſery, then, on the contrary ſhall my eyes behold and look on her in her deſpicable condition, to their full ſatisfaction. See the like uſe of the word, Pſalm liv. ult. and lix. 10. and Micah iv. 11. The word rendred ſhe ſhall ſee, as taking it for the third perſon future feminine, Others take for the ſecond maſculine, as likewiſe the following verb, and thus render the words, as in the Margin, and thou wilt ſee her that is mine enemy, and cover her with ſhame. But the former is the more received interpretation, and there is no reaſon to depart from it.

This prophecy, if applied to Babylon and the Chaldeans, was then fulfilled when Babylon was taken, and their empire deſtroyed by the Medes and Perſians, Dan. v. 30, 31. and it is [y] obſervable, that that great turn of their fortune was made in that very night, when Belſhazzar with his nobles did inſult afreſh and lifted lifted up themſelves againſt God, and his people that truſted in him alone, and praiſed their own gods of gold and ſilver, &c. as 'tis in that chapter, ver. 2, 3, 4. [z] They that apply it to the Idumæans, look on it as made good, either when they were taken alſo by the Chaldeans, not many years after Jeruſalem, or after the return of the Jews when they were overthrown by the Maccabees, lib. 1. cap. v. 3, &c. Of deſtruction threatned to them, ſee Jer. xlix. 7, &c.

[s] R. Tanch. [t] Compare Lev. xxvi. 44. Pſalm xxii. 7, 8. and xlii. 10. and Mat. xxvii. 43. [u] R. Tanch. [w] Druſ. R. Tanch. [x] See the like taunts, [y] Tarn.

Some of the Jews (as we have intimated) would have us look on it as a prophecy not yet fulfilled, but hereafter by the deſtruction of the Romans, by whom they were ſince carried out of their country, and ſuch, under whom they are ſtill thence detained, to be fulfilled. By their falſe principles on which they go, they are neceſſitated ſo to do: their anceſtors having denied and rejected Chriſt when he came, and God having rejected them ſo long ſince for it, which they are reſolved not to acknowledge, but to perſiſt ſtill in like obſtinacy, they have nothing to pretend as a colour for it, but that thoſe prophecies of a temporal deliverance from the hands of all their enemies, to be wrought (as they would have it) by the Meſſiah, are not yet made good. And theſe enemies they will have particularly to be the Romans, (on whom they beſtow the name of Edomites) and ſo paſſing over the Babyloniſh captivity, before which our Prophet ſpake theſe things, and their reſtauration from it, (of which he plainly propheſied that, which was by what fell out in their carrying to Babylon, and the deſtruction both of their other enemies that then inſulted over them, and of Babylon it ſelf afterward, and their reſtoring to their own country again, evidently and ſignally made good;) fix new times, and uncertain periods, that ſo they may ſtill foſter their error, and keep up their poſterity in a vain hope of having thoſe, and the like prophecies (which have long ſince been according to the true intent made good) yet fulfilled according to their own groundleſs deſires, as they have kept themſelves for many hundred of years paſt.

To this purpoſe is it what a [a] Doctor of great note among them expreſly ſaith, that the enemy here ſpoken of, and bidden not to rejoice, is Rome the wicked, under whoſe power their captivity had been prolonged above a thouſand years (when he wrote this, and ſome hundreds of years are paſt ſince.) This I particularly take notice of, becauſe the name Rome is here in ſome editions of that author left out, and in a Manuſcript ſo blotted out as yet to appear, by order it ſeems of the Inquiſitors. Although by the epithet, which is left behind, viz. the wicked, is ſufficiently underſtood what they mean, to warn ſuch as look into the Jewiſh writers that they do conſult ſeveral editions or manuſcript copies if they have them at hand, if they would ſee what the Jewiſh writers ſay in ſuch places where they meddle with Chriſtians. By the ſame means is it, I ſuppoſe, that in another of their Commentators, R. Solomon Jarchi, in ſome copies manuſcript and printed is put, mine enemy, i. e. Babel and Rome, but in others is put [b] Babel and Perſia, in others [c] Aram. In this digreſſion it may likewiſe be obſerved, that in ſome editions of the Chaldee Paraphraſe is here put, [d] Rome mine enemy, though in other editions the name Rome is not found. And it may well (according to the conjecture of a learned [e] man) be thought to have by ſome latter Jews been put in, for adding authority to their opinion. For if Jonathan, the author of the paraphraſe on this, and the other Prophets were ſo ancient, as he is taken to be, it is not probable that it was ever put in by himſelf, though in thoſe paraphraſes of other books which were not ſo ancient, it be no wonder to ſee ſuch gloſſes of their own, agreeable to their own opinions, put in.

11. In the day that thy walls are to be built, in that day ſhall the decree be far removed.

12. In that day alſo he ſhall come even to thee from Aſſyria, and from the fortified cities, and from the fortreſs even to the river, and from ſea to ſea, and from mountain to mountain.

13. Notwithſtanding the land ſhall be deſolate, becauſe of them that dwell therein; for the fruit of their doings.

In the day that thy walls are to be built, &c.] That there is no ſmall difficulty in this and the following verſe, appears by the irreconcilably different expoſitions which are by Interpreters given of them, in reſpect both to the perſon ſpoken to, and the things which are ſpoken concerning that perſon. As to the perſon pointed to by the word or pronoun thy, on ſtating of which much depends the underſtanding of what is either promiſed, or threatned, ſome will have to be meant Jeruſalem, or the nation of the Jews, God's church or people; Others, on the contrary, the inſulting enemy before mentioned, whoever ſhe be. If Jeruſalem or the people of the Jews be meant, then will it be a promiſe of good to them, which according to [f] Some will be to this purpoſe. In the day that the Lord ſhall again build up thy walls, (or there ſhall be a day wherein thy walls ſhall be built up and) in that day ſhall the decree be far removed (or [g] that day ſhall far remove the decree) i. e. ſay [h] Some, the decrees and exactions of thy enemies whereby they exacted tribute of thee, or tyrannically ruled over thee, and oppreſſed thee: or as [i] others, the decree made for hindring thee to be rebuilded, viz. the decree made by Artaxerxes, Ezra iv. 21. theſe ſhall be be no longer in force againſt thee, but thou ſhalt be freed from them, and enjoy thy liberty. [k] Others, the decree ſhall be far extended or go far abroad, i. e. the decree of puniſhment to be brought on thine enemies. In that day alſo he ſhall come unto thee, &c. i. e. ſay [l] Some, he, i. e. any of thy diſperſed, captive, exile children that ſhall be in any of the places after named, ſhall come home and return unto thee: [m] Others, there ſhall be, that ſhall come unto thee from all thoſe parts, viz. ſuch ſhall be the glory of Jeruſalem again after her reſtauration, that [n] many of all nations ſhall flock unto it. Not far from this is that expoſition of [o] ſome Jews, That day ſhall certainly be, and in it ſhall be ſubject unto thee the inhabitants of thoſe nations, [i. e. I ſuppoſe, ſuch of them as ſhall join themſelves to the Jews, and join with them in ſerving their God, not as if all thoſe nations ſhould be ſubjected to them.] This reſtauration of Jeruſalem (as is by [p] Some obſerved) was made good, and the prophecy corporally and typically fulfilled after the ſeventy years of the Babyloniſh captivity, [q] when the Jews had liberty again to return to their country, and build their city and temple: but ſpiritually and principally, when the kingdom of Chriſt was after his coming ſpread through the whole earth, and the decree went forth far abroad, i. e. the doctrine of the goſpel; that decree mentioned, Pſalm ii. 7, 8. by virtue of which, he was to have the heathen given him for his inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for his poſſeſſion, and by the doctrine of the kingdom they were to be called in to him from all parts. Surely that this higher manner of the fulfilling this prophecy, by building the ſpiritual Jeruſalem, i. e. the church of Chriſt, may well be attended to, and chiefly looked on by Chriſtians, and ſo compared with what is ſaid, Amos ix. 11, &c. that God would raiſe up the tabernacle of David which was fallen, and cloſe up the breaches thereof, &c. and ſo applied as that is, Acts xv. 16, 17. is not to be controverted: but we rather at preſent look after the plain literal fulfilling of it, which it long ſince ſo fully had, that we may on good grounds ſay, that the Jews in vain and without reaſon look for it as yet to come.

[z] Ch. à Caſtro, Menoch. Tirin. [a] R. D. Kimchi. [b] Edit. Buxt, [c] Laſt Venice edit. fol. [d] Ed. Venet. Bomberg. [e] Pet. fig. Of divers things foiſted into the text of the Targum, (or Chaldee Paraphraſe) or altered in it, ſee Buxt. Lex. in שבש and רומי and חלם. [f] R. Tanch. Vul. Lat. [g] Calvin and Schindler. [h] Chal. Paraph. Ab. Ezra, and R. Tanch. [i] Chr. à Caſtro.

If the word ירחק yirchak ſignify to go far abroad, and be divulged, as we have ſeen [r] Some to interpret it (though [s] Others queſtion it, becauſe it more uſually ſignifies to be removed, or put far off) then might it, being applied to the decree of Cyrus, Ezra i. or of Darius, Ezra vi. be expounded thus, Then ſhall the decree for thy reſtauration be ſent or promulged far and wide, and by virtue thereof thy children from all thoſe parts where they are captives, ſhall come unto thee, though literally underſtood; and not only of the promulging of the goſpel, according to that expoſition formerly given.

Again, it may be conſidered whether, by the decree, may not be underſtood, the decree of God by his Prophets denounced, concerning the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, the captivity of the Jews, and the laying their land deſolate for their evil doing, and ſo the promiſe to be, that when God in mercy ſhall ſee time to reſtore again Jeruſalem, that then the decree ſhall ceaſe, be as it were laid aſide and reverſed, and then ſhall her exile children come again to her from all parts, though their land, mean while, by virtue of that decree, ſhall be deſolate, &c.

By the decree, [t] Some who more ſpiritually interpret the words, underſtand human laws and traditions contrary to God, which ſhall give place to God's, and be removed to make way for that, and that then diverſe of all nations ſhall come in unto the Lord. Theſe ways of expounding the words are there, if they be looked on as ſpoken to and of Jeruſalem, as our Tranſlators by citing in the Margin, Amos ix. 11. ſeem to do, and not without good reaſon. But Others, as we ſaid, will have them directed to the enemy, and then is there farther variety of expoſitions. [u] Some by the enemy meaning Babylon or the Chaldeans, and thus giving the meaning, it will be a day, i. e. a long day, or long time ere thy ruins ſhall be repaired: In that day of thy being trodden under, the power of ſending abroad decrees among the nations [w] ſhall be far from thee, (according to that expreſſion, Nahum ii. 13.) In that day he, i. e. Cyrus, ſhall come unto thee from Aſſyria, and to thy fenced cities, and ſhall ſubject to himſelf the places, or regions here deſcribed.

And the land, i. e. Chaldea, ſhall be deſolate with it's inhabitants, becauſe of their many impieties and ſlaughters, and rapines, by them formerly committed. This ſenſe is given by a great learned [x] man, but ſeems ſomewhat harſh. [y] Others taking the words as referred more generally to the enemy, (without particularly deſigning who is meant) thus, At that very time when thou ſhalt eſtabliſh thy kingdom, and riſe up with all thy might againſt me, the decree of God ſhall be far and wide extended, and his judgment ſhall come on thee, who haſt ſo contumelioufly uſed me, from Aſſyria, &c. i. e. from one nation to another, till all mine enemies be deſtroyed. A learned [z] Jew, likewiſe taking it as ſpoken to the enemy in that large ſenſe, looks on it as a threatning from the Jewiſh nation to them, that ſhe ſhall be revenged on them for their inſulting over her, ſaith, that the meaning may be, At the time that you ſhall think to plaiſter or make up your buildings, the decree of God ſhall be far removed from you, concerning it, i. e. he ſhall determine the contrary. That day ſhall certainly be ere long, and ſhall appear made good in the countries here named, by their being taken by Nebuchadnezzar, or afterwards: Aſſur or Aſſyria being being in the firſt place named as Iſrael's enemy, that at that time prevailed over them, and led them captives, &c.

[k] Lud. de Dieu. [l] Id. and Chal. Paraph. [m] Calvin. [n] See chap. iv. 1, 2. [o] R. Tanch. [p] Tarnov. [q] See Ezra i. and Neh. iii. [r] L. de Dieu, Tarn. [s] Calv. [t] Pelican. [u] Grot. [w] Vat. Thy tribute ſhall be far removed, or denied thee. [x] Grot. [y] Bren. [z] R. Tanch.

Others of the Jews, who look on the words as directed to the enemy, more plainly ſpeak out their mind, that by the enemy they mean the Romans or Chriſtians: ſo [a] One of them, therefore, ſpeaking concerning the enemy ſaith, In the day that thou thinkeſt to build up thy walls with the ſpoils of Iſrael, when thou ſhalt come with Gog and Magog into the land of Iſrael, in that day ſhall the decree be far removed, i. e. that day ſhall be to thee to the contrary, and thy decree, which thou determineſt over the nations, and Iſrael which thou ruleſt over, ſhall be far removed: that day ſhall come even to thee, That day of the ſalvation of Iſrael is a day of the Lord, and to thee, the enemy ſhall come to deſtroy thee, from Aſſur, &c. and the land ſhall be deſolate, viz. the land of the people [b] with them that dwell therein. [c] Another thus expounds it, that the ſons of Edom, i. e. the company of Chriſtians ſhall come up to conquer Jeruſalem, which, ſince Titus deſtroyed it, had been in their hands, and was taken from them by the Iſmaelites, or Mahometans. The kingdom of Edom (ſaith he) ſhall go up thither to build their walls; but the matter ſhall not ſucceed according to their thoughts, for in that day the decree ſhall be far removed, that is to ſay, The decree which was in their hands, i. e. the cuſtom of taking it, as at other times they had done: and how that decree ſhall come to be removed (or altered) he ſheweth, ſaying, that is a day and it ſhall come unto thee, i. e. that is a day, a peculiar ſignal day, a day unto the Lord, and to thee, O enemy, ſhall it come, even to thy neck ſhall it reach. And ſo he mentions that againſt the kingdom of Rome ſhall come the kingdoms of Aſſyria, and of the ſons of the Eaſt, that is it which he ſays from Aſſyria, and the fortified [d] cities, which he ſuppoſes to be Chaleath and Chabor, by the river Gozan, and the cities of the Medes, of which Joſeph Ben-Gorion ſays, that the people of them Alexander the Macedonian did ſhut up within the mountains that they ſhould not come forth. Theſe the Prophet ſaith ſhall now come forth againſt this enemy, and by ſaying from מצור Matſor, or the fortreſs even to the river, he intimates that the ten tribes alſo which were there in reſtraint and captivity, ſhall come againſt them, and the other people which are in the North-Eaſt even to the river, viz. Euphrates, which is between Jeruſalem and Babel ſhall all come up againſt them.

And becauſe the Chriſtians ſhall ſome remain in ſhips on the ſea near the land of Iſraël, and others be on the land, therefore he firſt reckons up the people that ſhall come againſt them by land, from Aſſyria, and from the fortified cities, and from the fortreſs, and then propheſies that there ſhall come againſt them that are on the ſea, ſtrong nations alſo by ſea, which is that which he ſaith, and from ſea, i. e. on the ſea ſhall they come from ſea, and then from mountain to mountain, as much as to ſay, alſo of the inhabitants of the mountains ſhall come againſt them: and ſo in fine, the land of Iſrael in which the war ſhall be, and multitude of people ſhall be gathered together, ſhall be deſolate becauſe of them that dwell therein, viz. thoſe nations which live in it for making war one with another; and all this ſhall be for the fruit of their doings, by which they did evil to Iſrael. And whereas the [e] Chaldee Paraphraſt interprets it of the land of the nations, that that ſhould be deſolate by reaſon of the ſlaughter and deſtruction of the inhabitants, that alſo, ſays he, is true.

Thus have we from him a long ſtory as punctually told us, as if he had with his eyes ſeen it already acted, and as confidently affirmed as if his expoſition were as authentick as the text it ſelf, and had been dictated to him by the ſame ſpirit, as the words thereof were to Micah: but ſuch is it as the words afford no ground for. Conſider when Micah propheſied, and what happened after, of the taking of Jeruſalem, and the captivity of the Jews, and their reſtauration, and coming from all parts again to Jeruſalem, after the land had for ſeventy years been deſolate for their ſins; and that if there be any thing beyond this in an higher ſenſe to be looked after, it was fully made good in the ſetting up the church, the kingdom of Chriſt, and by ſo many nations being called into it by the preaching of the goſpel; and it will eaſily appear that this prophecy hath in the utmoſt extent of it been long ſince ſo fulfilled, as that theſe Jews looking for a farther completion of it, by freeing them in ſuch a way as they fancy from their preſent condition, will (as we before intimated) evidently appear to proceed only out of obſtinacy to maintain and make good their groundleſs ſuppoſition, that the promiſed Meſſiah is not yet come, but yet to be expected as a temporal Saviour, whoſe kingdom ſhould be of this world.

Beſide theſe ways of expounding, ſome taking the words as directed to Jeruſalem, or the nation, or church of the Jews, others to their enemies, there is yet another, which ſeems to part them between them, given by one of their ancienter Commentators, viz. R. Solomon Jarchi, who taking the firſt words as referred to the enemy, which ſaid, Where is now thy God? as if ſhe alſo ſaid to Jeruſalem, The day wherein thy walls ſhould be built, which thou expecteſt, the decree of that day is far removed, i. e. the time of it ſhall be prolonged, it ſhall never come: then makes the following to be the Prophet's anſwer to this purpoſe, That day which you mock at, ſaying it is loſt, it is come to nothing, is a day reſerved, and kept with God, and ſhall not be fruſtrated, and ſhall come even to thee, O enemy, to waſte (or deſtroy thee) from Aſſur, which was the firſt, or chief of thoſe that did us us miſchief, and the fortified cities, i. e. and unto the fortified cities, which Jonathan the paraphraſt calls Churmani the great; (perhaps Armenia) and the ſtrong city or fortreſs is Rome, as he ſaith, who will bring me into the ſtrong city, Pſalm lx. 9. and cviii. 10. and they ſay in the Midraſh of Elleh haddebarim Rabba, (i. e. the great allegorical expoſition of Deuteronomy,) that is, Rome, &c. This we give at large out of a manuſcript copy, becauſe in the ordinary printed copies, both the name of Rome and other words are wanting. And the land ſhall be deſolate, i. e. (ſaith he) the land of the nations.

[a] R. D. Kimchi. [b] עליו. [c] Abarb. [d] 2 Kings xvii. 6. [e] In the copies that we have there is no ſuch thing expreſt.

It may ſeem tedious that we have reckoned up all theſe ways of expounding theſe words; but perhaps it was neceſſary, leſt any finding any of them omitted might ſuſpect that it had in it ſomething appoſite, or of moment for underſtanding the text, which was not taken notice of.

Having now the chief of ſuch interpretations as are given, any may uſe his own judgment, and I ſuppoſe none will ſeem plainer, and more agreeable to the words, than the firſt, taking the words as ſpoken of, or to Jeruſalem, or the nation, or church of the Jews, that to her is promiſed, that there ſhould be a day, wherein her walls ſhould be built, and in that day her exile children ſhould come again to her from ſeveral places of their diſperſion; though it ſhould not be till after the land, for the evil of their doings, ſhould be deſolate, and they be removed from it; before the making good of this gracious promiſe, that judgment or puniſhment afore threatned ſhould take place for chaſtiſement of them for their ſins. The particle וְ V rendred notwithſtanding, by it ſelf ſignifies ſimply and: but according as the words, among which it is placed, be conſtrued or underſtood, will have other meanings, as here according to our tranſlation, notwithſtanding, i. e. though theſe things be promiſed, yet before they come to paſs, the land ſhall be deſolate, &c. or, theſe things ſhall be, though the land be made deſolate, or as in the Margin, after that the land hath been deſolate theſe things ſhall be.

As for the places named in the 12th verſe, there is no ſmall difference in aſſigning them, Interpreters according to their expoſition of the other words, ſeeking to fit them to it. [f] They that look on the words as a promiſe of an happy reſtauration of the Jews, take them as a deſcription of thoſe places in or about Aſſyria, and beyond it, where they were detained, and from whence they ſhould return; whether מצור Matſor be taken for the name of a place, or for any fortified city, and the whole country to be denoted, both that of it which was about its rivers, and on or about its mountains, or [g] elſe a deſcription of the land to which they ſhould return to poſſeſs it, by all its borders, both for length and breadth; there being in both theſe countries [h] places to which the words may be applied. [i] They that look on them as a threatning deſtruction to Babylon or the Chaldeans, take them as a deſcription of thoſe places and countries which Cyrus, King of Perſia, ſhould ſubdue, and take from the Chaldeans, by the ſtrong cities, underſtanding Babylon, Borſippa, and other like; by the river, Euphrates; by from ſea to ſea, from the Perſian gulph to the Syrian, or that part of the Mediterranean ſea; by from mountain to mountain, from mount Taurus to mount Carmel. [k] Others look on them as a deſcription of the countries of thoſe enemies of the Jews, which bordered on their land, as Egypt (deſigned by the words from ſea to ſea) and the Idumeans (or Edom) Moabites and Ammonites denoted by from mountain to mountain, i. e. mount Hor, about which theſe countries did lye, which Nebuchadnezzar ſhould alſo take. According to theſe and the like grounds, do they appropriate the deſcriptions here given to different places. All that we can ſay is, that without doubt, when theſe words were ſpoken it was well underſtood what places were meant by the deſcriptions given of them; but now ſo long after, whatſoever can be ſaid, is but by conjecture, and cannot be certainly affirmed, ſo as to conclude for one opinion, to the ſilencing and taking away pretence of probability from all others.

Having been thus long on theſe words, we ſhall not diſmiſs them without taking notice of what is ſaid in the Dutch Annotations (as tranſlated into Engliſh on ver. 13.) viz. that by the land they rendring it, this land, is to be underſtood the land of Canaan, and what is ſaid, it ſhall become a deſolation, this happened firſt in the time of the Babylonian devaſtation, and afterwards in the time of the New Teſtament, and continueth ſo to this very day. In this note ſeems to be ſome confuſion, for it ſeems to make theſe two deſolations, viz. that occaſioned by the Babylonians, ſo many years before Chriſt, and that by the Romans, after Chriſt, to be one continued deſolation, or both in this one prophecy to be propheſied of, whereas the long diſtance of time, and the reſtauration of Jeruſalem after the firſt devaſtation and the condition of the Jews coming between, ſhews them to be of different and diſtinct conſideration as to the letter of what was ſpoken, though what was ſpoken of one, may in another ſenſe be applicable to the other.

Again, what Druſius ſaith, that by ſome the 11th and 12th verſes are underſtood as of denunciation of puniſhment to his people for their ſins, and then, ver. 13. is to be underſtood of Iſrael; I know not by whom it is, or how made out. I ſuppoſe they muſt then underſtand the words as ſpoken to the Jews or Iſraelites, In the day that thou thinkeſt to build up thy walls and fortify thy ſelf againſt thine enemies, thy decree (or determined purpoſe) ſhall be far removed, or fruſtrated. In that very day wherein thou thinkeſt to ſecure thy ſelf, ſhall the enemy from all parts, and into into all thy quarters come unto thee, and the land ſhall be by them made a deſolation, &c. The words taken by themſelves might bear this ſenſe, but as here they ſtand conſidering what went before, ver. 8, &c. When I fall I ſhall ariſe, &c. expreſſions of aſſurance of comfort and ſalvation, and what follows to the ſame purpoſe, ver. 14. to the end of the chapter; it will appear, that if they be looked on as ſpoken of God's people, they are conſolatory, and a promiſe of good, though, that thoſe who continue in their wickedneſs may not ſnatch at them, and thence take occaſion to encourage themſelves in evil; it be added, (to ſhew that theſe things ſhall not be made good to them, but upon repentance, and after they have been chaſtiſed for their ſins, according to the prophecy going before to that purpoſe) notwithſtanding the land ſhall be deſolate, &c. or (this ſhall be) after the land hath been deſolate becauſe of them that dwell therein for the fruit of their doings. If they be looked on as comminatory, they will more properly ſeem to belong to the inſulting enemy, as declaring what ſhall betide her for her pride and inſolency, and like behaviour.

[f] R. Tanch. [g] Tarn. [h] See Deut. xi. 24. Ezek. xlvii. 13, &c. Joel ii. 20. [i] Grot. [k] See R. Tanch. and R. D. Kimchi.

14. ¶ Feed thy people with thy rod, the flock of thine heritage, which dwell ſolitarily in the wood, in the midſt of Carmel: let them feed in Baſhan and Gilead, as in the days of old.

Feed thy people, or as in the Margin, rule, &c.] The word being uſed in both ſenſes, the firſt ſimply, the ſecond figuratively. A learned [l] Jew notes that theſe words uttered in form of a prayer, are a good promiſe, and declaration (or prophecy) of what ſhould be, according to the uſual cuſtom of prophecies, that God would keep them by his providence. On the contrary it is by [m] another noted on Pſalm lxix. and cix. that the imprecations and curſes there uſed, are not properly curſes by him wiſhed againſt his enemies, but rather denunciations or foretelling of ſuch evils, as God would ſend upon them, which he directed him, as elſewhere other Prophets, in ſuch forms to utter. That which the Prophet either for the people, or in the name of the people aſks (and by aſking ſhews that God will ſo bring it to paſs) is, Feed thy people with thy rod. The word, as it more generally ſignifies a rod cut from a tree, to be carried in the hand, ſo is figuratively uſed, ſometimes for a ſcepter, ſometimes for a ſhepherd's ſtaff, with which he guides or directs, and orders his ſheep. And according to his uſing it in driving, ordering, or directing them, is his behaviour towards them, expreſſed, (and ſo the behaviour of princes or governours, who are uſually compared to ſhepherds towards the people, or thoſe that are under them, likened to a flock or ſheep.) So in the Arabick tongue, by one [n] that hath a ſmooth, ſoft, or gentle rod, or ſtaff, is expreſſed, one that gently rules and guides his flock; by one that hath [o] a rough and hard ſtaff, one that roughly or harſhly behaves himſelf towards them; according to which, Pſalm ii. 9. that which we render, thou ſhalt break them with a rod of iron, is rendred by [p] Some, thou ſhalt feed or rule them with an iron rod; to expreſs ſevere dealing toward thoſe ſpoken of. Contrary to which is that, Pſalm xxii. 4. Thy rod and thy ſtaff, they comfort me. [q] It is an inſtrument both for direction, and correction, to guide, and to reſtrain, as the ſhepherd ſees to be needful. [r] And ſo by it here will be meant God's care over them for their good and preſervation, by directing them to what is good for them, and keeping them from evil, his watchful and peculiar providence over them, who are called by a note of peculiarity his people, the flock of his heritage, as elſewhere, the Lord having taken Iſrael to be unto him a people of inheritance, Deut. iv. 20. and choſen them to be a ſpecial people unto himſelf above all people that are on the face of the earth, chap. vii. 6. For the Lord's portion is his people, Jacob the lot of his inheritance, chap. xxxii. 9. ſo therefore every where in Scripture called, and owned by him, viz. as his people, and ſo alſo his flock, Iſaiah xl. 11. and Ezek. xxxiv. 8. and ſeveral other verſes: and ſo his people, and the ſheep of his paſture, Pſalm c. 3. and ſo our Saviour calls his church, his ſheep, John x. 27. and his flock, Luke xii. 32. Theſe he prays (ſaith Abarbinel) that he will feed or govern henceforth with his own rod, and not with the rod of the enemy, becauſe they are, ſays he, the flock of thine heritage.

Which dwell ſolitarily in the wood, in the midſt of Carmel, &c. Theſe words being conciſe, it hath cauſed diverſity of expoſitions, of which before we give farther account, we may obſerve that the particle in, viz. in the wood is not expreſſed in the original text, but ſupplied as underſtood: and, again, concerning Carmel, that it is a name of a mountain. [s] Two mountains are obſerved to be called by this name, one in the northern part of Judea, near the ſea, in the confines of Aſſur and Zebulun, of which is mention in the hiſtory of Elijah, 1 Kings xviii. 19, 20. and ver. 42. and in the hiſtory of Eliſha, 2 Kings ii. 25. and iv. 25. The other more ſoutherly in the mid-land near Hebron in the lot of the tribe of Judah, of which is mention in the hiſtory of Saul, 1 Sam. xv. 12. and in which it is ſaid that Nabal's poſſeſſions were, 1 Sam. xxv. 2. and to this mountain they refer uſually what is ſpoken by the Prophets, concerning the paſtures of Carmel, as Jer. l. 19. Amos i. 2. and here: although, as a learned [t] man obſerves, they may aptly enough be referred to that that Carmel which Elijah did frequent. A learned [u] Jew obſerves, that this name was given to the mountain or place ſo called, as being a place of fields, and trees, for that the word doth otherwiſe ſignify a place of trees, fruits and fields (abounding in corn or graſs) and therefore is ſo rendred elſewhere a plentiful or fruitful field, as Iſaiah xvi. 10. and xxix. 17. and xxxii. 15. and Jer. iv. 26. and xlviii. 33. (ſo in our Tranſlation, for in divers others the name Carmel is retained as a proper name.) The name alſo ſignifies a full green ear of corn, as Levit. ii. 14. and elſewhere. We may by the way alſo note that the word יער yaar, rendred wood, is alſo elſewhere ſometime joined with this word Carmel, as Iſaiah x. 18. the glory of his wood, and of his Carmel, which Ours render of his foreſt and of his fruitful field, and xxxvii. 24. the foreſt of his Carmel, as if in Carmel were a wood or foreſt. Baſhan alſo and Gilead were places noted for plenty and richneſs of paſture; a land for cattle, Numb. xxxii. 1. Deut. xxxii. 14. and elſewhere often. Again, we may obſerve that ſeveral [w] Interpreters do differently diſtinguiſh the words, ſome joining the words in the midſt of Carmel, with thoſe that go before, others with thoſe that follow. Theſe things being obſerved, we ſhall the better perceive the grounds on which they that give different expoſitions go, and how to diſcern or judge betwixt them.

[l] R. Tanchum. and ſee R. D. Kimchi. [m] R. Saadias, or who elſe it is that tranſlated the Pſalms into Arabick, with ſome notes upon them, MS. See Note on Hoſea ix. 14. [n] لين العصا or ضعيف. [o] صلب العصا or شديد Zamachſhari in lib. Aſas. [p] Græc. Syr. and Vulg. Lat. [q] Nic. Fuller. Concord. [r] R. Tanch. [s] Bochart. de Animalibus, p. 1. lib. 2. c. 48. [t] Ibid.

Among the ſeveral expoſitions we have theſe, 1*ſt*. That of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, Feed thy people with thy word, the people of thine inheritance, in the age (or world) which is to be renewed; (he means, perhaps, after their return from captivity) they ſhall dwell (or let them dwell) alone, which were ſolitary in the wood, and they ſhall dwell (or let them dwell) in Carmel, and they ſhall feed (or let them feed) in the land of Mathnan, i. e. Baſhan, and Gilead as in the days of old. In reference to this, and other expoſitions may be obſerved that it was foreprophefied as a bleſſing, that Iſrael ſhould dwell alone, &c. Numb. xxiii. 9. and Deut. xxxiii. 28. in ſafety and ſecurity, without dependence on other nations, or fear from them, or mixture with them. 2*ly*. That of a learned Jewiſh [x] Expoſitor, which dwell, i. e. that they may be alone in their land, and no other people with them. In the wood, in the midſt of Carmel, i. e. Let them dwell in the wood as in Carmel, which is an inhabited place, of fields, vineyards, and trees; as if he ſhould ſay, they ſhall then dwell (or let them then dwell) confidently or ſecurely in the wood, which is a place of hurtful beaſts, and not be afraid of them, as a man that dwelleth in the midſt of Carmel where there is no cauſe of fear, as he ſaith, Ezek. xxxiv. 25. They ſhall dwell ſafely in the wilderneſs and ſleep in the woods. 3*ly*. [y] Another of them, feed, them which dwell ſolitarily (ſeparated to the ſervice of God, after that the other nations are cut off) as [in] the wood (or foreſt) in the midſt of Carmel; ſo let them feed in Baſhan and Gilead, i. e. all thoſe other countries being free to them in their poſſeſſion and occupation, none hindring them, as woods on the mountains are free to all that will, to feed, or gather wood in them; ſo let thoſe rich places be free to them. 4*ly*. [z] Another, O Lord our God, feed thy people Iſrael with thy rod and ſtaff, not with the rod of the enemy, becauſe they are the ſheep of thine heritage, and therefore, them dwelling alone in the wood, in the midſt of Carmel, feed, ſo as that theſe ſheep may obtain to dwell ſecurely alone, and no other dwell with them in their wood in the midſt of Carmel, thereby denoting the land of Iſrael, and Jeruſalem, becauſe Carmel was a place of good fields and vineyards, and ſo ſhall the land of Iſrael become again good, fruitful, and green, or flouriſhing. Let them feed in Baſhan and Gilead, which are countries on the other ſide of Jordan, (as in the days of old) when Reuben and Gad, and half the tribe of Manaſſeh were in them.

Theſe expoſitions have we from the Jews. Amongſt Chriſtians is yet farther variety. [a] Some to this purpoſe giving the meaning, Feed thy people, &c. thoſe which now being ſcattered among ſtrange nations, the Chaldeans and others without any paſtor or guide, are as if they dwelt ſolitarily in a wood expoſed to dangers, do thou feed again in the midſt of Carmel, and bring back, that they may feed again in Baſhan and Gilead in their own countries, as in the days of old, i. e. in ſecurity and proſperity under thy protection, as their fore-fathers did. This much agrees with the Chaldee, and to the ſame ſenſe are the words, as in our Tranſlation read, perſpicuouſly paraphraſed by a learned and famous [b] Biſhop of our church, In this mean time, viz. of the deſolation of the land, O God, take thou care of thy people, Oh do thou feed and govern them by thy gracious protection, lead thou this flock of thine heritage, which now dwell ſolitarily in the wilderneſs of their captivity, into the midſt of thy fruitful paſtures of Carmel, let them feed in the rich fields of Baſhan and Gilead, as in former times. Others, though not differing in the ſignification and ſenſe of the words, yet diverſly pointing them, [c] make part of them the words of the prophet, part the words of God, as if the Prophet having ſaid, Feed thy people with thy rod, &c. which dwell ſolitarily in the wood, God ſhould anſwer in the midſt of Carmel ſhall they feed, and in Baſhan and Gilead, i. e. they ſhall be brought back from their captivity, and poſſeſs their rich land again, as formerly from their coming to it out of Egypt till their captivity. Or as ſome [d] Others, the Prophet's words are, feed thy people, &c. which now dwell in their captivity, as in a wood, (feed them, I ſay) in the midſt of Carmel; and God's anſwer, they ſhall feed in Baſhan and and Gilead to the ſame ſenſe that before. [e] Others, feed them dwelling in the wood of their captivity among the Chaldeans, as ſecurely as if they were in the midſt of Carmel; then adding by way of aſſurance, when thou haſt brought them back they ſhall feed in Baſhan, &c. [f] Others, that dwell ſolitarily in the wood, i. e. without mingling themſelves with other nations, that they may ſerve thee alone, &c. Theſe all agree in this at leaſt, that they make the firſt words to be the words of the Prophet by way of petition to God, and ſo including a prophecy of what ſhall be accordingly. But there is a learned [g] Commentator, who looks on them all, as the words of the Prophet to Iſrael, bidding them, and ſo comforting them with aſſurance that they ſhould, feed their own people, their own ſheep, as they had, for the time of their captivity, fed their enemies ſheep, ſerved them; but ſhould hereafter be their own men, look in ſafety, ſecurity, and liberty after their own affairs in their own land. But this expoſition is not ſo agreeable to the words, as that we ſhould forſake that wherein others agree to follow it. However, in this all hitherto agree, that the words contain a prophecy of the Jews return from captivity to their own land, and that they ſhould there be in ſecurity under the protection of God, live in plenty and proſperity, and be ſupplied with all things good for them, as ſheep in thoſe rich paſtures under the conduct of a good and careful ſhepherd. [h] Others take other ways, looking on the words as the words of God the Father to Chriſt, bidding him to take care of his church, and to feed them with evangelical food: or, [i] at leaſt, as the words of the Prophet to Chriſt, praying him that he would bring Iſrael into his church, and feed and guide them, though deſtitute of help, like ſheep in woods. [k] Others, as the words of God to the paſtors of the church, Chriſt's fellow labourers, preſcribing to them how they ſhould take care of the flock, of which he had made them overſeers, under the type of the ancient church. [l] Others, as the words of the church to Chriſt, the chief ſhepherd of the church praying him that he would feed his people, i. e. his church ſcattered all abroad upon the earth, and hated by the children of this world, (with his ſtaff) i. e. his word and ſpirit, thoſe his flock of ſheep, as they are often compared, that dwell alone as a ſeparated people, not intermixed with the reſt of the world, with Sects and Hereticks, (for which reaſon they are alſo often perſecuted and driven into ſolitudes) and yet living in ſafety and confidence againſt all enemies, and hell gates under the protection of their ſhepherd, &c. But though theſe are pious meanings, yet we look on as more appoſite to our purpoſe, and giving the natural meaning of the words, the former expoſitions, and among them, that [m] Paraphraſe, which as we ſaid, is agreeable to them, as in our Tranſlation read, making the perſons, ſpeaking, ſpoken to, and of, the Prophet, God, and the nation, or at leaſt the church of the Jews, implying (as we ſaid) a prophecy, or gracious promiſe of return out of captivity to their own land, and that under the protection of God, taking care of them as his people, his flock and ſheep, they ſhould enjoy all things neceſſary, and conducing to their well being in abundant manner, ſet forth by a ſimilitude of ſheep feeding in thoſe rich paſtures named. Although withal it cannot be doubted that all theſe good things promiſed to the Jews are in a higher manner made good to the church of Chriſt, and all faithful believers reſcued from ſin and ſatan, and brought back into his fold; who, as he ſaith, ſhall be ſaved under his protection, and go in and out, be kept in ſafety and ſecurity, and find paſture, i. e. ſpiritual food for their ſouls of his word and ſacraments, and all things conducing to their comfort and eternal good. And to this ultimate fulfilling of this prophecy under Chriſt, doth the Chaldee Paraphraſt ſeem to point, making them as a prayer to God that he would feed his people with his word, in the age that was after to be renewed, as above was ſaid. This paraphraſe is ſaid to have been compoſed ſome thirty years before Chriſt. This place will be well illuſtrated by comparing it with another, promiſing the ſame bleſſings in very like expreſſions, Jer. l. 17, 18, 19.

[u] R. D. Kimchi in dict. [w] See Chr. à Caſtro. [x] R. D. Kimchi, taking it as by way of promiſe from God that it ſhall be ſo with them. [y] R. Tanch. [z] Abarb. [a] Pelican. Calvin. Chr. à Caſtro, &c. [b] Biſhop Hall's Par. [c] Ribera. [d] Tirin.

15. According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt will I ſhew unto him marvellous things.

According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt, &c.] Theſe words are generally looked on, as ſpoken in the perſon of God, in anſwer to that former petition of the Prophet, Feed thy people, &c. aſſuring him that he will ſo do; and that he may not doubt of it through any ſeeming difficulties, puts him in mind of thoſe former great things which he had done for their fathers in bringing them with his mighty power out of Egypt, with mighty ſigns and wonders. He that could do that, can do this; his power is ſtill the ſame; of that they cannot doubt, and he aſſures them he will do it; though conſidering their forlorn condition, how low, and weak they are, how many and potent their enemies, and what great obſtacles are in the way, it cannot be done without ſhewing unto them marvellous things, like thoſe of old, ſuch as ſhall be wondrous in their own eyes, and in the eyes of all that behold them: ſo that they ſhall ſay among the Heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them, Pſalm cxxvi. 2. yea that in ſome reſpects that which God would do, in their bringing back from Babylon, and their other diſperſions, and their wonderful reſtauration, ſhould be rather more marvellous, than what he did in the days of their coming out of Egypt, appears by what is ſaid, Jer. xvi. 14, 15. Behold, the days come, ſaith ſaith the Lord, that it ſhall be no more ſaid, The Lord liveth that brought up the children of Iſrael, out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Iſrael, from the land of the North, and from all the lands, whither he had driven them, and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers. With much the like words, chap. xxiii. 7, 8. which ſeem to make as if in, and for effecting the latter deliverance, even greater marvels were wrought and greater power ſhewed than in the firſt. For what reaſons it may be ſo ſaid, will not be to our preſent purpoſe to enquire, our preſent words repreſenting them as alike marvellous; and they were both manifeſtly [n] types of that greater deliverance by Chriſt wrought, and thoſe more marvellous things by him done, for the delivering of his people from the power of hell and the devil. And ſo may we look on the words both here, and in thoſe places of Jeremy, as directing us to that wonderful deliverance, for a fuller and higher completion of theſe prophecies, than was either by the deliverance in bringing them out of the Egyptian bondage, or Babyloniſh captivity, though more immediately the words point at thoſe, and in this the expreſſions of the Jews themſelves will concur, viz. that the final completion of theſe prophecies, is to be by what ſhould be done by Chriſt or the Meſſiah. So Kimchi on Jer. xvi. 14, 15. ſaith, that what is there ſaid ſhall be made good in the days of the Meſſiah, (as likewiſe Abarbinel, as being the opinion of their ancienter Doctors.) But mean while, though thus far in words they agree with us, yet in the application of them to the matter ſpoken of, there is a vaſt and irreconcileable difference. For we ſay, that as for any temporal deliverance by theſe words foretold, it was made good in a marvellous manner by bringing back the diſperſed Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity. But as for that more marvellous delivery, by this typified and given them to look for under the Meſſiah, it is wholly ſpiritual, (his kingdom being not of this world) and hath been accordingly fulfilled by reſcuing his people (and thoſe as well Gentiles as Jews) from a worſe captivity under a more potent enemy, than either the Egyptian of old, or Babylonian afterward, even the devil, and the power of hell. But the Jews, that they may look for, by virtue of theſe prophecies, a temporal reſtitution from the captivity they are now under, ſince their rejecting of Chriſt, paſſing by that deliverance from the Babyloniſh captivity, as a ſmall thing, though God ſet ſo ſignal a character on it, apply the words to that which they yet expect, without any grounds of a promiſe to be wrought for them, by their Meſſiah's ſubduing all nations to them, eſpecially the Chriſtians, whom they hope to ſee totally cut off, as hath been above ſaid, and his making them lords over them in this world. We have already ſeen thoſe marvellous things done, and ſtill doing, which make us expect no other of a different kind, which would indeed be leſs than what hath been already done. Thy coming out of Egypt.] [o] Thine, O Prophet, or people, in thy fathers. I will ſhew unto him.] i. e. the people of Iſrael. The change of perſons ſpoken to in Scripture is frequent, and doth not alter the meaning: all is meant of the people.

[e] Ch. à Caſtro. [f] Ibid. [g] Sanct. [h] See Chr. à Caſtro. [i] See Diodat. and Piſc. [k] Jun. Trem. [l] Dutch Notes. [m] Biſhop Hall's Par.

16. ¶ The nations ſhall ſee and be confounded at all their might, they ſhall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears ſhall be deaf.

The nations ſhall ſee, and be confounded at all their might, &c.] Theſe again ſeem to be the words of the Prophet, deſcribing the effects of thoſe marvellous things that God would work: ſo unlikely was it that the Jews being in that low and ſervile condition, which they were brought to in the Babyloniſh captivity, ſhould be reſtored to be again a kingdom, and flouriſhing nation, that the nations ſeeing what marvellous things God had ſhewed in reſtoring them, could not but wonder, and be confounded to ſee all their own might, which they truſted in, brought to nothing; and thoſe whom they ſo much deſpiſed to be advanced to that height, and power, that they are not able to hinder or hurt them; [p] Some by their might, underſtanding the might of the enemies themſelves, [q] Others, the might of the people that are ſaved. And the manifeſt ſigns of their confuſion, and conſternation ſhould appear, in that they ſhould lay their hand upon their mouth, be ſilent and mute, as not knowing what to ſay, nor daring to ſpeak againſt God or his people, nor able to contradict what they ſaw. With this expreſſion may be compared, chap. iii. 3, 7. and Exod. xi. 7. Joſhua x. 21. Judges xviii. 19. Job v. 16. and xxi. 5. and xl. 4. Pſalm cvii. 42. And that their ears ſhould be deaf: ſo ungrateful ſhould be the things that they heard, as that they ſhould be aſtoniſhed by hearing them, and being not able to bear them, even ſtop their ears againſt them, as wiſhing themſelves even rather deaf than to hear ſuch marvellous things, as God had done for thoſe whom they hated. This their confuſion is alſo expreſſed in the next words.

17. They ſhall lick the duſt like a ſerpent, they ſhall move out of their holes like worms of the earth: they ſhall be afraid of the Lord our God, and ſhall fear becauſe of thee.

They ſhall lick the duſt as a ſerpent, &c.] Thoſe inſolent enemies, who erſt while ſo proudly inſulted and triumphed over God's people, and magnified their own ſtrength, ſhall now be brought to the loweſt, and moſt abject condition, as if they were worms and no men: which is elegantly ſet forth by theſe expreſſions, They ſhall lick the duſt as a ſerpent: ſo caſt down ſhall they be, ſo humbled as not to be able to raiſe up themſelves, and ſo through fear behave themſelves, as if they were condemned to the ſame [r] poſture and food, food, with that accurſed creature. The like expreſſion have we, Pſalm lxxii. 9. Iſaiah xlix. 3. And they ſhall move out of their holes like worms (or creeping things) of the earth. The word ירגזו yirgezu, rendred, move, is ſuch as is taken [s] uſually to ſignify a trembling motion, or motion with perturbation, whether ſpoken of a bodily moving from a place, [t] or of the mind being moved with ſome paſſion, as of fear, or anger, or the like; the effects of which are commonly ſeen in the trembling motion, or geſture of the body alſo. It is therefore by [u] Some rendred, they ſhall be diſturbed: [w] by Others, they ſhall be moved with fear, or tremble, or the like. The word in our Tranſlation includes the latitude of the word, any motion with its circumſtances of fear, and diſturbance, or the like, which it ſeems here to intimate. The word מסגרת Miſgeroth rendred holes, being from a [x] word that ſignifies to ſhut up, or ſhut in, properly denotes a place wherein any is ſo ſhut in, or remains, any incloſure, and may therefore be applied to a dwelling place, a caſtle, or hold. It is uſed elſewhere for a priſon; as Pſalm cxlii. 7. and Iſaiah xxiv. 22. and by ſome of the Jews taken for chains, as whereby priſoners are reſtrained, Pſalm xviii. 45. where Ours render it cloſe places, as likewiſe, 2 Sam. xxii. 46. ſtill the ſame notion of the word is retained, and ſo in this place, whether it be rendred (as by Ours) out of their holes, with reſpect to the worms, or creeping things of the earth; their holes being to them the places wherein they are incloſed; or as by [y] Others in reſpect to the men (the enemies) that are compared to them, their manſions, or ſtrong holds, wherein they ſhut themſelves up for ſecurity; it will be neceſſarily ſuggeſted to us that as worms, or like creeping things move themſelves with confuſion out of their holes, when the earth is diſturbed about them: ſo the enemies of God's people ſhould in confuſion, and tumultuouſly, with fear and conſternation, leave their manſions, and ſtrong holds, wherein they thought to be ſecure, not able to lift up themſelves againſt God, and thoſe by him ſent againſt them, or made to prevail over them; [z] ſo that they ſhall deliver up to them the places wherein they truſted. The words are ſtill an expreſſion of great confuſion, diſturbance, and conſternation, which ſhall befal them; and the reaſon of that conſternation to them is in the next words given, becauſe they ſhall be afraid of the Lord our God, &c. This is the import of the uſual expoſitions, which are among themſelves eaſily reconcileable. But there is a [a] Doctor of the Jews, who here (as often as we have elſewhere intimated) takes a different way from Others, and will have the word rendred, holes, to ſignify captivity, (although that alſo would be from the ſame notion) and the ſenſe to be, that the enemies of Iſrael, being caſt down wounded, ſhall tremble, by reaſon of, or in revenge of the captivity which they brought on Iſrael, God now taking vengeance on them, for the evils they did to thoſe his people in their captivity. But his expoſition is ſo harſh, and violent, that few, I ſuppoſe, will follow it. [b] Another, by reaſon of their own reſtraint, they ſhall be afraid of the Lord our God, and ſhall fear becauſe of thee; ſo ſubmiſſively and humbly ſhall they behave themſelves, through fear of God, who hath done ſuch marvellous things in exalting thoſe, whom they erſt while trod upon, and triumphed over, and caſting them themſelves with all their might down to the ground; ſo may theſe words be looked on, as the cauſe of that great conſternation in the former deſcribed, or elſe they may be looked on as an effect, or farther deſcription of their conſternation, that they ſhall now be really [c] afraid of God, whom before they [d] deſpiſed and reproached, and with fear and crouching addreſs themſelves to him, as forced to acknowledge that there is none beſides him.

[n] Tarnov. [o] R. Tanchum, Calv. [p] So the moſt. [q] Jun. Trem. Tarn. Stokes. [r] Gen. iii. 14.

And ſhall fear becauſe of thee.] Here is a change of the perſons; as if with admiration addreſſing his ſpeech to the Lord, he now on a ſudden ſpake to him, of whom he was ſpeaking. Except, with [e] Others, we ſhould look on it as a turning to Iſrael, or the people of God, for whom he did ſuch marvellous things to the confuſion and conſternation of their enemies. As if he ſaid they ſhall be afraid of the Lord, whom they ſee to be our God, and they ſhall alſo fear thee, whom before they inſulted over, ſaying to thee, where is the Lord thy God? ver. 10. now ſeeing him to own thee in ſo ſignal a manner by thoſe great things that he doth for thee. The ſcope of his words will be ſtill the ſame, viz. to ſet forth both the goodneſs, and the greatneſs of God, manifeſted in the marvellous things, which he doth for the delivery and exaltation of his dejected people and deſtruction and bringing down of their proud enemies, both which, viz. the goodneſs and power of God, he proceeds alſo to admire and magnify in the following verſe, in another regard, viz. the taking away that which was the cauſe to them of their former miſery, (ſee ver. 9.) that ſo it may not prevail to keep them ſtill miſerable.

18. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and paſſeth by the trangreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, becauſe he delighteth in mercy.

19. He will turn again, he will have compaſſion upon us: he will ſubdue our iniquities, and thou wilt caſt all their ſins into the depths of the ſea.

Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, &c.] [f] Some, that they may with greater emphaſis give the meaning of the word

2

[s] Abu Walid Kimchi. [t] Nic. Fuller Concord. [u] Greek, Vulg. Latin. [w] Munſt. Tigur. [x] סגר.
[y] Aben Ezra, R. Tanchum, &c. [z] Grot. [a] Abarb. [b] R. Solomon Jarchi. [c] Jun. Trem. R. D. Kimchi.
[d] As Pharaoh, Exod. v. 11. and Senacherib, 2 Kings xix. 10. and here, ver. 10. [e] R. D. Kiemhi, Druſ.
[f] Jun. Trem and ſo an Arab. MS. Verſion.

word אל El in our Tranſlation ſimply rendred, God, render it, a mighty God: and ſure the mightineſs both of his power and mercy is ſo evidently exerted, and made manifeſt in the following acts mentioned, as that the Prophet by his queſtion here put, denying (as that is the manifeſt force of the expreſſion in form of admiration, or interrogation, and ſo therefore by [g] Some rendred negatively,) that any beſides him can do thoſe things, aſſerts him to be the one only true God, and that there is none among all that were ever worſhipped by the Heathen to be compared to him, and that he, and only he, is infinite in mercy and power, and ſo able to do ſuch things. The acts mentioned are, that pardoneth iniquity, with the others ſubjoined, as concomitant, or farther explications of it. This is a title or property which God challengeth to himſelf; and whereby he proclaimeth himſelf that he is a God pardoning, or forgiving iniquity, Exod. xxxiv. 7. and Numb. xiv. 18. where the words in the original are the ſame that here, and this was always accounted the property of God alone: ſo ſay they, Mark ii. 7. [[h] He giveth repentance and ſpareth or taketh away puniſhment.]

And paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage.] Paſſeth by, i. e. winketh at, and doth not rigorouſly enquire into it to take vengeance for it to the uttermoſt, but as one that [i] paſſeth by a thing that he will not take notice of, doth not impute to the remnant of his heritage their tranſgreſſions; thoſe (ſay Some, both [k] Jews and [l] Chriſtians) who ſhall be left remaining of the Jews at that time when God ſhall reſtore them from captivity. Above, chap. iv. 7. God promiſeth to make her that halted a remnant, the people of his inheritance ſhall not ſo be deſtroyed, though they be chaſtiſed, and though the wicked be cut off from among them, but that an holy ſeed, a [m] remnant ſhall be preſerved, and ſaved, Rom. ix. 27. and to theſe is the promiſe here made, not to all in general. He that is a God forgiving iniquity, will yet by no means clear the guilty, i. e. ſaith the Chaldee, the guilty that will not repent, or turn, and be converted, as he ſaith in the ſame place, Exod. xxxiv. 7. but to thoſe that turn to him he will ſhew mercy, as is here deſcribed, and they for their paucity in reſpect to the others, who perhaps would call themſelves his people, but go contrary to him, are called the remnant of his heritage, and of theſe he doth not ſay that they are altogether [n] innocent, and without ſin, but ſuppoſing their repentance intimated, ver. 9. that he will pardon, or take away, their iniquity, and paſs by their tranſgreſſion, becauſe they are his heritage, not for their deſerts, but of his own free mercy, it being his property not to retain anger for ever, to be implacable in his wrath, becauſe he delighteth in mercy; ſo is his nature oft deſcribed, as, beſides the forecited places of Exodus and Numbers, in many others. I am merciful, ſaith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever, Jer. iii. 12. and ſee Pſalm ciii. 8, 9. though they have nothing in themſelves to deſerve it, yet ſaith he, I, even, I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for my own ſake, and will not remember thy ſins; Iſaiah xliii. 25. This property of mercy (as all others) in him is unalterable, and therefore as he hath formerly ſhewed mercy to his people, ſo will he again [o] do, he will turn again, he will have compaſſion upon us, which according to the ordinary uſe of that word, turn, [p] may either be expounded, he will again have compaſſion upon us, as he hath formerly uſed to have, or elſe with reſpect to what went before. He retaineth not his anger for ever.] He will after he hath chaſtiſed us, for our iniquities, by which we have provoked his wrath, in mercy [q] turn again from his wrath, he will not in anger ſhut up his tender mercies, Pſalm lxxvii. 9. but will [r] turn us to himſelf, and turn himſelf to us, and have compaſſion upon us, according to what is ſaid, Jonah iii. 9. with like uſe of the word, [s] who can tell if God will turn, and repent and turn away from his fierce anger, that we periſh not? and Zech. i. 3. Turn ye unto me, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, and I will turn unto you, &c.

He will ſubdue our iniquities.] The word ſubduing, or bringing down or under, which is [t] uſually applied to the bringing under enemies, is here well applied to ſin, the worſt of enemies, and the ſubduing of which is a token of greater power than the bringing under any bodily enemies: in the ſubduing theſe will the greatneſs both of God's mercy, and power appear; in ſin is conſiderable both the power whereby it prevaileth on men, captivating, and inthralling them to it ſelf, and the [u] evils which it pulls on men, or puniſhments, that it makes men liable to; the taking away both theſe, the word ſubduing will include and require, and both theſe will God do for his people, by giving them grace and power to reſiſt ſin, and ſhake off its yoke, and by taking away the puniſhment thereof, and freeing them from it. The ſame is meant by [w] thoſe that render and expound he ſhall put their iniquities under his feet, as things that he will not look upon any more, but put out of ſight, and mind, quite ſuppreſs, or not ſuffer to riſe up and come in ſight. In the New Teſtament are ſeveral expreſſions which agree to this, and make for illuſtrating it, as, deſtroying the body of ſin in God's children, that they ſhould not henceforth ſerve it, Rom. vi. 6. that it ſhould not reign in their mortal bodies, ver. 12. nor have dominion over them, ver. 14. that God ſhall bruiſe or tread Satan under their feet. He will ſo ſubdue, and put under their iniquities, that they ſhall not farther have dominion over them, nor [x] riſe up in judgment againſt them. To expreſs further the cer-certain, and utter abolition of them, he adds, Thou wilt caſt all their ſins into the depth of the ſea.] Thoſe things which are ſo drowned in the bottom of the ſea, and covered by it, are looked on as out of ſight, out of mind, out of regard, no more likely ever to be taken notice of again. [y] Some here think an alluſion to be had to a cuſtom uſed amongſt the Jews, who when they would have any thing to be away out of memory or regard, and from further uſe, would deſtine it to be caſt into the ſalt ſea, or ſea of Sodom. Of which cuſtom, or expreſſion, ſome examples out of their writings are brought by the learned Doctor Lightfoot in his Centuria Chorographica, chap. 5. (and ſee him on Mat. xviii. 6.) but whether any ſuch cuſtom among them was in our Prophet's time, may be queſtioned. Others think him to allude to the drowning of Pharaoh and his hoſt (the Egyptians) in the Red-Sea, of whom it is ſaid, The ſea covered them, they ſank as lead in the mighty waters, Exod. xv. 10. of whom he ſaid, chap. xiv. 13. See the ſalvation of the Lord, which he will ſhew you to day, for the Egyptians whom ye have ſeen to day, ye ſhall ſee them again no more for ever. Eſpecially he having ſaid above, ver. 15. According to the days of thy coming out of Egypt, I will ſhew unto him marvellous things. But however without looking after alluſion to any particular cuſtom, or hiſtory, the ſcope of the phraſe, according to the cuſtomary expreſſion of all nations and languages, will be manifeſt, ſo as to ſignify, that God will blot out their iniquities, (as he ſpeaks, [z] Pſalm li. 9.) cover them, and no more ſuffer them to be in his ſight, or remembrance to provoke him to anger, or to riſe up againſt them for their deſtruction. Here again (as hath been obſerved,) and in the following words, is a [a] change of perſons, the third, and the ſecond, He, and thou promiſcuouſly uſed, as ſometimes ſpeaking of God, ſometimes to him, yet without making more difference in the ſenſe, than if he had in all the verbs uſed the ſame, either the third or (rather as a [b] learned Jew thinks) the ſecond: which makes that ſome [c] Tranſlators have not thought neceſſary ſo exactly to ſet them down, as they are in the original, but to put one in the place of the other, the ſenſe being ſtill the ſame, as to any that peruſe them will appear.

[g] Chald. Syriack. [h] Ribera. [i] Grot. [k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] Druſ. Rib. Menoch. [m] See Calv. Iſaiah vi. 13. and ii. 11. Jer. xxiii. Ezek. vi. 8. Joel ii. 32. [n] See Abarb. and Kimchi. [o] See Calv. on ver. 19. [p] Druſ. Grot. and Others. See Pſalm lxxi. 20. Return, and quicken, i. e. quicken again. [q] Druſ. [r] Pſalm lxxx. 3. and Zech. i. 3. [s] Joel ii. 14. [t] Druſ. [u] R. Tanch. [w] Grot. Vat. [x] Dutch Notes.

20. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou haſt ſworn unto our fathers from the days of old.

Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, &c.] That which gives him aſſurance, that God will do for them thoſe good things mentioned, is God's faithful promiſe made from of old to them, in their fore-fathers, which he had confirmed by his oath, and to it put his ſeal, which the Jewiſh [d] Doctors do not unfitly ſay, is truth: ſo that by theſe [e] immutable things, in which it was impoſſible for God to lie, eſtabliſhed, it could not fail, but give always firm conſolation to thoſe who had right in it. And from it therefore doth the Prophet here give aſſurance, that God will ſo as he deſcribed, have mercy on them; neither their enemies, nor ſins ſhall be able to hinder it, becauſe ſo it was neceſſary that he might perform, and in ſo doing ſhould perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which he had ſworn, &c. That by Jacob, and Abraham, are meant, not only their perſons, but their poſterity, is on all hands agreed, the promiſes pertaining to, and having been made good, more to their poſterity, than their perſons. Here is uſually made a queſtion concerning the different meaning of truth, and mercy, and why one is ſaid to be performed to Jacob, the other to Abraham. The ordinary anſwer, both by divers [f] Jews, and [g] Chriſtians, is, that the good promiſes of God as made to Abraham at firſt, were mercy, mere mercy, but in reſpect to Jacob, truth. God's truth was engaged to make good to him, and his poſterity, as heirs to Abraham, what of free mercy was promiſed to him, and his ſeed: which is an eaſier expoſition, and more agreeable to the words, than what Rab. Solomon gives, viz. as if the promiſe which he ſhould make good to Jacob, were the reward of Abraham's goodneſs, which he ſhewed in teaching his ſons to keep the way of the Lord. But here [h] other queſtions are alſo ſtarted, as, why Iſaac is not here named as well as Jacob and Abraham, and why Jacob is named before Abraham: but whatever pleaſing or probable anſwers are, or may be given to theſe queſtions, it ſeems not convenient at all to make them. For this would be to queſtion why the Holy Spirit by the Prophets ſpake as he did, and not as men would think fit he ſhould have ſpoken, as if they were fit to teach him, or preſcribe a method to him. We ſhall not therefore inſiſt on them, only we cannot but take notice, what occaſion that fierce Jewiſh Doctor, Abarbinel, takes in his anſwer to the firſt of thoſe queſtions, of venting (as on all occaſions he doth) his malice againſt Chriſtians, while he thus ſaith, " Becauſe from Abraham came Iſmael, " and the Aſſyrians, which ſhall hereafter be " at peace with Iſrael, therefore he ſaith, " that when God ſhall perform the truth to " Jacob, i. e. the truth of thoſe things which " he revealed to him in the viſion of the ladder, Gen. xxviii. 12, &c. wherein, he " ſaith, God ſhewed to him all that concerned " both the captivity, or diſperſion of his " poſterity, and their reſtauration therefrom, " in the redemption, or reſtauration of his " ſeed, He will ſhew mercy alſo to Abraham, " in that the Aſſyrians, the ſons (he ſaith) of " Keturah, which came from him, and the " ſons of Iſmael ſhall receive the law of God, " and [y] Arias Mont. Ribera, &c. [z] See Jer. l. 20. [a] D. Kimchi. So the Pronouns, us, our, their. [b] R. Tanchum. [c] See Græc. Vulg. Lat. Syr. and Arab. [d] Talmud Sabbat. c. 5. p. 55. Ikkarim, part 2. c. 22. Buxt. Lex. mag. in אמן Aman. [e] Heb. vi. 17, 18. [f] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [g] See Chr. à Caſtro. [h] Abarb.

2

" and ſhall be ſubject, or ſubmit themſelves " to Iſrael. But he makes no mention of " Iſaac, becauſe Eſau, who came from him, " ſhall have no portion, or inheritance in the " law of God, nor in the peace of Iſrael, for " there ſhall be none left remaining to Eſau." This is his preciſe determination of the queſtion, in which his aim appears to be, to cut off the poſterity of Eſau from any lot, or part in thoſe bleſſings promiſed of old to Abraham, and from all mercy. But though Iſaac be not named, yet was not his ſon Eſau then in his grand-father Abraham's loins, as well as other of his poſterity, and ſo under him comprehended as well as they; though Jacob (as to the land of promiſe) carried away the bleſſing of the inheritance: and ſo did Iſaac from Iſmael, and the ſons of Keturah? And what is here to exclude him more than them? Beſides the promiſe made to Abraham is of larger extent, reaching to all nations, and families of the earth, Gen. xii. 3. and xviii. 18. and xxii. 18. Among thoſe all ſure thoſe of the progeny of Eſau alſo muſt be included. And though Iſaac be not here expreſly mentioned, yet is he according to the judgment of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who adds his name, manifeſtly comprehended, and underſtood, and to him the like promiſe was made, as to Abraham, that in his ſeed ſhould all the nations of the earth be bleſſed, Gen. xxvi. 4. [i] With him he did eſtabliſh alſo the bleſſing of all men and the covenant, ſo that though he made it reſt more peculiarly upon the head of Jacob, and the right of primogeniture being transferred to him, his poſterity enjoyed the promiſed land; yea, and as for ſpiritual bleſſings they had the preeminence alſo, in that they had the [k] Oracles of God committed to them, his law to direct them for obtaining the promiſed bleſſing: and to them did [l] pertain the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the ſervice of God, and the promiſes; yea, and that of them according to the fleſh, Chriſt, that promiſed ſeed, [m] in whom the bleſſing was to be extended to all the nations, and kindreds of the earth, came: and therefore at his coming, he was firſt ſent to bleſs them, Acts iii. 26. And it was neceſſary that the glad tidings thereof ſhould firſt be publiſhed to them, Acts xiii. 32, 46. yet was there by virtue of the promiſe made to Abraham, and repeated to Iſaac, mercy alſo, and a bleſſing for all other nations that ſhould come in. Why ſhall Eſau's poſterity be excepted againſt, and utterly excluded, even Iſaac's ſons, to whom he gave alſo a bleſſing, though inferior to Jacob's, whenas the word all is general without limitation? and we ſee Amos ix. 12. a promiſe of the reception of the remnant of Edom alſo, as well as of other nations. But what do we plead for Eſau's poſterity, when it is manifeſt that the Jews quarrel is not here againſt them that are really ſo, but againſt thoſe whom he, with others of them, is pleaſed to beſtow that name or title upon, viz. Chriſtians, without any [n] reaſon at all, but what is abſurd, ridiculous, and altogether falſe. Only, the Edomites, or Eſau, were a name moſt hateful to them, (contrary to the plain command, Deut. xxiii. 7. Thou ſhalt not abhor an Edomite) and therefore to ſhew their irreconcileable hatred to them, they would call them by that name. We have no reaſon to take it to our ſelves, nor acknowledge it: but with greater reaſon than they who are [o] Iſrael only after the fleſh, do all true Chriſtians (of what nation ſoever, and from whomſoever deſcended) challenge to themſelves the name of Iſraelites, to be the [p] Iſrael of God, and being of the faith of Abraham, to be the children of Abraham, Gal. iii. 7. and ſo to have right to the truth, which God had by oath confirmed to Jacob, and his mercy to Abraham, to whom was before preached that goſpel, in thee ſhall all nations be bleſſed, ver. 8. for the promiſe was not to Abraham, or to his ſeed through the law, but through the righteouſneſs of faith, Rom. iv. 13. and is ſure to all the ſeed, not to that only which is of the law, but to that alſo which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all, ibid. ver. 16. On refelling his calumny therefore in calling Chriſtians, Edomites, or Eſauites, and excluding us in that notion from any part in that mercy to Abraham, we ſhall not longer ſtand, it having no other ground than the inveterate malice of thoſe who have refuſed their own mercy towards thoſe, who have embraced and laid hold on it. That we may return threfore from this digreſſion to the words of the Prophet, we may from the words, and conceſſions of him, who hath occaſioned it by this queſtion and anſwer to it, take advantage for our ſumming up of what is given us to underſtand from them; as, 1. That the mercy in them mentioned, belongeth not only to Iſrael after the fleſh, but to thoſe of other nations alſo, as he allows to the children of Iſhmael and Keturah, who ſhall come in to God, by the obedience of faith, and ſo become of his Iſrael, being of Iſrael's faith. 2*ly*, That the mercy here promiſed was to be made good at, and by the coming of the Meſſiah, which is meant by the time of redemption, or reſtauration by him mentioned. Thus therefore as to the ſcope of the words, we conclude, that theſe words, as a concluſion of the former Prophecy concerning the reſtauration of the Jews, and the confuſion of their enemies, contain an aſſurance of a temporal or corporal deliverance to them, and were accompliſhed when God remembring his covenant made with their fore-fathers, accepting of their converſion, pardoning their ſins, and blotting out their inquities, did free them from the Babyloniſh captivity, and bring them back into the promiſed land; but that the expreſſions are ſuch as giving to expect all that by virtue of God's truth to Jacob, and mercy to Abraham, and oath to their fore-fathers, was to be expected, ſeem to include a promiſe of Chriſt,

[i] Eccleſ. xliv. 22. [k] Rom. iii. 2. [l] Rom. ix. 4. [m] Gal. iii. 16. [n] See the reaſons in Buxtorf's Treatiſes, at the end of Cozari. [o] 1 Cor. x. 18. [p] Gal. vi. 16.

Chriſt, that ſeed of Abraham, in which all the [q] kindreds of the earth were to be bleſſed, with all the benefits of his redemption, and ſo were by him fulfilled in an higher manner, not of giving to the Jews any victory over all nations, and earthly poſſeſſions, and dominion as they fondly expect, (as we have above ſhewed, and the author we have laſt mentioned, here plainly intimates in his words cited) but of reſcuing all that come in to him, and lay hold on his redemption, both Jews and Gentiles of all nations, out of the hands of worſe enemies than the Babylonians, even ſin and Satan, and making them citizens, not of the earthly, but of the heavenly Jeruſalem, heirs of the kingdom of heaven, and conferring on them all ſpiritual bleſſings. This alſo being comprehended in theſe words, was fully made good by Chriſt's taking [r] on himſelf the ſeed of Abraham, and coming into the world for the work of our redemption, and ſetting up his kingdom among men, and calling them without excluſion of any nation or condition, into his church. Thus to underſtand the words of Chriſt, and his kingdom we learn, both out of the hymn of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of Zachary, in the firſt chapter of St. Luke, in both which much like the ſame expreſſions are uſed as here: and in the firſt it is ſaid, that by God's ſending of Chriſt, he had holpen his ſervant Iſrael in remembrance of his mercy, as he ſpake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his ſeed for ever, ver. 54, 55. and in the other, that God had viſited, and redeemed his people, and had raiſed up an horn of ſalvation for us, in the houſe of his ſervant David, as he ſpake by the mouth of his holy Prophets, which have been ſince the world began; That we ſhould be ſaved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; To perform the mercy promiſed to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he ſware to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, ver. 68, &c. In Chriſt therefore was that which is here mentioned, God's truth to Jacob, the mercy to Abraham, which he had ſworn unto the fathers from the days of old, performed: in him fully, [s] yet ſo as to be ſtill in performing unto the world's end, by his calling into his church, both Jews and Gentiles, and offering his ſalvation to them, and bleſſing them with all ſpiritual bleſſings, which ſalvation that the Jews will not acknowledge but reject, and him that brought it, to expect only a temporal reſtauration by one whom they fancy yet to come, is their meer groundleſs obſtinacy, envying the extent of God's boundleſs mercy promiſed in the ſeed of Abraham to all nations, for which we pity them, and deſire God that he would open their eyes, that they may ſee, and acknowledge, and lay hold on his ſalvation, [t] which he hath prepared before the face of all people, a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Iſrael.

Thus much as to the words of this Prophet. We may only add an obſervation, which the forementioned Jew takes from an ancient [u] Author of theirs, viz. that there is not any denunciation of hard things to Iſrael, which is not concluded with promiſe of mercy. Among other inſtances (as out of Moſes, Hoſea, Joel, Amos, Jeremiah) he brings this concluſion of Micah's Prophecy, in which after ſeveral judgments, he ſhuts up all with words of comfort. And very remarkable in that kind is indeed this concluſion, which to ſhew how greatly God delights in mercy, is uttered in words giving aſſurance of mercy, not only to Iſrael after the fleſh, upon their repentance, but to all that ſhall in Chriſt, the promiſed ſeed, by faith lay hold on his promiſe made to Abraham, and in him to all the kindreds of the earth, ſo that the Gentiles alſo reading it, cannot but glorify God, and rejoice with his people, and ſing unto him that hymn which the [w] Apoſtle ſhews to be fitted to them, viz. O praiſe the Lord all ye nations, praiſe him all ye people, for his merciful kindneſs is great towards us, and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever, praiſe ye the Lord.

[q] Acts iii. 25. [r] Heb. ii. 16. [s] Mercer. on Amos ix. 13. [t] Luke ii. 30, &c. [u] Abarb. out of Siffre, in which Book it is, p. 60, at the beginning of his Expoſition of Deut. xxxiii. and ſee Yalkut. [w] Rom. xv. 9, 10, 11. Pſalm cxvii.

The LORD's Name be praiſed.

A

COMMENTARY

ON THE

PROPHECY

OF

MALACHI,

By EDWARD POCOCK, D. D.

Canon of Chriſt-Church, and Regius Profeſſor of the Hebrew Tongue, in the Univerſity of OXFORD.

VIVCHI

OF

BROUGHTON

TO THE

Right Reverend FATHER in GOD

THOMAS

Lord Biſhop of EXETER.

My LORD,

AMONGST the encouragements which I have had to proceed in explaining ſome of the leſſer Prophets, have been your Lordſhip's perſuaſions, which deſervedly ought to have with me the force of commands. The ſame have given me boldneſs to recommend this part of that Work to your Lordſhip's Patronage: by whoſe countenancing of it, others will be encouraged to look into it with hopes of receiving ſome benefit by it. That which is preſented to your hands is an Expoſition on Malachi, the laſt of the Prophets, as in order, ſo in time: and even for that reaſon by me choſen to fix my thoughts on, before others, becauſe neareſt, therefore, in conjunction with the Goſpel; to which it leads us by the hand, and delivers us over: for that begins where he ends; ſo that from that, looking back, according to our Saviour's own direction to ſearch the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament, which teſtify of him, for confirmation of the New; and to ſee how, what in this is recorded as done, was in that foretold as to be done; we preſently light on thoſe things concerning Chriſt and his forerunner John the Baptiſt, with report of which the Goſpel begins, ſo clearly ſet down by this laſt of the Prophets, as that we cannot but admire that the Jews of thoſe times did not at the appearance of them in their offices, without more ado, confeſs, That what Malachi propheſied, was now come to paſs, and acknowledge, That both Elias, the Lord's meſſenger, whom he would ſend to prepare the way before him; and the Lord of the Temple, whom they ſought, even the Meſſenger of the Covenant, whom they delighted in (they that were to come) were come, and they were to look for no other: and no leſs is it to be wondred, that their poſterity ſhould, even to this day, continue in the like obſtinacy, and ſhut their eyes againſt theſe manifeſt truths; notwithſtanding they have long ſince ſeen fully executed on their nation all thoſe heavy things which in this Prophecy alſo were denounced againſt ſuch as ſhould not embrace them. Yet do they, taking no notice of theſe things, perverſly ſtill ſtand out, and ſeek all ways, by falſe gloſſes, abſurd miſinterpreta-

tions

tions and miſapplications of theſe Prophecies ſo long ſince fulfilled, as if they were things yet to come, to elude them, and deceive themſelves and their poſterity. Their cavils I have endeavoured, as God hath enabled me, to remove; and ſo by aſſerting the place for Chriſt's birth deſigned by Micah, and the time for his coming by Malachi, to clear the way for the better underſtanding of all ſuch other Prophecies as foretold of other things in and by him to be fulfilled, and by the exact accompliſhment of which the Goſpel proves him to be the Chriſt. Theſe I thought convenient, therefore, to begin with, as the Goſpel doth, as preceding in execution divers others that were before them uttered. The due fulfilling of theſe, and the nature of them being vindicated from the gloſſes of the Jews, the other will be better underſtood; and ſuch cavils alſo as are brought in the expounding of them, be eaſier removed, the being and coming of him whom they concern being eſtabliſhed. What I have done in this kind, or any other which may conduce to the true meaning of this Prophet, I muſt humbly ſubmit to the judgment of your Lordſhip and others. Whatever the Work be, I deſire it may be a teſtimony of my dutiful reſpects and gratitude to your Lordſhip, in many years enjoyment of whoſe love and friendſhip I have been formerly happy, and now more in that I ſee that the change of your Lordſhip's condition to an higher degree of dignity in the Church, hath nothing altered your affections, of which I have real proof in your Lordſhip's favour ſhewed to ſome of mine for my ſake. Long may your Lordſhip continue in health and happineſs, to be an inſtrument of promoting God's glory and the good of the Church. So are the hearty prayers of,

My LORD,

Your LORDSHIP's Moſt Humble Servant,

EDWARD POCOCK.

A

COMMENTARY

ON THE

PROPHECY

OF

MALACHI.

CHAP. I.

VERSE 1. The burden of the word of the Lord to Iſrael by Malachi.

THE burden of the word of the Lord to Iſrael by Malachi.] Whereas there is nothing elſewhere ſpoken of this Prophet in Canonical Scripture, it hath given occaſion of ſeveral conjectures concerning him. His name being interpreted ſignifying, my angel, or my meſſenger, hath made [a] Some to think, that he was an angel appearing in form of a man, for the delivery of God's meſſage to the people of that time. But this opinion by [b] Some ancient Chriſtians of great authority entertain'd, is by Others that followed, deſervedly rejected, as having no ſolid grounds. If any will make any inference from the derivation of the name, he may rather think him deſign'd as a [c] man of holy, angelical qualities, or in office reſembling an angel, rather than a natural angel. A man therefore he is taken to be; but who is that man? An ancient Jewiſh [d] Doctor would make him the ſame with Mordecai, but having no ground for it, is not by Others followed. That wherein [e] more of them agree, and among them the Chaldee Paraphraſt alſo, is, that he was the ſame with Eſdras, to which divers Chriſtians alſo ſeem to incline. [f] But the arguments brought to prove it, on examination are no way convincing: and therefore the truer and more probable [g] opinion is, that he was a diſtinct Prophet, call'd by this name Malachi; a name well agreeing to, and atteſting his function, as a Prophet ſent by God in his meſſage. He propheſied after the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity, and the rebuilding of the temple, and was the laſt of the Prophets that God ſent to them, leaving them for the future to expect the coming of Chriſt, and to long after it, for farther manifeſtation of his will. Of Chriſt and his forerunner John Baptiſt, he moſt evidently propheſied, and till their coming God left them for directions to the law of Moſes, chap. iv. 4. The authority of this prophecy is aſſerted in the New Teſtament, where it is cited, Mat. xi. 10. Mark i. 2. Luke i. 16. and vii. 27. Rom. ix. 13. and elſewhere. [h] The tradition of the Jews is, that prophecy remained among them forty years under the ſecond temple: in which time Haggai and Zachary, and Malachi propheſied: of which Malachi was the laſt: and ſo his prophecy concludes the books of the prophets; it ends with the promiſe of him, with the hiſtory of whom the Goſpel begins, viz. John the Baptiſt, and his preaching repentance.

His prophecy is here called משא, Maſſa, The burden of the word of the Lord, by which name prophecy is [i] elſewhere often called, and uſually gloſſed where it occurs, a burdenſome prophecy, ſuch as denounces heavy things. [k] But I ſuppoſe this nicety, as concerning the ſignification of burden, and burdenſomneſs is not to be inſiſted on in the interpretation of the word. My ground is, becauſe the Iſraelites ſeem reproved for ſo uſing or underſtanding it, Jer. xxiii. 34, &c. As for the Prophet, and the prieſt, and the people, that ſhall ſay, The burden of the Lord, I will even puniſh that man and his houſe. Thus ſhall ye ſay every one to [a] See the Prologue to Mal. in Bib. Mag. [b] Hierom. Præfat. in Mal. [c] Chr. à Caſtro. [d] See Abarbinel in Mal. & Talmud Megillah, c. 1. p. 15. [e] Idem, and Kimchi. R. Solom. in chap. ii. 10. Ch. à Caſtro. [f] Ribera. [g] R. Ab. Ezra, Kimchi, R. Tanch. Abarbinel. [h] R. Tanchum. [i] Zach. ix. 1. and xii. 1. [k] Druſius on Nah. i. 1.

to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, what hath the Lord anſwered? and what hath the Lord ſpoken? And the burden of the Lord ſhall ye mention no more, for every man's word ſhall be his burden: for ye have perverted the words of the living God, &c. Here ſeems a prohibition for taking the word in that ſenſe: The occaſion of which, according to the expoſition of divers of the beſt [l] Jewiſh Interpreters, was thus. Whereas the word Maſſa (taken from a [m] root that ſignifies to bear, carry, take up, and the like) is of ambiguous ſignification; and ſignifies (among the reſt) ſometimes a burden, ſometimes what is born, or carried, or delivered from one to another, whether [n] thing, or word, and ſo was uſed for a prophecy or meſſage from God; (as often in Scripture) and for other ſpeech or doctrine (as Prov. xxx. 1.) the Jews looking on the meſſages received from God, and delivered to them by the Prophets, as things grievous and burdenſome, when they enquired of the Prophets concerning them, uſed this word, and meant it in the worſt ſenſe, in ſcoff, or contempt of them. God therefore ſeeing the evil meaning of their hearts (though otherwiſe their language ſeemed to be ſuch as was uſual for ſignifying that which they enquired after, and to have no harm in it) diſcovers their hypocriſy to the Prophet, and charges them with perverting his word in their uſe of it, and therefore forbids them any more ſo to abuſe it, but if they would enquire of the Prophet to do it in other words, viz. what hath the Lord anſwered? or what hath the Lord ſpoken? which was as much as was by that word meant, when it was uſed by the Prophets, and ſhould have been meant by them when they uſed it, but was perverted and abuſed by them to another meaning. Hence taking directions we conceive that here (as in other places) the word is not ſtrictly to be taken in the harſh ſignification of a grievous or heavy burden, but rather as a burden (if we may take the word in a gentler ſenſe) or meſſage [o] taken or received from God to be delivered to the people. That it doth not always import heavy or burdenſome words or meſſages may appear by its uſe, Zach. xii. 1. where it is prefixed to the promiſes of good things to Iſrael, not heavy things againſt them: as likewiſe Lament. ii. 14. where the pretended prophecies of their falſe Prophets are called משאות שוא Maſſeoth ſhav, which is rendred falſe burdens; whereas they appear to have ſpoken to them not heavy but pleaſing and flattering things, as he there complains that they did not diſcover their iniquities: ſo that both real and pretended prophecies are ſo called whatſoever they contained.

The word therefore being of ſuch latitude, we need not here preſs its ſignification of what is burdenſome, but in its larger notion looking on it, take it as ſufficient for the meaning of what is here delivered, that it is the [p] meſſage or import of the word of the Lord: a prophecy from him received, and by his commiſſion delivered, by the hand or miniſtry of Malachi, to Iſrael. Which name, as before the diviſion of the two kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael, it was common to the twelve tribes, though afterwards it became a peculiar title to the ten tribes: ſo here it is given to the two tribes, and to all of the other who join'd themſelves to them in their return from Babylon. Theſe having had late experience of God's great favour in turning their captivity, and reſtoring them to their own land, and again ſettling his worſhip among them, ſhould have been very careful in reforming their ways, and ſincere in their obedience: but it was otherwiſe. Many enormities, and actions contrary to God's law, and diſpleaſing to him, and ſigns of their great ingratitude to him, and unmindfulneſs of his benefits, were found among them: for which therefore, ſeeking ſtill their good, he ſends this his Prophet to reprove them, and to exhort them to repentance; and for the comfort of the godly among them, to give them aſſurance of the coming of the promiſed Meſſiah in his due time, to ſet all things right for their good: as will in order appear in what follows of this prophecy, which thus begins,

2. I have loved you, ſaith the Lord: yet ye ſay, Wherein haſt thou loved us? was not Eſau Jacob's brother? ſaith the Lord: yet I loved Jacob.

3. And I hated Eſau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waſte, for the dragons of the wilderneſs.

I have loved you, ſaith the Lord.] Here ſeems intimated a reproof of Iſrael for their great ingratitude and unkindneſs to the Lord, whilſt he tells them, that certainly they ought to have loved him, ſince that he had firſt loved them, and ought therefore to have found grateful returns of love from them: but how contrary behaviour he found from them, he ſhews in that queſtion, which he ſays, that inſtead of a ready acknowledgment of his love, they were ready to put; implying little leſs than an abſolute denial of his kindneſs, Yet ye ſay, wherein haſt thou loved us? So that he ſees it neceſſary by a particular inſtance or proof in the next words, to make evident wherein he had ſhewed his love to them. Was not, &c.

The ſcope and ſenſe will be much the ſame, if with [q] Others we interpret thoſe words, yet ye ſay, by, And if ye ſay, wherein, &c. it will ſtill intimate their ingratitude, and that they were ready ſo to ſay; and that it was neceſſary to prevent or anſwer that perverſe queſtion, by confirming by that inſtance given what he had ſaid, I have loved you, viz. with greater love than ordinary, and ſhewed to you greater tokens of love than to others. Another learned [r] Jew reads the queſtion put ſomething differently: not wherein, as if they utterly utterly denied God's love to them, which was manifeſt to all, but wherefore haſt thou loved us? as if they ſhould intimate that there was ſome reaſon for it, why he ſhould love them; viz. in requital of their father Abraham's love to him; ſo that it was not a free love and mercy to them, but a love (as it were) of debt, due to them for Abraham's ſake, and then the inſtance given ſhews how perverſe this thought of theirs was. For if it had been only ſo much love as was due in requital of Abraham's love to him, why then had not Eſau, who was deſcended as well of Abraham as Jacob, had as much right to it, and as great a ſhare in it as Jacob; his poſterity, as they? Whereas by God's loving Jacob, and hating Eſau his twin-brother, 'twas made manifeſt that there was more in it than ſo; and that his peculiar love of Jacob, and eſpecial favours to his poſterity, were not for Abraham's deſert alone, but of free grace and mercy to them, and therefore deſerved all poſſible returns of love, gratitude, and obedience from them. This he makes to be the meaning and connexion of the words, which though in his way it may ſeem plain, yet is there no need to leave the former interpretation for it.

[l] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum, Abarbinel. [m] נשא Naſa. [n] Gen. xliii. 34. [o] See R. Sol. and the reſt. [p] The viſion of the word of the Lord. Syr. Arab. The prophecy of the word of the Lord. Another Arab. [q] Chald. Paraph. and Arab. Verſ. MS. R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [r] Abarb.

Was not Eſau Jacob's brother? ſaith the Lord; yet I loved Jacob, and I hated Eſau.] This the Lord gives as an inſtance of his free love to the Iſraelites, the poſterity of Jacob, that whereas Eſau and Jacob were twin-brothers, one as well as the other deſcended from Abraham, both ſons of Iſaac, by one mother, twins, born at the ſame time, yet he loved one, and did not love, or hated, the other, and ſo derived that love and hatred to their poſterity, and accordingly ſhewed to them the tokens and effects thereof. The Apoſtle St. Paul in Rom. ix. 11, 13. improveth this argument from hence, that this love to the one, and hatred to the other was declared, when thoſe children were not yet born, neither had done any good or evil. So that it could not be ſaid one had deſerved better than the other, and therefore his love to one above the other muſt needs appear to be of free grace and choice, electing one and rejecting the other; and the diſtinction or difference that he made between them may be illuſtrated by the ſeveral advantages that by his love one had over the other in ſeveral matters concerning both their ſpiritual and temporal eſtate. But the literal explication of the words here intended, requires no more than the view of the particular effect of his love to Jacob's poſterity, and hatred to Eſau's here inſtanced in, viz. the utter deſolation of Eſau's country, and the reſtitution of Iſrael's, when he had given them both into the hand of their enemies to be puniſh'd for their ſins; that puniſhment proving to the one for their utter deſtruction, to the other but as a fatherly chaſtiſement to make them ſenſible of their errors, and to amend them, that ſo they might again be reconciled to him, and taken into favour. Of Eſau, therefore (or his poſterity, the Edomites) he ſays that he declared his hatred to him (or them called by his name) in that he laid his mountains and his heritage waſte for the dragons of the wilderneſs.

His mountains.] In Deut. ii. 5. we read that God gave mount Seir unto Eſau for a poſſeſſion, and ſo again, Joſhua xxiv. 4. ſo that though the occaſion of his going firſt thither out of the land of Canaan be expreſſed, Gen. xxxvi. 7. to have been becauſe their riches (viz. his and his brother Jacob's) were more than that they might dwell together, and the land could not bear them both, yet it appears to have been by God's deſignation and appointment, that ſo Eſau might take that country, which is deſcribed by naming its chief mountain, which was Seir, for his poſſeſſion, and to his poſterity, and leave Canaan to Jacob, which his poſterity had after for their poſſeſſion.

Mountains] [s] here put in the plural number, intimates that in it were more mountains, or that it was a mountainous country. We need not here inſiſt on that note which [t] Some make, that God's giving at firſt to Eſau a craggy, mountainous country, and reſerving for Jacob's poſterity the more pleaſant country of Canaan, was then a ſign of God's love to Jacob, and hatred to Eſau, however true it be. That which is here given us to look on particularly as a ſign of his hatred to him, being that thoſe mountains, and that heritage, that he then gave him, and his poſterity had hitherto poſſeſſed and flouriſhed in, he had now laid waſte, and diſpoſſeſſing them thereof, gave it to be inhabited by the dragons of the wilderneſs.

Dragons.] So the Latin, and ſo the moſt, if not all latter tranſlations; and ſo divers of the [u] Jewiſh Expoſitors ſeem to take it. But another learned Jew [w] excepts againſt this rendring, and ſaith, that the creatures by this name meant are not Serpents but Jackales, a wild howling beaſt that lives abroad in deſolate places: and that whether the noun be put תנות Tannoth in the feminine form (as here) or תנים Tannim in the maſculine, as Micah i. 8. and elſewhere; it is all one as to the ſignification. Compare this with Pſalm xliv. 19. where is, The place of Tannim: and that with Pſalm lxiii. 10. where we read, A portion for Foxes, (for Foxes and Jackales are not far different in kind or nature.) The name Jackale, or Chakale, according to the Turkiſh pronunciation, is borrowed from the Perſian language in which is written شغال Shegal, and is plainly from the Hebrew שועל Shual, which is put in the places cited, and elſewhere, for a Fox, and may ſeem therefore to comprehend both thoſe kinds. Theſe Jackales will prey on dead bodies; yea, dig them out of their graves, if not well covered. So that theſe words, Pſalm xliv. 19. may have this ſenſe, Thou haſt cauſed or ſuffered us to be ſmitten in open, waſte, unhabited plains, the place or habitation of Jakales, where ſuch wild beaſts prey on the ſlain bodies, none hindring them: and and ſo will it, in ſenſe, be much like what is ſaid, Pſalm lxxix. 2.

[s] Druſ. [t] Kimchi. [u] R. Sol. Ab. Ezra, Kimchi in Rad. [w] R. Tanchum.

A [x] Jew that in that place of Micah, in his tranſlation into Arabick, ſo renders Tannim (the maſculine) as the other would have it, viz. Jackales, بنات اوي Benat Awi, yet here renders Tannoth (the feminine) by البوم Albume, Owls, why I know not. Concerning the word, ſee it more largely diſcourſed there on Micah. But however there be this difference concerning the kind of the creature by this name ſignified, all tends to the ſame purpoſe; namely, to denote that their land ſhould be ſo laid waſte as that none but ſuch creatures, as live only in waſte deſolate places, ſhould for the future inhabit it, and there ſhould not be men to affright them, or keep them thence. An expreſſion, the like to which is elſewhere alſo uſed to ſignify the utter deſolation of a place that was formerly well peopled and inhabited, as Iſaiah xiii. 21, 22. and xxxiv. 13. and Jer. ix. 11. and x. 22. and li. 27. And therefore ſeveral ancient Tranſlators ſeem to have thought it ſufficient to give the meaning of the words by ſuch expreſſions which might import, that this country ſhould be laid wholly and utterly waſte, without particularly giving the ſignification of this word: as the Chaldee who renders it, into waſteneſs of the wilderneſs (or a waſte wilderneſs;) the Syriack into habitations of the wilderneſs; the Greek into houſes of the wilderneſs, which the printed Arabick verſion following by a plain miſtake of the ſecond letter of the word (reading δόματα for δώματα) renders, into gifts of the wilderneſs: not that they are to be ſuppoſed to have read in the Text otherwiſe than we now do, [y] but becauſe (as we ſaid) they thought it ſufficient ſo in more general terms to give the ſcope of the words.

A learned [z] man conjectures the Greek Interpreter (or Interpreters) not to have read, as it is uſually in the Hebrew לחנות Letannoth, but לחנות Lechanuth, which ſignifies a Shop, an Inn, a place where people ſit and abide to work, or buy, ſell, or reſt, or the like: but it is hard to follow ſuch conjectures as require a change of the received reading in the Hebrew text: and here ſeems no need of it, if we would juſtify the Greek Verſion. If what was before ſaid will not ſuffice, it will be eaſier and more probable to ſay that they took Tannoth to ſignify habitations, the ſame that Neoth elſewhere, as Jer. ix. 9. and Joel i. 19. marg. and perhaps it might antiently be uſed in the Hebrew tongue in that ſignification, as well as it (or what is very like it) is ſtill in the Arabick dialect, which is of ſo nigh affinity with it, that learned men, even the Jews themſelves, often have recourſe to it, for finding out the ſignification of ſome words which are of ſeldom uſe in the Bible; and in that נאה Tenaah, or in Hebrew letters תנאה ſignifies a manſion, or habitation.

Like threats of deſtruction to the children of Eſau, the Edomites, are elſewhere alſo denounced, as Jer. xlix. from ver. 7, to 22. and Ezek. xxv. 13. and the whole 35th chapter, and in the Prophecy of Obadiah, which is particularly directed againſt them; and Joel iii. 19. and all thoſe things which are there ſpoken of them, we cannot doubt were punctually fulfilled on them, becauſe by God ſpoken, the leaſt tittle of whoſe words cannot fail, but as ſurely be all performed as if it were already done, when ſpoken; although remaining hiſtories ſhould not leave on record every circumſtance, when or how it was done and made good; at leaſt their being no more taken notice of, may ſeem a part of fulfilling theſe prophecies, that they ſhould be ſmall among the Heathen, and deſpiſed among men, Jer. xlix. 14. that he ſhould not be, ver. 10. be as though they had not been, Obad. ver. 16. [a] yet will from ſtory appear, what is here ſaid to have been made good on them by the Chaldeans, and what followed by the Jews in the Maccabees time. For this prophecy is ſaid to have taken place, or been made good by the deſtruction of the Edomites about [b] five years after the Jews were led captive. From which devaſtation it appears by the words, that they flattered themſelves with a recovery, as well as they ſaw the Jews after 70 years captivity to be reſtored, but God ſhews that what they promiſe themſelves in this kind ſhould be in vain. So he adds,

4. Whereas Edom ſaith, We are impoveriſhed, but we will return, and build the deſolate places; thus ſaith the Lord of hoſts, They ſhall build, but I will throw down; and they ſhall call them, The border of wickedneſs, and the people againſt whom the Lord hath indignation for ever.

Whereas Edom ſaith, we are impoveriſhed, but we will return and build the deſolate places, &c.] [c] Some give the ſenſe thus, "If Edom "ſhall ſay, Though we are now become poor "and low, and our land laid waſte, yet we "will again return, and build the waſte places, "as Iſrael have done:" which ſeems nearer than what [d] Others of the Jews give, "From "the beginning we have been poor, but "henceforward, being we are enriched with "the ſpoils of Jeruſalem, we will return and "build up our waſte places." Another Jewiſh [e] Doctor looks on the manner of ſpeech to intimate as if they ſhould ſay, [f] "It is not his "hand that ſmote us, but by (accident, or) "the fortune of the world we have come (or "fallen) ſeveral times into a low condition "and poverty, and ſo have our land laid "waſte, but we will (or ſhall) again return "and build our deſolate places." This differs not much in ſenſe from the firſt (which is cleareſt) only in that he undertakes to give the grounds of [x] MS. Arab. [y] Buxtorf. Vindic. p. 641. [z] Capell. Crit. Sac. p. 255. [a] Grot. on Ezek. xxv. 14. and Joſephus, and the Books of the Maccabees. [b] Grot. when Nebuchadnezzar overcame alſo the Moabites and Ammonites, Joſephus, l. 10. c. 11. [c] R. D. Kimchi. [d] R. Sol. Jarchi. [e] Abarb. [f] See 1 Sam. vi. 9.

of their thoughts; but whatever was the ground of their ſaying thus with themſelves, God's anſwer to them is, They ſhall build, but I will throw down] their ſtriving to recover themſelves ſhall be all in vain, he will ſo notoriouſly fruſtrate all their endeavours in that kind, that all people ſeeing how ill things ſucceed with them, and how irremoveably heavy God's judgments and curſe lye upon them, ſhall call them, The border of wickedneſs, a land of ſinful people, curſed for the ſins of its inhabitants; a people againſt whom the wrath of God is ſo incenſed and continued as never to be appeaſed; ſo that inſtead of that recovery of proſperity, which they promiſed themſelves they ſhould ſtill grow poorer and poorer, and at laſt be utterly deſtroyed, as it is at this day, wherein there is no memorial of them, no people owned by that name, except ſuch, as we have elſewhere ſhewed, as are by the malicious Jews out of mere malice, without any ground, ſo called, viz. Romans, and in general, Chriſtians: and therefore they expect this prophecy yet on them to be fulfilled, as Abarbinel, minding nothing but the deſtruction of the Chriſtians.

The word רששנו Ruſhſhaſhnu rendred we are impoveriſhed, is by other ancient Tranſlators rendred, are deſtroyed: as by the Greek and Latin. And ſo a learned [g] Jew, both here, and on Jer. v. 17. obſerves two ſignifications to be faſtned on it, viz. according to Some, we are impoveriſhed; according to Others, we are cut off, or deſtroyed. And ſo in Miclal Yophi on this place, out of Kimchi, on Jer. v. 17. The ſenſe according to either will be indifferent.

5. And your eyes ſhall ſee, and ye ſhall ſay, the Lord will be magnified from the border of Iſrael.

And your eyes ſhall ſee, &c.] So evident, ſo fully ſhewn are theſe tokens of God's love to you, and hatred to Eſau's poſterity, as that your eyes, you being reſtored to your country, and theirs continuing deſolate, ſhall ſee them, and you ſhall ſay [muſt needs ſay] The Lord will be magnified (or is magnified, or, be the Lord magnified) from the border of Iſrael, [h] which ſtill ſhall be called by their name; whereas the country of Edom ſhall be looked on as an accurſed land, and called The border of wickedneſs.

From the border.] In the Margin, upon, or from upon; and it is noted there that ſo it is in the Hebrew, and ſo it is מעל Meal. But it is by a learned Jew [i] noted that מ Me, or the firſt letter, or the prepoſition prefixed which ſignifies from, is ſometimes redundant in ſuch caſes, and that it may be all one, as if it were without it, only על Al, upon, above, or over. The ſame learned Jew farther adds for explication of the ſenſe, more words, which becauſe his book is not printed, nor common, it will not be amiſs to give, or the meaning of them, which is, [That the meaning of theſe words together in connexion with the former is, Ye have or (ſhall have) aſſurance of his love to you, and providence over you, when you ſee that you your ſelves are returned to your own land, and have power of building and inhabiting it, but they have not power to do the like, but they build, and I throw down, and ye therefore praiſe (or ſhall praiſe) and magnify my name for it, ſaying, The Lord ſhall be magnified on the border of Iſrael, that is, his greatneſs ſhall be always manifeſt upon (or over) you; or elſe it may be ſupplied thus; The Lord ſhall be magnified, who protecteth the border of Iſrael, or the like. Or the meaning is ſaid to be, It would have become you that you ſhould ſo do, and have continued ſo to do (viz. to have taken due notice of this, and to have ſaid, The Lord be magnified, &c. but you have done the contrary; as in what follows is declared. Or, ſaith he, in the opinion of Some, the words From the border of Iſrael, are to be joined with, and ye; as if it were thus to be conſtrued, And you that reſide on (or dwell in) the border of Iſrael, ſhall ſay, The Lord be magnified.] Thus he, which we the rather take notice of, becauſe it will arm us againſt what another [k] Jew ſaith that this may be interpreted, And your eyes ſhall ſee the deſtruction of Edom in the end of days (or the laſt days) and then ye ſhall ſay, The Lord be magnified from the border of Iſrael, that is to ſay, In all the world ſhall his name be magnified; according to what is ſaid, Then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may call upon the name of the Lord, to ſerve him with one conſent, Zeph. iii. 9. He ſeems to look upon this prophecy as not yet fulfilled, but hereafter to be fulfilled by the utter deſtruction of Edom, (which certainly hath been long ſince deſtroyed) and ſettling Iſrael again in their land. They willingly catch at any thing whereby to cheriſh themſelves in their fond error of expecting a Meſſiah yet to come, who ſhall reſtore to Iſrael a temporal kingdom, and ſubdue under them all their enemies, and cut off thoſe whom they pleaſe to call Edom, by which name we have ſhewed whom they mean. He runs in this the ſame way that Abarbinel doth. Yet here Abarbinel, though he promiſe to himſelf a farther fulfilling of it in that way, yet could not but confeſs it be already fulfilled, viz. under the ſecond temple, and that reſtitution of Iſrael from their Babyloniſh captivity, and the deſtruction of Edom in thoſe times, and therefore ſaith, Perhaps this promiſe was ſpoken concerning both times, viz. that ſo long ſince paſt, and that which they expect yet to come. The verbs being in the text in the future tenſe, as of what was then to come, will not advantage thoſe who would make that uſe thereof, as if it were yet to be expected: for though their eyes had already ſeen Edom ſubdued, and their mountains laid waſte, yet there was there that which they were farther to ſee and admire, viz. that the Edomites ſhould again ſtrive to recover themſelves, and rebuild their waſte, as Iſrael had done theirs, but through the

[g] R. Tanch. [h] R. D. Kimchi. [i] R. Tanchum. [k] Marginal additions in Miclal Yophi.

the continued indignation of the Lord upon them ſhould never be able to do it.

What we read, The Lord will be magnified, [l] Some read Great is (or, be) the Lord, the Lord [m] doth magnify himſelf over, or upon, the border of Iſrael, viz. by taking eſpecial care of it. [n] Your eyes ſhall ſee from the border of Iſrael, and you ſhall ſay, The Lord doth magnify himſelf. The Chaldee expounds it, And ye ſhall ſay, Let the glory of God be multiplied, for he hath enlarged the border of Iſrael, which [o] Some well like of, and ſo it will well agree with what Druſius obſerves the word מעל meal properly to ſignify beyond; but theſe ſmall differences make no great alteration in the ſenſe and ſcope.

The inference from what hath been ſaid is plainly this, That ſeeing God had in thus declaring his peculiar love to them above others, whom he might for the ſame reſpects, they alſo being the ſeed of Abraham, have made objects of his love, as well as them, certainly they ought to have requited him with more than ordinary love, and teſtified it by their obedience to him, which ſeeing they did not, they are juſtly reproveable. To ſhew the juſtneſs of his reproof of them, and aggravate the unreaſonableneſs of their ingratitude and perverſe behaviour towards him, he in the following words proceeds farther to explain his benefits and relations that he ſtands in, to them, for which tokens of his love to them they ought alſo to have ſhewed ſuch reſpects to him, as thoſe relations required, but did not. He adds therefore,

6. ¶ A ſon honoureth his father, and a ſervant his maſter, If then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a maſter, where is my fear? ſaith the Lord of hoſts unto you, O prieſts, that deſpiſe my name? and ye ſay, Wherein have we deſpiſed thy name?

A ſon honoureth his father, and a ſervant his maſter, &c.] God had all along ſhewed ſuch fatherly love to Iſrael and paternal care over them above all other nations, that they could not but acknowledge him their Father: not only by a common right, as he is Father of all, as Creator of all, but by a peculiar right, as having adopted them unto a greater privilege, and nigher relation of ſonſhip than others: and ſo had he by his peculiar guidance and protection, direction, and government of them, ſhewed himſelf a Lord and Maſter to them, that they could not deny him by a particular right of title to be ſo to them. This they could not, they would not deny, but rather ſo challenge him to themſelves in theſe reſpects [p], as if he were not ſo at all to other nations, either a Father or Maſter to them. The word If, therefore doth not put or ſuppoſe it as a thing which they doubted, or ſuch as in words they would deny, but ſuch as while with their mouths they confeſſed, or could not but confeſs, they did not in their deeds make good, but rather contradicted: for if they did look on him as a Father, why did they not then duly honour him? or if as a Maſter, why did they not reverence and fear him? and ſo includes a reprehenſion of them for not atteſting to their outward profeſſion by their reſpective behaviour, but by that ſhewed their heart not to be right with him.

For a ſon honoureth his father, and a ſervant his maſter.] It is their duty ſo to do; and they tranſgreſs not only their duty, but the ordinary cuſtom: they who do not ſo, are unnatural ſons, perverſe, ill-natured ſervants: unworthy of thoſe appellations, not doing what they require and ſuppoſe will be performed by all that are called by them: and ſuch the queſtions here put, where is mine honour? and where is my fear? ſhew them to have been; as neither yielding to God that honour which from ſons is due, and is ordinarily performed to a father; nor that fear which ſervants owe, and uſually ſhew to a maſter. The queſtion imports a denial, viz. that they did not this their duty: and becauſe they would perhaps deny themſelves to be peccant in what is objected to them, he proceeds by peculiar inſtances to convict them as guilty; directing what hath hitherto been ſaid more generally, as to all the people, more particularly to the prieſts, who gave ill example in this kind to them, and ſhould have taught them better.

Saith the Lord of hoſts unto you, O prieſts, that deſpiſe my name.] This reading couples theſe words with the foregoing part of the verſe, though that ſeem ſpoken more generally to all the people, and this doth not exclude them, though [q] particularly directed to the prieſts, as thoſe who ſhould have prevented ſuch ill behaviour in the people, but now ſeemed to be occaſions to them of deſpiſing God's name by their deſpiſing it firſt; [r] as if his ſpeech to the prieſts began at, A ſon honoureth his father, &c. Others putting a ſtop after where is my fear? or after, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, will have what is ſpoken peculiarly to the prieſts to begin at, The Lord of hoſts ſaith, or ſpeaketh, to you, O prieſts, who deſpiſe my name, viz. The Lord accuſeth you for deſpiſing his name. This punctation ſeems to follow the Latin in ſome copies; and [s] Others underſtanding, To you, O prieſts, who deſpiſe my name, I ſay theſe things. But this nicety ſeems of no great import. That which the prieſts are accuſed of is, that they deſpiſe his name, and have him in contempt, which is [t] contrary to that honour which as a Father; and that fear and reverence, which as he is a Lord, or Maſter, is due unto him. This were manifeſtly a great fault; they ſeem not to think otherwiſe, or to juſtify it in themſelves, but rather would juſtify themſelves as not guilty of it, and therefore to ſay, Be it far from us, we have done no ſuch thing, wherein have we deſpiſed thy name? [u] ſurely in nothing that we know of. He anſwereth them therefore in the next words, [l] Druſius. [m] Tarnov. [n] Jun. Trem. [o] Grot. [p] See how ſome of them explain Deut. iv. 19. [q] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [r] See Abarbinel. [s] Druſius. [t] R. D. Kimchi. [u] Druſius.

7. Ye

7. Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar, and ye ſay, Wherein have we polluted thee? in that ye ſay, The table of the Lord is contemptible.

Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar, &c.] Of bread to be offered to God we read of two ſorts, the one called the ſhew-bread, to be ſet on a table before the Lord, of which mention is made, Exod. xxv. 30. as likewiſe of the table on which they were to be ſet in the foregoing verſes, and directions for ordering this bread are given, Levit. xxiv. 5, &c. Of other bread, called, a meat-offering, to be brought to the altar, and part thereof to be burnt on the altar, either as a voluntary oblation, we read Levit. ii. or elſe as a neceſſary and commanded oblation, of which is mention, Exod. xxix. 40. and Numb. xxviii. 5, &c. Of the former of theſe ſorts, viz. the ſhew-bread, will [w] Some have the bread mentioned underſtood. Againſt which [x] Others object that this bread here is ſaid to be offered on the altar, whereas that was ſet on a table for that end ordained. But if there be no other difficulty, a ſufficient anſwer to this may ſeem, what is given by Some, viz. that altar here is taken for table, as manifeſtly elſewhere table is the ſame that altar (as Ezek. xli. 22.) and here in this very verſe what is called altar is likewiſe called table. Yet do [y] Others chooſe to underſtand bread here rather of that meat-offering that was offered with the daily ſacrifice, which was the ſecond ſort that we mentioned, and was part of it burnt on the altar: but both theſe go on the ſame grounds, that bread here is taken in that proper notion by that word לחם Lechem uſually underſtood: but Others look on it as in a larger ſignification, as it peculiarly denotes, not only bread properly ſo called (and uſually by that name underſtood) but any food, or fleſh, or meat that is eaten, as well as bread: and ſo thoſe parts of the ſacrifices, which were burnt on the altar, are called לחם, the bread of the offerings made by fire unto the Lord, [z] Levit. iii. 11, 16. (that is, as Ours in a word of larger ſignification render it, The food) accordingly, as ver. 12. in this chapter, in a more general term he calls what is offered on this table אכלו Oclo, the food thereof: and ſo thoſe parts alſo of them which the prieſts did eat, ſeem called, The bread of their God, Levit. xxi. 22. Looking on it therefore in this larger notion (not as ſignifying only bread, which uſually in the Hebrew and Syriack languages it is taken for, nor only fleſh, as in the Arabick, but as it comprehends both, yea all food or meat,) they take it here to denote any ſacrifice or oblation offered to God on his altar, which was as his table, and what was thereon offered and burnt, called his food or meat: [a] ſo that under the name of polluted bread may come thoſe blind and lame, and ſick ſacrifices in the following words mentioned: yet [b] Some like not this. We need not trouble our ſelves in deciding the controverſy between theſe differing opinions, or diſpute which is to be preferred. An eaſy way of reconciling them, and compoſing the matter ſeems that which is by a learned [c] Jew ſuggeſted, viz. That there is no doubt but that the names altar and table may be indifferently uſed for ſignifying either the altar, or the table of ſhew-bread; and by polluted bread may be underſtood either bread properly ſo called, or elſe the fleſh of the ſacrifices; and then whether by this variety of words he underſtand ſtill the ſame thing, or elſe diverſe, viz. the ſhew-bread by ſome of them, and the ſacrifices by others, the ſcope will be the ſame, viz. to ſhew the contempt they had of his ſervice, and that not in one particular kind only, but in all; and to make good the accuſation againſt them, by inſtancing whether in one kind or more, and paſſing from one to the other. Two faults [d] they ſeem here accuſed of; the firſt, that they accounted that holy enough, which was not ſo, viz. offerings that were polluted, that is, not ſo ordered as God had commanded ſuch things as he would accept of as holy, to be ordered, and therefore reputed in his ſight as unclean. Secondly, in accounting that contemptible which was in it ſelf to be reverenced, and looked on as holy, viz. the table, or altar of the Lord. [e] As for the firſt, viz. thoſe offerings, there was the pollution or defect in the things themſelves manifeſt. As for the ſecond, the fault was in themſelves, in their evil and contemptuous thoughts, in that they ſaid, or would be ready to ſay, at leaſt thought in their minds, which was in his ſight, or ears, as much as if they openly ſpake it, though perhaps they were not ſo impudent as openly to profeſs it. By doing the firſt they are ſaid to deſpiſe his name, in deſpiſing and ſetting light by his ordinances, and the manner by him preſcrib'd for the right performance of them; by the ſecond, they are ſaid to pollute him in contemning that which was hallow'd to him, as deſpicable; the contempt of that God looks on as redounding to himſelf.

The queſtion as in their perſon put, wherein have we polluted thee? (as if they ſhould ſay, though the bread or things that we offer be polluted, yet what pollution or diſhonour doth thence ariſe to thee?) and then God's anſwer, In that ye ſay, The table of the Lord is contemptible, plainly ſhews it, viz. that he looks on it, as if they did, as far as in them lay, pollute him himſelf. The contempt offered to his table or altar, or that whereby they declared themſelves to look on it as contemptible, ſeems to conſiſt in this, that they thought any thing though not qualified with thoſe conditions that the law required, good enough to offer to him on it. Why they did ſo contemn it [f] Some give reaſons, as that it was, becauſe there was not in the altar, now under the ſecond ſecond temple, that richneſs and ſplendour, and therefore neither (as they thought) that holineſs that was under the firſt temple, [g] or in that the things offered were but few, and ſo their gain or income but ſmall, or (as ſome [h] Jews) becauſe there was offered on it fat and blood, and ſuch things as they looked on as deſpicable, not conſidering why God requir'd them, or that it was enough, that he commanded. But theſe are but conjectures: no ground for them in the text. It was manifeſtly a ſign of irreligion, and diſreſpect to God, and his worſhip in them, ſhewed in this inſtance of their dealing with his table, and the things thereto belonging, (both here included together, the offerings and the altar) for which they are therefore reproved as contemners of God; which their contempt is farther illuſtrated in the next verſe.

[w] Hieſom. and Others. [x] Druſ. [y] Grotius, Riber. [z] And ſee Numb. xxviii. 2. Levit. xxii. 25. [a] See Abarbinel and Tarnov. [b] Ribera. [c] R. Tanchum. [d] See Abarbinel. [e] R. Tanchum. [f] Hierom.

8. And if ye offer the blind for ſacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and ſick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governour, will he be pleaſed with thee, or accept thy perſon, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

And if ye offer the blind for ſacrifice, is it not evil?] This queſtion put, though with a conditional particle, If, intimates that they did preſume to offer ſuch things: therefore inſtead of, If, [i] Others put That you do offer, &c. is it not evil? or, [k] In as much, or, whereas ye offer, &c. is it not evil? Do you not hereby manifeſtly profeſs your opinion that the table of the Lord is contemptible? as if they were the words of God, and ſo is the conſequence of theſe words on the former evident. But [l] Others read without an interrogation, And when ye offer the blind, &c. it is not evil, viz. in your opinion; or ye tell the people that bring them to you to offer for them, that they are not evil, (as if they were their words,) they are good enough to be offered on God's altar; clean contrary to God's command, Levit. xxii. 22, &c. Deut. xv. 21. And by this doing likewiſe they ſaid, or ſhewed that they thought the table or altar of the Lord contemptible, and that they deſpiſed him; for had they had any reſpect unto him, any reverence for his altar, they would not have preſumed to offer thereon to him ſuch things, as they would not think to find acceptance for (or with) from any among men, who was in place or honour, and whoſe favour they would ſeek. So ſaith he, Offer it now to thy governour, will he be pleaſed with thee? &c. Certainly not. Thou wouldſt not think that he would accept thy perſon with a preſent ſo diſgraceful, ſo diſhonourable, for him to take. He would look on it as a great diſreſpect of his perſon, and diſregard of his honour, and therefore be much diſpleaſed with him, that ſhould ſhew ſo little eſteem of him. How much more ſhall the Lord, the great governour of the world, from whom they have all that they have, and who hath no need of any thing that they have, look upon it as a great contempt to himſelf, [m] if they ſhould preſume to offer to him, what they would not dare to offer to one, though in dignity and authority above them, yet a man like themſelves? eſpecially ſeeing he had commanded the contrary, and declared that he would have no ſuch oblation brought to his altar. For [n] thoſe that were not able to bring greater gifts, he had ordained leſs, and of ſmaller value, yet ſtill (as a learned [o] Jew obſerves) required that all of thoſe offerings ſhould be of the perfecteſt in their kind, leſt ſuch things as were offered to him and his ſervice ſhould become contemptible; as here it is ſhewed that it was come to paſs among them, and he complains of them, and reproves eſpecially the prieſts for it. For though the people were much in fault for preſuming to bring ſuch illegal and undue oblations, yet much more [p] the prieſts in receiving them from them, and offering them; who ſhould have taught them what to bring, and denied to receive what was not fit, when they brought any ſuch, and to have refuſed to offer it: in that they did not this, but rather tell the people it was good enough, they ſhewed diſreſpect to God and contempt of him. He reproves them for it, and expects they ſhould repent of it. So the Prophet ſhews in ſubjoining verſe the 9th.

9. And now I pray you, beſeech God, that he will be gracious unto us: this hath been by your means: will he regard your perſons? ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

And now I pray you, beſeech God, that he will be gracious unto us, &c.] A learned [q] Jew thus gives the connexion of theſe words with the preceding, "He ſhews them the remedy "againſt their diſeaſe, ſtirring them up to re- "pentance, and that they would make inter- "ceſſion for Iſrael, that ſo wrath might be "removed from them, and they might find "mercy (as he ſaith that he will be gracious "unto us) for that belonged to the [r] prieſts, "how much more, when their fault or ſin was "cauſe thereof, (viz. [s] of God's wrath to- "ward them, or curſe on them) ſeeing the "matter was in their hand, and they occa- "ſioned it, and might have hindred it, as he "ſaith; this hath been by your means, or from "your hand." Thus he; and then the words that follow, will he accept your perſons, muſt thus be ſupplied, except you ſo do, viz. repent, and make ſupplications to him, but ſhall continue to do as you do, will the Lord accept your perſons? To the ſame purpoſe do Others, both [t] Jews and Chriſtians expound the words, as to denote, that if they did ſincerely repent, and ſeek by prayer for mercy from God, he would yet have mercy on them; but if not, they ought not to think, that he who is no accepter of perſons would accept any of them, or or ſpare to reprove them for their doings. Or as [u] Some of them, that they ſhould thus earneſtly pray, to ſee whether God, though much diſpleaſed, would yet accept them, and be gracious to Iſrael; which is agreeable with the old Latin Tranſlation. [w] Others prefer to look on theſe words as ironically ſpoken, to this purpoſe; Now therefore behaving your ſelves thus wickedly in God's ſervice, do what is farther, your duty, ye prieſts, to whom that office belongs, beſeech the Lord that he will be gracious unto us, for the evil is come upon us by your means, and now ſee whether ye (being ſuch as ye are) can prevail for your ſakes to have it removed. God hath conſtituted you interceſſors for the people, and promiſed to accept of your interceſſion, while you behave your ſelves in your office as you ought; but will he now accept of your perſons, and hear you for them, or for your ſelves? ſurely ye will find your ſelves much deceived if you think he will: your office ſo ill performed will not make you acceptable.

[g] Chr. à Caſtro, Grot. Pelicanus. [h] Kimchi, and Abarb. [i] Chald. [k] Syriack, Jun. Trem. [l] D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum, and ſee Druſ. [m] R. Tanchum. [n] See Levit. v. 7, 11. [o] Maimonides in Moreh, l. 3. c. 46. [p] See R. David Kimchi and Abarbinel. [q] R. Tanchum. [r] Joel ii. [s] Kimchi. [t] R. D. Kimchi, Ribera, Chr. à Caſtro. Menoch. Grot.

That he will be gracious unto us.] Here is [x] obſerved, that the Prophet, though not guilty of thoſe ſins which he reproves, yet ſaith not unto you, or unto the people, but unto us, as joining himſelf in the number, either out of modeſty, or humility, or ſympathizing with them in the evil, which ſhould come upon them. So Moſes, Exod. xxxiv. 9. praying for the people that had ſinned, ſaith, Pardon our iniquity, and our ſin, though he had no part therein; which way of ſpeaking he learnt from God himſelf, who finding fault with the people, joins with them Moſes, who was not guilty of that fault, How long do ye refuſe to keep my commandments, Exod. xvi. 28.

10. Who is there even among you that would ſhut the doors for nought? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought, I have no pleaſure in you, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand.

Who is there even among you that would ſhut the doors for nought? &c.] (or that doth ſhut, &c.) Having ſhewed the great fault of the prieſts, in their negligence in his ſervice, and not taking care for the right ordering of things in it according to the law, here he ſeems to aggravate it, in that they receive abundant wages, for what they ſhould do, and are well paid for it, even for their leaſt ſervices they do, as the very ſhutting of the doors of the temple, and kindling fire on his altar. Did he require their ſervice for nought, as juſtly he might, then they might have ſome pretence for their negligence; but now being ſo plentifully rewarded by the portions in performing their ſeveral offices allowed them, ſure if they would not out of love do it, yet in juſtice they ought to be careful in performing what was required of them, according as the law required it to be performed; and ſeeing they are not, he is juſtly diſpleaſed at them, and hath no pleaſure in them, neither will accept an offering at their hand. This ſeems to be the connexion, and the meaning of the words according to the rendring which our Tranſlators give. But I have heard exceptions taken againſt our Tranſlators for it; but thoſe that blame them for it, ſhould conſider that they go not alone in it, but have the conſent both of other approved Tranſlations and learned Expoſitors, who ſeem to embrace it out of choice and deliberation, not becauſe they ſaw no other, or were not aware that the words were by Some, or might be, otherwiſe expounded. For to the ſame ſenſe the ancient Latin renders them, and ſo Junius and Tremellius among the modern, whom together with Ours they muſt tax, as likewiſe thoſe [y] Expoſitors, which go the ſame way, which are many and learned. Yet if any like not this, nor be moved with thoſe authorities, another expoſition, by many likewiſe both Jews and Chriſtians given, is this, Who is there alſo among you, i. e. I would there were any, that would ſhut the doors againſt you, that you might not bring in ſuch illegal and unacceptable oblations, nor kindle fire on mine altar [z] in vain, or to no purpoſe, or profit to you, for I have no pleaſure in you, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand: Any offering, though it were in it ſelf good, you being ſuch as you are, much leſs ſuch illegal offerings; theſe ſervices were even better let alone, than be ſo performed as they are by you. This ſenſe being agreeable to the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and given by ſeveral Jewiſh [a] Expoſitors, ſure thoſe who, as we have ſeen, follow the ſame way that our Tranſlators do, and likewiſe our Tranſlators themſelves, ſo learned, attentive, and diligent men as they were, could not be ignorant of, however they choſe to follow what they have done. The reader ſeeing, and conſidering both (or if he find any other) may take his choice too. He may only obſerve that in Ours the word, for nought, is for making the ſenſe plainer twice repeated, whereas it is in the original only once, and that in the laſt place; and it is ſo likewiſe repeated in the tranſlation of Junius and Tremellius. [b] Some of the Jews, though to this purpoſe which we have ſaid, giving their own meaning, yet tell us of another expoſition or gloſs given by ſome of their ancient Doctors, as making it to include an argument à minori ad majus to this purpoſe. Two things there are which a man will not refuſe to do, yet have no reward for them. If one man ſay to another, Shut the door after thee or me, or light this candle for me, he for doing it, aſks, or takes no reward: but who among you hath ſhut my doors for nought, neither have ye ye lighted mine altar for nought, how much leſs have you done for nought any of thoſe things which uſe to be done for reward? Therefore I have no pleaſure in you. They give no farther explication of their Doctors meaning: it ſeems to make for the firſt expoſition.

[u] Grot. [w] R. Solomon Jarchi, Abarb. Druſ. Tarnov. &c. Dutch Notes. [x] R. D. Kimchi, Vat. Druſ. [y] Hierom. Cyril. Riber. Menoch. Tyrin. Grot. Caſtalio. Dutch Notes, Tarnov. [z] The word חנם Chinnam, ſignifies both, for nought and in vain, &c. The Chaldee paraphraſeth it, That you might not offer on mine altar an abominable offering. [a] R. Sol. Jarchi, R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. R. Tanch. [b] R. Sol. Jarchi, Abarbinel, Yalkut, (We chiefly follow R. Solomon's reading as being plaineſt;) out of Torath Cohanim.

11. For from the riſing of the ſun, even unto the going down of the ſame, my name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incenſe ſhall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering; for my name ſhall be great among the Heathen, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

For from the riſing of the ſun, even to the going down of the ſame, my name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incenſe ſhall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering, &c.] If God will have no pleaſure in thoſe whom he had choſen for his people, and will not accept of offerings from them, whom by his law he had inſtructed concerning ſuch offerings as he would accept, and refuſed all others, [e] what then will he do unto his great name? what people will he find, or make uſe of to magnify his name, and to bring to him ſuch offerings as he may accept? Thus might the Jews be ready to reply, but this objection doth he prevent, in theſe words, by ſhewing that the greatneſs of his name doth not depend on their magnifying it. The whole world, from one end to the other, ſhall give witneſs to it, and celebrate it, though they deſpiſe it; and though they offer polluted bread on his altar, ſo that he will accept no offering at their hand, yet he ſhall not want acceptable offerings: in every place incenſe of a ſweet ſavour, and a pure offering ſhall be offered unto his name; [d] ſo that he hath no need of them, nor will be at a loſs in his worſhip through their denying it to him. The Jews differ among themſelves in the expounding of theſe words, [e] Some taking them to include a ſuppoſition, thus, All the people of the world, from the riſing of the ſun even to the going down of the ſame, if I had inſtructed and commanded them as I have commanded you, would readily have obeyed, and my name ſhould have been magnified among the Gentiles, while every where they would have offered to it incenſe and a pure offering, and not have polluted it as ye do, by offering polluted bread on mine altar; [f] ſo that I ſhould not have been at a loſs. But the text expreſſes no ſuch ſuppoſal or condition. Others therefore, without any ſuch ſupply, interpret it as a deſcription of what was done, and that ſay ſome by Iſraelites, though not by theſe ſpoken to, and reproved for doing otherwiſe in their own land, yet by ſuch of them who were diſperſed in other parts of the world, among the Gentiles, who did in all places where they were, magnify God's great name, whoſe daily prayers and conſtant devotions, and ſtudy in the law, were by God looked on and accepted as incenſe and a pure offering. To this purpoſe ſpeak [g] Some of their more ancient Doctors: and it is agreeable to the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who gives this ſenſe, "For from the riſing of the ſun, unto "the going down thereof, my name is great "among the Gentiles, and at all times that ye "do my will, I will receive your prayers, "and my great name is ſanctified by you, and "your prayers are as a clean offering before "me, for my name is great among the Gen-"tiles, ſaith the Lord." But this is evidently liable to exceptions, in as much as Iſrael is not mentioned in the words, but what is ſaid ſhall be done, is ſaid ſhall be done among the Gentiles, and ſo conſequently by them. And for this reaſon is it by one of their own Doctors excepted againſt (viz. Abarbinel) and he with [h] Others find out another way, by which they ſay, it was then done among and by the Gentiles themſelves, viz. in as much as though they did worſhip idols, or the hoſt of heaven as inferior Gods, and as mediators between them and the chief God, yet him, and the magnifying of his name they ſtill chiefly intended, and ultimately directed their worſhip and all their oblations, the pureſt they could think of, with pure zeal to him the chief and God of gods, the Cauſe of cauſes, as they learn him to be (as he ſaith) from (i. e. by) the continual motion and conſtant riſing and ſetting of the ſun, and ſo in [i] ſerving their idols aimed at ſerving him. So that the words may be a reproof of them, who would not learn even from the Heathen to magnify his name, but contrary to what even they did, polluted and profaned it. [k] Others yet, ſomething differently, make the meaning to be, that in reproving Iſrael for contempt of his worſhip and ſacrifices, he ſaith, My name is great among the nations, and magnified by them, and their magnifying of my name, is accepted by me, as if they offered to me incenſe and a pure offering, for as much as it is not ſacrifice that I require for it ſelf. And therefore as long as ye honour not my name, which without doubt is great among all nations (however out of greater reſpect to me they fancy to themſelves mediators in their approaches to me) I will not accept you. Theſe two laſt interpretations, what are they leſs than even an excuſe or apology for (if not a commendation of) idolaters and idolatry, as from the mouth of God himſelf, and ſo then blaſphemy againſt him, who in the law and Prophets all along, hath ſhewed them and their ways to be all moſt abominable to him, ſuch as he utterly ſeeks to root out, and will have his people have nothing to do with. And can he be thought here to ſay that he accepts of what is done to idols, as a magnifying of his name, or what ſacrifices are offered to them, as a ſweet ſmelling ſavour, or acceptable ſacrifice offered to himſelf? Unworthy certainly is this expoſition even of Jews

[e] Joſh. vii. 9. as ſome of the Jews expound thoſe words. R. Tanchum. [d] See Mat. iii. 9. [e] Aben Ezra, R. D. Kimchi. [f] R. Tanchum. [g] See Yalkut, and R. Solomon Jarchi. [h] Maimon. Moreh. l. 1. c. 36. and ſee R. D. Kimchi, and R. Tanchum. [i] R. D. Kimchi, in rad. and Michlal Yophi. [k] See R. Tanchum, Aben Ezra, R. D. Kimchi in rad. and ſee Akidah.

Jews themſelves, or any that acknowledge one God, and his name only great, and how jealous he is of the honour of it, ſo that he will not be called by any name common with idols, Hoſea ii. 16. Another expoſition yet [l] ſome of them give, viz. that this is ſaid in reſpect of all kings of the nations, which brought their offerings to Jeruſalem, and did honour and adorn the ſanctuary of the Lord with their preſents, in the time of the ſecond temple, which offerings are called a pure offering. But how doth this agree with the words, which do not ſay that in Jeruſalem, but in every place, incenſe and a pure offering ſhould be offered to his name?

In ſum, none of theſe expoſitions given by the Jews come up to the words of the text, nor have we therefore recited them, as if any of them were to be followed, but to ſhew how, that we may have a full meaning of them, and ſee how they are made good, they are of neceſſity to be underſtood, as Chriſtians take them, for a prophecy of what ſhould be done at, and after Chriſt's coming, when by the preaching of the goſpel the knowledge of God ſhould be communicated to all nations, and his name ſhould become great unto the utmoſt parts of the earth, be acknowledged by remote nations, who before knew him not, and by them all and every where he ſhould be adored and worſhipped with acceptable ſervice; the Jews, who deſpiſed his name, being rejected, the Heathen ſhall ſucceed, who ſhall acknowledge the greatneſs of it. This, however improbable in the eyes of the Jews, who thought it incredible, that ever he would own any other people but themſelves, or be owned or magnified by any other, or would chooſe any other place for his worſhip than Jeruſalem, he will certainly effect, and therefore for the better [m] aſſurance thereof repeats it, for my name ſhall be great; that, which by you, a handful of men, is now deſpiſed, ſhall be great among the Heathen, by all acknowledged as ſuch. Theſe words were, when ſpoken, ſpoken of what ſhould after be, but by Chriſt's coming into the world were made good: ſo appears it by what he ſaith in his diſcourſe with the Samaritan woman, who thought of no other place where men ought to worſhip God, but either the mountain of the Samaritans (mount Garizim) or Jeruſalem, John iv. 21, &c. Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye ſhall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jeruſalem worſhip the Father. And, the hour cometh and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and truth, for the Father ſeeketh ſuch to worſhip him. God is a Spirit, and they that worſhip him muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth. The conſideration of which words will give us the true import of theſe, and compared together they illuſtrate one the other: for his ſaying that God did no longer confine his worſhip (i. e.) the outward performance thereof, by ſuch rites and ceremonies as were ordained, to Jeruſalem, or any other ſingle place, what is that, but the verifying of what is here ſaid, that his name ſhould be great among the nations, from the riſing of the ſun even to the going down of the ſame? And what he ſaith, that the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and in truth, not only there, but every where, ſheweth that as his name ſhould be great and magnified among them, by their acknowledging him as Father, ſo what is to be meant by that incenſe and pure offering which they ſhould offer unto his name, viz. not ſuch as are literally ſignified by thoſe words, and were then to be ordered according to the preſcription of the law, but ſuch worſhip as though expreſſed by the names of thoſe carnal things under the law, then in continual uſe and known to all, yet is indeed ſpiritual, [n] joining the ſoul with the external performances, agreeable to the nature of God who is a Spirit; of which thoſe ordinances of worſhip under the law were types and ſhadows. And indeed the change of the place neceſſarily imports a change of the worſhip, or things offered for expreſſion of it; for the incenſe, and other offerings by the law preſcribed, were not to be offered any where elſe but in the temple at Jeruſalem, after that was there ſettled for the place of his worſhip, Deut. xii. 13, 14, 26. Thoſe therefore that he will have in every place to be offered to him are manifeſtly of another nature; though called by thoſe names, which then included generally all the external worſhip of God under the Old Teſtament, while the Jews were God's peculiar people: they, now [o] figuratively underſtood, denote the whole ſpiritual worſhip of God under the New Teſtament, ſince the calling of the Gentiles, and people of all nations unto God's church, the kingdom of Chriſt. The incenſe therefore of the Gentiles converted to Chriſt, and by the goſpel inſtructed in the true knowledge of God, and taught to celebrate his great name, and their pure offering, are devout prayers, Rev. v. 8. holy praiſes, thankſgivings, and alms-deeds, and works of charity, Heb. xiii. 15, 16. their whole ſelves, Rom. xii. 1. Divers of the ancient Chriſtian Fathers look on the words as an expreſs and undoubted prophecy of the Chriſtians ſolemn worſhip of God in the Euchariſt or Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, called the Chriſtian Sacrifice, to which how they are appliable, is ſhewed at large by the learned Mr. Mede in his diſcourſe on theſe words: where he gives to note that under the name of the Chriſtian Sacrifice, by the ancient church was underſtood, not the mere ſacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, but the whole ſacred action, or ſolemn ſervice of the church aſſembled, whereof this ſacred myſtery was a prime and principal part; and therefore defines it to be An oblation of thankſgiving and prayer to God the Father through Jeſus Chriſt, and his ſacrifice commemorated in the creatures of bread and wine, wherewith God had been firſt agnized, viz. by them ſanctified ſanctified by being offered and ſet before him as a preſent to acknowledge him the Lord and giver of all.

[l] Aben Dana in Michlal Yophi, out of Meor einâim. & Vatab. in 8vo. [m] Calv. [n] Dr. Hammond on John iv. 24. [o] Calv.

This whole ſervice duly performed is (as at large he there ſhews) deſervedly ſtiled incenſe and a pure offering, both in reſpect that it is purely or ſpiritually offered, and in reſpect of the purity of the conſcience, and affection of the offerers, throughly perſuaded of the greatneſs of God, and in reſpect of Chriſt, whom it ſignifies and repreſents, who is a ſacrifice without all ſpot and blemiſh: and by this being offered to his name in every place, he ſaith, the time ſhould come, when it ſhould be great, magnified, and acknowledged as great among and by all nations, though the Jews did now profane it, as he makes the connexion by rendring that, though, which our Tranſlation renders, but. But the ſenſe will be much alike in reading but, viz. to this purpoſe, the time ſhall come when from the riſing of the ſun, &c. my name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, who yet have not true knowledge of me, but will, when I ſhall ſee due time to reveal it to them, readily embrace it. Mean while it ought to have been ſo among you, and duly magnified by you, to whom I have from of old revealed it, and given you ordinances and ways of worſhip, by obſerving of which you ſhould have magnified it, but you on the contrary have by deſpiſing thoſe ordinances, and perverting thoſe ways of worſhip, profaned it.

When theſe words were ſpoken, and thence forward, (as all along before, ſince the giving of the law,) till the time of this diffuſing the knowledge of God and his name, and this alteration and reformation of his worſhip here ſpoken of, the Jews had for their direction the law of Moſes, and ought duly to have attended to it, as they are warned, chap. iv. 4. but they did in all things go ſo contrary to it, as that neither they, nor any ſervice they did, were acceptable to God. So notoriouſly, ſo obſtinately peccant, were they both prieſt and people, that he ſees it not ſufficient to have once reproved them, by reckoning up to them their faults, but again repeats them, that ſo they may be ſenſible how greatly they have offended him, how diſpleaſing it is to him, that they ſhould continue to do ſuch things, having been warned of them, and that it is worſe than what the Gentiles, when he ſhall call them, will do.

12. ¶ But ye have profaned it, in that ye ſay, The table of the Lord is polluted, and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible.

But ye have profaned it] viz. my name, ſo ver. 6. they are ſaid to deſpiſe it, and ver. 7. to pollute him, contrary to acknowledging of it as great, or magnifying it. If they ſhall be ready to aſk as before, wherein have we profaned it? he tells them wherein, viz. in that they ſay the table of the Lord is polluted, ſo ver. 7. ye ſay that the table of the Lord is [p] contemptible. Their [q] ordering of the things that pertain to it, as common deſpicable things, and without due reverence, ſhews that they eſteem it ſo, and is as much as if they openly ſaid ſo in expreſs words, though perhaps they were not ſo impudent as openly to utter them.

The table of the Lord is polluted] his altar not ſo highly to be regarded, as a ſacred thing, or with ſo much care and reverence to be approached; and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible, viz. his meat, or its meat, or the meat thereof; for the affix is the ſame that in the former word, and may therefore be referred to the ſame perſon or thing: and it will be all one whether we refer it to the table or to God; for as the table or altar is his, ſo all belonging to it is his, the fruit thereof his, the meat his. But then it may be queſtioned what is meant by the fruit of the altar, and his meat, (or its meat) whether that which was offered on the altar as God's part of the ſacrifice, or that which he had out of the ſacrifices (by his right) given to the prieſts, as a reward for their ſerving at his altar. The words ſo rendred, as we read, are indifferently appliable to both; and therefore in as much as both thoſe may be called the fruit thereof, and his (or its) meat, as well what God took to himſelf, as that which he allotted to the prieſts; they are capable of a double meaning, as they are looked on with reſpect, either to the one or the other; 1ſt. With reſpect to the firſt, as if their ſaying or thoughts of their heart were, the fruit thereof, (i. e.) that which is allotted to the altar to be offered on it, and his meat ([r] or its fruit, its meat, i. e. which is its meat) is contemptible, viz. being the fat, and the blood, groſs and deſpicable things (as [s] ſome of the Jews expound it) and therefore not to be had in ſuch great eſteem, and with ſuch care to be ordered, as the law requires. 2dly. With reſpect to the ſecond, or the portion of the prieſts, as if they ſaid, the fruit thereof, or [t] of its meat (or [u] as for its fruit, the meat thereof) that which is taken of it for meat or allotted to us for our proviſions, for our eating, is contemptible, little, and of ſmall value, not worth ſo much care and pains as we muſt take in our waiting on it. Thus according to this rendring. But there are among the Jews who render it otherwiſe as to the word נִיבוֹ Nibo, which Ours, with many Others render the fruit thereof, reading his word or ſaying. And here they differ in telling us whoſe word they mean; [w] Some making it the word of God, as if they ſaid, The table of the Lord is polluted, and his word concerning the meat thereof, viz. by which he commands ſuch groſs things as fat and blood to be put on it, for his, or its meat, is contemptible. [This would be ſtrange impudence in them to have ſaid, yet thus Abarbinel among the Jews expounds it, and Montanus among Chriſtians folfollows him, as in many other things.] [x] Others make it the word of the prieſt, or him that ſacrificed, or others of them, as if it ſounded, Ye ſay the table of the Lord is polluted, his Word or Speech, or that which he, viz. the prieſt, continually hath in his mouth is, that his meat, or its meat, viz. God's or his table's, is contemptible, being fat and blood, groſs, nauſeous things: Although [y] Some take the ground of their complaint to be, becauſe the altar it ſelf ſtill devoured the fat, and left nothing to them but lean contemptible meat. That the word נִיב Nib, may be taken for word, or ſpeech, in a figurative ſignification is no doubt, as it is the fruit of the lips, that which is put forth by them, as it is uſed, Iſaiah lvii. 19. yet that it ſhould be ſo taken here, there is no neceſſity; yea both the ſenſe and [z] conſtruction will be more harſh if it be. And though there be Doctors of great authority among the Jews that would have it ſo taken, yet [a] Others are there neither of leſs learning, nor authority, who think it ought to be taken in the more proper ſignification of fruit. And ſo it appears to have been taken by moſt of the ancient Tranſlators. For ſo while the Chaldee expounds both the words, this and the other rendred meat put together, as denoting the ſame thing, the gifts of it; it is manifeſt that he took them both, as denoting the ſame thing, viz. thoſe offerings which were brought to the altar. And ſo the Greek likewiſe while they render, the meats (or food) that are put thereon, whom the printed Arabick likewiſe follows, and the Syriack including both in one word, its meats, agreeable to what a learned [b] Jew notes, that as if the two words were ſynonymous, or words denoting the ſame thing, the putting both doth but double or repeat the ſame thing. [c] Another expounds the meaning of the words ſo put together, ſo as to import, either, the fruit of its meat, though the affix its or thereof be joined with the firſt of the words, as well as the latter; or elſe ſo as he before, taking them for ſynonymous, Its fruit, its meat, i. e. its fruit, and its meat (or its fruit which is its meat.) And as for the word that we ſpeak of, it's manifeſt that the author of the ancient Latin Verſion took it in the ſame meaning, whilſt he renders it, that which is laid thereupon, which is that which is meant, by the fruit thereof: but then he differs from all the reſt, in rendring that which is by Ours rendred his meat, by, with the fire that devoureth it; taking אכלו Oclo, that which is eaten or devoured, to be as much as אוכלו Ocelo, i. e. that which devoureth it, which being the fire on the altar, he expreſſeth it by name, though in the original it be not expreſſed; as if they ſhould ſay, that the altar and all belonging to it were contemptible, [d] or that that which was offered at the altar were contemptible, becauſe ſerving for no other uſe, than to be devoured by fire. In the Hebrew concordance the word is put under both ſignifications, as being doubtful, which is to be preferred: but when all is done, that which Ours follow, ſo as at firſt expounded, ſeems cleareſt.

[p] So R. D. Kimchi makes that word and this here the ſame in ſenſe. [q] Cyril, Ribera, Sa, Calvin. [r] Aben Ezra. [s] R. D. Kimchi, and Abarbinel. [t] R. Tanchum. [u] Piſc. [w] Abarb.

13. Ye ſaid alſo, behold, what a wearineſs is it? and ye have ſnuffed at it, ſaith the Lord of hoſts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the ſick: thus ye brought an offering: ſhould I accept this of your hands? ſaith the Lord.

Ye ſaid alſo.] Proceeding in his reproof, whether of the [e] prieſts, or [f] people, or rather both [g] jointly, for their perverſe behaviour in his ſervice, he objects to them that they ſaid, Behold what a wearineſs is it? and ye have ſnuffed at it, (or as in the Margin, whereas you might have blown it away, &c.) Of the words ſo read as they (appoſitely to the original) are in the text of our Tranſlation, a plain and eaſy meaning may be thus paraphraſtically given; that they ſaid, or ſo behaved themſelves, as if they plainly ſaid, What a deal of toil and labour are we put to in ordering the offerings of the altar, and the things pertaining thereto, and our ſelves in reſpect to them, according to what the law nicely requires? And that they therefore ſnuffed (or puffed) at it, in token of indignation and diſlike, or diſpleaſure at it: and therefore, or beſides this, the prieſts to ſave themſelves that labour, and (the people) that coſt and charges, which according to the preſcription of the law they ſhould be at, took any illegal [h] thing, whether torn, or lame, and ſick, for a ſacrifice; and [i] brought with it their meat-offering, as if this were ſufficient to put off God with it. But he (though nothing profited by what they offer, yet in reſpect of his commandment, which they were bound to obey, and that reverence and honour, which he required to be ſhewed to his name and altar) ſhews that he takes due notice of what they do, and how they do it, and will by no means accept or take it at their hands: Should I accept this of your hands? ſaith the Lord. The queſtion imports a negation. This expoſition ſeems plain, and very agreeable to the words, and is warranted by the authority of learned Interpreters. As firſt, of a Jewiſh Doctor, R. Tanchum, an Author as dextrous in expounding the Scripture as any among them. He tells us that the word מתלאה Mattelah being compounded of מה Mah, which ſignifies, what, and תלאה Telaah, which ſignifies, labour, affliction (or ill accidents) ſignifies, What affliction or miſery is this? and that their meaning is, (he taking it as ſpoken of the prieſts) what a toil or weariſomneſs is it (that we are put to) in purifying and hallowing our ſelves for eating this ſmall pittance or portion? So as that the words are a reproof of them, them, for their looking on it as a toilſome thing, that they ſhould make or keep themſelves clean for eating of the holy things, and their rejecting it therefore, and contemning that portion; which is expreſſed by what he ſaith, and ye have ſnuffed (or puffed) at it. והפחתם אותו Vehippachtem oto, the proper ſignification of which word (ſaith he) is, ye blow it (or at it) the meaning whereof is, ye look on it as contemptible (or expreſs contempt of it,) as he that blows on his hand in token of contempt of a thing, or when one takes a thing in his hand, and blows (or puffs) at it. Other expoſitions alſo he mentions, but prefers this as moſt agreeable to the words and place. And thus much have we mentioned of his words, becauſe his book is not yet printed, and becauſe it makes for confirmation of the meaning that we gave, only that he reſtrains the reproof more particularly to the prieſts, and what concerned their ill behaviour; whereas we rather extend it both to prieſt and people. And ſo do alſo among Chriſtian Expoſitors, Calvin, and Lud. de Dieu, who ſaith, the ſenſe of the words is, you complain that you are wearied with the burthen of my commandments, and too much oppreſſed, in that ye are bound to offer to me none but of the beſt and ſoundeſt cattle, and therefore ye ſnuff at it, and for your own eaſe offer to me any corrupt thing.

[x] R. Solomo Jarchi, R. D. Kimchi, and ſee Abarb. who differently cites R. Solomon's words from what is read in him. [y] Pelic. Oecol. [z] See Calv. [a] Abu Walid, Aben Ezra, and R. Tanchum. [b] Aben Ezra. [c] R. Tanchum. [d] Chr. à Caſtro in his Paraphraſe. [e] Oecolamp. Ch. à Caſtro. [f] R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [g] Calv. [h] Levit. xxii. 20, &c. [i] Abarb.

Having the ſenſe that we gave thus warranted, we might well acquieſce in it, but that our Tranſlators in the Margin reflecting on another rendring, give us to look into that too, and the grounds of it; which while we do, it is no little wonder to ſee how differently theſe words, which may (as before expounded) ſeem plain, are by Interpreters underſtood, and ſo made difficult. That which in our Margin is reflected on, ſeems to go on theſe grounds, which Some, both [k] Jews and Chriſtians, ſuppoſe here intimated; viz. that they brought a lean beaſt for ſacrifice on their ſhoulder, and then that they might make people believe that it was fat and fleſhy, they would cry, what a labour or wearineſs hath it been to me to bring this heavy beaſt? and would puff and blow at it, [l] as if they had been heavy burdened with it; whereas it was indeed ſo lean and light, that with an eaſy breath or blaſt they might have blown it down. This is that which the Margin in our Bibles ſeems to point at. [m] Others, ſuppoſing the ſame, differently render the laſt words, and ye threw it on the ground by way of contempt (or indignation) which Kimchi alſo would have to be the meaning of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, [n] though the word that he uſeth, otherwiſe ſignifies, ye ſtrangled or choked it. [o] Others on the ſame ſuppoſition render them, and ye blew it up, viz. by blowing puffed it up with wind, that it might ſeem fat. And beſides this, ye bring that which is ſtolen or torn, or lame or ſick things, that have ſuch blemiſhes in them, as by the law make them unlawful for offerings, and together with them you bring your meat-offering. And ſhall I accept this of your hands, the ſacrifice being illegal, ſhall I accept the meat-offering brought with it? By no means.

[p] Others will have it ſuppoſed that what they thus brought, and pretended themſelves wearied with bringing, was ſome ſtolen cattle taken by force from the owner; and ſo render the words which we render; and ye have ſnuffed at it, by, and ye have grieved him, viz. the owner for his loſs. [q] Others, and ye have deprived its owner of it, or cauſed it to go from him by force. Of this the forecited R. Tanchum making mention, prefers that already cited before it. And whereas they that embrace it would confirm it by what follows, and ye brought גזול Gazul, that which was ſtolen, ſo rendring that which Ours render torn; he ſaith that theſe words have no reference to that. Whether either of theſe things ſuppoſed were true or no, here is nothing in the words, that proves them ſo. Others do yet give other rendrings, R. Solomon Jarchi makes the word, which is rendred in Ours, and by Others, what a wearineſs is it, to ſignify a lean cattle, as if they ſaid, Behold it is a lean beaſt, but we are poor, and are not able to bring any choice [r] vow: and then renders the words והפחתם אותו Vehippachtem oto, and ye have grieved him, which Ours render, and ye have ſnuffed at it. And he notes that this word is one of the eighteen that are called תקון סופרים Tikkun Sopherim, the correction of the Scribes, and that אותו Oto, him, is put inſtead of [s] אותי Oti, me, and that for [t] reverence to God, (becauſe he or his name ſhould not be joined in the firſt perſon with a verb of ſo ill ſignification,) the perſon in the pronoun was chang'd, and inſtead of grieved me, put, grieved him: but this is a groundleſs thing, and ſo to ſome of the more learned [u] Jews themſeves ſeems. And here again R. Tanchum notes that they are far from the truth, who refer the pronoun it, or him in this place to God, as if it were ſpoken of him, that they did afflict, or grieve him: yet Diodati ſeems to like it. Aben Ezra expounding the word, as before, what a toil or wearineſs is it, gives another reaſon of their ſaying ſo, viz. as if they ſaid it by reaſon of the curſe and famine, that was in the land, ſo that there was not bread (or food) to put on the table (or altar:) as for the following words, he doth not ſufficiently explain his meaning, ſaying only that הפחתם Hippachtem is from the ſignification of פיח Piach, Aſhes, Exod. ix. 8, 10, viz. that which is as aſhes, and there is not what is ſufficient on it, perhaps he means, Ye put on the altar, what is no better than aſhes to be blown away; or, and ye look on it, or make it as aſhes, nothing worth. This is all that is in the printed copy of him that we have:

[k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] Kimchi's Father, Jun. Trem. Vatab. Dutch Notes, and Tarnov. [m] R. Kimchi. [n] See Lud. de Dieu. [o] Abarb. [p] R. D. Kimchi, Miclal Yophi. [q] Abu Walid confirming it by the uſe of the ſame word, Job xxxi. 39. cauſed to go away or expire. [r] Deut. xii. 11. [s] And of this reading S. Jerome takes notice. [t] Aben Dana in Miclal Yophi. [u] Aben Ezra, ſee Buxt. Lex. in חקן.

have: but Abarbinel ſeems to have had a copy that had more in it, whence he gathers, that he underſtood this word in the ſignification of grieving. But beſides that compoſition of the word מתלאה Mattelaah, according to which it is rendred, what a wearineſs or labour, there is yet another given by Others, according to which it ſignifies as much as Mittelaah, from labour, (which [w] Kimchi ſhews to be juſtifiable by other examples, without thinking that thoſe that give this ſignification read the word with another vowel, than it is ordinarily read, viz. Mittelaah with i, inſtead of Mattelaah with a, (as [x] Some think they did.) And this expoſition follow many ancient Interpreters, as the Chaldee, what we bring is of our labour; and much alike the Greek, the Syriack, printed Arabick, and Vulgar Latin which hath, [y] Lo! of labour; which perhaps might be ſo underſtood, as to ſound much one with what a labour, or how great labour is here, but [z] is uſually expounded, Lo, what we bring is of labour, or affliction, viz. the beſt that is left us by reaſon of our late affliction in our captivity, which hath impoveriſhed us, and the weariſomneſs we and our cattle endured in our tedious way home. And ſo ſaying puff at it, or make it fit for nothing, but to be puffed at by me (and ſo the Greek changeth it into the firſt perſon, and I have puffed at theſe things) or as by [a] Others, Lo, what we bring is gotten by our labour, not given to us by the people; 'tis out of thoſe tenths, which ſhould belong to us, and ſo the price of our toil and labour. Thus by reaſon of the different reading given in the Margin of our Bibles have we looked (perhaps more than enough) into the moſt of other rendrings, which we have met with, out of any of which, or perhaps altogether, will not be made up any meaning ſo facile and agreeable to the words without any force or ſtraining, as that in the firſt place ſet down. [b] [Their ſaying, what a wearineſs is it, ſeems contrary to what God ſaith, Micah vi. 3. wherein have I wearied thee.]

And ye have brought that which was torn, &c.] By what hath been ſaid, appears the word גזול by Some to be rendred ſtolen, by Others, torn, viz. by wild beaſts, or the like, the latter of which divers prefer, and [c] Some except againſt the former, as improper for the place: yet I doubt whether the word will elſewhere be found in the ſignification of torn: however either of theſe would make the thing [d] unfit for an offering to the Lord, as likewiſe thoſe defects or blemiſhes after named; as appears out of Levit. xxii. 20, 22, 24.

Thus ye brought an offering, &c.] viz. [e] theſe illegal things for an offering, or (accord- to others as we have ſeen) together with theſe your Mincha, or meat-offering, as if all were done according to the law, but it is contrary to it, and therefore ſhall not be accepted at your hands, The Lord hath ſaid it.

14. But curſed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth and ſacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, and my name is dreadful among the Heathen.

But (or and) curſed be the deceiver, &c.] Having reprehended them for their miſbehaviour in other daily ſacrifices, he farther proceeds to reprove them for their miſbehaviour in matter of vows, or ſuch offerings as being not otherwiſe liable to, they did by vow oblige themſelves to. Concerning ſuch we have what the law requires, ſet down Levit. xxii. 18, &c. the oblation for a vow was to be a male without blemiſh, ver. 19. perfect, ver. 21. whatſoever was otherwiſe ſhould not be accepted, ver. 20, 21, 23. But to that paſs it ſeems were theſe people now come, that there were of them ſuch who deceitfully dealt with God (rather indeed with their own ſouls) in this kind. Out of pretence of piety, and greater devotion, they would by vow bind themſelves to offer an oblation to God: but when they came to perform their vows, would deal deceitfully, and inſtead of a male, a perfect beaſt, bring a corrupt thing, an imperfect one, with ſuch blemiſhes as made it illegal, and that (which aggravated their offence) when they had in their land ſuch as the law required, and might duly have made and performed their vow: [f] which had they not had, their pretence for bringing ſuch as they brought, though not fully ſuch as the law required, yet the beſt they had, might have been more plauſible, and been at leaſt a ſeeming excuſe, and leſſened their fault, although it had been more agreeable to the law, if they had not had what had been fit for a vow, not to have vowed at all, Deut. xxiii. 21. but now having vowed, and having wherewith to perform that vow according to the law, and yet dealing deceitfully with the Lord by offering in place of what they had vowed, and what they had in their power to pay, a blemiſhed illegal thing, as if he could by ſuch falſe dealing be deceived, muſt needs ſhew great contempt of him who is a great King the Lord of hoſts, and whoſe name is dreadful among the Heathen, and therefore expects accordingly, to be reverenced as is his due, which ſeeing they neglect to do, they that think ſo to deceive him, to his diſhonour, and the contumely of his name, ſhall receive that reward which ſhall ſhew that he takes notice of their doings, and inſtead of that bleſſing which by guile they thought to get from him, pull on themſelves his curſe.

Curſed be the deceiver, &c.] נוכל Nocel, the fraudulent, [g] hypocritical, falſe, or deceitful dealer, who makes a ſhew of one thing, and doth, or intends another, or doth not what he would ſeem to do, as here, pretending devotion to God, when his heart is not ſincere ſincere with him, nor doth in ſincerity, and to the utmoſt of his power what he would make ſhew of doing, as if he could deceive God in doing in his ſervice otherwiſe than he required, and yet be accepted by him. It is from the root נכל Nacal, which ſignifies to think or deal deceitfully. The Greek (and printed Arabick following it) rendring it, He that is able, ſeem to reſpect another root, viz. יכל Yacal, which ſignifies to be able.

[w] In radic. לאה. [x] Capel. Crit. p. 222. [y] Doway Bibl. [z] Jerom. Piſcator, Tirin. Menoch. &c. [a] Grot. [b] Out of Aben Dana in Miclal Yophi. [c] Calvin. [d] See Iſaiah lxi. 8. [e] Druſ. [f] Abarb. [g] R. Tanch.

Which hath in his flock a male.] i. e. a perfect male,] [h] the ſenſe requires it, though that epithet be not here added, becauſe the law admitted no other for a vow, Levit. xxii. 19, 21. and ſo by a corrupt thing will be denoted whatſoever is otherwiſe, [i] whether not a male, or if a male, ſuch as is not perfect, but had ſuch blemiſhes or defects that made it illegal. He that thus dealeth is curſed, becauſe he ſhews diſreſpect to, or contempt of the great Majeſty, and dreadful name of God, the great King, who will maintain his own honour with more jealouſy than an earthly Prince. (See ver. 8.) and requireth ſincerity in thoſe that would ſeem to honour him, and that they teſtify their due reverence to him in their ſerving him, by doing what they do according to the rule of his commandment, and to the utmoſt of their power. The conſideration of this his greatneſs ought to have made them, and ought to make all very careful, ſincere, and faithful in the performance of any duty and ſervice to him, to do the beſt they can do, that it may be a holy, perfect ſacrifice acceptable to him.

My name is dreadful among the Heathen.] How much more [k] then ought it to be ſo among you, whom I have loved and choſen for my peculiar people, ſhould you deſpiſe me, and not dread my name, and ſhew by your doings that you truly reverence it? His ſaying that his name is dreadful among the Heathen, though ſpoken as of the time then preſent, and was then and always true, (it being by his [l] judgments made oft conſpicuous to them) yet becauſe they had not generally then a clear knowledge of him and his name, it is by [m] Some not unfitly looked on, as a Prophecy of what ſhould after be, by the making it more clearly known to all nations by the preaching of the goſpel.

CHAP. II.

VERSE 1. And now, O ye prieſts, this commandment is for you.

AND now, O ye prieſts, this commandment is for you.] Having before reproved both prieſts and people for ſuch faults and enormities, as they were both guilty of, and the things which follow likewiſe concerning them both, that the prieſts might not excuſe themſelves, as leſs guilty, by caſting the fault on the people, who brought ſuch illegal things, ſeeing they could offer no other than were brought (or by ſuch like excuſe) he here addreſſes his ſpeech to them by name, and tells them this commandment, [a] that which he is commanded now to ſpeak, or this commandment, viz. [b] either that which hath been already ſpoken concerning a due care in offering ſuch things only to God, and in ſuch manner as are according to the law, and looking to it that his altar be not polluted, profaned, or contemned, [c] or elſe that which ſhall now be ſpoken concerning other enormities, which they ought to reform, and are ſeverely threatned, if they ſee not to it that they be duly reformed. To them is this peculiarly directed, to ſhew them that they are chiefly accountable for what was done, [d] not only by themſelves, but by the people alſo. Becauſe matters concerning God's worſhip, and obſervance of the law were committed to their charge, they were to teach the people how to perform them, and to hinder them from performing them in wrong manner: if they brought offerings which were illegal, they ſhould have refuſed them. [e] To them therefore peculiarly is this command, that they offer not ſuch things on God's altar; and if they take not due care of it, are threatned as follows.

2. If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, I will ſend a curſe upon you, and I will curſe your bleſſings: yea, I have curſed them already, becauſe ye do not lay it to heart.

If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, &c.] If ye will not hear ſo as to lay it to heart, ſo hear as to take due notice of what is ſaid to you, and that you may obey, and do according to what is commanded (being not forgetful hearers, but doers of the work,) that ſo you may give glory to my name, give to me the honour due unto me, by worſhipping me with holy worſhip, offering duly to me ſuch clean and perfect things, and in ſuch manner as in my law I require, (contrary to that deſpiſing his name, chap. i. 6. and polluting him, ver. 7. and profaning his great name, ver. 12. for which they are there reproved) I will even ſend a curſe upon you.) The ancient Latin reads, I will ſend upon you, want, or poverty, which not unfitly expreſſeth the meaning, according to that notion which the [g] Jewiſh Doctors give of it, that it imports ſubſtraction or diminution of good, and ſo is contrary to ברכה Beracah, bleſſing, which imports increaſe and addition of good, at leaſt it expreſſeth the cauſe, which is God's curſe, by its effect, viz. want which it cauſeth.

Upon you.] [h] All of you, both thoſe that bring ſuch illegal abominable offerings, and you, O prieſts, that receive and offer them, ſay Some: ſo that though the ſpeech be addreſſed to the prieſts more particularly, who ſhould ſhould prevent ſuch miſcarriages, yet the curſe thereby provoked is ſuch as is denounced to all; only the particular appellation of them warns them, that they ſhould not eſcape by caſting the fault on the people that bring ſuch things, but that they ſhall be looked on as guilty in the firſt place, and ſo the curſe take hold on them in eminent manner. [i] Others look on theſe words as particularly concerning the prieſts; and thoſe that follow, to concern the people. It will be a ſafe way to look on all as concerning both, though chiefly the prieſts in the nine firſt verſes.

[h] R. D. Kimchi. [i] R. Tanch. [k] R. D. Kimchi. [l] Tarnov. and Chr. à Caſtro. [m] Calv. Vatab. Edit. 4to and 8vo, and Sa. [a] Riber. Menoch. [b] Tarn. [c] Vatab. [d] R. D. Kimchi, and Abarb. [e] R. Solomon Jarchi. [f] James i. 25. [g] R. Tanch. R. D. Kimch. Rad. in ברך and ארר. [h] R. D. Kimch. Druſ. Calv.

And I will curſe your bleſſings.] In expounding what is meant here by bleſſings, is ſome difference betwixt Interpreters, Some, to this purpoſe explain them, your bleſſings, i. e. wherewith you bleſs, or pray for [k] your ſelves or the people, [l] as the prieſt's office was to do, thoſe ſhall be turned into curſes or have the iſſue of curſes, as to all thoſe things that they bleſſed them in. So we have a contrary expreſſion, Deut. xxiii. 5. of turning a curſe into a bleſſing. This expoſition [m] Some look on, as ſlender or not full enough, and underſtand it of all the benefits and good things which by God's bleſſing they did enjoy, and wherein and wherewith he had bleſſed them, as plenty, peace, health, or the like, of which he threatens, they ſhould not find joy and profit in. Conſonant is this to what ſome alſo of the Jewiſh Expoſitors give. So R. D. Kimchi, who finding fault with [n] One before him, who reſtraineth here bleſſings to the ſignification of offerings or gifts, which it ſometimes hath, expounds it, the bleſſings wherewith I have bleſſed you ſince the building of the houſe: as if he ſaid, Seeing you have deſpiſed me in your offerings, I will turn the bleſſing into a curſe. And ſo Abarbinel, The meaning is, That, I will turn to you the bleſſing wherewith I [o] bleſſed you, ſince the foundation of the temple was laid, into a curſe. And what this turning the bleſſing into a curſe means, we may ſee by reading the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy here cited in the Margin of our Bibles, wherein are deſcribed the bleſſings for obedience, and curſes for diſobedience. Much like in meaning is what R. Solomon Jarchi ſaith, I will curſe you in all which hath need that I ſhould bleſs to you, your corn, and wine, and oyl. Another learned [p] Jew gives an expoſition, wherein he ſeems to comprehend, at leaſt to point at, all theſe, thus explaining what is ſaid, I will curſe your bleſſings, that inaſmuch as the prieſt's office was to pray or intercede for the people, and to teach them their duties, he threatens, ſeeing they deſpiſed his offerings, and neglected to direct the people to what was fit and right in that kind, that he would curſe what they bleſſed, [or wherein they ſhould be bleſſed] ſo as that the puniſhment ſhould extend to all, in that there ſhould fall a dearth or ſcarcity on their corn and cattle, and they ſhould be ſtraitned as concerning what they ſhould offer to God; and the prieſt's dues ſhould be few alſo.

Yea I have curſed them already,] them, i. e. your bleſſings. The words thus read, ſhew that they ſhould not deceive themſelves in hope that the evil threatned ſhould be delayed, or put off; but if that they would take notice of it, the curſe was already gone forth againſt them, and had begun to ſeize on them, from the time that they began to deſpiſe his name, and he ſaw that they did not lay it to heart to obſerve his ordinances: ſo ſome of the [q] Jews. And to this purpoſe [r] divers underſtand it. Others read it, yea I will alſo (or certainly, or farther) curſe them, or it, i. e. the bleſſing, or every one of your bleſſings. [So they render it, becauſe though the foregoing noun be plural, the affix is of the ſingular number and feminine gender, which way of conſtruction is of conſtant uſe among the Arabians, and ſeems not to have been unuſual to the Jews in thoſe times.] So as that the repeating of the threat may add a confirmation to denote the certainty of it. And this reading divers [s] ancient Tranſlations, and other [t] Expoſitors follow. R. Solomon Jarchi ſeems ſomething more nicely to expound the words, while he obſerves, that the words at firſt put with a condition, If you will not hear, and if you will not lay it to heart, &c. I will ſend a curſe, &c. and here repeated without the condition, intimate as much as if he ſhould ſay, But there is no need of ſuſpending the curſe on that condition: for certainly you will not hear nor lay it to heart, and therefore from this time will I curſe your bleſſings. The cauſe of this curſe already gone forth, or certainly threatned to come, is becauſe they do not lay to heart, what God hath ſpoken, and commanded concerning his ſervice to obſerve to do accordingly: [u] ſuch contempt of his word he will not bear.

3. Behold I will corrupt your ſeed, and ſpread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your ſolemn feaſts, and one ſhall take you away with it.

Behold I will corrupt, (Margin reprove) your ſeed, &c.] The word גער [w] Gaar here uſed, is noted to ſignify both, to rebuke or reprove, and alſo to corrupt or deſtroy [with this difference, that in the former ſignification it hath the prepoſition ב be following it; in the ſecond only the noun, thing, or perſon of which it is ſpoken, without a prepoſition (as here it is.) The ſenſe here will be much one in whether ſignification it be taken, the rebuking or reproving it will import the hindring it [x] from growth and increaſe: and ſo will the corrupting it, hinder it likewiſe. And ſo the words include a curſe on the fruits of the earth, a threat of [y] dearth and ſcarcity. Your ſeed.] In the Hebrew, To you the ſeed, or as [z] Others, The ſeed becauſe of you, or for your ſakes (becauſe cauſe of your wickedneſs:) but this makes no great difference. [a] Others by ſeed here underſtand, poſterity, as if he ſhould ſay, I will curſe or deſtroy your poſterity: but however this would be a different meaning, yet the reading in the Hebrew will ſtill manifeſtly be the ſame. A greater difficulty will be how to reconcile to our reading that of Others, and that ancient, who inſtead of ſeed, read arm or ſhoulder. For though the conſonant letters of the word זרע Zera, that ſignifieth ſeed, and Zeroa, which ſignifieth an arm or ſhoulder, be both one, yet they differ in the vowels; ſo that there will be nothing to be ſaid, but that either they took them in theſe different forms to ſignify the ſame thing, whereas now they are uſually diſtinguiſhed according to the difference of their ſound, or form, according to the vowels, in ſignification alſo; or elſe that they read the word as to the vowels otherwiſe than it is now ordinarily, and with joint-conſent read in the Hebrew text. This difference is ancient, for the Chaldee and Syriack (both ancient) take the ſame reading and ſignification that we now do. But the Greek and Vulgar Latin, with ſuch as follow them, the other. What occaſioned at firſt theſe different readings or rendrings will be hard to ſay after ſo long time, and as hard to compoſe them, there being on both parts ſuch as eagerly defend them. They who prefer that ſignification, which the Greek and Vulgar Latin give, (of which the firſt hath) Behold I ſeparate to you the ſhoulder, the other, [b] Behold I will caſt forth to you the arm, think this beſt to fit this place, as beſt [c] agreeing with what follows, and ſpread dung upon your faces, the dung of your ſolemn feaſts, both having reſpect to thoſe dues, or portions, which the prieſts had out of the ſacrifices that were offered, to whom were allotted the [d] ſhoulder and the maw, which they will have here denoted by the dung, which is contained in it. So that by his ſaying he will caſt to them the arm; [e] Some will have to be meant, that he will with indignation, as it were, throw it at them, as one angry with them, not out of favour as a bleſſing from him to them. But then it may be queſtioned on what ground the word גער Gaar is rendred, I will caſt forth to, the ſignifications of it elſewhere uſed, being; as hath been ſaid, to rebuke, or reprove, or elſe to corrupt and deſtroy, which obſerved hath made [f] Some that follow the reading, which we are ſpeaking of, to inlarge the ſignification of the word projiciam, I will caſt forth to, and to explain it by I will caſt forth from, or take from you; but then they change the meaning of the words, as if he ſhould ſay, I will take from you the arm, i. e. your ſtrength and ſuſtenance, which you had by thoſe portions of the ſacrifices allotted to you, or by other means, as if the arm were ſpoken of their own arm, or did include both their own, and that, i. e. the ſhoulder of the ſacrifice. This meaning is far from the former, and will ſcarce be made to accord with it: it may perhaps be eaſier reduced to that which the Greek hath, I ſeparate to you the ſhoulder, although the Greek Father Cyril, otherwiſe expound that, ſaying, that I do ſeparate, is to be underſtood, I have ſeparated to you, (viz. allotted to you by the law) that part, which cuſtom I command again to be obſerved (ſaith he) as if they neglecting the former command, not being content with that part, had taken of the fleſh of the ſacrifice what liked them beſt. But what is there in the words, that may be a ground for this ſuppoſition, and ſupply of the ſenſe? Beſides, what warrant or example is there, for rendring the word גער Gaar, by ſeparate? Which makes another Greek [g] Tranſlator render it according to the known ſignification, Behold I rebuke you with the arm. But in all theſe there is more of harſhneſs and difficulty than will eaſily be ſolved. If that make for liking the reading of ſhoulder, rather than ſeed, becauſe another part of the ſacrifice allotted to the prieſts is intimated, and joined with it in the next words, (as hath been ſaid:) the like reaſon will as much make for, and be appliable to the rendring it, ſeed, inaſmuch as here is before made mention of the Mincha, or meat-offering, which was offered together with the ſacrifice, and was made of flower, and of which after a part burnt on the altar, the remnant was the prieſts: and beſides that the firſt fruits of their corn, wine, and oyl, &c. they were commanded to give to the prieſts as well as the ſhoulder, and two cheeks, and maw of the ſacrifice, Deut. xviii. 3, 4. and ſo the corrupting of the ſeed will be an evident curſing of their bleſſing, a puniſhment to them; inaſmuch as by theſe means the people ſhall not have for the [h] Mincha, or meat-offering, what to bring, nor plenty of firſt fruits for the prieſts to receive. So that the corrupting of the ſeed [i], in reſpect to the Mincha, will have as good connexion (if it be to be ſtood on here) with what is ſaid of the ſcattering on their faces the dung of their ſolemn feaſts, in reſpect to the ſacrifice, as the caſting forth to them, or throwing at them the ſhoulder, (or what elſe they will have meant by that expreſſion) by way of threat or denunciation of a curſe.

[i] Abarb. [k] Tarn. [l] Grot. Jerom. [m] Calv. See Druſ. and Lud. de Dieu. [n] Abu Walid. [o] Haggai ii. 18, 19. [p] R. Tanch. [q] Aben Ezra, Kimch. and Arab. [r] Cal. Tarn. [s] Chald. Greek, Arab. Vulg. Lat. and Arab. MS. [t] R. Tanch. Ribera. [u] Calv. [w] Abu Walid, R. D. Kimchi, in rad. [x] Abarb. [y] Calv. [z] Druſ.

All things therefore being conſidered, there ſeems no reaſon, why the ordinary reading in the Hebrew text ſhould be queſtioned, or not be preferred before any other, that can be pretended, and none therefore why we ſhould not embrace our Tranſlation, which is agreeable to it. That expoſition of a [k] learned man who would take in both thoſe notions, which we have mentioned, viz. ſeed and arm, thus, as if God ſhould ſay, I will repel with my arm that gift, which with your hand ſtretched forth you offer unto me, and will caſt back in your faces the ſeed of which it is made: or as [l] another correcting him would have it rather, I will caſt forth that (your) arm, with which you you offer me a gift, and ſcatter the cake it ſelf, or ſeed on your faces, may be admitted perhaps as a wide paraphraſe, but will little help in determining the reading or literal rendring.

[a] See Chr. à Caſtro. Dutch Notes, Stokes. [b] Doway Tranſl. [c] Riber. [d] Deut. xviii. 3. [e] Rib. Menoch. Grot. [f] Lyra, Chr. à Caſtro. Tirin. [g] Aquila. See Nobil. [h] See Joel i. 13. and ii. 14. [i] Abarb. [k] Arias Mont. [l] Chriſt. à Caſtro.

And ſpread (or ſcatter) dung upon your faces, even the dung of your ſolemn feaſts] i. e. of your ſacrifices ſlain at ſuch times. [m] Becauſe at their ſolemn feaſts many ſacrifices were killed, and offered, therefore is the ſame name חג Chag, which ſignifies a feaſt, uſed alſo for ſacrifice, as Pſalm cxviii. 27. Bind (חג Chag) the ſacrifice unto the horns of the altar: and in the ſame notion, Exod. xxiii. 18. the fat of my ſacrifice, חגי Chaggi, and therefore in the Margin is put feaſt, and ſo [n] Iſaiah xxix. 1. Spread dung upon your faces, even the dung, &c.] Inſtead of dung the Greek read, the maw, which ſome [o] Expoſitors, both ancient and modern, look on as the thing ſignified, by naming that which is contained in it, by way of greater reproach. So that there is no great reaſon why a late learned [p] man ſhould hence gather, that the Greek did read otherwiſe than we now do in the Hebrew, viz. כרש Cereſh for פרש Pereſh. And we may obſerve that though the word Cereſh may ſignify the maw, panch, or belly, as Jer. li. 34. yet that is not the word uſed for the maw, where it is aſſigned to the prieſts, but קבה Kebah, Deut. xviii 3. but here it will be more emphatical to take the word Pereſh in its proper ſignification of dung, though in a figurative expreſſion, the meaning of which may be given in different manners, but all will tend to the ſame ſcope or meaning; and ſpread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your ſolemn feaſts.] Your holieſt of your ſacrifices, thoſe that you offer on your ſolemn feaſts, being ſuch illegal ones as you offer, ſhall be in my ſight as dung, all as deſpicable, as loathſome [q] as dung; and I will be ſo far from accepting them at your hand, that I will reject you, and what you offer, with as much contempt as if I took the dung in the panches of your ſacrifices, and threw it in your faces; [r] or I will look upon you as loathſome, and make you appear to be as loathſome in your moſt ſolemn profeſſions of holineſs and devotions, as if I had took the very dung of your ſacrifices, and threw it in your faces, which were the greateſt note of diſgrace, that can be ſhewn, and ſo would make all men look on them with contempt, as on ſuch whom God had by ſuch an open affront ſhewed himſelf to loath and abominate, and expoſed to the ſcorn of all, as things no more to be regarded than to be taken away, and caſt forth with dung. R. D. Kimchi ſo expoundeth the words, as if God ſaid to them, As you have contemned me in your ſacrifices, ſo will I ſhew contempt of you in or by them, by caſting back in their faces that which is moſt deſpicable in the beaſts, viz. their dung, as if he ſhould ſay, I will make you a reproach or contempt by reaſon of famine, in that I will corrupt your ſeed which you ſow, and ye ſhall be in want of bread, and ſhall be for a reproach to the nations, which are round about you; for ſo ſhall they be in famine (according to the expreſſions uſed, Joel ii. 19. and Ezek. xxxvi. 30.) and behold you ſhall be for a reproach and contempt, as if I had thrown dung on your faces. Abarbinel ſo explains it, as if he ſhould ſay, tha t thoſe ſacrifices that they offered before his face, he would caſt back in their faces, as a lord that rejecting a gift brought to him by his ſervant, caſts it back in his face. Whatever variety there is in applying the words of the expreſſion, the ſcope of the whole is manifeſt, [s] that he declares that he will not accept of, or be pleaſed with what they bring, inaſmuch as it is contrary to what he required; but with indignation reject both it and them.

And one ſhall take you away with it, in the Margin, or it ſhall take you away to it.] Theſe words, added to the former, are an aggravation of the contempt, that he will pour on them, or a declaration of the iſſue of it to them. If it be read as in the text, the meaning according to [t] Some will be, That they ſhall be ſo filthy, all as beſpread with dung, that he that taketh away the dung ſhall alſo take them away with it, finding no difference between them, or take them away with him: an expreſſion of extreme vileneſs and contemptibleneſs. [u] Others reading, one ſhall take you away with him, or to himſelf, by that one, think underſtood, The enemy, as if it were ſaid, and the enemy, or an enemy, ſhall take you, being by me ſet at naught, and rejected as dung, or what is moſt vile, and I loath, away, &c. and ſo will it be the iſſue of God's rejecting them. And [w] Some by that enemy will have particularly meant the forces of Antiochus, or (as [x] Others) the Romans. If it be read as in the Margin, it ſhall take you away to it, then will it be, [y] It, i. e. the dung caſt upon you, ſhall ſo cleave unto you, cover you, and make you filthy, that you ſhall be reputed as it, and no better eſteemed, but as [z] deſpicable, and loathſome, [a] deprived of all dignity and reſpect. A learned [b] Divine, becauſe it is not expreſſed who or what ſhall take them away, looks on it as to ſignify as much as, And ye ſhall be taken, and born unto it, as if it were every one, or any body ſhall bear you to it, making the ſenſe thus, Think not that your faces ſhall eſcape that dung, which I threaten to ſcatter on them: if you ſeek to avoid it, every one ſhall carry you to it, that you may be ſprinkled with it. [He quotes R. Solomon Jarchi, as making to his purpoſe. According to the printed copy, which reads ישאו, they ſhall take or bear you to it, it might indeed ſeem ſo to do; but in a manuſcript copy it is ישא Yiſſa, it ſhall take you to it, and ſo is the ſame that is read in the Margin of our Bibles.] R. D. Kimchi gives an expoſition, which though it be not a literal verſion, is plainly enough the reſult of the meaning, viz. your iniiniquity ſhall bear or carry you to this contempt, meaſure according to meaſure, or proportionably to your doings; ye have contemned me, and ye ſhall be contemned or contemptible. The Greek, Syriack, and printed Arabick underſtand it, as if it were God that ſhould take them away, rendring it as in the firſt perſon, And I will take you away together, or I will take you away with it, viz. with the dung.

[m] R. Tanch. [n] See Abu Walid in נקף. [o] Hierom. Riber. Grot. &c. [p] Capell. and ſee Schindler in פרש. [q] Menoch. [r] Druſ. [s] R. Tanch. [t] Jun. Trem. Piſc. [u] Aben Ezra, R. Tanch. [w] Grot. Tirin. [x] Stokes. [y] Pareus, R. Solomon MS. [z] Lyra. [a] Calv. [b] Lud. de Dieu.

The Dutch Notes have as a ſecond expoſition, The puniſhment ſhall take you away. The Chaldee paraphraſing it, "I will reveal the "confuſion of your wickedneſs upon your "faces, and will take away the magnificence "of your ſolemnities, and your part ſhall be "reſtrained from it, (or your part of it ſhall "be reſtrained;) may confer ſomewhat as to the meaning in general, but makes not much to the literal interpretation.

4. And ye ſhall know that I have ſent this commandment unto you, that my covenant might be with Levi, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

And ye ſhall know] [c] Others, for ye know, [d] Others, and know ye. That the word וידעתם Vidaatem, may either of theſe ways be rendred, will not be much queſtionable, by reaſon of the uſual change of tenſes as to their ſignification in the Hebrew tongue, the preter-tenſe (of which the verb here is) being frequently (eſpecially with the letter ו V, as here prefixed) put in the ſignification of the future, and [e] the future ſignification uſed ſometimes as imperative, or bidding to do, ye ſhall do, for do ye. But according to ſuch different rendring will the meaning of the following words be neceſſarily made, ſomething (though not greatly) different. If it be rendred in the firſt way (as Ours and many Others render it) then the meaning will be to this purpoſe, And (or then) when this contempt hath been poured out upon you, this puniſhment inflicted, ſhall ye know, that this commandment for not contemning me, this threat of puniſhment for your breaking my commandment, and diſhonouring of me by offering illegal ſacrifices, is ſent unto you from me, that you repenting you of ſuch your miſdoing, [f] my covenant which I made of old with Levi (the tribe of Levi of which you are) might ſtand firm, and you might not run on in your wickedneſs, to the abrogating of it, and cauſing me to deprive you of the bleſſings and privileges annexed to it: [g] Or, that my covenant made with the tribe of Levi, which you have neglected and broken, may be obſerved and made good on my part, by my calling you to account for it, and vindicating it on my part, by diſhonouring you, becauſe you on your part violate it, by not honouring me, as in that was required at your hands. This from me is not a breach of it, but a making it good, being on your part broken.

[h] They that follow the ſecond rendring, give their expoſition thus, as if God for ſhewing of his juſtice in denouncing ſuch puniſhments as he threatens to them, did appeal even to their own conſcience, inaſmuch as they had his commandment, notwithſtanding all which they did ſo tranſgreſs that covenant made to, and obſerved by, thoſe their progenitors, as to provoke him to this juſt diſpleaſure againſt them.

They that embrace the third, thus, Know ye that I have not ſent this commandment to you, viz. that you ſhould honour my name, but becauſe my covenant was with Levi, which was publickly made before all Iſrael, (ſpeaking this in reference to the rods which they laid up in the tabernacle of witneſs, Numb. xvii. 7.) and therefore it was meet that you ſhould confirm (or keep inviolable) this covenant, as a learned [i] Jew gives the meaning, or as a [k] Chriſtian, Know ye that I have ſent to you this commandment by my Prophet, becauſe my covenant is with Levi, by virtue of which covenant I convent you for not obſerving, not only that general covenant which I made with the people, but that peculiar one with the Prieſts and Levites, Numb. viii. 14, &c. and xviii. 19. The meaning according to this reading is perſpicuous. There is a difference in it from the former rendrings, not only in the firſt word, but alſo in tranſlating the word להיות Lihyoth, becauſe it was, which they tranſlate, that it may (or might) be, or to be.

[l] Some of the Jewiſh Expoſitors look on theſe words as directed to the people, to ſtir them up to ſhew reverence and reſpect to the Prieſts and Levites, as was due by virtue of God's covenant made with Levi, the whole tribe ſeparated for attending on God's ſanctuary and ſervice, and more peculiarly belonging to the Prieſts as chief among them, and then [m] the meaning of the words, I have ſent this commandment unto you, to be, I have commanded you in the law ſo to do. But the connexion of the words requires that it be rather looked on as ſpoken to the Prieſts for reproof of them, and that whether by commandment be meant the commandment given of old in the law, as ſome underſtand it; or as Others, the meſſage now ſent to them by the Prophet to reprove them for the breach of it, and to call on them to reform their miſbehaviour in God's ſervice, to a due and better obſervance of which they were bound by virtue of his covenant made with Levi: which their miſbehaviour is aggravated, and his juſtice in puniſhing them vindicated, by mentioning that covenant both in reſpect to the nature of it, and that obſervance of it which was found in their predeceſſors, and their contrary dealing, both to the tenour of the one, and example of the other, as is in the four following verſes declared.

5. My covenant was with him of life and peace, and I gave them to him, for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name.

[c] Jun. Trem. [d] Abarb. and Grot. [e] Glaſſ. Gram. p. 655. [f] R. D. Kimchi, Vat. Munſt. Rib. Tirin. Menoch. Dutch Notes, Stokes, Biſhop Hall's Paraph. [g] Calv. [h] Jun. Trem. and Tarn. [i] Abarb. [k] Grot. [l] Aben Ezra. [m] R. Tanch.

5. My

My covenant was with him of life and peace, &c.] With him, i. e. with him that is here meant by Levi, that whole tribe; or more particularly [n] Aaron and his poſterity, to whom the prieſthood was appropriated, among whom Phinehas was eminent for his zeal towards God and his worſhip, and who, [o] Some think, is here particularly pointed out. One, ſaith a learned [p] Jew, ſaith that Aaron is the perſon here peculiarly ſpoken of; Another that Phinehas is meant. But he concludes that both are here meant, and not only they, but as many of their poſterity as were holy prieſts, as they ought all to be, they are all comprehended under the common name of Levi their father, and ſo ſpoken of as but one perſon, all meeting in the ſame ſtock, all ſeparated to one holy function; and ſo as many as were ſuch as he here deſcribes are together the Levi of God, to and with whom he ſaith his covenant was, My covenant was with him of life and peace, and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, &c.

The meaning of the words, thus rendred, ſeems plain and good, and this rendring is backed by good authority, both of [q] Jewiſh and [r] Chriſtian Interpreters; yet by [s] One of great authority too is it excepted againſt, as if it corrupted the ſenſe, but he again is by [t] another ſharply reproved for his exception. Seeing therefore there is difference betwixt Expoſitors in their interpretations, it will be convenient to ſee how the words barely and literally ſound in the original Hebrew, as they lie, without any alteration, addition, or ſubtraction, that ſo we may better judge of thoſe differences, and of the grounds of them. The words then thus ſound, My covenant was with him life (or of life) and peace, and I gave them to him fear, and he feared me: which words, though when they were ſpoken, they were agreeable to the then common uſe of ſpeaking, and doubtleſs well underſtood, yet will now ſcarce make a full and plain ſenſe, put into another language, without ſomething added or altered in them. For this reaſon therefore our Tranſlators (and thoſe who go the ſame way) add the word, for, (in for the fear) and change and for wherewith (in wherewith he feared me) which ſupply (as we ſaid) by a man of great note is excepted againſt, as marring the ſenſe. The meaning that he gives is this, My covenant was with him of life and peace, and I gave to him fear, and he feared me. (And in this rendring concurs the ancient Latin tranſlation, and much like the Greek, and I gave to him to fear me with fear, which the printed Arabick, that followeth them, explains, My covenant was with him, to (or for) life and peace, and I gave him fear, that he might fear me.) And by fear [u] he underſtands a rule, according to which he ſhould ſerve God, and by what is ſaid, and he feared me, that he obſerved that rule, kept that law, preſcribed to him; (and in this ſome [w] Others agree with him, and the Chaldee ſeems to have led them the way, who interprets, and I gave them the perfect [x] doctrine of my law that he might fear me, &c.) But he that excepts againſt this Exceptor warns, that while he excepts againſt this ſupply, he leaves out that which is expreſly ſet down in the text, viz. the pronoun, them, for it is ſaid, ואתנם לו Vaettenem lo, and I gave them to him, fear, and he feared me; which he ought not to have left out, but to have ſhewed to what, them, is to be referred, what pointed to by it. So that he affirms that rendring to be imperfect, and that, for, ought to be ſupplied to make the ſenſe clear, viz. I gave them, i. e. life and peace, to him, for or becauſe of the fear with which he feared me.

Having taken notice of this difference that we may the better judge of it, and ſee farther into the meaning of the words, it will not be amiſs to look alſo what Others, who follow neither of theſe ways, ſay. [y] There be therefore who likewiſe ſupply the word, for, but in another ſenſe than Ours and thoſe who agree with Ours do, rendring not, for the fear, but, for a fear, not as if the promiſes of the covenant for life and peace followed on that fear, but as if that covenant were to effect and produce fear. Though they both concur in this, that fear and reverence of God and his name, and a right performance of worſhip to him, is a neceſſary condition for obtaining and receiving thoſe benefits and privileges by virtue of God's covenant to be expected. A learned [z] Jew hath on theſe words this note, which becauſe his book was never yet printed, we ſhall more at large ſet down. My covenant was with him of life and peace, &c. that is, "I covenanted with them, to give to them as "a reward of their obedience to me, life in "this world, and ſecurity (or ſafety) from "evils, or if you will ſay, happineſs in this "world, and happineſs in the world to come, "which is true peace: and [a] Some ſay the "meaning is, I have made a covenant with "them concerning (or with) ſuch precepts or "commands, by which they ſhall receive (or "ſhall be received or obtained) life and peace. "And what he ſaith, and I gave them to him, "fear, is ſaid in reſpect to thoſe precepts, "that he ſhould fear to tranſgreſs them, or to "let ſlip the receiving of them. And Others "ſay that what he ſaith, and I gave them, is "meant of Iſrael, viz. I gave them to be "governed by him, [b] that they ſhould reverence him, and fear him. Then ſaith he, "he proceeds, and ſaith, that he did ſo, "viz. as I commanded him, which is that "which he ſaith, and he feared me, &c." thus he. Then concluding, "This is ſpoken "of thoſe ancient righteous men, who bear "the office of the high prieſts, exciting thoſe "who in thoſe times bear it, that they ſhould "imitate [n] Kimchi, Abarb. Druſ. [o] Grot. [p] Aben Ezra. [q] Kimchi. [r] Vatab. in 4to and 8vo. Jun. Trem. Druſ. Tarn. [s] Calv. [t] Druſ. [u] Calv. [w] Grot. [x] Whether did he think מורא Mora to ſignify Doctrine, as if it were from ירה Yarah. [y] Dutch Notes. [z] R. Tanch. [a] See in Aben Ezra. [b] So Aben Ezra, I gave them that they ſhould fear him, and he ſhould fear me.

" imitate (or be like them) by their diligence " in their obedience, and a good converſation."

R. Solomon Jarchi thus expounds the words, And I gave them to him fear, that he ſhould receive them in [or with] fear, and ſo he did. And he feared me, &c. which words may ſuggeſt to us another rendring, viz. My covenant was with him of life and peace, that I would give them to him [in, or with, or on] fear, viz. if he ſhould fear me, [for ſo I ſuppoſe ואתנם Vaettenem may be rendred, that I would give them, as the conjunction Va, is ſometimes rendred by, that, ſee Pſalm li. 16. ואתנה Veettenah, that I ſhould give it, as in the Margin of our Bible.] The ſame author thinks this here to reſpect that covenant which was made with Phinehas, inaſmuch as it is ſaid of him, Numb. xxv. 12. Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace, though to his poſterity alſo it was entailed, as there follows, And he ſhall have it, and his ſeed after him. And there be [c] ſome of the Jews that look upon it as more ſignally made good to him, in that his life was prolonged to him above three hundred years, as they gather from that he was alive in that time when the war was between the Iſraelites and Benjamites deſcribed, Judges xx. where, ver. 28. it is ſaid, And Phinehas the ſon of Eleazar, the ſon of Aaron, ſtood before it [i. e. the Ark] in thoſe days, which from the place which that ſtory hath in that book, being the laſt tranſaction recorded in it, they conclude to have been the ſpace of above three hundred years after the firſt mention of Phinehas. And this ſome [d] Chriſtian Interpreters alſo mention with ſome ſeeming aſſent. But a learned Jew but even now cited, viz. R. Tanchum, in his commentary on the book of Judges, looks on this iconcluſion concerning the length of Phinehas hs life from theſe words, as very groundleſs, and thinks that very paſſage, that Phinehas was then there, to be an evident proof that that tranſaction, though placed laſt in that book, yet was before ſeveral other things therein put before it, and not long after the Iſraelites entring into the promiſed land. [Probably by the penman of that book ſet down, where it is as a ſtory by it ſelf, and not having dependence on others, that he might not interrupt the ſeries and connexion of the hiſtory.] The ſame alſo he ſays to be done in that ſtory of the Danites, and Micah, Judges xviii. both he thinks to have been before that of Jephti; and that the like alſo may be obſerved in other places where the penmen of the books of Scripture, for reaſons beſt known to themſelves, and to avoid interruption in what they were about, placed ſuch things after others in their writing, which were done before them. The opinion likewiſe of Others, who ſay that Phinehas lived yet longer, and was Eliah, he there confutes as very abſurd. And in [e] Aaron this may be ſaid to be fulfilled, who lived an hundred and twenty and three years, Numb. xxxiii. 39. But it will not concern our preſent purpoſe to examine ſuch things; ſufficient it will be to us from the preſent words, to be inſtructed that God did, to thoſe comprehended under the name of Levi, as well as Others, as Aaron, Eleazar, and Phinehas, make good on his part his covenant to them of life and peace, and all conducible to their proſperity and happineſs in the beſt manner, and ſtill would to as many as ſhould keep covenant in fearing, reverencing, and obeying him, as thoſe their anceſtors did. If theſe now find it to be otherwiſe with them, it is from their own, not his breach of covenant, by which they fondly expected to have him bound up to them, while they would wickedly break it, and deal falſly in it towards him.

A late very learned [f] man gives this expoſition of the words, that whereas they literally are, My covenant was with him of life and peace, and I gave them to him fear, &c. the ſenſe is to be made up, by ſupplying either, and, viz. And I gave them to him, and fear, or elſe with, viz. And I gave them to him with fear, that the ſenſe may be, My covenant was with him, or I made a covenant with him of life and peace, And as I promiſed them by covenant to him, ſo I gave them to him: nor gave I them alone to him, but alſo my fear, or them with my fear; and ſo follows, and he feared me: this he prefers before thoſe rendrings above-mentioned, either, and I gave them to him for a fear, or for the fear wherewith he feared me. Thus we having ſet down how the words ſimply run in the original, and moſt of what is ſaid, and perhaps of what may well be ſaid for expoſition of them, the reader may judge what he thinks will beſt make for the meaning of them; he will find that which our Tranſlators give, backed with the authority and conſent of men of good judgment and learning, and to give a plain and perſpicuous meaning.

And was afraid before my name.] The ſame with the former, and he feared me, [g] doubled or repeated. [h] He was broken or contrite, i. e. humbly and with fear or reverence behaved himſelf before [i] me and my name: with [k] great awe and reverence approached to the performance of my worſhip and holy duties, [l] not as ye who deſpiſe my name, (chap. i. 6.) [m] Others interpret it, he was broken, or grieved when he ſaw my name profaned, as in the matter of the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. and the Midianitiſh woman, Numb. xxv. [n] Others, he was bruiſed for my name's ſake, i. e. hath undergone, and ſuffered all kinds of troubles and hardſhip for my name's ſake. There are [o] Some of eminent note, who expound theſe laſt words, (as if they were contrary to the former) of Levi's being broken, brought down, deprived of the promiſed life and peace, becauſe they did not ſanctify the name of God according to the covenant: but this is diſapproved by [p] Others, becauſe he here ſpeaks in commendation of the former good prieſts, and doth not ſpeak this of the impiety of the prepreſent wicked prieſts, nor concerning what had befallen or ſhould befal them.

2

[c] R. D. Kimchi, yea and ſome ſay that he was Eliah. Abarb [d] Vatab. and Pareus. [e] Ch. à Caſtro. [f] L. de Dieu. [g] Aben Ezra. [h] R. Tanch. [i] Abarb. [k] Grot. [l] Abarb. [m] Piſc. [n] Dutch Notes. [o] Jun. Trem. [p] Tarnov.

6. The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity.

The law of truth was in his mouth.] In his mouth, i. e. the mouth of [q] Aaron, or Eleazar, or Phinehas, or any, or all of thoſe ancient holy prieſts ſucceſſively, (the genuine Levi) was the law of truth. God's Law is the truth, Pſalm cxix. 142. the true doctrine of this law did he teach the people, and inſtruct them in the true meaning and intent thereof, that according to that right rule, they might frame all their actions, nothing of it did he conceal from them, nor teach them any thing contrary to it, or falſe: this was in his mouth, nothing contrary to it found in his lips. A learned [r] Jew thus expounds it, He gave anſwer (or pronounced ſentence) according to the truth in it ſelf, and did not reſpect the perſon of any in it, nor alter (or pervert) it for any wordly reſpect. That is it which he ſaith, and iniquity was not found in his lips, he did not mean one thing in his heart, and ſay another with his mouth, ſay [s] Others of them. He did not take bribe, ſaith [t] Another, nor reſpect perſons. Some of their ancienter [u] Rabbins more particularly inſtance, the law of truth was in his mouth, i. e. he did not pronounce that unclean, which was clean, nor that clean, which was unclean, and iniquity was not found in his lips, he did not pronounce unlawful, that which was lawful, nor pronounce that lawful, which was unlawful.

He walked with me.] That we may know what is meant by walking with God, may be compared with this place, Gen. v. 22, 24. where it is ſaid, Enoch walked with God, and chap. vi. 9. where it is ſaid, Noah was a perfect man and walked with God, [w] and Gen. xvii. 1. where God ſaith to Abraham, Walk before me and be thou perfect, and Heb. xi. 5. where it is ſaid, that Enoch had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God. By which we may underſtand, that to walk with God is ſo to walk, as in all things to endeavour to pleaſe him, in a due obſervance of all his will, and according to the rule of his commandments, as always in his preſence, and therefore fearing to offend him in any thing, or to depart from, or tranſgreſs, his righteous laws, with reſpect in all things to him, and his glory. How Levi ſo walked is expreſſed in the following words, in peace and equity.

In peace.] [x] Some underſtand this of peace with God, as that by ſo walking, and doing what was right, he kept in peace and friendſhip with God, and [y] did not provoke him by diſobedience: ſo [z] that whereas God's covenant was with him of peace (ver. 5.) he did obſerve it on his part, that ſo God might on his. [a] Others, of peace with men, [b] Others, with both: and no doubt both muſt go together; and he that will have peace with God, muſt, as far as in him lies, live peaceably with all men, Rom. xii. 18. And a ready way to have peace with God is to keep peace with and among men. Live in peace, and the God of love and peace ſhall be with you, 2 Cor. xiii. 11. ſo, bleſſed are the peace-makers, for they ſhall be called the children of God, Mat. v. 9. but keeping peace with God is neceſſarily included in the forementioned, walking with God, and theſe words deſcribing the manner of that his walking, and having reference to what follows likewiſe in deſcription of him, that he (by ſuch means) turned many away from iniquity, ſeems to reſpect not only his converſation with God, but before and towards men, whom he was to bring, likewiſe with himſelf, near to God. To this purpoſe that Jewiſh Doctor, R. Tanchum, ſaith, that here by peace are meant his moral virtues, and the right ordering his converſation among men with gentleneſs, becauſe by that means will be occaſioned peace among all. Then by מישור Miſhor, rectitude, is meant the rectitude of works pertaining to religion and equity. So before him Aben Ezra, another of them, in peace, ſaith he, that is, with Iſrael; and in rectitude (or equity) i. e. by doing my commandments. And that thus by peace thoſe more ancient did underſtand, may appear by that ſaying, in that authentic [c] book, wherein the ſayings of their fathers, or ancient ſages are recorded, where is ſet down as a ſaying of Hillel, an ancient Doctor, who is thought to have lived ſomething before Chriſt's incarnation, Be of the diſciples of Aaron, who loved peace, and [d] followed peace, and who loved men, and brought them near to the law. In which ſaying he manifeſtly ſeems to have had reſpect to this text of Scripture, and is by Abarbinel cited in his explication of it, who then for explaining what is ſaid, and in rectitude, adds, he rectified or directed them in their ways (which ſeems to agree with the Greek verſion which hath, in peace, directing he walked with me.) In explaining this word R. D. Kimchi a little differs from the other forementioned Jews, as he likewiſe doth in his expoſition of the former word, as we before intimated. The whole of his expoſition of both is this, In peace; Becauſe he did cleave to me to do my will according to what is ſaid, he ſhall make peace with me, Iſaiah xxvii. 5. And in rectitude (or equity) becauſe he walked in the [e] ways of men (as the printed copy hath it,) or in the [f] matters of men, or concerning men (as a Manuſcript) in a right way; and in both he was with me: [g] for in theſe things I delight, viz. to exerciſe loving kindneſs, and judgment, and righteouſneſs in the earth. Then proceeding to explain the next words, And he did turn many away from iniquity, he ſaith, becauſe he taught the law continually to all, and many heark-hearkened unto him, and he converted them from iniquity. In explication of the ſame R. Tanchum ſaith, Becauſe by ſuch truths, as he taught them, and his gentle behaviour towards them, and what they ſaw of his righteous works, which he exerciſed, they were neceſſarily directed, and returned from their rebellions without difficulty, being both by his doctrine and example wrought on. Aben Ezra's note is, Becauſe when the prieſt is upright, many will be upright. Some of the Jews (as was before ſaid) reſtrain the things here ſpoken to Aaron, ſome to Phinehas, and apply them particularly to [h] things done by them in their times; but the words ſeem more generally ſpoken, ſo as to concern any of thoſe holy prieſts of their race, who ſucceeded them in their office, and rightly did, as they, behave themſelves in it; as where it is ſaid that Aaron and his ſons offered upon the altar [i] of burnt-offering, &c. 1 Chron. vi. 49. it muſt neceſſarily be underſtood not of Aaron in perſon alone, and his ſons then living, but of any of his race that ſucceded in his, and their room.

[q] See R. Solomon Jarchi and R. Tanchum. [r] R. Tanch. [s] Kimchi and Abarb. [t] Aben Ezra. [u] Yalkut. [w] See Micah vi. 8. [x] R. D. Kimchi. Druſ. Ribera, Grot. and Dutch Notes. [y] Tarnov. [z] Calv. [a] Aben Ezra, and Vatab. [b] Menoch. [c] Pirke Aboth, c. 1. §. 12. [d] See Heb. xii. 14. [e] ברכי. [f] ברברי. [g] Jer. ix. 24.

7. For the prieſt's lips ſhould keep knowledge, and they ſhould ſeek the law at his mouth: for he is the meſſenger of the Lord of hoſts.

For the prieſt's lips ſhould keep knowledge, &c.] [k] Some render, do keep, [l] Others, ſhall keep, [m] Others, did keep. The word in the original, ישמרו Yiſhmeru, being the future, properly ſignifies ſhall keep, but the Hebrews having not that variety of moods and tenſes that ſome other languages have, do by one tenſe and of one mood expreſs that which thoſe other languages do by different, and that cauſes this variety of rendrings, though moſt of them mean the ſame thing. They that render do keep, cannot mean as if the prieſts then ſpoken to, did ſo; for they are reproved for the contrary: neither would it be to the purpoſe in hand, to underſtand ſhall keep, ſo as if hereafter only the prieſt's lips ſhould ſo do. They therefore that either of thoſe ways render it, or follow them, explain themſelves to mean what our Tranſlation more clearly expreſſeth; as alſo ſome of the [n] Jews expound it, viz. that they ſhould ſo do, or ought ſo to do by virtue of the office that the prieſt did ſuſtain; it was their duty ſo to do, and men might expect it from them. And ſo the connexion betwixt theſe and the foregoing words will be, that thoſe former holy prieſts did behave themſelves ſo as they are commended for doing, becauſe they conſidered what was their office and duty, and that they might accordingly perform it. That it was their duty ſo to do, and a command laid upon them for it, viz. to know the law and inſtruct others in the meaning of it, and to teach them his will, is clear out of the law, Levit. x. 11. That by a perpetual ſtatute they ſhould teach the children of Iſrael all the ſtatutes which the Lord had ſpoken to them by the hand of Moſes. And ſo Moſes ſaith of them, They ſhall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Iſrael thy law, Deut. xxxiii. 10. And that the people ſhould ſeek the law at his mouth, go to him as the interpreter thereof, to know what was the right meaning and intent thereof, that they might accordingly do it in an acceptable manner, and were to ſtand to his ſentence and judgment in any difficult point thereof; is likewiſe plain out of the law, Deut. xvii. 8, 9, &c. and xxi. 5. and out of the Prophets, Ezek. xliv. 23, 24. [o] And Hag. ii. 11. they are bid to aſk the prieſts concerning the law, for (ſaith he) he is מלאך the meſſenger or ambaſſador of the Lord of hoſts, one appointed by God to declare his meſſage, his will, and commands unto the people, and [q] direct them in the ways thereof. It is the ſame word that ſignifies an angel; and an angel hath that name from his office or employment, of being ſent on God's meſſage (from לאך צוּ in the Arabick Dialect in uſe, and ſignifying to ſend.) So from his office doth the learned Grotius note, a Biſhop in the Revelations, chap. 2, &c. to be called Ἄγγελος. And the words by which here the office of the prieſt under the law is deſcribed, well agree to the office of ſuch who are employed in the miniſtry of the goſpel, and the teaching of that. St. Paul ſaith of himſelf and others in like employment, that they are embaſſadors for Chriſt, 2 Cor. v. 20. (ſo that he that heareth them, heareth him, Luke x. 16.) that a biſhop is the ſteward of God, Titus 1. 7. and ought to hold faſt the faithful word as he hath been taught, [or in teaching, marg.] that he may be able by ſound doctrine, both to exhort and to convince the gainſayers, ver. 9. that he ought to be able to teach, 2 Tim. ii. 2. and apt to teach, ibid. ver. 24. with many more things which might be ſaid in parallel places to theſe words, in which the prieſt's office and duty, and ſo the people's duty, in reſpect to him, are deſcribed. But it will not be to the underſtanding of the preſent words to inſiſt thereon, only this by the by, becauſe of the title here given him.

That which from what hath been ſaid, makes to our purpoſe, is to ſhew the connexion of the preſent words with the preceding, according to thoſe who render or expound them, that the prieſts lips ſhould preſerve knowledge, &c. as ſhewing that what was before ſaid, that he did, or concerning his behaviour, was that which his duty required, and by conſcience thereof he was moved to do, and did in obſervance thereof accordingly do. They that render, The prieſts lips did preſerve knowledge, and they did ſeek the law at his mouth, becauſe he was the meſſenger of God, make it a continuation of the deſcription of the behaviour of thoſe ancient holy prieſts, and how they walked worthy of their office, and performed all that it required of them. Either of theſe ſuppoſeth and includeth the other; the holineſs of the office importing a holy converſation, and a holineſs of their converſation, adorn-adorning and ſetting forth the holineſs of their office which required it, and of the rule by which they framed it. And ſo by a commendation of thoſe of old, for their walking worthy of their office, ſhews how culpable theſe at preſent ſpoken to, were in regard to their behaviour, contrary both to their duty, and to the examples of their predeceſſors, which he deſcribes in the next words.

[h] See R. Solomon. [i] R. Tanch. [k] Druſ. [l] Vulg. Lat, &c. [m] Piſcat. Grot. [n] R. Tanch. R. D. Kimchi. [o] See Eccluſ. xlv. 17. [p] R. Tanch.

8. But ye are departed out of the way: ye have cauſed many to ſtumble at the law: ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

But ye are departed out of the way, &c.] But ye, contrary both to your duty, and to the examples of your pious anceſtors, are departed out of the way, which the law preſcribed for you, as well as it did for them, to walk in, and they did diligently keep to and obſerve. They by their inſtructions directed, and by their good examples led men in the right way of God's commandments, and turned them from iniquity; but ye have cauſed many to ſtumble at the law, (or as in the Margin, to [q] fall in the law.) Ye have [r] been occaſion of ruin to them in things concerning the law, either by teaching them what is not agreeable to the law, or not teaching them the right meaning of it; or by your example contrary to it, ye have cauſed them, who thought they might ſafely be guided by your inſtructions, and do as they ſaw you do, to tranſgreſs the law, and run on in falſe and evil ways to their deſtruction; or, which will be agreeable to the words in the Text of our Tranſlation, (which [s] Others alſo give) [t] give occaſion to them by your wickedneſs to diſdain God's ſervice: (agreeable to that expreſſion, Rom. ii. 24. The name of God is blaſphemed through you: and 1 Sam. ii. 17. that through the ſin of Eli's ſons men abhorred the ſacrifice of the Lord.)

The words ſpoken indefinitely give to underſtand, that in ſeveral, or many things, they went aſide from, or contrary to the law of God, and were a cauſe of ſcandal or offence to the people. But if we enquire after particulars, the foregoing chapter ſhews, that they did ſo in what concerned God's offerings and ſacrifices: and the verſes following in this chapter, viz. 11, &c. that they did alſo in matters concerning marriage. And [u] Some, therefore, for explication of this place, refer to Nehemiah xiii. from the 4th verſe forward, where [w] are ſeveral offences againſt the law taxed, which ſeem by the fault of the prieſts to have been occaſioned, as the introducing ſtrangers into the places belonging to the temple, and the profanation of the ſabbath, and marrying ſtrange wives.

Ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, &c.] Agreeable to this expreſſion is ſaid, Neh. xiii. 29. They have defiled the prieſthood, and the covenant of the prieſthood, and of Levi. In ver. 4, 5. God mentioneth his covenant with Levi. This covenant [x] required that they ſhould ſanctify and honour God by a due obſervance of his ordinances, and teaching and cauſing Others to obſerve them. By violating the conditions on their parts they have corrupted and made void that covenant, and muſt not therefore expect from him that life and peace (ver. 5.) and all thoſe benefits which he had on his part promiſed on keeping covenant. They belong not to ſuch covenant-breakers; and thence are thoſe evils which have befallen, and ſhall befal them, contrary to what they vainly, without redreſſing their errors, and breach of covenant, did expect. So he had before threatned them, ver. 2, 3. and in the next verſe farther declares.

9. Therefore have I alſo made you contemptible and baſe before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law.

Therefore have I alſo made you contemptible and baſe before all the people, &c.] Therefore becauſe they have thus corrupted the covenant of Levi, &c. and by their ill adminiſtration of their office, had [y] ſhewed contempt of God, and deſpiſed his name, chap. i. 6. Therefore, ſaith he, have I alſo made you contemptible, or as [z] Some render, will I make you contemptible, &c. It will be to the ſame paſs in ſuch ſpeeches, to ſpeak in the ſame language of what is paſt, and of what is to come, that which hath not been yet done, being as certain when God hath ſaid it, as if it were already paſt.

According as ye have not kept my ways.] So rendring to them according to their own dealings, and [a] meaſure for meaſure. It is that which God of old had declared, as the rule by which he would go in judging and dealing with thoſe who ought to take care of honouring him, in looking to the due obſervance of his commandments, 1 Sam. ii. 30. Them that honour me will I honour, and they that deſpiſe me ſhall be lightly eſteemed. The prieſts, by virtue of God's covenant with them, were to be highly honoured and reſpected by the people: and how zealouſly he would vindicate their honour, appears in that ſtory of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram. But upon breach of covenant with him, if they find on the contrary diſreſpect and contempt, it is by his juſt judgment, and by his juſt judgment they ſhall ſo find, therefore have I alſo made (or will I make) you contemptible, &c. according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law.] That contempt which they caſt on him and on his law, by wreſting it out of reſpect to perſons, that ſo they might gain favour and reſpect from them, ſo honouring them more than him, and ſeeking to pleaſe them more than him; hath he, or will he, caſt back on them, by making them contemptible, even in the eyes of them from whom they thought to find by that means reſpect; yea,

made

[q] Compare Hoſea xiv. the laſt words. [r] Tarnov. [s] Jun. and Trem. [t] Diodati's Notes, and Vatab. [u] Grot. [w] See Ezra x. 2. [x] Abarb. [y] R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [z] Tig. Grot. [a] R. D. Kimchi.

made or will make them baſe before all the people. To this purpoſe a learned [b] Jew expounds the words: and [c] Others agree with him, that by being partial in the law, is for men's ſakes to approve of that which the law approved not of; and not to reprove men, when they did contrary to it, as in particular, in that out of reſpect to thoſe great men that brought them, they did accept of, and offer illegal ſacrifices, (as in the former chapter is ſhewed) and not reject or reprove them for bringing ſuch things contrary to the law; whereas perhaps (as [d] Some add) from a poor man they would not have accepted them. But the words [e] ſeem more general, and to comprehend any wreſting of the law, either out of favour to themſelves or others, when in declaring the meaning thereof, or determining any thing according to it, they did not deliver the truth, but reſpect the perſons, in whoſe caſe they were to deliver their judgment, and ſo accordingly interpreted it in favour or hatred unto them; and, as [f] Some think, more particularly in caſe of extortion and uſury, they favouring the oppreſſors: and this in any kind was contrary to what the law commands, Levit. xix. 15. Thou ſhalt not reſpect the perſon of the poor, nor honour the perſon of the mighty; but in righteouſneſs ſhalt thou judge thy neighbour. And Deut. i. 17. Ye ſhall not reſpect perſons. And Deut. xvi. 19. Thou ſhalt not wreſt judgment, thou ſhalt not reſpect perſons. This is to be partial in the law: our Margin tells us, it is literally according to the Hebrew, ye have accepted faces: it is uſually elſewhere rendred, to reſpect perſons. Theſe three expreſſions are in meaning all one: but our Margin gives us likewiſe another rendring, viz. Ye have lifted up the face againſt the law, viz. preſumptuouſly done or taught what is contrary to it; which although by [g] ſome Interpreters followed; and the word נשׂא Naſa, doth doubtleſs ſignify as well to lift up as to accept, and the meaning be good; yet is by [h] One found fault with, becauſe the common and received uſe of the phraſe is to denote [i] reſpect of perſons, and not elſewhere taken in that ſenſe of lifting up the face.

10. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherouſly every man againſt his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? &c.] [k] Some, eſpecially they who render the former words by lifting up the face againſt the law, will have this verſe to be the words of the prieſts or people, apologizing for themſelves, againſt that which the Prophet in the following verſes, accuſeth them for, and reproves them, viz. their contracting unlawful marriages with infidels, or heatheniſh women: as if lifting up the face againſt the law, which forbad them ſo to do, they ſhould ſay, Why do ye tax us for our unlawful marriages with infidels? Was not Adam one common father to us all? Hath not one God created us all? Why do ye therefore charge us with treacherous dealing with our brethren, and profaning the covenant of our fore-fathers, in that we do promiſcuouſly match with our heathen neighbours? as the learned Biſhop Hall paraphraſeth the words according to their meaning. And they in their Notes take notice of the grounds that theſe making their excuſe do go on, viz. in that all being from one common Father, and all by one created, they are all equally lawful as for liberty of contracting marriages with them. And again, as it is no treacherous dealing therefore with their brethren, ſo it cannot be a profanation of the covenant made by God with their fathers, inaſmuch as by this means they called others into partaking of the covenant, which was a moſt juſt thing. [l] Another going along with them, as to the firſt part of the verſe, and taking for included therein all that they ſay, makes yet the latter part, viz. why do we deal treacherouſly, &c. to be the Prophet's anſwer unto them, by retorting on them their own words, and putting it to their own conſcience, bidding them to aſk themſelves, why do we, that know God's command for not marrying with the Gentiles, deal treacherouſly every man againſt his [Jew] brother, by caſting off his ſiſter or daughter, whom we have married, to take in her place a ſtranger, ſo profaning the covenant of our fathers, by which God required that they ſhould not pollute themſelves with [m] ſuch marriages, and they did faithfully keep it. But as for the firſt of theſe opinions, it is excepted againſt by a learned [n] man, as reſtraining ſo theſe words to the prieſts, to whom the foregoing words were ſpoken, whereas the things, now taxed, were common to all; and the ſecond ſeems not much to mend the matter: both make the matter harſh, and require ſuch an abrupt change of perſons in ſpeaking, as the words ſeem to give no ground for. They more plainly and clearly flow, if they be all taken as the words of the Prophet, proceeding in his reproof, but not of the prieſts only, as before, but of all. [o] They that in the preceding verſe underſtand by their being partial in the law, their partiality in determining in behalf of oppreſſors and exactors, think that ſin of exaction here eſpecially taxed, and the iniquity of it ſhewed, in regard that they were all children of one father Jacob, and ſo equally free, and having equal right to juſtice, according to the law, without reſpect of perſons, and by one God created, i. e. made his people: why then do we deal treacherouſly every man againſt his brother, in oppreſſing him, and by unjuſt uſury exacting of him, which is a manifeſt profanation of the covenant of our fathers, or that law given to them, which forbad to lay uſury on any of God's people, their brethren, as Exod. xxii. 25. Levit. xxv. 36. Deut. xxiii. 19, 20. And for their ground of this expoſition and confirmation mation of it, they refer us to the hiſtory of the Jews, in thoſe times about which this Prophet lived, as particularly ſet down in Nehemiah, chap. v. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, &c. where their oppreſſion of the poor by uſury, and exactions, is deſcribed, and a reformation thereof ſought by Nehemiah. With theſe [p] Others agree, who will have here all wrong dealing taxed. But Others, the Jews generally, and divers [q] Chriſtians, follow another way of expoſition, which ſeems more agreeable and coherent to the following verſes; and that is, (whether with reſpect to the foregoing words, as [r] Some will, or without reſpect to them, as ſome of the Jews, who look on this as a beginning of a new prophecy, as [s] One ſpeaks, or a new matter of reproof, or a [t] new ſection;) that theſe words are the words of the Prophet reproving them for what they did under the ſecond temple, after their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, contrary to the law in what concerned their marriages; in which they were peccant in two regards. [u] 1. In taking wives that were of another nation and religion. 2. In oppreſſing and hard dealing with their Iſraelitiſh wives, either by diſmiſſing them, or uſing them deſpitefully and contumelioufly, and denying them what was due to them; in favour of thoſe ſtrange wives which they took with them, and preferred before them: in which kind how peccant they were, both people, and prieſts, and Levites alſo, is ſhewed at large, Ezra ix. This ſin the Prophet coming to reprove, argues, as [w] Some obſerve, and aggravates the heinouſneſs and unreaſonableneſs thereof, in regard that it is the violation of the tye of a double relation, which ſhould have kept them from doing it. 1. In that they had all one Father, were of one kindred and family, have we not all one Father? and ſo in violating the rights of that affinity, did deal treacherouſly every man with his brother. 2. In that they were all of one religion, the people of one God, all acknowledging and profeſſing to ſerve him alone, and to obſerve his laws, Hath not one God created us? and ſo in doing, as they did, contrary to his law, profaned the covenant of their fathers, that covenant by God, who made them his peculiar people, made with their fathers; by virtue of which, [x] as he was one God, ſo they were to be one people ſeparated to him, and not mingle themſelves with the idolatrous Heathen, and particularly by making marriages with them, Deut. vii. 3. That this meaning may be made plain, it will be convenient to obſerve ſomething concerning ſome of the words; as firſt, who is that one Father, which they all have. By him the [y] Jews underſtand to be particularly meant Jacob, the more immediate father of the twelve tribes, from whom they all ſprung: and [z] Others (many Chriſtian Expoſitors) underſtand Abraham, from whom alſo they all came, with whom God firſt made that covenant, by virtue of which, they, as his ſeed, were accounted his peculiar people, and heirs of the promiſe. And of him that they were wont to boaſt as their father, we learn in ſeveral paſſages in the New Teſtament, as John viii. 38, 39. and [a] elſewhere. And Iſaiah li. 2. God bids them to look unto Abraham as their father, whom he called [one, or] alone. So that in reſpect of either of theſe it may be ſaid they had one Father. Nor will it make any difference as to what is thence urged or concluded here to them: it will be as to the purpoſe all one which of them be underſtood, as likewiſe if they ſhould name alſo Iſaac, who was between Abraham and Jacob. [b] Others think by this one Father to be meant God, it following, Hath not one God created us? and him may they truly ſo call; and we hear them ſaying in the forecited, John viii. 41. We have one Father, even God. And thus taken, it would make for inferring the ſame concluſion of not dealing treacherouſly, nor violating the covenant made with their fathers; but as it is [c] obſerved, would not bring it ſo cloſe home, nor preſs it ſo far upon them, as if it be underſtood of their one Father in the fleſh, in whom they were by God received into covenant, and made his peculiar people, diſtinct from other nations; and ought therefore, by ſo preſerving themſelves without mixture with other profane people, to obſerve that covenant without violation of it. If it ſhould be underſtood of Adam, (as by [d] Some it is) this way of arguing would be yet wider and looſer, and not much to conclude againſt that which ſeems here in the firſt place more eſpecially ſpoken againſt, viz. their taking wives of other nations, although againſt thoſe things joined with it, viz. their putting away the Iſraelitiſh wives which they had, or taking more ſtrange wives with them; it ſo would firmly conclude according to our Saviour's way of arguing, Mat. xix. 4, 5, &c. Yet ſeems it moſt agreeable to the argument of this place, to underſtand either Abraham or Jacob.

[b] R. D. Kimchi. [c] Abarb. [d] Munſt. Vatab. Tirin. [e] Grot. Rib. Menoch. [f] Grot. [g] Jun. Trem. [h] Tarnov. [i] So here R. Tanch. [k] Jun. Trem. [l] Tarnov. [m] Exod. xxxiv. 16. [n] Piſc. [o] Grot.

Hath not one God created us?] It ſeems not ill obſerved by [e] Some, that the word of creating, is here not meant in that general ſignification, whereby it is common to all men, all being created by God alike, but in a more reſtrict ſignification of making, or framing, or conſtituting to be a ſelect people to himſelf, wherein it was peculiar to Iſrael his choſen, whom for that purpoſe he brought out of Egypt, and did, as it were, form and model anew. In which ſenſe it is likewiſe uſed, Iſaiah xliii. 1. The Lord that created thee, Jacob, and ſo ver. 7. And in the New Teſtament in much like uſe, Eph. ii. 10. We are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works: for if any man be in Chriſt, he is a new creature, 2 Cor. v. 17. [f] Or if it be uſed in the more uſual ſenſe, it will tend to the ſame purpoſe, and and conclude with the ſame force being thus underſtood, Hath not one God created us? i. e. Do not we, the Jews, all [f] acknowledge one Lord, one God the Creator of us, and of all things, and profeſs to ſerve him alone, contrary to other nations, who do not ſo acknowledge him, but ſerve falſe gods? And how then ſhould we all, agreeing in the true religion, and by it diſtinguiſhed from others, violate thoſe reſpects and duties which that religion binds us to obſerve one towards another, as brethren and partakers of the ſame covenant, which by dealing treacherouſly or falſly one with another, we do profane.

[p] Lyra, and ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro. [q] Cyril, &c. [r] Ribera. [s] R. Tanch. [t] R. Ab. Ezra. [u] Id. and Abarb. [w] R. Tanch. Abarb. Hierom. Montan. Ribera, Ch. à Caſtro, Menoch. [x] Abarb. Deut. xxvi. 17, 18. [y] Ab. Ezra, R. Tanch. R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [z] Cyril, and moſt Chriſtian Expoſitors. [a] Mat. iii. 9. Luke i. 73. [b] Piſc. Diodati. [c] Calvin. [d] Lyra, vid. Ch. à Caſtro. [e] Ch. à Caſtro. Grot.

Every one againſt his brother.] The matter according to the expoſition we are ſpeaking of, rather [g] ſeems to require, that it ſhould be ſaid his ſiſter, viz. thoſe Iſraelitiſh women, whom by taking Heatheniſh women with them, or inſtead of them, they injured. The word, brother, may therefore be taken, either ſo as to include the relation of kindred and family, (which was [h] accounted brotherhood) whether males or females, ſiſters as well as brothers: his wife is meant, (ſaith Abarbinel) as if it ſounded, a man againſt his wife, [i] or elſe while they ſo wronged their wives, they wronged thoſe whoſe daughters or ſiſters they wronged, and dealt treacherouſly with them.

Why do we every man?] This intimates, that the fault ſpoken of, was very common among them, many guilty of it; yet not ſo, that we may think every one was guilty in that kind, nor the Prophet himſelf among them: though to ſhew how he, and all the reſt that were members of the ſame body and community, were concerned in thoſe ſins which were by many among them committed, he ſpeaks in general, and ſeems to include all, even himſelf too. We every man. There is nothing in the original that expreſly denotes every, but indifinitely a man againſt his brother, or one againſt another. The Greek, therefore, as exempting the Prophet, render not we but ye.

The ſin wherein they dealt treacherouſly, and by it profaned the covenant of their fathers, though not particularly expreſſed in this verſe, yet is in the next verſe ſet down in expreſs terms, ſo as to favour the laſt expoſition.

11. ¶ Judah hath dealt treacherouſly, and an abomination is committed in Iſrael, and in Jeruſalem: for Judah hath profaned the holineſs of the Lord which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a ſtrange God.

Judah hath dealt treacherouſly, &c.] The people of Judah, or the Jews, together with thoſe Iſraelites of the other tribes, which adjoined themſelves with them in their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, are accuſed for treacherous and falſe dealing, and committing abomination, as in the other parts of the land, ſo in Jeruſalem it ſelf, the chief city [k] and place of the temple: where they ſhould have been moſt careful of their behaviour, and given good example to others, even there they profaned the holineſs of the Lord which he loved, &c. The Lord is holy, perfect holineſs, his name holy, and all things more particularly related, or pertaining to him, holy. His law, covenant, and all his ordinances and inſtitutions, holy; Iſrael his peculiar people, and holy people: the ſanctuary or temple, and all things therein conſecrated to him, holy; Jeruſalem, the city of the great God, holy; yea, the whole land of his inheritance, holy; ſo that whoſoever doth not obſerve thoſe due reſpects, which to any of theſe belong, and preſerve with religious care that holineſs which belongs to them, may be ſaid to have profaned the holineſs, which he loved, commanded and required: and ſo is it differently expounded by [l] Some, of one of theſe, by Others of another, as, of the temple, of the people, &c. But if we conſider what is before ſaid of their profaning the covenant of their fathers, and here joined in the accuſation of them, that they married the daughter of a ſtrange God, and what follows afterwards concerning their ill and falſe dealing with their lawful Iſraelitiſh wives, called the wives of their covenant; we may well aſſent to them, who by the holineſs here ſaid to be profaned, underſtand more eſpecially his holy inſtitution of matrimony among them, not ſo much in general, as it was a holy inſtitution at firſt made in Paradiſe, as [m] Some think, but as ſo limited and reſtrained among this peculiar people of God, as that by obſerving his commands concerning it, they might ſanctify him, and preſerve themſelves a holy nation to him, and [n] ſeek, and propagate a godly ſeed, by marrying within themſelves, and cleaving to thoſe wives as one fleſh, and not mixing themſelves with Heathens and Idolaters, by taking wives of their daughters, although by their neglecting his commandment, and breaking his covenant in this kind, all other things that had the impreſs of his holineſs were at once profaned; his holy people themſelves, by bringing in a mixed ſpurious generation of half Jews, half Aſhdodites, Ammonites or Moabites, or the like; (Neh. xiii. 24.) his ſanctuary or holy temple, by bringing into it ſuch wives and ſuch children; his holy covenant made with their lawful wives, while they either [o] put them away, or wronged them for the ſake of thoſe illegal ſtrange wives, taken either into their places, or together with them; and ſo by neceſſary conſequence his whole holy law, which he that willingly tranſgreſſeth in one part [p] is guilty of the breach and profanation of all; and ſo his holy name that was called on them, and himſelf, who was their God, and commanded them to be holy as he is holy: in ſum, all the holy things of God, (as the Greek comprehenſively renders it) all that holineſs which he loved, delighted in, commanded and required.

[f] R. D. Kimchi. [g] Ab. Ezra, Druſ. [h] See Montan. Chr. à Caſtro, and Hierom. [i] Munſt. [k] R. D. Kimchi, Calv. Grot. [l] Tig. Vatab. [m] See Ribera. [n] Ver. 15. [o] See Hierom. Ribera, Pareus, on ver. 10. Ch. à Caſtro. and ſee ver. 16. infra. [p] James ii. 10.

Of theſe words, which he loved, we have in the Margin of our Bibles another reading, viz. which he ought to love: this is a tranſlation which ſome [q] Others of good account give, and explain it, which holineſs Judah ought to have ſo loved, as not to profane it by placing their love on any other to the violating and profaning of it. And [r] Others render it otherwiſe, as, which, i. e. which Lord, loved her, i. e. Judah. A [s] later very learned man, which, i. e. which Lord, he, that is, Judah, had loved, viz. formerly, and was eſpouſed to, but now profaned his holineſs, and married the daughter of a ſtrange God. The Spaniſh renders, Judah hath defiled the holineſs of the Lord by loving and marrying [or in that he loved and married] himſelf to the daughter of a ſtrange God. But among all, none ſeems more genuine, than that given in the Text of our Engliſh Bible, ſo underſtood as we have ſaid, in that ſo it is oppoſed to what follows, ver. 16. where he ſaith, The Lord hateth putting away, and that any ſhould take other illegal wives to his lawful wife, according to that expoſition which there ſome follow, thoſe things are contrary to that holineſs here ſpoke of; as thoſe he hates, ſo this he loves and requires.

The daughter of a ſtrange God.] Of what nations they that then tranſgreſſed in this kind took wives, we read Ezra ix. 1, 2, &c. from which place, and this, is manifeſt, that the prohibition in the law, Deut. vii. 1. did not only make it unlawful to take wives of thoſe ſeven nations there named only, but of any other heatheniſh idolatrous nation: and ſo the [t] Jewiſh Doctors, by comparing the words of Ezra with that command there given, conclude. And ſuch women of theſe nations, which had not one Father, (ver. 10.) nor acknowledged one true God that created them, as Iſrael did, are called daughters of a ſtrange God. As thoſe that acknowledge, worſhip, and ſerve the true God, are called his ſons and daughters, Deut. xxxii. 19. ſo they that worſhipped any ſtrange God, are by like reaſon here called the daughters of that God: hence the [u] Jews ſay, He that marrieth a heathen woman is as if he made himſelf ſon-in-law to an idol.

12. The Lord will cut off the man that doth this: the maſter and the ſcholar out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the Lord of hoſts.

The Lord will cut off the man that doth this, &c.] So with Ours moſt Interpreters render it, as if the Lord here threatning to puniſh him that did ſuch things, and tranſgreſſed in that manner ſpoken of, threatned to cut off and deſtroy him, whether ſuch or ſuch were his condition, as is here in the following words deſcribed. But a learned [w] man well notes, that the word לאיש La-Iſh, may according to the more frequent uſe of the letter or prepoſition, ל L, for a note of the dative caſe, be rather rendred to the man, i. e. from the man, than by omitting it, as Ours and Others do, ſimply the man, as threatning to cut off not ſo much, or not only his perſon, but thoſe that were in ſuch or ſuch relation to him. And ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſe renders it, The Lord ſhall deſtroy to the man that doth this, &c. Thoſe that he threatens to cut off, whether we underſtand the perſon himſelf ſinning, or thoſe related to him, are in the next words thus deſcribed, the maſter and the ſcholar (whether he be ſo or ſo) and in the Margin of our Bibles, as another reading we have, or, him that waketh, and him that anſwereth, which (as a Jewiſh Expoſitor notes) is the proper ſignification of the words, though diverſly interpreted by Others, [x] Some rendring, him that calleth, and him that anſwereth, ſeeming to take the word in an active ſenſe, as [y] Others do, him that wakeneth. [z] Others, the maſter and the ſcholar, [a] Others, the author and him that obeyeth; [b] the Lord and the ſervant, [c] prieſt or laic. The Chaldee, ſon and ſon's ſon, and the like: of which may be ſaid, as that Jewiſh Expoſitor ſaith of the Chaldee, that they render [d] by way of interpretation, or by giving the meaning, as they thought the words to import, not as they literally ſignify. And as to the following words, and him that offereth an offering, [e] Some expound as a deſcription of the prieſts and their ſons: as [f] Others do the former words likewiſe, to be a deſcription of the prieſts and other Levites, [g] officers about the temple, as porters and ſingers, and the like. [h] Others render, when (or although) he ſhall offer a gift to the Lord to make atonement for his ſin. And ſo accordingly do they differently give their expoſitions of the whole; as [i] Some, that the Lord will cut off both the man that tranſgreſſed in this kind, and alſo his abettors and defenders, though he would ſeek to expiate his fault by gifts and ſacrifices offered to the Lord by [k] himſelf or others. [l] Others that he would cut off from him, either himſelf that looked after ſuch women, or from him that defended him, thoſe ſons begotten of them, yea though he offered gifts, &c. A [m] late very learned man, having conſidered the different expoſitions of Others, gives thus his own opinion, that in this verſe is threatned puniſhment to thoſe that were guilty of that treacherous dealing in the precedent verſe mentioned, viz. that God would cut off from them, 1. Such who would watch, for (or over) them in (or with) prayers and admonitions. 2. Such as ſhould anſwer them, when they ſhould aſk concerning the law. 3. Him that ſhould offer to God ſuch ſacrifices as they brought. So that together he may be underſtoodſtood to threaten the prieſts, (ſpoken of in the former verſes of the chapter) that they ſhould be removed from their office, and likewiſe all the people (ſpoken of in the verſe immediately foregoing) that they ſhould be deprived of their prieſts. But to me there ſeems no more facile or conſpicuous expoſition than that given by that learned [n] Jew, at firſt mentioned, (agreeable likewiſe to what [o] Others of the ſame nation give) viz. that (he will deſtroy to or from them, or) they ſhall (be deſtroyed, or) periſh: ſo that there ſhall be none left among them, to whom ſhall pertain (or agree) any of thoſe epithets that import life, [ſuch as are waking and anſwering, as if this were a [p] proverbial kind of expreſſion to denote as much as any living ſoul, as if he ſhould ſay, I will cut off every living ſoul, ſo that there ſhall be none in his houſe, that may call or anſwer, none at all living.] And this imprecation (or menace) ſaith he, comprehends the tranſgreſſors in this kind of all Iſrael; as he ſaith, (firſt) out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and then particularly applieth it to ſuch of the prieſts as did ſo, ſaying, and him that offereth an offering to the Lord of hoſts, (or, and of him that offereth,) viz. out of the habitations, both of the common people of Iſrael, or the laïty, and alſo of the prieſts; which laſt expoſition comes nigh to what the Greek hath, from or out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and from or out of thoſe who bring an offering to the Lord Almighty: although in the rendring the words immediately preceding, they be very wide from any yet mentioned, rendring until he be brought down, which [q] Some aſcribe to the reading it differently from what is now read in the Hebrew: but whether ſo, or that they did it by way of interpretation (as we before ſaid of Others) thinking it a proverbial ſpeech, and that to be the importance of it, which they ſet down, though not in a literal rendring, it will not concern us to enquire; our buſineſs chiefly being to ſee what meaning the Hebrew Text as now read (which we doubt not to be the true and incorrupted reading) will naturally bear, and to adjuſt with it our Engliſh Tranſlation, and ſometimes, as occaſion gives, Others alſo, from it, as now read, derived.

[q] Jun. Trem. Piſcat. [r] Genev. in de Dieu. [s] Id. L. de Dieu. [t] Maimon. in Iſſure biah, c. 12. §. 1. [u] See R. D. Kimchi and Abarbinel. [w] L. de Dieu, and Vatab. 4to and 8vo. [x] Ab. Walid. and R. Tanch. [y] Munſter. &c. [z] Vulg. Lat. and Kimchi in Rad. [a] Tig. [b] Calv. [c] Stokes, [d] على سبيل التاويل. [e] Chald. R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanch. [f] Caſtal. [g] Diodati, Dutch Notes. [h] Jun. Trem. Piſc. Grot. [i] Jun. Trem. [k] Druſ. [l] Piſca. [m] Lud. de Dieu.

Out of the tabernacles of Jacob.] The Chaldee Paraphraſe rendreth, Out of the cities of Jacob. From the ancient and frequent uſe of living in tents or tabernacles in thoſe countries, and the long cuſtom of their anceſtors of living in ſuch, was the word afterwards uſed for any habitations, cities, or houſes in which they dwelt: and ſometimes [r] for the congregation or company of the people themſelves that dwelt together in them. So that by cutting off theſe ſinners out of the tabernacles of Jacob, may be underſtood the extirpating them out of the land, the dwellings, or the [s] congregation of Iſrael. [t] Some thinking this ſpoken more particularly of the Prieſts or Levites, think by this expreſſion to be meant the caſting them out of the temple, or from the altar, ſo that they ſhould not be admitted or ſuffered any more to ſerve there. But this ſeems to be too narrow a reſtriction of this menace only to the prieſts, which (as appears out of the foregoing verſe) is denounced againſt all Judah and Iſrael. And though it appear out of the forecited books of Ezra and Nehemiah, that ſome of the prieſts were guilty in this kind by taking ſtrange wives, yet was the ſin more general, and ſo the puniſhment menaced ſeems extended to all of all ſorts that had ſo done, whether prieſts or lay-people. By [u] Some the word tabernacles is thought uſed to put them in mind of their unſettled condition.

13. And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, inſomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand.

And this have ye done again.] Again, שנית Shenith, ſecondly, or a ſecond time, or in the ſecond place, or [w] this ſecond thing; ſo that he ſeems proceeding in his reproof to tax them of a ſecond crime added to a former. The former, to which this now to be ſpoken of, is ſecond, is by [x] diverſe taken to be that in the foregoing chapter, and the beginning of this, taxed; their offering to God illegal ſacrifices, and in illegal manner, and ſhewing contempt of his altar, and want of due regard to his ſervice. [y] Others look on this as called ſecond, in reſpect to that ſpoken of, ver. 11. viz. their profaning the holineſs of the Lord by marrying the daughters of ſtrange Gods, idolatrous wives; to which, though the ſins after ſpoken of, have reſpect, and be of the ſame kind, yet it is another additional degree of it, an heightning and doubling of it: ſo that the word again or ſecondly may well be referred to it. And it will not much matter which of the two opinions be followed. [But the Greek, and ſuch as follow them here, (as the printed Arabick) render the word שנית Shenith much differently from both, viz. things which I hated, [z] taking, it ſeems, this word to be of the ſame ſignification with שנא Sane in ver. 16. which ſignifies hating, and is a different root.] The fault with which they are taxed is, that they covered the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping and crying out, &c. which by the generality of the Jewiſh and moſt of Chriſtian Expoſitors, is underſtood of the effect of their treacherous dealing with their lawful Iſraelitiſh wives, whom, by eitheir diſmiſſing them to take others, or by taking with them ſtrange women, to whom they ſhewed more reſpect, love, and kindneſs than to them, and with them dealt unkindly, and otherwiſe than than they ought, depriving them of what was due to them; they cauſed to pour forth abundance of tears before the altar of the Lord, as it were covering it with them, [a] from the ſight of God, or which God looked on [b] as if they fell on his altar, and to utter there their ſad lamentations and doleful complaints for the injuries done them, as deſiring help, redreſs, and juſtice from God: by ſeeing and hearing of which he was ſo far moved and provoked, that he would no more regard or receive with good will any offering that was there offered by the prieſts, [c] either for themſelves or others, who had committed ſuch things. Yet this expoſition, though by ſo many agreed on, Calvin rejects, thus rendring the words, And this ſecondly have ye done, by covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping and crying, becauſe there is no more any reſpect had to the offering, nor any good will or acceptable thing received at your hand: giving then the meaning to this purpoſe, that the prieſts by their ill behaviour in God's ſervice, ſo provoked him, as that he would no more reſpect any offerings offered by them, nor accept them with good will and delight: which diſpleaſure of God the people perceiving, inſtead of coming with praiſes and rejoicing into the courts of God, now came only full of grief, with tears and cries, as thinking all they did to no purpoſe for the pleaſing of God. But in this his way of interpretation, he ſeems not either to make the ſenſe of the words, or the connexion of them ſo clear, as to perſuade [d] thoſe, who otherwiſe have great reſpect for him, to follow him in it; but they rather chooſe to embrace the former expoſition. There is another interpretation given by an ancienter [e] Expoſitor, who underſtands theſe tears, &c. of tears ſhed by thoſe who are accuſed before, of ſuch ill doings as are ſpoken of, as if they in ſhew of ſorrow for their offences, did approach God's altar with many tears and lamentations, and cries, as deſirous of pardon, yet ſtill continued to do the ſame wicked things, and would ſtill retain their ſtrange wives; for which their falſe dealing, God refuſeth any more to reſpect or accept their offerings, though they cry never ſo much and ſo loud. This would be no ill meaning: but the firſt mentioned is more approved and followed, as beſt agreeing with what follows. [Nor is that way followed which Cyril mentions; as if by the tears, &c. were underſtood ſuch as were drawn from the covetous offerers, [f] loth to part with thoſe things which they were to offer, as ſorry for the loſs they were to be at; wherefore he that loveth a cheerful giver, could not with good will accept things with ſo ill will offered.] There is yet another way by a very learned [g] man (in the foregoing verſe mentioned) given, which making it an aggravation of the puniſhment in the foregoing verſe denounced; as if having there, according to his interpretation, threatned to cut off from them the prieſt that ſhould watch over them, give them anſwers out of the law, and offer gifts for them, he ſhould here add, And this ſecondly ſhall ye do, ye ſhall cover my altar with tears, weeping and cries: why? becauſe there ſhall be no more reſpect to any offering of yours, &c. But it will be ſafe to follow the firſt, and more generally received expoſition.

[n] R. Tanch. [o] R. D. Kimchi, Abarb. [p] Chr. à Caſtro. [q] Capell thinking they read עד יענה Ad yeunneh for ער ועונה Er veoneh. [r] Flac. Illyr. [s] Biſhop Hall. [t] Dutch Notes. [u] Oecolamp. [w] Piſcat. [x] Aben Ezra, R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum, and ſeveral of the Chriſtian Interpreters. [y] R. Solomon, Abarb. &c. [z] See Schindler in שנא.

14. Yet ye ſay, wherefore? becauſe the Lord hath been witneſs between thee and the wife of thy youth, againſt whom thou haſt dealt treacherouſly: yet is ſhe thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

Yet ye ſay, &c.] Yet ye [h] are ſo impudent as to ſtand up in defence of your ſins, and to ſay, Wherefore, &c. or as Others, if ye ſay, wherefore? i. e. wherefore is the Lord ſo angry, that he will no more accept any offering from our hands? the anſwer is; becauſe the Lord hath been witneſs of the contract, or matrimonial promiſes made according to his law in his name, viz. with invocations of it, and calling him to witneſs, (and therefore called the covenant of God, Prov. ii. 17.) between thee and the wife of thy youth, i. e. which thou tookeſt in thy youth, with whom thou now dealeſt treacherouſly, though ſhe were thy companion, made ſo according to the inſtitution of God, that thou ſhouldeſt [i] cleave unto her as one fleſh with thy ſelf.

And the wife of thy covenant.] By mutual covenant eſpouſed to thee; the conditions of which covenant God [k] being witneſs to it, looks on as neceſſarily binding on both parts, and requires the due performance of it from both: and therefore hearing her juſt complaint of the breaking of it on your parts, moved with juſt indignation, will not accept of you, or look on any offering from you ſuch treacherous covenant-breakers, as pleaſing to him. This ſeems a plain expoſition of the words, and in which will be included, or eaſily reduced to it, what is by Others ſaid; as what Kimchi ſaith, that by, becauſe the Lord hath been witneſs between thee, &c. is meant, that whatever they pretend, God ſeeth, and is witneſs, that they did not love their wives; their heart was not towards them, but they dealt treacherouſly with them, and ſo gave them juſt cauſe of complaining to the Lord: as likewiſe what Abarbinel ſaith, who makes the import of the queſtion, wherefore? which impudently ſtanding on their own juſtification they aſked, to be, wherefore do thoſe women weep and complain? as if they knew no cauſe they had: and then explains the anſwer much according to what was at firſt ſaid, that it was becauſe God was witneſs to thoſe rites and inſtruments of matrimonial contract and covenants made between them, which the women having kept unviolated on their parts, and behaved themſelves as faithful companions and covenanted wives to them, when they ſaw them violated by their huſbands taking other wives with them, did addreſs themſelves to the Lord their wit-witneſs, and complained of the wrong done to them: by which moved, he ſhews himſelf juſtly diſpleaſed for ſuch their treacherous dealing.

[a] Oecolamp. [b] R. Tanch. [c] Pelican. [d] Piſcat. Diodati, Dutch Notes. [e] Lyra. [f] Chap i. 13. [g] L. de Dieu. [h] Abarb. [i] Gen. ii. 24. Mat. xix. 5. [k] R. Tanch.

By God's being witneſs, [l] Some underſtand his precept or command for keeping covenants inviolable betwixt man and wife, according to the firſt inſtitution of marriage, Gen. ii. 24. By wife of youth, [m] Some underſtand a wife taken in her youth or flower of her age, which being now paſt, they ſet her at nought, and [n] either put her away, or took other ſtrange wives, whom they more loved, with her: and by companion and wife of covenant, a partaker of the ſame holy rites, (or religion) and in the ſame covenant of God. And it is by [o] divers obſerved that here are put, as ſeveral aggregations of their fault in thus injuring their wives, 1. the witneſs of God, 2. the wife of thy youth, 3. thy companion, and, 4. the wife of thy covenant. [Kimchi obſerves that by theſe expreſſions is denoted the dereliction of any Iſraelitiſh wife legally married, whether in youth or age, inaſmuch as the notion of companion and wife of covenant agrees to either.]

15. And did not he make one? yet had he the reſidue of the ſpirit: and wherefore one? that he might ſeek a godly ſeed: therefore take heed to your ſpirit, and let none deal treacherouſly againſt the wife of his youth.

And did not he make one? yet had he the reſidue [Marg. Or, excellency] of the ſpirit, and wherefore one? &c.] This verſe is confeſſedly difficult. It appears ſo by the ſeveral different expoſitions that are given of it. We ſhall in the firſt place take notice of that which ſeems moſt agreeable to our Tranſlation in the Text. And did not he, i. e. that one God who created all, ver. 10. make one? i. e. one man, and one woman, made out of the rib of that one man, one only pair; ſo that that one man had only one wife, though he had the reſidue of the ſpirit, [p] being the father of ſpirits, and ſo could have at his pleaſure created more ſpirits or ſouls, and infuſed them into more women, ſo that that one man might have had more wives if God had ſo pleaſed. But now he gave him only one, and made only one couple, and that for this end, that they might in chaſte wedlock and ſincere love, and undivided affection, propagate a godly ſeed or holy ſeed to God: whoſe example, therefore, ye ought to look on as a perpetual law ſet to you: and therefore in imitation of that firſt man, take heed you alſo every one to your ſpirit; that ſpirit by God infuſed into you, that ye impart and communicate it only to one, and that with ſincere affection, and let none of you deal treacherouſly againſt the wife of his youth, by deſpiſing or relinquiſhing her, or taking any other ſtrange wife with her. This ſeems an eaſy and very probable interpretation, and the rendring is agreeable to the words, without force or violence to any of them, or to the conſtruction. And it will be confirmed by our Saviour's way of arguing againſt divorce, (and conſequently Polygamy,) Mat. xix. 4, 5, 6. Have ye not read that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, &c. by which is well expounded this expreſſion here, did not he make one? that is, one couple, which by that relation, as he there adds, became one fleſh, and are no more two but one fleſh, one man, as (Gen. i. 27.) they both together are called, and therefore ſhould be of one mind and one ſpirit alſo, the unity of which they ought faithfully to preſerve, without dealing treacherouſly one with the other, to the making a diviſion betwixt them, or by taking in ſtrangers to corrupt that holy ſeed by God required, and introduce a ſpurious unſanctified generation, like that by ſuch means brought in, Gen. vi. 2, &c. But though this ſeem a plain and good expoſition, yet becauſe far different ones are by Others given, it will be convenient to take notice of ſome of them at leaſt, leſt we ſhould be thought to take this becauſe Others were not conſidered.

In the next place, therefore, we may take notice of that reading, which the ancient Latin Tranſlation gives, Nonne unus fecit, & reſiduum ſpiritûs ejus eſt, &c. which, according to the Doway Engliſh Verſion of it, is, did not one make, and the reſidue of the ſpirit is his? or, as it may ſound, and [it] is the reſidue of his ſpirit. They that follow this reading, wherein one is the nominative caſe, differ in their expoſitions; for if it be aſked, what did one make? Some underſtand one man, and one woman, Adam and Eve; which was the reſidue of his ſpirit: of whoſe ſpirit? whether of the ſpirit of God or the man? this Jerom ſhews to have been a doubt betwixt Interpreters even in his time. If of God; then they expound it, that God having reſidue of the ſame ſpirit, i. e. [q] like in kind, and of the ſame nature to that which he had infuſed into the man, infuſed it into the woman taken out of him, that ſo they might be of one mind, and joined in mutual affection. And to the like purpoſe [r] they that expound it, the remainder of the ſpirit of Adam, viz. that into the woman was inſpired the like ſpirit as into him. [s] Others, by that which he made, underſtand Eve, into which he inſpired the remainder of the ſpirit, i. e. the like ſpirit, or of the ſame kind, that he had inſpired into Adam; and then proceed in like manner as the other, as to the ſcope of the words: and then he adds, what doth one ſeek but the ſeed of God? i. e. for what end did God do ſo? ſo join them into whom he breath'd the like ſpirit, but for the propagation of a godly ſeed of men that might ſerve him? which by your taking ſtrange heatheniſh wives will not be preſerved, but neceſſarily adulterated. For caution, in which kind, he infers, keep ye then, (or therefore) your ſpirit, i. e. ſay ſome of of them, [t] your wives, which are the remainder of your ſpirit, as it were making [u] one ſoul with you, and wrong them not; or, [w] your affection, which from that relation ought to be in you towards them: or (as Others more generally) your ſouls and ſpirits, from committing any ſuch ſin by taking ſtrange wives to the wrong of your lawful wives, which from your youth you have had: or, [x] as you love your own ſoul and ſpirit, take heed of doing ſo. Thus they who follow that rendring. A learned [y] man, who doth not farther follow it, yet if the words be ſo rendred, Did not one make? thinks this would be the meaning, That the one, viz. God, with whom is the excellency of the ſpirit, yea ſo great abundance of it, that there is ſtill remainder of it with him, did make that which is in the end of the foregoing verſe ſaid, That the wife ſhould be a companion to the man, and in covenant joined with him. And what in that doth he look after? He ſeeks a ſeed of God, a divine or godly ſeed, of which he may be called the author and father. Therefore take heed to your ſpirit that you offend not againſt him, (with whom is abundance of the ſpirit, and who by that abundance moſt wiſely ordered matrimony,) by dealing treacherouſly with or againſt your lawful wives. This expoſition he ſets down, but doth not acquieſce in it, but gives another which he more approves of, which is thus; And not one, i. e. none doth this to whom there are any remainders of ſpirit: and how ſhould any one do it, ſeeking a ſeed of God? take heed therefore to your ſpirit, that none deal treacherouſly, &c. that the ſenſe may be, Thou dealeſt treacherouſly againſt thy wife, who is thy companion, and joined with thee in covenant. None doth this, [z] who hath any thing at all of the ſpirit of God remaining in him, and how ſhould any do it, who ſeeks a ſeed of God? If therefore ye ſeek that, take heed to your ſpirit that it deal not treacherouſly, &c. Another ſenſe he alſo mentions, viz. For he made not one alone, and abundance of the ſpirit is with him: and why, or to what purpoſe, ſhould he have made one ſeeking a ſeed of God? Take heed therefore, &c. The ſenſe is; God would that the woman ſhould be a companion to the man, and his confederate; for he made not only man, not a male alone, but a woman alſo, and that moſt wiſely, inaſmuch as he hath the remainder of the ſpirit; and to what purpoſe ſhould he do it, whereas he ſought a ſeed of God, which could not be born without wedlock? Therefore take heed, &c. But this, he ſaith, pleaſeth him not ſo well, as that before it, inaſmuch as the word שאר Shear, ſignifies not excellency (abundance as it notes excellency) but remainder only.

[l] See Ribera, Ch. à Caſtro, &c. [m] Grot. [n] See Hierom. [o] Chr. à Caſtro, Tirin. &c. [p] Buxtorf. Vindic. p. 568. [q] Ribera, Corn. à Lapide, Menoch. &c. [r] Chr. à Caſtro. [s] Sa, and ſee Chr. à Caſtro, and Cor. à Lapide.

Having ſeen this variety of expoſitions, (beſides what we ſhall hereafter ſee) among Chriſtian Interpreters, if we ſhall look into the Jews, we ſhall find yet more, they almoſt all differing one from another. The Chaldee Paraphraſt, the ancienteſt among them, thus paraphraſeth the words: "Was not Abraham "one alone, from whom was created (or pro-"created) the world, or a world?" (It may be ſuppoſed he reſpects the bleſſings promiſed to Abraham, that from him ſhould be a multitude of nations, and in his ſeed all the families of the earth ſhould be bleſſed, Gen. xii. 3. and xvii. 4, &c. and xxii. 17. or, that by the world he underſtands the people of Iſrael, God's peculiar in the world, Gen. xxxii. 8, 9.) "and what did that one ſeek; but that there "might remain to him an offspring from be-"fore God, or in the ſight of God: Take "heed therefore to your ſelves, and deal not "falſly with the wife of thy youth." R. Solomon Jarchi, though after him many ages, yet the eldeſt Commentator, gives an expoſition to this purpoſe, according to his own words, [a] and as by Abarbinel explained; "Did not God make one, i. e. one pair, "Adam and Eve, and not one man with two "women? and the reſidue of the ſpirit was "to him, or was his, i. e. to, or in, Adam "the firſt man: the reſt of the ſpirits of men "were in him, from him they all proceeded. "And if ſo, why doth one, who is in mar-"riage, ſeek to find occaſions againſt his wife, "which is coupled to him, and which is the "ſeed of God? why doth he proſecute her ſo "as to deſpiſe her?" This is his chief, or only expoſition, according to what is in the printed copies, and what is reported from him by Abarbinel. But in a manuſcript copy there is before this put another expoſition different from it, viz. to this ſenſe, "Did not the holy "God prepare a help for Adam (or man) and "join to him his wife at the beginning? and "the remainder of the ſpirit was to him; (or, "his ſpirit remained unto him) but now ano-"ther [b] ſpirit is come upon him to hate her, "and he hath choſen to him the daughter of "a ſtrange God: and why one? he ſeeketh, "(or what doth that one ſeek?) a daughter "of Iſrael, which is the ſeed of holineſs." This I muſt deſire the reader to examine by ſome other manuſcript copy, if he meet with any; and for that end I have put the Hebrew words, as they are in the copy which I had uſe of.

ולא הכין הק עזר לאדם וויוג לו את אשתו
ראשונה ושאר רוח לו ועתה עבר עליו רוח
אחרת לשנאותה ובחר לו בבת עז ומה האחר
מבקש את בת ישראל זו שהיא ורע קודש

Another expoſition he likewiſe mentions out of the ancient Rabbins, in which the words are made as it were, a dialogue betwixt the people and the Prophet; as if thoſe that had married ſtrange wives, coming together to the Prophet, ſaid, Did not Abraham do ſo, who took to him Hagar with his wife? And he anſwered, "But the reſidue of the ſpirit (or ex-"cellency of ſpirit) was with him; his mean-"ing

[t] Chr. à Caſtro. Menoch. [u] See Cyril. [w] Tirin. [x] Chr. à Caſtro, Verſ. Tig. and ſee Tarnov. [y] L. de Dieu. [z] See Chr. à Caſtro, Senſ. 4. [a] See Buxtorf. Vindic. p. 568. [b] See Numb. v. 14, 30. and chap. xiv. 24.

" ing was not as yours; he ſet not his eyes " upon her; he had another meaning. They " ſaid to him, and what did that one ſeek, " what was his meaning? he ſaith to them, " That he might have a ſeed of God." Another alſo in the manuſcript copy to this purpoſe, as if the people did object, " Did not One " make us? did not he that created Iſrael, " create the nations alſo? why doth he make " it unlawful for us to join in marriage with " them? are not alſo all the reſt of the ſpirits " his? the Prophet did anſwer, And what " doth that one require? a ſeed of God. Take " heed, therefore, unto your ſpirit, and let " not thy ſpirit deal falſly with the wife of " thy youth."

The laſt but one of theſe is plainly the ſame with what David Kimchi gives, as his father's opinion, (without mentioning either R. Solomon, or any other from whom he took it,) only a little more explained, viz. " That the " firſt are the words of the people to the Pro- " phet, Did not Abraham, our father, who " was one, do ſo as we do, who let alone his " wife, and married Hagar his maid, although " there was in him excellency of ſpirit, and " he was a Prophet?" Then the Prophet's anſwer in the next words, " What did that " one ſeek? a ſeed of God: as if he ſhould " ſay, When he married Hagar, he did it not " but to ſeek a ſeed of God, becauſe he had " no ſeed by Sarah his wife, [c] and withal he " did not deal falſly with his wife, becauſe by " her good will, and her command, he did it. " But do you take heed to your ſpirit, and let " not any of you deal treacherouſly with the " wife of his youth, to leave her and marry " the daughter of a ſtrange God." That which he gives as his own interpretation is, " Abraham, who was one, and the father to " all who come after him, in his faith, did " not ſo as ye do: for he followed not his " luſt, neither married any [d] that was lawful " to him, ([e] no not Sarah, no not of his [f] own " fleſh, or kindred;) but that he might leave " a ſeed of God, as he commanded to leave " ſeed, ſaying, Increaſe and multiply, Gen. i. " 28." And by the word שאר Shear, he ſays is underſtood excellency, not as in other expoſitions, reſidue of the ſpirit. [To this opinion, of making Abraham the one here ſpoken of, ſeveral [g] Chriſtians alſo incline: and amongſt them Grotius, who yet in the expounding the other words differs from them, by the words which they take to ſignify excellency of ſpirit, he taking to be ſignified, that they, the Iſraelites, were the reſidue of his ſpirit, i. e. all drew and derived their ſpirit from his: and then what is rendred, Take heed to your ſpirit, underſtands, reſtrain or refrain your anger.] The changings of perſons and numbers here in the Hebrew, (as, Take ye heed to your ſpirits, in the plural number and ſecond perſon, then the wife of thy youth in the ſingular, then let him not deal treacherouſly in the third perſon, without expreſſing who is meant, whereas it might ſeem more agreeable to what precedes to ſay, do not ye or thou, which ſome ſupply by putting in any, let not any, or let none deal, &c. [h] Others making the preceding word ſpirit the nominative caſe, that is, and let not your ſpirit deal treacherouſly, &c.) are ways of change ſo uſual in the dialect of the Scripture, that none that looks into the original thereof, can raiſe any ſcruples or difficulties from it.

Abarbinel having conſidered and recited Kimchi's expoſition, as likewiſe ſhewed how the opinion of thoſe, who underſtand that one of Adam, is, as he ſuppoſes, to be managed moſt agreeably to the ſcope of the words, (viz. that the firſt words be taken as an objection to the Prophet that reproved them for their taking ſtrange wives; " We are all the children " of the firſt man Adam, children of one fa- " ther, and then none can be accounted a " ſtrange woman; which is that which is ſaid, " Did not one, i. e. the holy God at firſt create " one man alone? and the reſidue of the ſpirit " was with him, i. e. the reſt of the ſpirits " came forth of his loins, viz. of that firſt " Adam, who was one: and then that the " other words be the Prophet's anſwer; to " this purpoſe: Will you make your condition " to be equal, or like that of the firſt man " Adam, when he was alone in the world? " for he did not ſeek ought but a ſeed of " God; children that ſhould ſerve God; not " following after his concupiſcence as ye do, " and therefore it is meet that ye Take heed to " your ſpirits, &c." Which expoſition, how clear it is, I will not examine:) yet ſeeing that neither Adam nor Abraham are mentioned in the Text, thinks the words are capable of another more ſimple expoſition, which he thus gives, And not one hath done it, viz. not one only among you hath committed this evil. So that you may ſay, Shall one man ſin, and wilt thou be wrath with all the congregation? (as Numb. xvi. 22.) One man alone among you hath not done this; ſo as that to the reſt, their ſpirit is with them, i. e. they keep entire their ſoul and ſpirit, which ſhall return unto God who gave it. And if it were but one alone among you, I would aſk him what he did ſeek by this marriage? whether he did ſeek that the children, which were born unto him ſhould be a ſeed of God? this is not poſſible as long as their mother is the daughter of a ſtrange God. And ſeeing the matter is ſo, that ye have all tranſgreſſed, not one only of you, and ſeeing that he that ſo tranſgreſſeth in this, knows of a truth, that his ſeed will not be the ſeed of God, it concerns you, that ye take heed to your ſpirit, (for there is nothing more precious to a man than his ſoul) and that you keep your ſpirit, that it break not forth after its luſts, and then it will not, (or let it not, viz. that ſpirit) deal treacherouſly with the wife of thy youth; Becauſe, &c.

This is a literal interpretation of his words: and this his opinion a learned [i] Chriſtian embraceth;

2

[c] See Kimchi on ver. 10. Vatab. Paræus, Stokes, &c. [d] So a MS. [e] Buxt. Bibl. [h] So R. Solomon, and Ab. Ezra. [f] As other Editions. [i] Arias Montanus. [g] See Calvin, Druſ.

braceth; but a modern [k] Jew who cites it, having conſidered it, prefers another of his own, wherein he takes by the one to be meant Iſrael, whom God choſe to be to himſelf one peculiar people among all nations, a people that ſhould dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations, (as Balaam ſpeaks of them, Numb. xxiii. 9.) and were therefore to preſerve themſelves a holy people, and to keep their genealogy and offspring entire, not mingled with other nations, nor making marriages with them, whereby the holy ſeed, the ſeed of God might be mingled with the daughter of a ſtrange God. So that the Prophet's reproof here will run thus, Did not God make Iſrael one nation in the earth, and to him was excellency of ſpirit, i. e. Did not God give to Iſrael, that one nation, an excellent ſpirit above all nations? and what is it that that one ſeeks, or ſhould ſeek? It is a ſeed of God, a ſeed that God hath bleſſed to take (or in taking) a wife of the daughters of Iſrael, who are the ſeed of God, children of the living God; and not the daughter of a ſtrange God, Therefore take heed to your ſpirit, leſt there be made a breach in that high degree and excellency which God hath imparted to you, in making you one holy people, ſeparate from all other people. And this expoſition he confirms, by looking back to the 10th and 11th verſes, Have we not all one Father, &c. which he will have to import, That God our God is one, and he is our Father, who created us to be to him a peculiar people, one people of one God, and if we take ſtrange wives of the nations of the earth, we ſhall deal treacherouſly every one againſt his brother, and profane the holy covenant of our fathers, our ſeed, which is the holineſs of the Lord, which he loveth.

There are yet other expoſitions ancienter than ſome of the forementioned, which yet becauſe the [l] author, from whom I take them, is not yet printed, as the others are, and in ſome conſideration to the expoſitions themſelves, I put in the laſt place. He tells us that the meaning of the words is ſaid (by more perhaps, becauſe he names no particular, though the words in which he gives it, are expreſly Aben Ezra's;) to be, "That there "is not any among you but hath done this, "that the conſtruction of the words, with a "ſupply of what is to be underſtood, may "run thus, There is not one of you that hath "done, כדת Cedat, according to the law, "and his ſpirit (or whoſe ſpirit) remains to "him, ſo as that it hath not been mingled "with the daughter of a ſtrange God." This expoſition, though he approve not of, yet it may be obſervable in regard that it agrees with the uſual reading of the LXX, or Greek Verſion, which hath οὐ δὲ καλὸν ἐποίησε, οὐ ὑπόλειμμα πνεύματος αὐτῷ, which being read without an interrogation, though it is uſually read with one, would ſound, And he hath not done that which is good, and there is remainder of his ſpirit: where by he (ſeeing it is to be aſked who is meant by it) it will be the readieſt and plaineſt way to underſtand any one, that by οὐκ ἐποίησε, he hath not done, may be meant the ſame as by οὐκ ἔστι ποιῶν, there is not that doth, i. e. not one that doth good, Rom. iii. 12. and ſo then there is not any one (אחד Echad, one) that hath done good, and there is a remainder of his ſpirit; (or reading the laſt words only, with an interrogation, and is there any remainder of his ſpirit? i. e. ſo as that there is a remainder of his ſpirit, or his ſpirit is entire. This being allowed, it will be all one with that Jewiſh expoſition mentioned, the one's ſupply of Cedat, according to the law well anſwering to the others καλὸν good: and if ſo, all that I ſhall at preſent ſay is, That then this interpretation is not novel, and withal, that perhaps there is no reaſon why οὐ καλὸν, not good, ſhould be changed into οὐκ ἄλλον, as a late learned [m] man would have it, that ſo he might have occaſion of finding fault with the ordinary reading in the Hebrew.

This expoſition R. Tanchum having cited, rejects, for this reaſon, becauſe that fault was not ſo general, as that all may be ſaid to be guilty of it, but only ſome particular perſons, who are reckoned up in Eſdras, chap. x. 18, &c. and Neh. xiii. 28. except they may therefore be all accounted guilty, becauſe they did not diſapprove it. Another expoſition, therefore, he gives of his own, viz. And there is not one who hath done this, and hath his ſpirit remaining to him, i. e. but ſhall certainly periſh in his ſin. Then he aſks, as by way of deriſion, and what is the end or purpoſe of any one in doing this? Doth he thereby ſeek a holy ſeed that ſhall ſet it ſelf to obey God, therefore it behoveth you to look to your ſelves, as you would ſave [n] your ſpirits, that you abſtain, (or to keep your ſouls, by abſtinence from ſo doing) and that he deal not treacherouſly; the third perſon being put for the ſecond, as in many places it is done, i. e. and do not thou, or you, deal treacherouſly with the wife, of thy, or your youth, he ſpeaking to them in the ſecond perſon.

There being this variety of expoſitions irreconcileable between themſelves, I knew not how better to make way for the reader to examine them, and judge of them, and ſo to enquire after the truth, than by thus giving him the chief of them at large: and for more facilitating yet the matter, it may not be amiſs to give the bare ſignification of the words, which are ſo diverſly expounded, as they ſtand in the original Text, which are ולא אחד Velo Echad, and not one, עשה Aſah, hath done, or made, ושאר רוח לו Uſear ruah lo, and the remainder (or, as ſome will, excellency) of ſpirit to him, ומה האחד Umah Haechad, and why, or what? one, מבקש Mebak-keſh, ſeeking, or ſeeketh, זרע אלהים Zera Elohim, a ſeed of God. From the different putting together and conſtruction of theſe words, and diſtinguiſhing them, and reading them either with with or without an interrogation, ariſe theſe ſo different ſenſes; which when the reader ſhall have well conſidered, he ſhall perhaps find the firſt, which is according to our Engliſh Tranſlation in the Text, or the laſt of the Jewiſh, which is R. Tanchum's, moſt eaſily appliable to the words, and according to either of them, and indeed of all, they will be a forcible argument againſt either their putting away their legal Iſraelitiſh wives, or taking with them other ſtrange wives; yea more generally againſt either divorce, or polygamy, all treacherous or unfaithful dealing againſt the covenant of the marriage bed; which is alſo farther expreſſed in the following verſe.

[k] Aben Dana in Miclal Yophi, on the place. [l] R. Tanchum. [m] Lud. Capell. [n] ان تحرسوا نفوسكم بالامتناع من ذلك, That ye keep your ſouls in (or, by) abſtaining from that.

16. For the Lord, the God of Iſrael ſaith that he hateth putting away: for one covereth violence with his garment, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, therefore take heed to your ſpirit, that ye deal not treacherouſly.

For the Lord God of Iſrael ſaith, that he hateth putting away, (or as in the Margin) to put away, &c.] In this verſe alſo are ſeveral interpretations, and it hath its difficulties, of which our Tranſlators give notice, by their putting in the Margin, as a different rendring, of which the firſt words are capable, If he hate her, put her away. And this marginal reading is agreeable to what moſt ancient Interpreters, to omit modern, have it: ſo the Greek and ancient Latin, and Arabick, If thou hate her, put her away; and ſo the ancienteſt among the Jews, the Chaldee Paraphraſt. Yet neither is the other, which Ours follow in the Text, novel: they are both mentioned in the [o] Talmud, and ſince that, by ſuch Expoſitors as have followed, ſo as you may perceive they doubted which to prefer, though ſome inclining more to the one, others to the other. Kimchi following that which the Chaldee hath, makes no mention of the other; Aben Ezra following the other, as the truer in his opinion, mentions not that. R. [p] Solomon only tells us of both without preferring either: and ſo doth Abarbinel and R. Tanchum. So that it will be neceſſary to take ſome notice of both, that ſo the reader may at laſt uſe his own judgment which he will follow; which will be the better done when he ſhall have likewiſe conſidered the following words, which are in our Tranſlation rendred, for one covereth violence with his garment. Concerning the expoſition of which words there is likewiſe no little difference betwixt Interpreters, both concerning the conſtruction of them, viz. who, or what one it is, that is ſaid to cover, and what to be covered, or which with which is covered, the violence with the garment, or the garment with violence; and concerning the meaning of this expreſſion. 1. As to the conſtruction, that which our Tranſlators follow in the Text, makes the perſon ſpoken of, (viz. he that doth that wrong to his wife whom he putteth away,) to be him that covers; and violence to be that which he covers, and his garment to be that with which he covers it. For one (ſay they) covereth, i. e. He whoſoever he be that doth this, as Biſhop Hall well paraphraſeth it, covereth violence with his garment: ſo taking the prepoſition עַל Al, which otherwiſe ſignifieth, upon, or above, here to ſignify the ſame that uſually the prepoſition בְּ Be doth in conſtruction of verbs; i. e. with. So do, beſides ſome other modern [q] Interpreters, ſome ancient Jews alſo take it to do, as the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and R. Tanchum; although the firſt of theſe doth not render the former words as Ours do, but, If thou hate her put her away, yet in theſe he ſo takes the particle (as we ſaid) to ſignify with, rendring, and cover not ſin with thy garment. That he changeth the perſon from he to thou, his to thy, is by the liberty of a Paraphraſt, that gives the meaning according as he takes the intent to be, not of a literal Interpreter. But whereas he puts in [r] not, which is not in the Text, this Grotius ſolves, by ſaying that he read it interrogatively, And ſhall, or may any ſo doing cover his iniquity with his garment? which may likewiſe be applied to what R. Tanchum ſaith, who ſays that the firſt words being interpreted, when a man hateth his wife let him put her away, (i. e. it is permitted to him to put her away) viz. by a legal bill of divorce, that ſo another Iſraelite may marry her in a legal way, and he do not deceive her, by taking another ſtrange wife unto him; the conſtruction of theſe muſt be, and let him not cover violence with his garment: and ſo a Latin [s] Verſion of good account renders it with an interrogation, Shall he therefore cover violence with his garment? That which from what hath been ſaid we gain to our purpoſe is, That our Tranſlators in rendring, covereth violence with his garment, go not alone, but have others of good authority, concurring with them in their opinion, that the words ought ſo to be rendred. Yet Others do differently render them, ſo as to make violence the thing covering, and their garment the thing covered: ſo the ancient Latin, But iniquity ſhall cover his garment, and ſo before him the Greek, as we may well ſuppoſe, though now in the ordinary copies it is read, impiety ſhall cover over thy thoughts, ἐνθυμήματά σου. But a learned [t] man well ſuppoſes it anciently was read and ought to be read ἐνδύματά σου, thy garments, which is confirmed by the printed Arabick, which he that was the author of following the Greek, appears ſo in his time to have read it, by his rendring it ثيابك Thiyabeca, thy garments. And with theſe agree ſeveral others, whom we need not name, becauſe they go in their ſteps. A late learned [u] man conſidering the ordinary uſe of the prepoſition עַל Al, which we before ſpoke of, affirms it to be the righter way of rendring, and ſo renders it, And injury hath covered his garment. Much the ſame conſtruction of the prepoſition [w] he obſerves, that renders, For he covers with violence his garment, it it ſounding, he draws violence as a covering over his garment. But now all theſe that go either of theſe ways, hitherto mentioned, take the verb כסה Ciſſah to be the preter tenſe, whether rendred hath covered, or for making the ſenſe as they would have it, ſhall cover, or the like. But a learned [x] Jew ſaith, that according to that rendring of the former words he hateth putting away, it may and muſt be taken for the infinitive mood, which hath the force of a noun, and may be rendred to cover, or the covering; as alſo the foregoing verb שלח Shallach, as it is by them taken, who render it to put away, or as Ours putting away, or ſhall put her away, or let him put her away. As alſo [y] Druſius in another rendring, whereas he hates putting away, he covers violence with his garment, whereas Others who render it, put thou her away take it for the imperative mood; as alſo [z] Such who render, becauſe God hates that word of yours, put her away: and then it being ſo taken, the whole will run thus, For the Lord God of Iſrael ſaith that he hateth to put (or putting) away; and that he hateth to cover, (or covering of) violence with his (or ones) garment. And this perhaps will be the cleareſt way of connecting the words of the former and latter parts of the ſentence together. But this now being ſaid of the conſtruction of the words, it remains to be enquired what is the meaning of the expreſſion, according to any of theſe rendrings.

[o] Tract. Gittin in the end. [p] See the MS. for the printed copy is imperfect. [q] Tig. Jun. Trem. Piſcat. [r] As likewiſe the Syriack doth. [s] Tigurin. [t] Schindler in לבש. [u] L. de Dieu. [w] Druſ.

And firſt as to the Jews, by [a] Some of them the violence here mentioned, is the refuſing to put away his wife by a legal way of divorce, whom yet in his heart and covertly he hateth, whereas by legally diſmiſſing her, that ſo ſhe might be married to another, who would love her, he might have done her more right; his now retaining her, and for colouring his hatred keeping her to himſelf, as a garment that he would not put off from him, yet taking a ſtranger with her, is a great injury to her; or as [b] Others of them, is a manifeſt injury covering his garment, openly conſpicuous, for all his pretence of doing her right in retaining her. Their words in expreſſing their meaning, as a learned [c] man obſerves of ſome of them, are ſhort and obſcure: that which they aim at is manifeſtly this, That if they hated their wives, they ought to put them away by legal divorce; their not doing ſo, but retaining them, though in their hearts hated by them, and taking in with them other ſtrange wives, whom they more loved, was a great injury, a violence done to them and to God's law, whether it be interpreted a violence covered with their garment, i. e. with a pretence; or violence covering their garment and manifeſt to all. Then, according to that interpretation, which as we have ſeen, the Chaldee and Others follow, viz. If he hate her, let him put her away, theſe will thus follow; For will he (or can he) cover his iniquity in taking another ſtrange wife, by his retaining ſtill his former Iſraelitiſh wife? i. e. let him not deal falſly with her, and think it enough thus to cover his inward hatred of her, by making a ſhew of reſpect by retaining her, whereas his taking a ſtrange wife with her, argues that in his heart he hates her; or according to [d] Others, it is a violence or injury that will not be hid, but appear to all, as any thing that is above his garment. Is it at all meet, ſaith R. Solomon, that thou ſpread thy garment over her to retain her for a wife, when violence or injury covereth this garment, (viz. under that pretence of retaining her, thou doſt a continual wrong to her) hating her in thy heart, and always vexing and afflicting her? for ſo, I ſuppoſe, R. Solomon's words muſt be read interrogatively, or elſe they will make no clear ſenſe. [In whoſe words Figuero ſeems to miſtake הוגעת Hogaata inſtead of הוגנת Hoganat, rendring, Thou haſt laboured, &c. for Is it meet?]

In a manuſcript copy of the ſame R. Solomon we have another expoſition, which in the ordinary printed copies we find not, viz. That he that putteth away his wife, draweth a covering of violence over his other garments to himſelf; agreeable to that expreſſion, Hab. ii. 17. The violence of Lebanon ſhall cover thee: the end will be, that the violence done to her ſhall be revenged on him; his meaning ſeems to be, he makes himſelf guilty of violence, which God will revenge. But this is to be applied to that other rendring of the preceding words, viz. he hateth putting away, which (as we have ſeen) others of the Jews alſo follow, who yet as concerning theſe words, ſcarce give us enough, whereby to diſcern what they thought of the meaning of them, as particularly R. Aben Ezra, who hath no more than only theſe words, He hateth him that putteth away his wife that is clean, and he hateth him that covereth, or God ſeeth his violence, or injuriouſneſs, which is in ſecret. By which words all that we can ſee of his meaning is, that by covering violence with his garment, is meant harbouring in ſecret hatred of his wife, which God ſeeth under what pretence ſoever covered, and hateth it. R. Tanchum alſo having declared for the meaning of the words, what we have ſeen, as appliable to the other rendring of the former words, doth not add any other as particularly appliable to this rendring, except out of his explaining them thus, "That "he hateth putting away, or divorce, in this "kind, that a daughter of Iſrael ſhould be "put away for the daughter of a ſtranger's "ſake, i. e. that he might take in her room a "ſtrange heatheniſh wife;" we may pick out this meaning, that the putting away an Iſraelitiſh wife for that reaſon is called a covering violence with his garment. All therefore that I can ſay is that the Jewiſh Expoſitors in giving the meaning of theſe words, are (as we ſaid) ſomewhat perplex and obſcure. Let us ſee if the Chriſtians ſpeak more plainly.

They that render as Ours in the Text, or to that purpoſe, for the Lord ſaith he hateth put- putting away; for one (or and, or but he) covereth violence with his garment, muſt make this the meaning, that what he doth is hateful, though he hath for a covering or pretence, that the [e] law permitted to put away his wife, whom he did not like. For though God, to prevent greater miſchief of cruelty and polygamy, did permit, or rather leave unpuniſhed by the politick magiſtrate the doing ſo, [f] yet for all that, it was ſtill hateful in his eyes, really violence and iniquity, however, he might cover it with that cloak of permiſſion in the law. And ſo if it be read (as in our Margin) if he hate her, put her away, to the ſame meaning follows, [g] yet the uſe of this permiſſion is only a covering of violence with a politick coverture; and not a thing pleaſing to God. Or [h] as Others, and let him cover violence with his garment, i. e. with a bill of divorce, which is likened to a garment, becauſe as a garment defends the body from the injury of weather, and covers the ſhame; ſo that ſerved to defend her, that was put away, from that cruelty, or hard uſage which ſhe ſhould find, if retained; and from that contumely and diſgrace, which ſhe would otherwiſe be obnoxious too: and therefore [i] Some look on the putting their wives away, without that covering of a bill of divorce, as the violence or injury here meant.

[x] R. Tanchum, and ſee Ab. Ezra. [y] See R. Solomon, Michlal Yophi, and Stokes. [z] See Tarn. [a] R. D. Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [b] R. Solomon, Abarb. [c] Pet. Fig. [d] Abarb.

From what hath been ſaid will eaſily reſult what Calvin takes to be the import of theſe words, That God doth not in them ſhew any approbation of divorce, yet that ſeeing he had connived at it in his law, [k] it would be a leſs fault than the taking in ſtrange illegal idolatrous wives with their lawful Iſraelitiſh wives. And the ſame meaning [l] they ſeem to aim at, who by violence underſtand the Iſraelitiſh wife retained for a cover, though hated and abuſed, and having another taken in above her; though Calvin thinks that a very forced interpretation. To theſe may be added, becauſe they follow the ſame order in conſtruction of the words, ſuch who yet give a far different meaning of the phraſe, by taking the prepoſition עַל Al in its moſt uſual ſignification for upon or above, and ſo render the words as a [m] proverbial ſpeech, and he hideth violence upon his garment, i. e. though he pretend the liberty of the law in divorcing his wife, yet his doing ſo is a manifeſt violence or injury, no more to be hid than what a man bears or holds on the outſide of his garment. But this will be much the ſame meaning which they give, who clean differently order the words in the conſtruction, which, as we have ſeen, the Vulgar Latin and Others do, rendring, but violence ſhall cover his garment, i. e. [n] for all his bill of divorce, it is ſtill open violence and an injury, which will not, or cannot be concealed: or, taking with [o] Others violence or iniquity for the puniſhment of violence; for all that, the puniſhment of his violence or injury done to his wife, ſhall be made conſpicuous to all, [p] both the fault and the puniſhment ſhall cover (or be overſpread over) his garment, and his body too (as Jerome by the garment underſtands the body, which is as the garment of the ſoul;) and make him infamous to all. [q] Others, the iniquity of his wife (made known by his divorcing her) ſhall cover his garment, defend him from that infamy which his wife did aſperſe him with.

This expoſition ſeems not much to the purpoſe; as neither that of [r] theirs, who would have it, If he hate her, put her away, ſaith the Lord, who covereth violence as with his garment, by permitting to put her away with a bill of divorce. Lud. de Dieu, having conſidered theſe words, and aſſerted this conſtruction of them, and violence (or wrong) covereth (or hath covered) his garment, giveth as his opinion for the meaning of them, "That God "here reproveth them, for that, whereas they "with their garment ought to have covered "their wives; violence or wrong did cover "their garment, while they did treacherouſly "hate their wives, and put away thoſe whom "they hated, that they might marry ſtrange "wives: or elſe, that by theſe words, vio-"lence covereth his garment, is denoted the "filthineſs of adultery, wherewith he was "wholly covered, according as the garment "ſpotted by the fleſh is taken, Jude, ver. 23." To which his meaning he maketh way, by obſerving, That in matters concerning wedlock, the name of garment is uſed for fidelity and conjugal protection, as Ezek. xvi. 8. I ſpread my ſkirt over thee, &c. and Ruth iii. 9. Spread thy ſkirt over thy handmaid: and ſo concerning the uſe of the marriage bed, is uſed the expreſſion, To diſcover the ſkirt of the garment, Deut. xxii. 30.

In all this variety preſented to the readers view, he may judge what meaning will beſt ſatisfy him, and ſeem to give the fulleſt ſenſe of the words. For my part I muſt profeſs myſelf not fully ſatisfied with any of them, and am of opinion, that by this figurative and perhaps proverbial expreſſion, (which then when uttered was well underſtood, though not ſo at this diſtance of time) was ſomthing meant, which none of our Expoſitors give: concerning which though I have nothing confidently to affirm, yet I ſhall make bold to propoſe a conjecture, which I ſuppoſe will, as concerning the uſe of the words, be eaſily made probable. The conjecture is this, that by the words, taking that conſtruction of them which we have ſeen Abraham Aben Ezra, and Rabbi Tanchum to afford, and which ſeems to be among all that are given the plaineſt, viz. He hateth putting away, and he hateth to cover (or rather to put, or that one ſhould put as a covering, or ſuperinduce) violence over his garment; is meant the ſuperinducing or marrying an illegitimate wife, over (or with, or above) his legitimate firſt wife. So that by violence may be ſignified a ſecond wife, with wrong to the former taken in in with her, and by his garment, his former wife lawfully taken. For making which uſe of the words probable, to begin firſt with the laſt word, we may obſerve, beſides what hath been already mentioned of the uſe, if not of the very word, yet of another of like ſignification in matter of wedlock, that which (according to the ſimpleſt expoſition of the words) is by Abimelech ſaid, Gen. xx. 16. That Abraham was to Sarah his wife a covering of the eyes, i. e. ſaith the Chaldee, a covering of honour. And by like reaſon that the huſband may be ſaid to be to the wife a covering of the eyes, to keep her from looking after others, or others from looking after her, may the wife be ſaid, to be to the huſband a covering of the eyes, to keep him from looking after any woman but her. If this be not enough to prove ſuch accommodation to man and wife of words ſignifying covering or garment, in the language of thoſe times; yet if one Eaſtern language may ſerve for illuſtrating and giving teſtimony to the expreſſions of another of ſo nigh affinity to it, that they may be accounted almoſt one, and one but a dialect of the other, as the Arabick is to the Hebrew, ſo eſteemed by the Jewiſh Writers, and therefore uſually had recourſe to for finding out the uſe and ſignification of Hebrew words, where any doubt or difficulty occurs; then here will the Arabick tongue help us, and teach us to pronounce boldly of ſuch words, as ſignify a garment or covering, that they are applied to ſignify man or wife reſpectively. So ſaith a learned [s] Grammarian, that حلة Hollah, which ſignifies an upper garment or robe, is uſed to denote a wife; and ſo likewiſe لباس Lebas (which anſwers to the Hebrew word לבוש Lebuſh here uſed) to denote either the huſband or wife reſpectively; and he cites a teſtimony out of the [t] Alcoran it ſelf, (wherein he that compiled it endeavours very often to imitate Scripture expreſſions:) as if God ſhould ſay to the men, هن لباس لكم وانتم لباس لهن Honna lebas lacom, waantom lebas lahonna, they, i. e. your wives, are a garment to you, and you are a garment to them. And why might not this figurative ſignification alſo be allowed anciently, to this and like words in the Hebrew tongue, from which the Arabick might borrow it? And if by his garment here be underſtood his wife, 'twill eaſily be thought, that by violence or wrong, may be denoted another ſtrange wife, with open injury taken in with, or above her. The name proper for ſuch a ſuperinducted wife, is in the ſame Arabick language of nigh ſignification to it, which is ضرة Darrah, which, as other nouns from the ſame root, ſignifies hurt, affliction, oppreſſion, force, and the like; as [u] alſo in the Hebrew tongue, in which ſuch a wife is called צרה Tſarah, one that afflicteth, is enemy to, or doth injure, and oppreſs the other. Whence in the law is forbidden to take one wife to another, לצרר Litzror, to vex her, Levit. xviii. 18. Now that the noun ſignifying violence or wrong, or oppreſſion, ſhould in the abſtract be taken for one that doth violence or wrong, is no marvel, it being very uſual to put nouns ſignifying goodneſs or badneſs, or the like, in the abſtract, for ſuch as are eminent in thoſe kinds good or bad, profitable or hurtful: and ſo violence for a wife, that will certainly do wrong or violence; or by taking of which, violence or wrong is neceſſarily done to the former wife; with more reaſon, I ſuppoſe (though much the like) than [w] Some by violence take to be meant the former wife violently retained, and not diſmiſſed, that ſhe might be married by another. And if garment may be uſed for a wife, then the verb ſignifying to cover, or put on a garment, (as כסה Ciſſah here) may by the ſame reaſon be well uſed for the taking a wife. And theſe things being allowed (as I know not why they ſhould not be) as to the ſignification of the words, then will the meaning which we have given be plain, as to the reading of the foregoing words, which is the Text of our Tranſlation, For the Lord ſaith he hateth putting away, and for a man to take a ſtrange (a wrongful injurious) wife, above (or with) his lawful former wife. For the particle על Al is [x] noted to ſignify as well עם im, i. e. with, as over or above, the ſenſe will be all one: and as to the marginal reading it will well agree with that alſo thus, If he hate her, let him put her away: he may have ſome colour from the permiſſion of the law ſo to do, but he doth not that, but retaining her, though he hates her, takes over her, or together with her, another ſtrange idolatrous injurious wife, which is a greater wrong and violence offered to her: or, but by him another wrongful wife is taken with or above his former legal wife; to fit it to that conſtruction, violence covereth, &c.

[e] Deut. xxiv. 1, &c. [f] See Jun. Trem. Piſc. Biſhop Hall. [g] Dutch Notes, Diodati. [h] Brennius. [i] Vatab. [k] And ſee Druſ. in marg. [l] Oecolamp. [m] Pet. à Fig. [n] Menoch. Chr. à Caſtro's Paraph. [o] Riber. [p] Tirin. [q] See Chr. à Caſtro. [r] Ibid.

Another meaning might be, according to the ſame notion, given agreeable to that conſtruction, let him put her away, and cover the wrong towards, or againſt, his wife, called his garment, viz. by a bill of divorce; ſo that על Al may ſignify towards or againſt.

The ſame meaning will be eaſily applied to ſuch other rendrings, as are given and warranted by the ſcope of the place, as coming fully home to it, which, from the 10th verſe to theſe incluſively, is a reproof of the Jews of that time, for their injury done to their lawful Iſraëlitiſh wives, by either illegally putting them away, that they might take the daughters of a ſtrange God; or elſe if they did retain them, yet ſecretly hating them, and taking in above them ſuch ſtrange idolatrous wives, whom, with manifeſt injury to their former, they did ſhew more affection to, and make, as it were, miſtreſſes over them. And this the [y] Jews think to be all that is meant, accounting both divorce, and taking more Iſraelitiſh wives, not to be (for all that is ſaid) any way prohibited, or diſpleaſing to God. But to us learning from [z] Chriſt the true import port of the Scriptures, it will be more abſolutely a prohibition from God, both of the one and the other, viz. both divorce and polygamy; which having ſhewed how hateful it is to him, he concludes with a repetition of his injunction or caveat given in the foregoing verſe, Therefore take heed to your ſpirit, that you deal not treacherouſly: take heed to your ſelves as you love your ſouls, and the preſervation of your ſpirits, that ye offend not by indulging to your unbridled luſts in either of theſe kinds, and prevaricate againſt the ſacred tye of wedlock, by God inſtituted for the joining one to one, in an indiſſoluble knot of affection in legal manner. And this till ſome plainer way be ſhewn we embrace, as the fulleſt and propereſt meaning of this verſe, it being agreeable both to the conſtruction and ſignification of the words, and manifeſt ſcope of the place.

2

[s] Ebn Athir in his Dictionary. [t] Cap. 2. [u] Morſhed in צרר. [w] Oecolamp. [x] Abu Walid. [y] See R. D. Kimchi and R. Tanchum. [z] Mat. v. 30, 31. and xix. 3, &c. Luke xvi.

17. ¶ Ye have wearied the Lord with your words: yet ye ſay, Wherein have we wearied him? when ye ſay, Every one that doth evil, is good in the ſight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them; or where is the God of judgment?

Ye have wearied the Lord with your words, &c.] A Jewiſh [a] Doctor notes this to be another ſection, and the things therein ſpoken to belong to the time to come, and ſo [b] ſome Others make it the beginning of a new chapter, as not having dependence on the preceding words, but referring rather to what follows in the next chapter, in which is anſwer to the doubts they raiſe, and a vindication of God's juſtice, which they ſeem here to call in queſtion: yet may there well enough be a connexion made between them and the preceding words too, if we look on them as a defence of their obſtinacy in not hearkning to God, or the Prophet in his name, reproving them for ſuch faults as have been hitherto mentioned; for that [c] there ſeemed to them no ſuch care taken by God of what men did, when they ſaw thoſe that did otherwiſe than he commanded, yea more plainly wicked and diſobedient, to proſper as much or more than Others, that made more conſcience of their ways, and therefore there was no neceſſity to them of amending their ways, or ceaſing to do what they did. Or as Abarbinel makes the tranſition from the former words to theſe, that, after he had reproved them for their evil deeds, both prieſts and people, he here proceeds to reprove them for their words and thoughts, which were even worſe and more wicked than their deeds; in that the wicked ones of that generation did return in anſwer to the reproofs of the Prophet, There is neither judgment nor judge, God hath left the earth. His reproof of them, therefore, for this he gives, ſaying, Ye have wearied the Lord with your words. Here is by ſeveral of the [d] Jews noted (as well as by Others) that that is ſpoken figuratively according to the language of men, or in ſuch as is paſſable among men, but cannot be properly ſaid of God, who cannot be wearied. It denotes that their words were ſuch as would weary any man in authority, and provoke him to anger, and ſo did provoke God to deal ſo with them, as that by the effects they might judge him to be weary of hearing from them ſuch words, and could no longer endure them: which is that which the Greek expreſſes by rendring it, who have provoked the Lord to wrath. Rabbi Tanchum thus expounds it, Ye have cauſed a reſtraint of his (care and) providence, or cauſed him to withhold his providence from ordering your affairs, by doing ſuch things as he cannot bear, according to what is ſaid, I cannot away with it, &c. Iſaiah i. 13. and again, I am weary to bear them, ver. 14. Abarbinel thinks there is no neceſſity of making any [e] metaphor or figure in this ſpeech, but that it may be underſtood, not that God was wearied by their words, but that they in ſaying what they did, did aſcribe to him wearineſs and impotency, and defect in his power and providence: for if he did not know what wicked men did, or did not regard it, or would not, or could not hinder or puniſh it, this would argue him weary, impotent, and deficient. Which of the two ways of expounding this word we take, will not be much material, nor make any difference in the ſenſe or coherence with the following words. But there is no reaſon to depart from the firſt and more followed way.

The Prophet thus reproving them as faulty in this kind, they are repreſented, as impudently denying themſelves ſo to be, or to have ſpoken any words, that ſhould be ſo offenſive, Yet ye ſay, wherein have we wearied him? (or according to the other way, whereby have we attributed to him wearineſs or impotency?) Or if we interpret the words as Others to include a ſuppoſition of what he knowing their evil thoughts, ſaw they would be apt to ſay, If ye ſhall ſay, Wherein, &c. He gives them an anſwer in which he declares what it was they ſaid, or thought to the affronting of God, and highly provoking him, when ye ſay, Every one that doth evil is good in the ſight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them, or, where is the God of judgment? It is eaſily ſuppoſed, though not expreſt, that they, ſeeing the proſperous condition of ſome openly wicked men, not only of the idolatrous nations, as [f] Some would have it, but among themſelves alſo, they being [g] preferred in dignity above Others, and flouriſhing more than themſelves, who in their own conceits, were much better deſerving; took thence occaſion of uttering theſe blaſphemous words, [h] contrary to what the Prophets affirmed concerning God's juſtice and judgments on ſinners, thus retorting, and contradicting them, "Is it not certainly, as you "ſay, but on the contrary, ſuch as do evil "are good in the ſight of the Lord, and he de- "lighteth in them, it ſo appears by their proſ- "pering; and where then is the judgment of "that

[a] Ab. Ezra. [b] See Lyra, and Ch. à Caſtro. [c] See Tarnov. [d] Ab. Ezra, and R. D. Kimchi. [e] Munſt. [f] Hierom. [g] Grot. [h] R. Tanchum.

" that juſt Judge, that you tell us of? which " yet R. Tanchum thinks not to imply that " they utterly denied the being of ſuch a " Judge, (for then it would not have been " added, And where is, &c.) but ſpoke by " way of contradiction to what they heard " from the Prophets, as a proof of God's " ſlow proceeding in his ordering and diſ- " poſing of things. And in giving this ſenſe, " he takes the particle אֹ O, or, to be, as if " it were, the copulative וְ Ve, and." By Others, he ſaith, the meaning is thus given, as if they did ſay, thus or thus; ſometimes, every one that doth evil is good in the ſight of God, and he delighteth in them; at other times, where is the God of judgment? and by Others, If it be not ſo as we ſay, where then is the God of judgment? In theſe ways of expoſition by him given, is comprehended moſt of what is ſaid by other Expoſitors ancient and modern, they following the ſame way in conſtruction of the words. But a late learned [i] man thinketh it more convenient and agreeable to the nice rules of Grammar, to render the former words, when ye ſay every one that [k] maketh evil, (or, the evil) to be good, i. e. with him that ſaith of evil, or of him that is evil, that it, or he, is good in the ſight of God; God is delighted; or, he that ſo ſaith is acceptable to God. But this doth not make much difference, as to the ſcope or intent of what blaſphemy they are charged with: viz. that they ſhould make God a favourer of wicked perſons. He differs from Others likewiſe in his opinion, concerning the rendring of that particle אֹ O, which is rendred or (and R. Tanchum would have rendred And, as he ſaith it elſewhere ſignifies, viz. [l] Levit. iv. 24, 28.) and would have it to be taken for a particle of exclamation, O; and ſo that and the following words to be the words of the Prophet, admiring the patience of God, who ſo patiently bears with ſo great impiety, and doth not puniſh this their blaſphemy. But though in his Notes on Iſaiah xxvii. 4. he make it probable that this particle may ſometimes ſo ſignify, yet whether it ought here ſo to be uſed (eſpecially, making, as he doth, the following words, where is the God of judgment? to be the Prophet's words) may ſeem queſtionable, inaſmuch as then the Prophet would ſeem guilty in the ſame kind that thoſe whom he reproves were; viz. in queſtioning God's juſtice, as ſhewing favour to wicked men, they did it becauſe God ſeemed in their eyes to favour others more wicked than themſelves, more than he did them; he ſhould do but much the ſame, becauſe God ſo much favoured, or bare with them. But if any will have it ſo rendred, I ſhould rather think the following words ſhould ſtill be the words of thoſe wicked men, as Others take them to be; and then the ſenſe will be but the ſame, as if it were rendred or, or and, only with a little more vehemency; and either a denying or complaining of the ſlowneſs of God's juſtice: they thus (probably, as we ſaid, in defence of their own obſtinacy in perſevering in thoſe evil ways, for which the Prophets reproved them,) [m] arguing, " What need we fear, though we " go on in ſuch courſes, as you reprove us " for? do we not ſee thoſe, that do that, " which you call evil, proſper? ſo that we " may well conclude, either that their doings " are well liked of by God; or elſe, if it be " not ſo, where is the God of judgment? ſure " either there is no ſuch, (as Abarbinel notes " this way of ſpeaking to denote the not being " of a thing;) or elſe he is very negligent and " ſlow in his executing judgment: elſe why " doth he ſuffer ſo long ſuch things, and not " puniſh them?" (ſo thoſe ſcoffers, 2 Peter iii. 4. where is the promiſe of his coming?) ſo intimating, that from the ill ordering of things in diſtributing of juſtice, [n] they thought either that God ſaw the evil things that were done, and was not diſpleaſed with them: or elſe did not ſee them, nor regarded them, and ſo was not a God of judgment. Such impious ſayings of theirs he ſhews that God was highly offended at, for their undertaking to be judges of the ſeaſons and circumſtances, which he hath reſerved the [o] judgment of to his own knowledge and power, and to ſubject the depths of his judgments to their own ſhallow reaſon; and with this reproof of them is this chapter concluded. But out of his great condeſcenſion in the next chapter, he returns ſuch an anſwer to theſe their cauſeleſs objections, as may teach them to diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that ſerveth God and him that ſerveth him not; as he ſpeaks in the 18th verſe of that chapter.

Grotius interprets what is rendred, ye have wearied, &c. by ye will weary, &c. and when ye ſay, by in that ye will ſay, &c. viz. ſo as to be a foretelling of their behaviour in that interval, that they ſhould now be without Prophets and miracles for many years, between the time that this was ſpoken, and the coming of that meſſenger and Lord, in the next chapter, ver. 1. ſpoken of. And it is but reaſon, and agreeable to the words, that we ſhould take in, together with what the Jews had done, ſince their return into their country, and with what at preſent they did, all that they ſhould do in that time, God foreſaw what they would ſay or do, as already ſaid or done. But to paſs by all that was in that time done, and to look on the words, as reporting by way of prophecy what is now by them done in their preſent diſperſion, after the real completion of theſe prophecies, as ſome [p] Jews do, (according to what R. Tanchum thinks convenient, both here and chap. iii. 14.) is wholly to elude this prophecy; as then ſpoken, and to make void all that we believe, and all that the hiſtory of the times teſtifies of the completion of it, by the coming of Chriſt, and the deſtruction of the Jews in the following words threatned, and to perſuade us to look after that, which they vainly do, as if Chriſt were not yet come, but we were to look for another, to ſhut our eyes againſt what hath been, and to look for what ſhall never be, to take off the Prophets words from the times that they concerned, and apply them to ſuch as began not till all that he ſpake was manifeſtly fulfilled, ſo making by a perverſe method the end to be the beginning. Though they be now guilty of the ſame ſin that the men of that generation then were, yet are not they the men then particularly ſpoken of and deſigned.

[i] Lud. de Dieu. [k] Compare Iſaiah v. 20. [l] See Abu Walid in אֹ. [m] Tarnov. [n] Abarb. [o] Grot. [p] R. Tanch.

CHAP. III.

VERSE 1. Behold I will ſend my meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come to his temple: even the meſſenger of the covenant whom ye delight in: behold, he ſhall come, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

BEHOLD I will ſend my meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare the way before me, &c.] How theſe words depend on thoſe foregoing, with which the former chapter is concluded, hath been already intimated, viz. that here is an anſwer given to that blaſphemous queſtion of thoſe perverſe ones of that time, who from what they ſaw of the proſperity and flouriſhing condition of ſuch whom they looked on as deſerving other uſage, took thence occaſion of queſtioning God's juſtice; God aſſuring, that there ſhould come a time, wherein they ſhould perceive that he was no favourer of wicked men, or their practiſes; a time, wherein he would by his executing his juſt judgment on them, ſhew that he took due notice all along of what was done by them, though he might ſeem for a while to connive at it; and that time ſhould be at the coming of a righteous King, whom he ſhould raiſe up to ſet things in order, viz. the King Meſſiah: as I chooſe to utter in the words of a Jewiſh [a] Expoſitor, that ſo it may appear, even by confeſſion of his enemies, That the words are a moſt illuſtrious prophecy of Chriſt, by which this laſt of Prophets before Chriſt's coming, aſſured them of, and warned them to expect his coming: for which to prepare them, they ſhould have no more Prophets ſent them, till a Meſſenger, which ſhould immediately before his coming, appear to prepare his way before him. How this Prophecy was in its due time fulfilled, the hiſtory of the goſpel clearly and fully ſhews: ſo that there is nothing in the cavils of the Jews, or any other that acknowledge not the truth thereof, that can raiſe to us any doubt, as to the ſcope and true meaning of the whole; though in the explaining of the particular words may be ſome difference; which as far as may ſeem convenient, we ſhall take notice of, in going them over as they lie in order.

Behold [ſaith God] I will ſend.] Others tranſlate, I do ſend, as more agreeable to the letter; and ſo alſo is it recited in the New Teſtament; as, Mat. xi. 10. Mark i. 2. Luke vii. 27. Becauſe the thing, though not done, or in preſent doing, when theſe words were ſpoken, yet was aſſuredly to be done; and was therefore ſpoken of in the preſent tenſe. But Ours, in regard that it was after a time to be fulfilled, expreſs it not unfitly in the future, I will ſend, as agreeable to the ſenſe, and not diſagreeable to the letter, which will well enough bear either; ſeeing the participle, as is here שולח Sholeach, ſending (Behold I ſending, i. e. am ſending, or will ſend) is frequently uſed to denote the preſent tenſe, but [b] ſometimes the future alſo.

מלאכי Malachi.] Which ſignifies either my angel, or my meſſenger, the word ſignifying both an angel and a meſſenger, an angel becauſe a meſſenger, agreeable to the root of the word, of which ſee chap. i. 1. and ii. 7. from which our Prophet had his name Malachi: it is here rightly rendred my meſſenger.

My meſſenger.] Who is deſigned by this title we Chriſtians cannot doubt, it being in thoſe forecited places in the goſpel, expreſly attributed to John the Baptiſt: and he in two of them, viz. Matthew and Luke, is plainly ſaid by Chriſt himſelf to be him of whom this was written. But the unbelieving Jews denying Chriſt, whoſe meſſenger this was to be, are at a loſs likewiſe concerning this meſſenger: and by diſagreeing among themſelves ſo far as they do, and by the abſurdity of what they affirm, ſhew that they are either all ignorant of the truth, or will none of them confeſs it, as by a brief view of them we may ſee. R. Solomon Jarchi interprets it (if Abarbinel give us the meaning aright) of the [c] angel of death, who ſhall take the wicked out of this life to be ſent into hell torments. In the copies of him that we have, are no ſuch words expreſſed, but only My meſſenger, to take out of the way, or cut off the wicked. מלאכי לבער את הרשעים, and ſo accordingly interprets the angel of the covenant, an angel that ſhall revenge the [breach of the] covenant. Which expoſition of his ſo underſtood, the ſame Abarbinel thinks, though true in the general (that however the wicked here may proſper, yet after death vengeance ſhall certainly be taken on them) yet not to agree to this place, where is a prophecy of a ſignal particular day, and not that which is continually and neceſſarily ſeen, and always was, and will be ſo, without any new remark to be uſhered in with a Behold, as of a new notorious thing: as is likewiſe intimated to be pointed out here in what follows, But who may abide the day of his coming, &c. And he ſhall purify the ſons of Levi, &c. which are not things properly and peculiarly denoting the ſtate of ſouls after death.

Aben Ezra ſaith that it is probable, that by this meſſenger is meant Meſſiah the ſon of Joſeph. But it is ſo far from being probable ſo to be, that it is moſt certain it is not ſo. For what is that Meſſiah the ſon of Joſeph, but a mere figment of their own brain, whom they ſuppoſe to be of the tribe of Ephraim, on whom they may faſten thoſe prophecies, which foretel of the ſufferings of Chriſt, that ſo they may take them off from Meſſiah the ſon of David, to whom they will have none but glorious and triumphant things to pertain? as if they could not belong to one perſon, who through [d] ſufferings ſhould enter into his glory. And this they do without any ground or warrant from Scripture, only that they may deny our Chriſt to be the true and only Meſſiah, by the Prophets ſpoken of: ſo that to us, who believe the goſpel, this ſignifies nothing, nor hath in it any thing that may make it probable, ſo far as in this place to be embraced by others of their own profeſſion. R. D. Kimchi thinks that by this meſſenger is meant an angel from heaven; "If, ſaith he, ye aſk concerning the "judgment of the wicked in this world, "there ſhall come a time that you ſhall ſee, "and then he will draw near to you for judg- "ment to conſume the wicked that are among "you: and that ſhall be the day when I will "ſend my angel, and he ſhall prepare (or clear) "the way before me, and he ſhall be an angel "from heaven, as it is written, Behold, I "ſend my angel before thee to keep thee in the "way, &c. Exod. xxiii. 20. and he ſhall clear "the way before me: this ſhall be in the ga- "thering (or reſtoring) the captivity, ſo as "that they ſhall not find in their way any ad- "verſary, or evil occurrent." This expoſition of his appears, not to have pleaſed Abarbinel, by his taking no notice of it, when yet of his expoſition of the other words he doth; and by that he himſelf gives another far different from that or the others that have been mentioned: which is, "That by this meſſenger is meant "the Prophet himſelf that here utters theſe "words from God, whoſe name is the ſame "word here uſed, viz. מלאכי Malachi, and "being interpreted ſignifies, my angel, or my "meſſenger:" which cannot but ſeem ſtrange to any, that the Prophet ſpeaking of things to come, ſhould be thought to propheſy of himſelf. But, to put the beſt colour he can upon his opinion, he would perſuade men, that Interpreters are out in interpreting theſe words wholly of the time to come, but that they are to be underſtood partly of what was at preſent, partly of what was to come, partly of what was paſt: of what was preſent, Behold I ſend Malachi my Prophet; of what was to come, The Lord whom ye ſeek ſhall ſuddenly come, viz. the Shecinah, or majeſtatick glorious preſence; of what was paſt, And the meſſenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in (viz. the King of Perſia) hath already come: as if, to ſtop their murmurings by reaſon of the proſperity of the wicked, he had now ſent the Prophet Malachi to tell them what puniſhment is determined for thoſe wicked hereafter; (as in the following part of the chapter he will ſhew) and ſo to clear the way before him by ſolving their queſtion, Where is the God of judgment? and ſeeing they murmured, becauſe the Shecinah, or glorious preſence did not appear in the temple they had now built; (in which were wanting the Shecinah, and glory, and fire from heaven, and anſwer by Urim and Thummim, which were in the former temple:) and objected that God's providence was removed from them, and all things were ill ordered; therefore to aſſure them, that the Shecinah ſhould aſſuredly come again into the temple that ſhould hereafter be built, he ſaith, And the Lord whom ye ſeek ſhall ſuddenly come into his temple, there ſhall his glory and majeſtatick preſence dwell, even that Lord which they now ſought in their murmurings. And for a proof of this, and that this promiſe ſhould certainly be performed, he inſtanceth in what they had already ſeen in what concerned the King of Perſia, who was the Lord's angel, or meſſenger, and Meſſiah or anointed, for deſtroying of Babylon, and bringing back the diſperſed of the Jews to Jeruſalem, according to what Eſay propheſied of him, and made with them a covenant of peace: of whom therefore he ſaith, And the meſſenger of the covenant whom ye delight in, i. e. to honour and love him, do you not ſee, that he came according as was promiſed to you? ſo ſhall the Lord, whom ye ſeek, come ſuddenly and unawares, in the time of redemption and gathering of the captivity, &c.

[a] R. Tanchum. [b] Buxtorf. and other Grammars. [c] See Moſes Alſheich.

This is his meaning, as far as I can make it out in his Commentary on this place; and I ſuppoſe I have faithfully given it, and the giving of it is a ſufficient confutation of it: ſo doth he diſtract the conſtruction of the words, ſo blend and intermingle them with ſtrange notions; that as he rejects the opinions of others of his own profeſſion, ſo I ſuppoſe none of them will embrace this of his. All that we can gather from this, or any yet named, is, that they, not willing to ſee or acknowledge the truth, which the Chriſtians inſtructed by the goſpel embrace, do ſtrive to go as far from it as they can; mean while taking ſuch different ways, and diſagreeing among themſelves, as that it is manifeſt they had no one probable thing to inſiſt on.

There is yet another opinion among them, (which Abarbinel glanceth on for a reſerve, as a poſſible one, if the other of his own be not thought ſufficient, although he doth not ſo apply it as others do) and that perhaps much ancienter than any of theſe we have yet ſeen; and ſuch as by a right interpretation of the words, though not according to their meaning, might be reconciled to the truth. And that is, "[e] That by this meſſenger is meant he who, "chap. iv. 5. is called Eliah, whom ſome of "them would have to be Eliah the Tiſhbite "in perſon: Others, not neceſſarily ſo, but "ſome great Prophet like him in degree, and "therefore called by his name." So the often cited R. Tanchum reports their opinion on that place, chap. iv. where will be occaſion to ſpeak again of it. That this opinion among them was ancient we learn, not only out of their own records, but out of the goſpel alſo, Mat. xvii. 10. where we hear the Diſciples aſking Chriſt, Why then ſay the Scribes that Eliah muſt firſt come? their opinion then was, that before Chriſt Elias ought to come, as a meſſenger and forerunner: and Chriſt doth not ſay they were out in expecting ſuch a one, as was to be looked on as Elias; but in this that they they did not acknowledge him that was under that name expected to be already come, saying, Elias was truly first to come: but that indeed he was already come, and they knew him not, &c. By which answer his Disciples understood, that he spake unto them of John the Baptist, of whom also he had before told them, and the whole people, that he was he of whom it is written, Behold I send my messenger before thy face, &c. Mat. xi. 10. and the Elias which was for to come. To those Jews, therefore, who are of the last opinion mentioned, we have from those words of our Saviour a ready answer, and to any objection that they shall raise from it, against their believing this prophecy to be fulfilled, and the Messiah to be come. Whereas [f] Some of them, making it an argument in that kind, say, that this prophecy is not fulfilled, because Elias is not in person come, and therefore neither the Messias; we refer them for answer to those of their own sect, who confess that neither these, nor those other words of Malachi, nor any other prophecy, require that Elias should come in person, but only some great Prophet or prophetical man in degree like to Elias. And then to these, if they say that not any such hath yet appeared, we say, Yes, there hath, and that John the Baptist was he, for he came before the Lord in the spirit and power of Elias, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord, Luke i. 17. He was by all that then lived and beheld his works, counted and holden for a Prophet, Mat. xiv, 5. and xxi. 26. yea, he was more than a Prophet, than whom there was not a greater risen among them that were born of women, Mat. xi. 9, 11. so great, that they doubted whether he were not the Messiah himself.

[d] Luke xxiv. 26. [e] See Note on Micah ii. 13.

What was required from this messenger, and from him that was promised under the name of Elias, viz. that he should prepare the way for the Lord, he did fully make good by preaching repentance, Mat. iii. 2. by baptizing unto repentance, ver. 11. by bearing witness to Christ, and pointing him out to the people, that they might believe on him, John i. 29, &c. if there be any thing in that ancient [g] tradition of theirs, that Eliah was to prepare the Messiah to his office; that may be said to have been fulfilled by John's baptizing Christ before he began to preach, at which baptizing the Holy Ghost descended on him visibly from heaven. But this is besides the expression of the Scripture, and so not to the present words. John then being such as to his person, and so having performed that office, for which it is said here that he should be sent, what can it be but mere obstinacy to deny him to be the Lord's messenger here prophesied of? and what can they expect in any, which was not in him found?

From the time of this prophecy till the time of its completion by the Lord's sending him, was their opinion true; that such a one, who for his excellency and the spirit with which he was to be endowed, might be called Eliah, was to come as a messenger and a forerunner of the Messiah, to prepare his way before him: but since these things have been all fulfilled, still by virtue of the same prophecy, to expect another, denying him, is great perverseness. According to their own rule, [h] that prophecies and promises of God are at their manifestation, to be discerned and acknowledged as fulfilled, they ought so to discern and acknowledge this, and could not but so do, did they not willingly shut their eyes, because they will not accept of Christ. God be thanked, who hath opened our eyes by the gospel, so as to acknowledge this messenger, who by what is therein declared, is evidently approved to be John Baptist. He it is, without doubt, of whom he here saith, my messenger. So our Translation renders it, others rendring my angel. The word is indeed that which is used to signify an angel, but as well likewise any other messenger or ambassador; (from a root that signifies to send:) and that signification of messenger is by our Translators well chosen to put in this place, as taking away or preventing those needless questions, which from rendring it an angel, might be raised: as, How John was an angel? or, Why called so? which is [i] reported anciently to have given occasion, to some, of an erroneous opinion, that he was not only so by office, but by nature also.

The word פנה Pinnah, which Ours and Others (agreeably also to what is in the gospels) render prepare, is from a root Panah, that hath also the signification of looking on, and is therefore by the Greek in this place, according to that, rendred ἐπιβλέψεται, shall look on; and so by the printed Arabick, which therein follows them. Which certainly cannot be so agreeable to the meaning, except we extend it so far as to understand by it, to look to it, so as that it be as it should be, which then will be the same with preparing. But the word in that form that it is here, is not used for to look and consider, or the like; but to clear and make clean, to prepare by removing what is amiss or offensive: so likewise used Isaiah xl. 3. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight a high way: which words are likewise applied to the same John Baptist's office here spoken of, Mat. iii. 3. and Mark i. 3. and Luke iii. 4. and he shewed to make good what is thereby required, by calling to repentance, and by preaching the baptism of repentance, for putting away those sins which might hinder them from receiving Christ, and so were obstacles in his way. And in that place it is rendred by the Greek also prepare, and so probably they might here do.

Having observed these words to be cited by the Evangelists, we cannot but take notice that in them they are cited something differently from what is read here: for whereas here he saith, my messenger, and before me, or my face, in the first person, as speaking of himself; there it is still said before thy face, and and thy way before thee, as ſpeaking to, and of another. Which hath cauſed ſome queſtion to be made, which of the perſons of the Trinity here ſpeaks, whether God the Father, or Chriſt. But though it be true what [k] Some here obſerve, that ſuch works of the Trinity, as are external and common to all the perſons, and not proper to one, may indifferently be attributed to either; yet the plaineſt way of expounding theſe words here ſeems to be, to look upon them, as ſpoken here (as well as in the Evangeliſts) by God the Father concerning Chriſt; here of him, there expreſly to him. And then the ſaying here, my meſſenger, before me; and there, thy way, before thee, making the ſame way to be called God's way here, and [l] Chriſt's there, affords us an evident proof, that Chriſt is one God with the Father, [m] and that in Chriſt God came, and was manifeſt in the fleſh.

[f] Trypho in Justin. Martyr, p. 208. Edit. Comel. 1593. [g] In the same place. [h] Maimon. in Yad, the last chapter. [i] See Ribera.

For the proving the ſame, viz. That Chriſt is one with God the Father, Some [n] would take from what is here ſaid, before my face, an argument, thence proving that Chriſt is called The face of God: but [o] Others obſerve, that according to the uſe of the Hebrew Tongue, before my face, is no more than, before me. And therefore our Tranſlators ſo rendring it, ſhew, that they thought not in the word my face to be included any argument for proving the Divinity of Chriſt, on which any great ſtreſs ought to be laid: and they that think it, ought to ſhew [p] how then the words, as here uttered by the Prophet, and as cited in the goſpels, may be reconciled. For if by my face be here meant that Chriſt is the face of of God, who then ſhall be there underſtood by thy face? who ſhall be called the face of Chriſt? It follows,

And the Lord whom ye ſeek ſhall ſuddenly come to his temple, &c.] Who by this Lord is meant is agreed on, on all hands by Chriſtian Interpreters: viz. that it is Chriſt, whom God hath made both Lord and Chriſt, Acts ii. 36. and who is Lord over all, ibid. x. 36. [q] by whom all things were made, by whom all things are ſuſtained and governed; who is (as the root of the word imports) the baſis and foundation, not of any private family, tribe or kingdom, but of all; by whom are all things, and we by him, 1 Cor. viii. 6. and whoſe we are alſo by right of redemption; and ſo he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, Rev. xvii. 14. and xix. 16. deſervedly intitled The Lord.

Among the Jews there are ſome who underſtand it more generally of God; ſo R. Solomon, The God of judgment, R. Aben Ezra, The God of glory; and ſo Abarbinel, The glorious Name, i. e. the glorious God, whoſe words may be by a Chriſtian well interpreted alſo of Chriſt, though not ſo by them meant. But others of them more plainly agreeing ſo far with us, expreſly ſay, he is the King Meſſiah, ſo Kimchi; yea [r] بلا شك Bela ſhaccin, that without doubt it is meant of the Meſſiah: and ſo ſay we, though as to his perſon, and the right of his title to that appellation of Lord, they will not agree with us. This Lord is deſcribed by that epithet, whom ye ſeek, which may be referred to what is before ſaid, where is the God of judgment? as an anſwer to that queſtion, and is therefore by [s] Some looked on, as if it were ſpoken in ill part, as much as to ſay, whom ye ſcoffingly ſeek, ſaying, Where is he? Why doth he not ſhew himſelf? Although it may be (as by many learned men it is) taken; as ſpoken of a ſerious expectation, and ſeeking of the promiſed Meſſiah, by many, if not the generality of the people, whom all along from of old they longed and waited for, according as that ſaying of Jacob, I have waited for thy ſalvation, O Lord, Gen. xlix. 18. and what we read of Simeon, Luke ii. 25. that he waited for the conſolation of Iſrael, and ver. 38. that Anna ſpake of him (being brought into the temple) to all them that looked for redemption in Jeruſalem, manifeſtly ſhews that there [t] was ſuch a ſeeking, a waiting and longing for the promiſed Shilo among them by ſuch as ſeriouſly wiſhed for it, as well as others did in ſcoff aſk after him, or murmur at his delay.

Of him that was ſo ſought, it is ſaid, as to the circumſtance of time, that he ſhould ſuddenly come, i. e. ſuddenly after that his meſſenger had come and prepared the way before, as Chriſt did after John Baptiſt's preaching: or ſuddenly, i. e. unawares, when men ſhould not think on, or be aware of him, as Kimchi takes the word here to ſignify; the time being not preciſely in the Prophets determined, according to what is ſaid in Daniel, The words are cloſed up and ſealed, till the time of the end, chap. xii. 9. Whence perhaps it is that the Jews reckon the Meſſiah among the things that come [u] unawares, or when men think not of them: and in this ſenſe, as it is here ſaid of his firſt coming, ſo it is ſaid of his ſecond coming, which perhaps may be comprehended under this here ſpoken of, that except they diligently watch for it, it ſhall come upon them unawares, Luke xxi. 36. ſuddenly, Mark xiii. 36. in ſuch an hour as they think not, Mat. xxiv. 44. So doubtleſs ſhall his laſt coming at the day of judgment be; which is that alone which the unbelieving Jews, having overſlipt the former, here mentioned, without taking notice of it, can now (whatever they vainly promiſe to themſelves, as if this Lord were not at all yet come) farther expect; as farther appears by the circumſtance of the place, to which it is here ſaid, He ſhall come, that is, his temple. However, by his temple, Some [w] have anciently underſtood Chriſt's human nature, or body, of which he ſpake, John ii. 21. or his church; or all faithful believers, who are called likewiſe the temple of God, 1 Cor. iii. 16. or the like; yet no doubt but here is meant that temple at Jeruſalem, built then lately (when theſe words were ſpoken) after their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, which whatever alterations were made in it, was ſtill looked on as one, till the time that it was deſtroyed by the Romans; and by the Jews called the ſecond temple in reſpect to that former built by Solomon, and deſtroyed by the Chaldeans. To this temple it is here ſaid that the Lord (here ſpoken of) ſhould come; and ſo did Chriſt, whom we ſay to be that Lord: and of his coming to it, and his appearances there at ſeveral times, we read: He was there firſt preſented by his mother, Luke ii. 22. there again when he was twelve years old, found ſitting among the Doctors, ver. 46. where, in his anſwer to his mother, who told him that they had ſought him ſorrowing, he may ſeem to allude even to this prophecy, How is it that ye ſought me? wiſt ye not that I muſt be ἐν τοῖς τοῦ Πατρός μου, in my Father's [x] houſe? Was it not foretold that he ſhould come to his temple? Was not that the proper place for him to be in, and for them to look after him in? Several other times we read of his going to it, preaching in it, conducted to it, and received with [y] Hoſannahs, and Bleſſed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord: and in it exerciſing his authority, as Lord of it, in purging it, and vindicating the dignity of it, and driving out thence thoſe that profaned it. Any of theſe his appearances there, is ſufficient to prove, in, and by him to have been made good, that which we take to be the main drift of this expreſſion in this prophecy: viz. that the Lord (Chriſt or Meſſiah) here ſpoken of, was to come while the temple (that temple then built) was ſtanding. Which is likewiſe evidently foretold by the Prophet Haggai, chap. ii. 7. that into it ſhould come the deſire of all nations, and it ſhould be filled with glory, yea, that thereby the glory of that latter houſe ſhould be greater than that of the former, ver. 9. though it were then in their eyes as nothing in compariſon of it, ver. 3.

[k] Ribera. [l] See Dr. Hammond on Mat. xi. [m] 1 Tim. iii. 16. [n] Galatin. Janſen. [o] See Chr. à Caſtro. [p] See Ribera, and Chr. à Caſtro. [q] John i. 3. [r] R. Tanchum on chap. iv. 5. [s] Jun. Trem. Tarn. [t] Grot. [u] Buxt. Lex. mag. in מהר. [w] See Ribera, Chr. à Caſtro, Pareus.

[z] By virtue of theſe ſignal prophecies it is without queſtion, that thoſe ancient Jews who lived before Chriſt's coming, did expect that he ſhould come while that temple was ſtanding. And it is evident that old Simeon, to whom it was revealed by the Holy Ghoſt, that he ſhould not ſee death till he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt, [a] who came by the Spirit into the temple, when Chriſt was thither firſt brought, and taking him in his arms bleſſed God, and deſired of him then to depart in peace, becauſe he had ſeen his ſalvation; did ſo underſtand it; and that the Lord was now, according to this prophecy, come to his temple: he deſired to ſee no more for the completion of it. And ſo holy Anna alſo, who coming in that inſtant into the temple, gave thanks likewiſe unto the Lord, and ſpake of him to all that looked for redemption in Jeruſalem. And what elſe is proclaimed by all thoſe multitudes, who at his going to the temple, and at his being in it, cried, Hoſanna to the ſon of David, Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, Mat. xxi. 9, 15. but the ſame, viz. that the Lord was now come to his temple? and ſo it is witneſſed that according to this Prophecy, and that of Haggai, he was by the Jews of that time expected to come to that temple then in being. And ſo to us do they together afford an unanſwerable argument againſt the later Jews, all that have lived ſince that time, that that temple was ſtanding, and deny the Meſſiah to be yet come, thus; Meſſiah was to come while the temple was ſtanding, and therefore ſeeing the temple hath ſo long ſince been deſtroyed, it is manifeſt that he is long ſince come, and in vain is now by them expected. For what is it elſe but blaſphemouſly to accuſe God ſpeaking by his Prophets of falſhood? ſo poor a ſhift is it, which is all they have to flee to, to ſay that there is yet a third temple to be expected, under which theſe prophecies are to be fulfill'd; as that it cannot any way ſhake our faith, but ought more to confirm it, while we ſee that they have for ſo many hundreds of years, above a thouſand, expected what they without any ground or warrant from Scripture look for. It cannot without wilful blindneſs and obſtinacy be denied, that the temple here mentioned was that ſecond temple, and more plainly when Haggai looking on, and deſcribing that temple then built, ſaith expreſly, this houſe; by this houſe, to underſtand a houſe after this (as Abarbinel doth) is ſuch a perverting of words and meaning, as we cannot without loſs of our own reaſon admit of. Yet this is the only ſalvo that they have, or can have. And this their great Doctor [b] Maimonides ſeems to make uſe of, when finding no temple for their yet vainly expected Meſſias to come to, ſaith, "That the King Meſſiah ſhall hereafter come, "and reſtore the kingdom of the houſe of "David to its old former eſtate, and ſhall "build a [c] ſanctuary or temple, &c. and that "in the ſame place where formerly it ſtood." And in that regard perhaps they will have it called his temple (as here it is) and ſo ſhift off another argument againſt the Jews, who deny Chriſt's divinity, which is by Chriſtian [d] Interpreters hence uſually taken, viz. that becauſe the temple is called his temple, it is thereby made manifeſt, that he who ſhould come to it as a man, was not only ſo, but God alſo; it being proper to God only to have temples, or houſes of worſhip erected, and appropriated to him: and ſo we know that at Jeruſalem to have been dedicated to the only true God. Here therefore it being called Chriſt's temple, it ſhews that he is true God, one with the Father. This argument, though pious and concluſive to Chriſtians, yet a learned [e] man would not have to be much inſiſted on, as to the ſignification of the word היכל Heical, inaſmuch as it doth not only ſignify a temple, or houſe of worſhip, but alſo a palace; and ſo he thinks the Jews may put it off by ſaying it ſignifies only, only, the Meſſiah ſhall come to his palace. But I ſuppoſe they would not fly to that, I do not find any of them that do.

[x] See Grot. &c. on that place out of Nic. Fuller. [y] Mat. xxi. 9. Luke xix. 47. John ii. 14. and xiv. and viii. 2. and oft elſewhere. [z] See Grotius on the place, and lib. 5. de Veritate Rel. Chriſt. [a] Luke ii. 26, &c. [b] In Yad. lib. ult. cap. 2. [c] המקדש. [d] Vat. Riber. Chr. a Caſtro. [e] Pet. a Figueiro.

The ordinary Expoſitors that we have of them (as R. Solomon Jarchi, Aben Ezra, David Kimchi, as likewiſe R. Tanchum) do not at all meddle with interpreting this word: only Abarbinel (who, as we ſaid, interprets the Lord, not of the Meſſiah, but of the Shecinah or glorious preſence of God, or God himſelf) explains it, to his היכל Heical, which is בבית מקדשו Bebeith mikdaſho, in his ſanctuary: by which he will have to be meant הבית העתיד Habbeith haatid, that houſe, or temple, which is to come, or ſhall hereafter be built: or, as in his Commentary on Haggai he calls it, בית שלישי Beith ſheliſhi, the third houſe. By it then here I doubt not but they all underſtand a temple properly ſo called. But however they may otherwiſe ſeek to evade the force of this argument (and this I mean of them who confeſs by the Lord here to be meant the Meſſias;) whether by ſaying, it may be called his, becauſe by him built (according to Maimonides) or becauſe he ſhould frequent it, or otherwiſe; certainly the other argument for proof of his being come, becauſe the temple, to which he was to come, is ſo long ſince deſtroyed, is unanſwerable, and their talking of a third temple, without any ground in Scripture, ſo long and ſtill in vain expected by them, under which this prophecy is to be made good, (as if it were not long ſince fulfilled, while that ſecond temple was ſtanding, as we are aſſured that it was) is a mere dream of men chooſing to themſelves ſtrong deluſions. Which leſt any of theirs by enquiring into it, ſhould diſcover, they (weary, it appears, or aſhamed of the length of the time of their vain expectation, or not knowing how they ſhould ſatisfy ſuch as ſhould enquire into it; have long ſince, by a ſevere way interdicted all ſuch enquiries, by ſaying [f] תפח רוחם של מחשבי הקציים Tippach rucham (or Atſmam) ſhel Mechaſhebe hakketſim, Let them burſt (or, breath out their ſouls) that enquire after the ends (or periods) and terms of time, viz. concerning the coming of the Meſſiah. And that perhaps may be the cauſe why their Expoſitors in this place ſay ſo little of it, viz. how, or when, the Lord ſhould come to his temple. Certainly without acknowledging Chriſt the true Meſſiah, and him to be come in the fleſh, and both God and man, there cannot any thing be ſaid that can give the true meaning, or ſhew what was requiſite for the fulfilling of this prophecy here; and that cited out of Haggai of ſuch affinity with it. And no wonder to ſee them who willingly and obſtinately decline the one only way of manifeſt truth, to run on in ſuch different tracts of error. It follows in the Text,

Even the meſſenger of the covenant whom ye delight in.] Where our Tranſlators rendring the copulative ו, which ordinarily ſignifies and, by even, give us to look on theſe words as a farther deſcription of the ſame perſon who was called the Lord; and that is (as hath been ſaid) Chriſt Jeſus, who though he be one with his Father God eternal, yet humbled himſelf for men's ſakes to be as a Meſſenger from his Father to them, to declare unto them his will, and to be unto him obedient in all things that he gave him to do. This proves not, that he is not one God with the Father, though as a Son he yielded obedience to him, and performed his work. Here is nothing in this that takes away either [g] unity of eſſence, or equality of power. So that we need not to depart from this notion of Meſſenger, or Angel, to render it Prince, as a learned [h] man, by the uſe of the word in another language [i], thinks it may be proved in the Hebrew, and here alſo to ſignify. It will come but to one paſs, he is Prince of the covenant, for the ſame reaſon that he is called Meſſenger, or Angel of it: which is becauſe in him God founded the new covenant of grace, and by him as Mediator of it, adminiſtred it; he, not only declaring it, but ratifying it with his own blood, and receiving into it as many as lay hold on him; even that new covenant (of which he is Mediator, Heb. xii. 24.) better than the old, and eſtabliſhed on better promiſes, Heb. viii, 6, 8, &c. ſpoken of, Jer. xxxi. 31. no more comprehending Jews alone, but Gentiles alſo. In which regard God ſaith of him, I will give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, &c. Iſaiah xlii. 6. in whom he was reconciling the world unto himſelf, 2 Cor. v. 19.

In this that we ſay, that it is but the ſame perſon who is called both Lord and Meſſenger, we have moſt of the Jewiſh Expoſitors conſenting. So R. Solomon, and Aben Ezra, and Kimchi, and R. Tanchum, and Abarbinel, in a ſecondary expoſition; but yet in this divided among themſelves, that [k] Some of them ſay by both is meant God himſelf, i. e. God the Father, by Others the Meſſiah. Againſt the former is hence an evident proof, that of God the Father it cannot be meant, becauſe a Meſſenger is neceſſarily a diſtinct perſon from him that ſends him. The Lord therefore and Meſſenger here ſpoken of, muſt, as we affirm of Chriſt, needs be ſo. As for thoſe who interpret both, as we do, of the Meſſiah, though much differing from us, as concerning the nature of his perſon; yet there is no occaſion to diſpute with them concerning that here, in that they agree, that the perſon by both titles deſcribed is the Meſſiah. As for Others, who take by the Lord to be meant one, by the Meſſenger of the covenant, another; ſo vain and abſurd are their fancies, that to name them will be ſufficient confutation of them, as not only that uncouth as well as novel opinion of Abarbinel, making it to be the King of Perſia, who had ſent them home from their Babyloniſh captivity; but alſo that of ſome more ancient, who would have to be meant Eliah, whom they would have to be called by that title, becauſe he always preſides at the rite of circumciſion, ciſion, the ſign of God's covenant with them, which they thus make out, "God ſeeing his "zeal for circumciſion, when thoſe of the "ten tribes were negligent of it, gave him "this privilege as a reward of his zeal, that "that ſacrament ſhould never be adminiſtred, "but that he ſhould overſee it, for which "cauſe always at every circumciſion they ſet "a chair of ſtate for him, as being Angel, "Meſſenger, or Preſident of the covenant, and "ſo here called." A pretty ſtory, whereby to delude themſelves, and amuſe the people from further enquiry after the truth, which if it were found only in trivial fabulous books might paſs as a fancy, but that it ſhould be quoted by their ſerious and grave [l] Authors, as a thing pertinent to this place, and grounded on it, cannot but ſeem as ſtrange, as it is groundleſs and ridiculous.

[f] Maimonides, as above, chap. xii. and Talmud Sanhedrin. [g] Polan. lib. 3. c. 10. [h] Lud. de Dieu. [i] viz. Æthiop. [k] R. Solomon, and Ab. Ezra.

What is added, whom ye delight in, ſhews that with great longing they expected of old his coming, as a time that ſhould bring much cauſe of joy and rejoicing to them: and what follows as repeated, Behold he ſhall come (or cometh) ſaith the Lord of hoſts, ſhews the certainty of the thing, as ſure as if it were already done. God engageth both his truth and power in it, he ſays it, and every word of his is truth, and he that ſays it, is the Lord of hoſts, God of all power, and can and will effect whatſoever he ſaith.

Behold he cometh] not as Abarbinel (as we have ſeen) would have it, hath or is already come, that ſo he might apply it to the King of Perſia, who made with them a covenant of peace; but יבא yabo, ſhall certainly come, בזמנו Bizmano, in his time, as Kimchi truly explains it. And not only ſo, but if we look on the place before named to which he ſhould come, viz. his temple, it will give us neceſſarily to underſtand, as to the time too; that he was to come while that temple was yet ſtanding, as Grotius well obſerves.

And here before we proceed, it will be convenient to take notice what the ſame learned man ſuggeſts to us on the next verſe, viz. That Chriſt's coming, when ſpoken to, and of the Jews, denotes not only his firſt manifeſtation in the fleſh, or the temple; but all the time from his firſt preaching to the deſtruction of the city of Jeruſalem, and of the temple. Otherwiſe, more diſtinctly the word is applied to a [m] threefold coming of Chriſt, 1. His coming in the fleſh, to be born among men. 2. His coming in judgment for vengeance to his enemies, and deliverance of his ſervants in this world, as he did come at the deſtruction of the Jews. 3. At the end of the world, at the day of judgment. And ſo underſtanding it as particularly reſpecting the Jews, we ſhall eaſily perceive here a full and ſatisfactory anſwer to thoſe murmurers and ſcoffers of thoſe times, who ſeeing the proſperity of ſome wicked men (as it is in the laſt verſe of the preceding chapter) ſaid, every one that doth evil is good in the ſight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them, or, where is the God of judgment? though ſuch who impiouſly queſtion God's juſtice, deſerve no other anſwer than to feel it, yet in much condeſcenſion he here vouchſafes them ſuch an anſwer as to let them know, that though he doth not preſently proceed, as they would have him, but ſeem to neglect or wink at the doings of wicked men; yet he is not negligent, but in his own appointed time will ſo order things, as ſhall make it manifeſt to all, that he took notice all the while of what was done. This time, as to them, he here expreſſes to be that coming of Chriſt, which is in theſe and the following words deſcribed; in which time was his juſt judgment ſignally executed before the whole world, as to what concerned their nation: and ſo the queſtion, why God ſuffers the wicked, oft, moſt to flouriſh? as to them of that nation, the people then by the Prophet ſpoken to and of, is fully decided by what was in that ſpace of time by him brought to paſs, ſo as to ſtop the mouth of any other, who ſhall in like blaſphemous manner queſtion his juſtice; by warning them to leave to him his own time to execute his juſt judgments, and rather to prepare themſelves for that time, which certainly ſhall come upon them, than in any way to doubt of it.

The things here ſpoken do more particularly concern the Jews, but are to all, and to us, for [n] examples, and are written for our admonition, God having ſeveral ways of executing his judgments, but proceeding ſtill according to the ſame rule of juſtice. They likewiſe concern rather more general and national impieties, and judgments accordingly executed; yet ſo, as every particular man may thence take inſtruction, that none who taketh care of his ways, ſeeing ſuch as are openly wicked to proſper and flouriſh, ſhould thence take occaſion of murmuring and queſtioning God's juſtice, nor any wicked man that proſpers in this world, ſhould, becauſe God ſuffers him ſo to do, for that juſtify himſelf, or think himſelf good in the ſight of the Lord, or that God delighted in him, but be aſſured that a time will come, when God will execute juſt judgment on him, however for a time he forbear him, and ſo deal with him in particular, as he here threatneth to do with the wicked of thoſe times. He hath other ways of coming, beſides that here ſpoken of: to every man, at his death, and after judgment, which though R. Solomon, as we have ſeen, doth ill in making the prime and literal meaning of this place, as he doth, yet ſo far he is true, that certainly God will by it come to every man in particular, and then judge and diſtinguiſh them according to the things that they have done, not the things that they have enjoyed in this world. His deferring them till then is not a ſign of his liking to them, but ſhall make (if they by repentance prevent it not) for their greater condemnation and miſery, and ſo ſhall it appear that they are out, who for what they ſee them here to enjoy ſhall account them happy. See Luke xvi. 25.

This

[l] R. D. Kimchi, and Abarb. in locum. [m] Dr. Hammond on Mat. xxiv. Note [b]. [n] 1 Cor. x. 6.

This may ſeem a digreſſion, as not pertaining to the literal meaning of the words, yet may be not impertinent, in regard that both the preſent words and other paſſages after in this chapter, cannot but ſuggeſt ſuch conſideration of God's juſt judgment both for private perſons, and whole ſocieties of men, to us. That ſome [o] Chriſtians anciently ſhould interpret the word, come, in the firſt place, of Chriſt's firſt coming, and in this ſecond, of his coming to judgment, cannot but ſeem ſtrange. Doubtleſs, here is but one and the ſame coming ſpoken of, and the repetition of the promiſe of it, doth but confirm the certainty of it, and that was the firſt coming of his, then, when theſe words were ſpoken, to be expected by the Jews. The words will naturally bear no other ſenſe.

2. But who may abide the day of his coming? and who ſhall ſtand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers ſope.

But who may abide the day of his coming? &c.] By looking to what precedes in the laſt verſe of the former chapter, and the firſt of this, the connexion of theſe words with the former ſeems thus, The Jews of thoſe times ſeeing (as they thought) all things out of order then amongſt them, the godly oppreſſed and the wicked exalted, murmured againſt God's juſtice, and having had promiſes from God of one who ſhould ſet all things to right, as doubting of the truth of thoſe promiſes, ſeeing them ſo long deferred, aſk'd, [p] Where is the God of juſtice? where is the promiſe of his coming? he anſwereth them therefore, that he is not negligent of their affairs, nor ſlack concerning his promiſe, but what they counted ſlackneſs was long-ſuffering towards them, that they might be prepared for receiving that Lord whom they ſought after, that Meſſenger of his covenant, whoſe coming they longed to ſee, as expecting that then all things ſhould go according to their deſires, and they ſhould have great cauſe of rejoicing, in ſeeing the wicked ſeverely dealt withal, and themſelves eſtabliſhed in wordly proſperity and pleaſure; mean while, not examining themſelves how they were fit for ſuch things as they expected. He therefore tells them, that certainly without any failing on his part, that Lord ſhould come at his appointed time; but that before him alſo ſhould come a Meſſenger to prepare his way before him, by calling them (that thought beſt of themſelves) to prepare for his coming; for that it ſhould not be ſo eaſy to them as they fancied to themſelves, without more ado to give them what they expected of worldly enjoyments, and without farther trial to give them what they thought themſelves worthy of; but that it ſhould be with great ſeverity, and ſo as in ſtrict juſtice to proceed after trial made of all, for good to thoſe who ſhould be found faithful and ſincere, and for deſtruction to thoſe that were otherwiſe; ſo that the righteous ſhould not without [q] difficulty be ſaved, but for the ungodly and ſinners they ſhould not be able to appear. This is that which he ſaith, [r] but who may abide the day of his coming? and who ſhall ſtand when he appeareth?

Who?] of the wicked, ſay [s] Some: which as it is moſt true, and the coming of that day ſhall be to them moſt terrible and intolerable; yet may the queſtion ſeem more generally put as concerning all, even the beſt as well as the wicked, to ſhew, that the time ſpoken of ſhall be full of difficulties, ſuch as will put all to a hard trial, ſuch as will prove them to the uttermoſt, though the iſſue thereof ſhall be indeed for joy and ſalvation, to thoſe that are found faithful and ſincere; even they ſhall be ſaved, but ſo as by fire. For in that day many ſhall be made white, i. e. tried, ſaith Kimchi, in the words of Daniel, xii. 10. even the righteous ſhall paſs a hard trial, that they may be purified and made white, though not conſumed and deſtroyed as the wicked: ſo that even to them the day of his coming ſhould be terrible, though ſalutary. This that they might expect, and yet among thoſe difficulties find comfort, Chriſt himſelf having taken our ſins upon him, took on him the croſs, that he might enter by it into his kingdom, and ſhew to his the way that they muſt alſo go, if they will enter thereinto, viz. by taking up their croſs and following him. True peace and joy he promiſeth to them, but not without the preceding trial of [t] troubles, and afflictions, and ſo inſtructeth them that they might know that he came not to ſend peace on the earth, Mat. x. 34. not ſuch peace as the Jewiſh nation generally expected at his coming; but that [u] for judgment he came into this world, (as is here propheſied that he ſhould) which, if we take his coming in that latitude as before we ſaid, we ſhall ſee with ſuch ſeverity to have been executed, as that in reſpect thereof we may ſee there was good grounds for this expreſſion of it by way of queſtion, who, (not only of the wicked, but of the beſt of men) may abide the day of his coming? or who ſhall ſtand when he appeareth?

Though the generality of the Jews did, I ſuppoſe, then expect nothing but preſent joy and proſperity at his coming, yet we may well think that thoſe that better conſidered the prophecies, had other notions like thoſe, that we have expreſſed, of the day of his coming and appearance, by that tradition which thoſe ſince report to us, as from them, of the חבלו של משיח Cheblo ſhel Maſhiach, The pangs or doluors of the Meſſiah, ſuch great afflictions as ſhall be to Iſrael at the coming of the Meſſiah, ſpoken of in the [w] Talmud: which Abarbinel mentions, as here pointed at, if the words be expounded (as we have ſhewed they ought to be,) of the Meſſiah. And certainly ſuch tradition may be as well founded on theſe words as any paſſage in the Prophets, although this place be not cited, where it is mentioned in the Talmud in the Tract of the Sabbath, chap. xvi. fol. 118.

[o] See Ribera, and Chr. à Caſtro, &c. [p] 2 Peter iii. 4. [q] 1 Peter iv. 18. [r] Compare Rev. vi. 17.
[s] Tarn. [t] John xvi. 33. [u] Ibid. ix. 39. [w] Sabbath, fol. 118. Sanhedr. fol. 98.

but that which is repeated concerning the ſame day that is here ſpoken of, chap. iv. 5. where it is called the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

The ſame Abarbinel ſpeaking of the ſame opinion of theirs in his Comment on Daniel, fol. 68. col. 2. ſaith, [That the Diſciples of Jeſus received from the wiſe men of Iſrael (among other things that he there mentions) that in the days of Meſſiah afflictions ſhould be multiplied, which they call חבלי המשיח Cheble hammeſhiach, the pangs or dolours of Meſſiah, inſomuch that they ſaid, Very happy ſhall he be that ſhall not ſee them, and in whoſe time they ſhall not be. And concerning them (ſays he) it is ſaid in their goſpel, Wo (or alas) who ſhall live with (or in the time of) thoſe great afflictions which ſhall be ſeen in the laſt days? which are the pangs or dolours of Meſſias, which by tradition they had heard of.]

The words which he mentions, though they are not literally found in the goſpel, yet may (as the ſenſe) thence be collected, as a ſummary inference out of what our Saviour ſaith, as in Mat. xxiv. Mark xiii. and Luke xxi. It is well obſerved by Buxtorfius that the word [x] ὠδῖνες, by our Saviour uſed in his deſcription of thoſe days of his coming in judgment to the Jews (that here called likewiſe, The day of his coming and appearance) doth properly and particularly anſwer to the Hebrew, חבל Chebel, or חבלים Chabalim, or in conſtruction חבלו Cheblo, or חבלי Cheble, as they denote bitter pangs, as of a woman in travail, and ſo uſed for any great pains and afflictions. So that, if that tradition among them were ancienter than Chriſt's coming, and the goſpel, it may not be improbably thought, that our Saviour did by ſuch terms as were then in uſe among them, and in their mouths, ſet forth thoſe dolorous times which they did talk of and expect; ſo to warn them to prepare for them, as now at hand; and a certain proof, that Meſſiah, of whoſe being come they were, by their own confeſſion, to be a ſign, was now come, and they ought to acknowledge it. And in expreſſions ſo full of dread doth he deſcribe thoſe pangs, ſorrows, or afflictions, of that time and day of his coming to the Jews (which were accordingly made good in that ſpace of time, which we ſaid to be comprehended under the day of his coming, and his appearing) as that nothing can ſurpaſs or equal them, but the day of his laſt coming, at the terrible day of judgment, to all people at the end of the world; inſomuch that it may even ſeem doubtful, whether that day were not meant by divers of them, in thoſe chapters of Mat. xxiv. Mark xiii. and Luke xxi. which we have cited. At leaſt, this is ſet forth as a type and figure of that: inſomuch that as well in reſpect to this time of ſuch tribulation, as had not been from the creation, here ſpoken of, as of that, might be ſaid, as well concerning even the elect among the Jews, (for whoſe ſakes our Saviour ſaith, thoſe days ſhould be ſhortened, whereas elſe no fleſh ſhould be ſaved, Mat. xxiv. 22.) to whom the iſſue ſhould be [y] ſalutary, as concerning the wicked, to whom it ſhould be for deſtruction, Who may abide the day of his coming? and who ſhall ſtand when he appeareth? which in St. [z] Luke is expreſſed by being accounted worthy to eſcape all thoſe things, that ſhould come to paſs, and to ſtand before the Son of man. What we, with moſt Others, render, who may abide, &c. is by the Vulgar Latin rendred, who ſhall be able to think of the day of his coming, and who ſhall ſtand to ſee him? to expreſs emphatically, I ſuppoſe, the terror here intimated. For if none can think of it by reaſon of the power or dreadfulneſs of his Majeſty, who ſhall be able to abide or bear it? ſays St. Jerom, including both ſignifications. Not that the word מכלכל Mecalcel, or its root doth properly ſignify to think of (it is no where elſe ſo found) the properer ſignification being to bear, or ſuſtain, which it hath, Jer. xx. 9. And ſo farther deſcribing the terror of thoſe times, or giving a reaſon of the terror of them, he adds, For he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers ſope. In words taken from things of known and ordinary uſe, he deſcribes the ſeverity of thoſe judgments, which ſhould then come on all in that country, for trial to all, and deſtruction to the wicked. He is (ſays he) like a refiner's fire, or as the conſtruction will alſo bear, as [a] refining fire, though the other ſeems more proper. The uſe of that fire is to melt metals and try them, that ſo what is pure may be by it ſelf retained, the droſs being either conſumed, or ſo ſeparated as to be taken away from it. And then the people being compared to mixt metal, that hath in it what is pure and what is droſs; and the Lord that ſhould come in judgment, being compared to fire, which ſhall throughly try that metal; the meaning will be plain (as R. Tanchum expreſſes it) that he will conſume or take away the tranſgreſſors and rebellious amongſt them, as the refiner's fire conſumes or ſeparates the [b] droſs of melted metals, and cleanſeth them from what is falſe and unſincere: and this ſo, as that the good and ſincere ſhall at once be put to ſevere trial, every one in their own perſons, as the good metal alſo, the ſincere gold or ſilver endureth the hardſhip or trial of the fire, though preſerved, and at laſt coming forth more pure, refined and purged: ſo as this may be applied to what concerns them in their particulars alſo, which by thoſe trials and afflictions ſhall be made ſenſible of their ſins, and what is amiſs in them, that ſo purging themſelves from them, they may become veſſels of greater honour, ſanctified and meet for the Lord's uſe, and prepared unto every good work, as the Apoſtle's words are, 2 Tim. ii. 21. But the words ſeem here more to concern the whole maſs or community of the people, all calling themſelves by the ſame name of God's people; but many of them being not ſo, whom now by the refining fire of his judgments he would diſtinguiſh from the true Iſraelites, and by the ſame means prove the one, and bring to deſtruction the

[x] Mat. xxiv. 8. Mark xiii. 8. [y] Luke xxi. 28. [z] Id. xxi. 36. [a] Vulg. Lat. R. Tanch. [b] Pſalm cxix. 119.

the other; as was actually done by thoſe heavy calamities, which ended in the deſtruction of the country, city of Jeruſalem, and the temple, by the Romans, about the ſeventieth year of Chriſt. The ſame is plainly likewiſe the meaning of the other ſimilitude added, and like fullers ſope, the uſe of which is to ſcour wool or cloth, and purge out all ſpots and ſtains in it, and take them away, leaving the wool or cloth, though by the ſame means fretted and rubbed, the more white or brighter coloured. As that takes away all ſpots, ſo ſhall he take away all wicked ones, ſaith R. Solomon. The wicked may well be compared to ſpots in the garment of a people, as St. Jude calls them in the aſſemblies of the Chriſtians ſpots in their feaſts of charity, Jude, ver. 12. The word בורית Borith, which Ours and Others render ſope, the Vulgar Latin and Others alſo render fullers herb. Concerning the primary ſignification of the word, there is doubt both among the [c] Jews and Others: but, which is all that is to the purpoſe, it is by all agreed on to be ſomewhat, which in thoſe times and places the fullers, or ſcourers of cloth, uſed to take away ſpots and ſtains, cleanſe and whiten cloth withal, having (as Grammarians will) for its root ברר barar, which ſignifies to cleanſe, make white and clean, as Dan. xi. 35. Now what our Tranſlators, and moſt Others ſupply by, he, attributing it to the Lord ſpoken of, Kimchi doth it by, it, attributing it to the time called the day of his coming, and when he ſhall appear; and takes refining for an epithet to fire, but then maketh the ſenſe the ſame, thus, And that day ſhall be as fire which purgeth the droſs from ſilver; ſo ſhall that purge or ſeparate the wicked from the good, and the wicked ſhall be deſtroyed, and the juſt or righteous ſhall remain: and ſo in the other ſimilitude.

Here we may not paſs unobſerved, that divers Chriſtian [d] Expoſitors interpret this, not of thoſe viſible judgments and afflictions which we have ſpoken of, but of the irreſiſtible force of Chriſt's word and preaching, which may be compared indeed to fire, as Jer. v. 14. and xxiii. 29. and is expreſſed by things of greateſt force and power, which nothing can reſiſt, as Heb. iv. 12. by a two edged ſword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of ſoul and ſpirit, &c. and called a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the hearts, which ſpared no ſin or ſinner; and of the efficacy of his [e] grace and ſpirit working on the obdurate hearts of men, and the like: which may be added to what hath been ſaid, as the words ſeem to require it ſhould. Otherwiſe, I ſuppoſe the way that we have taken to give a fuller and more proper meaning of the words, and ſuch as will be of more uſe in dealing with the Jews to convince them, that all here ſpoken hath been fulfilled, all thoſe calamities, thoſe pangs of the Meſſiah, which they expected that the coming of Meſſiah ſhould be accompanied with, did accordingly ſeize on them in that day of his coming; including the time (as we ſaid) from his preaching to the deſtruction of the temple, brought on them by their obſtinacy in refuſing to hearken and turn to him: and ſo what is here ſaid, to intimate what is more fully declared by Chriſt in the goſpels concerning that time. The other [f] expoſition alone perhaps will not gain much from them.

As to the expreſſion here uſed, it may be compared with ſeveral others in the Scripture: ſo (as Aben Ezra and Kimchi will) with what is ſaid, Zech. xiii. 9. where God ſaith, I will bring the third part through the fire, and I will refine them as ſilver is refined, &c. as likewiſe, Iſaiah i. 25. I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy droſs, and take away all thy tin: and Ezek. xxii. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. as they gather ſilver, and droſs, and iron, and lead, and tin into the midſt of the furnace, and blow the fire upon it to melt it; [g] ſo will I gather you in my anger, and melt you, &c. (ver. 20.) as ſilver is melted in the midſt of the furnace, ſo ſhall ye be melted, &c. (ver. 22.) and Luke xii. 49. I am come to ſend fire on the earth, &c. and 2 Theſſ. i. 8. [h] where he ſpeaketh of a time, when the Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire, &c. with other like places. Which what judgments they concern will not be to our purpoſe at preſent to enquire; but only thus much, that it is uſual to compare God's ſeverity in proceeding againſt ſin, to ſuch purging and refining fire, which melts and tries the whole maſs, but purifies the good, and [i] refines it, and ſeparates and conſumes the droſs. So thoſe judgments often fall promiſcuouſly on all both good and bad; but the end is different, and when the wicked are deſtroyed, the godly are only purged and made more precious in the ſight of God, yet ſo as that in regard of that ſevere examination and trial, which they ſhall endure; even in reſpect of them alſo it may juſtly be aſked, who may abide the day of his coming? &c. According to the ſame notion he adds in reſpect of the preſent trial here ſpoken of,

3. And he ſhall ſit as a refiner and purifier of ſilver: and he ſhall purify the ſons of Levi, and purge them as gold and ſilver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteouſneſs.

And he ſhall ſit as a refiner and purifier of ſilver, &c.] R. D. Kimchi, as before, ſo here alſo, what Ours and Others attribute to the perſon of the Lord, takes as ſpoken of the time called the day of his coming, thus giving the meaning of the words, "As a judge that "ſitteth to judge the people, and to diſtin-"guiſh the offender from the innocent; ſo "ſhall be that day, which ſhall refine and "cleanſe the ſilver, and take away from it the "droſs, or refuſe; and they are the wicked." But the word ישב properly ſignifying to ſit, may ſeem more to agree to the perſon, than time, though it make not much difference in the the meaning. And it cannot be here ſtrictly taken in the notion of ſitting, however it be attributed to the perſon; but rather to ſignify his ſet purpoſe and reſolution of ſo doing, as one that ſits to a work. He ſhall ſet aſide all other works, that he may be as a refiner, ſaith R. Solomon, ſcarce warily enough; inaſmuch as one work hindreth not him from attending to others; except we take his meaning to be, that he ſhall ſo fully do that buſineſs, as if he attended wholly to it. The Chaldee renders it, "He ſhall be revealed, or reveal himſelf, "to melt and cleanſe, as a man that melteth "and cleanſeth ſilver." He means (ſaith R. Tanchum) "He ſhall try and cleanſe Iſrael, "or the people, as ſilver, i. e. [k] as ſilver is "cleanſed and purified, or, he ſhall ſit, as "one that refineth ſilver." The letter or particle כ C, which is a note of ſimilitude, being either way omitted, becauſe the meaning is clear.

3

[c] R. Tanch. and R. D. Kimchi in radic. [d] Ribera, Menoch. Tirin. Quiſtorp. [e] Diodat. [f] In the above cited, Mat. xxiv, &c. [g] See Jer xxix. [h] See Dr. Hammond. [i] See 1 Peter iv. 12. πύρωσις.

And he ſhall purify the ſons of Levi, and purge them.] He ſhall cleanſe them as ſilver that is tried in a furnace of earth, purified ſeven times, Pſalm xii. 6. The ſons of Levi.] Of the prieſts who were the ſons of Levi, we have in the former chapters heavy complaints, that they in nothing performed their duty aright, but profaned God's holy name, his altar, his offerings, and ſervice; and adulterated and violated his law: of them therefore ſeems here particular mention made, and promiſed or denounced, that he would take them (who ſhould have directed and been examples of good to Others, but were wholly corrupt, and ill examples to them) in the firſt place into a ſtrict examination, and reform what was amiſs in his worſhip and their performance, ſo far that he loathed their offerings, that hereafter he might in an acceptable manner be worſhipped, and have offerings offered to him in righteouſneſs, ſuch as ſhould be pleaſing to him.

But who are meant by the ſons of Levi is not well accorded by Expoſitors. Who of old were called by that name is manifeſt; but now the outward part of God's ſervice being altered, the perſons alſo, by whom it is to be performed ought to be ſo too, though under the ſame name ſet forth. The change of the law, and the change of the prieſthood or miniſters, neceſſarily accompany one the other, Heb. vii. 12. By the ſons of Levi here therefore [l] Some underſtand in general all Chriſtians, who are all in Chriſt made a holy prieſthood to offer up ſpiritual ſacrifices acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Peter ii. 5. all prieſts unto God, Rev. i. 6. and v. 10. [m] or the whole church, by naming the Levites, who were anciently the chief part thereof. [n] Others underſtand the prieſts or miniſters under the New Teſtament, who ſucceed under the goſpel, in the place of thoſe under the law; as the Apoſtles and Diſciples of Chriſt, and their ſucceſſors: [o] Others, the ſons of Levi, properly ſo called, or the race of Aaron according to the fleſh, of whom this is verified; in regard that many of them by the power of the word of God, were purged and purified from their former corruptions and errors, and reduced to the acknowledgment of Chriſt, and true worſhip of God, according to the perfect rule of the goſpel, as it is ſaid, And a great company of the prieſts were obedient to the faith, Acts vi. 7. All theſe may be true, and well joined. As to the laſt which underſtands it of the ſons of Levi properly ſo called, as of that race; of ſuch as were won to the obedience of Chriſt by the word of his goſpel, and had their hearts purified by faith in him; of them may it be truly verified, that they were purified and purged as gold and ſilver by him ſitting as a refiner and purifier of ſilver: and it cannot be doubted, but that they had their parts in that ſharp trial of afflictions too in thoſe days. And as for them who were all droſs, and would not be purified, but continued in their corruption, what became of them, the ſad ſtory of the deſtruction of the city and temple (which we take to be deciphered by this day of his coming, and the trying and purifying here deſcribed) ſhews, when ſo many of them together with the temple, periſhed by fire: as that if the expreſſion here were properly meant of material fire, it might be ſaid to have been verified in them; although we do not here take it as ſo meant, but only to expreſs the ſtrictneſs and exactneſs of the trial. It is ſaid that he ſhall ſo purify and purge them, that they ſhall offer unto the Lord an offering in righteouſneſs. In the times when this was ſpoken, that they did not ſo, is ſhewed in the preceding chapters. Becauſe they were ſo perverſe in their ways, ſo wicked in their doings, he tells them that he regarded not the offering, (by which they thought to ſatisfy his law, and do to him acceptable ſervice) nor received it with good will at their hands. As likewiſe, Iſaiah i. 19, &c. he calls the ſacrifices they pretended to do to him, while their hands were full of wickedneſs, vain oblations; the incenſe they brought, abomination unto him; their feaſt, iniquity and trouble to him, and that, when they make many prayers, he will not hear. Before they can do any thing that ſhall be acceptable to him, they muſt waſh them, and make them clean, put away the evil of their doing, ceaſe to do evil, learn to do good, &c. The perſons muſt be firſt made ſuch as he will accept, before their offerings can be [p] acceptable or their ſacrifices ſweet unto him. That therefore among theſe that are here called ſons of Levi, (whether be meant all Chriſtians, or thoſe that are peculiarly ſeparated to the miniſtring to God in holy things, or ſuch of the Jewiſh Levites that were converted to Chriſt) there may be ſuch as may offer to him an offering in righteouſneſs, rightly, lawfully and acceptably, not to the farther diſpleaſing of him (as thoſe in this Prophet reprehended then did) he ſaith, that he will firſt purify them as ſilver, and purge them as gold and ſilver, from all droſs and corruptions that are in them, by ſuch means as he ſees ſees convenient, whether by the powerful efficacy of his word, grace, and Spirit, or farther (if he ſee neceſſary) by the fiery trial of ſufferings, by the [q] ſpirit of judgment and of burning, to ſeparate the ſincere of them from thoſe that are not ſuch: and then they being ſo purged, and with ſincere hearts and pure hands preſenting their offerings in righteouſneſs to him, ſhall be accepted, both they and their offerings: ſo ſaith he in the following words.

[k] See the LXXII Verſion. [l] Pareus, Diodati, Montan. See Chr. à Caſtro. [m] Druſ. [n] Vatab. ed. 4to and 8vo. Ribera, Sa. Chr. à Caſtro, Menoch. Biſhop Hall. [o] Grot. Tirin. Stokes. [p] Jer. vi. 20.

4. Then ſhall the offerings of Judah and Jeruſalem be pleaſant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years.

Then ſhall the offerings of Judah and Jeruſalem be pleaſant unto the Lord.] Judah and Jeruſalem are named (ſaith Kimchi) becauſe there was the temple or ſanctuary. It will be eaſy to tranſlate the names to the church of Chriſt, of which that city was a type, and which thence was to have its [r] riſe and beginning, though ſince ſpread abroad through the world; ſo that it will be all one to ſay the offerings of the church. But what offerings are then to be underſtood? Not certainly ſuch legal ſacrifices or Mincha's, as were then under the law offered. For this is ſpoken of what was to be after the coming of the Meſſiah, by whoſe once offering of himſelf all ſuch legal offerings had an end put to them, and were for the future to ceaſe. By the offerings (the Mincha or offering, as it is in the ſingular number) of Judah and Jeruſalem therefore muſt be meant all the ſpiritual offerings and ſervices of the church, and the faithful members thereof; their [s] prayers, [t] alms, praiſes, euchariſtical ſacrifices, their whole ſelves offered to God, as a living ſacrifice, holy acceptable to God, Rom. xii. 1. all comprehended under that pure Mincha, or offering, [u] chap. i. 11. they being all made a holy prieſthood to offer up ſpiritual ſacrifices acceptable to God, 1 Peter xi. 5. Much of the ſervice under the law conſiſting in offering oblations, that name is transferred to all evangelical ſervices.

It is ſaid, they ſhall be pleaſant as in the days of old, and as in former years, in the days of the pious Patriarchs, ſay [w] Some. [x] Others, in the time of the firſt temple, and when the worſhip of God flouriſhed in Judea: or [y] the time of the tabernacle that Moſes pitcht.

But it will not concern particularly to deſign the time, the text having not ſo deſigned it, it will be ſufficient to underſtand it, that the ſervices in the time here ſpoken of, by ſuch and in ſuch manner, as he deſcribes, done, ſhall be as acceptable and pleaſing to God, as any ever heretofore by holy and pious men in due manner performed, were, and not loathſome and diſpleaſing to him, as thoſe offerings of that preſent age by wicked men, unduly and with neglect and breach of his law offered, were.

But here is obſervable that from what he ſaith, that the ſons of Levi ſhall be purified, and then offer offerings in righteouſneſs, and pleaſant unto God, as thoſe of holy men of old, on, and after the coming and appearance of the Lord the Meſſiah, there is an evident proof, that by that coming of his here ſpoken of, is not meant his laſt coming to judgment (inaſmuch as after that will be no time for ſuch ſervices: they are to be performed in this life and this world, not in the life and world to come) but a coming in this world, after which it ſhould yet laſt, in which is a time of purging; the other being a time only of remuneration, according to what men have in this done. They are an argument in this kind looked on, not only by [z] ſome Chriſtian Expoſitors, but by a Jew alſo. Abarbinel makes it as a proof againſt R. Solomon's interpreting what is here ſpoken, concerning death, and the puniſhments in another world, becauſe, ſays he, that which is here ſaid of offering offerings, הנה זה לא יפול על הנפשות אחר המות is a thing that doth not belong to ſouls after death. This is to be obſerved not only in reſpect to what hath been already ſaid, but in reſpect of what follows alſo in the next verſe, and other paſſages which are betwixt this and the end of this prophecy: by which, taken by themſelves, the judgment after this life and world may ſeem deciphered; and we ought to be put in mind of it. Yet if we conſider to whom, (viz. the nation of murmuring Jews,) and on what occaſion the words were then ſpoken, and how there is in them (as this) that which agrees to things in this life and world, not ſo properly to that; we ſhall ſee that they muſt have reſpect to ſuch judgments as God would exerciſe towards that nation in this world, and taking the time denoted by the day of the Lord, the Meſſiah's coming, for that time, which (as we ſaid) was from the firſt preaching of John Baptiſt, and Chriſt, until the deſtruction of the country, city, and temple of Jeruſalem; and conſidering what was done in thoſe times, we ſhall eaſily perceive that all by the Lord in this Prophet ſpoken, was ſo far fulfilled, as that in regard thereof alone, not one word of his may be ſaid to have fallen to the ground: though, as then the words might warn them, who were then in the Prophet's time living, and ſhould die before the execution of ſuch God's publick judgments on the community or nation, of a certain account that they ſhould after this life, if not before, be brought to, for their doings; ſo they ought ſtill to warn all, whether particular perſons, or whole nations, to expect in God's due time to be brought to judgment, at leaſt after this life, if not in it too: what happened to them, being for example to all, and their concern ſo to make uſe thereof, that purifying themſelves before hand, and doing to God acceptable ſervice, they be not conſumed as droſs.

5. And I will come near to you in judgment, and I will be a ſwift witneſs againſt the ſorcerers, [q] Iſaiah iv. 4. [r] Tirin. and ſee Notes on Micah iv. 1, 2. [s] Pſalm cxli. 2. [t] Heb. xiii. 15, 16. [u] See the Notes thereon. [w] Cyril. Vatab. Grot. &c. [x] Druſ. Aben Ezra. [y] Abarb, [z] Ribera, ſee Chr. à Caſtro, p. 572.

cerers, and againſt the adulterers, and againſt falſe ſwearers, and againſt thoſe that oppreſs the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherleſs, and that turn aſide the ſtranger from his right, and fear not me, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

And I will come near to you in judgment, &c.] An anſwer to their former groundleſs murmurings and queſtionings in the laſt verſe of the preceding chapter, he hath in the former verſes given, and in this and the next verſe continues it in terms coming cloſe to the queſtion there by them made, where is the God of judgment? he here anſwers, I will come near to you to judgment. Before he ſpake as of a third perſon, The Lord ſhall come, &c. and he ſhall ſit, &c. and he ſhall purify, &c. viz. the Lord Chriſt, the ſecond perſon of the Bleſſed Trinity; here in the firſt perſon, as of God the Father, I will come near, &c. This alters nothing in the ſenſe, but only gives us to underſtand, that God will judge by the Meſſiah, God the Father in and by the Son. For the Father hath committed all judgment to the Son, John v. 22. and hath given him authority to execute judgment, ver. 27. he coming, therefore, ſaith, I am come in my Father's name, ver. 43. whether therefore this be looked on as ſpoken in the Father's name, or in the perſon of the Meſſiah, as [a] Vatablus will, it is all one, for he and his Father are one, John x. 30.

He will come near to them in judgment, to exerciſe judgment, which they complained was not executed. Will come] at the end of the world, at the laſt judgment, ſaith the ſame learned man, following [b] ſome Others. [c] Others expound them of both comings of Chriſt, that already paſt, and that to be at the end of the world; as much as to ſay, I will come down in the fleſh, and enquire into the corrupt manners of men, I will come alſo at my laſt coming to judgment.

Or, I will come in judgment, firſt [d] to correct, and alſo as occaſion ſhall ſerve, to puniſh; but will perfectly complete it at the day of the laſt judgment. But what to ſay of theſe ſee in the note on the former verſe, as likewiſe of R. Kimchi's note on the place: I will come near, viz. in that day which he hath mentioned, to you; that is, to that generation which ſhall be in that day, and the generations that are paſt, if they received not their judgment in this world, they ſhall receive it in the world to come; and of what Abarbinel here ſaith, who though he rejects R. Solomon's opinion, as to the former verſe, yet will have it here to take place, viz. that by his ſaying I will come near, is meant that before thoſe things ſo far off to come, which Malachi ſhould tell them of, he will more ſpeedily come to the particulars of them by death, which ſhould ſend them to hell; making that the import of קרבתי I will be, or am near to you.

And I will be a ſwift witneſs, &c.] That none of the tranſgreſſors may think to avoid his judgment, as in human judicatures many do for want of evident witneſs, againſt them, their crimes having been committed in ſecret, and oft ſentence is delayed that [e] ſo enquiry may be made, and witneſſes ſought for; he tells them that here it ſhall not be ſo, he himſelf that is the Judge will alſo be witneſs. And [f] all things being open to him, even thoſe things which are done with greateſt privacy, as well known to him, as thoſe that are done in the face of the ſun, and before many witneſſes, he will not delay for making farther ſearch and enquiry, as in doubtful matters, and where circumſtances may not be plain, or men's memories may fail, as by men done, but will be a ſwift witneſs, will without more ado, convince them of their ſins, and as ſpeedily execute ſentence on them being convicted, none being able to ſtop or hinder his proceeding, when once he takes the matter in hand, as he here aſſures, that in his appointed time, (which ſhall then ſeem too ſudden to them, though now they accuſe him of delay) he will do.

Againſt whom he will ſo proceed, he ſhews by reckoning up divers notorious ſins, which his ſpecifying ſhews to have been then common amongſt them: and beſides that, he will in like manner proceed againſt all others guilty in other like kinds of ſins contrary to his law, as theſe expreſly are. Theſe being named, we cannot but think others included.

Againſt the ſorcerers.] Of this ſin forbidden, Deut. xviii. 10, 11, 12. is ſhewed, that they were much guilty even under the firſt temple, in Iſaiah, chap. ii. 6. Jer. xxvii. 9. Micah v. 12. And how under the ſecond, and in the later degenerate times, they addicted themſelves to the like vain diabolical arts, (one here named comprehends the reſt, which in the law are diſtinguiſhed by ſeveral names) is proved by the learned Dr. Lightfoot by ſeveral inſtances on Mat. xxiv. 24. And of the reſt of the ſins here reckoned up, the ſame will be to be ſaid, that as they of former times before the Babyloniſh captivity, and deſtruction of the former city and temple, were guilty of them, and by them pulled on the whole nation thoſe heavy judgments, beſides thoſe which in their particular perſons they were for them liable to, either in this life or the other, ſo theſe alſo, after their return from that captivity, (not taking warning by what had happened to their anceſtors, and they had either taſted of, or could not but have freſh in memory,) caſting off the fear of God (which in the laſt words of the verſe is aſſigned as the cauſe of their ſo doing) did again give themſelves up to the like, ſo far, that God again threatneth them with like national judgment. In rendring the words, whereby the laſt ſin here ſpoken of is deſcribed, viz. and that turn aſide the ſtranger from his right, the words from his right being put in different characters, ſheweth that they are not expreſſed in the original Hebrew, but are ſupplied for making clearer and fuller the ſenſe; the words literally ſounding only, that turn aſide the ſtranger: ſo do ſome of the [g] Jews think a ſupply for that end neceſſary, and there-therefore underſtand משפט Miſhpat, judgment, as if it were ובטי משפט הגר Umatte miſhpat hagar, and that turn aſide, or pervert, the judgment of a ſtranger; which is in the text it ſelf put in, where a curſe is denounced againſt this ſin, Deut. xxvii. 19. (and there is the word מטה matteh, perverteth, in the ſingular number, and therefore with the letter ה H in the end, whereas it is here in the plural, and therefore with י I in the end. Which I ſuppoſe is all that the Maſorites, or thoſe that took care of the right writing and reading of the Hebrew Text, would have here to be obſerved by that note of theirs, which [h] Some take notice of, viz. that it is not elſewhere read with י yod in the end; not that they would have us think it ought here to have been written with ה H; for here it is in the plural, as the reſt of the nouns here are, as R. Tanchum notes; of which yod in the end is a ſign, and the letter ה H of the ſingular.

[a] Edit. 4to and 8vo. [b] See Chr. à Caſtro. [c] Tirinus. [d] Menoch. [e] See Abarb. [f] See R. Kimchi. [g] R. D. Kimchi.

That among the ſins here reckoned up as provoking God to come in judgment, is not mentioned idolatry (as great as any, and which the former Prophets under the firſt temple did oft inveigh againſt) Abarbinel notes the reaſon to be, becauſe that under the ſecond temple that ſin was not found amonſt them. The ſame Doctor on the laſt words, and fear not me, ſaith the Lord, notes, that he intimates, that if they ſhould fear him, and [i] repent of theſe ſins, he would pardon them.

Saith the Lord of hoſts.] This intimates the certainty of what he ſaith ſhall be, that they may take due notice of it, which is alſo aſſured in what follows, ver. 6. [k] Divers connect the laſt words with the former thus, and againſt thoſe that do not fear me, [l] including, with thoſe guilty of the former ſins, all others who fear not the Lord.

6. For I am the Lord, I change not: therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed.

For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed.] Theſe words are very differently expounded, at leaſt applied, by Interpreters; eſpecially as to the latter part of them. The connexion of the former part of them with the preceding, according to the way that we have gone, will be eaſy; viz. That although we have ſo long forborn to take vengeance of the wicked, yet they are not to think, that it is becauſe he approves of their doings, or is grown neglectful of thoſe that take care to ſerve him; but that he will in due time execute his judgments on the one, according to what he hath threatned againſt ſuch as go on in evil ways, and ſhew his care of the other; inaſmuch as he is ſtill the ſame God of judgment, unchangeably the ſame, a hater and certain avenger of evil, and a lover of good: and therefore all his threats and promiſes, however ſeeming to be deferred, ſhall in their due time certainly come to paſs, and have their due effect. But how then doth what he ſubjoins, therefore, (or and) ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed, follow on theſe? Becauſe (as we ſaid) Expoſitors in giving the meaning of theſe words much differ, it will be convenient to take ſome of their interpretations diſtinctly.

R. Solomon's note on this place is, Although I do defer my anger, I have not changed my mind [or purpoſe] from what it was at firſt, as that I ſhould love the wicked, and hate the good. And ye ſons of Jacob, although [ſome of you] are dead, or have died, in their iniquity, and I have not taken puniſhment of thoſe wicked in this life, yet ye are not conſumed; ye are not conſumed, or brought to nothing, before me; I have left your ſouls to execute my judgment on them in hell: according to Jonathan's Chaldee Paraphraſe which is, And ye of the houſe of Jacob think that he who dieth in this world, his judgment ceaſeth: as much as to ſay, Ye in your opinion ſay, my judgment is fruſtrate, or ceaſeth, becauſe there is no farther time to take vengeance on him. But our ancient Doctors, ſaith he, otherwiſe expound it, I have not changed or returned, or done a ſecond time, I have not ſmitten any other nation, and returned, [or [m] been changed, to it, or ſmitten it a ſecond time.] But you have I preſerved, or cauſed, to abide after many puniſhments. [n] My arrows are conſumed or ſpent, but ye are not conſumed.

R. D. Kimchi's Expoſition is thus, for I the Lord change not, for whatſoever I have ſpoken, though for a long time to come, ſhall certainly ſo come to paſs; for I change not, neither do my words change: and all the things to come, which I have ſpoken to you by my Prophets, ſhall ſo be, or come to paſs. The verb שניתי Shaniti hath the ſignification of changing, as if he ſhould ſay, I change not from word to word, from purpoſe to purpoſe, or liking to liking, i. e. that I ſhould one while ſay or like one thing, and another while another. And ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed; as other nations are conſumed, of whoſe name no memory is left, and who are deſtroyed from being a nation: but ye are not conſumed, neither ſhall you be conſumed; for ye ſhall always be ſeparate among the nations, that ye may be one nation in the earth; although you be led captive, and diſperſed to every corner, your name remaineth, or ſhall remain, in every place. The evil that I have done to you, I have done for your iniquities. And as I change not, ſo ye alſo ſhall not be conſumed, and in the latter days ye ſhall return to your dignity, and ſhall be high above all the nations of the earth. But Jonathan paraphraſeth it thus, "For I "the Lord have not changed my covenant, "which is from of old, but ye, O houſe of "Iſrael, think, that he that dieth in this "world, his judgment ceaſeth." Thus Kimchi.

Abarbinel, though he diſſent from R. Solomon on the 2d, 3d, and 4th verſes, (as we have ſeen) yet here agreeing with him, as ſeparating, what is ſpoken in the 5th and this verſe, from what is ſpoken in them, as belonging to a diſtinct ſtinct time and judgment, as not ſeeing in his way how well to join them, thus here ſpeaks; "For I the Lord change not, i. e. I have al- "ways loved judgment and righteouſneſs, but "if it be not in this world, it ſhall be in the "world to come, that is it which he ſaith, "and ye children of Jacob are not conſumed, "for although you die, behold your ſouls re- "main to receive the recompence of your "doings."

I

[h] Buxt. vindic. part 2. cap. 4. pag. 502. [i] See Cyril. [k] LXXII. Arab. Chr. à Caſtro, Pareus, Grot, &c.
[l] Vat. Edit. 4to and 8vo. [m] In the Concordance the word שניתי is put in both theſe ſignifications. [n] Deut. xxxii. 23.

Theſe words and opinions of theſe Doctors we recite, not as if they conduced to the right meaning of the place, for they are far from it; as R. Solomon's, in that, what is ſpoken of a particular ſignal day and judgment in this world, he expounds of that which continually did befal, and ſtill doth befal all men in their times; viz. the day of death, and of the immortality of the ſoul, which things being common to all men, and before known to all the Jews, cannot be the utmoſt meaning or concluſion of a new Prophecy directed to the Jews; and particularly concerning their nation, to ſhew them ſome new thing that ſhould betide them, and ſatisfy that queſtion then in their mouths, Where is the God of judgment? with ſome new anſwer. However, that which he ſaith be in it ſelf true, it is not here, by it ſelf, to the purpoſe, and it ſeems to proceed on his former wrong ſuppoſal, that ver. 1. by the Lord's meſſenger is meant the angel of death, and by the Lord here ſpoken of, the God of judgment, without reſpect to the Meſſiah; and not to come home at all to the taking away the murmuring of the people, of which he complains, and ſhews it to be cauſeleſs, and through ignorance of what he now declares to them.

This objection againſt him Abarbinel ſuggeſts to us, in what he ſaith on the firſt and ſecond verſes, but here, where he falls in with him, it ſtands firm againſt himſelf: for here we are not (as he doth) to look on theſe words, as ſpoken of a diſtinct time, or perſons, or judgment, from thoſe that are in thoſe former words ſpoken of, but as concerning ſtill the ſame day or time, (as Kimchi, as we have ſeen, well notes;) and all directing to ſome viſible judgment, whereby God in that appointed time ſhould clear his juſtice, which they now looking on the proſperity of the wicked called in queſtion, and make manifeſt his immutability in his hatred of the wicked, though he do not preſently execute ſentence on them, and his love to the godly; whom though he ſuffer to endure for a while perhaps hard trial, yet he ſtill takes care of their final preſervation, and will in his due time make it apparent, by what ſhall be then viſibly done by ſome diſtinguiſhing judgment: which to the particular day of men's dying, and the judgment that they ſhall then be brought to, inviſible and unknown to others, (ſo that thereby God's love and hatred to the one or the other are not eaſily diſcerned, ° one thing, as far as man can diſcern befalling them, and one dying as the other dieth,) is not ſo kindly appliable. 1

As for David Kimchi, neither can his expoſition here take place, it running (as to the latter part) on a falſe ſuppoſition, which may not be granted, viz. that the Lord and his meſſenger, who were, as is evident (ver. 1.) to come to the temple then ſtanding, which is long ſince deſtroyed, and by whom the judgment ſpoken was to be brought near unto them, (ver. 5.) are not yet come, nor that judgment yet executed, but are yet (no man knows when) to be expected, and that the judgment, with which that nation is here particularly threatned, was to be executed only on other nations, there remaining for the Jews, only a triumphant return to their ancient dignity, and a flouriſhing eſtate in this world; which certainly are no way intimated in the words, but on the contrary a deſtruction of all the ſinners among them by a national judgment, though the godly among them were not to be thereby conſumed. All which hath been already ſo fully compleated in the deſtruction of that people, within few years after Chriſt's coming, that to paſs by what hath been done, and look after things to be done, not at all by God here, or elſewhere promiſed, is to delude, and not to give a true expoſition of this prophecy.

From none of theſe expoſitions therefore (as we ſaid) have we certainly the right meaning of theſe words, as to the ſcope of them; all that we may gain by them to our purpoſe is a juſtification of the ſignification of ſome of the words, as they are by our Tranſlators rendred, and particularly of the two verbs, the firſt in לא שניתי Lo ſhaniti, I change not; the other in לא כליתם Lo celitem, ye are not conſumed: in the giving of the meaning of which, R. Ab. Ezra, and R. Tanchum agree with thoſe already named, only that the latter of them thinks that both of them, though in the form of the preterperfect tenſe, ought to be rendred in the ſignification of the future, I will not change, and ye ſhall not be conſumed; making the former to include a reaſon of the returning of God's providence to them as it was of old, and giving for the meaning, "Theſe promiſes "ſhall certainly come to paſs, although they "be deferred for a long while, for no change "or failing ſhall happen to me: and likewiſe "ye ſhall remain by the remaining of my law "among you, neither ſhall you be conſumed "or ceaſe to be." Into which meaning we ſhall not further enquire, he not fully expreſſing of it. If he mean the ſame that Kimchi doth, the ſame anſwer will ſerve. That which we take notice of, is, that according to theſe the meaning of the firſt word is given, by ſaying that God doth not, or will not alter his purpoſe and decree, concerning his hatred of the wicked, and in his appointed time bringing to condign puniſhment obſtinate ſinners, or his love to the good and care of them; ſo that however he delay the time of his evidencing theſe things by open judgments, his juſtice is not to be queſtioned, as if he now liked or ap-approved of ſuch things or perſons, which he had formerly declared his diſlike unto.

° Eccleſ. ix. 10.

This while with them we look on, as the import of the word here, we cannot but wonder at the impudence and folly of that railing Jew [p] Lipman, who ſaith that Chriſtians go contrary to the meaning of what is here ſaid, in affirming, that God, who before had not fleſh and blood, was changed to be fleſh and blood, or, as another copy hath it, who was before only the Father, and the Holy Spirit, was afterward changed to be the Son. In which objection of his is only much malice and impertinency; inaſmuch as by nothing that the Chriſtians ſay, nor by any conſequence that can be drawn from what they ſay, can it be concluded that they affirm any change or alteration in God or the Godhead, with whom they profeſs to be no variableneſs, neither ſhadow of changing, either in his nature or any of his attributes, all things remaining in him, the eternal Trinity, one God in three Perſons, as they were from eternity; nor by Chriſt's taking the manhood into God, was there any change of God into man, nor confuſion of ſubſtance, or alteration of perſon. Again, inaſmuch as, that he might pick a cavil againſt Chriſtians, he takes the word which here denotes God's immutability in his will, word, decree, and purpoſe, which with the Jews the Chriſtians abſolutely affirm, as if it imported here immutability of nature or ſubſtance, (though that be moſt true alſo:) ſo that it is a cavil ſought, not offered to him, either by the word as here uſed, nor any thing by the Chriſtians affirmed. He had no occaſion to ſay this, but he having ſaid it, it was convenient to take ſome notice of it, leſt others of his ſect might applaud him in it, and think to be true what he feigneth.

But of the concurrence of the other Jews, in rendring the latter verb in the ſame notion that our Tranſlators do, who render it are not conſumed, we take more notice, becauſe ſome learned Chriſtians take it in another ſignification, and would have it rendred, And ye ſons of Jacob [q] do not deſiſt, or leave off to do evil: ſo in Munſter and the Tigurin Tranſlations more lately: and the Septuagint of old ſeems ſo to have taken the word to ſignify, reading this word with the two firſt of the following verſe, And ye ſons of Jacob have not receded from the unjuſt dealings, or wickedneſs of your fathers: as likewiſe the printed Arabick Verſion following that, and the Syriack alſo. And from the word in that notion rendred, would flow a very convenient ſenſe, taking the whole verſe as a confirmation of what is before ſaid; and that they certainly muſt expect that judgment denounced to come in its appointed time, inaſmuch as the Lord is unchangeable in his purpoſe of puniſhing incorrigible, unrepenting ſinners, and they would not leave off their evil courſes, nor repent them of their ſins, nor deſiſt from them.

But others, and they the major part, viz. all that follow the Vulgar Latin and divers others alſo of modern Interpreters, prefer, with the forementioned Jewiſh writers, the other notion of being conſumed, as more uſual to the verb in the conjugation or form here uſed; according to which our Tranſlators render are not conſumed: but then in giving the meaning and connexion of the whole verſe, there is among thoſe who embrace this ſignification of this word ſome difference. Some taking it as ſpeaking of the time paſt or preſent, make the coherence with what goes before, and the meaning, to this purpoſe, as may be collected out of them put together; that doubtleſs it ſhall be ſo as he ſaid, he will come in judgment to thoſe ſinners. For he (the Lord) who hath determined and pronounced that he will not leave impenitent ſinners unpuniſhed, doth not change his will and purpoſe. But how then is it that the ſons of Jacob, whoſe fathers and themſelves have been great and obſtinate ſinners, have not long ſince been, or are not yet conſumed? It is from the ſame unchangeableneſs in God, who as he is juſt, ſo is likewiſe merciful and long ſuffering, not willing the death of ſinners, but rather that they ſhould come to repentance: and therefore determined as to execute juſtice, ſo not to be haſty in executing it, but to give ſpace for repentance, that ſo the neceſſity and equity of his judgments executed on ſuch as would not lay hold on his mercy by repentance, while they had time allowed for it, may appear: and beſides, that he might ſhew how juſt he was in keeping promiſe, and his covenant made with their forefathers, Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob, in ſo long ſparing for their ſakes their rebellious poſterity, who would make no end of ſinning: ſo that it was not through any change in him, that they have not yet been conſumed, but ſhall now be ſeverely puniſhed; but from his mercy and their obſtinacy oppoſing and rejecting it. So that they cannot but ſay (if they will rightly conſider the matter) it is of the Lord's mercy that we are not conſumed, becauſe his compaſſions fail not. Great is thy faithfulneſs, Lam. iii. 22, 23.

This, however they differ in expreſſions, ſeems to be the ſcope that the moſt of [r] Expoſitors will have theſe words to aim at. There are that read them by way of interrogation or admiration, [s] For I the Lord change not, and are not ye, O ſons of Jacob, conſumed? how wonderful a thing is it that the Lord being immutable in his judgment againſt refractory ſinners, they ſhould not yet be conſumed! how hath mercy prevailed againſt judgment! this falls in with what hath been already ſaid, and requires the ſame anſwer.

There may be propoſed another way thus, "Expect certainly the execution of the judg-"ment ſpoken of, and that I will in due time "call to an account ſinners, for I the Lord "change not:" [t] of which that you may not doubt, doubt, you have from a contrary effect and evidence of my immutability a proof; for therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed; though the wicked have hitherto domineer'd, and wickedneſs reigned, yet you true ſons of Jacob, that fear me, as Jacob did, have been preſerv'd; by virtue of my promiſe and mercy they have not been able to root you out.

[p] See Wagenſel Correct. Lipm. [q] Stokes. Stock. &c. [r] Pelican. Ribera, Chr. à Caſtro's Paraph. Tirin. Tarnov. [s] Sanctius. [t] See Vatab.

But as we ſaw before, that by a learned Jew it is noted, that this verb is to be rendred rather in the ſignification of the future, and with reſpect to what was to come, not to what was paſt or preſent; ſo it is by [u] Some of good judgment and learning among Chriſtians alſo taken, that the words may be rendred, Therefore, or and, ye ſons of Jacob ſhall not be conſumed, as part of the prophecy of what ſhould be to the godly, when the Lord ſhould come to execute his judgment ſpoken of on the wicked: and for making out the meaning to this purpoſe, they underſtand by the ſons of Jacob the godly amongſt the Jews, (they who being of the faith of Jacob, and following his ſteps, deſerved peculiarly to be called his children or ſons, according to what we learn in like kind, whom properly to call children of Abraham, Galat. iii. 7. and Rom. ix. 7.) and then the coherence will appear thus, I will certainly come near to you in judgment, againſt the ſinners among you. For I am the Lord and change not, but am ſtill, as ever, inexorable to obſtinate and impenitent ſinners, one that will in due time take vengeance on them however for a long time I have ſpared them; but ye true ſons of Jacob, ye whoſe heart is right with me, and who lay hold on my promiſe to him made, and by walking in his ſteps approve your ſelves his genuine children, heirs of his faith; ye, as you are not partakers of their ſins, ſo neither ſhall ye be of the judgments brought upon them: I will make a way for your eſcape, that ye periſh not with them. And that ſo he effected it, is made evident by the hiſtory. When the judgment here propheſied of had its execution and completion in the deſtruction of the city and temple of Jeruſalem, and the wicked obſtinate ſinners of the Jews in it; God provided for the eſcape and deliverance of ſuch as had embraced the doctrine of Chriſt, and yielded obedience to him: ſo that they were not conſumed, as, if God had not taken a ſpecial care for them, they muſt neceſſarily have been. And ſo taking by that day of the Lord's coming to be meant the ſpace (as we have ſaid on the firſt and ſecond verſes) betwixt John Baptiſt's and Chriſt's beginning to preach, and the deſtruction of the temple; and by that ſwift judgment the deſtruction of the wicked among the Jews, together with their city and temple; and by the ſons of Jacob thoſe that believed in Chriſt, whom Jacob ſo long before waited for, and tranſmitted the expectation of to his poſterity; and by what is ſaid that they ſhould not be conſumed, their eſcape and wonderful preſervation from that ſo univerſal a deſtruction, by their being from God warned to go out of the city, while there was an opportunity offered, which accordingly they did to a place called Pella, ſo that there was not one Chriſtian left in the city when it was deſtroyed, but all eſcaped, as Euſebius teſtifies in the third book of his hiſtory, cap. 5. and Epiphanius de Ponderib. cap. 15. [w] we cannot but ſee all that is here ſpoken from the beginning of the chapter to the end of the 6th verſe, to have been ſo fully made good by evidence of fact, that there is no ground by virtue of this prophecy, to look for any thing yet to be expected, which hath not been made good, as the Jews, that they may keep up themſelves in their willing error of denying Chriſt yet to be come, would have us do: and that there is in them a full and ſatisfactory anſwer to that blaſphemous murmuring and queſtioning in the laſt verſe of the preceding chapter, God delighteth in them that do evil, elſe why doth he ſuffer them to proſper? or, Where is the God of judgment? ſo that, in reſpect to thoſe who ſo ſpake, and to whom theſe things were then ſpoken, viz. the people of the Jews, there is no need of looking farther. Mean while, what happened then to them is to all others for example, to teach them that though God for a while in his forbearance and giving time to repent, ſuffer the wicked to proſper, yet he will doubtleſs in due time manifeſt his juſtice in puniſhing them for their evil doings; and if he do not in this life, whether by perſonal judgments on particular perſons, or national on wicked nations, yet he certainly will after death, and at that general terrible judgment at the laſt day; of which that ſevere judgment then on the Jewiſh nation, was ſo lively a figure and emblem; as that it cannot but put all that will conſider things in mind of it, and warn them to expect it, though it be not that which is here primarily meant. And this ſeems the moſt plain and the literal way of the expounding theſe words hitherto.

7. ¶ Even from the days of your fathers, ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them: return unto me, and I will return unto you, ſaith the Lord of hoſts: but ye ſaid, Wherein ſhall we return?

Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances.] The connexion of theſe words with the former is by Expoſitors differently given, according to their different expoſitions of thoſe. According to thoſe that render the foregoing verb in the notion of deſiſting or ceaſing [from evil] theſe words will be a farther declaration of what was by it ſaid, viz. that they continued ſtill to do, as all along from the days of their fathers they had done, and would not be brought to repent of their evil doings and forſake them, which now yet they are exhorted to do, and in the following words ſome of thoſe their ſins particularly enumerated.

[u] Caſtal. Grot. [w] Idem adverſus Hæreſes, p. 123. And ſee Grot. Dr. Hammond on Mat. xxiv. 16. Simſon's Chron. part 7. p. 46. Anno Chriſti 67.

According

According to thoſe who render it in the notion of being conſumed, and take it in the ſenſe of the time paſt or preſent, they will be an amplification of God's mercy in that they have not been, nor are yet conſumed, by aggravation of their ſins from their long and obſtinate continuance in them, without repentance of, or turning from them, which by the ſame unchangeable mercy they are called on yet to do. But according to the latter way (which we prefer) of rendring it ye ſhall not be conſumed, there is not any ſuch connexion to be looked after, but the former part of this chapter containing an anſwer to what was, whether by impatient murmurers or ſcoffers objected againſt God's juſtice and immutability of his methods in proceeding againſt wicked doers, being in the ſixth verſe concluded, he paſſeth to a [x] new matter, a diſtinct part of the chapter, a new conteſt againſt the people of that time for other ſins, by which they had provoked him to ſend on them already ſome previous judgments; for removing which, and preventing thoſe moſt terribles ones mentioned in the foregoing verſes, and which he doth again before the end of this prophecy put them in mind of, he ſhews them the only way to be, to return unto him by repentance, and therefore in compaſſion to them calls on them ſo to do.

So R. Tanchum ſaith that though theſe words are not diſtinguiſhed [from the former] in the writing, yet in ſenſe they are, being an addreſs to the people of that time alone. So Junius [y] and Tremellius look on it as a new conteſt or expoſtulation, added to thoſe former, againſt contempt and profanation of his worſhip (chap. i. ver. 6. and chap. ii. 10. 2*ly*, Againſt illegal marriages, polygamy, and divorce (thence to ver. 17.) 3*ly*, Againſt their murmuring, repining, or ſcoffing at his juſtice and judgments, (ver. 17. of that ſecond chapter) with an anſwer hitherto. And now, 4*ly*, here againſt ſacrilegious detention of tithes and things belonging to God, hence to ver. 13. where and in the following verſes he adds another againſt their ſlighting of his worſhip and of repentance. So Grotius looks on it likewiſe as a diſtinct ſpeech, ſaying that here leaving off to ſpeak to whom he ſpake in the laſt words, he returns again to ſpeak to the wicked. And according to this ſuppoſition, that here is a tranſition to a new matter of expoſtulation, without mingling this verſe with the preceding, in conſtruction or continuation of ſentence, will be the plaineſt way of proceeding to what follows.

Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them.] Abarbinel notes that in theſe words, ye are gone away from mine ordinances, God accuſeth them of breach of his affirmative precepts, or thoſe that injoined them to do ſuch things, as he commanded: in the other, and have not kept them, of the breach of his negative precepts, or ſuch as forbad them to do ſuch, or ſuch things, which he ſaith is agreeable to an obſervation of their ancient Doctors, that the latter word שמר Shamar is uſually applied to negative precepts: but without this nicety of diſtinction R. D. Kimchi gives the meaning in plain and perſpicuous words, thus. "A long time is paſt ſince that ye have not "kept (or obſerved) mine ordinances, both "[z] ye, and your fathers: therefore have I "brought evil on them, and on you: but "now from henceforth return, &c." In much like manner Grotius; "Ye now ſo live as ye "formerly lived when ye deſerved to be car-"ried away into captivity, and will again de-"ſerve to ſuffer the like." That here, while he mentions their doings, are intimated ſuch evils and judgments, as they had already pulled down on themſelves, and ſhould farther pull down if they continued in thoſe ways, is manifeſt by what follows; as in the ſubſequent verſes, where ſuch evils are named, ſo in the next words of theſe, wherein he exhorts them to repentance, as the only means to remove what they already ſuffered, or were further threatned with, and to reconcile him whom they had provoked, to themſelves, and regain his favour. Return unto me, and I will return unto you. Return unto me by repentance, and I will return unto you in mercy and favour, and care over you, by my good providence. Remove you the evil of your doings, and I will remove the evil of my judgments, the effects of my diſpleaſure for that evil. [a] God neither recedes nor returns, but when he ſhews tokens of his diſpleaſure he is ſaid to turn away; when of his favour, to return.

But ye ſaid, wherein ſhall we return?] The import of theſe words is by [b] Some here given (as of like expreſſions before in this Prophet) if ye ſhall ſay wherein ſhall we return? and R. Tanchum well notes that the particle ב be, in, or with, in the word במה Bammeh, in what, or wherein, hath here the force or ſignification of מן from, as in ſome other places; for that the ſenſe is not in, or with, what thing ſhall we return unto thee? but from what thing ſhall we return, &c. whether they openly and in words ſaid thus, or inwardly and in their thoughts, is all one; what they thought or ſaid in their hearts, being as well known to God, as what they uttered with their mouths; it argues their [c] great impudence, who being called on by God to return from their ſin, would not acknowledge themſelves guilty of any thing that they ſhould repent of, or amend in themſelves, but in juſtification of themſelves, ſay, [d] what is there in us that needs to be reformed? Kimchi thus paraphraſeth it, "Is "there any other matter beſides what thou "haſt hitherto reproved us for, of matters of "illegal ſacrifices, and concerning women [or "tranſgreſſion in matter of marriage] men-"tioned in the firſt and ſecond chapters?" To this he returns them an anſwer by ſpecifying what beſides thoſe things they were guilty in, viz. in their defrauding him in tithes and offerings: and he ſo doth it, as to give them notice of the hainouſneſs of that fault, ſaying, [x] Stock. [y] Jun. Trem. on chap. i. 6. [z] See Ezra ix. 7. and Neh. ix. [a] Calv. [b] R. Tanchum, R. D. Kimchi, and Grot. [c] Abarb. [d] Grot.

8. ¶ Will a man rob God? yet ye have robbed me: but ye ſay, Wherein have we robbed thee? in tithes, and offerings.

Will a man rob God? &c.] Of theſe words we find far different tranſlations, as, 1*ſt*, That of the ancient Latin, Si affiget homo Deum, quia vos configitis me, which the Authors of the Doway Tranſlation in Engliſh, render, ſhall a man faſten God? becauſe you do faſten me, with which though a harſh ſenſe, the Tigurin Verſion alſo agrees; though noting in the Margin, that otherwiſe it might be rendred, do violence to, and pierce, and otherwiſe, take away by force, and that inſtead of God, may be rendred, Judicem, the Judge. 2*ly*, That of the Greek, will a man ſupplant God? becauſe ye have ſupplanted me. And, 3*ly*, of the Chaldee, will a man provoke a Judge to anger? becauſe ye provoke me to anger. And, 4*ly*, the interlineary Verſion, Will a man take away God by force, (which muſt be underſtood of the things pertaining to God.) 5*ly*, Ought a man to ſnatch (or take away by rapine) thoſe thi gs that are God's? becauſe ye ſnatch away thoſe things that are mine, as Pagnine. 6*ly*, As Munſter, Will a man do violence to the judges? becauſe ye do violence to me.

That we may judge between theſe, and if there be any other that differs in ſenſe from ſome of theſe, and clear the ſenſe, it will be expedient to enquire into the ſignification of the principal verb in this expreſſion, becauſe on the acception of that depends the main of the matter, either for preferring any of theſe before the other, or reconciling them, if it be poſſible. That word (or verb) rendred by Ours, rob, is קבע Kaba, of which we may obſerve, that it is found but ſeldom in the Scriptures, viz. here in this and the following verſe four times, and in Prov. xxii. twice in the ſame verſe, viz. the 23d verſe, and not elſewhere, I mean in the form of a verb, for to look after ſome nouns which have the ſame radicals, which are but two neither, in Scripture, viz. קובע Koba, a helmet, and קבערת Kubaath, dregs, will not be much to our purpoſe. And this ſeldom uſe of it makes the ſignification not to be ſo well known as that of words oftner uſed. Divers of the [e] Jewiſh Grammarians and Interpreters tell us that it ſignifies, to take away by violence, to rob (as Ours well here expreſs it) or to ſpoil, as in the forecited place, Prov. xxii. 23. they render it: for in both places, viz. here and there, it ſeems to have the ſame ſignification. [f] Others looking on it as a Chaldee or Syriack word, at leaſt of more uſe in that language, thence would have us take or look for the ſignification of it: and in that the moſt uſual notion of it is, to fix, or faſten, to ſtick in, and the like. If this, as the learned Nicholas [g] Fuller obſerves, be looked on as the primary ſignification, then becauſe this is done by a violent percuſſion, or ſtriking, the other which the Jews give of oppreſſing, or taking away by force, or robbing, may be looked on as a metaphorical uſe of it, as agreeing in the act of violence or force with it. But however they fall in together in this common notion, I know not why that given by the Jews may not be thought as proper a ſignification of the word, when that tongue flouriſhed in its latitude anciently among them; except we ſhall think the notion of doing violence, to have been the more general and ancient notion of it. Surely the places which it is found in, in the Hebrew Text, which we have cited, do ſeem to require ſome other ſignification than that of fixing or faſtning. And the Doway Tranſlators who here render it, faſten, in the parallel forecited place of Prov. xxii. 23. render it peirce. And R. Solomon on that place, notes that in the Syriack Tongue it ſignifies alſo, to rob, as he proves by an example out of the Talmud. However theſe two, of robbing, or taking by violence from, and faſtning, are the two main ſignifications attributed to the word, to which all others given to it ought to be reduced, and what is ſpoken in expoſition of it to be examined by.

Now of theſe ſignifications, the Jewiſh Expoſitors more generally follow that which, as we ſaid, they give us, of violent, ſpoiling, taking from, or robbing. And ſo doth one of them, who tranſlating this with the other Prophets into Arabick, render it by غصب Gaſaba, which is violently to take away. But the Latin, as we ſee, follows the ſecond, of fixing, or faſtning; which yet divers of thoſe Expoſitors which follow that, will not have to be underſtood properly of faſtning, but rather of piercing and ſtriking or ſticking in; that ſo the meaning may be, that by ſinning againſt God, as they did, they did as it were, pierce and wound him, i. e. grieve and afflict him. So [h] divers learned men that follow the Vulgar Latin, giving to the word a figurative ſignification. But if we were to follow this tranſlation, I ſhould rather chooſe to take the word faſten in a more proper notion, as it will denote, to reſtrain, as what is faſtned is reſtrained, bounded, or limited, that it cannot go farther, and ſo is as it were ſhortned, or kept ſhort, ſtinted and ſtopped.

This notion may be illuſtrated out of the uſe of the word in the Arabick Tongue, wherein the root قبع [i] Kabaa ſignifies to ſhrink in, or pull, or put in, as when a tortoiſe ſhrinketh his neck into his ſhell, or a man his head into his ſhirt, or garment, to hide it; and to turn in, as when one turneth in, or doubleth inward or outward the mouth of a ſack, or bag. According to this notion, to faſten God, in reſpect to the matter of tithes and dues here ſpoken of, will be, to ſhorten that proportion that was due to him, to reſtrain and ſtop his allowance, and detain part of it from him, not giving the full of that which he by his law required, nor in its due time, but limiting and bounding it, according to what they thought fit. And to this meaning ſeems Aben Ezra to to incline, while he expounds it, to retain, or detain that which is due, which will alſo be confirmed by what follows, ver. 10. Bring ye in all the tithes; intimating that part of them were detained and ſtopped by them. And this being granted, theſe two tranſlations, will a man rob God? and will a man faſten God? though at firſt hearing they ſeemed very wide from one another, do meet in a middle notion of ſtraitning, or reſtraining; he that detains ought of a man's allowance, that pincheth (as we ſay) or ſhortens him in it, and doth not give him with a cheerful eye his full and due proportion, doth rob him, as well as he that by force takes away from him what he hath. And ſo to faſten, or fix God to their allowance and ſtint him, not giving him his whole due, is to rob him.

2

[e] Abu Walid, R. Tanchum, R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel. [f] R. Solomon. [g] Capit. Concord. MS. [h] See Ribera, Chr. à Caſtro, Menoch. and Tirin. [i] Ebn Athir, Kamus, &c.

And ſo theſe two expoſitions, which ſeemed moſt different, being brought thus far to agree, it will not be hard to reduce the reſt to one of the forementioned ſignifications. As for the Latin or modern verſions, it will be plain. The ancienter Greek rendring the verb by ſupplant, ſeems to have taken it to have the ſame ſignification with עקב Akab (which conſiſts of the ſame letters though otherwiſe tranſpoſed) to ſupplant, defraud, or deceive (whence Jacob according to Eſau's interpretation, had his name, Gen. xxvii. 36.) but it falls in well with the firſt ſignification, according to which the other Greeks render it more plainly, ἀποστερήσει, will a man defraud his God. The Chaldee rendring it, by, provoke to anger, uſeth his liberty of a Paraphraſt, rather than a literal Tranſlator, the provoking of God to anger being an effect of what they did, he expreſſeth the ſin by its effects and conſequents; and ſo in rendring judges (wherein he is as we ſaw by ſome others followed) what we and moſt others render God, taketh the word in a ſignification in which it is alſo uſed elſewhere in Scripture, viz. to ſignify [k] judges, who ſupply the place of God, and not only God himſelf.

By this enquiry into the ſignification of that word which we propoſed, have we not only diſcovered the grounds of the different tranſlations of this place, but in part alſo ſhewed how they are between themſelves more reconcileable than at firſt ſight or hearing might be judged. By what hath been ſaid will alſo eaſily appear, that among all there is not a more convenient or juſtifiable rendring than that of Ours, who tranſlate it to rob, which will expreſs wherein they ſinned in defrauding God, either by taking away or abridging and detaining what was due to him: and ſo from this neceſſary digreſſion in looking into the ſignification of the words, return we to conſider the ſcope of them.

Will a man rob God?] This queſtion thus put ſerves not only to convince them, that they were guilty of the breach of God's ordinances, which they denied themſelves to be, but ſhews together the greatneſs of the ſin wherein they offended, as a thing which even the common conſent of men, and their reaſon ſhewed moſt unfit to be done. Do ye not know that it is not fit that a man ſhould rob his God? ſaith Abarbinel, his God, or Gods, for the word Elohim is the plural number, in which though it be uſually ſpoken of the one true God, yet it is alſo otherwhere ſo uſed as to comprehend alſo idols and falſe Gods, ſuch as men made and took to themſelves in the place of God, though they were indeed no Gods. And [l] Some conceive, it ought here ſo to be taken, and that ſo there is a greater emphaſis in the words and force, for convincing them of great impiety, by ſhewing that they who knew and acknowledged the only true God, and pretended to ſerve him, did yet that towards him which any idolatrous, ignorant heathen would not dare, or offer to do toward their falſe Gods. Would any of them rob, or ſacrilegiouſly defraud thoſe whom they took, though falſly, to be gods, of ſuch dues, as under that notion of God, were looked on as belonging or due to them, though they were ſuch as could do them no good? none of them, but would abhor it as a wicked thing. Ye therefore are worſe and more wicked than any of them, for ye have robbed me, your benefactor, from whom ye have all that ye have. They alſo who take (as we before ſaid) God here for judges, or great men, look on it as an argument concluding from the leſs to the greater. If men dare not, or will not, or ought not to provoke ſuch perſons as are in authority among them on earth, by defrauding them of what is due to them, as it is plain they will not, or ought not; how much more ought you to beware of offending againſt me by robbing and defrauding me?

Yet ye have robbed me.] Ye have done it, yet ye deny it: They ſaid, or were, or behaved themſelves as if they ſaid, wherein have we robbed thee? Seeing they will not perceive or acknowledge wherein they had done it, he particularly expreſſeth it to them, ſaying, In tithes and offerings, in that they detained, and did not duly and willingly bring in thoſe dues, which he that gave them all that they had, did require, that they in acknowledgment of his bounty, ſhould offer and return to him, as a portion by him reſerved to himſelf for the maintenance of the Prieſts and Levites, and ſuch as waited on his ſervice, and for the relief of the poor, out of ſuch encreaſe of their fields, and fruits of the earth, and the like which he gave them. In detaining theſe from the Prieſts and Levites, to whom by his command they were to be given, and ſo robbing and defrauding them, they, he ſaith, robbed him himſelf. If they thought by this means to have [m] any eaſe or greater ſtore to themſelves, being, as it appears by what follows, then under a judgment of famine and ſcarcity, he gives them to know that they are in this deceived, and their penury, not their ſtore, ſhall be encreaſed by the continuance of his curſe upon them, ſaying in the next words, [k] Exod. xxi. 6. [l] Calvin. [m] Abarb.

9. Ye are curſed with a curſe: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

Ye are curſed with a curſe, for ye have robbed me, &c.] The words thus read, give us the effect, and ill conſequence of that their ſin of robbing God in tithes and offerings, and ſo the coherence is plain, and is that, which by many, if not moſt, Expoſitors is followed; and will be all one as to that, whether it be read as by Ours, and Others, in the preſent tenſe, ye are curſed, as ſpeaking of a curſe already on them, or (as Grotius takes it) in the future, of a curſe to come, or at leaſt to be continued on them, ye ſhall be curſed; viz. for this your ſin, even becauſe ye have robbed me, great evils (ſuch as appear to be in the following verſes, [n] penury and ſcarceneſs) ſhall come upon you; as if he ſhould ſay, becauſe you have ſcanted me, I will ſcant you, and repay you in your own meaſure. But a late learned [o] man thinks the meaning to be miſtaken in this rendring, and that to be put for the effect, which was indeed the cauſe of their robbing God, viz. that therefore they robbed him, becauſe they were curſed with that curſe of ſcarcity. He doth not (ſaith he) make the robbing of God the cauſe why they were curſed, but his curſe the impulſive cauſe why they robbed God: for they pretended that it was not to be thought much that they detained the tithes and offerings; ſeeing they were forced to it, by reaſon of the want of the fruits of the earth cauſed by the curſe of God. But God required that though they had ſcarcity, and his curſe were on them, yet they ſhould bring in his full tithes of what they had, which if they did, he promiſeth to return and bleſs them. This expoſition he prefers before any, though he name another alſo, viz. by way of interrogation, ye are curſed with a curſe, and do ye rob me? i. e. Is it not a wonder that ye are not deterred by the puniſhments which I have ſent on you, but do rob me even when ye are curſed? or without an interrogation, ye are curſed, and yet ye rob me, even this whole nation: as if he ſhould ſay, I cannot but accuſe you of great perverſneſs and ſtubbornneſs, who when ye be curſed by me, go on to rob me, and that your whole nation. This he ſaith, excepting againſt the ordinary tranſlations and expoſitions. But if we conſider the words in reſpect to what precedes, we ſhall find them to comprehend what is by either ſaid.

In the ſecond chapter, ver. 2. we hear God threatning to ſend a curſe upon them, yea, telling them that he had already curſed them. The ſins for which he there threatens them are manifeſt out of the foregoing chapter, to have been their miſbehaviour in bringing their offerings to God, in that they offered polluted bread upon his altar, and in that they brought to him, to whom the beſt of their ſubſtance was due, that which was torn, lame, ſick, and corrupt. There was in that plainly a robbing of him, while detaining to themſelves the beſt things which were due to him, they gave him only the worſt, and that which they cared not for. And for that, he threatneth, if they would not amend it, to ſend a curſe upon them; yea, tells them that the curſe was already gone forth: they that would rob him in that kind, would not ſtick to rob him in others alſo, though not fully expreſſed till now, viz. in defrauding him by detaining their tithes and offerings, which here mentioning, he mentions again that curſe by their evil dealing brought upon them, and tells them that it ſhould not be removed, till they brought in all the tithes into the ſtorehouſe; ſo that we may conceive, the cauſe of the curſe to have been their robbing him, and then the curſe being a curſe of ſcarcity and penury, that to have cauſed them, that they might make themſelves whole, as much as they could, to detain what they ſhould have given him, which he ſhews to have been a wrong courſe, and a farther cauſe to him of continuing the curſe on them, which ſhould not be removed but upon their amendment of their doings; ſo that, if it be aſked what was the cauſe of the curſe on them, we may ſay with ours and other Interpreters, that it was, their robbing of God: if, what was the cauſe that they pretended for their robbing of God, we may ſay with that learned man, that it was the penury or ſcarcity which by the curſe of God was brought on them: they pretended that his tithes and offerings would be more than they could ſpare out of that ſmall ſtore which he gave them, or their wicked thought (as if they ſtood on even terms with him) was, that ſeeing he had ſtinted and abridged them of what he was wont to give them, they would abridge him of what they were commanded and ought to give him: if then it be farther aſked what was the effect of this proceeding to rob him; that it was a continuance of his curſe to them. So that though we look on what he ſaith as true, in reſpect of the cauſe which they pretended for the robbing of God, yet we cannot but according to what Others ſay look on that their fraudulent dealing, as a cauſe provoking God to ſend his curſe on them, and ſo to join both expoſitions together. And in this the Jewiſh Expoſitors ſhew us the way. R. Solomon Jarchi thus expounds them, "Ye "are curſed with a curſe for this iniquity, be- "cauſe I ſend a curſe on the works of your "hands, and yet notwithſtanding ye do rob "me." Aben Ezra thus, "Becauſe ye ſay, "How ſhall we give with a good eye (or cheer- "fully) out of this little? but this is not "good (or well) that ye rob me, becauſe of "the curſe and ſcarcity with which ye are "curſed, and are in want; but this do, Bring in "all the tithe, and I will pour upon you a bleſ- "ſing, &c. that they ſhould not give with "an evil eye. By the curſe you ought to "have been corrected, (or amended) and not "provoked to rob me." R. David Kimchi, thus, "Ye are curſed with a curſe: for thoſe "tranſgreſſions which were before mentioned, "as

[n] So the Vulgar Latin, Ye are curſed with penury. [o] Lud. de Dieu.

" as he ſaid, yea, I have curſed you. Yet " farther, ſtill you do add iniquity to iniquity, " and ye rob me out of that which you ga- " ther, in that you do not give me of it the " offering, and the tithes, and ye ſay he rob- " beth us of rain, and ſends a curſe on the " fruits, and ſhall we give him the offering " and the tithes?" And laſtly Abarbinel, " Do ye think to get eaſe by denying to give " to me the tithe and offering, as ye ought? " the matter is not ſo, for for this iniquity ye " are curſed with a curſe by me. Yet not- " withſtanding ye rob me, and ſo the matter " is become hurtful to you, and hurtful to " the Levites and Prieſts."

What is added, even this whole nation, R. David Kimchi thinks to intimate, that the whole nation was not equally guilty of the other forementioned ſins, but of this they were. [p] Some join theſe words with the former words, thus, ye are curſed with a curſe, even this whole nation, becauſe ye have robbed me: but the plainer conſtruction ſeems that which Ours follow, ye are curſed with a curſe, and (or for) ye have robbed me, even this whole nation, all of you have done it; joining them with the immediately preceding words. The ſenſe will be much the ſame, and one infer the other, a general ſin and a general curſe; ſo that theſe words will neceſſarily be referred to both, and ſhew both the extent of the ſin, and of the curſe, all the whole nation being concerned in both. And for the puniſhment they repined, but did not repent of the ſin, but rather more obſtinately went on in it, and thought to have ſtood it out with God; but they took not a right courſe herein, they could not by this get the better of God. If they would be eaſed of the curſe, it muſt be by pacifying him, not by thinking to make themſelves whole out of his part; and therefore he ſhews in the next words, what is the only way for them to take, even to amend in themſelves their error.

10. Bring ye all the tithes into the ſtorehouſe, that there may be meat in mine houſe, and prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a bleſſing, that there ſhall not be room enough to receive it.

11. And I will rebuke the devourer for your ſakes, and he ſhall not deſtroy the fruits of your ground; neither ſhall your vine caſt her fruit before the time in the field, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

12. And all nations ſhall call you bleſſed: for ye ſhall be a delightſome land, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

Bring ye all the tithes into the ſtorehouſe, that there may be meat in mine houſe, and prove me now herewith, &c.] Their ſin, it appears, conſiſted, in that they detained part of thoſe tithes, which they ought, according to the law, to have paid, and did abridge God of his due; ſome (it ſeems) they brought in, as much as they thought good, not ſo much as he had commanded. So that by this means there was not ſufficient maintenance for thoſe who were to wait on his ſervice, the Prieſts and Levites, and were by that his due to have been maintained, that without diſtraction they might attend on their office; this their doing is called robbing of God.

For illuſtrating the things here ſaid, it will be convenient to look on what we have of the hiſtory of thoſe times recorded in the book of Nehemiah, in which we read, chap. v. 3. that there was a great dearth among them. And this curſe, here ſpoken of, ſeems to have been a preſent dearth or ſcarcity, not only one threatned for the future: then chap. xiii. ver. 10, &c. that " Nehemiah found that the por- " tions of the Levites had not been given " them, ſo that they forſook their work, and " fled every man to his field to get a liveli- " hood." And the occaſion of this appears to be, becauſe all the tithes were not paid, for ſo upon Nehemiah's contending with the rulers about it, it is ſaid, ver. 12. Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine and the oyl into the treaſuries, or ſtorehouſes, as in the Margin, and as here tranſlated; the word being in both the ſame, denoting ſuch a room as was at the temple appointed for the laying up of thoſe things brought in, as [q] ver. 5. of that 13th chapter is deſcribed, viz. a great room, or rooms, where they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincenſe, and the veſſels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oyl, which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the ſingers, and the porters, and the offerings of the prieſts. But thoſe things were not duly given to them as it appears by reaſon of the people's defect in bringing them in. Grotius thinks that the ſin, here found fault with, was, that whereas out of the Terumah or offering mentioned, Deut. xviii. 4. and ſuch other gifts as were due to the prieſts, they ought to have maintained the daily ſacrifices; they either did it not at all, or in ſuch illegal fraudulent manner as is reproved in the firſt chapter, and that the prieſts took the whole tithes to themſelves, and did not give to the Levites what ought to have been diſtributed to them, viz. nine parts of them, and that the whole nation became guilty in robbing God, becauſe that when they ſaw the Levites were not maintained out of the tithes, they abſtained from bringing them, and ſo God was robbed; both becauſe ſuch things were not performed to him, for which the offerings were given, and becauſe the Levites were not maintained, as they ought to be, but forſook his ſervice for want of ſuſtenance, and ſo he was deprived of their miniſtry.

But neither here, nor in Nehemiah, is any thing ſpecified in theſe kinds, but only the people accuſed for not bringing in all their tithes, by which failure in them, there was not meat in his houſe, i. e. maintenance, for his altar and thoſe that miniſtred at it, and did ſervice ſervice in his houſe, whether Prieſts or Levites. For which ſin he is angry with them, and commands it here to be redreſſed by the whole nation, which were all guilty, by their bringing in all the tithes into the ſtorehouſe; and ſo in Nehemiah it is ſaid that that zealous Governour cauſed all Judah to do, and that he then ſet treaſurers over the treaſuries, to ſee them diſtributed as they ought. How long before that was done, this was ſpoken by the Prophet, the hiſtory of the Scripture doth not make clear. But herein do theſe two books well agree, in that both here and there a dearth is ſpoken of: and as here the people are reproved for robbing God in tithes and offerings, ſo there it is teſtified that they did detain them; and whereas, here they are exhorted to redreſs that ſin, by bringing them all duly in, for removing the curſe that was on them; ſo there we [r] read that Nehemiah prevailed on them ſo to do, as perceiving that there was no other way for averting God's wrath from them. What was the iſſue on their doing ſo, the hiſtory doth not proceed ſo far as to declare, but here in the Prophet we have aſſurance, that if with a willing and pious mind they ſhould do ſo, it ſhould be good; God would remove the curſe, and abundantly bleſs them. If they would be ſo juſt to God, and kind to themſelves as to put it to the trial, by but doing what they ought to do, they ſhould find that God would not fail in any meaſure of his promiſe, but would on their obedience do more for them than by virtue thereof they might ordinarily expect. This he gives aſſurance of in the next words, And prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, &c.

[p] See Dutch Notes, and Stokes. [q] See chap. x. 38.

The connexion of theſe words with the former verſe, and the meaning of them, as likewiſe with the following, Abarbinel thus gives, [And if ye ſhall ſay that this curſe on the fruits of the earth, is not becauſe of this, but that it is an accident to you, come now let us make a trial, Bring ye all the tithes into the ſtorehouſe, as much as if he ſhould ſay, give the tithes and offerings in full meaſure, and with a good eye, and bring them into the Lord's ſtorehouſe, that there may be meat, i. e. ſuſtenance, and maintenance for the miniſters of my houſe, the Prieſts and Levites, and prove me now by this. For (ſaith he) though the law ſaith, ye ſhall not tempt the Lord your God, Deut. vi. 16. [s] yet now for your information at this preſent (on this preſent occaſion) prove me, and tempt (or try me) if I will not open you the windows of heaven, to give the rain of your land in its ſeaſon, in ſuch a manner as that I will pour out upon you a bleſſing to בלי די Beli dai, i. e. not to enough only, and ſuch as ſhall be ſufficient, but more and more than enough, that is, a great addition: (but R. D. Kimchi, ſaith he, expounds it, till there be not veſſels to put it in;) and by this ye ſhall know that for tranſgreſſing in matter of tithes, this curſe hath been on the corn (or encreaſe of the earth) hitherto. And becauſe the locuſt and the caterpiller came upon them, and devoured their fruits in the fields and vineyards, therefore he ſaith, and I will rebuke for you (or for your ſakes) the devourer, viz. the locuſt which devoureth the encreaſe, (or fruits of the earth) in ſuch a manner as that he ſhall not deſtroy any more to you the fruit of the ground, and of the vine; [t] for by the will of God are the ways of them; the beaſt of the field, and the fowl of the air ſhall make peace with thee, and the earth ſhall yield her encreaſe in full perfection, ſo that in reſpect of the abundance of the fruits which you ſhall have, all nations ſhall call you bleſſed. And whereas you have been a reproach amongſt the nations, becauſe of the famine occaſioned by the curſe, with which I curſed you, for your iniquities; now when all the fruits ſhall be bleſſed, ye ſhall be counted bleſſed, and proſperous in the eyes of all nations, and they ſhall ſay that your land is a land of delight, in which I delight, and that therefore the fruits thereof are bleſſed.] Thus have we given his words at large, becauſe they give an entire and good paraphraſe and expoſition of theſe three verſes, viz. 10, 11, 12. without interruption, yet becauſe of ſome different expoſitions of others, we ſhall again more particularly reflect on ſome of the words and expreſſions.

Prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, if I will not open, &c.] [u] Some look on this as an implicit form of oath, and an imperfect ſpeech to be ſupplied, by adding after it, if I will not open, &c. then let me be accounted worſe than my word, or the like; becauſe it is uſual with the Scripture, when things are to be expreſſed, which ſeem to denote ſomething which may ſound of blaſphemy, or contain any thing unfit to be ſaid, to be ſilent, and rather leave men to conceive them, than to utter them, or elſe to uſe ſome more comely or honeſt expreſſion. But however this rule may be elſewhere appliable, here ſeems to be no need of it. According to thoſe here is a ſtop made after, prove me now herewith, and a diſtinct member of the ſentence to begin. But read all, as in our Tranſlation and Others in a continued ſenſe, and the meaning is plain without any ſuch ſupply, or any abruptneſs, in the ſpeech, as if he ſhould ſay, you, in doing what you do, take a wrong courſe; neither your detaining my dues, nor murmuring againſt my juſtice, ſhall any thing prevail for good or help to you in this curſe of penury, under which ye ſuffer; but if you will find relief, do what I preſcribe to you, Bring in all your tithes, &c. and thereby prove me whether I will not quickly remove the curſe, by giving all neceſſary cauſes and means of a contrary bleſſing. And ſo it implies a promiſe, that he will do it, they ſhall certainly find it; [w] and that the parting with that which they detained, as fearing the parting therewith ſhould diminiſh their ſtore, [r] In the forecited place, and in chap. x. 35, 36, &c. [s] Compare Iſaiah vii. 11, &c. [t] Or, for when their ways pleaſe the Lord, Prov. xvi. 7. [u] Piſc. Rib. Menoch. Stock. and ſee Chr. à Caſtro, in Paraph. [w] Compare Haggai ii. 15. and forwards.

ſhall be a way, the only way for great encreaſe of it.

To this purpoſe R. D. Kimchi explains the words, "Bring in all your tithes, &c. that "there may be meat for thoſe that ſerve me, "and withal repent you of the faults men- "tioned; if ye do not, I will puniſh you "with other puniſhments; but if you do "bring in all the tithes and offerings as ye "ought, I will give you rain, and pour out "on you a bleſſing."

Pelicanus, a learned and ſerious man, in this expoſition follows him, who alſo from what is here ſaid, with great reaſon urgeth on Chriſtians under the goſpel, a diligent care of due and willing paying ſuch tithes and oblations, as are for the maintenance of the miniſtry, &c. As likewiſe [x] Oecolampadius, ſaying, that Chriſtian liberty exempteth none from tithes that were wont to be paid. But to receive what either they or any other in like kind, deduce and conclude from theſe words, will not be to our preſent purpoſe, which is to clear only the literal expoſition of the words, and ſhew what meaning they will bear.

If I will not open, &c.] That which is here promiſed, is generally agreed on to be a plenteous rain, by reſtraint of which, there was occaſioned a dearth in the land, and this the Lord ſaith, he will give. Though the rain proceed from natural cauſes conſtituted by God, as other things in the order of nature do, yet the ordering of thoſe cauſes and effects, as concerning rain, hath always been looked on as an immediate act of God himſelf, whereby his power and mercy towards men have been as viſibly declared as in any thing, and as a particular act of his providence, in cauſing it to come, (or not come) whether for correction, or for his land, or for mercy, Job xxxvii. 13. It is therefore an ancient ſaying among the [y] Jews, that there be three keys which God hath reſerved in his own hand, and hath not delivered to any miniſter or ſubſtitute, viz. the keys of life, and of rain, and of the reſurrection of the dead; in the ordering of the rain they look on his great power to appear, no leſs than in giving life at firſt, or afterwards raiſing the dead to it: agreeable to which St. Paul ſaith, that God left himſelf not without witneſs, in that he did good, and gave rain from heaven, and fruitful ſeaſons, Acts xiv. 17. It was a manifeſt teſtimony always to all nations of his divine power, and ſo acknowledged; ſo that it will not be neceſſary to look into thoſe many places of Scripture, wherein he ſpeaks of it as ſo, either by promiſing to give it for a bleſſing, or reſtrain it for a curſe and puniſhment.

When he reſtrains it, he is in a figurative ſpeech ſaid to ſhut up heaven, as Deut. xi. 17. and Luke iv. 25. and to ſtop the windows of heaven, Gen. viii. 2. equivalent to which is another expreſſion of making the heaven braſs, Deut. xxviii. 23. and ſtaying it, Haggai i. 10. When he giveth it in abundance, he is ſaid, to open the windows (or as [z] Others the cataracts or flood-gates) of heaven; as here; and likewiſe, Gen. vii. 11. but there it was for a curſe, (as ſometimes he diſpoſeth it, as we have ſeen out of Job xxxvii. 13.) here for a bleſſing. Which way ſoever it be intended, there is no doubt but that the expreſſion is (as Aben Ezra notes) a proverbial phraſe for ſignifying [a] great abundance: and becauſe abundance thereof may be (as we ſaid) as well for a curſe at ſome times, as a bleſſing at others; and it is in the diſpoſal of God to order for which it ſhall be, to ſhew that his promiſe here is for good, he adds, and pour you out a bleſſing, viz. of plenty, contrary to their preſent condition of penury. Both the rain, and the making it a bleſſing, is from him and his ordering. And he ſaith of that bleſſing, that there ſhall not be room enough to receive it. So according to our Tranſlation; and ſo (as we already noted from Abarbinel.) R. D. Kimchi (reporting it as from his father) ſaith that the meaning is, in ſuch plenty that you ſhall not have veſſels, or ſtorehouſes ſufficient to receive it. The words in the original are conciſe עד בלי די Ad beli dai, and literally ſignify only unto not enough, which being an expreſſion not ſo intelligible in other languages, Interpreters differently render and explain it in their own tongues, which rendrings it will be to no purpoſe to recite, inaſmuch as they all agree in this, that it is an expreſſion to denote great abundance, which ſhall afford them not only enough to ſatisfy them, but more than enough, that they ſhall have to ſpare, plenty without meaſure, or ſuch as for its abundance cannot be meaſured, as R. Tanchum expreſſes it. Inſtead of what is in the Text of our Bibles, is put in the Margin, [b] empty out, which either muſt be underſtood, as that in the Text, or elſe will not be ſo clear an expreſſion, inaſmuch as it may ſeem to import, that God's ſtore may be emptied, which can never be. L. de Dieu would have it underſtood, as long as there is ſufficiency, which is perpetually, for God's ſufficiency cannot be exhauſted. But for the completing to them a bleſſing contrary to the curſe under which they ſuffered, it would not be ſufficient that they ſhould have rain and fruitful ſeaſons; theſe might make the earth yield her encreaſe, and bring forth in plenty all manner of grain and fruits, and yet they by other means be deprived of them, as by locuſts, canker-worms, caterpillers, and the like devouring creatures, which God calls his great army, Joel ii. 25. which in a ſhort time oft have deſtroyed the hope of the whole year, and occaſioned great famines, when there hath been expectation of greateſt plenty; and probably theſe were part of that curſe now upon them. For perfecting therefore the bleſſing here promiſed on their amendment of their ways, he promiſeth alſo to ſecure them from theſe, and all hurt by them, ſaying, I will rebuke the devourer for your ſakes, (or to, or for you) i. e. that all things may proſper to you. The devourer; becauſe there were many ſorts of ſuch creatures, as as may devour and corrupt the corn and fruits, he puts a general name that comprehends all; all of them will he rebuke, i. e. hinder from doing hurt. They are wont to do hurt, not only to the trees of the ground, the corn and herbage, but to the fruit-trees alſo, by cauſing them alſo not to be able to bring any fruit to perfection, as appears by Joel i. 7. according to what ſome there expound the words. However that place be underſtood, the thing is known and manifeſt, and therefore both Munſter and the Tigurin Latin Verſion, inſtead of what Ours render, neither ſhall your vine caſt her fruit before the time in the field, &c. tranſlate it, neither ſhall he (i. e. the devourer) make your vine barren (or unfruitful to you in the field,) and to that doth that expoſition of Abarbinel (which we have ſeen) ſeem to incline. The verb תשכל Teſhaccel is of that form, as that it ſignifies ſometimes to cauſe to make abortive, to deprive of, and the like in an active ſenſe, as Deut. xxxii. 25. The ſword, &c. ſhall deſtroy, or bereave, and Ezek. xiv. 15. If I cauſe noiſom beaſts to paſs through the land, ושכלתה Veſhiccelattah, and they ſpoil it, or bereave it. And in the ſame ſenſe, Hoſea ix. 12. שכלתים Shiccaltim, I will bereave them, to omit other examples: and ſometimes again in an abſolute ſenſe, viz. to be abortive, to be deprived of, or caſt fruit before it be perfect, as Gen. xxxi. 31. Thy ewes and thy ſhe-goats, לא שכלו Lo ſhiccelu, have not caſt their young (or been abortive,) and Job xxi. 10. Their cow calveth, ולא תשכל Velo teſhaccel, and caſteth not her calf. Thoſe therefore mentioned take the verb in the former ſignification; Ours and moſt Others, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Expoſitors, in the latter, to which we the more incline, becauſe otherwiſe here will be a change of the gender in the verb, ſpeaking of the ſame thing, for that in the word deſtroy is maſculine, but here is feminine, ſo that they ſeem one to agree with the firſt noun locuſt, which is of the maſculine gender, and the other with vine in the feminine, however ſuch change of genders may be admitted: and ſeeing though the locuſts deſtroy not the vines, yet there may be other means, as blaſts, or blights, and hurtful winds, and like cauſes, whether from within or without, which may make them loſe or caſt their fruit before it comes to maturity, even after a great ſhew and likelihood of plenty; from hurt by all ſuch cauſes, whether from ſuch devouring creatures, or any other means, God here promiſeth to ſecure them upon their turning to him, and to give them both the encreaſe of the earth, and fruit of the vine, and ſo all neceſſary things in ſuch plenty and perfection, that all nations ſeeing God's great goodneſs ſhewed unto them, ſhall call them bleſſed, For ye (ſaith he) ſhall be ארץ חפץ Erets chephets, a delightſome land, or land of delight, or deſire; worthy to be deſired, ſaith the Vulgar, i. e. (as [c] Some will) a land that men would deſire to live in. So R. Tanchum, a land to be deſired and choſen for its pleaſantneſs, and excellency, to the ſame ſenſe that it is ſaid, which is the glory of all lands, [d] Ezek. xx. 6, 15. [e] Others with Abarbinel underſtand it, a land of deſire, or well pleaſing to God, i. e. ſuch as he takes delight in, and ſhews extraordinary reſpect and favour to, both to the people and the land, (as Aben Ezra) as he ſaith elſewhere of Zion, that ſhe ſhould be called Hephzibah, Iſaiah lxii. 4. i. e. my delight is in her, becauſe, ſaith he, the Lord delighteth in thee: and the comparing that place with this, ſeems to make for this expoſition, and it will be well illuſtrated by what is ſaid, Deut. xi. 12. a land which the Lord thy God careth for, (or ſeeketh,) the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even unto the end of the year, viz. to give it its rain in due ſeaſon, the firſt rain to make it ſpring up, and the latter rain to bring it to perfection, and ſo to preſerve the fruits of the earth, that they might gather in their corn, and their wine, and their oil, ver. 14. which is the ſame care, and the ſame bleſſing that is here promiſed. This expoſition the Syriack follows, rendring it ארעא דצבייני Ar'o detzebyoni, A land of my delight, good will or pleaſure, i. e. to which I bear good will, or have good liking to. The Chaldee likewiſe taketh it in, rendring, And all nations ſhall praiſe you, becauſe you dwell in the land of the houſe of my majeſtatick preſence, and do therein my pleaſure. He ſuggeſts therein a double meaning or reſpect to the word חפץ Chephets, as, firſt, that they or their land ſhould be called a land of delight, or good will, becauſe God delighted to dwell in it, and, ſecondly, becauſe the inhabitants thereof did the good pleaſure of God and delighted to do his will; and therefore he delighted in them, and to do good to them, as appeared by his extraordinary bleſſings poured out upon them, more than on other people, which they ſhould all acknowledge and call them bleſſed for it; ſo ſaith the Lord of hoſts, of all the hoſts of heaven and earth, who hath power and command of all, and therefore ſo ſhall it certainly be, as he ſaith.

[x] On ver. 8. [y] Talmud in Sanhedrin. cap. Chelek. and in Taanith. c. 1. [z] See Vulg. Lat. and Doway Engl. [a] Compare 2 Kings vii. 19. [b] And ſo the Interlineary.

13. ¶ Your words have been ſtout againſt me, ſaith the Lord: yet ye ſay, What have we ſpoken ſo much againſt thee?

14. Ye have ſaid, It is vain to ſerve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hoſts?

15. And now we call the proud happy: yea, they that work wickedneſs are ſet up, yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

16. ¶ Then they that feared the Lord, ſpake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened, and heard it; and a book of remembrance was

[c] Jerom. &c. and Tirin. [d] See Dan. xi. 16. and ſo Zach. vii. 14. ארץ חמדה. [e] R. Solomon Jarchi, Aben Ezra, was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.

Your words have been ſtout againſt me, ſaith the Lord.] Theſe words may be coupled with the former, as if they were a complaint of the Jews ſtubbornneſs, that though God had reproved them for their ſins (ſuch as have been expreſſed) and by ſome judgments warned them of his diſpleaſure for them, and likewiſe had invited them to repentance, and promiſed upon their repentance to remove thoſe judgments, and turn the curſe, with which he had curſed them, into a bleſſing, [f] yet this was ſo far from working in them repentance that they grew more and more inſolent, and inſtead of acknowledging their faults and ill deſerts, proceeded in ſpeaking againſt him and his juſtice, as if he inflicted on them worſe than they deſerved, not accepting of any ſervice from them, and mean while ſeemed to favour thoſe that were notoriouſly wicked, and tempted him, and deſpiſed him, [g] and ſo ſet at nought what by the Prophets was ſpoken to them for their good. Wherefore he proceeds farther to reprove them, and mind them of the ill conſequents of ſuch their ill behaviour, which ſhall be occaſion of more heavy judgments, and final deſtruction, as between this and the end of the chapter he ſhews. Or we need not be ſolicitous of the coherence of theſe words with thoſe immediately preceding, but may look upon them as a new reproof, or at leaſt afreſh reſumed; and on what follows as a beginning or continuation of a prophecy [h] for the time to come, and of the terrible day of the Lord; after the former words inſerted for ſhewing them what was the cauſe of that judgment of famine at preſent upon them, and by what means they might remove it, for the fault here objected to them, is much the ſame with that mentioned in the laſt verſe of the foregoing chapter. However we make or judge of the coherence, the meaning of the words in themſelves will be the ſame, your words have been ſtout againſt me, [i] ſtout and great, or inſolent words have ye ſpoken againſt me, ſaith Abarbinel; and that will be the ſenſe however there be ſome little difference between [k] Tranſlators in expreſſing it. For all look upon it to denote that their words were ſuch as would be irkſome, grievous, and burthenſome to any man, and overcome his patience, by caſting hard and odious things on him undeſervedly; and ſo (God ſpeaking in the language of men) looks on them as to himſelf; [l] or, that their words were more and more inſolent againſt him.

Yet ye ſay, wherein have we ſpoken ſo much againſt thee. The words ſo much are ſupplied or added above what is in the letter of the Hebrew Text; I ſuppoſe to expreſs what Some (as namely [m] Kimchi) obſerve that the word נדברנו Nidbarnu, being in a paſſive form though active ſignification, implies more than in a ſimple active form, ſo as to denote not only ſpeaking, but a continual, reiterated, or much and frequent ſpeaking; and ſo here doth the Chaldee render, wherein have we multiplied ſpeaking, or ſpoken much, againſt thee? which way Ours therefore take: Others ſeem not to lay any ſuch weight upon it, but ſimply render it, what have we ſpoken againſt thee? but generally they render it actively, as it is elſewhere uſed, as Pſalm cxix. 23. Princes בי נדברו Bi nidbaru, ſpake againſt me; and Ezek. xxxiii. 30. הנדברים Hannidbarim, which Ours render ſtill talking againſt. Yet here Abarbinel thinks it may be more conveniently taken for a verb paſſive, as well in ſignification as in form, and be rendred, what are we ſpoken of to thee, what is ſaid of us to thee, or what are we reported by falſe accuſers to have ſaid againſt thee, as men uſe to do when they are accuſed of ſome ill that they have ſpoken in ſecret, to ſay to him that tells them of it, what falſe report is this that hath been brought to you concerning us? this way alſo Montanus commends, though not mentioning whom he follows in it. The words either way taken, include a denial of the fact, and ſhew their folly in thinking that God did not know what they thought and ſaid in ſecret, even in their hearts, except they ſpake it openly and loudly in the ears of all, or elſe ſome to whom they ſpake it ſhould report it to God. He therefore, to ſhew that he knew both what was in their mouths and hearts, and to convince them of their guiltineſs in that which he accuſeth them of, anſwers them by a particular declaration of what they ſaid. If ye ſay, what have we ſpoken againſt thee? it is this, ye have ſaid, it is vain to ſerve God, &c.

Ye have ſaid ſo, at leaſt thought in your hearts, which is all one with ſpeaking, in the ears of God. It is vain to ſerve God, שוא עבד אלהים Shav abod Elohim. The Greek and ancient Latin, He is vain that ſerveth God, as if they had read עובד Obed, he that ſerveth, for Abod, to ſerve: but I do not ſuppoſe them to have read ſo, but only to have given the meaning as they thought convenient, for it is all one to ſay, It is in vain to do ſuch a thing, or, He is vain that doth ſuch a thing; the meaning of both being, It is to no purpoſe that he doth ſuch a thing, or he looſeth his labour that doth it, he gets nothing by it, as the Chaldee here paraphraſeth it, He gains nothing which ſerves the Lord. It is vain: to wit, to him that ſo doth: though it may, as [n] Some think, be referred to him to whom it is done, i. e. no profit to God if we ſerve him: according to what is ſaid, Job xxxv. 7. [o] If thou be righteous, what giveſt thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand? but the former is the plainer. The expreſſion gives to ſuppoſe, that they ſerved God, and this ſuppoſition the Syriack taking in renders, In vain have we ſerved God, and ſo it well agrees with what follows, and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, what Mammon, or wealth, [f] See Cyril. [g] See Abarb. [h] As Aben Ezra notes, This Prophecy is לעתיד Leatid, concerning the time to come. [i] Abarb. and ſee the Greek. [k] See Vulg. Lat. Chald. Syriack, &c. Ribera, &c. [l] Vat. and ſee Calv. [m] See Abarb. here, and on Ezek. xxxiii. 30. [n] Abarb, [o] Read Job xxii. 2, 3.

wealth, have we gained? ſaith the Chaldee, (as if it were for Mammon's ſake only that they ſerved God, and ſo indeed not God at all, but Mammon.)

His ordinance, or as in the Margin, his obſervation,] i. e. that we have obſerved thoſe things that he hath commanded us to obſerve. What advantage have we gained by it? yea though we have walked mournfully (or as the Margin hath it) in black, [p] which is the habit of mourners: or, as Others, with bowing down, or the like ſubmiſs geſture, before the Lord of hoſts; and ſhewed in our behaviour all ſigns of penitence, and [q] awful fear of him by mourning, faſting, and humbling our ſelves in contrition of ſpirit (as the Chaldee hath it) before him and the like. Which laſt words Abarbinel ſeems to expound otherwiſe, viz. "We have "not only not gained any thing, but withal, "have been forced to walk mournfully and "afflictedly before the Lord, i. e. becauſe we "have kept his commandments." But the former conſtruction ſeems plainer, in that the particle כי Ci, that, or becauſe, with which the laſt foregoing member of the ſentence is joined with what goes before, is here again repeated with a copulative conjunction, that we have done that, and that we have done this. Their complaint (according to him) was, that there was no profit in ſerving God, either on God's part or their own, no advantage to either; and therefore that it was a vain labour: they were happier that ſaved themſelves that trouble; ſo it follows,

And now (or [r] now therefore) we call the proud happy.] Proud, inſolent, preſumptuous men, who will not be kept in by any bounds, nor obſerve God's ordinances, as we do, nor walk humbly before him, [s] but tranſgreſs all laws of religion and juſtice. [The ſame word uſed, Pſalm xix. 13. ſubſtantively is rendred prides, or preſumptuous ſins; but here adjectively, preſumptuous ſinners.] Such we look upon to be in a condition more to be envied and deſired, than pitied or feared for, inaſmuch as they enjoy all wordly pleaſures and proſperity, nor are overtaken, or, as far as we can perceive, like to be overtaken with any puniſhment or miſchief, in their perſons, or any belonging to them; yea ſo far is it from that, that they that work wickedneſs (ſet themſelves purpoſely to do it) are ſet up (or built, as the Margin hath it, for ſo the word נבנו Nibnu literally ſignifies) i. e. are firmly eſtabliſhed, like a new building, ſaith [t] One, not likely quickly to fall or decay. They flouriſh in their offspring, ſay [u] Others, alluding to the name בן Ben, ſon, in reſpect to which the verb that ſignifies building is uſed for to obtain children, and ſo by Ours rendred, Gen. xvi. 2. and xxx. 3. i. e. they raiſe their houſes and families, as [w] One paraphraſes it here: [x] they are not cut off, but leave a numerous poſterity to keep up their name; or generally, they flouriſh and proſper more and more, all things thrive and proſper with them, yea, farther yet, they that ſet themſelves ſo impudently to ſin, as to tempt God, as if they did it on purpoſe to try and prove him, whether he could or would puniſh ſinners, and to provoke and dare him to do his worſt, to execute judgment if he be a God of judgment; even theſe are delivered, and eſcape without any of thoſe puniſhments in the law, or by the Prophets threatned againſt obſtinate, impenitent ſinners. Theſe are the words, or thoughts of thoſe unſound ones in their religion, and unſincere in their practice, who, looking on what they ſaw at preſent, and not on what ſhould certainly in due time be made manifeſt for clearing God's juſtice, and his perpetual love to good, and hatred of evil, did hence take occaſion of queſtioning whether there were any juſt Judge or judgment: and of repining and murmuring againſt God's ordering of the affairs of men, and ſo of contemning and ſetting at nought what was by the Prophets, reproving them for their ſins, and calling them to repentance for removing ſuch judgments as were on them, or preventing of others, ſaid unto them. Who they were that ſaid theſe words, and when they ſaid them, and concerning whom, it is not particularly expreſſed. R. Tanchum therefore, as he did alſo, chap. ii. 17. looks upon them as repreſenting words which ſhould in time to come be ſpoken by Iſrael in captivity, ſuch at leaſt, as if they did not ſpeak or profeſs, yet might ſeem to have occaſion to do it. And that they are here recited for reproof to them that ſhould be impatient under the length of their captivity, and forſake their religion, and ſpeak thus in reſpect to what they ſhould perceive of the proſperity of heatheniſh nations notwithſtanding their impiety: to which is added in the following words a declaration, that thoſe that endure patiently and ſtick to the truth, ſhall in the end be rewarded in the beſt manner, as in the two following verſes, Then they that feared the Lord, &c. and then is added a mention likewiſe of the puniſhment of thoſe that are not ſo affected, and the puniſhment of the wicked injurious nations alſo, (as he ſaith, ver. 18. and chap. iv. 1. then ſhall ye return and diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, &c. Behold the day cometh that ſhall burn as an oven, &c.) But as to the former part of his words, it cannot be made out of what is here ſpoken, as neither out of the laſt verſe of the ſecond chapter, but is deſtructive to the right meaning of them.

The words being directed to them that were returned from the Babyloniſh captivity, manifeſtly concern the behaviour of them now again ſettled in their country, which was not ſuch as it ought to have been, and therefore they are reproved for it; that which is here objected to them, appears to have been a ſin of impatience and blaſphemy againſt God, and his providence and juſtice, of which too many or moſt of them were guilty; yet not all, for while the diſcontented ones among them ſpake thus impiouſly of God and his juſtice, there were were others that feared the Lord, and ſpake among themſelves otherwiſe, as is manifeſt by the next words. But he ſeems to mean it of the time of the captivity, that they are now under, and a future judgment yet to come, wherein he is manifeſtly wide of the matter, and paſſing over the times of the Prophet, and the preſent people of which he ſpake, transfers the words to ſuch times as they do not properly concern, times now preſent and yet to come: and taking no notice of that day of the Lord, which was here propheſied of, as then indeed to come, but which is long ſince come, would have another yet on earth to be expected, as if the Lord, the Meſſiah, whoſe coming was that day, were not yet come, which is the common error of the Jews, which hath been already diſcovered, and will in conſidering the following words be farther diſcovered, if God permit.

[p] Druſ. [q] Abu Walid, and R. Tanchum. [r] Vulg. Lat. [s] R. Tanch. [t] Abarb. [u] Grotius. See Rib. and Chr. à Caſtro, [w] Stokes. [x] Ribera.

As for what, therefore, is ſpoken by way of reproof and comfort, it muſt be applied to the right perſons concerned therien, which doubtleſs were in the firſt place thoſe of that preſent time, and then ſuch as ſhould ſucceed them betwixt that and the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans; the completion of that day of the Lord's coming, both before, ver. 2. and after chap. iv. 1. ſpoken of. Thoſe at that preſent for the moſt part of them murmured againſt God's juſtice, in the manner here deſcribed, yet, then mean while (as it follows in the next verſe,) they that feared the Lord [y] hearing what the Prophet ſaid, ſpake often one to another. The word, often, is not expreſſed in the Hebrew, and therefore the words are by Others rendred, only ſpake one to another. But our Tranſlators thought good to ſupply it, as being included in the word נדברו Nidbaru, according to what we have ſeen to be obſerved by ſome of the force of the verb in this form on ver. 13. What they ſpake is not here expreſſed, except we render it otherwiſe, as [z] Some do, ſpake one to another, ſaying, certainly God hearkneth and heareth, &c. as if the words following were thoſe that they ſpake. But this [a] ſeems ſomewhat harſh, in regard that the copulative, and, which is in the original, in ויקשב Vayakſheb, and the Lord hearkned, is wreſted to another ſignification. It is more eaſy to underſtand it thus to be meant, that as the wicked ſpake much among themſelves, ſo theſe alſo did, but contrary things; they againſt God's juſtice, [b] theſe in vindication of it, believing what the Prophet ſaid, and expecting the completion of it: and what they ſaid was not in vain to them, for the Lord hearkned, and heard it.

But before we proceed to thoſe words, we may here take notice that as Abarbinel (as we ſhewed) differs in the underſtanding of this word נדבר Nidbar, in the 13th verſe, ſo here he goes much more wide from them, taking it in clean another ſignification from that which he himſelf gave it there, and Others both here and there give it. For here he would have the words rendred, as continued with the former, and part of what thoſe blaſphemers, before mentioned, ſaid, viz. that then they that feared the Lord were deſtroyed, from another ſignification that the ſame root hath, and is uſed in, as in other places according to him and ſome others. So in 2 Chron. xxii. 10. ותדבר Vattedabber, and ſhe deſtroyed all the ſeed royal; and from it is the noun דבר Deber, which ſignifies the plague, or ſuch deſtructive ſickneſs: ſo that according to him the ſenſe is, that when the preſumptuous ſinners, that work wickedneſs, are ſet up, and though they tempt God by expoſing themſelves to the greateſt dangers, are yet delivered; then at that very time they that fear the Lord periſh, are cut off and deſtroyed, one together with another, אל el, to, being here the ſame that עם Im, with, (or, are by evil accidents intangling them, made deſtructive and cauſes of perdition one to another,) as if the hand of God were upon them to confound and deſtroy them. Thus far he would have the words of thoſe that ſpake againſt God's juſtice to reach, and then the following words, the Lord hearkned, &c. to be an anſwer from the Prophet to them; as if he ſhould ſay to them, Know and conſider that to all this that you ſay, God hearkneth and heareth it, and that both the righteouſneſs of the righteous, and the wickedneſs of the wicked are as manifeſt before him, as if all were written in a book of remembrance, that it might remain many days, till the time of due recompence and reward, &c.

And the ſame way of expoſition with him doth Arias Montanus follow, and gives it as his own conjecture or opinion, probably having ſeen Abarbinel, elſe he would ſcarce have fallen in ſo fully with him here, as he doth in many other places, without mentioning him in expoſitions ſingular to them: and this he commends as moſt agreeable to the words, but I ſee no reaſon to be of his opinion, but chooſe rather to follow that interpretation which our Tranſlation, with the moſt both of Jews and Chriſtians, gives, not making theſe firſt words a part of thoſe ſtout words which the wicked ſpake againſt God, but a declaration of the behaviour of thoſe that feared God; and the following, of the good conſequence thereon. So R. D. Kimchi perſpicuouſly expounds them and the following. " The former words were " the ſaying of thoſe who did not underſtand " the ways of the Lord and his judgments; " and when thoſe that feared the Lord heard " thoſe words from thoſe men, who denied " the providence of God over theſe things " below, they ſpake one with another and " multiplied, or often repeated thoſe words, " and argued the matter, till they found by " their underſtanding, that all his [c] ways are " judgment, that he is a God of truth and " without iniquity. And the Lord hearkned, " i. e. God bleſſed for ever attended to their " words, and gave them their reward for this. " And a book of remembrance was written be- " fore him, a proverbial expreſſion according " to the language of men, among whom " kings

[y] See Calv. [z] Jun. Trem. and Dutch Notes. [a] See Piſcat. [b] See R. D. Kimchi. [c] Deut. xxxii. 4.

wealth, have we gained? ſaith the Chaldee, (as if it were for Mammon's ſake only that they ſerved God, and ſo indeed not God at all, but Mammon.)

His ordinance, or as in the Margin, his obſervation,] i. e. that we have obſerved thoſe things that he hath commanded us to obſerve. What advantage have we gained by it? yea though we have walked mournfully (or as the Margin hath it) in black, [p] which is the habit of mourners: or, as Others, with bowing down, or the like ſubmiſs geſture, before the Lord of hoſts; and ſhewed in our behaviour all ſigns of penitence, and [q] awful fear of him by mourning, faſting, and humbling our ſelves in contrition of ſpirit (as the Chaldee hath it) before him and the like. Which laſt words Abarbinel ſeems to expound otherwiſe, viz. "We have "not only not gained any thing, but withal, "have been forced to walk mournfully and "afflictedly before the Lord, i. e. becauſe we "have kept his commandments." But the former conſtruction ſeems plainer, in that the particle כי Ci, that, or becauſe, with which the laſt foregoing member of the ſentence is joined with what goes before, is here again repeated with a copulative conjunction, that we have done that, and that we have done this. Their complaint (according to him) was, that there was no profit in ſerving God, either on God's part or their own, no advantage to either; and therefore that it was a vain labour: they were happier that ſaved themſelves that trouble; ſo it follows,

And now (or [r] now therefore) we call the proud happy.] Proud, inſolent, preſumptuous men, who will not be kept in by any bounds, nor obſerve God's ordinances, as we do, nor walk humbly before him, [s] but tranſgreſs all laws of religion and juſtice. [The ſame word uſed, Pſalm xix. 13. ſubſtantively is rendred prides, or preſumptuous ſins; but here adjectively, preſumptuous ſinners.] Such we look upon to be in a condition more to be envied and deſired, than pitied or feared for, inaſmuch as they enjoy all wordly pleaſures and proſperity, nor are overtaken, or, as far as we can perceive, like to be overtaken with any puniſhment or miſchief, in their perſons, or any belonging to them; yea ſo far is it from that, that they that work wickedneſs (ſet themſelves purpoſely to do it) are ſet up (or built, as the Margin hath it, for ſo the word נבנו Nibnu literally ſignifies) i. e. are firmly eſtabliſhed, like a new building, ſaith [t] One, not likely quickly to fall or decay. They flouriſh in their offspring, ſay [u] Others, alluding to the name בן Ben, ſon, in reſpect to which the verb that ſignifies building is uſed for to obtain children, and ſo by Ours rendred, Gen. xvi. 2. and xxx. 3. i. e. they raiſe their houſes and families, as [w] One paraphraſes it here: [x] they are not cut off, but leave a numerous poſterity to keep up their name; or generally, they flouriſh and proſper more and more, all things thrive and proſper with them, yea, farther yet, they that ſet themſelves ſo impudently to ſin, as to tempt God, as if they did it on purpoſe to try and prove him, whether he could or would puniſh ſinners, and to provoke and dare him to do his worſt, to execute judgment if he be a God of judgment; even theſe are delivered, and eſcape without any of thoſe puniſhments in the law, or by the Prophets threatned againſt obſtinate, impenitent ſinners. Theſe are the words, or thoughts of thoſe unſound ones in their religion, and unſincere in their practice, who, looking on what they ſaw at preſent, and not on what ſhould certainly in due time be made manifeſt for clearing God's juſtice, and his perpetual love to good, and hatred of evil, did hence take occaſion of queſtioning whether there were any juſt Judge or judgment: and of repining and murmuring againſt God's ordering of the affairs of men, and ſo of contemning and ſetting at nought what was by the Prophets, reproving them for their ſins, and calling them to repentance for removing ſuch judgments as were on them, or preventing of others, ſaid unto them. Who they were that ſaid theſe words, and when they ſaid them, and concerning whom, it is not particularly expreſſed. R. Tanchum therefore, as he did alſo, chap. ii. 17. looks upon them as repreſenting words which ſhould in time to come be ſpoken by Iſrael in captivity, ſuch at leaſt, as if they did not ſpeak or profeſs, yet might ſeem to have occaſion to do it. And that they are here recited for reproof to them that ſhould be impatient under the length of their captivity, and forſake their religion, and ſpeak thus in reſpect to what they ſhould perceive of the proſperity of heatheniſh nations notwithſtanding their impiety: to which is added in the following words a declaration, that thoſe that endure patiently and ſtick to the truth, ſhall in the end be rewarded in the beſt manner, as in the two following verſes, Then they that feared the Lord, &c. and then is added a mention likewiſe of the puniſhment of thoſe that are not ſo affected, and the puniſhment of the wicked injurious nations alſo, (as he ſaith, ver. 18. and chap. iv. 1. then ſhall ye return and diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, &c. Behold the day cometh that ſhall burn as an oven, &c.) But as to the former part of his words, it cannot be made out of what is here ſpoken, as neither out of the laſt verſe of the ſecond chapter, but is deſtructive to the right meaning of them.

The words being directed to them that were returned from the Babyloniſh captivity, manifeſtly concern the behaviour of them now again ſettled in their country, which was not ſuch as it ought to have been, and therefore they are reproved for it; that which is here objected to them, appears to have been a ſin of impatience and blaſphemy againſt God, and his providence and juſtice, of which too many or moſt of them were guilty; yet not all, for while the diſcontented ones among them ſpake thus impiouſly of God and his juſtice, there were were others that feared the Lord, and ſpake among themſelves otherwiſe, as is manifeſt by the next words. But he ſeems to mean it of the time of the captivity, that they are now under, and a future judgment yet to come, wherein he is manifeſtly wide of the matter, and paſſing over the times of the Prophet, and the preſent people of which he ſpake, transfers the words to ſuch times as they do not properly concern, times now preſent and yet to come: and taking no notice of that day of the Lord, which was here propheſied of, as then indeed to come, but which is long ſince come, would have another yet on earth to be expected, as if the Lord, the Meſſiah, whoſe coming was that day, were not yet come, which is the common error of the Jews, which hath been already diſcovered, and will in conſidering the following words be farther diſcovered, if God permit.

[p] Druſ. [q] Abu Walid, and R. Tanchum. [r] Vulg. Lat. [s] R. Tanch. [t] Abarb. [u] Grotius. See Rib. and Chr. à Caſtro, [w] Stokes. [x] Ribera.

As for what, therefore, is ſpoken by way of reproof and comfort, it muſt be applied to the right perſons concerned therien, which doubtleſs were in the firſt place thoſe of that preſent time, and then ſuch as ſhould ſucceed them betwixt that and the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans; the completion of that day of the Lord's coming, both before, ver. 2. and after chap. iv. 1. ſpoken of. Thoſe at that preſent for the moſt part of them murmured againſt God's juſtice, in the manner here deſcribed, yet, then mean while (as it follows in the next verſe,) they that feared the Lord [y] hearing what the Prophet ſaid, ſpake often one to another. The word, often, is not expreſſed in the Hebrew, and therefore the words are by Others rendred, only ſpake one to another. But our Tranſlators thought good to ſupply it, as being included in the word נדברו Nidbaru, according to what we have ſeen to be obſerved by ſome of the force of the verb in this form on ver. 13. What they ſpake is not here expreſſed, except we render it otherwiſe, as [z] Some do, ſpake one to another, ſaying, certainly God hearkneth and heareth, &c. as if the words following were thoſe that they ſpake. But this [a] ſeems ſomewhat harſh, in regard that the copulative, and, which is in the original, in ויקשב Vayakſheb, and the Lord hearkned, is wreſted to another ſignification. It is more eaſy to underſtand it thus to be meant, that as the wicked ſpake much among themſelves, ſo theſe alſo did, but contrary things; they againſt God's juſtice, [b] theſe in vindication of it, believing what the Prophet ſaid, and expecting the completion of it: and what they ſaid was not in vain to them, for the Lord hearkned, and heard it.

But before we proceed to thoſe words, we may here take notice that as Abarbinel (as we ſhewed) differs in the underſtanding of this word נדבר Nidbar, in the 13th verſe, ſo here he goes much more wide from them, taking it in clean another ſignification from that which he himſelf gave it there, and Others both here and there give it. For here he would have the words rendred, as continued with the former, and part of what thoſe blaſphemers, before mentioned, ſaid, viz. that then they that feared the Lord were deſtroyed, from another ſignification that the ſame root hath, and is uſed in, as in other places according to him and ſome others. So in 2 Chron. xxii. 10. ותדבר Vattedabber, and ſhe deſtroyed all the ſeed royal; and from it is the noun דבר Deber, which ſignifies the plague, or ſuch deſtructive ſickneſs: ſo that according to him the ſenſe is, that when the preſumptuous ſinners, that work wickedneſs, are ſet up, and though they tempt God by expoſing themſelves to the greateſt dangers, are yet delivered; then at that very time they that fear the Lord periſh, are cut off and deſtroyed, one together with another, אל el, to, being here the ſame that עם Im, with, (or, are by evil accidents intangling them, made deſtructive and cauſes of perdition one to another,) as if the hand of God were upon them to confound and deſtroy them. Thus far he would have the words of thoſe that ſpake againſt God's juſtice to reach, and then the following words, the Lord hearkned, &c. to be an anſwer from the Prophet to them; as if he ſhould ſay to them, Know and conſider that to all this that you ſay, God hearkneth and heareth it, and that both the righteouſneſs of the righteous, and the wickedneſs of the wicked are as manifeſt before him, as if all were written in a book of remembrance, that it might remain many days, till the time of due recompence and reward, &c.

And the ſame way of expoſition with him doth Arias Montanus follow, and gives it as his own conjecture or opinion, probably having ſeen Abarbinel, elſe he would ſcarce have fallen in ſo fully with him here, as he doth in many other places, without mentioning him in expoſitions ſingular to them: and this he commends as moſt agreeable to the words, but I ſee no reaſon to be of his opinion, but chooſe rather to follow that interpretation which our Tranſlation, with the moſt both of Jews and Chriſtians, gives, not making theſe firſt words a part of thoſe ſtout words which the wicked ſpake againſt God, but a declaration of the behaviour of thoſe that feared God; and the following, of the good conſequence thereon. So R. D. Kimchi perſpicuouſly expounds them and the following. "The former words were "the ſaying of thoſe who did not underſtand "the ways of the Lord and his judgments; "and when thoſe that feared the Lord heard "thoſe words from thoſe men, who denied "the providence of God over theſe things "below, they ſpake one with another and "multiplied, or often repeated thoſe words, "and argued the matter, till they found by "their underſtanding, that all his [c] ways are "judgment, that he is a God of truth and "without iniquity. And the Lord hearkned, "i. e. God bleſſed for ever attended to their "words, and gave them their reward for this. "And a book of remembrance was written be-"fore him, a proverbial expreſſion according "to the language of men, among whom "kings

[y] See Calv. [z] Jun. Trem. and Dutch Notes. [a] See Piſcat. [b] See R. D. Kimchi. [c] Deut. xxxii. 4.

" kings write a book of memorials; (for " there is no forgetfulneſs with God,) accord- " ing to what is ſaid, blot me out of thy book, " Exod. xxxii. 32. and every one that ſhall " be found written in the book, Dan. xii. 2."

Theſe words of his we have ſet down at large, becauſe they give exactly that notion concerning the diſtinction of the words from the former and the ſignification of the verb נדברו Nidbaru, which our Tranſlators chooſe to follow. And it is that wherein moſt both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Expoſitors do well agree; as likewiſe in what is meant by what he ſaith, and the Lord hearkned and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written, viz. that the Lord took due notice of what was ſaid, (both by bad and good, ſay [d] Some; which though it be true that he doth ſo, yet here more particularly it ſeems to be referred to the good,) and kept it in perpetual remembrance, in the regiſter of his memory, if we may ſo ſpeak, as certainly as if it were written in a book, according to the cuſtom of men [e], who note down in writing, or cauſe to be regiſtred, ſuch things as they would not forget, but be ſure to call to mind, and ſhew that they took due notice of, as meet occaſion and opportunity ſhould ſerve; to reward thoſe that had done them any ſervice or deſerved well, or whom they had a mind to do good to. Of God's book, and things being written in it, there is we know often mention in the Scriptures, beſides thoſe places which Kimchi recites, both in the Old and New Teſtament; and every where is much alike to be underſtood, viz. that the things ſpoken of are as ſurely known, and had in remembrance with him, as if they were written down before him. And ſo where the books are ſaid to be opened, it is the making manifeſt his knowledge of thoſe things, by his paſſing ſentence on men accordingly for good or bad: ſee Dan. vii. 10. and Rev. xx. 12. and Iſaiah lxv. 6.

The book of remembrance, is here ſaid to be written for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, viz. to give them aſſurance that their faithfulneſs to him, [f] however he did not preſently reward them openly for it, yet was duly taken notice of by him, and in due time he would make it known by his diſtinguiſhing them from the wicked, and his great care of them to preſerve them from thoſe heavy judgments, and that deſtruction which ſhould ſeize on the others, as will appear in the following words.

But before we paſs to them, we may take notice of what is by Some obſerved concerning the ſignification or force of that word which is rendred, and that thought upon his name, viz. that it imports not a bare thinking of, but a due eſteem and awful regard of, ſo as with all care to avoid all things that may tend to the diſhonour of it; conſtantly to endeavour ſo to walk as beſeems ſuch who profeſs to know God and to ſerve him, as always in his preſence, and with reſpect to him, and fear of him. Thoſe, ſaith Kimchi, are meant who always think of, or meditate in the ways of the Lord, and the knowledge of his Godhead, for his name is himſelf, and he (himſelf) is his name. Aben Ezra underſtands it of the wiſe in heart, who know the ſecret (or the myſtery) of the glorious awful name. He ſeems to allude to what is ſaid, Pſalm xxv. 14. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him. R. Tanchum ſaith that the word חשבי Choſhebe rendred that thought on, imports or includes honouring and magnifying; according to the uſe of the word חשוב Chaſhub, for one in dignity and high eſteem: ſo that it may be expounded, ſuch as knowing the ſecret of that glorious awful name, do accordingly magnify it. The Greek, that reverence his name.

It will not be any great digreſſion to look a little back, and ſee how the Greek renders the word נדברו Nidbaru, of which we have already ſpoken, becauſe they ſeem to differ from the Latin and other Tranſlations, rendring it, κατελάλησαν, which uſually ſignifies to murmur or ſpeak againſt, or to ſpeak of with derogation. Theſe things (ſaith that Tranſlation) murmured they, that feared the Lord. So that S. Hierom, to give their ſenſe, ſaith that they took the words they that feared the Lord ironically, viz. for ſuch as made ſhew of ſo doing, but did not truly and really fear him; and ſo to belong ſtill to thoſe who ſpake thoſe ſtout words before mentioned: except we ſhould think that they took it, as if even the righteous were, by what they ſaw of the proſperity of the wicked, moved to ſpeak otherwiſe, than they ought, of God's juſtice and providence, as the Pſalmiſt by the ſame conſideration was, as he confeſſeth, almoſt moved ſometimes to do, Pſalm lxxiii. 2, &c.

But beſides this ſignification it hath another given it, viz. [g] to ſpeak much, to overwhelm with ſpeaking, to ſpeak one down, as we may ſay, which if it be here taken, and may be uſed in a good ſenſe, only for much and earneſt ſpeaking, then will it be but the ſame which our Tranſlation gives, and Some as we have ſeen obſerve to be the import of the word, viz. that thoſe that feared God, hearing what Others impiouſly ſpake, derogatory to God's juſtice, did in zeal to his glory ſpeak much and often, and earneſtly one to another in vindication of it, and to cry down the folly of thoſe blaſphemous ones, and [h] hinder one another from doing as they did. But whatever may be thought of this, the plaineſt meaning will be that which we have given, agreeably to our own Tranſlation, and that way which moſt Expoſitors (as we have ſaid) take; and according to that way have we a clear paſſage to the next verſe, wherein the Lord having aſſured them that their words are had in remembrance, and their reward with him in due time to be manifeſted; he proceeds farther to declare it, and to aſſign a certain time of it.

17. And they ſhall be mine, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and and I will ſpare them as a man ſpareth his own ſon that ſerveth him.

2

[d] See Chr. à Caſtro, Menoch. Tirin. [e] See Eſther vi. 1, &c. [f] R. Solomon. [g] Steph. Lex. [h] R. Solomon.

And they ſhall be mine, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, in that day when I make up my jewels (or ſpecial treaſures, as the Margin hath it,) &c.] According to this reading by Ours and [i] ſome Others followed, the meaning will be plain, that though God ſuffer his, who are his jewels and peculiar treaſure, to lie for a while mingled with the rubbiſh and droſs, without diſtinction made betwixt them, yet there ſhall come a day of diſcrimination, in which he will ſever them one from another, and make up, and take into his peculiar care his precious jewels, and reject and caſt away what is vile and rubbiſh; and then ſhall appear who are his, and who are otherwiſe; though till then it may not appear, yet by what befals them as to the ordinary affairs of this world, it may be judged that he rather owns the wicked, and thoſe that tempt him, than thoſe that fear him, and duly think on his name: but then he will put a diſtinction between the veſſels of his wrath, and the veſſels of his mercy, Rom. ix. 22, 23. veſſels of honour, and veſſels of diſhonour, 2 Tim. ii. 20.

But if this rendring pleaſe not any (as a learned [k] Critick ſeems to except againſt it, both for rendring mine, and likewiſe make up my peculiar treaſure, as harſh and unuſual;) we have another by moſt of Interpreters given, viz. they ſhall be to me, in the day that I ſhall make (or, in the day that I ſhall do what I ſaid,) a peculiar: ſo joining the laſt word in order of conſtruction with the firſt, (as [l] Some expreſly note that it ought to be) and not joining it with the word make, as if it were governed of it, viz. they ſhall be to me a peculiar in the day that I ſhall make: and the ſenſe is plain then too, there ſhall come a day of diſcrimination by me deſigned, and then, though it doth not yet appear that I make any difference between the wicked and the godly, in that day there ſhall be put a manifeſt difference between them, by my ſeparating the godly to my ſelf, and by taking a ſpecial care of them, as peculiarly belonging to me, and which I will preſerve as carefully as men do what they moſt eſteem, love, and delight in.

The word סגלה Segullah, rendred by Ours jewels, and in the Margin ſpecial treaſure, is taken to denote any choice thing of great price and eſteem to any, and which he looks on as his own proper goods, and chief in his care; as [m] of ſilver, gold, or precious ſtones, which he lays up in his treaſure: and ſo uſed for any thing which he takes ſpecial care of to preſerve to himſelf. Such it was promiſed to Iſrael for a ſpecial privilege and preeminence above all nations, that they ſhould be unto God, as Exod. xix. 5. If ye will obey my voice, and keep my covenant ye ſhall be סגלה Segullah, a peculiar treaſure to me above all people. And ſo Deut. vii. 6. where is עם סגלה Am ſegullah, a ſpecial people. [n] And Pſalm cxxxv. 4. the Lord hath choſen Jacob unto himſelf and Iſrael, לסגלתו Liſgullato, for his peculiar treaſure. It is a privilege that they ſtill boaſt much of, all that can pretend to be of the race of Iſrael; but it appears to be reſtrained by the ſame limits that the name of Iſrael is, and agrees only to ſuch who truly deſerve that name, viz. the true Iſrael of God: as all are not Iſrael which are of Iſrael, Rom. ix. 6. ſo neither are they all his, סגלה Segullah, his jewels, his ſpecial treaſure, his peculiar people, but only ſuch who are [o] the true Iſrael of God; ſo here out of all Iſrael doth he ſay, that in that day, only they that feared the Lord, and thought on his name, ſhould be to him, סגלה Segullah, a ſpecial treaſure or peculiar people. Which title, as well as that of Iſrael, in the New Teſtament being transferred unto Chriſtians in Chriſt, who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himſelf a peculiar people, Titus ii. 14. and ſo 1 Peter ii. 9. we cannot but likewiſe look on, as bounded with the ſame limitations; and therefore they that will have comfort in it, muſt approve themſelves not only Chriſtians in name, but in deed, by abandoning all iniquity, by being pure and zealous of good works, by being an holy nation, and ſo ſhewing forth the praiſes of him who hath called them out of darkneſs into his marvellous light. By having theſe conditions in them muſt they approve themſelves his ſpecial treaſure. Ordinary ſtones will not paſs for jewels with him, nor rubbiſh and dirt for treaſure in the day of trial, though till then they may not be perhaps diſcovered.

This diſtinction between the Jews here ſpoken to, is ſaid ſhould be, in the day which he ſhould make (or bring on them) or the day wherein he ſhould do, what he determined to do, or ſaid he would do, for both theſe ſenſes are the words אשר אני עשה Aſher ani Oſeh, capable of, and ſo are by Some in the one, by Others in the other way rendred, all much to the ſame purpoſe; In the day which I ſhall make or bring to paſs, ſo R. Tanchum, and ſome in Vatablus; and ſo the Greek. In the day of judgment wherein I ſhall execute judgment on the wicked, ſaith Kimchi. They ſhall be to me in the day wherein I do, or make, for a peculiar, ſaith the Vulgar Latin, (not as the Doway Verſion renders, in the day that I do to my peculiar.) The ſame way Others take; and that ſo thoſe words ſhould be rendred by themſelves indefinitely, viz. in the day which I make (or ſhall make,) or wherein I do, (i. e. will certainly do.) And the word peculiar not governed of that juſt in place before, viz. do or make; but be referred to the foregoing, viz. they ſhall be to me, may be confirmed by their coming again in the ſame manner, chap. iv. 3. in the day that I ſhall do or make, without any thing added after it. Yet doth the ancient Syriack Verſion make the laſt word to be governed of that immediately preceding it, as Ours do, though rendring that otherwiſe than than Ours, viz. a congregation, They ſhall be mine in the day when I ſhall make a congregation. So the Latin Tranſlator points it, although poſſibly by otherwiſe diſtinguiſhing the words, it might be rendred, They ſhall be to me in the day, which I make, a congregation. R. Solomon Jarchi ſeems to give an expoſition different from all theſe, to this purpoſe, " In " the day which I make a reſerved treaſure, " i. e. which I have treaſured and laid up " with me, therein to perform (or pay) my " recompence." And if it were ſo underſtood, the expreſſion would agree with that, Acts i. 7. wherein ſpeaking of thoſe times, in which they expected that Chriſt ſhould reſtore the kingdom to Iſrael, he calleth them times and ſeaſons which God had put in his own power.

[i] Jun. Trem. [k] Druſ. on the place, and in Quæſit. per Epiſt. Eph. i. [l] Aben Ezra, and R. Tanchum.
[m] Kimchi in Rad. [n] Deut. iv. 2. [o] Gal. vi. 16.

But whatever differences may be betwixt Expoſitors as to the rendring the words, the day in them ſpoken of is ſtill the ſame, viz. the day of the Lord's coming, mentioned before in this chapter, in the ſecond, third, and fifth verſes, and again in the following chapter, in the firſt, ſecond, and third verſes; namely, the day wherein God ſhould execute his judgments on the nations of the Jews, for working revenge upon his enemies, and redemption to thoſe that fear him, and revere his name. Though ſuch diſcrimination ſhall be fully made between all the godly and the wicked at Chriſt's ſecond coming, the general day of judgment, (to which, therefore, what is here ſpoken is by [p] divers referred,) yet certainly here what is ſaid, reſpects more particularly the nation of the Jews, and the time of that national judgment denounced againſt them. What hath been before ſaid, and what is here ſaid, and what ſhall be after ſaid in this prophecy, will not be ſo properly applied, and clearly underſtood by applying it to any other: mean while may the words well be accommodated, to any other people with whom it ſhall be ſo, at any time, as it was then with the Jews, and whom God ſhall in like kind viſit with a national judgment or exciſion; [q] what to them happened being to Others for example, and likewiſe to that great day of diſcrimination, the day of the general judgment; yea, likewiſe to the day of death, as for what concerns particular men; but ſtill thoſe whom the words ſeem properly to concern as here ſpoken to, and of, are the nation of the Jews, then in being in their own country, a nation ſeparate from others, and bearing then the name of the Lord's people. In that day when the Lord ſhall do ſuch things, he will ſhew by making a manifeſt difference, who are his, and who are not his: his ſhall be ſeparated from the reſt as his own [r] peculiar, from ſuch as he will not own or regard; and when he executeth judgment in fury on others, he will ſpare them, and keep them that thoſe evils which deſtroy the wicked ſhall not touch them, as a man ſpareth his own ſon that ſerveth him.

Theſe words are a farther declaration of God's exceeding great favour, and compaſſion to thoſe whom he would own, and look on as his peculiar, in terms of greateſt elegance and height of expreſſion. The compaſſionate affection of a father is great to any child, though he be unprofitable to him, yea hurtful to him; how much more when he is profitable to him, and honoureth him? ſo notes R. Tanchum, and to the ſame purpoſe Kimchi, and other Expoſitors [s] alſo. There is another thing alſo here, by [t] Some taken notice of in the expreſſion, which may well be added, as making for the amplification of God's goodneſs, and the conſolation of thoſe that fear and honour him, viz. that he ſaith he will ſpare them, which imports that though there be found in them defects, and they have done and ſpoken things that they ought not, and which in rigour of juſtice might deſerve puniſhment, yet as long as their hearts are right with him, and they ſincerely honour and obey him, and have reverent thoughts of him, he will forgive their tranſgreſſions, and in great mercy ſave them, when he will ſhew no mercy to the wicked, but according to their deſerts in ſeverity deal with them.

18. Then ſhall ye return, and diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that ſerveth God, and him that ſerveth him not.

Then ſhall ye return and diſcern between, &c.] Then, when that day ſhall come, ſuch an alteration of things ſhall there be, that though you now think all things go alike to all, or rather for the worſe to thoſe that moſt ſerve God, yet then you ſhall change your minds, and diſcern that God did always obſerve the actions of men, and put a difference between the righteous and the wicked, thoſe that ſerved him, and thoſe that ſerved him not; though till now he did not make it ſo apparent to men of corrupt judgments.

Some difference here is betwixt Interpreters in rendring, and expounding theſe words, [u] Some following a reading that is in ſome copies of the Vulgar Latin, (viz. & convertimini, and be converted, or return) give us to take it as an exhortation to theſe wicked ones who ſpake blaſphemouſly of God's juſtice to return and repent: and then they ſhould diſcern that diſtinction between the righteous and the wicked, which they would not now perceive. And with this reading the Tigurin [w] Verſion alſo agrees; ſo it will ſound, now therefore return, &c. to which will be reduced alſo that expoſition of Pelican, If ye ſhall repent, ye ſhall diſcern. Others following another reading, which [x] Some obſerve to be more correct, and indeed comes cloſer to the letter in the original, though that admit of both; viz. & convertemini, and ye ſhall return, or be converted, underſtand it of the late and bootleſs repentance of thoſe blaſphemers, [y] or a converſion which they ſhall be forced to, by what they ſhall then, nill they, will they, neceſſarily ſarily diſcern and acknowledge of the [z] different condition of thoſe that ſerve God, and thoſe that ſerve him not. With this rendring agrees Ours, and they [a] alſo who render, then being converted, or returning, you ſhall diſcern. A late very learned [b] man would have it rendred, and ye ſhall again ſee; that the meaning may be, Heretofore, when I bleſſed my church with proſperity, then did appear a manifeſt difference betwixt the righteous and the unrighteous; now becauſe my whole church is under affliction you deny that difference, but I will make or bring again a day wherein ye ſhall again perceive that difference. Now all theſe look on the words as directed to the wicked, who thought it vain to ſerve God, as if he took no notice of what was done by men, ſpoken to ver. 13, 14, 15. [c] There are who think, they may be taken as directed to thoſe that feared the Lord, next before ſpoken of, as if the meaning were, that ſuch a change of things ſhould be, that though now they could not perceive any difference betwixt themſelves and the wicked, yet then looking on what was come to paſs, they ſhould evidently diſcern it, and perceive God's eſpecial care over them, and that ſo here is a change of the perſon, which is not unfrequent in the Scriptures: for whereas before they were ſpoken of, in the third perſon, they are here ſpoken to in the ſecond. But without nicer enquiry into the perſons ſpoken to, and the nature of the converſion or returning here mentioned, of whom, or whether true or falſe, it may ſuffice as to the meaning, to take the ſcope of the [d] words, to be as at firſt we intimated, That ſuch a converſion, turning, or change, ſhall then in that day be in the face of things, that all, both the godly and the ungodly, looking thereon, ſhall neceſſarily ſee that there is no place for doubting of God's juſtice, in his ordering of things for the puniſhment of the wicked, and preſervation of the righteous, and that he always doth put a diſtinction between them, though to men judging by the preſent outward appearance of things, it is not always ſo apparent. It ſhall be made beyond all doubt apparent in that day. By this, ſaith [e] Vatablus, he points out the future reſurrection: and ſo think [f] Others, as well Chriſtians as Jews, as expreſly [g] Abarbinel, who therefore interprets this returning of the ſouls of men, returning to their bodies at that day; for the thing in it ſelf is true, as to a general diſtinction between all the righteous, and all the wicked that ever were, or ſhall be in this world. At the reſurrection of the dead, and the general judgment, there ſhall be an apparent difference made between them, and the one ſeparated from the other, though before in this world mingled one with another, as when a ſhepherd divideth his ſheep from the goats, Mat. xxv. 32. and we willingly grant that the words point at that day, ſo as to put us in mind of it, and warn us to think thereon. But we do not look on that as the primary and proper ſcope of this prophecy, but that it deſcribes to us in the firſt place, and as its main intent, that national judgment which God threatned to the Jews, and accordingly executed on them in this world, ſhortly after the firſt coming of Chriſt, or at his coming; that word including all that time from his firſt preaching to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. That was the day in which the diſtinction here ſpoken of was to be made, and accordingly was ſignally made, as hath been already ſaid, and will be in looking into the next chapter, wherein is both the certainty of the coming of that day, and the nature or manner of it more fully declared, and deſcribed in prophetical expreſſions: in finding the true meaning of which, as well as of the preſent words, as to the words and ſignification of them, we may ſtill make uſe of the Jewiſh Expoſitors, but not as to the ſenſe and intent. For that day to be meant, which we ſay, agreeable to the words and hiſtory of the times alſo, is meant, they muſt by no means grant. That thoſe things belong to the time yet to come, and are to be fulfilled, either at a reſtauration of Iſrael, and ſubduing their enemies, at the coming of their fancied Meſſias, which with much earneſtneſs they long for, or at the day of judgment, or to particulars at the day of death, they will tell us; but that they were fulfilled (as manifeſtly they were) at that long ſince paſt deſtruction of their nation, and holy city, and temple, they muſt obſtinately deny, or they muſt grant and acknowledge, as we do, that Chriſt is already come; in oppoſing and denying which the whole of their religion now conſiſts. This therefore in their expounding this prophecy are they ſilent of, as if no ſuch thing had been. This here ſpoken (ſaith Aben Ezra) was ſpoken to the men of that generation, becauſe this is the end of all the prophecies. So ſay we too: for after Malachi was no other Prophet ſent to the Jews, till John Baptiſt, Chriſt's forerunner, and what is ſaid therefore concerned them, the people of the Jews then being, and all their poſterity, till that time that this prophecy was fulfilled (as by ſucceſſion ſtill one people) to warn them by repentance to prevent the judgment threatned and declared for that end to them, [h] by the great mercy, and long ſuffering of God, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but all ſhould come to repentance. But ſeeing the generality of them would not be brought to repentance, nor know the things belonging to their peace, in that their day, as Chriſt complains of them, Luke xix. 42, 44. the judgment was, ſo as here deſcribed, then in God's appointed time executed, and ſuch a diſtinction and diſcrimination, as is here ſpoken of, viſibly to all the world made, in the preſervation of ſuch among that people who feared God, and believed in Chriſt, and the deſtruction of his enemies.

[p] See Chr. à Caſtro. [q] See Dr. Hammond on Mat. xiii 49. [r] R. D. Kimchi. [s] Rib. Druſ. Tarn. &c. [t] Pelic. and Calv. [u] Grotius. [w] And Munſter. [x] Ribera. [y] See Lyra.

[z] See Wiſd. v. 1, &c. [a] Jun. Trem. and Druſ. [b] Lud. de Dieu. [c] Pet. à Fig. [d] See Calvin and Sanctius. [e] Edit. Steph. in folio. [f] Oecolamp. [g] The laſt page but one of his Comment. on the Prophets. [h] 2 Peter iii. 9. and ſee Mat. xxiii. 34, &c. and Luke xiii. 34.

CHAP. IV.

VERSE 1. For behold, the day cometh that ſhall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly ſhall be ſtubble: and the day that cometh ſhall burn them up, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, that it ſhall leave them neither root nor branch.

FOR behold the day cometh, &c.] The connexion and neceſſary coherence of theſe words with the former, as being, as we ſaid, a declaration of the certainty of the coming of that day in them ſpoken of, and a deſcription of it, is ſo apparent as that it may ſeem no reaſon why they ſhould be ſevered from them, and made the beginning of a new chapter, and therefore by Some are continued with them. But we need not much inſiſt on this, the diſtinction of chapters not interrupting the ſenſe. As to the ſcope of them it is well given by a learned [a] man, viz. that they are an image or deſcription of the final judgment on the Jews (in their deſtruction) and an image of repreſentation of the laſt general judgment on all mankind. That was certainly then to come on the Jews (if not prevented by their repentance, as it was not,) when the Prophet then ſpake this, but is long ſince come; this is yet ſtill to come, but ſhall in God's appointed time, as certainly come, as if it were already preſent. Of both, therefore, it might then be ſaid; Behold the day cometh, i. e. ſhall certainly come, and the deſcription is ſo full of terror, as that it may well be applied both to the one and to the other, yet certainly was it that former, which the primary intention of the Prophet was here to deſcribe, and to the latter are the words appliable only by way of accommodation. For to the nation of the Jews did he then ſpeak, as a meſſenger peculiarly ſent to them, to reprove them for their ſins, and declare to them, ſuch things as concerned them, and not immediately ſuch things as were common to the whole world, though what things happened to them were enſamples to all other people: and like judgments on like behaviour they may juſtly expect in this world alſo, beſides that laſt general judgment which ſhall involve all, both Jews and other nations, which (viz. to what people the Prophet was peculiarly ſent, and ſpake, and when) they did not ſeem to conſider who paſſing over what befel the Jews, according to this prophecy, expound theſe words, as primarily and properly belonging to that laſt general judgment (and taking in too the particular judgment of particular men at their death, as ſome will,) as many do.

'Tis the conſent (ſaith [b] One) of Jews and Chriſtians, that it ſhould be ſo expounded of the day of judgment. Why the Jews muſt in their own defence and maintenance of their other opinions ſo expound it, or elſe of ſome other time yet to come, hath been already ſhewed; but why Chriſtians ſhould therein conſent with them, there is no reaſon, yea much to the contrary, that they may not thereby confirm them in their error, as if Chriſt were not yet come. Yet what might move ſome Chriſtians ſo to do, we ſhall perhaps have occaſion to ſee, when we come to the 5th verſe. Mean while we take that which we have given, viz. that this concerns primarily that national judgment on the Jews, not many years after Chriſt's coming, (about forty after his death) executed by the Romans, the inſtruments of God's wrath on them, in that terrible deſtruction of their city and people, to be the trueſt and moſt proper way of expounding the words; and according to that ſhall proceed: however by way of accommodation allowing them to be applied, either to the particular or general judgment, to be expected by all other men. And though we cannot conſent with the Jews in their opinion, yet may we take notice of ſome things that they ſay for illuſtrating our own; or for ſhewing the incongruity of their opinion, or for enquiry into the ſignification and literal meaning of ſome of the words. And by the way we ſay, that what is ſaid that the Jews all conſent in this, that the peculiar day here deſigned is the day of the laſt general judgment, is ſpoken but at large. For indeed they do not agree in it, as Abarbinel, who doth himſelf ſay that it is the time of the reſurrection and the day of judgment, plainly ſheweth in his Commentary on this place, and ſeeketh to prove that ſome do agree with him in it, but confeſſeth that others of their Doctors do not, who refer it to the puniſhment that ſeizeth on the ſouls of the wicked immediately after death, and that Others ſpeak ſo obſcurely that it cannot be poſitively ſaid of what time they underſtood it, whether of the reſtauration of Iſrael which they look for, or of the reſurrection of the dead. So that all that can be ſaid, that they conſent in, is, that they do not expound it of that day which we do, as their intereſt leads them, as we have ſaid, to do, though among themſelves not agreeing in one opinion, and all erring from the right.

Nor do all Chriſtians neither agree among themſelves in the matter. [c] Some of good note and learning going the way that we take; with whom we may rank [d] Others alſo, who interpret the place, not of Chriſt's ſecond coming at the end of the world, but of his firſt coming, though they perhaps extend not that name of his coming ſo far as we do, but in their explications of it, expound it rather of his preaching, while he was on earth, by which he convinced thoſe hypocrites of their impiety, not ſparing their ſins, while they do not expreſly mention his terrible judgments executed on the Jews in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. [e] Thoſe alſo diſſent from that opinion, which take this day to include all the time from that wherein this was ſpoken to the firſt coming of Chriſt, and [f] they alſo, who underſtand it, that this day began with the firſt day of Chriſt's in-incarnation, and is to laſt until he ſhall again appear in the clouds, to the laſt judgment, which certainly allow too large a time to that day, which is ſo deſcribed by the Prophet, as to ſhew it to belong to a [g] peculiar and particular day, [h] a great and notable day of the Lord, wherein he ſhall execute the ſignal judgment here threatned; called again, ver. 5. the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

[a] Grot. and ſee Tarn. and Stokes. [b] Ribera. [c] Tarn. Grot. and Stokes. [d] Arias Mont. and Calv. [e] See Aſſembly's Annotat. and Tarnov. [f] See Dutch Notes.

To proceed therefore to the explication of the words and expreſſions, which to the way that, according to what hath been ſaid, we take, are plainly agreeable, and according to it and no other, run in an equal tenour, he ſaith, Behold the day cometh, that ſhall burn as an oven, &c. We had before an expreſſion to the ſame purpoſe, chap. iii. 2. eſpecially according to their explication, who there read, it, i. e. the day of the Lord's coming, the day here again ſpoken of ſhall be as a refiner's fire, as we ſaid Kimchi doth. The words as here ſet down, with behold for uſhering in the ſtrangeneſs of the thing, prefixed, found out the greateſt horror that can poſſibly be expreſſed, and beyond which nothing but the inexpreſſible terror of the conflagration of the whole world at the laſt day (of which therefore it is, as we have ſaid, uſually interpreted) can be imagined; and nearer to which no terrible judgment in the world ever on any people executed, came (or can well come) than this here ſpoken of. While he ſaith that the day ſhall burn as an oven, what doth it leſs than repreſent the condition of thoſe whom the judgment ſpoken of ſhall then ſeize, to be as if they were ſurrounded with fire, without poſſibility of avoiding the fury and dire effects thereof, than which nothing, we know, is to men more terrible; as if the heavens were on fire over their heads, and made an hideous noiſe, and the elements melted with fervent heat about them, and the earth and all the works therein were burning; that we may take in, and ſo compare with theſe, thoſe not unlike expreſſions in 2 Peter iii. 10, 12. by which uſually the terror of the day of the laſt general judgment, is thought to be deſcribed: but in the opinion of the learned Doctor Hammond, this that is here ſpoken of, viz. that of the judgment threatned to the obſtinate Jewiſh nation.

The words (as there, ſo here alſo) are ſuch as no figurative or hyperbolical expreſſions that can be poſſibly uſed for ſetting forth a moſt dreadful judgment can ſurpaſs, yet ſo great was the judgment according to this prediction executed on them, as that we may look on them not as a figurative but real deſcription of what ſhould be. What could be ſaid leſs to expreſs the face of things, when their ſtately city, and magnificent temple were all at once on fire, and none could quench it? may it not well be ſaid, that the day there then burnt like an oven, and in words appoſitely here appliable, though ſpoken to another ſenſe, Iſaiah xxxi. 9. that God's fire was then in Zion, and his furnace in Jeruſalem? To ſhew how in that day (that [i] day of puniſhment, as an ancient Arabick Tranſlator, not unfitly for expreſſing the ſenſe, renders it) that which he before ſaid concerning a certain diſcrimination to be made between the righteous and the wicked, ſhould be made evident, he deſcribes in the following words the effects of it, and firſt as concerning the wicked, ſaying, and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly, all thoſe that obſtinately went on in wicked courſes, and contemned God and his laws, ſhall be ſtubble, and the day that cometh ſhall burn them up, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, &c. Where is now then any occaſion to ſay, as they did, chap. iii. 15. we call the proud happy, yea they that work wickedneſs are ſet up, yea they that tempt God are delivered, what ſhall now become of their happineſs, and of their glory, when they ſhall be, but as ſtubble before the fire, which ſhall without delay or reſiſtance be certainly conſumed? where is now that deliverance that they talked of? how ſhall they deliver themſelves? who ſhall deliver them? no eſcape ſhall there be found for them, ſuch utter deſtruction ſhall that day that cometh in that dreadful manner bring on them, as if they were clear burnt up, ſo that it ſhall leave them neither root, nor branch, which is apparently contrary to that being ſet up, or built, chap. iii. 15.

This alſo is a [k] proverbial ſpeech to expreſs utter deſtruction by a ſimilitude taken from a tree, deſtroyed not only by having its boughs and branches cut off, but its roots alſo plucked up. The Chaldee Paraphraſt renders it, ſhall not leave them ſon nor nephew: becauſe, ſaith Kimchi explaining it, the firſt ſon is as the root, and his ſon is as the branch; (but we may rather ſay, it ſhall leave neither them nor their poſterity: the Father being the root, the ſons and poſterity branches from him.) That interpretation of the Chaldee being by moſt of the Jewiſh Expoſitors followed, Abarbinel not ſeeing how that may be ſo conveniently applied to the puniſhment of the wicked at the reſurrection, finds out another explication which he thinks more convenient, viz. That what is ſaid, is concerning the good works of wicked men, for which, becauſe in this world they receive their reward, God will not there leave to them any root, or branch of any commandment by them performed, or any good work, for which they may receive reward in the day of judgment, according to a ſaying of their Rabbins, "That he the moſt of whoſe works "are evil, and the leaſt part good, he is re- "warded for his ſmall righteouſneſs in this "world, that he may be wholly puniſhed in "the world to come." This he gives as his own opinion, though a very far fetched one, not knowing how to adapt otherwiſe the words of the text to that puniſhment of the day of judgment, which he here thinks to be the day ſpoken of. Other opinions he mentions alſo, as of Some, that by branch is underſtood the infants of wicked men, as if they ſhould not be admitted into the world to come; and otherotherwiſe that by root is underſtood the ſoul, and by branch the body, with the like, [l] neither root in this world, nor branch in the world to come.

[g] היום היחיד המיוחד Abarb. [h] Acts ii. 20. [i] يوم العقاب. [k] Druſ. Compare Job xviii. 16, 19.

Among Chriſtian Expoſitors alſo they who expound the Text concerning the day of judgment, are at ſome [m] difference in applying the expreſſion to the matter or thing ſignified, but to them who go the way that we have choſen, of expounding the Text concerning the day of the deſtruction of the Jews and their city by the Romans, there is no difficulty; but the proverbial ſpeech may be interpreted as nigh to the letter as may be, to denote, fathers and children, the wicked and their poſterity. Well may that day be ſaid to have burnt them up, and conſumed them, ſo as to leave them neither root nor branch; when at that time hiſtories teſtify, that in the ſiege and taking of the city, there periſhed of them by fire, famine, and ſword, no leſs than eleven hundred thouſand; to which if we add thoſe vaſt multitudes, and many thouſands of others which were immediately and within the ſpace of few years after by the ſame enemies deſtroyed (which all we may account as conſumed by the time, which is called that day, having the authority of a Jew, Kimchi himſelf, ſo far to extend the notion of that day, and reckon all for one continued day of deſtruction, while he ſaith, although it be ſaid, that the day ſhall burn them up, yet their deſtruction ſhall not be all in one day, but they ſhall go on in periſhing, and in a ſhort time be conſumed): add, I ſay, thoſe great multitudes to the former, (if there be need,) and what leſs can be ſaid to expreſs the greatneſs of the deſolation and deſtruction, than that they were cut off root and branch, ſo far that it is no ſmall wonder that there ſhould be any remainder of them.

Theſe things are manifeſt out of the hiſtories of thoſe times, eſpecially out of Joſephus's hiſtory of the Jewiſh war, in the ſixth book, according to the Greek diviſion, the ſeventh according to the Latin; and Euſebius, lib. 3. c. 5. as to the main and firſt part concerning the deſtruction of the city, and thoſe multitudes that were then there gathered together, and periſhed; and as to the gleanings of that day, as we may call the following deſtructions of the Jews, out of ſuch other Hiſtorians as relate the great variety of miſeries and calamities which one on the back of another befel them, by their pride, as it is here called, and obſtinate behaviour towards the Lord, pulled on them. If any have not opportunity of conſulting thoſe hiſtories, he may without farther trouble find enough collected out of them by Dr. [n] Hammond, in his Annotations on the New Teſtament, (in which he applies ſeveral things, which by reaſon of the dreadful expreſſions in which they are ſet down or denounced, are uſually by Interpreters applied to the laſt general judgment, and deſtruction of the whole world, particularly to this day of Jeruſalem, which we look on as here meant, to ſhew, that if what is here ſaid, in the higheſt language that a ſcene of horror may be repreſented by, be applied to what was then really done, there will be found no great hyperbole, or figurative exceeding in it, but rather a plain draught, or deſcription before hand, according to which things were afterward acted.

By what hath been ſaid, appears what little reaſon there was to account the proud happy, and thoſe that work wickedneſs ſet up, and that God delighted in them, becauſe at that time they were ſuffered to proſper; but whether there were any profit in ſerving God, and keeping his ordinances, and what would be done for them by which any might diſcern betwixt the righteous and the wicked; that part of the queſtion remains yet unanſwered, for if they periſh with the wicked, be involved in one common judgment with them; what is their caſe yet better than theirs? To this therefore a full anſwer follows in the next words.

2. ¶ But unto you that fear my name, ſhall the ſun of righteouſneſs ariſe with healing in his wings, and ye ſhall go forth, and grow up as calves of the ſtall.

But unto you that fear my name, ſhall the ſun of righteouſneſs ariſe with healing in his wings, &c.] In theſe words is ſafety and happineſs aſſured to the righteous, in the day that the wicked ſhall be miſerably deſtroyed, ſo that there ſhall be a manifeſt diſcrimination between them. What St. Peter ſaith, The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reſerve the unjuſt unto the day of judgment to be puniſhed, 2 Peter ii. 9. which he infers from two examples before given, viz. his ſaving Noah, when he brought in the flood upon the world of the ungodly; and his delivering juſt Lot, when he turned the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into aſhes, and brought them to utter deſtruction by fire from heaven, ver. 5, 6, 7. is here manifeſtly aſſerted, in that the ſame day which ſhall come as a burning oven to the proud wicked ones, to burn them up and deſtroy them, ſhall be to thoſe that fear the name of the Lord, as a glorious day wherein the benign ſun ſhall ariſe with his beſt influences of comfort to them, to cheriſh and refreſh their drooping ſpirits.

It is well known that the word צדקה Tſedakah here rendred righteouſneſs, is uſed to ſignify both juſtice or righteouſneſs, and alſo benignity or mercy; and both ſignifications will to this place well agree: for that ſalvation and comfort, then to be reached forth to the righteous, is a demonſtration both of juſtice and mercy; by it ſhall be declared the righteouſneſs of God, whoſe juſtice thoſe wicked ones queſtioned, ſaying, where is the God of judgment, chap. ii. 17. in that he now rewardeth them for their obedience, when he puniſheth thoſe

[l] Talmud. Aboda Zara, chap. 1. fol. 4. col. 1. [m] See Ch. à Caſtro. [n] See him in his Notes on Matthew xxiv. and on Mark xiii. note [a], and on the ſecond of Peter iii. note [g], and on Revelations vi. note [d], and note [i], with other places.

thoſe that would not obey, and by it alſo his mercy in ſparing them, though perhaps having many defects in them, in that day of judgment, as a man ſpareth his own ſon that ſerveth him, as he promiſeth, chap. iii. 17. And this would be a clear ſenſe if we ſhould no farther preſs the letter of the words than ſo by way of ſimilitude, to denote that the ſame time which ſhould be to the wicked, a day of utter deſtruction, conſuming them as fire, ſhould be by the juſtice and mercy of God to the godly, as a fair day wherein the ſun doth kindly ariſe, and benignly and largely impart his light (as Druſius explains the expreſſion) for the comfort of men and other creatures; a gracious and comfortable day, a day of ſaving health to them: ſo Kimchi, not unaptly, notes that the words import, that they ſhould be delivered from all evil, and rejoice with a good (or glad) heart. But Interpreters think it not enough to ſtop here, but farther enquire who is meant by this Sun, and Chriſtians generally agree that Chriſt who is, [o] Luke i. 78. called the Day-ſpring or riſing Sun, is by this title meant; and this day, here ſpoken of, being the day of his coming (as it is, chap. iii. 2. called) he being entitled a Sun, his coming in it may be well called his riſing. Why Chriſt may be ſo called, many reaſons may be, and are, brought by Interpreters. But among them to our purpoſe in this place, and according to our undeſtanding of the time here ſpoken of, the moſt agreeable will be; becauſe as by the ſun's riſing thoſe things, which before were covered in darkneſs, are diſcovered and made apparent, ſo that by his coming in this manner both [p] God's juſtice, and his mercy to them that feared his name, which before was not ſo diſcernible while he ſuffered them to be mixed with the wicked, yea inſulted over by them, as if he did not own them more than others, nor take any peculiar care of them, ſo that they ſate as it were in the ſhadow of death, ſhould now be made conſpicuous to all, in his freeing them from their oppreſſions, delivering them from thoſe judgments by which the wicked were deſtroyed, and ſignally rewarding them for their obedience, ſo that they that ſate before in darkneſs now ſhould ſee a great light, and joyfully walk in it. Such a difference ſhould be in their condition from what it was before, as that it might well be ſaid, The Sun of righteouſneſs, of juſtice and mercy, was riſen to them, and that with healing in his wings, i. e. his comfortable rays or beams, as all agree by wings here to be meant. The ordinary ſun kindly ariſing in the morning, may at any time be ſaid, to bring healing in his wings, to diffuſe and communicate health by his rays, both to men and other creatures, which after his ſetting, and in his abſence, all the night ſeem to droop, languiſh, to be ſick and out of order, and thoſe that are ſo otherwiſe, in that while to be more ſo. Whence the Jews have a proverbial ſpeech, which may ſerve ſomething to illuſtrate this expreſſion. [q] The ſun ariſeth, the infirmity decreaſeth, that is, As the ſun riſeth, ſo infirmities decreaſe. Much more of This Sun might it be ſaid, that he did at his ariſing to thoſe that feared the Lord, bring healing with him in his wings to them in that day of diſtreſs, worſe than the darkeſt night, the ſhadow of death it ſelf, which without his ariſing to them would neceſſarily have ſwallowed up them too in deſtruction, and could not but by the apprehenſion of it, make them as even ſick at heart according to what he ſaid, chap. iii. 2. who may abide the day of his coming? ſo terrible ſhould it be, that all men's hearts ſhould [r] fail for fear, in contemplation of thoſe things that ſhould come on them, yet even then, in regard of his ſalutary effects that his coming ſhould have toward them that feared his name, he bid them [s], when theſe things, theſe terrible things ſhould begin to come to paſs, to look up and lift up their heads, for that their redemption then drew nigh, their deliverance from the perſecutions by the unbelieving Jews, which they had endured, and from the dangers which threatned them, as, except by his extraordinary providence inevitable, and his making that which was for the deſtruction of his enemies, occaſion of comfort and proſperity to them, may well be termed healing. But we may not confine it only to the reſcue of their perſons, and preſervation of their bodies, nor the outward joy that they ſhould find from that, but look on the inward ſpiritual comfort, and the healing of their [t] broken hearts, and fainting ſpirits, in preſerving them from failing by fear and deſpair, as a greater part of it, and therefore not unfitly doth Grotius interpret this ariſing of the ſun of righteouſneſs with healing in his wings, of the collation of the Holy Spirit, which Chriſt ſhould ſend to his to ſhine in their hearts, and bring perfect health to their minds; that Spirit of Comfort, the only true comforter. In regard of both theſe, viz. both his reſcuing and delivering thoſe that feared his name, and protecting and delivering them from their outward fears and dangers, and perſecutions, and his inward illumination and comforting of them by his good Spirit, ſhewing himſelf in all ways a Sun and Shield to them; was this prophecy that he ſhould ariſe to them with healing in his wings, evidently and abundantly made good to them in that day. And certainly in all reſpects doth that title of the Sun of righteouſneſs agree to Chriſt the fountain of true heavenly light, who enlightneth every man coming into the world, [u] John i. 9. and whom God hath ſet forth to declare his righteouſneſs, Rom. iii. 25, 26. and the Author of all true comfort, who giveth to his ſuch joy, as ſhall ſwallow up all worldly ſorrow, John xvi. 20. ſuch joy as no man can take from them, ver. 22. and never leaveth his comfortleſs, John xiv. 18. but ſendeth to them from the Father, the Comforter, the Spirit of truth, John xv. 26. to abide with them for ever, and to dwell in them, and to be in them, John xiv. 16, 17. and in the ſame regard likewiſe may he be ſaid to ariſe or come with healing in his wings to them, as in all other ways alſo, diffuſing health in all kinds. When he was here on earth, great multitudes from all parts flocked to him to be healed of their diſeaſes; and they that were vexed with unclean ſpirits, and they were healed. And the whole multitude ſought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him and healed them all, Luke vi. 17, 18, 19. And the woman which had been twelve years diſeaſed with an iſſue of blood, did not doubt but to find the effects of that virtue, who therefore coming behind him, touched the hem of his garment, for ſhe ſaid within her ſelf, If I may but touch his garment, I ſhall be whole, Mat. ix. 20, 21. and ſhe did accordingly find it, for ſtraightway ſhe was healed of that plague. And Jeſus perceived, though he ſaw not the woman, that virtue had gone out of him, and ſhe before all acknowledged it, Mark v. 28, 29, 30, &c. and Luke viii. 44, &c. on which paſſage in Mat. ix. Grotius notes, that it may well be looked on as having reference to, at leaſt good correſpondence with, this place. The word בכנפיה Bicnapheiha rendred, in his wings, being capable of being rendred, in fimbriis, in the hems or borders of his garment, as he obſerves it to be elſewhere rendred: and it may be not unworthy of conſideration. But withal, that healing virtue in him ſhewed it ſelf, not more in the healing bodily diſtempers, than the worſe maladies of the ſoul, as appears in his words when he cured ſome bodily diſeaſes, in ſaying, not, Be well or healed, ariſe and walk, but, thy ſins be forgiven thee, [w] Mat. ix. 2, 5. that they might know that he had power to forgive ſins, ver. 6. and was no leſs a Phyſician of ſick diſtreſſed ſouls, than of diſeaſed bodies.

[o] See Dr. Hammond on Luke i. 78. [p] See Calvin. [q] Baba bathra, cap. 1. fol. 16. col. 2. [r] Lukee xxi. 26. [s] Ib. 28. [t] See Pſalm cxlvii. 3. [u] See Dr. Hammond on that place, and ſee John viii. 12. and xii. 46.

In all regards then, as we ſaid, doth the title of the Sun of righteouſneſs ariſing with healing in his wings, well agree to Chriſt our Saviour, and all things that thoſe words can give us to expect from him that is ſo deſcribed, have been, and are, by him abundantly made good; ſo have thoſe that faithfully believe in him and rely on him always found, and ſhall find. But as to this preſent place, the words ſeem limited to thoſe benefits of outward preſervation, and inward comfort which thoſe that feared the Lord were in that day of diſcrimination, which the Lord ſaith he would make, to expect according to his promiſe here made, and did accordingly find, with what more he adds in the following words for expreſſing his goodneſs to them. But before we proceed to them, we may here take notice of a ſtrange conceit of the Jews, which they here bring for explication of what is here ſaid concerning that day that ſhall burn as an oven, and devour the wicked, and that Sun of righteouſneſs which ſhall ariſe to them that fear the name of the Lord, and how the diſcrimination ſhall be made between them. The ſun, [x] they tell us, is now incloſed in a caſe or ſheath (beſides that God, out of a pool before him, deads his force with water) that ſo he may not burn up the world, but at the day of judgment he ſhall be unſheathed, and ſo coming forth in his full ſtrength, ſhall (as he now doth in melting ſome things and hardning others,) ſhew contrary effects, according to the difference of the ſubjects that he hath to work on, and ſo burn up the wicked as ſtubble, but heal the godly of all thoſe bodily defects and imperfections with which they ſhall then ariſe; this is the ſum of what they ſay, as improved to its beſt meaning by Abarbinel. But what tolerable meaning it may have at beſt, I cannot perceive; ſure it is ſuch as hath no ground at all from Scripture, nor agrees with it in any meaning. To prove that the ſun is in a ſheath or caſe, becauſe it is ſaid, In them hath he ſet a tabernacle for the ſun, Pſalm xix. 4. and that in the laſt day it ſhall be unſheathed, becauſe it is here ſaid, the day cometh that ſhall burn as an oven, are ways of proof that will have certainly no force with any, but thoſe of the Jews that muſt think all that their ancient Rabbins have ſaid to be true, how abſurd and groundleſs ſoever, yea though both contrary to Scripture and reaſon. What proof, mean while, for the pool of water, in which the ſun is cooled? I ſhould have paſſed this by, without taking notice of it in this place, as thinking it only a conceit of their Doctors given in ſtrange terms, to amuſe their Diſciples when they would not ſpeak plainly to them, with ſome hidden meaning in them (as many in that kind they have, and in particular, that which alſo may ſeem to refer to this place, [y] that Abraham had a precious ſtone hanging about his neck, which when any ſick people looked on, they were healed, and when he died, God faſtned it in the ſun by which means the ſun hath healing virtue in him; by which Abarbinel interprets to be meant that Abraham while he lived convinced men of the unity, truth, and power of God by ſolid arguments, but after his death they being deprived of ſuch an oral Teacher, they had a viſible one in the ſun by his wonderful motion undeniably demonſtrating the ſame;) but that by the [a] graveſt and moſt ſerious of them I ſee this cited as literally to be expounded, and to give the true meaning of this place, from which, and from being true in any kind, it is certainly moſt wide, and in it ſelf very ridiculous. As ſo therefore leaving it, we paſs on to the following words, in which he farther deſcribes the happy condition that thoſe that fear his name ſhall be in.

And ye ſhall go forth and grow up as calves of the ſtall.] Ye ſhall go forth, i. e. ſay ſome of the Chriſtian [b] Expoſitors, who underſtand the time

2

[w] Mark ii. and Luke v. [x] Talmud Nedarim. cap. 1. fol. 8. col. 2. Abo da Zarah, cap. 1. fol. 4. Bereſhith rabba, Sect. 6. See Buxtorf. Lex. Mag. in נרתק. [y] Baba Bathra, cap. 1 fol. 10. col. 2. Yalkut. [z] On chap. i. 11. [a] R. Solomon, D. Kimchi, Abarb. and ſee Maimon. on cap. 10. of Sanhedrim. p. 157. in porta Moſis. [b] Jerom. Vat.

time here ſpoken of, of the day of the laſt general judgment, out of this world, in which ye have hitherto been detained, as in a priſon. [c] Others to much the ſame purpoſe out of your graves, and ſo enjoy that happineſs and joyful eſtate in the next words deſcribed. But this though applied to that time undoubtedly true, and ſuch as may well mind us of that day, yet will not well agree to that way which we follow, taking the day ſpoken of for that particular day of judgment, wherein God proceeded to the puniſhment of the Jews by bringing deſtruction both on the city and people.

In reſpect to that, the explication of a learned [d] Man comes cloſer, which is, God ſhall as with his hand bring you out of the city ready to be deſtroyed; according to that way of taking care for the preſervation of his faithful ſervants, when deſtruction is ſent on the wicked among whom they are, of which we have many examples. Our Saviour gives us two, Luke xvii. 27. the one of Noah, at the general deluge, whom he taught firſt to make an ark for his preſervation, and brought not the flood on the ungodly till he was firſt by that ſecured, but as ſoon as Noah entred into the ark, the flood came and deſtroyed them all. The other of Lot, v. 29. to whom God purpoſing to deſtroy Sodom, ſent angels to lead him by the hand out of the city, by them telling him that he could not do any thing till he was eſcaped, Gen. xix. 22. But the ſame day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimſtone from heaven, and deſtroyed them all. And a viſion there is preſented to the Prophet Ezekiel, chap. ix. 4, &c. to the ſame purpoſe, where by God's command a mark was ſet on the foreheads of ſuch as feared the Lord, that they might not periſh in the common deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and thoſe that were to deſtroy the inhabitants thereof old and young, women and children, without ſparing any, were yet charg'd not to come near any man upon whom was God's mark. Not to look after more examples; this promiſe of deliverance to thoſe here to whom he ſaith, Ye ſhall go forth, was manifeſtly made good to the Chriſtians that were in Jeruſalem, when it was deſtroyed, by God's miraculous [e] warning them to go out of the city, affording them occaſion ſo to do, by which means they went forth and were preſerved, as hath been above ſaid on chap. iii. 6.

Calvin's words alſo for explaining this word will well fit the ſame purpoſe, (though not fully by him directed to the ſame, but to the renovation of the church more generally) that the word going forth is oppoſed to the hard ſtraits they had been before in, but ſhould now have liberty of going forth, and find open matter of joy. But there may be other ways of expounding this word without looking on it, as denoting properly a going forth out of the place where they were: but being joined to the next word, and grow, to denote that they ſhall [f] proceed to grow, &c. i. e. having received that healing, and ſalutary influence of the ſun of righteouſneſs, ſhall go on in proſpering, according to what the next words declare. Or as a learned [g] Jew ſaith, it may be expounded, ye ſhall go forth to, or in, or by the light of that ſun of righteouſneſs ariſing to you; and in this ſenſe may it be well enough applied to that warning of them to go out of the city, which before we mentioned; or as [h] another, Whereſoever ye go ye ſhall grow, &c. Which of theſe notions it will be beſt to take, (if it be not indifferent to take either,) as to this word, it will be better diſcerned when we ſhall have conſidered thoſe joined to it, and grow up as calves of the ſtall: in rendring the firſt of which words, viz. ופשחתם Upiſhtem (which Ours render, and grow up, there is ſome difference among Interpreters, ſome rendring it, and ye ſhall leap, ſo the Greek, καὶ σκιρτήσετε, (uſing here the ſame word, which is, Luke vi. 23. where he bids his rejoice, when they are perſecuted, and leap for joy.) And ſo the Latin, and the Syriack: the printed Arabick to the ſame purpoſe, ye ſhall move your ſelves, or leap for joy, the Chaldee Paraphraſe alſo, ye ſhall do or go [i] wantonly: the ſame ſignification doth the Greek give to it, Jer. l. 2. likewiſe the Syriack and the [k] Chaldee more plainly than here. So doth R. Tanchum ſay, that it ſignifies here playing and leaping for alacrity and joy, which he thinks alſo may moſt conveniently agree to that other forecited place of Jeremy; that it may be there rendred, becauſe ye ſkip or leap. And not far from this ſignification is that notion which the ſame root, viz. فاش Phaſha, hath in the Arabick Tongue, in which it ſignifies to vaunt or boaſt, to go ſtruttingly or proudly, but [l] Others prefer here to give it the ſignification of multiplying, waxing fat, growing or encreaſing, whether in number, as Some ſeem to underſtand it, who render it [m] Multiplicabimini, ye ſhall be multiplied; or in ſtrength, and well liking as [n] they who render it ye ſhall waxe fat, or whether more generally in any way, as Others who uſe a word appliable to encreaſe in any way, as [o] augeſcetis, or [p] creſcetis, with which our grow up agrees. This ſignification alſo R. Tanchum recites, both in this place, and the forecited, Jer. l. as likewiſe Nahum iii. 18. and Habbak. i. 8. and R. D. Kimchi both in this place, and that of Jeremiah, puts it as the proper expoſition of it; here he expounds it, Ye ſhall encreaſe and multiply as calves of the ſtall, which grow great in fleſh and fatneſs. It is confirmed by the common uſe of the ſame word in the Chaldee Tongue, and the learned Lud. de Dieu confirms it alſo by the uſe of the Æthiopick Tongue, in which [q] he notes the word to ſignify, to be ſound, healthy and ſtrong, and ſo would have it here to ſignify ye ſhall be fat, fat, luſty and ſtrong, and becauſe calves when they are fatted and luſty, uſe to frolick, and to leap and ſkip up and down in wanton manner, therefore he ſaith, it was that the Greek and Latin render it, ſhall leap. But perhaps they looked on it as a proper ſignification of the word diſtinct from the other, as well as beſides them R. Tanchum, who intimates that the word having different ſignifications, that is to be taken which the ſenſe of the place requires, or beſt agrees to. Both indeed of the forementioned ſignifications well agree to this place, and that in Jeremy alſo, and both are joined by Abarbinel, who ſaith the meaning of the words to be, that the ſun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe to them with healing, and they ſhall go forth to (or in, or by) the light of that ſun, and יתענג וירבו delight or ſport themſelves and encreaſe (or multiply or grow up) as calves of the ſtall, which will ſignify, as R. Tanchum well expreſſeth it, according to that notion, increaſe in happineſs.

[c] Ribera, Menoch. and ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro. [d] Grot. [e] Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 5. [f] Jun. Trem. and ſee Tarn. and Stokes. [g] Aben Ezra לאור השמש and Abarb. [h] R. D. Kimchi. [i] ויחטלון, ſee L. de Dieu. [k] תרוצון. [l] See Munſt. Tig. Jun. Trem. and ſee Bootii Animad. l. 3. c. 4. §. 3. [m] Pagnin. [n] Munſter. Tig. ſupra. [o] Jun. Trem. [p] Piſc. [q] On Heb. i. 8.

Another ſignification is attributed to the word, viz. of ſpreading or diſperſing, and in that ſenſe Aben Ezra would have it here underſtood, as appears by what he notes on Nahum iii. 18. where indeed that ſignification is by many given to the word, and by Ours rendred, is ſcattered, as likewiſe Habbuk. i. 8. where Ours and many Others alſo render it, ſhall ſpread themſelves, although in thoſe places alſo [r] there be who would have it to obtain the ſignification of multiplying and increaſing. But in this place he hath not many that go with him, although R. Tanchum in his Notes on Nahum, intimate that Some do, viz. take the word here to ſignify as it doth there to ſpread or diſperſe themſelves. But that ſignification may be alſo referred to the former of multiplying. There is another notion that the ſame root, פשׁ [s] Poſh, hath in the Syriack Tongue, viz. to remain, to ceaſe, to reſt and be quiet, פשׁחא Puſho, an interval, reſting or intermiſſion between any motions. And to ſay that here according to that notion it might ſignify that they ſhould have reſt and intermiſſion from their troubles, and be ſecure and quiet, as calves in a ſtall, would be no wide conjecture, nor diſagreeable to the purpoſe. But the two former ſignifications, viz. of leaping, or growing ſtrong and luſty, are the moſt followed; and both agree to the compariſon taken from calves in a ſtall, by conſidering which words, gueſs is to be made of the ſignification of this. As to the ſignification of thoſe, I ſuppoſe there can be no doubt made, but that they properly ſignify as they are by our Tranſlators rendred: nor is any made by any, although they have not all agreed [t] in the rendring; for Some render, as calves looſed from bonds (they mean I ſuppoſe let looſe out of the ſtall.) [u] Others, as calves of the herd, not that they read inſtead of מרבק Marbeck, by tranſportation of a letter, מבקר Mibbakar, as might more eaſily be conjectured, than what a learned [w] man ſuppoſeth that the Greek by change of a letter read מרתק Meretak, becauſe רתוק Rattok ſignifies bonds; but that the one took it for a [x] calf taken out of the herd, and put into a ſtall to be fatted; the other having rendred the verb ye ſhall leap, thought it appliable to ſtalled calves, not while tied in the ſtall, but ſuch which having been full fed in the ſtall were grown luſty and wanton, and would, if let looſe, frolick it and leap about, and therefore thought it more appoſite to the ſcope of that word to expreſs the other, by rendring calves looſed from the bonds with which they were tied in the ſtall. The ſame word is uſed, 1 Sam. xxviii. 24. and Amos vi. 4. and is doubtleſs a ſtall, or place in which cattle are tied up and fatted, though in the firſt place it be rendred by the Greek and Latin, a feeding or a fed calf; in the ſecond by both an herd. Nor was it neceſſary that that learned man ſhould have changed a letter to find in the word the ſignification of bonds: the word as it is read would as eaſily afford it, if he had conſulted the Arabick, which is of great affinity with the Hebrew, in which R. Tanchum, (on that [y] place in the 1 Sam.) notes that رَبَقٌ Rabko or rabak is a cord, with which calves or other cattle are tied, that they may be fatted, and thence מרבק Marbek, a place wherein they are ſo tied for that end, a fatting houſe, a ſtall. This by the way for juſtifying the reading of the word in the Hebrew Text.

The compariſon that is uſed in the forecited Jer. l. 2. is much like to this as to the ſcope, viz. of expreſſing vigour and luſtineſs, or alacrity, but there inſtead of the word מרבק ſtall in this place, is דשא Daſha where (the verb of the ſame root being there, that here) Ours render the expreſſion, ye are grown fat, (big, or corpulent, as in the Margin) as the heifer at graſs, but [z] Some think better to render it as a calf, or heifer (the word may indifferently be rendred, calf or heifer,) that treadeth in the floor; (and ſo being permitted to eat what he would, grew luſty and wanton.) However the words there be rendred, and however that expreſſion differ from this here, the meaning is much alike, and therefore the Chaldee there alſo renders calves of the ſtall, regarding more the ſenſe than the word. And however the words be here rendred, according to any of thoſe interpretations that we have mentioned, the ſcope will ſtill be the ſame, whether we follow thoſe that render ye ſhall leap, or thoſe that render ye ſhall grow up, be luſty or fat and ſtrong, like fatted calves. The ſcope will, I ſay, be ſtill the ſame, viz. to be a promiſe of great happineſs and proſperity, and ſecurity and occaſion of joy and exultation to thoſe ſpoken to, that they ſhall not only find healing by the ariſing of the ſun of righteouſneſs, but alſo find occaſion of delight and joy, as [a] a Talmudical Doctor expreſſes it. And this proſperity proſperity and exultation ſo comparatively deſcribed do they that by the day here ſpoken of, underſtand the day of judgment, and to concern all, apply to the joy and happy condition which then the Saints ſhall be made partakers of: but certainly that is [b] ſuch as neither eye hath ſeen nor ear hath heard, nor can by the heart of man be conceived, nor by any ſimilitude taken from earthly enjoyments, or any expreſſions of joy, or alacrity in any creature in this world be ſet forth.

2

[r] See Schind. Lex. and ſee in R. Tanch. on thoſe places. [s] See Bara Ali Lex. [t] Greek and Arab. [u] Vulg. Lat. and Syriack. [w] Capel. pag. 255. [x] See Chr. à Caſtro. [y] And in his Diction. and Abu Walid in his. [z] Abu Walid, R. Tanchum, R. D. Kimchi, and R. Solom. and Boot. Animad. l. 3. p. 44. [a] Tract. of Idolatry, cap. 1. fol. 4. col. 1.

This compariſon may ſeem more to agree to ſomething that ſhall in this life be enjoyed, and ſo therefore do we apply it to denote the ſecure and happy condition, which in that dreadful day of Jeruſalem's deſtruction (which by this day here we underſtand) God would of his mercy place thoſe that feared his name, and ſincerely embraced Chriſt's Doctrine, in. There is no doubt a promiſe to them of ſafety and deliverance in that dreadful day: and that were great kindneſs from God to them, and an evident ſign of his love to them and providential care over them, if it were only ſo, and they needed not any thing more for proof of it, than their deliverance from ſo great and unavoidable deſtruction, according to what he ſaith to Baruch, Jer. xlv. 4, 5. That which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted will I pluck up, even this whole land. And ſeekeſt thou great things for thy ſelf? ſeek them not, for behold I will bring evil upon all fleſh, ſaith the Lord: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goeſt, (as likewiſe to Ebed-melech he ſaith, chap. xxxix. 16, 17, 18.) And had his promiſe now to thoſe that feared his name, been only ſo far, as that he would ſecure them and ſave their lives, when ſo many periſhed, this had been, we ſay, evidence enough of his peculiar love and fartherly compaſſion to them, by which they might ſufficiently diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, between whom there appeared hitherto no difference, in the common opinion: but here is withal an evident promiſe of greater things, of joy and proſperity, and well being as well as being, ſet out in this comparative expreſſion. But though righteouſneſs hath the promiſe of the good things which reſpect this life, as well as thoſe which reſpect that which is to come, of outward as well as inward good things, yet conſidering the nature of Chriſt's kingdom and his promiſes, we cannot but think reſpect to be had here alſo to that joy and comfort of ſpirit, and [c] peace of conſcience, which in the inward man they ſhould find through the preſence and aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, by which they ſhould have occaſion, according to our Saviour's [d] Precept, to rejoice and leap for joy, whatever outward trouble they ſhould find; this inward joy ſhould be ſo great, as to expreſs it ſelf in vigour and alacrity, of the outward man alſo, as it ſeems here by this comparative expreſſion intimated, and what they now felt, could not but be to them a pledge and certain token of finding the like deliverance in that laſt general judgment alſo, when they ſhall not be as calves of the ſtall, but as angels, their bodies being made like Chriſt's glorious body, and they by ſeeing God as he is, be made like unto him, and inſtated in all fulneſs of joy for ever, without any mixture of ſorrow: though we do not with many look on that as the thing primarily here meant (though put in mind of, and given to look up to it,) but that liberty or happy condition, which in and by that fearful doom of the Jews which hitherto perſecuted them, they ſhould be brought to. And this is not only deſcribed by telling them in what happy plight and condition they ſhall be in themſelves, but amplified by declaring how it ſhall be with them in reſpect to the wicked who before lorded it over them, ſo as that now there ſhall be an evident diſcrimination between them compared one with the other. That follows in the next verſe.

3. And ye ſhall tread down the wicked; for they ſhall be aſhes under the ſoles of your feet, in the day that I ſhall do this, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

And ye ſhall tread down the wicked; for they ſhall be as aſhes under the ſoles of your feet, &c.] In the foregoing chapter, ver. 15. the wicked are looked on by men judging according to the preſent face of things, as happy men, men ſet up, and [e] delivered to do all thoſe abominations whereby they tempted God, ſo that they thought it in vain to ſerve God, no profit to keep his ordinances, or to walk mournfully before him: but ſee, in that day appointed by God for a diſcrimination between them, what a ſtrange alteration ſhall be. They which before were kept under ſhall now tread down thoſe that were ſo high, and the proud ones being by that burning day brought to deſtruction, be as aſhes (or duſt) under the ſoles of their feet whom they thought to trample on. By this expreſſion is manifeſtly ſet forth the difference which ſhould then be made by God betwixt the wicked and the godly, ſo as that the one ſhould appear to be owned by him, and by that means not only in a ſafe but in an happy and honourable condition, the other rejected by him, and given up to deſtruction, and ſo in the vileſt and loweſt condition that any can be brought to, which is expreſſed by comparing them to duſt and aſhes under the feet of others.

And it were ſufficient thus much to underſtand by the phraſe, as a figurative expreſſion concerning the difference of their conditions, by which ſhould be made good what is ſaid, chap. iii. 18. Then ſhall ye return and diſcern between the righteous and the wicked, &c. This is all that they who look on theſe words as deſcribing the day of the laſt judgment, and what ſhall then be done, [f] when the juſt ſhall awake to everlaſting life, and the wicked to ſhame and everlaſting contempt, can require for the making good of the expreſſion, and as much alſo as underſtanding it of the day of his proceeding in judgment againſt the Jews at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, we need require, or [g] they alſo who take this day to include all the time between Chriſt's coming in the fleſh, till his laſt coming at the day of judgment. Yet the learned Grotius thinks that the words literally, and as without any thing of figure in them underſtood, may be looked on as made good at that time, inaſmuch as after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, wherein ſo many were conſumed by fire, ſuch of the Chriſtians as did after come thither, did really tread on their aſhes. And ſo ſome of the ancient [h] Jews who underſtood this day of the laſt day of judgment, have found out a device to tell us how this ſhall then alſo be literally made good, viz. in that the bodies of the wicked (ordinary ſinners at leaſt) after they have been tormented in hell flames for twelve months ſhall then be conſumed to aſhes, and the wind ſhall ſcatter them under the ſoles of the feet of the righteous, according to what is here ſaid. A pretty invention for ſuch as will believe it on their authority. But I do not ſee that the ſoberer among them do; otherwiſe they would probably have made more uſe of it in their expoſitions of this place. Abarbinel indeed makes mention of it, but tells us that the ſimple meaning in theſe words is to ſhew, "That if we ſee the way of the wicked to "proſper, and the righteous to go mournfully, "behold that is it which happeneth in this dark "world, but when the Lord of hoſts ſhall "ariſe a ſun and ſhield in his divine day, and "ſhall judge all living, he ſhall give to every "one according to his ways, and according to "the fruit of his doings." Neither R. Solomon, nor Aben Ezra, nor David Kimchi mention it at all; the laſt of theſe thus expounding the words, "He ſaith, that now the wicked bear "rule over you, but in that time ye ſhall "trample them under the ſoles of your feet. "What he ſaith aſhes, is a proverbial or com-"parative expreſſion, becauſe he had before "ſaid that the day that ſhould come, ſhould "burn them up." It appears then that he did not think that aſhes here ought literally to be meant, but to denote the vileneſs and contemptibleneſs of their condition. Neither find we any mention of it in R. Tanchum, who though he differ from what we follow, in that he looks on the things ſpoken as not yet fulfilled, but to come, yet affords us words which we may well make uſe of in our way, which though he put at the end of the chapter, yet may here conveniently be put, as having reſpect to what hath been ſaid already, more than to what follows; and they thus ſound, [Conſider (ſaith he) the great wiſdom in the expreſſion of the prophetical revelation, however it be to be underſtood, that whereas there is for the righteous a reward in this world, and in the world to come, and for the wicked on the contrary puniſhment in this world, and in the world to come, theſe paſſages of Scripture are fitted to both intentions at once, according to an outward (or literal) ſenſe and an inward meaning. As to the outward meaning, it expreſſeth what ſhall be in the days of Meſſiah, to wit, that puniſhment ſhall then encompaſs the wicked, and they ſhall be conſumed together and be burnt up, as he ſaith, Behold the day cometh burning as an oven; but as for the righteous of Iſrael, the light of divine providence ſhall ariſe upon them, and they ſhall be healed by the manifeſtation of truths, from that grief which they ſuſtained by reaſon of their being hidden from them; and that is it which he ſaith, And there ſhall ariſe to you that fear my name, the ſun of righteouſneſs, and healing in his wings, &c. But as to the inward meaning, it ſignifies, as to thoſe that feared the Lord, and thought on his name, viz. which ſincerely did ſo after their knowledge of him and walking in his ways, that there ſhould be to them an everlaſting duration in his preſence, which is that writing down of their righteouſneſs in a book of remembrance before him, and they ſhould be a peculiar to him among mankind, which is what he ſaith, And they ſhall be to me, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, in the day which I ſhall make (or, when I ſhall do this) a peculiar, &c. But as for the wicked, to them ſhall the day come burning as an oven, which is the puniſhment of the world to come, accordingly as our wiſe men have declared, as likewiſe what is ſaid, and the day that cometh ſhall burn them up. And by [i] day he expreſſeth both happineſs and miſery, for two different meanings (or reaſons) 1. happineſs, in regard of the light which is found in the day after the darkneſs of the night, like that clearneſs of apprehenſion that ſhall accrue to the perfected ſoul after its ſeparation from groſs matter, i. e. the matter of the body; then miſery, by reaſon of extreme heat, that is found in the day proportionable to the grievouſneſs of that condition, and the extremity of the pain thereof, as he likewiſe compares it to fire, ſaying, burning like an oven. And becauſe the wicked ſhall be burnt with that fire, whereas the degree of the righteous ſhall be exalted, he compareth them alſo to aſhes under their feet, ſaying, and ye ſhall tread down the wicked, for they ſhall be aſhes under the ſoles of your feet. And he explains his comparing happineſs to light, in what he ſaith, And there ſhall ariſe to you that fear my name the ſun of righteouſneſs, &c. And that is an intellectual light which ſhall accrue by the right diſpoſition of the ſoul, and the rectification of the deeds, by the clearneſs of the ſhining of which the ſoul ſhall find reſt, and be healed from the pains of the diſtraction of the ſenſes, and their diſturbance (or ſtruggling, or contrary motions;) that is it which he ſaith, with healing in his wings. And to like purpoſe, ſaith Iſaiah, chap. lviii. 8. Then ſhall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health ſhall ſpring forth ſpeedily; and thy righteouſneſs ſhall go before thee, the glory of the Lord ſhall be thy reward.

[b] 1 Cor. ii. 9. [c] Grot. [d] Luke vi. 23. [e] Jer. vii. 10. [f] Dan. xii. 2.

[g] Dutch Notes on ver. 1. [h] Talmud. in Roſh haſhana, cap. 1. fol. 17. and ſomething differently reported in Yalkut. [i] Aben Ezra and Others note by ſun, ver. 2. to be ſignified, day, the riſing of the ſun cauſing the day.

ward. We beg of the Lord therefore that he will aſſiſt us for attaining to thoſe inward (or hidden) promiſes, by haſtning the outward (or viſible) ones, that our knowledge and worſhip of him may be ſincere, and that may occaſion to us an encreaſe of appropinquation to his Majeſty, or, bring us nearer to him, and that may be made good to us, which he ſaith, Iſaiah xxxv. 3, 4. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees, ſay to them that are of a fearful heart, Be ſtrong, fear not: behold your God will come with vengeance, &c.]

Theſe are his words (which if opportunity ſerve we ſhall at the end of theſe Notes ſet down in his own language.) I thought convenient to give them at length, (though perhaps not all to our preſent purpoſe) becauſe though he be out in the main matter of timing things, yet what he ſaith applied to the right time, will illuſtrate and confirm what we look on as the trueſt way of expounding them, viz. that literally and primarily they deſcribe to us a day wherein God would proceed in judgment againſt the nation of the Jews, for making a diſcrimination betwixt the righteous and the wicked, which becauſe it was at that preſent, when this Prophet lived and ſpake to them, not ſo diſcernible, they took thence occaſion to queſtion his juſtice, and ſpake ſtout words againſt him, ſaying, It is vain to ſerve God, &c. and where is the God of judgment? that day it appears, chap. iii. 1, 2. ſhould be at, or, by the coming of Chriſt, and by his coming is meant (as we have ſhewed) his coming in judgment to them at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. In that our forecited Author is out, that he thinks Chriſt not yet come, and ſo that day not yet come: whereas we (as the truth is) look on both as already come; and that being granted, then we ſay that in that he is right, that here is deſcribed a day of diſcrimination to be made in this world, as there was then made by the terrible deſtruction of the wicked among the unbelieving Jews, and gracious reſcue and deliverance of thoſe that believed in Chriſt; but withal, that by the wonderful wiſdom of God, that coming of Chriſt, to judge them then, is ſo deſcribed, as to ſet before our eyes another coming of his to judge all the world at the laſt day, wherein ſhall be made a perfect ſeparation between the righteous and the unrighteous, thoſe being received into joy and glory, and perfect happineſs in the preſence of God and the ſun of righteouſneſs, [k] the Lamb that ſhall be their light; the other adjudged to perpetual burnings worſe than of an oven, or furnace, to everlaſting ſhame, and contempt, and miſery; however in this world they thought themſelves happy, ſet up, and delivered. The firſt of theſe days is here properly deſcribed in ſuch figurative expreſſions as neceſſarily ſuggeſt to us the condition of the ſecond, and cannot but put us in mind of it. To either of them is appliable what is ſaid in the next words.

In the day that I ſhall do [this] or, (according to the letter, and as the Interlineary Latin here renders, as likewiſe [l] ſome Others) in the day that I make, or ſhall make. The ſame expreſſion which we had before, chap. iii. 17. and is an expreſſion alſo elſewhere uſed, [m] This is the day which the Lord hath made, היום עשה יהוה, and that title may be well applied to ſuch a peculiar, ſignal, day wherein God hath done ſome [n] extraordinary thing either for good or bad, for puniſhment to his enemies, or ſalvation and deliverance to his. Though, he made all days, yet ſuch a day might ſeem of a new make or ſingular creation, and be ſingularly attributed to him as its Maker. And ſuch may well be called the days of Chriſt's incarnation, his preaching the goſpel, his reſurrection, his coming to judgment againſt the Jews of that generation, which all may be (according to what we have before ſaid) looked on as one day, the day here ſpoken of, eſpecially the laſt act mentioned, and here peculiarly pointed out, wherein was brought a terrible deſtruction on his enemies, and wonderful deliverance to his friends; and for the ſame reaſon may the day of the laſt judgment be ſo likewiſe called, which (as we ſaid) may well be looked on as here pointed out, though not primarily meant as Some ſeem to take it with omiſſion of the other. In this day that they might know what he had ſaid ſhould certainly come to paſs, he adds his ſolemn confirmation.

Saith the Lord of hoſts,] He who hath all power in his hand, at whoſe beck are all creatures in heaven and earth, as ready miniſters to execute his pleaſure, and therefore can make good whatſoever he ſaith, and who is true in his ſayings, and will not alter the thing that is gone out of his mouth, he hath ſaid it the mighty, the faithful God hath ſpoken, and who ſhall diſannul it? he hath ſaid it, and it is therefore as certain as if it were already done. According therefore to what he ſaid, did that day come on the Jews, the people here ſpoken to, in the time appointed, and all thoſe things here foretold, come to paſs. And as certainly ſhall that other day, here (as we ſaid) typified or intimated, come on all the world in the time appointed for it, becauſe the Lord of hoſts hath though not expreſly here ſaid it, yet not obſcurely intimated, and elſewhere more plainly ſaid it; ſo that all muſt expect that as certainly to come on them all, as they have ſeen the former already to have come on the Jews. They deny it indeed to have been yet come on them, and would have it to ſignify ſome thing to come not on themſelves, but on their enemies, but it is becauſe they wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt that which all the world beſides hath ſeen, and with amazement acknowledge it. A ſtrange thing that that terrible deſtruction of their country and nation, ſuch as was never yet parallel'd by any thing that happened to any nation beſides, nor can be out-done by any thing imaginable, but the day of general judgment and conflagration of all the world, which it not obſcurely repreſented, ſhould work no more on them. Our prayer for them therefore muſt not be in their own words, words, that God would haſten the coming of that firſt day, that ſo they might with better preparations expect the ſecond, but that he would open their eyes to ſee, and incline their wills to acknowledge, that to have come upon them, which God here threatned, and ſo be turned and brought near to Chriſt, for rejecting whom was all that come on their anceſtors, and themſelves ever ſince, that ſo, what ſhall come to paſs of that laſt coming of his, may not be ſo terrible to them, but he then may appear to them as the ſun of righteouſneſs with healing in his wings to their ſalvation, who before came in flaming fire, as a burning oven to deſtroy them, who would not receive and obey [o] his goſpel. So ſhall they prevent by their repentance the evil of that day, though their anceſtors would not, though by God warned, ſeek to prevent the evil of the other: would not, I ſay; for though God here ſhews the certainty of the coming of that day, by ſaying, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, and he knew what they would do, yet that it implied a condition of their perſiſting to do as they did, and that by their repentance and change of their ways it might have been prevented, appears by what he adds (not certainly to no purpoſe) to move them to it, by bidding them to remember the law of Moſes, &c. and promiſing to ſend Eliah to ſeek to convert them, leſt he ſhould come, &c. to whom if they would not hearken, they ſhould inevitably pull on themſelves deſtruction.

I

[k] Rev. xxi. 23. [l] See Syriack and Arabick. [m] Pſalm cxviii. 44. [n] Moreh. l. 2. c. 29.

4. ¶ Remember ye the law of Moſes my ſervant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Iſrael, with the ſtatutes and judgments.

Remember ye the law of Moſes my ſervant, &c.] Aben Ezra's gloſs on theſe words is not amiſs, Remember the law of Moſes, &c.] i. e. (ſaith he) keep (or obſerve) it; for it will teach you the way of the fear of the Lord, and ſo when the mentioned day ſhall come, ye ſhall be delivered. But the other Jews go wider, as, by conſidering their words, we ſhall perceive. Abarbinel thus gives the coherence of theſe words with the former, "Foraſmuch "as the worſhip (or ſervice of God) which "ſhould bring them to that laſt true reward "at the reſurrection, was the worſhip accord-"ing to the law and commandments, and that "great rebellion which ſhould bring to that "puniſhment, which he mentions, is the "omiſſion (or rejection) of the law, therefore "he ſubjoins to this which he hath ſaid, Re-"member the law of Moſes my ſervant, to "declare to them that by means of that they "ſhould attain to the reward, and true proſ-"perity." That in which he errs in this expoſition is, in that he refers what is here ſpoken to the day of the reſurrection, which belongs to that day of Jeruſalem's viſitation, the evil of which that they might prevent, or in it find deliverance, he commends to them the remembrance and obſervance, in the mean while, of the law of Moſes as a faithful rule, ſeeing they ſhould after this have no more Prophets to direct them, till his ſending to them Elias at the approach of that day. Much in like kind errs R. Tanchum, viz. in mis-timing the things ſpoken of, ſaying, "That this was "given as a precept to thoſe of the captivity, "he commanding it to Iſrael by the hand of "this Prophet, becauſe after him prophecy "ſhould ceaſe from among them, by reaſon "of the obſcurity of the captivity; and the "meaning (ſaith he) is that he that would at-"tain to the happineſs ſpoken of, and delive-"rance from puniſhment, ought neceſſarily to "obey the commands of the law, continued "(or delivered down) among them." In which expoſition he paſſeth over the time to which properly belonged what is ſpoken, viz. that between this prophecy, and the coming of the Eliah here meant, wherein prophecy (as he obſerves) ſhould (and did) ceaſe among them, and ſo the coming of that day of judgment and diſcrimination; to faſten it on times, which did not begin till after the completion of this prophecy, according to its proper and primary meaning, viz. ſince the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. David Kimchi is not content to run on in the like error, but ſtrives to juſtify it by accuſing Chriſtians of error in miſinterpreting the words; his expoſition runs thus, He ſaith, until the day of judgment come, remember ye in every generation the law of Moſes my ſervant to do all, or according to all, that is written in it. Which I commanded unto him in Horeb, i. e. as I commanded him in Horeb, not according to the [p] words of the Chriſtians, which ſay that it was given for a time according to the literal ſenſe, but an Interpreter (Jeſus) came and interpreted it ſpiritually; this Text is an anſwer to them. His meaning ſeems this, That here is a command that till the laſt day of judgment they ſhould preciſely keep the law of Moſes, according to all that was written in it, and according to the letter of what was written, juſt as it was given to him and from him to them, and that therefore the words refute the Chriſtians who ſay, that the law was to endure but for a time, according to the literal meaning of it, but that the literal meaning was to yield to a ſpiritual meaning according to which Chriſt interpreted it. But we ſay that this man frames an argument on falſe grounds, and that the Text makes not againſt us, as he would have it, and hath in it an anſwer to, and refutation of them, not of us, who embrace them, both according to the letter, from which he departs, and the true meaning of them, which he perverts. Firſt, in that he ſaith that here is a command that they ſhould remember the law of Moſes in every generation until the day of the laſt judgment. If he mean (as manifeſtly he doth) the day of the laſt judgment, it is manifeſt that what is ſpoken hath not primarily reſpect to that, but to that day of God's national judgment to be executed on the Jews, continuing in obſtinate rebellion againſt him; that was the day of the Lord in this chapter of this prophecy, [o] 2 Theſſal. i. 8. [p] See Porta Moſis, Not. Miſcel. c. 8. p. 342.

phecy, and the foregoing, properly ſpoken of, as we have ſhewed, though ſo deſcribed as to repreſent to us, and neceſſarily to put us in mind of the laſt general judgment too. Beſides, the words are indefinitely ſpoken without referring to any ſet time: if we will enquire till what time they may ſeem to bind; that will moſt conveniently be anſwered to, from the next following words, viz. till he ſend Eliah the Prophet before the coming of the day of the Lord; warning, that till his coming they ſhould look to the law of Moſes as their director. So that hence is no evident ground from which to conclude the perpetuity of the law, againſt ſuch as ſhould deny it. That it ſhould laſt in force till that day, is as much as can from theſe words be concluded, and that which our Saviour ſaith, The law and the Prophets were until John, ſince that time the kingdom of God is preached, Luke xvi. 16. Farther, in that he ſaith, according to all that is written in it, and as I commanded him in Horeb; meaning that every thing in the law was juſt as it is written in it, and every thing punctually in that manner, and according to the letter as it was commanded, is his gloſs; whereas in the Text it is only אשר, which I commanded, and not כאשר as; which though in it ſelf it may ſeem to make no great difference, yet according to his meaning it manifeſtly doth, according to what he adds, not according to what the Chriſtians ſay, that it (i. e. the law) was given for a time only to be obſerved, according to the letter (as it ſounds) but that Jeſus came and interpreted it ſpiritually, and ſo hereafter it were to be obſerved or underſtood according to that ſpiritual, and not its literal meaning. For anſwer to all this we might bid him only to clear himſelf, by anſwering to what is ſaid, Jer. xxxi. 31, 32. Behold the days come, ſaith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the houſe of Iſrael, and with the houſe of Judah, not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers, &c. whence we may conclude with the Apoſtle, Heb. viii. 8. that in that he ſaith a new covenant, it is manifeſt that the firſt was to be made old, that the new might take place. But to deal more diſtinctly with him; in that he finds fault with the words of the Chriſtians, let him take from Chriſt himſelf what they ſay, Think not that I am come to deſtroy the law, and the Prophets, I am not come to deſtroy, but to fulfil. For verily I ſay unto you, till heaven and earth paſs, one jot, or one tittle ſhall in no wiſe paſs from the law till all be fulfilled, Mat. v. 17, 18. What is here ſpoken any way derogatory to the law of Moſes? Is not here the perpetuity of the law as plainly aſſerted, as the Rabbin himſelf could aſſert it? But then his gloſs כאשר, all juſt as it is written, is not to be admitted as if every thing were ſtill ſo to be obſerved as at firſt it was, and juſt as it was given to Moſes; as if all things in it were of like moment and equally eſſential: for in it were diverſe things which were to be fulfilled, and being fulfilled, could require no farther obſervance; ſuch were thoſe ceremonious parts of it, which were types and ſhadows, and could not but by the coming of the ſubſtance, which was Chriſt, have an end put to them, and neceſſarily be done away, not by being mean while violated but completed. The other more ſubſtantial parts, viz. the moral precepts are ſo far from being abrogated by him, as that being purged from all thoſe corrupt gloſſes, and traditions of the Jews, by which they were almoſt made void and of none effect, they have not only their true meaning and extent given them, but are backt and confirmed anew by his authority, and commended to the perpetual obſervance of all his followers. And for what he looks on as a fault to be objected, that we affirm that Chriſt interpreted the law ſpiritually, as if it were no more literally to be underſtood, I know not what he would make to be the force of his objection, but to conclude againſt themſelves that they are carnal, and ſo would not have any thing of the law ſo underſtood as to croſs their carnal minds, or to require any more than the carnal performances of the outward man, which to think, appears to have been from of old their error, and ſuch as they are willing ſtill to continue in. For the law is ſpiritual, Rom. vii. 14. and always ſo was; that which made it not to be ſo underſtood, and not to have anſwerable effects, was the carnality of men, not the fault of the law. If Chriſt vindicated it from the wrong by them done to it by their groſs and falſe underſtandings, and require the obedience of the inward as well as outward man, ſhall that be accounted an injury to it, or a deſtroying of it? If he mean that we ſay that the former types and ſhadows directed to more than was by them outwardly performed, and that what was by them really meant, was by and in him completed, and fulfilled in a more excellent manner, when he appeared to put away ſin by the [q] ſacrifice of himſelf, and ſo to make all other ſacrifices uſeleſs, and by the ſprinkling of his blood to put an end to ſuch other carnal ordinances as were impoſed on them till the [r] time of reformation only; if I ſay by what he calls interpreting the law ſpiritually, he means any of theſe things; he ſpeaks of that which was a reſtoring the law to its true meaning, and a perfecting, not a violating of it: ſo that in theſe words is no anſwer (as he tells us it is) againſt any thing that Chriſtians ſay, but they ſhew of him, and thoſe of his religion, that they themſelves do not duly remember the law of Moſes which God commanded by him, nor conſider or underſtand aright what that commanded them. If they would duly look into it, and apply the prophecies thereof to what they concerned, and the types thereof to what was ſignified by them, they could not but perceive that by them they were directed to Chriſt, and belief in him againſt whom they now urge them. This were ſufficient for anſwer to him; even the bare ſetting down the words of Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, which ſhew that they taught nothing derogatory to the law of Moſes, or by which they might be thought to violate any command, given either here or elſewhere for due obſervance of it; if there were here any occaſion given to him of cavilling in that kind againſt them: but we look on this, which by occaſion of his objection we have hitherto ſaid as a mere digreſſion, there being (however he hath ſought occaſion) no occaſion, as we have already intimated by the words rightly underſtood, given to him, as will appear by the ſcope of them duly conſidered, which we may in brief thus ſum up. The Lord having by this Prophet reproved the Jews for many ſins, both by the prieſts and people committed wherein they ſhewed great contempt or neglect of the law by Moſes given unto them, for which he delayed yet to puniſh them, or did but lightly puniſh them, giving them time to repent, and for that they for the generality, or moſt of them took thence occaſion rather to applaud themſelves in their wicked courſes, than to repent of them, and to ſpeak ſtout words againſt him, as if he delighted in ſinners and their ways, and were not a God of judgment, nor had reſpect to them that ſerved him, and therefore it were in vain to ſerve him, and having told them that he would in due time make it manifeſt, that he took all the while due notice of what they wickedly did and ſaid, and would for that end ſend both his meſſenger to prepare the way before him, and the Lord the Meſſenger of the covenant, who ſhould bring all their doings to an exact trial, and ſo he would come near to them in judgment, and bring on them ſuch a day of diſcrimination betwixt the righteous and the wicked, wherein the wicked among them ſhould be utterly deſtroyed, and the godly (who hitherto ſeemed to be neglected) find ſalvation and deliverance; and to move them therefore to repentance, having deſcribed the terror of that day; doth here, as it were, warn them, that if this would not move them, they ſhould not, as they had hitherto had, have any more Prophets to call on them, but be left only to that law, which they had hitherto ſo much neglected, for their director; which was indeed a ſufficient director to them, and had they duly hearkned to it, as they ought, they had not hitherto had ſuch need of other Prophets to call upon them, and mind them of their duty. But now ſeeing he hath reſolved to ſend them no more in that kind, till he ſend his meſſenger, whom he calls Eliah, to prepare the way before him at the approach of that great day of diſcrimination which he hath threatned, he urgeth on them a due remembrance of that law, and ſerious heed, and obſervance of all commanded in it, as the only way whereby to prepare them for the receiving of his Eliah, that they might be converted by him, and ſo prevent the evil of that day, wherein he would ſmite with a curſe thoſe that did not prepare then to meet him.

[q] Heb. ix. 26. [r] Ejuſd. v. 10.

This being plainly the intent of the words, to raiſe from them a queſtion concerning the perpetuity of the law, or hence to think to prove it in all parts unalterable, is quite beſides the purpoſe. As they were given they are manifeſtly a command to them of that time to an obſervation of all the parts thereof, and the meaning of them is evident; thus: Look not henceforth for an ordinary or continued ſucceſſion of Prophets, as you hitherto have had; but that you may prepare your ſelves for meeting the Lord in that day by Malachi told you of, remember duly the law of Moſes, with the ſtatutes and judgments thereof; take that for your rule and direction, whereby to ſquare your lives and actions. Neceſſary was it that they ſhould remember and duly attend to that, all of them; for though it was delivered to them by the hand of Moſes the ſervant of God, and therefore called his law, yet was it by God himſelf commanded unto him for all Iſrael, all of it with all the ſtatutes and judgments therein contained, all the parts thereof. By the law[s] Some will have meant the moral precepts of the law, by ſtatutes the ceremonial, by judgments the judicial. Abarbinel (as the Jews commonly) by חקים Chukkim, ſtatutes, will have to be underſtood ſuch things for which no other reaſon is to be given, but God's command, by משפטים Miſhpatim, judgments, ſuch the reaſon of which was manifeſt. But without farther enquiry into the notion of the words we take to be in the words as here put, all the parts of the law whatſoever, and of what nature ſoever, even every jot and tittle thereof (as our Saviour ſpeaks) comprehended, inaſmuch as every one of them was then (when this was ſpoken) in force, not any of them completed by having had its due end. And therefore by being bid to remember them, they are told what was a duty neceſſarily incumbent on them. For all of them were commanded to all Iſrael, and they ought to obſerve all, and not forget or neglect any of them, and as this was a duty neceſſary to them, ſo was it a thing that would be greatly beneficial to them. So that it was the great kindneſs of God to call upon them to remember that which he had made formerly their duty, and might in juſtice without farther delay, or warning have proceeded in judgment againſt them for their many neglects and breaches of it, which by this Prophet he hath convinced them guilty of. The benefits of remembring of it, would have been the rectifying of them in their ways, which they had greatly perverted, the reſtraining them from, and warning them to repent of, thoſe many ſins, which he hath convinced them to be guilty of, whereby they had greatly provoked him as he hath ſhewed, and to ſet them in ſuch ways, wherein walking both they and their ſervices ſhould be accepted by him: and farther, to inſtruct them, concerning the Lord, the Meſſiah, whoſe coming he hath here warned them of, and how to receive him, and his meſſenger that he would ſend to prepare the way before him. And this eſpecially[t] Some will have to be underſtood as that for which he would have them remember the law of Moſes. That indeed did both point him out before hand in many types and figures, and expreſly expreſly command obedience to him, when he ſhould come, as Deut. xviii. 15. as that place is cited by St. Peter, and ſhewed to be meant of him, Acts iii 22. and our Saviour himſelf tells us that Moſes wrote ſo plainly of him, that if they had believed Moſes, they would have believed him. And that the cauſe that they believed not his words, was becauſe they believed not the writings of Moſes, John v. 46, 47. The law, (with which it may not be amiſs, with [u] Some, to take in the Prophets as appendages for expoſition thereof, as our Saviour joins them, They have Moſes and the Prophets, let them hear them, Luke xvi. 29.) in theſe and other regards was plainly a Schoolmaſter (as St. Paul calls it) which attended to, would have brought them to Chriſt. And ſo the remembring of it would have been eminently beneficial to them. But we look not on this only (though of chief regard and including the reſt) as that wherein it would have been advantageous to them to have remembred the law of Moſes, but with this on all the other mentioned. By ſo doing they ſhould have been ſo prepared for the coming of the day of the Lord ſo often before, and immediately again ſpoken of, that it ſhould not have for deſtruction come upon them: and their not remembring it would (as in the event manifeſtly it did) bring with it all its dreadful effects on them. It was then God's great kindneſs to call on them to remember it for their own good, Yet is not that the utmoſt of his loving kindneſs. That they may ſee his mercies never ceaſe, where men do not obſtinately reject them, and forſake them, though they may not expect any more Prophets of an ordinary rank to warn them when they forget the law, by obſerving which they ſhould prevent the terrors of his day; yet that they may not have any excuſe, or pretence at all to ſay that it came on them unawares, he promiſeth hard before the coming thereof, an extraordinary one, whom he calls Eliah, to endeavour even then to convert them if they would be converted. So follows it in the next verſe.

[s] Druſ. Vatab. 4to and 8vo. Riber. &c. [t] Munſter, and ſee Chr. à Caſtro.

5. ¶ Behold I will ſend you Eliah the Prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

Behold I will ſend you Eliah the Prophet, &c.] As to the connexion of theſe words with the former in ſuch manner as we have ſaid, Kimchi thus notes. "Although I warn you "to have recourſe to the law of Moſes in every "generation, yet notwithſtanding for your "good I will ſend to you Eliah the Prophet." But concerning the perſon, who is here meant by Eliah, is no ſmall controverſy and difference betwixt Expoſitors. The Jews agree not among themſelves; the forementioned Kimchi with ſeveral others of them, think it meant of that Eliah himſelf in perſon who lived and propheſied in the time of Ahab King of Iſrael, 1 Kings xvii, &c. The meaning, ſaith he, is, "That he will put again his ſoul which aſcended "into heaven, into a body which ſhall be cre-"ated like his firſt body, becauſe his firſt body "turned to earth at his aſcenſion, every ele-"ment to its like element; and after that he "ſhall cauſe him to live in his body, he ſhall "ſend him to Iſrael before the day of judg-"ment, which is the great and dreadful day "of the Lord, and he ſhall warn both fathers "and children together, to turn with all their "heart unto the Lord, and they that turn ſhall "be delivered from the day of judgment, as "he ſaith, &c." Aben Ezra ſeems to be of the ſame opinion, but to think that Eliah continued ſtill in the ſame body, and to believe that he appeared ſometimes in the days of their holy wiſemen, and prays God to haſten the time of his coming. So [w] Others of them. Abarbinel here thinks the ſame as to his perſon, though not determining whether he ſhall come in a new raiſed body, or in his old body, which he never put off, "God, ſaith he, ſhews "them that the firſt which ſhall ariſe at the "reſurrection ſhall be Eliah the Prophet, "whether he ſhall riſe as others do, if his body "were conſumed, when he was taken up, as "ſome of the modern Doctors affirm, or "whether he miraculouſly remain in his body "and ſoul in the earthly paradiſe, as our wiſe "men thought, and that God will ſend him, "before the great and dreadful day of the "Lord come, which is the day of judgment "for all living." All theſe think that here is a promiſe of ſending Eliah (the old Elijah) in perſon. Others of them of no leſs authority, think it not neceſſarily to be ſo meant, but of ſending ſome other great Prophet, who becauſe he ſhould be like to Eliah in dignity, and knowledge, is called by his name, as appears by what R. Tanchum notes on this place, whoſe words are in their own language, partly ſet down in the Miſcellaneous Notes in the book called Porta Moſis, chap. vi. page 219. and tranſlated into Engliſh, ſound thus, "This "without doubt, is a promiſe, that there "ſhould appear a Prophet in Iſrael a little be-"fore the time of the appearance of the "Meſſiah, and ſome of the learned men do "think that he is Elijah the Tiſhbite himſelf, "and that is the opinion that is found in moſt "of the allegorical expoſitions; Others think "it meant that he ſhould be ſome great Pro-"phet like unto him in degree, and occupy-"ing his place as for what concerns the know-"ledge of God, and the making manifeſt of "his name, and therefore called by the name "of Eliah. So expreſly declares that eminent "great Doctor Rabbi Moſes, the ſon of Mai-"mon [x] at the end of his great juridical work "called Miſhneh Torah (or the repetition of "the law) and perhaps according to this opi-"nion may be underſtood to be Meſſias the "ſon of Joſeph, as he ſaith alſo." Theſe words ſeem to intimate that that ſhould be ſaid by Maimonides in that place. But I do not find any ſuch thing in him there at all, either in any printed copies or manuſcripts, which I have ſeen. He mentions indeed in the preceding ceding chapter there, two Meſſiahs, but the firſt he ſaith was David who delivered Iſrael from their enemies, and the ſecond ſhould be of the poſterity of David who ſhould ſave Iſrael from the hands of the children of Eſau (the Romans he means) according to that obſtinate error of theirs, expecting that Chriſt ſhould come to reſtore a temporal kingdom to them, and deſtroy their enemies: but of a Meſſiah the ſon of Joſeph (by whom what they mean hath been elſewhere ſhewn, viz. ſuch a one as ſhould be of the poſterity of Joſeph, and coming before the Meſſiah, the Son of David, undergo all the ſuffering part of ſuch things as are in Scripture ſpoken of Meſſiah, and leave only the glorious, and triumphant part alone for the Son of David,) I find not in him any mention. R. Tanchum goes on and ſaith, "That here is ſaid the ſame that was "above ſaid, chap. iii. 1. Behold I ſend my "meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare the way before "me, and that what he there ſaith, And the "Lord whom ye ſeek ſhall ſuddenly come to his "temple, even the Meſſenger of the covenant, "&c. is meant no doubt of the King Meſſiah: "may he quickly be revealed. But the truth "of the matter as to theſe promiſes will be "diſtinctly known by their manifeſtation (or "fulfilling.) For there is none that hath any "certain tradition concerning them, but every "one ſpeaks according to what appears to "him, and preponderates with him among "the interpretations of the Texts of Scrip-"ture, as [y] there alſo the ſame Moſes the ſon "of Maimon declares." Out of theſe words of his appears that among them is this difference, that Some underſtand Eliah in perſon to be here ſpoken of, Others not ſo, but ſome great Prophet in degree and dignity like him. The ſame difference and doubt ſeems anciently to have been among their anceſtors, as appears by their queſtioning John Baptiſt, whether he were the Meſſiah, or Elias, or that Prophet, John i. 19, 20, 21. for what can thoſe words more probably ſeem to mean, than whether he were Eliah in perſon, or that Prophet which was propheſied of, called by the name of Eliah? And we may think that the Scribes moſtly thought that it ſhould be Eliah in perſon, Mat. xvii. 10. This difference and doubt he thinks cannot be determined but by the event and fulfilling of the things themſelves: no man (ſaith [z] Maimonides) can know how they ſhould be, till they be fulfilled. This therefore that we except againſt them for, is, why ſince they have been fulfilled, the things concerning the meſſenger, and [a] Eliah, in John Baptiſt, the things concerning the Lord, ſpoken of, in Chriſt, they will not yet for all ſuch demonſtrations by the performance of their offices, acknowledge them; but rejecting them, and ſhutting their eyes againſt what hath been already fulfilled, look on them as things not fulfilled, and expect both Eliah and the Meſſiah, as here promiſed, yet to come. But perhaps they will here be ready to retort, and aſk why then do Chriſtians yet diſſent among themſelves, concerning the expoſition of this prophecy, ſome of them affirming that here is meant Eliah in perſon, and that he is yet to come, as well as any Jews do? It is to be confeſſed that here is a wider difference betwixt Chriſtians than might be wiſhed there were, though on other grounds than the Jews go. The Jews whether they underſtand it of Eliah in perſon, or any other great Prophet ſet forth by his name, all drive at this end to prove that the Meſſiah is not yet come, becauſe no ſuch Prophet hath yet appeared: againſt whom we need not add to what hath been ſaid on chap. iii. 1. Their not acknowledging them is no proof that they are not both long ſince come. The Chriſtians all in this agreeing that the Meſſiah or Chriſt is already come a firſt time, and ſhall at the end of the world come a ſecond time, and in this alſo that John Baptiſt was the promiſed meſſenger ſent before him at his firſt coming, and that he was deſervedly called Elias, yet in this differ, that ſome of them do not think that the Elias here mentioned is the ſame with the meſſenger before promiſed, chap. iii. 1. nor the ſame coming of Chriſt ſpoken of, that there: but that there, is to be underſtood his firſt coming, and John Baptiſt his forerunner at that, but here his ſecond coming to judgment, and, as Mr. Mede thinks, either Eliah in perſon, or ſome other called by that name, who ſhall come before him at that: whereas Others rightly take the Eliah here mentioned to be the ſame with the meſſenger there promiſed to be ſent, viz. John Baptiſt, and in both places the ſame coming of Chriſt to be meant, viz. that uſually called his firſt coming. And this we ſay is manifeſtly the truth. It appears by what is ſpoken by Chriſt himſelf in the goſpel, Mat. xvii. 9, &c. and Mark ix. 11, &c. in the ſtory of his transfiguration, where the Diſciples, Peter, and James, and John, which he took up into the mountain with him, after they had heard what Moſes and Elias talked with him (probably concerning the fulfilling of the prophecies in this chapter of Malachi mentioned, concerning the approach of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, wherein he ſhould deſtroy his wicked obſtinate enemies, the unbelieving Jews, and deliver his faithful ſervants that believed in him, out of that deſtruction, before which it is here ſaid that he would ſend Elias to forewarn them of it, and to preach repentance for the averting of it, whom they did not diſcern to be yet [b] come;) aſked him, Why then ſay the Scribes that Elias muſt firſt come, and Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Elias truly ſhall firſt come, (or cometh firſt) and ſhall reſtore all things: but I ſay unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not (or acknowledged him not) but have done unto him whatſoever they liſted, &c. Theſe words, I ſay, make it ſo plain that the Elias here meant was then already come, and that no other for fulfilling this prophecy, on which that ſaying of the the Scribes (or Doctors of the law among the Jews) was grounded, was to be expected before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, that there ſeems to be no place for queſtioning it. Yet do they, who would have Elias that ancient Prophet to be here meant, take hence their chief argument to prove that he here ſpoken of is not yet come, and therefore that the day here mentioned is likewiſe to be underſtood of the day of the laſt judgment, before which they expect he ſhall come, becauſe, ſay they, it is ſaid in the future, Elias truly ſhall firſt come, and reſtore all things, as if it were a thing yet to come, but ſurely the following words, But I ſay unto you that Elias is already come, make it evident that that interpretation cannot be put on the former, ſo as to infer from them, that Elias is not yet come, but that they muſt be expounded thus, It was truly ſaid, Elias ſhall come, &c. or, It is true that Elias ſhould firſt come (or was firſt to come:) and ſo it appears the Diſciples underſtood it, of whom it is ſaid, ver. 13. Then the Diſciples underſtood that he ſpake to them of John the Baptiſt, which is a plain proof that they, that underſtand it of any other, underſtand it not aright. They, though the opinion be ancient, and have many both of note and learning which follow it, (for what end it will not be to our purpoſe to examine,) may ſeem (as a great learned [c] Man obſerves) to have taken it rather from ſome tradition, that they had heard from the Jews, than to have warrant from the Scripture, or any good ground for it. Sure the words of our Saviour in the place cited, make not for them, but evidently againſt them, while he concludes all, with affirming that that Elias, which they ſpake of, was already come, not ſaying that another was to be expected, though one were already come. To the ſame purpoſe, as clearly makes what he elſewhere ſaith, concerning John Baptiſt, Mat. xi. 10. This is he of whom it is written, behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face which ſhall prepare thy way before thee, and ver. 14. And if ye will receive it (if ye will receive and believe the truth) this is Elias which was to come, (ὁ μέλλων ἔρχεσθαι) ſpoken there as of the future as well as in the forementioned words, which ſhall come, to ſhew that he was when the Prophet Malachi ſpake, to come afterward, not that when our Saviour ſpake he was yet to come: he plainly ſheweth, by ſaying thus, that he was already come. By all this our Saviour makes it manifeſt, that all that could in Malachi be interpreted of Elias was made good in John Baptiſt, [d] who came in the ſpirit and power of Elias, and was to be underſtood of him alone, as much as if he had in expreſs words ſaid, that he only was the Elias, that was to come, and they were not by virtue of Malachi's Prophecy, or any other, to look for another. And of him becauſe he is here ſtiled a Prophet, doth he ſay, that he was more than a Prophet, Mat. xi. 9. yea much more, Luke vii. 26. for (ſaith he) ver. 28. I ſay unto you among thoſe that are born of women there is not a greater Prophet than John the Baptiſt. And in Luke i. 76. Zecharias ſaith of him that he ſhould be called the Prophet of the Higheſt, and all the people were perſuaded that he was ſo, Luke xx. 6. his denying himſelf to be that Prophet, who the people aſked him if he were he, John i. 21. ſhews only that they were miſtaken in their conceit, concerning that Prophet which they aſked after, as likewiſe they were in their queſtion concerning Elias, which likewiſe he denied himſelf to be, viz. Elias in perſon as they expected, but not that he was he that is here called Elijah the Prophet.

[u] Calv. [w] See Not. in Porta Moſis, c. 6. p. 218, &c. [x] Viz. Tract. Melakim, cap. ult.

[y] Melacim, c. 2. §. 2. [z] Ibid. [a] See Notes on chap. iii. 1. [b] As Dr. Hammond proves on Mat. xvii. note [a], and Luke ix. note [b], and 2 Peter i. note [c].

Here the Greek Verſion inſtead of Prophet puts the epithet of Tiſhbite, which was the appellation of the Prophet Elijah of old, and by that [e] they who would here have it to be underſtood of him in perſon, ſtrengthen their opinion: but ſure that adds no ſtrength to it, beſides that this is a manifeſt change of the word in the original, which ought to be of greateſt authority, there is no doubt but that by the ſame reaſon, and [f] figurative way of ſpeaking, he may as well be called Elijah the Tiſhbite, as Elijah the Prophet, that only ſhewing the country of that Prophet, as the other word his office; if he deſerved to be called Eliah the Prophet, he deſerved to be called Eliah the Tiſhbite. For that Eliah the Prophet, whoſe name, becauſe he came in his ſpirit and power, he was called by, was a Tiſhbite: in this there is nothing of force to prove that here, and in the third chapter, ver. 1. are meant two different Eliahs. We conclude therefore from the expreſs words of our Saviour, that he that is meant here by Eliah is John the Baptiſt and no other, and remit the Reader for what is of him affirmed, and concerns us to know more of what is ſaid of his perſon, to what hath been ſpoken on chap. iii. 1. That which is added in this verſe concerns the time of his coming, viz. that he ſhould be ſent before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. That day is the ſame which is ſpoken of, chap. iii. 2. called there the day of his coming and his appearing, and ver. 17. the day which the Lord ſhall make (or according to our Tranſlation) the day wherein he ſhall make up his jewels, and in this chapter, ver. 1. the day which ſhall come burning as an oven, and ſhall burn up the wicked as ſtubble, but wherein to thoſe that fear the name of the Lord, the ſun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe with healing in his wings, and again, ver. 3. the day which the Lord ſhould make, or wherein he ſhould do what he had ſpoken; ſo ſignal a day as that it may above others be called [g] the day of the Lord, as ſhewing more of his power and preſence, than ordinary days, though all his. And that day we look upon (as we have before ſhewed) to be that day or time which ſhould end in the dreadful deſtruction of Jeruſalem, ſo comprehending under it (as we have ſaid on chap. iii. 2.) all the time from

[c] Grot. on Mat. xvii. 10. [d] Luke i. 17. [e] Rib. Tirin. [f] Rainoldus de lib. Apocr. prelect. 97. p. 1199.
[g] See on ver. 3. out of Moreh, l. 2. c. 29.

Chriſt's firſt beginning to preach to the Jews to that deſtruction of them and their city. And all this may be called the day of his firſt coming, to diſtinguiſh it from that which is uſually called his ſecond coming, viz. his coming at the laſt day to judge all the world. Otherwiſe if we will more nicely diſtinguiſh and confine the day of his firſt coming to his birth, and the ſecond to his coming at the day of doom to judge the world, this will be to be accounted a middle day, or coming between thoſe two (as the learned Dr. Hammond calls it on Mat. xxiv. 3. and Luke ix. 31.) for vengeance on his enemies, and deliverance of his ſervants.

But it may ſeem convenient to comprehend, as we ſaid, all that time from his firſt manifeſtation till his executing that fearful national judgment on the Jews, under one notion of his firſt coming. For though that which makes theſe titles of great and dreadful is moſt ſignally appliable to that day of vengeance; yet all along in his preaching and foretelling, and threatning them with that doom as certain to come, if they continued obſtinate and would not repent, as if it were already preſent, is that which may deſervedly denominate this whole time, a great and dreadful day to them. John the Baptiſt's words, wherein he deſcribes it, and forewarns of it, ſound no leſs, as Mat. iii. 2. where he begins his preaching with Repent ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand, and ver. 7. O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? and ver. 10. Now the ax is laid to the root of the trees, therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewen down and caſt into the fire, and ver. 12. where he tells them of Chriſt's coming with his fan in hand. The day or time thus deſcribed is a day of terror, and that ſo deſcribed is the day of Chriſt's firſt coming then already begun. Our Saviour's own preaching and behaviour while he was on earth was likewiſe very troubleſome to the unbelieving Prieſts, Scribes, and Phariſees; their quiet by both he diſturbs by continual minding them of, and ſharply reproving them for, their ſins and hypocriſy, and denouncing to them many ſad woes for them with ſevereſt threats, ye ſerpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye eſcape the damnation of hell? Mat. xxiii. 33. and telling them, Behold your houſe is left unto you deſolate, ver. 38. i. e. the [h] deſolation of your temple, city, and nation is irreverſibly at hand, as certainly ſhall it be as if it were already done. Again, when of that ſtately admired frame of their temple, which his Diſciples ſhewed him as a thing to be wondred at, he ſaith, Verily I ſay unto you, there ſhall not be left one ſtone upon another which ſhall not be thrown down, Mat. xxiv. 2. and likewiſe that the days ſhould come upon Jeruſalem, that her enemies ſhould caſt a trench about her, and compaſs her round, and keep her in on every ſide; and ſhould lay her even with the ground, and her children within her, and ſhould not leave in her one ſtone upon another, becauſe ſhe knew not the day of her viſitation, i. e. becauſe ſhe would not repent upon all his calls, Luke xix. 43, 44. and that generation, he ſaith, ſhould not paſs till all theſe things were fulfilled, Mat. xxiv. 34. and Luke xxi. 32. within the life-time of ſome that there were then alive all that he ſaid ſhould be certainly fulfilled. That time in which theſe and like dreadful things were ſpoken by him who ſpake as one having authority, as the people acknowledged, Mat. vii. 29. the Lord himſelf then on earth, whoſe words were as things done, may well be called a great and dreadful day of the Lord, at leaſt an awful day, or day to be feared (as [i] Some would have it rather rendred,) how much more when we ſhall look on it as concluded before that generation was paſſed away, within a matter of forty years, [k] with the fearful and total deſtruction of Jeruſalem? ſo that comprehending all that time, both of Chriſt's being on earth, come in the fleſh, wherein he threatned ſuch deſtruction to the Jews, and of his coming in that ſhort ſpace after his leaving the earth, to execute what he had threatned under the name of his firſt coming, we ſay that by the day here called the great and dreadful day of the Lord, that is meant. If any ſhall ſo diſtinguiſh the parts of this time as to call the time of his being on earth, the day of his firſt coming, and the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, a diſtinct coming from it; that which we ſay is, that by the great and dreadful day here meant, ſeems chiefly to be underſtood that of Jeruſalem's deſtruction, though we think it better to join both theſe together under the notion of one day, as we have ſaid, and that which we would evince is, that it is not literally and primarily meant of the day of the laſt judgment, as divers would have it, eſpecially they who will have by Elias to be meant Elias in perſon; the one opinion depends much on the other. A chief argument of ſuch of them as are Chriſtians, ſeems that taken from the epithet it ſelf, given to this day, becauſe it is called a dreadful day, [l] which they ſay is proper to the day of the laſt judgment, whereas the day of his firſt coming is not ſo called, but an acceptable time and day of ſalvation. But ſure, by what hath been already ſaid, it appears that the day of his firſt coming taken as reaching to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem (as we do take it) may well ſo be called, and was indeed ſo.

To the ſame purpoſe may be added to what hath been ſaid, that which Simeon ſaid unto Mary when ſhe preſented Jeſus in the temple, concerning him, Behold this Child is ſet for the fall and riſing again of many in Iſrael, Luke ii. 34. that is, as it is well and appoſitely to our purpoſe paraphraſed by the learned Dr. Hammond, "is appointed by God to be a "means of bringing puniſhment and ruin "upon all obdurate impenitents, and on the "other ſide to redeem, reſtore, and recover "thoſe that will be wrought upon by him." He

[h] Dr. Hammond's Paraph. [i] Druſ. [k] Dr. Hammond on Mark xiii. 30. and Luke xxi. 32. [l] Bellarm. de Romano Pontifice, l. 3. c. 6. and ſee Chr. à Caſtro, and Ribera.

He that was a chief corner ſtone, elect and precious, precious indeed to thoſe that believed, was at once unto the diſobedient a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a rock of offence, 1 Peter ii. 6, 7, 8. ſuch a ſtone as whoſoever ſhould fall on ſhould be broken, but on whomſoever it ſhould fall, it ſhould grind him to powder, Mat. xxi. 44. and whereas [m] they urge in confirmation of their opinion, that Chriſt at his firſt coming came not to judge but to be judged, not to deſtroy but to ſave, we may oppoſe what he ſaith, John ix. 39. for judgment am I come into this world, ſo as to ſhew that that cannot be ſo underſtood, as to contradict this. And that place of John xii. 47. where he ſaith he came not to judge the world, may, as Dr. Hammond obſerves, be well underſtood, that he came not to accuſe; but certain it is that the Father committed all judgment to the Son, and gave him authority to execute judgment, John v. 22, 27. and that as he came for judgment into the world, ſo he did execute it being come, both by his preaching while he was among men, laying the ax to the root of the tree, and ſeverely putting home the blow at the ſignal deſtruction of the unbelieving obſtinate Jews, in few years after his departure out of the world, when they who before refuſed to be judged by him, and to be convinced by his preaching, of their evil ways, and to repent of them, that ſo judging themſelves they might have prevented the farther judgment of the Lord, and thought to prevent that, by judging him, and crucifying him, did by their obſtinacy pull it on themſelves, and felt the ſad effects in ſo dreadful a manner in that particular judgment on that nation, that nothing but that fearful perdition of the whole world expected at the laſt day, can be imagined more terrible: ſo that that deſtruction of theirs being comprehended under the day of his firſt coming (in the way that we have ſaid,) makes it deſervedly called, the great and dreadful day of the Lord, as well as the laſt day of his coming to the general judgment may be ſo called. And whereas, as they ſay, that the day of his firſt coming is called an acceptable day, a day of ſalvation, it is to be conſidered to whom it was ſo, viz. to ſuch as received him with good will as a Saviour, believed in him, and obeyed him, but to others it was far otherwiſe, a day burning as an oven to deſtroy them. In like manner alſo may that day of the future judgment be termed, and ſhall be to the righteous a day of ſalvation, a welcome day, a day longed for by them, and in reſpect to the certain expectation of which they hold up their heads againſt all the preſſures and perſecutions, which from ungodly men they ſuffer before hand, and are by the Apoſtle bid to comfort one another with thoſe words, 1 Theſſal. iv. 18. ſo that in theſe epithets here put to the day here ſpoken of, there is nothing which maketh why it may not be attributed as well to the one as to the other, to that of Chriſt's firſt coming, as that of his ſecond: and the other circumſtances make it evident that it ought to be underſtood primarily here of the firſt, however appliable to the ſecond.

In the Prophet Joel, chap. ii. 31. we read of a day of the Lord deſcribed in the very ſame terms, and concerning the day deſigned thereby is much the like difference of opinions, as here. [n] But St. Peter in Acts ii. 20. manifeſtly interprets that alſo of the day of Chriſt's firſt coming, and ſo from all which hath been ſaid we conclude that by the great and dreadful day, before the coming of which the Lord bids them here take notice that he will ſend Eliah the Prophet, is to be underſtood the day of Chriſt's firſt coming, which includes his coming in judgment particularly, againſt the nation of the Jews, and ended in the deſtruction of the unbelievers amongſt them and of their city, before which John the Baptiſt, deſigned here by the name and title of Eliah the Prophet, was according to this prophecy ſent; and not of his coming to execute the general judgment on the whole world, at the day of doom, which ſhall end in the deſtruction of the whole, farther than as this was a [o] type of that, before which that he will ſend an harbinger, as he did before this, is but the conjecture of [p] thoſe that affirm it, and that for which there is not from theſe words any evident proof.

That which hath made me ſo long to inſiſt on the clearing of this expoſition, even to tediouſneſs, is becauſe the expounding the words otherwiſe, and as of a thing yet to come, would be to give up to the Jews an argument, which ought not to be given up to them. For if it be granted to them that Elijah in perſon be to be expected before the coming of Chriſt, here ſpoken of, and that the day here ſpoken of be not yet come, they will think they have reaſon to ſay (as they obſtinately do) that the true Meſſiah is not yet come, and yet to expect another Chriſt as well as another meſſenger; whereas if it be made evident (as we ſuppoſe it is) that that Eliah here foretold of, is already come, and the day here meant, alſo come, they can have nothing more but mere obſtinacy to pretend why they ſhould not believe in Chriſt, and forſake that error received from their fathers.

Farther arguments for confirming what we have ſaid, the following words alſo afford, as we ſhall ſee in taking them in their order; before we paſs to which we may take notice of the Greek rendring the word הַנּוֹרָא hannora, which other tranſlations render terrible, dreadful or awful, by ἐπιφανῆ, as likewiſe in Joel ii. 11, 38. illuſtrious or notable, as Ours tranſlate Acts ii. 20. where that ſecond place of Joel is cited, which hath made [q] Some to think that they read in the copy, that they followed, הַנִּרְאֶה Hannireah, from רָאָה to ſee; whereas הַנּוֹרָא is from יָרֵא yare, to fear: but another learned [r] Man is ſo far from their opinion, as as that he thinks that the Greek word mentioned is not there to be taken in its ordinary ſignification of illuſtrious or notable, but rather for terrible, and ſo likewiſe to have that notion in the title of Antiochus Epiphanes, who he thinks was not called ſo much illuſtrious as terrible. But this neither makes much for or againſt our purpoſe in giving the meaning. To the day ſpoken of may well agree, either of thoſe epithets: it was terrible and dreadful, and therefore notable, and perhaps there was anciently that communication of ſignifications between thoſe roots in the Hebrew as to juſtify both.

[m] Bell. ibid. See John iii. 17. and xii. 47. [n] Rainold. de lib. Apocryphis prael. 95. and Cameron on Mat. xvii. 11. [o] Ibid. [p] Mede's diſcourſe on Mat. i. 14, &c. [q] Schind. Lex. in רָאָה and Capel. Crit. p. 60. l. 2. [r] L. de Dieu, on Acts ii. 20.

6. And he ſhall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, leſt I come and ſmite the earth with a curſe.

And he ſhall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, &c.] As in the former verſe we had him whom God in mercy would ſend to them for preventing their utter deſtruction, deſcribed by his title of Eliah the Prophet, and by the time of his coming, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, ſo in this we have him deſcribed by his office, viz. that he ſhould turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, to which are added the good effects which ſhould be produced by his performance of that office, viz. the preventing of God's coming and ſmiting the earth with a curſe. Theſe words are referred to by the angel, Luke i. 16, 17. with a farther explication of them, and applied to John the Baptiſt thus, and many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn unto the Lord their God, and he ſhall go before him in the ſpirit, and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. That theſe words are there referred to, is manifeſt, and the perſon ſpoken of, ſo expreſly declared to be John the Baptiſt, called therefore Eliah, becauſe he ſhould come in the ſpirit and power of Elias, that there can be no reaſon why that ſhould be doubted or diſputed of among Chriſtians; or Elias in perſon, or any other by that name called, ſhould be expected by virtue of them, (as before we have ſaid.)

As concerning the meaning of the words by which his office is expreſſed, whatever they think concerning the perſon, it will be indifferent to all to enquire. They muſt have the ſame meaning, whoſoever they are applied to, whether by Jews or Chriſtians. For the meaning of them, therefore, we may look what they do or ought to agree in, comparing them one with another. To which enquiry it will be convenient to premiſe an obſervation concerning that word or prepoſition, which in our Tranſlation is rendred to, and is in the Hebrew עַל Al, viz. that it is (as [s] Grammarians obſerve, and examples convince) of divers uſes and ſignifications. It ſignifies moſt uſually above, over, on; but not only ſo, but withal, to, with, for, by, near, againſt, in, and other like, of which examples occur in the Hebrew Text. And according to the words with which it is joined and the thing ſpoken of, is the ſignification thereof to be diſcerned and diſtinguiſhed. Again, concerning the appellations and titles of fathers and children, that they are not only attributed to thoſe that are ſo by nature, but to others alſo, who for other reſpects or relation one to another, have thoſe names given them; as older people that of fathers, younger that of children; and ſo learned men, or teachers, are looked on as common fathers, in reſpect to their diſciples, or ſuch as learn of them, or are inſtructed by them, and the like.

This concerning the nature of thoſe words being obſerved, will help us to judge of ſuch expoſitions as are given of the whole ſentence. The ſignification of the foremention prepoſition which our Tranſlators chooſe to give it in this place, is to, or unto, which it often manifeſtly hath elſewhere, as Joſhua ii. 8. ſhe came up, עליהם Alehem, to them: and 1 Sam. ii. 11. went על ביתו Al Beito, to his houſe, with many other [t] places. And it is likewiſe embraced by moſt of Interpreters: but then accordingly as they apply it to fathers and children, and their different underſtanding of what is meant by them, do they differ in giving the meaning. They that underſtand them of ſuch as ſhould be then together in preſent being, whether natural fathers and children, or others who might be called by that title (as Ours ſeem to do) take his office, ſo as here deſcribed, to conſiſt in taking away ſuch diſcords and differences as ſhould be betwixt them, and ſettling peace, and love, and charity among them, ſo as that their hearts ſhould be propenſe and kindly affectionated one to another, and they ſhould be of one heart and one ſoul among themſelves, as it is ſaid of the believers, Acts iv. 32. and with one conſent hearken to God and receive the truth preached to them. So that this diſpoſition and behaviour, which it is here ſaid, it ſhould be the work of the promiſed Eliah to work in their hearts, may ſeem (as a learned [u] Jew obſerves) contrary to that which in the Prophet Micah is deſcribed, as being found among them in his time, chap. vii. 6. the ſon diſhonoureth the father, or that which on their hearkning not to him our Saviour ſaith, ſhould be in after-times, the father ſhall be divided againſt the ſon, and the ſon againſt the father, Luke xii. 53. Such diſſenſions among them in thoſe times here ſpoken of, are [w] obſerved to have been cauſed and fomented by the ſeveral ſects that were among them, as of Sadducees and Phariſees, and the like; which had ſuch ill influence as to baniſh thoſe due reſpects which ought to have been betwixt parents and children, ſuperiors and inferiors (or whoſoever under the title of father

2

[s] Abu Walid, and R. D. Kimchi in Radic. Grot. on the place, and on Luke i. 12.

[t] See R. D. Kimchi in Radicibus.

[u] Aben Ezra.

[w] See

father and ſon may be comprehended;) and that love and charity, which ſhould have been betwixt all orders and degrees of men, whoſe hearts Eliah (i. e. John Baptiſt coming in the ſpirit and power of Eliah) ſhould be ſent to reduce (if poſſible) to better order, to mutual agreement among themſelves, and joint obedience to God. This ſeems to have been the ancienteſt underſtanding of the words among the Jewiſh [x] Doctors, who ſum up the meaning of them in other words, ſaying, "That "he ſhould be ſent, להשוות המחלוקת Le- "haſhvoth hammachloketh, to compoſe diſſen- "ſion, or reconcile differences, לעשות "שלום ביניהם [y] Leaſoth ſhalom binehem, to "make peace between them, that they might "all agree in the profeſſion of one religion:" and thus ſeem the Greek Interpreters to have underſtood them, who inſtead of the ſecond member of the ſentence, and the heart of the children to their fathers, put for the meaning of it, and the heart of a man (or every one) to his neighbour. Againſt this expoſition I know not what may be excepted; yet do Others, taking the forementioned prepoſition in the ſame ſenſe, of to, give Others: [z] Some, he ſhall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c. i. e. of the Jews to the Gentiles, and of the Gentiles to the Jews; which though it may be true, and that John did ſo, and it was as well an effect of his preaching and baptizing, as of the goſpel, yet, I ſuppoſe, is not the literal meaning of theſe words, which were ſpoken to the Jews, and more particularly concern them between themſelves. [a] Others, he ſhall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, &c. i. e. of God to Iſrael, and Iſrael to God; who is called their Father, and calleth them ſons. That this is comprehended within the latitude of theſe words we doubt not, inaſmuch as we hear the angel, where he refers to theſe words, putting as part of John's office, many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God; and indeed for that end was he to turn their hearts one to another, that they might all with joint hearts, or one heart, turn to the Lord. Yet can we not think that to be the literal meaning of the preſent words: God is called their Father elſewhere, but I ſuppoſe fathers here put in the plural number, cannot be properly uſed of him.

Another [b] expoſition of Camerarius, who makes the meaning to be, that he ſhould reduce the hearts of the fathers to the children, and of the children to the fathers, i. e. "Should "turn or bring back the hearts of the fathers, "ſo as that they ſhould take care of the pious "education of their children, whereas they "had been negligent in the right inſtructing "and diſciplining of them, and the hearts of "the children who had been diſobedient to "their fathers; ſo as to yield due reverence "and obedience to them, may be well reduced "to the firſt." But as to that which [c] Others give, viz. that by the fathers ſhould be meant the old Patriarchs, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, &c. and by the children, thoſe of that generation when this Elias ſhould come: I do not underſtand how it can be made good. To ſay that the hearts of the children ſhould be turned by their converſion to the ſame faith that was in thoſe ancient holy men is intelligible; but how the hearts of thoſe ſo long ſince dead ſhould be ſaid to be turned to thoſe of that generation, is not ſo eaſily conceived. Theſe hitherto mentioned all take על Al here in the ſignification of to. There are of the Jews who would have it here to ſignify by, or by the hand, or means of; ſo R. Solomon out of an ancienter Doctor, ſhall turn the hearts of the fathers by the hand of the children, i. e. "Shall ſpeak to the children to perſuade their "fathers to embrace the way of the Lord, and "on the other hand to the fathers to perſuade "their children." The ſame ſignification of it takes Abarbinel alſo, and gives this ſtrange interpretation, making the time ſpoken of to be according to his fancy after the reſurrection, which he will have to be before the end of the world, "If any be then at that time liv- "ing who hath children dead, he ſhall by "them, being raiſed from the dead at the "coming of Eliah be converted to the truth, "and on the contrary ſuch children as are "living, by their fathers being raiſed; that "ſo before the end of the world all may be "turned to the truth, that all be not de- "ſtroyed." But this is ſo uncouth an expoſition and ſo little agreeing to the words, as that it will be much from the purpoſe to ſpeak more of it, nor doth that by R. Solomon mentioned agree with them, there being ſhewed in them what God would do by the hands of his Elias, not what Elias ſhould do by the hands of others.

But there is yet another acception of the word, which is by Others, both Jews and Chriſtians, preferred, as giving the plaineſt meaning; and that is by taking it here to ſignify not, to, but [d] with, as manifeſtly in ſeveral other places it doth. As for example, על מררים Al merorim, with bitter herbs, Exod. xii. 8, 9. his head על with his legs, and chap. xxxv. 22. and they came, על נשים Al naſim, with women, i. e. as Ours tranſlate it both men and women; with ſeveral like inſtances. Thus R. D. Kimchi here will have it taken, giving thus his expoſition, "He ſhall "warn or call on both fathers and children "together, with all their heart to turn unto "God, and they that turn ſhall be delivered "from the day of judgment;" ſo that על is to be looked on as ſignifying the ſame that עם im, with, fathers with the children, and of children with their fathers, all of them together. So likewiſe R. Tanchum, the meaning (ſaith he) is, "That he ſhall ſeek to rectify "(or reduce into order) the ſect (or people) "that they may be all of them of one heart, "in the obedience (or worſhip) of God, and "the word על is in the ſignification of עם, "with, [x] Talmud. Tract. Edaioth, cap. ult. [y] Ibid. and Maimon. cap. ult. [z] See Ribera, and Lightfoot. [a] See R. Tanchum. [b] See L. de Dieu. [c] Rib. Menoch. Tirin. &c. and ſee Chr. à Caſtro. [d] So an Arabick Tranſl. MS.

" with, i. e. ſaith he, he ſhall ſeek to rectify " the hearts of the fathers among them, with " the hearts of the children; and the repeat- " ing (or doubling) of the words, (viz. and " the heart of the children with their fathers,) " is for greater confirmation ſake." Thus ſay thoſe Jews, with whom do concur (as we ſaid) divers [e] Chriſtians alſo, and are urgent for it, ſo as that the words may denote that he ſhould convert or call to repentance all of them together, both old and young, young and old, that ſo they might all be a people prepared for the Lord, (as Luke i. 17. he ſpeaks) and readily receive him, and with joint hearts obey him; this expoſition gives a clear and plain meaning, and is eaſily reconcileable with the firſt mentioned; both even neceſſarily go together, viz. the converting all together, one with another, and one to another, in obedience to God, and love one to another: and therefore we may well look on the words as comprehending both, and that for giving a full meaning of them, both ought jointly to be taken in; and ſo are they taken in likewiſe in that one word, in which our Saviour elſewhere ſums up that office of this Eliah herein more expreſſed, viz. [f] ἀποκαταστήσει πάντα, ſhall reſtore all things, reduce all things to right order, which could not otherwiſe be done than by turning them all one to another, and one with another to the faith of Chriſt. In much like manner to that of our Saviour's, do ſome of the [g] Jews likewiſe ſum up the import of theſe words, concerning his office whoever it be that is meant, ſaying that he was לישר ישראל ולהכין לבבם Leyaſher Iſrael velehacin libbam, to rectify Iſrael, and to prepare or put in good order their hearts.

In the forecited place, Luke i. 17. where theſe words of Malachi are plainly referred to, the words, and the heart of their children to their fathers, are not put as they are here read, but inſtead of them, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, which the learned Dr. Hammond, in his Notes on that place ſhews to be as a gloſs or paraphraſe on the Prophet's words, to explain his expreſſion; both importing that a general reformation ſhould be endeavoured to be wrought by the perſon ſent for that end, among the Jews, for fitting them to receive the Lord Chriſt. From the ſame ſpirit did both expreſſions proceed, and it will not concern us to be inquiſitive why he ſhould change his language or expreſſions. By what he ſaith by his angel there in Luke, it is evident that what he here ſpake by his Prophet was ſpoken of John the Baptiſt, and not of Eliah in his perſon. And with what Elias-like zeal John did ſet himſelf to perform the office here deſigned for him, appears by what we read in the goſpel of his miſſion, and his preaching, and the time thereof, and the contents and effects of it, as Mat. iii. Mark i. Luke iii. and John i. He that ſhall duly conſider what is in thoſe places ſaid of John, and what he did, and compare them with what is ſaid here of the Eliah promiſed, that he ſhould do; will eaſily perceive all that is here propheſied to have been already made good; that there will be no ground left to him for expecting a farther completion of it, by Eliah in perſon, or any other under that name to be expected before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord here ſpoken of. Here God ſaith, Behold I will ſend Elijah the Prophet; in the goſpel it is ſaid, there was a man ſent from God whoſe name was John, John i. 6. and that that John was Elias which was for to come, Mat. xi. 14. Here, that he was to be ſent before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. There the time of John's coming is deſcribed that it was when the kingdom of God was at hand, Mat. iii. 2. when the day of wrath was coming, ver. 7. when the ax was laid to the root of the trees, and every tree that brought not forth good fruit ſhould be hewen down and caſt into the fire, ver. 10. when he was now coming whoſe fan was in his hand, and he would throughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into his barn, but would burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire, ver. 12. which expreſſions (as we have before ſhewed) are an evident deſcription of the great and dreadful day of the Lord here ſpoken of: here, that this Eliah ſhould turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers, [h] preach to all ſorts young and old converſion and repentance; there in the goſpel, that John ſhould turn many of the children of Iſrael to the Lord their God, and the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c. Luke i. 16, 17. and that he did preach to all the baptiſm of repentance, Mark i. 4. Luke iii. 3. and that with ſuch power and good effect that Jeruſalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, went out to him, and were baptized of him, confeſſing their ſins, Mat. iii. 5, 6. and Mark i. 5. i. e. multitudes of all ſorts and conditions of people out of thoſe places, Luke iii. 7. of the common ſort of people; ver. 10. of thoſe that might ſeem to have leaſt of the fear of God before their eyes, leaſt regard of, or charity for other men, publicans, ver. 12. ſoldiers, ver. 14. and were at greateſt difference in opinion one from another, Phariſees, and Sadducees. [i] To all theſe did he inſtil precepts of charity, Luke iii. 11. the hearts of all theſe it is manifeſt that he did turn one to another, in that they [k] agreed and were united in one common baptiſm by him. What can more punctually agree than the prophecy here, and the matter of fact ſet down in the goſpels thus paralleled, do, to ſhew that the perſon who is here ſo characterized in reſpect to what was to be, and there to what was made good in him, is one and the ſame, and that no other ought to be expected by virtue of this prophecy? certainly when we conſider how exactly all things do concur of what is foretold of in the Prophet, and reported as done done in the goſpel, in the one perſon of John the Baptiſt, and how all things here deſigned to be done by this perſon named Eliah, were by him in a ſignal manner performed; we ſhall perceive that there is little grounds for that argument which is by [l] Some here taken to prove that Eliah in perſon is to be expected before the day of the laſt judgment, becauſe (as they ſay) John did not fulfil all that is here required, in the converſion of the hearts of the fathers and children one to another, or as it is ſummed up by our Saviour in reſtoring all things, Mat. xvii. Not to enquire what other anſwers may be, or are, given to that objection, abundantly ſufficient for confirmation of that expoſition which we have follow'd, as to the ſcope and meaning of them, and to ſhew that they do not afford any good grounds for any ſuch argument, will be the conſideration of two things which would by thoſe who draw that argument here from them, be otherwiſe (I ſuppoſe) eaſily granted. 1. [m] That words which are put to import that ſuch or ſuch a thing ſhould be effected by any, do often ſignify rather his endeavour, and the doing of what would or might be ſufficient for the effecting of them, than a full accompliſhment as to the effect, or conſequents on his endeavour. So that what is ſaid that the perſon here ſpoken of ſhould turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c. and Mat. xvii. 10. that he ſhould reſtore all things, may well be ſaid to be fulfilled, if he did diligently that which tended to the producing, and was ſufficient to have produced, ſuch effects, though through default in the ſubjects on which he was to work, the hearts of all were not turned, nor all things, or men (as [n] Some think it may, though put in the neuter gender, be particularly applied to them) fully rectified and reduced into right order. 2. [o] That the word, all, is not always to be taken in that extent as to comprehend every particular (whether it be applied to perſons, things, times, or places) but only a great number, and to ſhew the diffuſive nature, of that which is ſaid ſhould have reſpect to all, to be ſuch as might be extended to more, even to all that ſhould come in its way, or be offered to it, or were rightly qualified to receive its operation, or required to make good the truth of what is ſpoken of.

[e] Chr. à Caſtro, L. de Dieu, and Dr. Hammond on Luke i. 17. in whoſe Notes, where he refers to this place, ב is ill printed for על. [f] Mat. xvii. 11. and ſee Mark ix. 12. [g] Maimon. Melakim, c. ult. [h] Dr. Hammond on Mat. iii. note c. [i] Grot. [k] Lightfoot.

To omit other examples, which are frequent, one already mentioned, and which is to our preſent purpoſe will make it evident. It is ſaid, Mat. iii. 5. that Jeruſalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan went out to John, and were baptized of him. It will not by any be thought that every perſon in thoſe places did thus, but a great multitude or ſtore of them, and if more had come, or his preaching had prevailed on more, John was ready to perform his office to them. This is thought enough to juſtify the expreſſion, that all the country came unto him, and were baptized of him. Here is not in our Prophet the word all expreſſed, but indefinitely, without any number mentioned, ſaid, ſhall turn the heart of the fathers and the heart of the children; but becauſe where Chriſt ſums up what is here ſaid, or gives the meaning of it, he adds it, viz. and ſhall reſtore all things, it is by them looked on as here underſtood, and the [p] exceptions therefore taken, that by Elias is not here meant John the Baptiſt, becauſe to reſtore all things is to convert to the true faith all Jews and Hereticks, &c. which John did not effect, and therefore Elias in perſon is yet to come, and do it. But if we ſuppoſe that all is to be here underſtood, ſurely that by all were to be meant no more than we have ſaid, i. e. many of all ſorts, all that ſhould hearken to his preaching and receive his Doctrine, we may learn from the angels deſcribing of the ſame office of his that is here deſcribed by this, that many of the children of Iſrael he ſhould turn unto the Lord their God, going before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children. The all and the many do then ſignify the ſame thing in this matter. And theſe things being obſerved, ſurely by what we read of John's performance, it is evident that the words here ſpoken of this Eliah to be ſent, were in, and by him, ſo far (even to wonder) made good, that to expect another to fulfil them in greater meaſure, is not warranted by virtue of this prophecy. He was zealous in the higheſt degree in performing what he was ſent to do, and on very many did his endeavours take effect. That they did not on more, on all among them without exceptions, prevail, was not through any defect or default in him, but becauſe, as the Scripture expreſly declares, concerning many of the Phariſees and Lawyers ([q] many of which yet came in unto him) they rejected the counſel of God againſt themſelves, Luke vii. 30. the like effects which our Saviour, who came to convert them all and to ſave all, complains his own preaching to have had, among that ſame people, through their obſtinacy, ſaying, O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, that killeſt the Prophets, and ſtoneſt them that are ſent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as an hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not, Mat. xxiii. 37. [r] Some are ſo far from thinking that on theſe words can be grounded any argument to prove that the Elias here meant was not John Baptiſt, and that it is one yet to come at the end of the world, before Chriſt's laſt coming, as that they look on them as an argument to prove the clean contrary; becauſe this Elias is to come before the great day of the Lord, and to call to converſion and repentance; for which was a fit ſeaſon at Chriſt's firſt coming: but at the laſt day of his coming, the day of judgment, is no farther time for repentance, but for reward or execution of judgment and puniſhment; therefore that day, not this, muſt here be meant, and this Elias one already come, not one one then to be expected. What we have ſaid will farther be confirmed by conſideration of the next words, in which is declared why he ſhould be ſent to convert them, viz. leſt (ſaith the Lord) I come and ſmite the earth with a curſe.

[l] Bellarm. de Rom. Pontif. lib. 3. c. 6. [m] Grot. on Mat. xvii. 10. Non tam fructus operæ, quam opera ipſa reſpicitur. [n] Hammond on Luke i. note [c]. [o] See him on 1 Cor. note. [p] Bellarm. ut ſupra. [q] Mat. iii. 7. [r] Tarnov. Cameron on Mat. xvii.

As the former words concerning the miſſion, the time and the office, of the perſon here named Eliah the Prophet do (as we have ſeen) exactly agree to John the Baptiſt, and ſo as that they cannot ſo be applied to any other, ſo do theſe alſo which declare the end for which he ſhould be ſent at that time, to perform that office, no leſs agree with thoſe in which in the goſpel we are ſhewed for what end John did perform his, by preaching converſion and repentance, viz. That being converted they might flee from the wrath to come, Mat. iii. 7. and the axe being now laid to the root of the trees, they bringing forth good fruit, might eſcape from being cut down and caſt into the fire, ver. 10. that they might be as wheat, and gathered into the Lord's garner, and not as chaff which he ſhould burn with unquenchable fire, ver. 12. Add how the angel explains it, Luke i. 17. that he ſhould, (and as appears, chap. iii. accordingly did endeavour to do) turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt. For what end? to make ready a people prepared for the Lord, a people fit to receive him, and to find mercy and ſalvation from him at his coming. Who will not at firſt hearing or reading perceive, that thoſe things ſaid concerning the end of his preaching, are the very ſame with what is ſaid here of this perſon's performing the office he is ſent for, viz. that he ſhould do it, to prevent, leſt the Lord ſhould come and ſmite the earth with a curſe, or utter deſtruction. The ſame words which are given, even by ſome of the Jews, for explication of this expreſſion of the Prophet, will as appoſitely be uſed for ſumming up the meaning of thoſe in the goſpel. Such is that expoſition of R. Tanchum, The meaning, ſaith he, is, "He ſhall fairly perſuade them, "that he may reduce any of them who may "poſſibly be reduced; to wit, ſuch who have "not evil habits ſo firmly rooted in their "minds, that they cannot return from them "till the puniſhment which ſhall ſeize on all "the rebellious tranſgreſſors, overtake them." Surely this which he gives for the meaning of what is here ſaid of this perſon here denoted by the title of Eliah, for ſhewing for what end he ſhould perform his office, is manifeſtly the meaning of what is in the goſpel ſaid, concerning the end for which John was ſent to preach repentance, and did preach it, and baptize unto it. Not much different as to the purpoſe, is that meaning which [s] another among them gives of theſe words, viz. "Therefore "he ſhall warn them, that they may be "brought to repentance againſt that day come, "that he may not ſmite the whole land, (or "the land with a conſumption) and it be a "curſe." Thus far, well; and ſo as to ſhew the end which this Eliah was to aim at, to be altogether the ſame that John did aim at, and labour to effect, ſo far as that we cannot but look on him as the perſon here deſigned, and have not reaſon to expect any other for making good, as we have before ſaid, this here ſpoken. What this laſt Rabbin adds, They that will not be warned by his admonition, ſhall be conſumed and periſh in the wilderneſs of the people, or at the day of judgment in the land of Iſrael, doth only ſhew that he knew not well what to ſay as to the curſe, or deſtruction here ſpoken of, when, or how it ſhould be, not willing to underſtand it of that deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Romans, on their rejecting both John's and Chriſt's admonitions, which it is (as we have before ſhewed) evidently meant of. He knows not on what to fix, and ſo ſpeaks at random that which ſignifies nothing, and leaves the Reader in a maze. But if it be applied to that, all will run clear, not ſo if to any other. For againſt that which (as we have ſeen) many concur in, that it ſhould be meant of the day of doom at Chriſt's laſt coming to judge the world, the form of the expreſſion (as is by [t] Some obſerved) affords an evident argument, leſt I come, ſaith the Lord, and ſmite, &c. that ſhews that this judgment might by their repentance and converſion be prevented, which is confirmed by what our Saviour ſaith, Mat. xxiii. 37, 38. and Luke xiii. 34, 35. that therefore their houſe was left unto them deſolate, becauſe they would not be gathered when he would have gathered them, nor be brought to repentance by his call: and that all thoſe evils, and a terrible deſtruction came upon them, becauſe they would not know the things that belonged to their peace, nor the day of their viſitation, when they were told of them both by John and himſelf, Luke xix. 42, 44. But that general judgment is a day that cannot by any means be prevented, but ſhall in God's appointed time certainly come, ſo that leſt I come cannot be applied to that. For certainly he will come, without any peradventure. As for the explication of the word, earth, viz. that by it is here meant the land of Judea, the people ſpoken to, and of, and not the whole earth in general is evident. [u] That it is in that reſtrained ſignification for the land of Iſrael and Judea, peculiarly often uſed both in the Old and New Teſtament, is a thing ſo confeſſed as that there is no need farther to inſiſt on it.

Abarbinel ſeeming to take it more generally thence infers, "That the deſtruction that is "here ſpoken of ſhould be of things generable "and corruptible, ſuch as are on the earth, "not of the heavens and the hoſts thereof, "(or things therein,) ſo as it was at the uni-"verſal deluge, when God deſtroyed [w] every "living ſubſtance: in ſum, all only that was "in this lower world." What he aims at in this inference he doth not farther explain: if he

[s] Kimchi. [t] Rainolds ut ſupra, p. 1201. [u] See Cameron on Mat. xvii. 11. and Hammond on Mat. v. 6. and on Rev. vii. [a], and xii. [f]. [w] Gen. vii. 4, 23.

he would have it that at the end of the world, only the earth and the things that are therein ſhould be deſtroyed, we have to oppoſe againſt him that conſtantly profeſſed truth, that as well the heavens as the earth are reſerved unto fire againſt the day of judgment, as St. Peter ſpeaks, 2 Peter iii. 7. and ſhall be diſſolved therewith; but otherwiſe, if there be weight in his way of argument, it will make for our purpoſe, viz. that the day here ſpoken of is not that day of the laſt judgment, becauſe it is a day of ſuch deſtruction as was to be executed on earth only, and therefore in this world, viz. (as we have all along ſaid) the deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

By the earth, or land, will eaſily be underſtood by a moſt uſual notion, Ahlol ardi, the people of the earth, or inhabitants of the land, (as an Arabick Tranſlation done by a Jew hath it) together with the land it ſelf. [x] They that expound it "earthly minded men, ſuch as fol- "low earthly things, and will not make uſe "of the time of grace, and embrace God's "ſalvation offered to them, ſay what is true, "but ſeem not to give the full latitude of the "word." Such of the people only were deſtroyed, and thoſe that turned to God were ſaved, yet for the ſake of the many obſtinate rebels, was the land together deſtroyed and made deſolate. As for the laſt word חרם Cherem, which is rendred a curſe, it may be likewiſe (as it is by [y] Several) rendred, deſtruction or utter deſtruction. So R. Tanchum ſaith, he means an univerſal deſtruction according to the ſenſe of the verb in that place, Numb. xxi. 2. והחרמתי vehecharamti, then I will utterly deſtroy their cities, and ſo do our Tranſlators in Zacch. xiv. 11. render the ſame word that they render here a curſe, by utter deſtruction; and the ſame verb that [z] Numb. xxi. 2. they render I will utterly deſtroy, do they render, Micah iv. 13. I will conſecrate, and Levit. xxvii. 28, 29. the noun, the ſame that is here uſed, is rendred a devoted thing, and Deut. vii. 26. a curſed thing. So that looking into the Scriptures we ſhall find the root of this word to have theſe ſignifications, of cutting off, or deſtroying, and curſing, and conſecrating, (to omit another notion in which it ſignifieth a net.) The prime [a] ſignification ſeems to be that of cutting off, or deſtroying, which appears in the other two; in that of curſing, which is a devoting to deſtruction, manifeſtly; and not obſcurely in that other of devoting or conſecrating, inaſmuch as that is a [b] cutting off (as it were) and taking out of the way from common uſe that which is ſo devoted. In this place it is manifeſt that they that render it curſe, mean the ſame with thoſe that render it deſtruction; not ſuch a lighter curſe for correction as is ſpoken of, chap. iii. 9. but a curſe ending in a final exciſion and utter deſtruction. For what is here meant by what is threatned, the event and manner in which it was fulfilled on them to whom it was ſpoken, makes evident; the generality of the Jews having rejected the admonitions of John Baptiſt, who was ſent to warn them to flee from the wrath to come, by embracing Chriſt and his Doctrine, whom they not only refuſed, but procured to be crucified, and pulled on themſelves a curſe by ſaying his blood be on us and on our children, God, ſeconded it with his curſe and ſent on them that curſe which ended in that fearful deſtruction of them, and their land, from which they could never recover, and which makes undeniably manifeſt to all the world that this prophecy had its full accompliſhment in them, and in vain do they ſeek to elude it.

Thus here ends this prophecy, in the Hebrew Bibles and all that follow them; but in many copies of the Greek, the verſes are ſo tranſplaced as that the fourth verſe being taken out of its place is put after this, viz. Remember the law of Moſes, &c. and ſo made to conclude the prophecy; on what occaſion, or for what reaſon I know not. [c] One ſaith it was done in imitation of the ſuperſtition of the Jews, and to conclude the whole πρὸς δ'φημισμὸν that all might end in good words, or words of a good ſound. The ſuperſtition of the Jews, which he mentions, is this, that whereas the laſt words here, and ſmite the earth with a curſe ſound harſh in their ears, and ſeem to bode evil; that they might conclude with ſomething more pleaſing, they repeat the words going before, again after them, viz. Behold I will ſend you Eliah the Prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, and he ſhall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers; or at leaſt ſome of them, ſo as ſtill to leave out the laſt harſh words, which conclude with a curſe. The like do they do in ſome other books for the ſame reaſon, as at the end of Iſaiah, and of Eccleſiaſtes, and the Lamentations, in which after the laſt verſe, they repeat again the verſe going before it. And for warning thereof, caſting the initial letters of the names of theſe books, viz. יתקק I, T, K, K, into an artificial word, ſo as to be a ſignal or memorial of them, I ſtanding for Iſaiah, T, for תריעשר Tereaſher, i. e. the twelve minor Prophets, of which Malachi is the laſt: and the firſt K for Kinoth, i. e. Lamentations, the ſecond for Koheleth, i. e. Eccleſiaſtes, they uſually write or print that ſignal together, with the words which they would have to be repeated, all or ſome of them. How ancient this cuſtom was among them I know not: it ſavours of the humour of thoſe of ancient times among them, who ſaid to God's Prophets, Propheſy not unto us right things, ſpeak unto us ſmooth things, Iſaiah xxx. 10. They ſeem to think that the putting away from them the mention of [d] the evil day, that they might go on in their ſins in ſecurity, ſhould ſecure them from it, ſo inverting and fruſtrating to themſelves God's gracious method, who, that they might not periſh in their ſecurity, cauſed thoſe words in the laſt place to be inculcated to them, that ſo they might ſink deep into them, and work in them repentance, whereby alone the evil mentioned might be prevented, whereas their refuſing to give that attention to them would pull it on them to their unavoidable deſtruction, as in the example of theſe here ſpoken to, it manifeſtly came to paſs ſo as to be for caution to all in like kind.

[x] See Jerom. Menoch. and Tarnov. [y] See Chald. Syriack, Arab. MS. Tig. Caſtal. &c. [z] See ver. 3. [a] See Druſ. and of the uſe of this word ſee Selden de Synedr. l. 1. c. 7. p. 121, &c. [b] R. Tanchum in lib. Morſhed. [c] Notes on the Greek Bible, Edit. Francf. 1597. [d] Amos vi. 3.

As for the preſent place, [e] Some are of opinion that the Jews do here repeat thoſe words, Behold I ſend you Eliah, &c. to ſtrengthen themſelves in their opinion and hope, that the Meſſiah is not yet come, but is to come. If ſo, or out of what reſpect ſoever they do it, we have from the Meſſiah himſelf, what to oppoſe to them, and add to what they would conclude with, viz. [f] But I ſay unto you Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but did unto him whatſoever they liſted. The Meſſiah alſo is already come, and they would not know him neither, but rejected him, and deſpitefully uſed him: for which their obſtinacy, that great and terrible day of the Lord is alſo come upon them, and he hath ſmitten the earth, i. e. them and their land with ſuch a curſe, ſo terrible a deſtruction, as makes good all that is here ſpoken, and ſhews that not one word of this prophecy is fallen to the ground, but hath had its full accompliſhment on them; ſo that now they remain an enſample to all others that ſhall deſpiſe or neglect the means of grace offered to them, as they did, and putting far away the evil day, will not, while God gives them ſpace, [g] know the things which belong unto their peace, nor think of the time of their viſitation. For how ſhall any that reject the counſel of God againſt themſelves, as they did, (any people or nation) but expect to be ſmitten with the like curſe as they were, even in this world; how ſhall the juſt God, which ſpared not that his choſen nation, his once peculiar people, the ſeed of Abraham his friend, ſpare others guilty in the like kind? ſo that though theſe words were fulfilled in that deſtruction of Jeruſalem and the Jewiſh nation, the people then peculiarly ſpoken to and intended, yet may all others ſee in them, what may concern them alſo, even in this world. But if it ſhould ſo pleaſe God, that any obſtinately wicked, and impenitent people ſhould eſcape the like judgment in this world, yet beſides that prime and literal meaning of the words, already (as we ſaid) fulfilled, on them, we cannot but by them be put in mind of that more great and terrible day of the Lord, and look on it as by this typified; the judgment of which, none either whole nations, or particular perſons that ever lived ſhall eſcape, and which ſhall unawares ſeize not on any one land only, but on the whole earth and all therein, yea and the heavens too, with greater terror than that by which this concerning the Jews, is here, ver. 1. or elſewhere, deſcribed, or can by any words be expreſſed. Wherefore ſeeing what God hath done, and being thereby warned, and by his word certainly aſſured what he will do, what manner of perſons ought we to be in all holy converſation and godlineſs? (as [h] St. Peter will teach us to infer) looking for and haſtning unto the coming of the day of God.

All thoſe admonitions to the Jews, and all God's methods toward them for preparing them for that day of his coming here mentioned, equally concern us in reſpect of that other day of his coming by it typified, and it will be neceſſary for us to apply them to our own concerns, and to make uſe of them to our ſelves, without expecting of another Elias, to be ſent to forewarn and convert us. We have not promiſe of any, and it would be to no purpoſe to have any. We have [i] Moſes and the Prophets, we have the admonitions of John Baptiſt and Chriſt himſelf, and the example of the miſcarriage of the Jews for not hearkning to them; and if we will not hear, and be warned by theſe, neither will we be perſuaded if Elias or John Baptiſt ſhould riſe from the dead, or Chriſt ſhould come again in the fleſh among us to convert us. Sufficient to us to make us to prepare our ſelves for what we are certainly to expect, or leave us without excuſe, are thoſe admonitions of his, extending to all generations, Watch therefore, for you know not what hour your Lord doth come, Mat. xxiv. 42. and again, ver. 44. Therefore be ye alſo ready, for in ſuch an hour as you think not the Son of Man cometh. There is no generation which can aſſure themſelves but that in it may be made good, as to that other day, what our Saviour ſaith to the Jews concerning the day of their viſitation, Verily I ſay unto you, this generation ſhall not paſs, till all theſe things be fulfilled, Mat. xxiv. 34. The Lord is not ſlack concerning his promiſe, as ſome men count ſlackneſs, but is long ſuffering to us ward, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to repentance, 2 Peter iii. 9.

[e] Rainold de lib. Apocryph. prælect. 95. pag. 1163. [f] Mat. xvii. 12. [g] Luke xix. 42, 44. [h] Luke xvi. 31. [i] 2 Peter iii. 11, 12.

SOLI DEO GLORIA.

An

An APPENDIX.

Whereas we have by the Jews, in their Commentaries both on this and other Prophets, often mention made of a Meſſiah, the Son of Joſeph, of the Tribe of Ephraim, whoſe name they make uſe for eluding many Prophecies which belong to the true and only Meſſiah, Chriſt: and we have therefore occaſion to vindicate ſuch places from their falſe expoſitions, I thought it might not be unfit to add this ſhort diſcourſe, on occaſion made concerning that matter, wherein I have endeavoured to diſcover the grounds of that fond opinion, and collect ſuch things as are by them ſaid of it, becauſe they are not ſo commonly found put together. I thought beſt to print it in Latin, as it was at firſt penned, ſeeing as much as may concern ſuch as underſtand not that language, to know for the preſent purpoſe, is in ſuch places of the Commentary as there is occaſion to make mention of it, ſaid in Engliſh.

MAL. iii. 1.

Ecce ego mitto Angelum meum, & præparabit viam meam, & ſtatim veniet ad Templum ſuum Dominus, quem vos quæritis, & Angelus fœderis, quem vos vultis, ecce venit, dicit Dominus Exercituum.

NON eſt mihi impræſentiarum animus ſingulas hujus commatis voces ad Grammaticorum Canones exigere, ſed nec genuinum verborum ſenſum pluribus confirmatum vel illuſtratum dare, de quo dubitare nos non ſinit divina Evangelii veritas; quæ hic dicta in Johanne Baptiſta Chriſti Anteambulone, & in Chriſto novi fœderis Angelo completa atque eventu comprobata eſſe oſtendit. Dicendorum materiam ſuppeditabit unum magni apud ſuos nominis Doctoris R. Aben Ezræ gloſſema, quo prima ſtatim verba corrumpit, Ecce ego mitto Angelum meum יתכן להיותו משיח בן יוסף, convenit (inquit) ut ſit [Angelus iſte] Meſſiah Ben Joſeph. quod licet abſurdum plane atque à Scripturæ veritate, & ratione maxime alienum ſit, paulo attentius conſiderandum & ad examen revocandum duximus, ne falſo ipſius aliorumque ejuſdem farinæ commento non hoc ſolum ſed & alia Prophetarum oracula corrumpi atque eludi, adeoque ea, quibus veritas propugnari debuerat, arma nobis eripi, atque in hoſtium contra pugnantium manus tradi, neſcii atque incauti patiamur. Notiſſimum enim eſt apud Rabbinos in ſuis ad libros Propheticos Commentariis aliiſque ipſorum ſcriptis frequenter Meſſiæ Ben Joſeph vel Ephraim (è Tribu ſcilicet Ephraim Joſephi Patriarchæ filii oriundi) mentionem occurrere; idque eo potiſſimum fine ut quæ de vero, eoque uno, Meſſia Ben David Chriſto Domino noſtro intelligenda ſunt, ſi fieri poſſit, alio detorquentes nondum ea completa eſſe, adeoque ipſum adhuc expectandum probent. Quorum ſententiam dum explodimus, ut merito id à nobis fieri conſtet, neceſſe eſt, ut quem per Ephraimitam iſtum Joſephi filium indigitant, atque unde, quæ de eo narrant, deſumſerint, prius inquiramus; ne de re nobis ignota ſtatuentes, temere, & ſine juſta ratione, parte ſcilicet inauditâ altera, haud æquum ſtatuere videamur. At in hiſtoria ejus pertexenda, quo tandem duce utemur? Neminem ſane reperimus, cujus autoritas tanti apud nos eſſe debeat, ut ea permoti rem pro certa imo vel probabili habeamus; Ejuſmodi enim eſt, quæ ut non luculento aliquo ſacræ Scripturæ textu, in quo Meſſiæ iſtius mentio fit, ita nec vel Paraphraſeωn antiquiroum (Onkeli puta vel veri Jonathanis) vel ipſius Textus Talmudici, quem Miſnaioth vocant, autoritate commendetur; adeo ut primo loco novitatis ſuſpicione laboret, nec dubitari poſſit, quin diu poſt Chriſtum in carne manifeſtum & completa de eo vaticinia, malitiâ eorum, qui neque quem amplecti noluerunt, ſine omni vel ratione vel autoritate adhuc expectare viderentur, quo haberent, quod pervicaciæ ſuæ obtenderent, excogitata, & quaſi à Patribus accepta poſteris obtruſa fuerit. Antiquiſſima, ni fallor, quæ ei confirmandæ adducunt, teſtimonia è Paraphraſi in Exodum xl. 11. Jonathani falſo aſcripta, & Paraphraſi in Cantica & unico Talmudis tractatu Succah depromuntur. In ea ad Exodum mentio ſit משיחא בר אפרים Meſſiæ filii Ephraim, cujus ope Iſraelitæ vincent Gogum, & turmas ejus in fine dierum. Cant. cap. iv. 5. verba illa, שני שדיך כשני עפרים & duo ubera tua ſicut duo hinnuli gemelli capreæ, ſic enarrat Paraphraſtes תרין פריקיך דעתידין למפריקיך משיח בר דויד ומשיח בר אפרים דמין למשה ואהרון, quæ etiam, cap. vii. 3. repetita) duo liberatores tui, qui liberaturi ſunt te, Meſſias filius David, & Meſſias filius Ephraim, ſimiles Moſi & Aharoni. Sed Paraphraſes iſtas, ſc. Jonathani in legem falſo tributam, & alteram in Cant. incerti authoris & incertæ ætatis, commentis ſcatere Rabbinicis obſervatum eſt à Doctis; nec ejus ſunt autoritatis, ut vel ipſos Judæos in ſententiam ſuam trahant; ideoque nec R. Solomon, nec Aben Ezra in locis illis explicandis eam amplectuntur, quorum ille verba, cap. iv. de Moſe & Aharone vel de שני לוחות binis legis Tabulis, vel (ut cap. vii.) de Rege & Sacerdote ſummo; hic de duplici lege, ſcripta & ore tradita, accipit, nullâ Meſſiæ filii Ephraim ſeu Joſephi factâ mentione: [quamvis Aben Ezra, cap. vii. צוארך collum tuum ſicut turris eboris, quod ſtatim ſequitur de המלך המשיח Rege Meſſia, ſc. Davidis filio exponat.] In Talmude Tract. Succah c. Hachalil dicto, verba Zachariæ è c. xii. 10. והביטו אלי את אשר דקרו & aſpicient ad me quem transfixerunt, & plangent ſuper eum veluti planctum ſuper unigentum; Doctorum aliqui, (alii enim aliter) de Meſſia Joſephi filio שנהרג qui in bello occidet, intelligi volunt. Eodem poſtea capite hæc habentur, Tradunt Doctores noſtri, Dixit Deus benedictus Meſſiæ filio David, Fili mi pete quid velis, & ego tibi dabo; ſecundum quod dictum eſt, Enarrabo decretum, Dominus dixit ad me filius meus tu, &c. Pete à me & dabo gentes hæreditatem tuam & poſſeſſionem tuam fines terræ. Ille cum videret Meſſiam filium Joſeph occiſum eſſe, dixit coram eo, Domine Mundi, non peto à te niſi vitam. Dicit ei Sanctus Benedictus, Antequam eſſes jam vaticinatus eſt de te David pater tuus, Vitam petiit à te, dediſti illi. Ac rurſus Zach. i. 20. & oſtendit mihi ארבעה חרשים quatuor fabros, explicans. Quinam ſunt inquit quatuor fabri iſti? Dixit Rabbi חנה בר ביזנא dixit R. Simeon Sanctus, iſti ſunt Meſſiah filius David, & Meſſiah filius Joſeph, & Eliah, & כהן צדק Sacerdos juſtitiæ.

Neſcio an alias in Talmude Meſſiæ hujus mentio occurrat. In his, quæ inde exerpſimus, quædam dam habemus fabulæ iſtius veſtigia, ſed adeo obſcura, ut queratur R. David Kimchi, Doctores illos haud apertius ea de re egiſſe. Sic enim ad Zach. xii. 10. Doctores noſtri, inquit, hæc interpretati ſunt, de Meſſiah filio Joſephi, qui in bello occidendus וחמה אני לפי פירושם איך סתמו ולא זכרו כלל, i. e. Miror autem ego interpretationem eorum, quod rem obſcure tradiderint, nec totam explicaverint. Ut ut egerint, hinc ipſos traditionem hauſiſſe haud altius derivatam liquet, tum è R. Solomone ad verba iſta, & prædictum è capite primo locum, ubi tractatum iſtum Talmudicum, non traditionem aliquam antiquiorem citat. Ex lutulento igitur hoc rivo ad poſteriores Rabbinos fluxiſſe videtur quicquid de Ephraimi ſeu Joſephi filio iſto nugantur, cujus ſparſim in ipſorum commentariis fit mentio, dum fabricæ haud altius fundatæ facileque ruituræ fulcimenta minime ſibi conſtantia hinc inde quærunt. Interim cum nihil hac de re clari vel certi, ne ab ipſis quidem Doctoribus Talmudicis (nedum antiquioribus) acceperint, ipſi in cerebri ſui officina fabulam male concinnatam cudere, & fragmentis undique conquiſitis conſarcinare coguntur; quam tamen ſi integram audire cupias haud adeo facile in ipſorum ſcriptis reperies. Author quidem libri Abkath Rocel, eum aliquatenus depingit, lib. 1. part. 1. Signis 6° 7° 8° & 9°, aſſerens, tempore Regis cujuſdam Romani, qui novem menſibus univerſo orbi imperabit, atque Iſraelitas graviter affliget, revelatum iri Meſſiam filium Joſephi, cui nomen Nehemias filius Huſiel, cum Tribu Ephraim, Manaſſe, Benjamin, & parte filiorum Gad, aliiſque paucis, qui ex omnibus provinciis & urbibus ad ipſum congregabuntur, regemque illum ſuperaturum, ipſumque interfecturum: deinde vero ſurrecturum regem alium nomine Armillum, quem Gentes, inquit, Antichriſtum vocant, monſtrum hominis, quale nunquam finxerunt nobis poetæ, ut pote, ſtatua marmorea fœdis libidinibus contaminata prognatum, cui altitudo duodecim cubitorum latitudo totidem; contra quem etiam arma movebit Nehemias iſte filius Huſiel ſive Meſſias Ben Joſeph, ſed in prælio occidet; poſtea Meſſiam filium David cum Elia venturum, qui Armillum iſtum è medio tollet, & Meſſiam Ben Joſeph è mortuis ſuſcitabit, ac tum omnium gentium Reges totius orbis Iſraelitas humeris ſuis impoſitos ad Deum deducturos. Similia fere habet alter ille, quiſquis tandem ſit, cujus verba Munſterus ad finem notarum ſuarum in Malachiam refert de Nehemia iſto, quem Meſſiam Joſephi filium appellant. Sed & hi, ut & quos diximus, apud ipſos, Scripturæ interpretes, aliique eorum Scriptores plerique, ita rem narrant, ut quæ dicunt pro conceſſis haberi velint. Nihil probare ſatagunt. Nemo omnium, quos videre mihi contigit, id facere conatus eſt, præter R. Saadiam Haggaon libro Emanoth, cap. viii. nemo rem plenius quam ipſe enarrat. Eam itaque, ſi operæ pretium videbitur, fuſius & qua potuit arte adornatam ipſius verbis accipite. Novimus, inquit, niſi perfecta fuerit pœnitentia noſtra, expectaturos nos donec completum fuerit tempus captivitati noſtræ à Deo præſtitutum: cujus ſi advenerit finis antequam pœnitentiam egerimus, fieri non poteſt ut contingat liberatio nobis peccare non ceſſantibus. Siquidem in captivitatem nos egit propter peccata: cumque diu jam extorres fuerimus, nec pœnitentiam egerimus, nos nondum idoneos factos reducet? fruſtra hoc eſſet. Verum Majores noſtri tradiderunt eventuras nobis afflictiones multas & graves, quibus ad pœnitentiam adacti digni evadamus, qui redimamur. Hoc eſt quod dixerunt, Si pœnitentiam egerint Iſraelitæ, redimentur; ſin minus, conſtituet Deus ſuper ipſos Regem, cujus decreta non minus gravia erunt, quam Hamanis, quo fiet, ut reſipiſcentes liberentur. Cujus rei cauſam futuram dicunt, quod in monte Galilææ ſurrecturus ſit è Tribu Joſeph quidam, qui confluentibus ad ipſum è popularibus noſtris paucis quibuſdam Hieroſolymam, poſtquam in poteſtate Edom (id eſt Chriſtianorum) fuerit, profectus, ibi ad tempus cum ipſis ſubſiſtet; poſt quod adveniens Rex Nomine Armillus bellum ipſis inferet captaque urbe alios neci dabit, alios captivos abducet, maleque mulctabit: Eritque ille, quem diximus, Joſephi tribu oriundus è numero occiſorum. Hinc magnis opprimetur gens noſtra calamitatibus, inter quas non alia gravior futura, quam quod male ſe habituræ ſint res eorum apud omnes ubique populos, dum fœtidi ipſis reddentur, adeo ut in deſerta ipſos ejecturi ſint, ubi fame & ſiti cruciabuntur. Ac præ gravitate, quæ paſſuræ ſunt, malorum fiet, ut multi à lege deſciſcant; erunt autem reliqui ſordibus purgati ac mundati, quibus tum manifeſtabitur Elias, venietque liberatio. Hæc, inquit, cum de calamitatibus iſtis dicta audirem, animum Scripturæ adverti, atque in ea textum aliquem quo ſingula confirmarentur reperi. Ac primo, quod tempore redemptionis Hieroſolyma in poteſtate Edom ſeu Idumæorum (Romanos ſeu Chriſtianos hoc Nomine indigitant, quo quæ ipſis viſum fuerit vaticinia de iſtis interpretentur) futura ſit, inde probatur quod dictum ſit Obad 12. & aſcendent ſervatores in montem Sion ad judicandum montem Eſau: deinde quod bellum cum iis geſturus ſit quidam è poſteris Rachel (tribu ſcilicet Ephraim Joſephi, ac proinde Rachelis, filii) è Jeremiæ xlix. 20. propterea audite conſilium Domini quod conſultavit ſuper Edom, & cogitationes ejus quas cogitavit ſuper habitationes Temam, ſi non traxerint eos צעירי הצאן Parvuli pecoris. Et quod pauci futuri ſint qui ad ipſum confluent, non admodum multi, ex eo quod dictum eſt Jer. iii. 14. Et aſſumam eos unum de civitate & duos de familia. Quodque qui contra illos aſcendet ipſos capturus ſit & captivos abducturus atque interfecturus, è Zach. xiv. 1. Ecce dies venit Domino & dividetur ſpolium tuum in medio tui, & congregabo omnes gentes ad Jeruſalem in prælium, & capietur civitas & diripientur domus. Quodque ille (Joſephi filius ſcil.) qui regnum occupabit futurus ſit è numero cæſorum, ipſumque defleturi ſint, è Zach xii. 10. ודביטו אליו & aſpicient ad illum (ſic enim pro אלי legit אליו, pro me, illum) quem transfixerunt, & plangent ſuper eum veluti planctum ſuper unigenitum, &c. quodque afflictio gravis futura ſit tunc temporis genti (Judaicæ) è Dan. xii. 1. & erit tempus anguſtiæ cujuſmodi non eſt factum ex eo tempore quo fuit gens uſque ad diem hunc. Quodque odium magnum futurum ſit inter ipſos & multos è gentibus, adeo ut ipos in deſerta pellant ex Ezek. xx. 35. Et adducam vos ad deſertum populorum & ibi vobiſcum judicio contendam: quodque famem & ſitim & anguſtiam paſſuri

ſint

ſint, quemadmodum paſſi ſunt patres eorum, ex ejuſdem cap. v. 36. & judicio contendam vobiſcum ibi facie ad faciem, ſicut judicio contendi cum patribus veſtris: quodque futurum ſit ut ibi expurgentur & explorentur, [a] prout ferre poterunt, & ſecundum firmitatem fidei ipſorum è ver. 37. & tranſire faciam vos ſub virga, & adducam vos in vinculo fœderis: quodque hæc in cauſa futura ſint illis, quorum fides infirma eſt, ut à religione ſua deſciſcant dicantque [b] Hic eſt in quo ſperabamus, atque hoc eſt quod ab eo nobis contigit è ver. 38. & repurgabo è vobis rebelles & prævatricantes in me: quodque illis qui ſupererunt manifeſtandus ſit Elias, & corda eorum converſurus, è Malac. iv. 5. Ecce ego mitto vobis Eliam Prophetam, antequam veniat dies Domini magnus & terribilis, & convertet cor patrum ſuper filios. En (inquit) ענני הדברים האלה verborum iſtorum ſenſus in ſcriptura perſpicuè traditos. Hoc autem addiderunt priores ſeu majores noſtri, quod ſingula in ordinem digeſſerint prout ſcripta ſunt. Celebretur autem qui magnam in nos miſericordiam exercuit, dum calamitatum iſtarum nos præmonitos eſſe voluerit, ne nos improviſo invadentes ad deſperationem adigerent: de quibus eventuris rurſus dicit Iſaiah xxiv. 16. ab extremo terræ cantus audivimus, &c. uſque ad finem capitis. His præmiſſis dico (inquit) ob duas ſimul rationes, viz. vel, ſi non convertamur pœnitentia, adeo ut contingant accidentia filii Joſeph, vel ſi convertamur & non evenerint; ſubito nobis appariturum Meſſiam Ben David. Quod ſi ante ipſum venerit (ille Joſephi filius) erit ipſi inſtar nuncii & qui idoneam reddat gentem (ei recipiendo) viamque ipſi paret (quemadmodum dixit Malac. iii. 1.) Ecce ego mitto angelum meum & præparabit viam ante me: & ut qui explorat igne, illis qui gravia commiſerint peccata, & ut qui abluit ſordes ſmegmate, illis qui leviorum rei fuerint, ſicut poſtea dicit ver. 2. & quis ſuſtineat diem adventus ipſius & quis poterit ſtare cum apparuerit? Nam ipſe eſt tanquam ignis conflantis, & tanquam ſmegma fullonum. Quod ſi non venerit, tum veniet Ben David cito, ſicut dixit, ver. 1. Et ſtatim veniet ad Templum ſuum Dominus quem vos quæritis, adducetque ſecum populum Hieroſolymam uſque; & ſi fuerit ea in poteſtate Armilli, ipſo interfecto, eam capiet, & hoc eſt quod dixit Ezek. xxv. 14. Et dabo ultionem meam in Edom per manum populi mei Iſrael; vel ſi in alterius cujuſdam poteſtate fuerit; erit etiam ipſe ex Edom, & quoniam non venit filius Joſeph, ideo conſecuturi ſunt à filio David, quod cor ipſorum ſtabiliat, & fracturam ſanet, & animos erigat, ſicut Iſaiah lxi. 1. dixit, Spiritus Domini Dei ſuper me, ea propter unxit Dominus me ad Evangelizandum manſuetis, miſit me ad ligandum contritos corde, ad prædicandum captivis libertatem, &c. ad prædicandum annum beneplaciti Domini.

En vobis Meſſiæ Joſephi filii à Judæis toties prædicati (dum veniſſe eum, qui à Patribus expectatus fuerat, pertinaciter ſibi negandum ſtatuunt) hiſtoriam, dicam, an fabulam Prophetice deſcriptam? i. e. corraſis undique Prophetarum verbis contextam, quam qui veram crediderit, vel eventu comprobatum aliquando iri ſperaverit; eadem facilitate, Quicquid inane Nutrit, Judaicis quæ pingitur India velis, fide dignum cenſeat. Gratulatur Haggaon majoribus ſuis qui hæc ordine tam concinno diſponere potuerunt; ſibi potius gratulari debuit, qui quicquid vel ab illis, vel à ſe, fictum fuerat, teſtimoniis tam luculentis è Scriptura petitis, probatum dare potuerit. Quis unquam Prophetarum verba tam miſere torſit, vel tam impudenter proſtituit? Quid tandem tam abſurdum, tam à ratione alienum excogitari poteſt, quod non pari ratione è diſertis Scripturæ verbis authoritatem ſibi conciliet? Haud difficile foret, pleraque ab eo allegata, aliter tam ab antiquis quam à recentioribus etiam Rabbinis intellecta probare, nec ad Meſſiæ Ben Joſeph, vel ex eorum ſententia, rem facere. Singulis ne immorer, quæ vel recenſuiſſe, abunde refutaſſe eſt, illud, quo uno è poſteris Joſephi futurum aliquem, qui ſe ducem Iſraelitis adverſus hoſtes ſuos præbeat, quique ab illis pro Rege habeatur, probare nititur, Jer. ſcil. xlix. 20. ubi à parvulis pecoris trahendi dicuntur (non alio puto nixum fundamento, quam alluſione ad nomen רחל quod ovem denotat) quam futile? quam non modo aliorum apud ipſos Doctorum Interpretationibus, ſed & inconcuſſis fidei Judaicæ fundamentis plane contrariam? Hoc enim, teſte [c] Maimonide, inter fidei eorum articulos de quibus dubitare nefas eſt, locum habet, אין לא מלך לישראל אלא מן דוד ומן נסל שלמה כאצרה, Non futurum Iſraeli Regem niſi Davide oriundum, eumque è progenie Solomonis. Poſito hoc fundamento, quis Regi è Joſephi poſteris locus? Corruit quicquid de Meſſia iſto nugantur. Cautè ergo hic agit Abarbinel, atque ideo in bello occiſum iri ait Rege miſtum Meſſiam Ben Joſeph, quod imperium ſibi vendicaverit, cum è Tribu Ephraim, non Judæ, ad quam jure id pertinebat, fuerit: adeo ut erroris ſui moniti Judæi, cum illum in quo ſpes ſuas collocaverant periiſſe viderint, exclamaturi ſint, Annon quod regnum familiæ Davidicæ deſeruimus, hæc nobis mala contigerunt, occiditque Meſſias iſte? & ad Dominum Deum ſuum & Davidem Regem ſuum ſe converſuri. At Meſſiam interim iſtum Ephraemitam virum pium, Domini timentem, eique carum futurum, quique nec ob peccatum ſuum neci dabitur, nec ob peccata eorum qui ipſi adhæſerint, cum nec ipſi impii aut peccatores futuri ſint, ſed pii, ſi qui alii, ac ſancti: adeo ut ipſius cædem in omnes gentes ulturus ſit Deus, (ipſique hanc repoſiturus mercedem (teſte R. Saadia capite jam laudato) ut primus ad ſeculi futuri gaudia reſurgat.) At quam ſunt hæc ἀσύσατα & à ratione prorſus aliena, ut morte mulctetur vir tam Sanctus, tam Deo carus, unaque pereat virorum, qui אלהים ſanctitate Angelis pares, multitudo, quod illud fecerint, quod ante tot ſecula Deus per Prophetas ſuos futurum prædixerat, quodque ut exitum ſortiretur, ille mittendus erat, ut dictum, Ecce ego mitto, &c. vel illum, vel illos ita comparati cum eſſent, illud facturos quod legi contrarium Deoque ingratum eſſet? unumque ac idem facinus ſceleri imputatum, ac mox vita æterna remuneratum iri? Nec minus mirandum, quod Haggaon poſtquam quam tot vaticiniis prænunciatum Meſſiam iſtum oſtendere conatus fuerit, rem in dubio tandem relinquat, venturus unquam ſit necne; ſi enim Judæi pœnitentiam egerint, non venturum. Quo ergo tot illuſtres Prophetiæ? omniumne eventus à Judæorum arbitrio pendet; ſi illi pœnitentiam egerint, fruſtrà erit quod hic Malachiæ præconio publicatum, Eccè ego mitto nuncium meum, qui præparet viam antè faciem meam; fruſtra illud Zachariæ oraculum, Et aſpicient ad me quem transfixerunt, & plangent ſuper eum veluti planctum ſuper unigenitum, &c. qui certè locus è præcipuis qui ipſos ad commentum hoc de Meſſia iſto Ben Joſeph excogitandum impulit, videri poſſit. Nam cum in eo de Meſſia agi negare non poſſint, eoque transfigendo ac mala paſſuro, qualia Meſſiæ Davidis filio, cui omnia in hoc etiam ſeculo proſpera auſpicantur, pati turpe & inglorium putant, alium ſibi finxerunt, cui & Meſſiæ titulum & dignitatem Regiam tribuerent, licet è tribu faſtigii iſtius non capaci, quo Chriſtianorum argumenta contra ipſos vaticinio illo pugnantium, Chriſtumque per adverſa & mortem ad regnum idque ſpirituale, non terrenum pervenire debuiſſe probantium, eludant. Ac מי יתן Quis concedat ut loco iſto pro אלי Elai, ad me, ſubſtituere liceret אליו Elau, ad eum, & aſpicient ad eum quem transfixerunt. Quam illud percupiant, ex eo patet, quod tam in Talmude, quam R. Saadia ita citentur verba. Hoc enim pacto nec idem eſſet transfixus iſte, cum eo qui initio verſus ſe ſuper habitatores Jeruſalem ſpiritum gratiæ & deprecationum effuſurum dicit. (Ac proinde ipſe Deus; cum hæc ſolius Dei ſit, præſtare) ipſiſque injuriæ illi factæ ſcelus à ſe ad alios amolirentur. At cum hoc non liceat, fruſtra eſt quicquid moliuntur ne argumento hoc premi videantur, & ſolutionem ſuam habet בצדו Betziddo (ut vel ipſius Lipmanni verba contra ipſos, ac ſuos populares retorqueamus) à latere ſibi conjunctam. Neque enim patiuntur Grammaticæ leges, ut aliter exponamus verba quam aſpicient ad me quem transfixerunt, ut non ad illum quem, ita nec ad me, propter eos quos transfixerunt, ut David Kimchi ipſeque Lipmanus.

[a] Arab. ſicut argentum & aurum, ut dignoſcatur quomodo ſe habeat patientia, & quomodo fides ipſorum. [b] Arabo huc non expectabamus. [c] Ad. Sanhed. c. 10. fund. 12.

Sed ut eo unde digreſſi ſumus revertamur. Quam male interim (ſi in eorum poteſtate ſitum ſit) de ſe & Meſſia iſto ſuo merentur Judæi, quod mala ſibi ipſius adventu impendentia, maturata pœnitentia prævertere nolint, cum (ex Haggaonis ſententia) ſi reſipuerint, nec venturus ſit ille, nec ipſi gravia iſta paſſuri? ſi (quod ſentiunt nonnulli, & probare conati ſunt Raimundus & Galatinus, è libris paucis, ſicubi extant, Chriſtianorum viſis, (quique an omnino extent dubitari poſſit) non alium Meſſiam, quem dixerunt Joſephi filium, ab illo Davidis voluerint antiquiores Judæi, non alia de cauſa illi nomen hoc ab ipſis inditum putaverim, quam quo παθητόν deſcriberent, quique Joſephi Jacobo filii inſtar male multandus eſſet, graviaque paſſurus. Niſi forſan qui primum hanc fabulam confixerunt, anſam arripuerint à nomine Joſephi Mariæ ſponſi, Meſſiam, Joſephi filium comminiſcendi, quod multo probabilius, quam quod ait Abarbinel Chriſti diſcipulos, multa de Meſſia Joſephi filio à Patribus accepta, dogmatis ſuis immiſcuiſſe. Sed revera non hoc inter τὰ ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχαίων dicta, nec vel inter antiquiores traditiones numerandum cenſeo, ſed magis nuperum ſequioris ævi commentum, multis poſt Chriſtum ea paſſum annis, effictum, ob eas quas ſuperius innui rationes, quodque nunquam univerſalis apud ipſos traditionis nomen meruit. Huic adſtipulatur etiam Maimonidis authoritas, qui de præcurſore Meſſiæ verba faciens, quem Sapientum nonnullos Eliam fore, ſtatuere ait, addit וכל אלו הדברים וכיוצא בהם לא ירע אדם איך יהיו עד שיהיו hæc & quæ eo ſpectant omnia nemo diſtincte noverit antequam exitum habuerint: obſcura ſunt quæ à Prophetis de iis dicuntur והחכמים אין לדם קבלה בדברים אלו אלא לפי הכרע הפסוק nec apud ſapientes de illis traditio eſt, præter illud quod ex ſcriptura neceſſario infertur. Quæ & ſic ex ipſius mente enarrat R. Tanchum وتحقيق الامر في هذا المواعيد بالتفصيل انما يعلم بظهورها وليس مع احد فيها نقل محقق بل انما يقول كل منهم ما يقول على ما يظهر له ويترجح عنده من تاويلات النصوص quomodo ſe habitura ſit res in iſtis promiſſis, tum demum diſtincte percipietur, cum extiterint, nec eſt cupiam de iis traditio aliqua certa, verum unuſquiſque profert quod ſibi videtur ex iis, quæ apud ipſum præponderant, ſcripturæ intepretationibus. Sapientem illum Rabbinum (Maimonidem intelligo) alias religionis Judaicæ aſſertorem ſatis pertinacem, putidi iſtius de Meſſia Ben Joſeph commenti puduiſſe videtur. [d] Ubi enim quæcunque ad Meſſiam ſpectant exponenda ſibi proponit, ea quibus duo Meſſiæ innui videantur non de aliis intelligi vult, quam de David, eoque qui ipſo oriundus ſit, nulla Joſephi filii facta mentione. Deque ipſius præcurſore (quem R. Saadias, & Aben Ezra ut vidimus, Meſſiam Ben Joſeph autumant) licet Eliæ nomine appelletur, non tamen certo conſtare ipſum futurum Eliam, ſed ſaltem Prophetam aliquem, viz. qui Eliæ dignitate, gradu, & ſcientia par ſit, (explicante eam ſententiam R. Tanchum) ac de hoc certe apud antiquiores Judæos olim diſceptatum videtur, ex eorum verbis, qui ad Johan. Baptiſtam à ſynedrio miſſi percunctatum quis eſſet, interrogarunt? eſſetne Chriſtus? eſſetne Elias? eſſetne Propheta ille? Meſſiam ergo expectabant illi unum, Davidis filium; expectabant etiam, vel Eliam, vel prophetam aliquem inſignem. Nihil de Ephraimi aut Joſephi filio quærunt. Faceſſant igitur commenta hominum, indubitatæ Dei veritati, mendacia à ſe conficta præferentium. Faceſſat ἑτερόφυλος iſte Meſſias; Hoſanna filio David. Quiſquis animo non præſumpta opinione corrupto, prophetarum verba inſpexerit, quicquid ab Angelo ante Domini faciem ſeu Apparitoris vice, mittendo expectandum erat, in Johanne Baptiſta; quicquid ab Angelo illo fœderis, ſeu ipſo Meſſia, in Jeſu Chriſto exitum habuiſſe, adeo ut extra dubium ſit, illum fuiſſe qui venturus erat, nec alium expectandum, facile perſpiciet.

[d] Ad Malac. iv. Yad, Melac. c. 11.

A

COMMENTARY

ON THE

PROPHECY

OF

JOEL,

By EDWARD POCOCK, D. D.

Canon of Chriſt-Church, and Regius Profeſſor of the Hebrew Tongue, in the Univerſity of OXFORD.

Imprimatur.

JONATH. EDWARDS,
Vice-Cancel. Oxon.

AUGUST 19,
1691.

TO THE

Right Reverend FATHER in GOD

JONATHAN

Lord Biſhop of EXETER.

My LORD,

WHAT is, as to the general, intended for the publick good, I make bold in particular to make uſe of as a token of thankfulneſs for the great favours, which I have received from your Lordſhip. Your freeneſs in conferring them makes that I cannot doubt of your candour in receiving this hearty, though ſlender acknowledgment of them. The ſubject is ſuch that deſerves acceptance from all Chriſtians, it being a Prophecy in peculiar manner foretelling them what wonderful effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and plentiful conferring the graces thereof, ſhould be under Chriſt, and ſo by St. Peter cited, to prove that he was come, and the good promiſes of God by him fulfilled. Many difficulties there are in this Prophet, which were incumbent on me to endeavour to clear; of which my endeavours I humbly crave your Lordſhip's favourable acceptance, and pardon wherein I have any way failed.

My LORD,

Your LORDSHIP's Moſt Humble Servant,

EDWARD POCOCK.

THE

PREFACE.

I Shall not with many words trouble the Reader to acquaint him with my intention or method in my Commentary on this Prophet, they being the ſame, which I have declared my ſelf to take in thoſe on Micah and Hoſea: I ſhall only remind thoſe, who are not acquainted with ſuch languages as Hebrew and Arabick, that the giving the mind of ſuch, whoſe opinions I cite in their own words, needs not to ſtop them in their proceeding, the meaning of them, as far as concerns the matter and our purpoſe, being all given in Engliſh. As to ſuch who are acquainted with thoſe languages, I ſhall deſire them to take notice, that ſuch paſſages as are taken out of Arabick Tranſlators, Commentators or Lexicons, are put ſometimes in the Arabick Characters proper to the language of which the words are; ſometimes in the Hebrew, in which they were written, as the uſual cuſtom of thoſe Jews, who lived in ſuch places among the Mahometan Arabians, wherein the Arabick Tongue, as the learned language of the Eaſtern parts, was both ſtudied and vulgarly ſpoken, was in thoſe times to do. The reaſon of which, I ſuppoſe, was, that their books concerning their religion might not be commonly read by the Mahometans, enemies thereof: which likewiſe may be the reaſon why the Syrians publiſh in Syriack Characters what they write in Arabick. The expreſſing them ſometimes in Hebrew Characters may, I ſuppoſe, not be unuſeful to the Reader skilled in thoſe tongues, for acquainting him with, and exerciſing him in their cuſtom, if he meet with books ſo written, as many they have.

But the main thing which I am to give ſome reaſon of, is the draught or ſcheme of the area of the Temple, and the different parts thereof, which I have procured to be engraven and here put. In chap. ii. 17. p. 282. I commend to the Reader a draught of the ſeveral parts of the Temple, and courts belonging to it, which I find in an ancient MS. of Maimonides, in his Commentary on the Miſnaioth, or the Text of the Jewiſh Talmud, in the Tract called Middoth, out of a Manuſcript, (which I have probable reaſons to think is as ancient as from the Author's own time.) I cite it, becauſe in the printed Copies and Tranſlations of it into Hebrew, I find no ſuch draught; though an ancient Edition leave ſpace for this, and other ſchemes that are in him, only with white blanks, yet putting before them, And this is the צורה Tſurah or figure, And to this preſent figure both in the Arabick and Hebrew is put, that it is a general figure which he had in ſeveral places of his Comment promiſed, miſed, and referred the Reader to; and that it did comprehend all that had been before mentioned. Which ſhews that in the Author's own Original there was a draught or ſcheme, which he would have the Reader take notice of, and be directed by. So likewiſe in an ancient MS. in the hand of my worthy friend Dr. Huntington, of another book of his ſtiled Yad Chaſaka, being a ſum of their Talmudical Doctrine, (wherein was written by a learned Jew, who had been owner thereof, that he had corrected it from a Copy of Rabbi Moſes his own hand) written, I ſuppoſe, after the former, is the like ſcheme found, though not in the printed copies thereof. So that for communicating it to the Reader as from him proceeding, I ſaw no other way, than to get this Scheme agreeable to his engraved. We have indeed among modern Authors ſeveral ſchemes of the ſame thing, which as the Reader meets with, he may compare with this which I have choſen to exhibit to him, both becauſe of its antiquity, and in reſpect to its Author. And of this having two ſeveral draughts, as we ſaid, one in his Comment on the Miſnaioth, the other in the MS. of his Yad, we have taken the former as ſeeming the more ancient, and being the more elegant of the two. And though neither of them be ſo exact in drawing lines proportionate to the meaſure of the ſeveral ſpaces as ſome latter are, yet this exception is taken away, by the meaſures belonging to every ſpace, being in their proper places ſet down in words at length, from which, rather than from the lines, the Reader is to take them. Which words we have likewiſe given, though not engraven in the figure, as in the Manuſcripts they are written, the ſpace not being in the engraving ſo well capable of them.

A. מזרח. The East. B. מערב. The West. C. צפון. The North.
D. דרום. The South.

The first Partition.

1. עזרת הנשים. The Women's Court. 2. לשכת דיר העצים. The Woodhouſe. 3. לשכת הנזירים. The Nazarites Chamber. 4. לשכת המצורעין. The Lepers Chamber. 5. לשכת בית שמניה. The Oil-room.

The ſecond Partition.

6. שער ניקנור. Nicanor's Gate. 7. לשכת פנחס המלביש. The Veſtry. 8. לשכת בית עושי חבתין. The Cake-maker's Room. 9. לשכת הגזית. The Paved Room. 10. לשכת המלח. The Salt-room. 11. עזרת ישראל. The Iſraelites, or the Men's Court. 12. לשכת העץ והיא לשכת פלהדרין. The Wooden, or the Counſellor's Chamber. 13. לשכת הגולה. The Well-houſe. 14. לשכת המריחין. The Bathing-room. 15. לשכת הפרוה. Pirva's Chamber.

The third Partition.

16. עזרת הכהנים. The Prieſt's Court.

The fourth Partition.

17. מזבח. The Altar. 18. כבש. The Aſcent to the Altar. 19. טבעות. The Place of the Rings where the Sacrifices were killed. 20. שלחנות. The Tables. 21. מקום הננסין וחוא בית המטבחים. The Sacrificers-room, where the Sacrifices were flay'd. 22. כיור. The Laver according to the Text of the Scripture; according to the Rabbins, the carved or flower'd Work.

The fifth Partition.

23. שער האולם. The Porch-gate. 24. אולם. The Porch. 25. שער בית המוקד. The Gate of the Fire-room. 26. בית המוקד. The Fire-room. 27. לשכת הטלאים. The Lambs Room. 28. לשכת שבה יורדים לבית הטבילה. The Place through which they deſcended into the Bath. 29. לשכת שבה גנזו אבני המזבח. The Room wherein they put the Stones of the Altar. 30. לשכת עושי לחם הפנים. The Shew-bread-makers Room. 31. עלית בית אבטינס. The Upper-chamber of Abtines, or the Perfumers-room. 32. שער חגדול. The Great-gate. 33. מזבח הזהב. The Golden Altar. 34. היכל. The Temple. 35. שלחן. The Table. 36. המנורה. The Candleſtick. 37. שער המים. The Water-gate. 38. שער הקרבן. The Sacrifice-gate. 39. שער הקרבן. Another Sacrifice-gate oppoſite to it. 40. קדש הקדשים. The Holy of Holies. 41. שער הדלק. The Lighting-gate, where the Candles were lighted. 42. שער הנצוץ. The Bright-gate.

a The Length of the Women's Court is מאה ושלשים וחמש. 135 Cubits.
b The Breadth of the ſame, as alſo of the whole Fabrick of the Temple, מאה ושלשים וחמש. 135 Cubits.
c The Length of the whole Structure from the Women's Court, מאה ושמונים ושבע. 187 Cubits. d אחת עשרה אמה. 11 Cubits in Length.
e אחת עשרה אמה. 11 Cubits in Length.
f שתים עשרה ומחצה. 12 Cubits ½ and half in Breadth.
g שלשים. 30 Cubits in Breadth.
h שלשים ושתים. 32 Cubits in Breadth, and as many in Length.
i שמונה. 8 Cubits in Breadth.
k עשרים וארבע. 24 Cubits in Breadth.
l שמונה אמות. 8 Cubits in Breadth.
m שתים עשרה ומחצה. 12 Cubits ½ and half in Breadth.
n שמונה. 8 Cubits in Breadth.
o עשרים ושתים. 22 Cubits in Length.
p עשרים ושתים. 22 Cubits in Length.
q עשרים ושתים. 22 Cubits in Length.
r עשרים ושתים. 22 Cubits in Length.
s מאה אמות. 100 Cubits in Length.
t מאה אמות. 100 Cubits in Length
u אחת עשרה. 11 Cubits in Breadth.

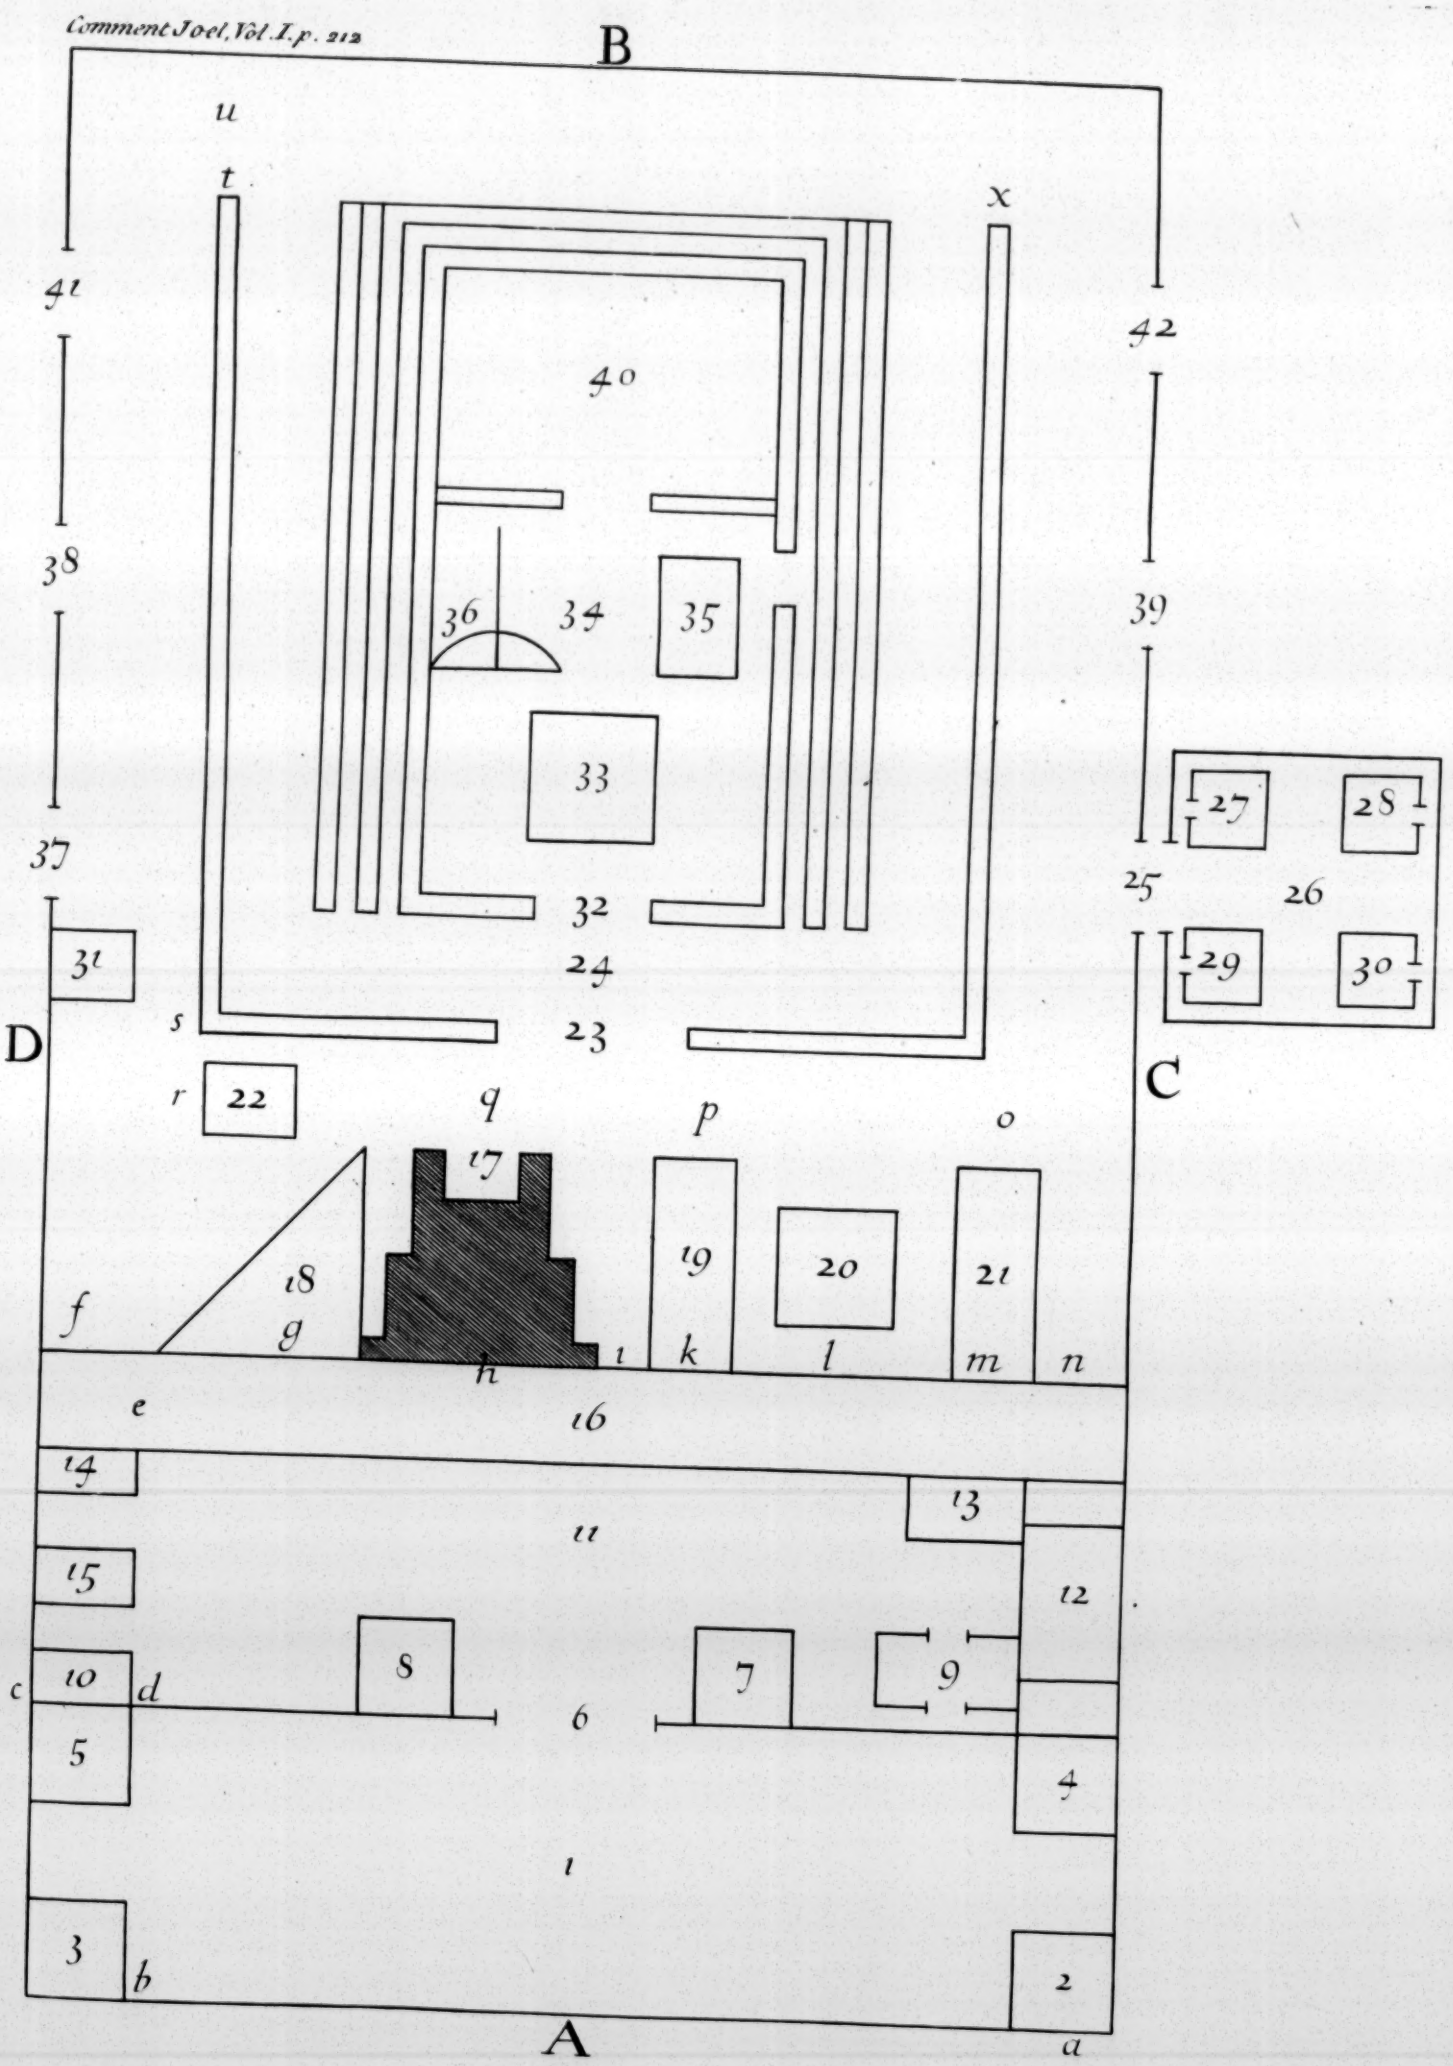
Comment Joel, Vol. I. p. 212



A

COMMENTARY

ON THE

PROPHECY

OF

JOEL.

CHAP. I.

VERSE 1. The word of the Lord that came to Joel the Son of Pethuel.

WHO Joel and his father Pethuel were, is a queſtion that might here in the firſt place offer it ſelf, as likewiſe where and in what age they liv'd, and this Prophecy was uttered. The Scripture neither here nor elſewhere informing us concerning theſe things, nor any ancient records of thoſe times remaining; it is manifeſt that all that is by Interpreters of later date ſaid of them is only conjectural, without any thing of certainty therein. More Joel's, from whom this Prophet is diſtinguiſhed by his being ſaid to be the ſon of Pethuel we read of, but the name of Pethuel we do not elſewhere find: ſome therefore of the Jews (I ſuppoſe going on that uncertain rule of theirs, that where the father of a Prophet is named together with him, it denotes that his father was not only a man of good note in thoſe days, but a Prophet alſo) make him to be the ſame with Samuel. [a] Samuel had a ſon that was named Joel, but as neither the time when he lived ſeems to permit that this ſhould be the ſame, ſo neither what is ſaid of that Joel makes it likely that he ſhould be a Prophet, being [b] taxed as a man of evil life and behaviour; and why this Pethuel ſhould be thought to be Samuel, no reaſon at all can be given: That which Rab. Solomon gives ſeeming very weak, viz. that he was ſo called becauſe פתה לאל בתפלתו He perſuaded or wrought upon God by his prayers. For the ſame reaſon might any other Prophet or holy man be ſo called, as well as Samuel; there being no better authority for it; on the contrary we may well ſay פתואל אינו שמואל Pethuel is not [c] Samuel, and therefore Joel ſon not to him, but ſome other. When he lived and propheſied (it being not in the Scripture at all mentioned) is likewiſe as uncertain, nor doth Aben Ezra without reaſon ſay אין דרך לדעת דורו ולפי הפשט איננו בן שמואל that there is no way to know his age, and in plain language he was not the ſon of Samuel; it is no ways probable that he was ſo ancient. [d] סוף דבר לא ביאר הכתוב ואנחנו לא נדע יואל הנביא מאיזה שבט היה ובאיזה דור היה i. e. In ſum, the Scripture hath not declared, and we do not (cannot) know, as to the Prophet Joel, of what [e] tribe he was, nor in what age he was. Hence is it that Expoſitors much differ in aſſigning the time of his propheſying. [f] Some, beſides what we have before mentioned of Rab. Solomon's opinion, placing him under the reign of Jehoram the ſon of Ahab, when there was [g] a great famine in the land (which they think by this Prophet ſpoken of) for the ſpace of ſeven years: Others making him cotemporary with Hoſeah placed before him, building on a rule [h] uncertain, if not plainly falſe; [i] that when the time of a Prophet is not expreſſed, it is to be looked on that he was in the ſame time with the Prophet placed next before him: Others thinking he propheſied under Manaſſeh, which is the opinion of ſeveral Jews, following therein their [k] Chronicle of good authority among them; [l] Others that it was in the time of Joſiah King of Judah, and that what is by him ſpoken (as they think) of a famine, refers to the ſame which is ſpoken of by Jeremiah xiv. 1, 2.

[a] 1 Sam. viii. 2. [b] Ib. ver. 3. [c] Abarbinel. [d] Abarb. [e] Epiphanius, who ſaith he was of the tribe of Reuben, for what reaſon I know not. [f] Kimchi. [g] 2 Kings viii 1. [h] Tarnov. [i] Jerom. præf. in 12 Prophets. [k] Seder Olun. Kimchi. [l] Daneus.

A proof that he lived under theſe later Kings is by them, who ſo place him, thought to be, becauſe his not mentioning the ten tribes in his Prophecy, but only the two, and ſpeaking what concerned only them, is a ſign that he propheſied after that the ten tribes were led away into captivity. Such variety of conjectures ſhews the thing to be no way certain, and the Scriptures being ſilent in it is an argument that we need not be ſollicitous concerning it. It is ſufficient for us to know that Joel which was the ſon of Pethuel (and ſo diſtinguiſhed from any other of that name) was in that time, when he lived, one whom God thought and made fit to be employed in his meſſage to his people, and to ſpeak in his name, which is ſhewed by ſaying what is recorded in this Prophecy was the word of the Lord that came to Joel; and this gave authority to it, viz. its being the word of the Lord, not its being the word of Joel, and out of this aſſurance, and the authority that it brought with it, was it conſtantly received into the canon of the Scriptures, among thoſe books, which, though more particularly in ſome reſpects concerning thoſe of that time to whom the words were ſpoken, yet were to be a ſtanding rule to all ſucceeding generations, to inſtruct them alſo in the will of God by example, and to be [m] profitable to them for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for inſtruction in righteouſneſs. That it did not concern only that preſent age, but future times alſo, is witneſſed to us by St. Peter; who quotes it as a foretelling what was afterward to befal them in the time of Chriſt (Acts ii. 17, &c.) which ſo evidently it doth, as that the Jews themſelves cannot but confeſs it. So ſaith Kimchi, This Prophet prophecies firſt of the Locuſts which ſhould come up on the land of Iſrael for their ſins, and afterwards utters a prophecy עתידה ליבוא המשיח which ſhall come to paſs in the days of the Meſſiah: even the ſame of which St. Peter there ſaith, this is that which was ſpoken by the Prophet Joel, which we ſhall in its due place meet with, and have farther occaſion of particular enquiring into. This at preſent may ſuffice by way of preface: what the whole of this Word of the Lord that came to Joel was, follows now in order.

2. Hear this, ye old men, and give ear all ye inhabitants of the land: hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers?

3. Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation.

The Prophet by God commiſſioned; and having words put into his mouth, that he may bring thoſe ſtupid ſinners, whom he is ſent to, to a due ſenſe of their ſins, and to a ſpeedy and effectual repentance, that ſo they might remove God's heavy judgments, which they had by thoſe their ſins (which yet they continued in) provoked him to ſend on them, begins with a declaration of the ſtrangeneſs of thoſe judgments and the nature of them, that ſo duly conſidering them, they might perceive that they were not ſuch as ordinarily befel men in the uſual courſe of things, and muſt needs therefore make them to perceive that God's extraordinary hand was in it, and made it evident that they had in an high and extraordinary manner provoked him, and that therefore they could not look or hope to have them removed from them, till they had made their peace by ſerious repentance with him, who alone, as he had ſent them on them, ſo could again remove them, and make good to them what evil they had ſuffered by them. The ſtrangeneſs and grievouſneſs of them he ſets forth to be ſuch, as neither any of them had ever before ſeen, or heard of, and ſuch as their following generations, when told of, would admire at, as things not elſewhere found or known. This is the import of the 2d and 3d verſes, in which by way of queſtion he puts it to their own conſideration, all ſorts of them, whether they muſt not needs confeſs it to be ſo. Hear this, ye old men, and give ear all ye inhabitants of the land.] Hear, what I ſay, ye old men. They had ſeen and known both by their own obſervation, and by what they had heard from others, what had for many years happened, and ſo were more fit to judge of what ſhall be now ſaid, whether it be not a deſcription of a heavier judgment than they had ever ſeen or heard of; you together with all the inhabitants of the land, (or as ſome will, of the whole earth, any lands) give ear, well ponder and conſider, whether at any time, or in any place, ever they had ſeen or heard to have been in their days, or in the days of their fathers, any ſuch grievous thing: if they have not, then will it greatly concern them to ſearch into the cauſe of this ſtrange work; and not to be neglectful of it as an ordinary accident; but ſuch as former ages had not ſeen, nor future were like to ſee. Having thus ſtirred up their attention, he proceeds to the deſcription of that judgment which he ſpeaks of according to ſome, as already actually come on them; or according to others, as ſure to come, as if it already were.

4. That which the Palmer-worm hath left, hath the Locuſt eaten; and that which the Locuſt hath left, hath the Canker-worm eaten, and that which the Canker-worm hath left, hath the Caterpillar eaten.

That which the Palmer-worm hath left.] Our Tranſlators in the Margin note that in the Hebrew is the reſidue of the Palmer-worm, ſo the words יתר הגזם אכל הארבה yether hagazam acal haarbeh, literally ſound. The reaſon why they render it as they do is, I ſuppoſe, for avoiding an ambiguity which that literal rendring may ſeem ſubject to; as if it ſounded, The Palmer-worms that were left, the Locuſts have eaten. It is by Rab. Tanchum taken

[m] 2 Tim. iii. 16.

taken notice of, يريد بقوله يتر הנום ما بعاه من نبات الارض لا بقيته نفسه, He means by Yether hagazam, the reſidue of the Palmer-worm, that which they have left of the plants of the earth, not the remainder of them themſelves; ſo rendred, as in our laſt Tranſlation, it is plainer than that in the Geneva, which hath, that which is left of the Palmer-worm. Four kinds of noxious creatures ſucceeding one another, and the latter devouring what was left by the former, till all that was deſirable of the growth of the land was conſumed, are here named as executioners of God's heavy judgments upon them. The firſt is גזם Gazam by Ours rendred the Palmer-worm, both here and Amos iv. 9. having its [n] name from גזז Gazaz to ſhear, to cut, or pluck off, with the letter ם m added in the end; or elſe from גזם Gazam, which though not found in the Scriptures, we may think to have been then in uſe in the Hebrew Tongue, as it is in the Rabbins, as likewiſe جزر in the Arabick in like ſignification of cutting off, ſo therefore called שגווז את החבואה becauſe it ſhears the corn, as Kimchi explains it. The ſecond ארבה Arbeh, by Ours rendred here, as Exod. x. 4. and oft elſewhere, the Locuſt, and ſometimes Graſhopper: which is looked on as having its name from רבה Rabah, to be many or multiplied, by reaſon of the great multitude of that ſort; the root and the noun are joined, Jer. xlvi. 23. רבו מארבה rabbu mearbeh, which Ours read, they are more than the Graſhoppers. With another noun alſo directing to the ſame ſignification it is coupled, Jud. vi. 5. כדי ארבה לרב Cede arbeh larob, as Graſhoppers for multitude. The third is ילק Yelek, by them here as alſo, Jer. li. 14. rendred the Caterpillar; and Nahum iii. 15. the Canker-worm, importing as much according to the uſual derivation aſſigned to it, as licker: for ſo will they have it referred to the root לקק Lakak, to lick, שהוא לוקק ולוחך את העשב becauſe he doth as it were [o] lick the herbs, as Kimchi ſpeaks, and ſo devour them. The fourth חסיל Chaſil, which they render the Caterpiller, as here, ſo elſewhere; which name ſeems to import a conſumer, from the verb חסל Chaſal ([p] except the verb be rather made from the noun) ſignifying to conſume, and ſo by Ours rendred, Deut. xxviii. 38. יחסילנו הארבה Yachſilenu haarbeh, the Locuſt ſhall conſume it: the Greek render it here ἐρυσίβη, and the Vulgar Latin [q] Rubigo, (which the Doway render blaſt,) yet do the Greek elſewhere render the ſame by the name of a noxious living creature, as Βρῦχος Bruchus, 2 Chron. vi. 28. and ἀκρὶς a Locuſt, Iſaiah xxxiii. 4. and ſo the Vulgar Latin by Bruchus in both thoſe places: and (if it be granted that the word may ſignify both thoſe [r], as Some will, and both be very noxious to green corn or other things) certainly the taking it here for the name of a living creature, ſeems much more convenient and agreeable to the place, wherein the other three named are unqueſtionably ſo, and of all ſaid that they did eat, and that the following did eat or devour what the foregoing left; all then more than probably, by eating taken in a proper ſenſe, and as it agrees to living creatures: they being then all ſo taken and look't on as ſeveral ſorts of animals, [s] it is by ſome very learned men much doubted what names in Latin may aptly be aſſigned to them: the like then will of other languages be ſaid, how in them they may be properly called and diſtinguiſhed. In Arabick there are no doubt particular and diſtinct names for them, yet how to apply them properly to thoſe meant, it will not be eaſy to ſay: except a man ſaw them in that country, and heard them called every one by their names, it will be hard preciſely to ſay they were ſuch or ſuch, and ſo or ſo are diſtinguiſhed in form, or property. And therefore do ſome Interpreters rather chooſe to retain in ſome of them the [t] Hebrew names than to tranſlate them. It may I ſuppoſe ſuffice us to ſay with a [u] learned Jew that هذه الاسما كلها قد تكون لاصناف من الجراد وقد تكون مترادفة عليه theſe names all are of ſome ſorts of Locuſts, and are ſynonymous, or ſeveral names of that creature, of which that there are ſeveral kinds appears by what is ſaid in the Law, Levit. xi. 22. האربה למינו Haarbe Lemino, the Locuſt after his kind; that name Arbeh which is put here as the name of one ſort, is there put as comprehending under it ſeveral ſorts; ſo that it appears ſometimes to be uſed as a more general name, ſometimes as a more ſpecial وقد يطلف الواحد منها علي الجميع مجازا the name of one of the ſorts (as he ſpeaks) being uſed of all. Here we ſee they are four of them diſtinctly put, ſeeming to have their different names from their different way of doing hurt, yet all concurring in doing hurt and devouring the fruits or products of the earth; and as ſuch, I ſuppoſe, are by our Tranſlators very well rendred by names of ſuch known creatures as do concur in ſo doing, though in differing manners, ſo that if any thing eſcape one, another will be ſure to meet with it, till between them they have made an utter end of all. But now it being agreed that theſe names do literally ſignify ſuch noxious deſtructive creatures, there is a queſtion made whether what is ſpoken, as concerning them, be to be underſtood of them, and of what hurt they do according to the ſound of the words; or of ſome enemies compared to them, and ſet forth under their names by reaſon of the deſtruction and deſolation by them wrought, like to the worſt which could by theſe all of them together be made. This queſtion is ancient; and ſuch difference of opinions hath been about it as is not yet reconciled, both among Jews and Chriſtians. St. Jerome mentions it, and appears but dubious in it, yet ſo as rather to incline to thoſe that interpret it of ſuch enemies as invaded the country of the Jews; ſo he ſaith ſome of the Jews

[n] Ab. Ezra, R. Tanch. Fuller, Cap. Concord, Figurin and Munſter. [o] And ſo Aben Ezra. [p] R. Tanch. [q] So alſo the Tigurin and Munſter. [r] Ribera, Petr. à Fig. Ch. à Caſtro. [s] Ar. Montanus, Bochart. [t] Pagn. Interlin. [u] R. Tanchum.

Jews before him (whom he means we find not) underſtood it, taking the firſt name to point out the Aſſyrians, Babylonians, and Chaldeans: the ſecond to denote the Medes and Perſians; the third the Grecians; Alexander and his ſucceſſors, and particularly Antiochus Epiphanes, under whom were the wars of the Maccabees; the fourth the Romans, by all which, at ſeveral times ſome deſtruction was brought on the Jews, and their land made deſolate. Yet other Jews, he ſaith, do think that in the days of Joel ſuch an innumerable multitude of Locuſts came on the land of Judea that they filled all things, and devoured not only the corn, but vines alſo, and the bark and boughs of the trees, of the truth of which he ſeems to doubt, and to deny it, in as much as he finds no where elſe in the hiſtory of the Scripture mention of it, as we do of other famines, and concludes with doubtful words, while he only ſaith, that under the metaphor of Locuſts the coming of thoſe forementioned enemies is deſcrib'd, and that he ſeems to have found out ſomething in the meaning of the Prophet (viz.) that the wickedneſs (or cruelty) of thoſe enemies is deſcribed under the figure of Locuſts, and again the Locuſts themſelves are ſo deſcribed, as if they were compared to enemies. Ut cum Locuſtas legeris, hoſtes cogites, cum hoſtes cogitaveris, redeas ad Locuſtas: That when you read what is ſaid of the Locuſts, you muſt needs think of the enemies, and when you have thought of the enemies, muſt needs again return in your mind to the Locuſts. Thus is the matter left but as in doubt by him. Cyril appears to underſtand it likewiſe of ſuch enemies as did invade the Jews, as Others at other times, ſo at laſt Salmaneſſer, Nebuchadnezzar, Antiochus, and the Romans, yet (on ver. 14.) ſaith again that what is ſaid will be true, though it be underſtood of the Locuſts, and other hurtful creatures ſpecified. Theodoret mentioning ſome who underſtood the words tropically of ſome Kings of Aſſyria, as Tiglath Pileſer, Salmaneſſer, Senacherib and Nebuchadnezzar, ſaith that he thinks thoſe things to be indeed true, yet withal that κ᾽ τὰ κατὰ τὸ ῥητὸν νοούμενα τῷ ὄντως γεγενῆσθαι, that thoſe which are literally underſtood did really happen. But Ruffinus is poſitive that they are ſo literally to be underſtood of creatures named, as to refute them that at all underſtand them of the enemies. So appears, among thoſe ancient Chriſtian Interpreters Latin and Greek, to be a difference concerning this matter: who were thoſe ancient Hebrew Doctors that Jerome mentions I find not. The Chaldee in the preſent place and elſewhere for the moſt keeping to the letter, and rendring the names here expreſſed by ſo many in the language that he wrote in, anſwerable to them, yet chap. ii. 25. where they are again (though not in the ſame order repeated) doth not ſo, but to expreſs the meaning that he took them to have, rather than the letter, puts inſtead of them עממיא אומיא ולישניא ושלטניא ומלכותא פורענות Nations, People, Tongues, Languages, Potentates, and Revenging Kingdoms. So that it appears that in his time there was ſuch diverſity in interpretations. Among the later Jews, long ſince Jerome's time, the ſame is continued. R. Sol. Aben Ezra, and David Kimchi, the moſt known Expoſitors, expound the words as moſt properly concerning Locuſts, and ſuch noxious vermin, which did deſtroy the fruits of the earth, and occaſion a ſore famine or dearth in the land. R. Tanchum looking not only on theſe words, but on thoſe alſo verſe the 6th. For a nation is come up upon my land, for ſuch as may be well underſtood of Locuſts and like creatures, ſaith withal انه لا يبعد ان يكون جميع ما ذكره في هذه القصة من امر الجراد وافعاله مثل مجي الاعدا وكثرتهم واخرابهم البلاد ونهبهم لها that it is not abſurd to ſay that all that he mentions in this narration concerning the nature of Locuſts and their doings, is a parabolical expreſſion of the coming of enemies, and their multitude and their deſtruction of the land and ſpoiling of it, which he thinks confirmed by other expreſſions in the following narration, as in that great terror that he ſtrikes into them from the conſideration of theſe Locuſts. Again by what he ſaith that there ſhould none eſcape but the remnant whom the Lord ſhould call, (chap. ii. 32.) whereas it can ſcarce be imagined that that incurſion of Locuſts ſhould ſo far prevail: for which makes likewiſe his ſubjoining that he will take vengeance on the enemies, when he ſaith (chap. iii. 2.) I will gather all nations---- and will plead with them for my people, and for my heritage, &c. and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre and Zidon, &c. Swiftly and ſpeedily will I return your recompence upon your own head, &c. And although (ſaith he) Interpreters and Expoſitors make this to be no other than a narrative concerning Locuſts, which were to come upon the land of Iſrael, yet doth that which I have mentioned ſeem to make انسب Anſab more proper.

By this we ſee how he was inclined to underſtand theſe expreſſions as nothing concerning Locuſts, and thoſe like hurtful creatures, farther than as to the borrowing their names, ſo as to call the deſtructive enemies of the Jews by them. Abarbinel (later than any of theſe) is yet more poſitive, and peremptory for this opinion, viz. that as to the things here ſpoken, and diverſe of the expreſſions in this deſcription לא אמרם הנביא על הארבה the Prophet did not ſpeak them concerning Locuſts חלילה לי מלהאמין בזה כי אם על אויבי השם שהחריבו את ביתו והגלו את עמו Far be it from me that I ſhould believe this, but that he ſpake them concerning the enemies of God, which deſtroyed his city, and carried captive his people: and thoſe enemies he will have to be thoſe four kingdoms of the Babylonians, Perſians, Grecians and Romans, to which he ſuppoſeth ſeveral of the following expreſſions to agree ſo, as that they cannot be properly underſtood of Locuſts, and ſuch noxious vermin, If we ſhall look to the more modern Chriſtian [w] Expoſitors, we ſhall find ſtill the ſame ſame variety of opinions, ſo that we ſhall have but to repeat the ſame things which we have before ſaid; ſome preferring that expoſition which would have the words not literally underſtood of Locuſts, &c. but of ſuch enemies as are under thoſe names couched, and the deſtruction by them brought on the Jews, and they yet differing among themſelves in the aſſigning of theſe enemies; Others of that which taketh the creatures named, and the miſchief by them brought on their land, to be the thing primarily and properly meant; amongſt whom the learned Bochartus plainly oppoſeth the opinion of Abarbinel the laſt of the Jews mentioned, and ſo by conſequence all thoſe Others, who, as he, deny the words to be properly meant of ſuch creatures as are named, but of ſuch enemies as ſhould bring on them deſtruction. [x] Others think both be intended, one having been a forerunner of the other, as [y] Some have obſerved the coming of the Locuſts to have preceded, and, as they think, portended the invaſion of enemies. But not to intermingle our ſelves farther in any controverſy about the matter, ſure the plaineſt and ſafeſt way will be the moſt ſimple, which is to explain the words literally as they ſound: then will it be lawful to any to apply them to other things as he pleaſeth: ſuch expreſſions, as any party inſiſt on, we ſhall meet with as they come in their order, and ſee what force is in them. But then they being ſo taken, there will ariſe other queſtions, which, for clearing the hiſtory of them, it will be convenient to anſwer. As, firſt, how what is ſaid here concerning theſe hurtful creatures, and the miſchief done by them, Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? &c. can agree or be reconciled with what is ſpoken, Exod. x. 14. concerning thoſe Locuſts which God ſent on the land of Egypt, that they were very grievous, before them were no ſuch Locuſts as they, neither after them ſhall be ſuch. Several anſwers are to this given; as, firſt, [z] That in Exodus is ſpoken of the bigneſs of the Locuſts, here of the multitude, and ſo both are true (viz.) that there were never ſeen any ſo big as thoſe there ſpoken of, nor ſo many together as here. Secondly, That in Egypt were ſuch ſo great and ſo many [a] of one kind, as never had been or ſhould be ſeen together, but here ſuch a multitude of more kinds, as had never flocked at once together there or elſewhere. Againſt this may be excepted, that though there in the law be mentioned only Locuſts, yet under that comprehenſive name were other kinds alſo included, as appears out of the Pſalmiſt, who, having reſpect to that hiſtory, ſaith, he gave their increaſe to the Caterpiller, and their labour unto the Locuſt, Pſalm lxxviii. 46. and cv. 34. that both Locuſts came and Caterpillers, and that without number; yet Kimchi thinks this to hold in regard, that only Locuſts, as principal, are in the law mentioned. Thirdly, That what is in Exodus may well be ſaid in [b] reſpect of the coming of thoſe Locuſts altogether in one day, or for a few days; and what is here, in regard to their ſucceſſive coming four years together, kind after kind. But this, to wit, that they are to be underſtood to have done ſo, will have need of farther proof. Fourthly, A clearer anſwer ſeems to be, that that in Exodus is ſpoken in reſpect of what had been ſeen in Egypt, this here in reſpect to Judea, and both true in reſpect to the places meant. Yet is againſt this an exception of Abarbinel, viz. that what is ſaid in Exodus concerning the quality or quantity of thoſe Locuſts is החלטי כללי abſolute and univerſal, not reſtrained to the land of Egypt, as that before concerning the hail is, of which it is ſaid that it would be ſuch, Exod. ix. 18. and that it was ſuch, ver. 24. as never had been till then in the land of Egypt, and this he ſeems to make to himſelf a reaſon why he ſhould rather underſtand theſe words of enemies than proper Locuſts, and ſuch worms, becauſe then there ſhould be no contradiction between theſe places. But may we not think that that limitation reſtraining the hail to the land of Egypt, hath alſo influence on the following plagues, as that of theſe Locuſts alſo, to confine them to that country, as that what is ſaid of them, may be underſtood particularly of that? Whatſoever be ſaid for reconciling theſe Texts, which doubtleſs do not really contradict one the other, it is manifeſt that each in its ſeveral place is a deſcription of a very ſignal and extraordinary plague in that kind, and as ſo to be taken notice of as a ſingular token of God's diſpleaſure, that they might repent of that by which they had provoked it.

[w] Oecolampadius, Ribera, C. Caſtro, Grot.

A ſecond queſtion is, when what is here ſaid was ſpoken by the Prophet. As there is nothing in the Scripture ſpoken elſewhere of the age, or time wherein our Prophet lived and propheſied, ſo neither is there of ſuch a judgment or famine as he here deſcribes. [c] Some will have it indeed to be that famine of which Eliſha ſpake, 2 Kings viii. 1. which was for ſeven years together, which that they may make to be the ſame with this, they will have the firſt four years ſcarcity to have been cauſed by theſe four noiſom worms here mentioned, devouring the growth of the earth, and then that of three others by want of rain; but there being nothing that may make it either certain or probable that Joel lived ſo early as the time of Eliſha (viz. under King Jehoram) nor that this was the famine of ſeven years, or any other in the hiſtory of the Scripture mentioned, Others take it for granted that it is not at all therein expreſly recorded; and Abarbinel makes that an argument that it is not at all to be underſtood of ſuch a famine, at any time, by ſuch devouring creatures as are here named, brought upon them, but of ſuch deſtruction as was effected by cruel enemies under thoſe names couched. But [d] Others again think this argument from the Scriptures being ſilent elſewhere of any ſuch thing, not to be of any validity, in as much as many ſignal and notorious accidents fell out, of which there is not yet expreſs mention made in the hiſtory of the Scriptures, as, for example, that earthquake mentioned as very notorious, Amos i. 1. and Zach. xiv. 5. and that it was not the proper buſineſs of the Scriptures to give a particular account of ſuch things, as appears [e] by the mention of other famines in it, which are not ſo much mentioned for their own ſake, to give only an account of them, as for illuſtrating ſome other thing that was then done; as that famine which was in the land of Canaan in Abraham's time, to ſhew the cauſe of his going into Egypt, Gen. xii. 10. and that in Iſaac's time to ſhew what occaſioned him to repair to Abimelech King of the Philiſtines, Gen. xxvi. 1. and that of ſeven years by Joſeph foretold of, Gen. xli. to make way for all thoſe remarkable hiſtories concerning Joſeph and his brethren, and the children of Iſrael's bondage in Egypt, and their wonderful deliverance thence; and that in Ruth, mentioned to ſhew the occaſion of Elimelech's going into the country of Moab; when yet in the hiſtory of the book of Judges under whom it happened, there is no mention made of it. And that in 2 Sam. ii. 21. occaſioned by Saul's injury to the Gibeonites, which could not be appeaſed without the hanging up of ſeven of his ſons, that ſo it might be known how David's kingdom was eſtabliſhed: and thoſe again under Elijah the Prophet, 1 Kings xviii. 2. and under Eliſha, 2 Kings iv. 32. to ſhew the occaſion of the great miracles by them in thoſe times wrought. Many other famines in the ſpace of ſo many years very probably happened, yet none other of them being mentioned, and thoſe that are being out of other reſpects ſpoken of, (as we have ſeen according to the learned Bochart's obſervation, who obſerves alſo the like concerning ſuch as are mentioned in the New Teſtament,) it cannot be wondred that this here by Joel ſpoken of, ſhould be omitted in the hiſtorical books of Scripture. It may ſeem an undoubted truth that ſuch a plague of Locuſts, and ſuch a famine by them cauſed there certainly was, becauſe the Prophet here deſcribes it, though we do not here or elſewhere find the certain time of it aſſigned. If it had been neceſſary for us, or profitable for our inſtruction, preciſely to know it, [f] Spiritus Sanctus dixiſſet, the Holy Ghoſt would have revealed it. Mean while of the ſtory it ſelf it will concern us to make that uſe which was by him intended, and will be required of us. But the queſtion ariſing from theſe words concerning the time when the Prophet ſpake this, is not properly ſo much concerning the age wherein it was, as concerning the circumſtances of the time which he ſpake in, viz. whether he ſpake of the famine directly by way of prediction before it was, or whether by way of deſcription of it already paſt, or at preſent in being. The ground of this queſtion is, becauſe the verbs here uſed are in form of the præter-tenſe, ſounding as if they ſpake of what was already paſt, or at leaſt began, and in preſent doing; but then withal it is a known rule in the prophetical languages, that the form of the præter-tenſe is uſed in the ſignification of the future, as denoting what God ſaith ſhall be done, to be as certain as if already done and paſt. Hence is here diverſity of expoſitions, Some taking the words as a prediction of what was yet to come to warn them of it, to ſeek to prevent it by repentance; Others as a deſcription of what had already happened to excite them to make right uſe of it for their returning to God, whom by what they ſuffered, they were given to perceive how greatly they had provoked, that ſo he might repair to them thoſe loſſes which they had for their rebellions againſt him ſuffered. Rab. Solomon, as alſo Aben Ezra and Rab. David Kimchi, underſtanding the noxious creatures mentioned literally and properly (for if they be otherwiſe underſtood as by Others, as we have ſaid they are, of enemies at ſeveral times to come, there will be no occaſion of this queſtion) ſay that he foretels of them שיבאו ובאו באותן הימים [g] that they ſhould come, and that they accordingly did come in thoſe days, [h] being brought by God on their land for their iniquities. Of the ſame opinion are [i] Some likewiſe among Chriſtian Expoſitors, de futuris loquitur in præterito, he ſpeaks of things to come, as of things already paſt, Prophetico more, as the Prophets uſe to ſpeak. But Others on the contrary think that he ſpeaks of things already paſt. Calvin ſaith that in his opinion they who look on the words as a denouncing puniſhment, yet in future time to come, do Errare & corrumpere genuinum Prophetæ ſenſum, err and corrupt the proper meaning of the Prophet, whoſe intention is to reprove the ſtupidity of the people which were not ſenſible of the plagues they ſuffered, and that they were by God chaſtened for their ſins. Becauſe they were not ſenſible of this, [k] ideo præteritas proponit calamitates, docens eſſe pœnitendum peccatorum, therefore he ſets before their eyes ſuch calamities as were paſt, that he might warn them to repent of ſuch ſins as had provoked ſuch judgments. Theſe opinions ſeem contrary one to the other, yet I ſuppoſe may well in this place be both joined, and each have its ſhare of truth; for apparent it is that the plague here deſcrib'd was of ſome years continuance, and that they were not freed from it when this was ſpoken, from chap. ii. 25. I will reſtore to you the years that the Locuſt hath eaten, &c. Probably then this might be ſpoken after the plague began, and had for ſome time continued, yet ſo as to denounce a farther continuance of it to them continuing in their ſins; for it was not ended; the years which thoſe worms had eaten were not yet reſtored; nor the famine taken off from them. So that ſome Others ſeem not ill to expreſs it, that it is a deſcription of a judgment, [l] qualis & tunc tunc ex parte ſentiebatur, & magis adhuc percipienda erat, ſuch as was already in part felt, and ſhould yet more be felt, [m] quid huc uſque paſſi & quid præterea paſſuri ſint commemorat (as Another) he reckons up what they had already ſuffered, and what farther they ſhould ſuffer.

[x] Pet. à Fig. [y] See Mercer. Tarnov. [z] Daneus. [a] See Sol. Jarchi and Kimchi, chap. ii. 2. [b] Kimchi. [c] Rab. Solom. and David Kim. [d] Pet. à Fig. Mercer.

[e] Bochart. [f] Oecol. [g] R. Sol. [h] Kimchi, Mercer. [i] See Mercer. Pet. à Fig. and Bochart. [k] Mercer. [l] Daneus.

Another queſtion here raiſed is concerning the time and order of the coming of theſe noxious creatures, whether they came in ſeveral years ſucceſſively in that order as they are named, or whether all in one year. David Kimchi is of opinion that they came ſucceſſively in ſeveral years, in the firſt the גזם Gazam or Palmer-worm came and devoured, and in the ſecond the Locuſt, and eat up what he had left, and ſo as to the following. For ſaith he לא באו ארבעה המינים בשנה אחת the four ſorts came not all in one year, אלא זה אחר זה בארבע שנים, but one of them after another in four ſeveral years, as it is after ſaid ושלמתי לכם את השנים and I will reſtore to you the years that the Locuſt hath eaten, the Canker-worm and the Caterpiller, and the Palmer-worm. But Others are of the contrary opinion, viz. that they came all ſorts together in one year, and that they think manifeſt by what is ſaid יתר הגזם the reſidue, or reliques of the Palmer-worm, &c. viz. becauſe had that, which the Palmer left, not been eaten in the ſame year by the following ſort, it could not have been called יתר Yether, the reſidue or remainder of what that worm had left that year, being the product or new growth of another year, till then untouched, and that it is therefore manifeſtly to be underſtood of their coming all together, or one after another in the ſame year, ſo as that if one ſort left any thing remaining, another devoured it, ſo that between them they made a clear riddance of all that grew out of the earth: and ſo the years mentioned will ſhew their continuing to do ſo for more years, not to diſtribute the years betwixt them. Again the different placing of the names of thoſe worms in that place of chap. ii. and putting that name laſt which in theſe words is firſt, doth not obſcurely make for proof of their being all of them together, ſo as one might follow to devour what the other left in a field or place. Which coming of ſo many ſorts in one year [n] Jerome looks on as making this judgment ſignally miraculous.

Some of theſe queſtions may ſeem perhaps not much material, as that we ſhould ſo long have inſiſted on them; as not ſerving for doctrine, for reproof, correction, or inſtruction in righteouſneſs, or like ends for which the Scripture is given; yet do they conduce to the clearing of the terms of the whole verſe, which is profitable for them all, giving us an example of God's juſtice and ſeverity in puniſhing national ſins with national judgments; and withal giving us to know that when he will puniſh, he hath all creatures, even the moſt ungoverned among them, ready inſtruments for executing his will, and even the meaneſt and moſt contemptible of them, the vileſt worms by his might able to deſtroy, and bring down the glory and greateſt confidence of men. Beſides that this verſe is, as it were, the Text to the following Sermon of the Prophet, on which he inlargeth in it, and infers from it what therein he inculcates to them. So that for having his drift therein and underſtanding what he ſaith, it is inconvenient that the terms and all circumſtances belonging to it ſhould be explained.

5. Awake ye drunkards, and weep, and howl all ye drinkers of wine, becauſe of the new wine, for it is cut off from your mouth.

Such a judgment as is in the former verſe deſcribed, as either having already in part ſeized on them, or being threatned by God, and ſo unavoidably hanging over their heads ready to ſeize on them, ſhould certainly, if they had not been very ſtupid and ſottiſh, have awakened them from their ſleep in ſin, and cauſed them to turn and look unto God, whoſe hand was ſtretched out againſt them, ſtriking, and ready farther to ſtrike. But that ſo ſtupid they were as not to be ſenſible of the miſery of their condition, appears by the Prophet's beſpeaking them as he doth, and loudly calling on them to awake, and ſo behave themſelves as he preſcribes to them to do. The words may ſeem, and are by [o] Some thought to be an exhortation to repentance, as afterwards he doth ſeriouſly exhort them, [p] but withal from the terms uſed, and the reaſon added why they ſhould do as he bids, they appear to contain an upbraiding them for not having ſooner been aware of it, as if he ſhould ſay, that it was time they ſhould have done it already of their own accord, and that now it was come to that paſs, that they ſhould do it whether they were willing or no, in as much as there was now no matter, no occaſion of ſinning in this kind left to them; they muſt of neceſſity awake from their drunkenneſs and exceſs, becauſe there is no more wine, no pleaſing intoxicating liquors left to them, by which they might bring themſelves to a ſleeping condition, and ſo hath a declaration, though under the form of exhortation, of what [q] neceſſary effect, the judgment deſcribed ſhould have on them, ſuch as even thoſe that are leaſt ſenſible of things, even drowſy, ſleepy, ſottiſh drunkards ſhould be forced to be ſenſible of.

Awake ye drunkards.] It may ſeem probable that that ſin was among others then much indulged to, and by that the people of that age made ſo ſottiſh and ſtupid, as drunkards uſually are, and much ſleeping; yea being always as men aſleep: ſo that they did not regard the work of the Lord, nor had any regard of what concerned their own good. To them therefore more particularly doth he ſeem to addreſs his ſpeech, as by that odious ſin having pulled the preſent judgment on themſelves, and their country. To them the word word הקיצו Hakitzu, awake, is very aptly accommodated, as properly directed againſt the ſottiſhneſs of that ſin, and the property and uſual cuſtom of thoſe that indulge to it. So to the drunkard, and as contrary to his inſenſibility of ſuch miſchiefs as befal him, it is applied, Prov. xxiii. 35. Elſewhere it is uſed to denote the raiſing of a man's ſelf from ſecurity in other ſins, as Rom. xiii. 11. and Epheſ. v. 14. The other words added to this (viz.) ובכו והילילו Ubecu Vehelilu, and weep and howl, ſet forth the greatneſs of the calamity, which ſhould not only be ſuch as ſhould rouſe them up from their quiet ſleeping, but ſhould alſo provoke them to ſhew forth and expreſs the greateſt ſigns of being deeply affected with ſenſe of miſery, whether with ſorrow for their ſins, whereby they had deſerved it, or out of impatience or inability of bearing what they ſuffered (which perhaps is as much (as before we ſaid) as is at preſent yet meant:) the exhortation to true repentance, upon due conſideration of their condition following in ver. 13. Wherein this calamity did conſiſt, which ſhould provoke them to ſuch expreſſions of grief, is declared both in the deſcription of the perſons ſpoken to, drunkards and drinkers of wine, and in the declaration of what had happened, or ſhould happen to them in thoſe words, becauſe of the new wine, for it is cut off from your mouth: viz. becauſe they were deprived of what was their joy and delight, and without which they could not enjoy comfort in their life. The word rendred by Ours new wine is עסיס aſis, which, according to the ſignification of the root, ſeems to ſignify ſuch liquor as is by preſſing or treading forced out of grapes or other fruits; for ſo the word is uſed for treading, Mal. iv. 3. ועסותם רשעים Veaſſotem Reſhaim, and ye ſhall tread down (or upon) the wicked; and thence this name עסיס Aſis is given to wine [r] لكونه يداس حين العصير becauſe it is trodden out when firſt made. Kimchi extends the name to כל משקה שיצא על ידי כתישה ודריכה any drink or liquor which cometh by pounding (or ſqueezing) and treading. A proof ſeems to be had, Cant. viii. 2. where is read מעסיס רמני Meaſis rimoni, which the Interlineary renders, de vino dulci mali granati mei, of the ſweet wine of my pomegranate; our Tranſlation, of the juice of my pomegranate: but this proof will not ſo well hold, if we ſhould take R. Tanchum's interpretation of thoſe words, who explains it to mean الخمر المحمر اللون كالرمان wine as red of colour as a Pomegranate, ſo that, according to him, it ſhould ſound of Pomegranate like coloured wine, not wine made of Pomegranates: but whether it be ſpoken of other liquors it matters not here to enquire; here it ſeems particularly ſpoken of wine, the product of the vine, and not ill by Ours rendred new wine, by Others muſtum, as for ſuch being uſually taken, though Others chooſe to render it more ambiguouſly, [s] propter ſuccum expreſſum, for ſuch juice as is ſqueezed out; or [t] ob laticem. The Chaldee hath חמר מרת pure wine, Rab. Sol. good wine יין הטוב. Druſ. ſaith it properly ſignifies Vinum dulce & recens expreſſum, ſweet wine newly preſſed out. The LXX. render על עסים al aſis, becauſe of the new wine [u] εἰς μέθην (and the printed Arabick following them للسكر) to drunkenneſs; the Vulgar Latin in dulcedine in ſweetneſs. I do not think either of them to have taken the word Aſis in other ſignification than it is by Others, as we have ſeen, taken: not the one to have thought it to ſignify properly drunkenneſs, but ſtrong wine apt to intoxicate and make drunk; nor the other abſtractedly ſweetneſs, but ſweet, pleaſant wine. But the cauſe of their ſo tranſlating in a way differing from that, which we ſee Others ſince them prefer to make, to be from their different diſtinguiſhing the words in conſtruction, and then their taking the prepoſition על al, put before aſis, in a different notion, not of, for, or becauſe of, but of εἰς to, or in, on, or with: for whereas Ours with Others, not only modern but ancient alſo, as the Chaldee and the Syriack, make the words al aſis (which the Chaldee renders על חמר מרת for or becauſe of the unmixed (or new) wine; the Syriack ܠܚܡܪܐ for the wine) to refer to, and make one clauſe with the verbs weep and howl, as declaring for what they ſhould weep; they refer them to the other, which declare who ſhould weep and howl, viz. the drunkards and drinkers of wine, as deſcribing their condition of drinking exceſſively ſtrong wine, unto drunkenneſs, as the LXX. take it, or with pleaſure and delight, as the Vulgar: and the words ſo joined and literally ſounding, drinking wine, with, or upon Aſis, ſtrong wine, or new pleaſant wine, will well enough make out the meaning which either of them give. But then in the clauſe of the verſe, for it is cut off from your mouth, muſt ſomething, either again the ſame word, or ſomething equivalent be underſtood; and ſo the Vulgar Latin leaves it to be underſtood: but the LXX. [w] according to the more uſual copies ſupplies, εὐφροσύνη καὶ χαρά, becauſe joy and mirth are taken from their mouths. But the other way of diſtinguiſhing, and conſtruction of the words ſeems plainer, and is followed not only by modern Interpreters, but by the Chaldee and Syriack alſo more anciently; by the manuſcript Arabick alſo, whoſe words, becauſe not printed, we ſhall put down, استيقظوا يا سكاري وابكوا وولولوا يا كل شاربي الخمر علي العصير اذ انقطع من فيكم which need no other tranſlation than what our Engliſh gives of the Hebrew, except we read the laſt words, ſeeing it is cut off from your mouth. According to theſe the Aſis, or new wine, is not that which they did drink with pleaſure or to exceſs, but that which they were to lament, that they could not have it to drink, becauſe it was cut off from their mouth, wholly taken away from them, that they could not not ſo much as wet their lips, or fill their mouth with it, the Locuſts having wholly deſtroyed [x] the grapes of which it ſhould have been made. The ſame way of conſtruction follow alſo Some of thoſe, who by thoſe inſtruments, by which their wine would be cut off from them, underſtand not properly the Locuſts and like vermin named, but the enemies by ſuch names figured. So Abarbinel in that way gives a perſpicuous expoſition of the verſe. Awake, ye drunkards, and weep, &c. i. e. Ye who are drunken with the vanities of the world, and the delights of meat and drink all the day, and do not regard the work of the Lord, awake from your drunkenneſs, and weep and howl for the deſtruction of your land. For the wine and muſt, being of the delightful things of the products of the earth which ye did eat and drink, are now cut off from your mouth, by the coming up of the enemy on your land to deſtroy it.

[m] Gualter. [n] Jerom. He names them, ut quæ ſingula raro eveniunt, omnia ſimul facta memorentur, & ideo mirabilia ſint. [o] See Cyril. Tarnov. [p] Mercer. [q] Diodati in his Analyſis.

[r] R. Tanch. in his Lexicon. [s] Tigur. [t] Caſtal. [u] The old Latin Verſion of it, in ebrietate, in, or with drunkenneſs. [w] For it is wanting in that which Jerome follows; and ſome Others. See Druſ. Conject.

6. For a nation is come up upon my land, ſtrong and without number, whoſe teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek-teeth of a great lion.

In this and the following verſe have we a farther deſcription of the executioners of God's judgments mentioned, ver. 4. and a more particular declaration of the manner and means by which they did or ſhould effect that miſchief, which is ſaid was or ſhould be done by them. Thoſe inſtruments of God's wrath before-named, the Palmer-worm, Locuſt, Canker-worm, and Caterpiller, are here for their condition called גוי, a nation ſtrong and without number, whoſe teeth are like the teeth of a lion, &c. Their being ſo called ſeems to Some an argument, that by the names before given, are not properly and literally meant thoſe noxious worms thereby uſually known; but men as hurtful as they, thoſe cruel enemies by God ſent to invade and ſpoil the land. So Abarbinel לא אמר הנביא זה באמת על הארבה כי איך יקראהו גוי וקהל גוים אבל אמרו על האויבים שעלו על הארץ להשחיתה, i. e. The Prophet doth not ſpeak this really of the Locuſts; for how ſhould he call them a nation and multitude of nations? but he ſpeaks it of ſuch enemies as came upon the land to deſtroy it: but his argument, taken from the attributing that name to them, ſeems not to be of force. That name though (perhaps moſt properly and uſually) attributed to a multitude of men, yet may not unfitly be attributed to other creatures alſo, as well as עם am, a people, is, Prov. xxx. 25, &c. and thoſe ſame alſo in the next chapter, ver. 2. and therefore it is perhaps not without reaſon obſerved by Kimchi, that כל קבוץ מן החי יקרא גוי any congregation, or multitude of living creatures is called גוי Goi, a nation. So in other languages alſo are the names of nation and people obſerved to be taken and applied to other creatures as well as men, and particularly this of nation to the very ſame that are here ſo called, namely Locuſts, as appears by examples brought out of ſeveral Authors by the learned Bochartus, and among Others in the Arab. Language, wherein امة Ommaton nation, is uſed for a company of any living creatures, and among them for Locuſts alſo, as in that ſaying aſcribed to Mahomet, that God created a thouſand nations, 600 of which are in the ſea, 400 on the land, and that اول هلاك the firſt that ſhall periſh of theſe nations (for ſo I take theſe words to mean not prima peſtis, the firſt or chief plague, as Bochartus renders it) are the Locuſts, after which the reſt ſhall periſh in order: ſo that it is well ſaid by R. Tanchum (although he be inclinable to take it in another way) of the word, that it is استعارة للجراد لكثرته وعظيم افساده a metaphorical expreſſion of Locuſts in regard to their multitude, and the much ſpoil that they make. And there is no reaſon that becauſe they are ſo called, to ſay, it is not meant of Locuſts what is ſaid in the foregoing verſe, as Abarbinel will; nor yet that though there Locuſts be ſpoken of, yet here are Others meant to whom that appellation may more properly agree, as [y] Others think, viz. enemies: neither are they ſimply called a nation, but with addition of ſuch epithets as may make them very conſiderable among nations, and terrible to others, viz. that they are ſtrong and without number, whoſe teeth are like thoſe of a lion, ſtrong; though the creatures named ſeem in themſelves ſingly weak and contemptible, yet ſure [z] when by God armed, and ſent with his commiſſion for executing his judgments, that the ſtrongeſt nation among men is not able to reſiſt them, appears by what is here ſaid was done in what follows, and by what was done by them in Egypt of old. Nihil enim leve aut infirmum eſt quod Deus contra nos armat. For there is nothing contemptible or weak that God arms againſt us. What wants in their ſtrength taken ſingly, is made up by their multitude, which uſually is very great; ſo that ſome ſorts of them are (as above was intimated) looked on as thence having their name; and ſimilitudes are taken from them to deſcribe great numbers, Judges vi. 5. and vii. 12. Jer. xlvi. 23. and here therefore is added that they are without number. It is alſo added to ſhew how they are by God armed for executing his will, that their teeth are the teeth of a lion, and they have the cheek-teeth of a great lion, which 'tis well known how terrible they are, and what hurt they will do. The like compariſon have we, Rev. ix. 8. where of thoſe Locuſts there deſcribed it is ſaid that their teeth were as the teeth of lions. In ſaying that the teeth of thoſe little vermin were the teeth of a lion, and that they had the cheek-teeth of a great lion, is a manifeſt hyperbole, to ſet forth the ſtrength and [a] ſharpneſs and [b] power of doing hurt that even their ſmaller teeth have, chiefly if we ſhall conſider what great miſchief they have been known to do with them, eating not only green tender things, but omnia morſu erodentes, dentes, etiam fores tectorum (as Pliny ſpeaks) gnawing in pieces all things, even the doors of houſes; ſo that there is good reaſon for the expreſſion and compariſon, though between creatures otherwiſe ſo different in bigneſs and ſtrength. The hyperbole is heightned for expreſſing their great force and power of doing miſchief, by ſaying not only the teeth of a lion, but even the cheek-teeth of a great lion, ſo as to ſhew the ſharpeſt and ſtrongeſt in that kind to be meant; they have not only שנים Shinnaim, ſharp cutting teeth, and thoſe as of an ordinary lion, but מתעלות Matlaoth, ſtrong grinding teeth, and thoſe as of a great and full grown lion. As to the word מתלעות Matlaoth rendred cheek-teeth we may obſerve that it is elſewhere with a different placing the letters מלתעות Maltaoth (as Pſalm lviii. 6.) The word לביא Labi, by Ours here rendred a great lion, is by Others rendred otherwiſe. The Chaldee Paraphraſt hath כבר-אריון as of a ſon of lions, and the Greek, Vulgar Latin, Syriack, and printed Arabick, all underſtand by it a lion's whelp. Againſt the propriety of which rendring is by [c] Some obſerved to be a valid proof of what is ſaid, Job iv. 11. where is read בני לביא Bene Labi, which Ours render, the ſtout lions whelps, where that called Labi is manifeſtly diſtinguiſhed from thoſe that are called whelps, as older and bigger. [d] Others on the other hand render here, vetuli Leonis, of an old lion; againſt which alſo exceptions are taken, becauſe an old lion, [e] non habet dentes validos, hath not ſtrong teeth, whereas the ſtrongeſt in that kind ſeem here to be alluded to. Others render it, [f] Leænæ of a Lioneſs (as the Vulgar alſo in other places renders it) which rendring two great men of the laſt age Grotius and [g] Bochartus ſeem to prefer, and think it proved from the uſe of the word لبوة Labwat, which as لباة Labah and لبية Labiyah, and the like in the Arabick Tongue, are particularly ſpoken of the female, not the male. But whether that be a ſufficient argument to prove that לביא Labi in the Hebrew, which is of a form agreeing to the maſculine, ſhould therefore be proper to the female, becauſe thoſe names which are of form feminine are in the Arabick ſo, though no name from that root ſhould be uſed of the male, I know not. Yet can I not ſay but that in that language alſo the maſculine as well as the feminine is known, though not of ſo frequent uſe. For in the MS. Arabick Tranſlation we ſeem to find it, who renders ואניאב אללבולה, and in Arab. letters وانياب اللبو له Waanyab allabui laho, and it hath the long teeth of a Labu, which why ſhall we not render, it being in form maſculine, without that note of feminine termination which the other hath, as diſtinct from it, in the maſculine, of a lion? but this, as to the ſenſe here, will not much make or marr, a ſhe lion being accounted as fierce as the male, and not the ſex, but the ſtrength, being alluded to in this expreſſion. That chief Hebrew Grammarian Abu Walid ſaith that it is uſually ſaid that [h] לבו Labuo in the Arabick Tongue is alſo a lion, but that he had not found it in any authentick books that he could rely on. But however it be as to the Arab. Tongue, whether this name be uſed in it only in the feminine gender for a lioneſs, or in the maſculine alſo for a lion, this is no cogent argument to prove that in the Hebrew Tongue it ſhould be in the maſculine form taken to ſignify only the female ſex. I think it more reaſonable to ſay with Kimchi that in it the maſculine form Labi doth denote a lion, eſpecially it having a feminine form of the ſame word for a lioneſs, which occurs Ezek. xix. 2. לביא, which, though written with the ſame letters as Labi, is otherwiſe voweled, viz. Lebiya, which according to Abu Walid and Kimchi is the ſame that לביאה Lebiah in a more uſual and regular form would be; which why it ſhould be excepted againſt, as by the learned Bochartus it is, I ſee no reaſon, but think, that from the beginning it was ſo read and known in that form for the female, whereas in all other places where it is read Labi, it will ſeem more properly to agree to the male, as it is by the forecited Hebrew Grammarians and Others generally underſtood. And we have making for this the plural maſculine לבאים Lebaim from the one, and the feminine לבאות Lebaoth from the other. Here, as we ſaid, we need not be put to any queſtion concerning diſtinction of ſex, but only on the conſideration of the ſtrength of the noble creature named: in reſpect to which it is moſt generally agreed that this name is attributed only to a lion of full growth and ſtrength, not to a [i] whelp which is not yet come to that, nor to a decrepit old one, which is paſt it, and therefore ſeems well rendred here by [k] Others, a great lion, though elſewhere they render it ſimply a lion, as Hoſea xiii. 8. it is noted by Kimchi to be גדול מן האריה one bigger or of greater force than the word Aryeh going before it (being a more general name for any lion) doth neceſſarily import: being ſo placed as to heighten the compariſon made, between the teeth of thoſe ſeeming weak creatures, and this ſtrongeſt of beaſts, as to their power in doing miſchief, their teeth being not only ſuch as of an ordinary lion, but ſuch as is come to that bigneſs, age, and ſtrength, as to be called Labi. If thoſe inſects the Locuſts, &c. in the foregoing words named, be (as we have interpreted them) literally underſtood by the names given them, ſo then will alſo their teeth, and cheek-teeth, properly be underſtood of ſuch as they have; but if by thoſe names be underſtood thoſe enemies which Abarbinel and Others underſtand, then by teeth and cheek-teeth muſt ſomething elſe be underſtood in thoſe enemies, that may be likened to them, wherein their force and power of doing miſchief doth conſiſt.

[x] Kimchi. [y] Calvin. [z] See Gualter. [a] Bochart. [b] So elſewhere things of great force to do hurt, are compared to the teeth of a lion, Eccleſ. xxi. 2. Pſalm lviii. 6.

[c] Lively, Druſ. [d] Caſtal. and French cited by Druſ. [e] Druſ. [f] Tigur. [g] De Animal. part 1. p. 719. [h] The laſt letter in the MS. is almoſt worn out, but I think it can be no other by the ſpace, if it were א it would be the ſame thing, but the room will ſcarce permit. [i] Except we may think that by lions whelps, they had reſpect to the kind, not the age. [k] Jun. Trem. Immanis Leonis

ſiſt. [l] Arias Montanus therefore thinks thereby to be denoted their weapons, ſome for ſharpneſs, as ſwords, ſpears and arrows; others for their greater force, as rams for battery, &c. Jerome thinks it enough that it be in general taken to expreſs ferocitatem & crudelitatem, their fierceneſs and cruelty; and ſo Abarbinel, that it is רמז לכחו ועצמו an expreſſion intimating their force and ſtrength. Grot. Rapiditas hic ſignificatur.

The executioners of God's judgments being thus deſcribed, as to their quality and condition, their force and power of doing miſchief, the manner of the execution thereof is alſo declared; while he ſaith he is come up upon my land, he hath laid my vine waſte, &c. He is come up upon the land with irreſiſtible force, none being able to reſiſt or repel him, or hinder him from doing what is ſaid he did. Upon my land, ſaith he, whoever he be that ſpeaketh, and hath laid my vine waſte, and barked my fig-tree. Here comes in our way a queſtion from the pronoun affixed in theſe words, being of the firſt perſon; he not ſaying indefinitely the land, the vine, &c. but as an owner thereof, my land, &c. who it is that thus challengeth the right of theſe things to himſelf, and ſo is to be looked on as utterer of theſe words. Kimchi ſeeing the conſtruction ambiguous ſaith כל הכנויים הם דברי יושב הארץ או הם דברי הנביא all theſe pronouns ſhew the words to be either the words of the inhabitants of the land, or the words of the Prophet. [m] Others add another member, theſe words may either be verba Dei, vel Prophetæ, vel ipſius etiam populi, the words of God, or of the Prophet, or of the people themſelves. And ſo Druſius, Deus loquitur, aut Propheta, aut quilibet è populo dicet. God thus ſpeaks, or the Prophet, or any one of the people ſhall ſay. That the words are uttered by the Prophet by the Lord's order, there is no doubt, but whether he ſo ſpeak them as to repreſent the Lord ſpeaking, or the people, is the queſtion, ſeeing each of theſe might ſay of the land, my land, and call the other things, mine. If he perſonate the Lord ſpeaking, and give his words, then will they be a declaration of what he had ſent, or purpoſed to ſend upon the land, which by a more peculiar right, with the things therein, were by him owned as his, though in ſuch relation to him, and therefore might be thought ſhould be taken ſpecial care of by him (as he ſaith, his eyes were upon it always, from the beginning of the year, even unto the end of the year, Deut. xi. 12.) yet that even that now was for the wickedneſs of the inhabitants given up to deſtruction, and to be laid waſte. Which being brought to their conſideration could not certainly, except they were very [n] ſtupid, but awaken them, and make them ſenſible of the condition they had brought themſelves to, by provoking God to caſt them off, and put them out of that peculiar care which he was wont to have of them, and ſo ſtirs them up to ſeek to regain his favour by ſpeedy repentance, to call them to which ſeems the main drift of this part of the prophecy.

If he ſpeak as in his own perſon, then may they be looked on as his publiſhing what he had received from God to denounce to the people, to make them ſenſible of the miſeries that they had pulled on themſelves, and a bewailing of them; if as in the perſon of the people or any of them, then may they be as a form of lamentation by him put into their mouths, whereby they would or ſhould bewail their ſufferings, by an enumeration of ſuch grievous things which befel them, and could not but extort from them ſuch laments. [o] So Mercer thinks that from the words, Awake, ye drunkards, &c. is lamentationis formula, a form of lamentation. To which ſoever of theſe perſons the pronoun be aſſigned, the thing will be the ſame, The land, the land of Judea, and the trees, the trees that grew therein. That was the Lord's land, Hoſea ix. 3. that the Prophet's land of his nativity and habitation, the people's land of their inheritance; each of them might challenge ſo much right in it as to call it, mine, and for the ſame reaſon ſo to call the things that grew in it, theirs.

What befel, or ſhould befal this land, and the things in it from that nation ſaid to be come up upon it, is farther deſcribed in the following words.

7. He hath laid my vine waſte, and barked my fig-tree: he hath made it clean bare, and caſt it away, the branches thereof are made white.

He hath laid my vine waſte, &c.] or turned into deſolation my vine; he hath by eating, gnawing, or other means ſo marred it, as to be become altogether unprofitable, not yielding any fruit but cumbering only the ground. The Vulgar Latin renders it, Poſuit vineam meam in deſertum, he hath laid my vineyard into a deſert, as the Doway Tranſlators render it. Of which Druſius ſaith that it is minus rectè, not ſo well, the word גפן Gephen more properly ſignifying a vine, as כרם Cerem a vineyard; yet it is not certain that that was his meaning, ſeeing vinea may as well ſignify a vine as a vineyard. However a vineyard being but more vines, the thing will be all one: and of them that take it in the particular notion of a vine, do ſeveral render it in the plural, [p] vites meas, my vines, as looking on the noun to be [q] collectively taken, not only for one ſingle vine, but for more or all of that kind, all which this hurtful nation of vermin hath laid waſte; and ſo likewiſe will [r] they have the following word, fig-tree, alſo taken for fig-trees, to which to expreſs farther what miſchief was or ſhould be done, he ſaith, and barked my fig-tree, or, as the Margin hath it, for a more literal expreſſion of the Hebrew words, ותנאתי לקצפרה Uteenati Liktſapha, laid my fig-tree for a barking. In the ſame notion doth the Vulgar Latin take the word,

&

[l] And Tirinus. [m] Pet. à Fig. [n] See Calv. [o] So Tarnov. ſaith theſe words were put into the mouth of every one of the Jews, in which to utter his complaint of what befel. [p] Jun. & Trem. [q] Merc. [r] Druſ.

& ficum meam decorticavit, juſt the ſame that Ours have in the Text, (which the Doway render, and he hath peeled off the bark of my fig-tree.) In the ſame likewiſe other more modern Tranſlators, & ficum meam in decorticationem, which is that which the Margin of our Bibles hath. Kimchi alſo mentions the ſame as the opinion of Some, viz. that קצפרה Ketſapha, ſhould be the ſame with קליפרה Keliphah, barking, as he ſaith that קצף Ketſeph, may alſo ſignify, Hoſea x. 7. the bark of a tree; and in his book of roots mentioning the ſame, adds as the cauſe of it, שנקלפרה מרוב היובש when it is barked by reaſon of much dryneſs. So Vatablus, præ nimia ſcil. ſiccitate & ariditate, vel quod Locuſta decorticavit & comedit eam, viz. when the bark comes off through overmuch drought and heat, or becauſe the Locuſt hath peeled off the bark and eaten it. But ſeveral other notions of the word are there here given by other Interpreters both ancient and modern: R. Tanchum rendring it by تشويط والحراق ſcorching and burning, and ſo before him Abu Walid explaining the word by شوطه واحرقه he hath ſcorched or burnt it; which ſignification to agree to the word R. Tanchum proves from the frequent uſe of Scripture, of the roots and forms thence derived for burning or boiling heat of anger; which notion if agreeing to the word, we may look on as well agreeing to the thing, it being obſerved by thoſe [s] that write of the nature of things to be a property of Locuſts, multa contactu adurere, to burn, parch, or ſcorch many things by their touch. So that trees do [t] ejus contactu perire & exareſcere, by the touch of them periſh, and dry up or wither. And to this notion of heat, and burning of anger, reſpect is had by Others alſo, who render it (as the [u] MS. Arab.) شخط anger; or as Kimchi לקצף ולזעם ולמארה to anger and indignation, and a curſe? i. e. as Mercer thinks, to ſuch a condition as cauſeth in the owner iracundiam & mœrorem intolerandum, anger and intolerable grief: or we may ſay ſuch, as is a ſign of God's [w] wrath, or curſe towards it, or the owner of it, as if bringing it to ſuch a condition as the [x] fig-tree was brought to by our Saviour's curſe. Beſides this notion of the word, it hath alſo another, of foaming and frothing, which [y] Some look on as the primary ſignification of it, and from whence the other of foaming anger they take to be derived; and this Others having reſpect to give another different rendring, viz. in [z] Spumam hath turned into froth, as Vatablus obſerves ſome of the Jews to do; and others conſonantly [a] in clavum, or fungum, into a toad-ſtool, (or the like) cauſed by the froth, or moiſture, not rightly diffuſing it ſelf into all parts of the tree, by reaſon of ſome impediment or drought, but breaking forth in the lower parts of the tree into ſuch excreſcencies, being from the froth or reſembling it, as Grotius ſpeaks, Hebræa vox ſpumam ſignificat, & ſic videntur per ſimilitudinem appellari clavi arborum, that the Hebrew word ſignifies froth and foam, and that by way of likeneſs the muſhrooms in trees are ſo called. To this may be referred that expoſition of Aben Ezra, who taking this word to be of the ſame notion with קצף Kitſeph, Hoſea x. 7. where Ours tranſlate it, foam, ſaith that it is a thing שאין בו ממש in which is no ſolid ſubſtance, res nihili, a thing of nought, as Buxtorf in his leſſer Dictionary renders it, in which regard, according [b] to him, would the Chaldee Paraphraſe go this way, who renders [c] למפחת נפש efflationem animæ, (as Mercer, or as Others) exhalationem animæ, i. e. a puffing out of the breath: which according to Some, is as he notes, as much as to ſay nihilum, or leviſſimum, a thing of nought, or very light thing, quod anhelitu diffiatur, which is blown away with a puff of breath: except with Others, as he ſaith, we take them to expreſs and denote a breathing out of the ſoul, that ſo it ſhould ſound, in mœrorem quo anima tandem efflatur, into ſorrow through which the very ſoul is breathed forth, or ſorrowful ſighing, viz. [d] for the great loſs ſuſtained; and if it be ſo taken, then will it be manifeſt that he hath rather reſpect to the former ſignification of the word, viz. that of heat or anger, which as well as ſorrow cauſeth puffing, blowing, and ſighing, eſpecially when they meet together, produced by the ſame occaſion, as here, where was ſuch deſtruction, ſo that they may be both jointly underſtood.

The LXX. yet differently render καὶ τὰς συκάς μου εἰς [e] συγκλασμόν, & ficus meas in confractionem, and lay my fig-trees into a breaking to pieces, (or and break in pieces) with which agree likewiſe the Syriack ܠܦܫܘܫܐ Lephuſhoco (which the Latin renders ad divulſionem, to plucking in pieces) and the printed Arab. leltaphſich للتفسيخ ad diſcerptionem, to tearing in pieces, which Bochartus looks on as the moſt proper ſignification of the word, confirming it from the uſe of it in the Arab. Tongue, in which قصف Kaſapha ſignifies to break (and that properly the bough of a tree which ſo broken is therefore called قصيف Kaſiph) as if the meaning were that thoſe Locuſts did, by eating and gnawing, break into pieces the boughs of the fig-trees. In this they are not wide from that rendring, which Ours chooſe to follow, viz. that of barking, only that breaking ſeems to imply, the breaking of the wood as well as the rinde, but barking that of the rinde or barke only; both are breaking, and ſo therefore may we well adhere to that tranſlation, which our Tranſlators after Others give us, extending it yet ſo far as to comprehend the gnawing, and ſo breaking breaking into pieces the [f] tender boughs, which to be done by the Locuſts as well as the other we cannot doubt. Againſt the literal underſtanding theſe words, [g] one mentions as a probable argument, that it cannot but ſeem ſtrange, that Locuſts ſhould ordinarily hurt or eat the leaves of fig-trees, much leſs the bark thereof, becauſe of the bitterneſs thereof, and therefore that it is probable according to Jerome that it ſhould not be properly to be underſtood of Locuſts, but of the hurt done by their Babyloniſh enemies to them and their land; or if it be underſtood of Locuſts properly, it muſt argue tantam fuiſſe ipſarum voracitatem, that ſo great and extraordinary was the greedineſs of theſe Locuſts, that they ſpared not either the leaves or the bark even of the fig-tree. But this objection is by [h] Others quite taken away, who from what is found by experience, and obſerved by writers of the nature of things, affirm on the contrary that the vine and fig-tree are particularly named, quia Bruchi & Locuſtæ utrique infeſti ſunt, becauſe the Caterpillers and Locuſts are very hurtful to both of them. It follows in the deſcription of the miſchief thereto done, He hath made it clean bare and caſt it away, &c. [It] the affixe following immediately the noun fig-tree will be neceſſarily referred to it; but as Kimchi thinks, not to it alone, but alſo to the other noun, vine preceding, ſo as that what is done may be underſtood as done to [i] both, and ſo do [k] Some therefore render it, eat them. It, then (or them) the fig-tree, or both vine and fig-tree, חשוף חשף Caſhoph caſhaph, and ſo the MSS. Arabick תקשיר קשרהא by making bare he (called the nation) hath made bare, i. e. as Ours, hath made clean bare. By that the Chaldee thinks to be meant, the gnawing the bark off, rendring it מקלף קלף barking, hath barked it; but Bochartus thinks that by making bare, that is not neceſſary to be underſtood, it being ſufficient for making good that expreſſion, that a tree be ſpoiled of its leaves, fruit, and bloſſom, though not of its bark. The LXX. renders it ἐρευνῶν ἐξηρέυνησεν αὐτὴν, ſcrutans ſcrutatus eſt eam, as likewiſe the printed Arab. فتشت تفتيشا Scrutata eſt ſcrutando (i. e. as the Latin Tranſlator of it gives it, diligenter ſcrutata eſt, hath narrowly ſearched into it) this makes [l] Some to conjecture that they read not as now it is read in the Hebrew חשוף חשפה Chaſoph Chaſapha, but חפש חפשה Caphos Chapha ſah, by tranſpoſition of the letters, ſeeing that Caphas is more frequently uſed in that ſignification of ſearching: but I know not why Caphas having confeſſedly both thoſe ſignifications of uncovering and making bare, we may not think that Caſaph alſo agreeing with it in the one, might anciently be looked on as agreeing with it in the other alſo. Beſides that the notions are not ſo wide one from the other, but the one may denote the other, things being laid open and made bare, that they may be ſearched into, and ſo thoſe Locuſts might make bare the fig-tree, that they might ſearch after the utmoſt of ſuch food, as it might afford them. The Syriack without repeating the word hath only ܦܠܫܬ divulſit eam, plucked it aſunder.

[s] Plin. ſee Bochart. [t] Bochart. [u] Which he notes that he prefers before what Others render it by, viz. غمر Gamo ſorrow. [w] Petr. à Fig. [x] Mat. xxi. 19. [y] Nic. Fuller in concord. [z] Bux. lex. Tarnov. [a] Jun. Tr. Grot. Tarn. [b] In his greater Dictionary. [c] See Job ii. 26. [d] In dolorem animæ, eſt enim gravis dolor, cum fruges & arbores devaſtantur, Pet. à Fig. In efflat. animæ, i. e. tantam vaſtitatem ob quam non immerito quis animam abjiciat vel deſpondeat. Tarnov [e] Bibl. Polyglott. for Others read otherwiſe γλυκυσμόν, which Druſius obſerves to be ill done.

It follows והשליך Vehiſhlic, and caſt away, where Ours add it, as underſtood, viz. It which they have gnawed, and chewed of the leaves, fruit or bark, letting fall what they have not ſwallowed thereof, that bark having ſucked away the moiſture that is between the bark and the wood, of which [ſaith Kimchi referring it to the vine,] having eaten the leaves they let the green grapes fall to the ground; and by means of what they have done הלבינו שריגיה Hilbinu ſharigeha, the branches thereof (of vine or fig-tree) are made white. The verb, though of a form uſually tranſitive, yet here intranſitively taken, made white, viz. either becauſe the bark and all that is green being eaten off, the bare wood which is white appeareth as Some take it; or becauſe, as Others, the [m] bark it ſelf, or leaves and ſprouts being by the touch, and ſucking of noxious vermin marred, and made rotten looſe their verdure, and grow white: we may well comprehend all; the word being a deſcription of the great hurt, that thoſe noxious vermin do to thoſe trees, which they ſeize on. And what is here ſaid to happen to the vine and fig-tree, may well be thought to be underſtood of all trees alſo, as more are named, ver. 12. theſe may ſeem eſpecially named as of moſt uſe and profit, the ſpoiling of which might therefore be looked on as a greater calamity, than the miſcarrying of other trees. Some think theſe particularly mentioned as ſuch, in the ſweet fruits of which the drunkards mentioned, ver. 5. took more delight, and therefore would be moſt affected with, and moſt ſenſible of the loſs.

The word שריגים Sharigim, by Ours rendred branches, as by the Vulgar rami, and by Others to the like meaning, is by Junius and Tremellius rendred, botri illarum, their cluſters, viz. their green grapes, which being robbed of their juice grow wan and white. Piſcator cenſures them for it, both in that they refer it to the vine, whereas he thinks it more properly to belong to the fig-tree, and becauſe they render that by cluſters of green grapes, which more properly ſignifies palmites, vine-branches; himſelf renders it albæ evaſerunt frondes earum, the leaves thereof are become white, thinking the word though properly ſignifying as he ſaid, yet molli metaphora, by a gentle or eaſy metaphor, to be transferred to denote the leaves of the fig-tree, which he looks on as here peculiarly ſpoken of, and the pronoun to belong to it. Abu Walid compares the word with the root سرى Saraa in Arabick, which is uſed for twigs or branches اذا امتدت when they ſtretch forth themſelves. The [n] chief Arabick Lexicographer ſaith, that the noun سرو Sarao ſignifies ſignifies قضب الكرم للغض لسنته tender boughs of the vine, of the firſt year, or كل قضيب رطب any moiſt (or green) twig. The ſame tells us that السرغ arſargo, with غ g (which comes nearer to the Hebrew in ſound) is قضيب الكرم the twig (or branch) of a vine. They that look more nicely into the Hebrew root, will have it properly to ſignify ſuch [o] boughs as interweave, or intangle one with another, as thoſe of the vine are apt to do; yet uſed for branches in general.

[f] Bochart. [g] Pet. à Fig. [h] Bochart. de Animal. part. poſt. p. 469. [i] Ar. Mont. [k] Jun. Trem. [l] Merc. Druſ. [m] Bochart. part 2. p. 469. [n] The Author of Kamus.

By the words thus explained, and taken in their proper ſignifications, we have the literal meaning of this verſe alſo, agreeable to the foregoing, as a declaration of what was ſo done, or to be done, as is deſcribed by thoſe hurtful worms to the trees and fruits of the land: in which way it is by many taken; but thoſe who take the preceding words in an allegorical way, here alſo continue the ſame figure, and according to them, by the vine or vineyard, and fig-tree, are ſignified the people of the Jews, (of whom it is ſaid, Iſaiah v. 7. The vineyard of the Lord of hoſts is the houſe of Iſrael, and the men of Judah his pleaſant plant,) and by the vines being laid waſte, and the fig-tree barked (or made an indignation or curſe) and both being made bare, and caſt away, and the branches thereof made white by the Locuſts, and other vermin named, to be meant the deſtruction brought on that people by the enemy, their being deprived of their honour and good things they enjoyed, and their being carried into captivity, and made poor and deſolate. So among the Jews Abarbinel, and among the Chriſtians [p] ſeveral.

8. Lament like a virgin girded with ſackcloth for the huſband of her youth.

What reaſon there was for thoſe whom he before ſpake to, and particularly names, drunkards, and drinkers of wine, ſuch who give themſelves to luxury and pleaſure, to weep and howl, viz. becauſe they were deprived of thoſe fruits, in which they took pleaſure and delight, is manifeſt; but the miſchief did not only redound to them, but to others more ſerious and ſober, and that in reſpect of things moſt highly concerning them, to wit, not in what concerned their bodily comforts, or pleaſures only, but as to what concerned them in their performing the due ſervice of God, according to what was then by the law injoined, and required from them; in that they were diſabled to perform that; and therefore to theſe alſo, even to the whole people, doth he now addreſs his ſpeech, and call on them alſo to conſider what is befallen them, and lay it well to heart; Lament like a virgin, &c.] The verbs in ver. 5. were of the plural number, and ſo the nouns to which they refer, but this here of the ſingular, and of the feminine gender, requiring a noun of the ſame conditions, which being not expreſſed is neceſſarily to be underſtood; which Kimchi with the Chaldee Paraphraſt not improbably ſuppoſeth to be כנסת ישראל the congregation of Iſrael. Aben Ezra thinks it may be either ארמה ô land, or נפשי Naphſhi, my ſoul. R. Tanchum בת ציון او ما يشبه ذلك ô daughter of Zion, or ſomething like. To expreſs what great ſorrow the calamity befallen, or to befal her, deſerves, or may extort from her, for aggravation's ſake he expreſſeth himſelf by a comparative expreſſion drawn from ſuch, as in that kind uſeth to be among the higheſt, bidding her to lament not like an ordinary perſon, and on ordinary occaſion, but like a virgin girded with ſackcloth for the huſband of her youth, i. e. as one that being a young virgin was married to a huſband ſuitable to her, and hath untimely loſt him, and ſo cannot but be ſuppoſed to conceive the greateſt ſorrow for his loſs, and by the moſt evident outward tokens, as (according to the cuſtom of thoſe times, as appears by many expreſſions and examples in Scripture) the putting on of ſackcloth, and doleful lamentations to expreſs it.

That the nouns which we here have בתולה Betulah, rendred a virgin, and בעל Baal rendred a huſband, do ſo properly ſignify as they are rendred, there is no queſtion; yet the ſenſe ſeems here to require, that the one of them at leaſt be not ſo ſtrictly taken; for how ſhall ſhe be properly called a virgin, which hath had a huſband, and known the marriage bed? This makes that Some take the one in a larger notion, Some the other, as either that the firſt ſhould not denote ſtrictly a virgin, but a [q] young woman that had been ſo till of late married; or elſe the ſecond, not only a huſband actually married, but one that was contracted to a woman, though the ceremonies of marriage were not yet completed betwixt them. Among thoſe that take the firſt way is Kimchi, who giveth this plain expoſition of the words, He ſpeaks this as to the congregation of Iſrael, Lament for this evil, and make great mourning, as a virgin that is given in marriage to a young man, and he dieth while ſhe is yet a girl, becauſe then is the time of their having greateſt joy [r] one of another, and therefore if he die ſhe grievouſly mourneth, and putteth on ſackcloth inſtead of her attire and ornaments: and this way [s] ſeveral follow as the plaineſt; Others keeping this noun in its ſtricteſt ſignification, inlarge the notion of the other, and take it here to denote not ſtrictly an [t] huſband, but more largely one that that hath indeed ſet his affections on a woman, and is eſpouſed or contracted to her, but not yet married: ſo Piſcator by huſband here ſaith to be underſtood, is qui uxorem virginem ſibi deſpondit quidem, ſed nondum cum ea conſuevit, quippe mortuus ante conſuetudinem conjugalem. One that hath eſpouſed indeed to himſelf a virgin but hath not yet kept her company, viz. as dying before the uſe of the marriage-bed: of this opinion ſeems the Author of the MS. Arabick Verſion, though not ſo much from any thing in his rendring the latter noun, which he rendreth زوج an huſband, as from his rendring the firſt عاتق which ſignifies a girl ripe for marriage, but not yet ſeparated from her parents to abide with her deſigned huſband; لم تبن من اهلها الي زوج, Jauhari. Another thing in Piſcator obſervable is, that what Ours with Others render the huſband of her youth, which ſounds to whom ſhe was married in her youth, he would have to ſound literally, maritum juventutis ſuum, her huſband of youth, and ſo means, maritum juvenem ſuum, her young huſband, that ſo the age of her huſband ſhould be pointed out by it, not that of the ſpouſe; in which Grotius ſeems to agree with him, while he explains the words, Solent enim mariti à fœminis magis amari, quibus adoleſcentulis adhuc nuptæ ſunt. For huſbands are wont to be more loved of women, to whom being yet young men they were married; but this conſtruction though there be ſome examples brought of it, yet is certainly more harſh than the other, and I know not whether it be more or ſo much conducing to the matter here intended, viz. for the expreſſion of the greatneſs of ſuch ſorrow, as is uſually found in ſuch a perſon as is here deſcribed, a virgin (eſpouſed, or a young woman) lately married, that hath loſt by untimely death her (ſpouſe or) huſband. We may well think the tenderneſs of her own years to confer as much to the greatneſs of her paſſions, as the youth of her huſband: as to the matter, both may here ſeem intimated, a young woman looſing a young huſband, whom ſhe moſt paſſionately loved, and ſo bitterly lamenting his death, and ſhewing all ſigns of grief for him, ſo that from her behaviour is aptly taken a compariſon, [u] ad graviſſimum luctum arguendum, to deſcribe very grievous mourning.

[o] Ramus tortilis atque implexus. Etenim Radix hæc proprie ſonat perplecti, implicari, contorqueri. Nic. Fuller. Cap. Concord. [p] Ar. Mont. Chriſt. à Caſtro. Brent. [q] And that בתולה ſo ſignifies, Some think proved by what is added to it when it is ſpoken of Rebekah, Gen. xxiv. 16. neither had any man known her, if the bare name ſtrictly ſignified ſuch a one as had not been known by a man, why ſhould this be added to deſcribe a pure virgin? Druſ. [r] So Ab. Ezra, בימי שמחתה in the days of her joy. [s] Betulah ætatis hoc non integretatis nomen. Merc. Lively, and Druſ. [t] Mercer ſeems not conſtant to himſelf, ſaying in his firſt Notes on this verſe, that Baal properly ſignifies Amaſium, a lover, not maritum, an husband. But in his latter Notes, that it ſignifies non Amaſium, not a lover; but maritum, qui jus habet in uxorem, an husband which hath full right to the wife. And ſo in his former Notes on Hoſea ii. 18. he ſaith that Baal doth ſignify both Dominum & Amaſium, a lord and a lover; and in his latter, that what Some ſay that Baal doth in Hebrew ſignify Amaſium, a lover, falſum eſt, is falſe.

The Greek ſomething differently in words from Others, though not in meaning, renders, Θρήνησον πρὸς μὲ ὑπὲρ νύμφην περιεζωσμένην σάκκον, ἐπὶ τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς τὸν παρθενικόν, and the printed Arabick following it, نوحي علي اكثر من عروس انتزرت بالمسوح علي رجلها العذروي, and the ancient Latin Tranſlation of the LXX. renders it, Plange ad me ſuper ſponſum accinctum cilicio, ſuper virum ſuum virgineum, which in Engliſh muſt ſound, Lament to me above, (or more than) a bride, (or new married woman) girded with ſackcloth, for her virgin husband, in which verſion there is added πρὸς μὲ, to me, above what is found in the Hebrew; of which Druſius conjectures the cauſe to be a double tranſlation of the word אלי Eli, which ſo read, ſignifies, Lament, but with the ſame letters, Elai, to me, and both of theſe by ſome ſcribe anciently to have been put in together; ſo that for reducing it to agree with the Hebrew, he ſuppoſeth the ſecond ought to be put out; he likewiſe ſuppoſeth that whereas they read ὑπὲρ νύμφην, which muſt be rendred, above, or more than, a new married woman, it was at firſt written ὥσπερ, like as, agreeably to the Hebrew word כבתולה Cibtulah, and by a miſtake of the ſcribe changed into ὑπὲρ: by ἄνδρα αὐτῆς τ παρθενικόν, her virgin huſband, Jerome, as Others, will have underſtood, her firſt huſband, which married her when ſhe was yet a virgin, [w] ſo called, quod primus florem virginitatis abſtulerit.

What Abarbinel takes to be alluded to, by taking this compariſon from a virgin in ſuch condition as is deſcribed, appears by his explication of the words, Lament thou, O congregation of Iſrael, which wert as a virgin, in as much as no people had dominion over thee, and gird thee with ſackcloth for the huſband of thy youth, which is God (bleſſed for ever) becauſe his majeſtick preſence is departed from thee. This he may ſeem to have taken from Jerome, who hath much [x] the ſame conceit.

9. The meat-offering, and drink-offering is cut off from the houſe of the Lord, the Prieſts, the Lord's miniſters mourn.

According to the plain literal meaning of the words, here is a declaration of the cauſe which they had of lamenting in that manner which he mentioned, even the whole congregation of them. Although Aben Ezra looks on it, as ſtill more particularly concerning the drunkards before mentioned, as if it were a confirmation of what he ſaid, that the wine ſhould be cut off from their mouths, as if he ſhould ſay, How ſhall you think to find wine [for exceſs] when as the meat-offering and drink-offering, the neceſſary duty or oblation of the whole congregation, which, if there were wherewith to perform it, ought not to be omitted, is cut off from the houſe of the Lord [there being nothing whereby to offer it] ſo that the prieſts, the Lord's miniſters are forced to mourn for want of it? but we may rather think that this is a new addreſs to the whole congregation, ſhewing what reaſon not only the drunkards, who could not be ſatisfied with what is ſufficient, but even they who did not require more than what was requiſite for neceſſary uſes, and even that without which they could not perform their duty to God, which they ought to have more regard to than any thing that concerned their own particular profit, or pleaſure, was cut off from them, had to lament of: this meat-offering and drink-offering he ſaith is cut off, viz. (according to the literal ſenſe of the former words) becauſe thoſe noxious vermin (mentioned ver. 4.) had had devoured thoſe fruits of the earth of which they were to be. The מנחה minchah, or meat-offering, of what it conſiſted, and how made, we have it deſcribed in Levit. ii. 1, &c. and vi. 14, &c. Numb. xv. 4, &c. and xxviii. 5, &c. The name indeed is elſewhere more generally taken, for any gift or oblation, but more peculiarly in the law attributed to ſuch as is there deſcribed, and I ſuppoſe [y] here meant, the chief ingredient of which was fine flower. The drink-offering called נסך Neſec is in the ſame likewiſe deſcribed, as conſiſting of wine, Numb. xv. 5. and xxviii. 7, 14. So that the wheat and the wine of which theſe were made being by the Caterpillers, Locuſts, and like noxious creatures marred, ſo as not to produce their fruit, theſe, viz. flower and wine muſt needs be cut off, and fail, and they in ſo great meaſure failing, as there was not to be had of them, ſo much as might ſerve for taking of the one for a meat-offering, and of the other a drink-offering to be offered in the houſe of the Lord, muſt certainly argue great penury and ſcarcity, ſuch as could not but be a cauſe of great lamentation, ſuch as he here deſcribes or calls for, to the whole people that ſuffered ſuch things, and more peculiarly to the prieſts who miniſtred to the Lord in his houſe, and there, according to their duty, continually offered to him ſuch holy things while they were to be found; and therefore as he calls on the whole congregation to lament in ſad manner, ſo affirms he of theſe that they do lament. The Greek indeed doth here render this verb alſo אבלו which Others take in the preſent or præter tenſe, do mourn, or, have mourned, in the imperative mood, πενθήσατε, mourn ye, and ſo joins the word not ſo much to the preceding, as to the following words, which give the like reaſon why they ſhould mourn, as well as theſe do why the whole congregation ſhould: this, though as not ſo much agreeable with Others in the conſtruction, will not much alter the ſenſe, and give much the ſame reaſon for their mourning. Why the prieſts are more particularly concerned in this kind are apparent [z] two reaſons; one the great love and zeal that they had for God's ſervice, which in thoſe times could not without theſe offerings, which to the other ſacrifices were neceſſarily joined, be duly performed: the other a neceſſary deprivation to themſelves of their maintenance by God allotted to them, among the other tribes; ſo that they had not any other part of inheritance in the land with them, Numb. xviii. 8, 9. and xx. Among thoſe who are ſaid ſhall thus mourn, I know not how, or on what grounds the Syriack Interpreter reckons Kings: alſo his tranſlation is ܕܒܥ ܫܘܫܢ ܘܣܦܘܓܐ ܡܢ ܒܝܬ ܡܪܝ ܐܒܕܘ ܡܠܟܐ ܘܟܗܢܐ ܐܒܠܘ, &c. The flower [offering] and aſperſion [or drink-offering] is gone [or ceaſed] from the houſe of Lord, the Kings ſit [or have ſate] in mourning, and the prieſts that miniſter to the Lord. The word Kings we have not, as far as I have ſeen, in any other tranſlation, nor is there ought in the original anſwering to it, or any ground for it, except we may think it a double tranſlation of the word Cohanim, as if that ſignified as well Kings as Prieſts, and the Author would put in both, as thinking both comprehended. I find indeed in an Hebrew-Arabick Gloſſary כהן rendred as well سلطان Soltan a King, as a Prieſt, as he would have it to be where it is ſaid, Thou art a Cohen for ever after the order of Melchiſedec; and it is elſewhere uſed for a prince or chief man; but whether that was the Syrians ground or no, I know not, but there is no ground for us to follow them in it: the words added for expreſſing who are meant, viz. the Lord's miniſters, or they that miniſter to the Lord, plainly reſtrain the word here to the ſignification of prieſts, who had cauſe to mourn for the reaſons before mentioned.

[u] Lively. [w] But Cyril's explains it by παρθενικόν τε ἐ ἔφηβον νυμφίον, as if it denoted the youthful age of the man, as is to be ſeen by Others. [x] And ſee Ar. Mont.

Of thoſe who by thoſe noxious creatures above named, will have to be underſtood the enemies, and not really thoſe creatures, there be who underſtand the cutting off of the meat-offering and drink-offering from the houſe of the Lord, [a] to denote the deſolation brought on the land by thoſe enemies deſtroying the fruits thereof; or together, as [b] Others, by their making the ways impaſſable for thoſe that would from the ſeveral places of the land, bring up their offerings to the temple. Abarbinel takes another way, or goes farther, taking hereby, as from what is likewiſe ſaid ver. 10. to be intimated the deſtruction of the temple wherein they were to be offered, that they are ſaid to be cut off, not ſo much for defect of thoſe things whereof they conſiſted, as for that the [c] place where they were wont to be offered, was deſtroyed. But the words are eaſily retorted on him as a [d] proof to the contrary, viz. that the calamity was a judgment that befel them while the temple was yet ſtanding. It is not ſaid the houſe ſhall be cut off from the offerings, but they from it, and how can they be ſaid to be cut off from it, if it were not in being?

10. The field is waſted, the land mourneth, for the corn is waſted: the new wine is dried up, the oyl languiſheth.

He proceeds in a farther explication of that calamity, which had befallen (or ſhould certainly befal) them, and hath the bad effects mentioned by reciting the particulars in which it appeared. His ſo punctually deſcribing the particulars, and repeating in more words what might ſeem by fewer to be underſtood, ſeems (as is by Some obſerved) to argue the great [e] ſtupidity of the people, which though in ſuch an ill condition, as they could not but be highly ſenſible of, and groaned under, yet do not duly lay it to heart, ſo as to conſider the cauſe of it, and to look unto him who ſent it on them for their great ſins, and to work in them repentance for which he had ſent it on them. Particulars named are, שדד שדת Shuddah Sadeh, the field is waſted, ſo ſignifies the verb, viz. to waſte, and alſo to deſtroy, to rob and ſpoil, ſo here the Chaldee אתבזיו חקליא the fields are ſpoiled, and ſo the Syriack الحرثا سطل, and the MS. Arabick نهب الصحرا the field is ſpoiled, or robbed, viz. according to the plain literal ſenſe, as before by the Locuſts, &c. conſuming what grew in it. The Greek τεταλαιπώρηται, or in other Copies τεταλαιπώρηκε which word occurring twice in this verſe, is in this firſt clauſe rendred by the Latin Interpreter, laid waſte, deſolati ſunt campi, the fields are laid waſte, or deſtroyed; in the ſecond, to be afflicted, or evil affected, or in a ſad wretched condition, viz. afflictum eſt triticum, the wheat is afflicted, or in very ill condition. This is in the Vulgar Latin rendred, Depopulata eſt regio, the region is deſtroyed, as the Doway render it: moſt other later Interpreters render it by vaſtatus eſt, as Ours, is waſted, or laid waſte, deprived of [f] all its fruit and increaſe. The land mourneth, אבלה אדמה Abelah adamah, the ground hath mourned, luxit terra, the Vulgar, luxit humus; the verb being indeed in the Hebrew in the præter tenſe; ſo the Syriack ܐܒܠܬ ܐܪܥܐ and the ground hath ſate in mourning, and the Arabick MS. حزنت الادمة the ground hath been ſad, or ſorrowful: but we need not make any nice diſtinction between theſe rendrings, whether we underſtand it of what was already partly paſt, or in preſent being, or yet certainly to come; the word of the form of the præter tenſe will be accommodated to any of theſe: but the LXX. though having rendred the preceding verb in the præterperfect tenſe, as referring it to the preceding words, puts this in the imperative mood, πενθείτω ἡ γῆ, as the printed Arabick following them لتحزن الارض let the ground mourn, or be ſorrowful; for which, what reaſon they had, [g] appears not from any ordinary uſe of the Hebrew form: we may look on all as aiming at the ſame meaning, to expreſs the ſad condition of things among them, which ſhould call or cauſe inſenſible creatures, even the earth it ſelf, to mourn.

[y] Minchah being the feminine gender, the Arab. MS. adds before it, Korban, as underſtood with it, as it is expreſſed, Levit. ii. 5. becauſe the verb הכרת Hocrat, is maſculine. [z] Jerom. [a] Ribera, Menochius. [b] Gualter. [c] So the Doway Tranſlators in their Notes, when Jeruſalem was taken, and the temple deſtroyed by the Babylonians, the ſacrifice neceſſarily ceaſed according to this and other Prophets. [d] Bochart. [e] Calv.

אדמה Adamah. The land [mourneth] i. e. Saith Aben Ezra אבלו יושביה the inhabitants thereof mourn, and ſo before him Jerome, qui verſantur in humo, they which have to deal with the ground, or live on it, of them it may ſeem to be more properly taken than of that which hath no ſenſe or feeling of what befals it. Yet it is by Others thought more emphatical to apply it to the earth or land it ſelf; and ſo it is in other places applied to expreſs the ſame face and condition of it, and the things in it, as Iſaiah xxiv. 4. The earth mourneth and languiſheth, and ſo Jer. iv. 28. For this ſhall the earth mourn, and xii. 4. How long ſhall the land mourn? [h] with ſeveral other places; as on the contrary when it is in a flouriſhing, proſperous condition, the hills thereof are ſaid to rejoice, the valleys thereof to ſhout for joy, and ſo ſing, Pſalm lxv. 12, 13. Nor will the like figurative expreſſion be ſtrange in other languages, in which we have the meadow ſaid, ridere, to laugh, and the lætus ager, a merry, or joyful field, when they flouriſh and abound with plenty: on the contrary when they are barren, deſolate, and deprived of ſuch things, will they be ſaid to mourn, or to be ſad, to be ſad of face, and in mourning habit. The Chaldee Paraphraſt attending to ſuch meaning of the word, in reſpect to the ſubject of which it is ſpoken, more than the proper ſignification of it, renders it חרובת ארעא the land, or earth, [i] is deſolate. Mean while, how what is ſpoken of the ground, or earth it ſelf, concerns the inhabitants of it, is manifeſt; if it mourn as deſolate and deſtitute of what it ſhould bring forth, neceſſary will mourning be to them that live by the fruits and products thereof, and cannot ſubſiſt without them. What is the cauſe of the land's being ſaid to mourn, is declared in the next words, deſcribing in like figurative language, the afflicted condition of thoſe things, in the flouriſhing of which it was wont to exult and pride it ſelf, viz. becauſe שדד דגן Shuddad dagan, The corn is waſted, or as in the Geneva rendring, deſtroyed. The ſame verb have we here that before, and as by Ours rendred as before, ſo by the Greek alſo, and by the Syriack and MS. Arabick, but by the Chaldee differently, though much to the ſame meaning, there by Embezizu are ſpoiled, here by סף Saph, is conſumed, or failed; and in the Vulgar Latin, in the firſt place by depopulari, to be deſtroyed; in the ſecond, by devaſtari, to be waſted. That which is the moſt uſeful among the products of the earth, even the ſtaff of life in man, and which ſtrengthneth his heart, and from which was the ſubſtance of the minchah, or meat-offering to God, faileth them, whether by [k] the noxious vermin before mentioned, corrupted, or conſumed; or as [l] Some gather from what follows, per nimium æſtum ſolis, parched and withered by the exceſſive heat of the ſun; or otherwiſe הוביש תירוש Hobiſh Tiroſh, The new wine is dried up, ſo in our Text; but in the Margin, is ſhamed: the reaſon of which different rendring is the ambiguous ſignification of the word הביש Hobiſh in the original, which is ſometimes looked on as having the ordinary notion of the verb יבש Yabaſh, ſignifying to be dry, or dried up, ſometimes in the notion of the verb בוש Boſh, ſignifying ordinarily to be aſhamed. [m] The forms and ſo the notions of which roots are ſometimes mixed and confounded, which hath cauſed a difference betwixt Interpreters in the rendring it here, even from of old, the LXX. rendring it ἐξηράνθη is dried up, and ſo the Chaldee, [f] Vatab. [g] Mercer. [h] So it is ſaid, Lam. ii. 8. That he made the rampart and the wall to lament. [i] And ſo ſome Others, deſolata eſt terra, Pagn. [k] Cyril. [l] Piſc. Dan. Tarnov. per nimium æſtum & inſecta varia. [m] Buxt. Lex. in בש, and ſee Schindler in the ſame root.

Chaldee, the vines are dried, ſo the Syriack alſo, and printed Arabick, with divers more modern, but the Vulgar Latin, confuſum eſt vinum, the wine is [n] confounded, or aſhamed, ſo the MS. Arabick כוי אלמסתאר the new wine is aſhamed, and ſeveral modern, and ſome of the Hebrew Rabbins obſerve it to be appliable to either of theſe notions, ſo [o] R. Tanchum يجوز ان يكون في معني الخزي والخجل وذلك استعارة لانقطاعه ويجوز ان يكون من معني اليبس والجفاف مثل הובשת נהרות איתן لكنه كيف كان ذاتي غير متعدي وان كان من بنية הפעיל, i. e. It is poſſible that it be the notion of ſhame, and confuſion, and ſo is a metaphorical expreſſion of its failing, and it is poſſible that it be in the notion of dryneſs and withering, as in Hobaſhta Nehuroth Eiton, thou driedſt up mighty rivers, Pſalm. lxxix. 15. however taken it is as an intranſitive verb, though it be in the conjugation of Hiphil in which verbs are uſually tranſitive.

This being the ſtate of the word, and its being indifferently capable of either of theſe ſignifications, hath occaſioned that difference betwixt Interpreters, every one taking that which he thought moſt convenient for the meaning: which of them our Tranſlators prefer appears by their putting it in the Text, yet that they might not debar the Reader of his judgment and choice, they give him the other in the Margin, which by ſome learned men is preferred, (as we have ſeen) who think it an elegant expreſſion of the failing of the vine, and the juice thereof; by a metaphor ſaid to be therefore [p] ſo affected, as men who when they fail of what they ſeemed to promiſe, or might be expected from them, [q] or what they expected, are put to the bluſh, and become aſhamed. That this notion, though it properly agree only to [r] men, or creatures that have ſenſe in them, yet may by a figure elegantly be ſpoken of inſenſible creatures, is by [s] Some obſerved to be made manifeſt by the like uſe of a word in that notion, as Iſaiah xxx. 9. where החפיר Hechephir, which only ſignifies to be aſhamed, but never to be dried up, is attributed to Libanus, Lebanon is aſhamed. Mean while however theſe expreſſions differ in ſound, the thing expreſſed is here the ſame, the new wine being aſhamed, being from the defect of juice in the parched or dried grapes, that they could not anſwer the expectation of the owner, who looked for more wine from them than they did yield; and ſo whether the reader ſhall take the proper, or figurative expreſſion, the word here uſed happily affording both, he hath the ſame thing given him to underſtand. Caſtalio renders it fœdatum vinum, the wine is become filthy, or ſuch as they may be aſhamed of. אמלל יצהר Umlal ytſhar, the oil languiſheth. The ſignifications given to this [t] word are الضعف والوهن weakneſs and faintneſs, as Abu Walid, or חולשה וכריתה, as David Kimchi, weakneſs and being cut off. It is by the Greek rendred ὠλιγώθη, is little in quantity, or diminiſhed, and ſo the printed Arabick, قل: the Chaldee נתרו זיתיא The olives are fallen off. [u] So Buxtorf renders it. Others [w] defluxerunt olivæ, or [x] oleæ; and Mercer, foliis ſpoliatæ ſunt olivæ; or as in his notes on the place, defluxerunt (foliis ſcil.) oleæ, the olive-trees are bereft of their leaves, or have caſt their leaves. The Vulgar Latin, Elanguit oleum, the oil hath languiſhed. The Syriack سفحه اهّا the olives are cut off, or deſtroyed, the MS. Arabick אנקף אלדהן which [y] I ſuppoſe is to be read انقف الدهن Enkaffal dohn, and to be rendred, the oil is dried up. Several other expreſſions are found in more modern Tranſlators, as fracuit oleum, the oil is corrupt, or putrified, exciſum eſt, exterminatum eſt, is cut off, taken out of the way, infirmatum eſt, is weakened, [z] deformatum eſt, is marred, [a] periit, is periſhed, languit, and elanguit, is languiſhed; by all it ſeems to import a [b] failure in the oil, both as to the goodneſs, and to the quantity, ſo that they could not make that uſe of it as they were wont, or expected to do, either in their offerings to God, or for their own neceſſary occaſions. Theſe three things, the corn, the wine, and the oil, of ſuch great comfort to them, as that without them, they could not offer thoſe offerings, which by the law were required of them, of which they were neceſſary ingredients; nor themſelves with comfort ſubſiſt, being, as Kimchi ſpeaks, רוב חיי האדם the greateſt part of man's life, bread to ſtrengthen his heart, wine to make it glad, and oil to cheer his countenance, being taken away, and in ſo great meaſure failing them, great occaſion was there not only for the prieſts, the Lord's miniſters, but for all ſorts and conditions of men amongſt them, to mourn: and therefore having mentioned their particular concernment in it, he proceeds to ſhew how the others are alike alſo concerned, and therefore in the next words makes his addreſs to thoſe who were moſt concerned in looking after thoſe things, and in them to others who depended on their labours, and were ſerved by them, with farther mention of the failing of other things, alſo neceſſary to them for their well being.

11. Be ye aſhamed, O ye huſband-men: howl, O ye vine-dreſſers, for the wheat and for the barley; becauſe the harveſt of the field is periſhed.

12. The vine is dried up, and the fig-tree languiſheth, the pomegranate-tree, the palm-tree alſo, and the apple tree, even all the trees of the field are withered; becauſe joy is withered away from the ſons of men.

The

[n] Doway. [o] And ſo Kimchi. [p] Tanta cultores fruſtratione decepit, ut mendacium ſuum videantur erubeſcere, Ruffin. and ſee Kimchi and Druſ. [q] See Lively. [r] And ſo Petr. à Fig. takes it here for being cauſe of ſhame to thoſe whoſe expectation is failed. [s] Lively, Bochart. [t] See Hoſea iv. 3. [u] Lex. Cald. [w] Bib. Poligl. [x] Pet. Fig. [y] Or rather انقصف as it is, ver. 12. weakned. [z] Druſ. [a] Fig. à Caſt. [b] Parum provenit morbo & erubigine corruptis oleis. Pet. à Figuiero.

The firſt word הובישו Hobiſhu is of the ſame form with היביש Hobiſh in the preceding verſe, which there is rendred by Ours in the Text, is dried up, and in the Margin, is aſhamed; as capable of either of thoſe ſignifications, and as indifferent for the meaning of that place in either of them: but the ſame R. Tanchum, who notes that of it in that place, as we have ſeen, ſaith that it is here الخزي والخجل بلا شك without doubt of the ſignification of ſhame and confuſion, yet do the LXX. here alſo take it in the other notion, rendring (according to the ordinary reading and diſtinction) Ἐξηράνθησαν γεωργοί, as likewiſe the printed Arabick following them, جفت الفلاحون the huſband-men are dried up, which makes a very harſh ſenſe, which may ſeem to be corrected, by otherwiſe diſtinguiſhing the words, as Cyril doth, by making ἐξηράνθησαν to be but a repetition of what is ſaid in the former words, viz. the things before ſpoken are dried up; and to begin anew, begins with, joining the noun only to the following verb γεωργοὶ θρηνεῖτε κτήματα, agricolæ lugete poſſeſſiones, ye huſband-men bewail the poſſeſſions, for what follows, as we ſhall by and by ſee. But others generally both ancient and modern, with good reaſon, I ſuppoſe, take the word which we ſpeak of, in the other notion of being aſhamed, and make the noun huſband-men to govern it, yet is there difference between them concerning the mood or tenſe of the verb, ſome taking it to be of the præter tenſe, and ſo reading it, as the Vulgar Latin, confuſi ſunt agricolæ, [c] the huſband-men are confounded, the Syriack ܐܬܒܗܬܘ ܦܠܚܐ (according to the Latin tranſlation of it,) erubuerunt agricolæ, the huſband-men have been (or are) aſhamed. And among modern Interpreters, Junius and Tremellius, erubeſcunt, are aſhamed; and Others to the ſame meaning, [d] pudet, or diſpudet agricolas. But Others prefer to take it in the imperative mood, ſo the Chaldee בהיתו אכריא Be ye aſhamed, O huſband-men, ſo the MS. Arabick, اخزوا يا اكارين, the form indifferently agreeing to both. Kimchi ſets a note upon it, that here it is (as likewiſe the following verb) צווי, the imperative mood, and ſo is alſo by divers Others, as well as Ours, among modern tranſlations taken, as [e] moſt convenient, and moſt emphatical: [f] Erubeſcite, or as the Interlineary, pudore afficite vos agricolæ. As both theſe ways of rendring agree to the form of the verb, ſo will they well agree to the meaning, the import being to ſhew the greatneſs of the calamity which either was befallen, or certainly to befal them, ſuch as could not but, or deſervedly might, provoke lamentation from them. If it be taken in the præter tenſe, it ſhews what effect it had already on them; if in the imperative, then what it juſtly ſhould have on them, as Kimchi ſpeaks, כי ראוי לכם שתבושו becauſe there is great reaſon that you ſhould be aſhamed, in as much as all labour or works in the field are come to nought, as will appear by what is in the following words expreſſed. The perſons here ſpoken to, or of, are אכרים Icarim, in the Chaldee אכריא Iccarya, in the Syriack ܐܟܪ Acare in the MS. Arabick اكارين Accarin, the ſame root Acar being common to them all, and the word in them all, ſignifying עובדי השדות (as Kimchi) they that till the fields, or as R. Tanchum الفلاحين الذي يحرثون الارض plowmen, or huſband-men, that plow, or till the ground, the ſingular number אכר Iccar occurs, Jer. li. 23. which Abu Walid explains, כראב והו אלדי יקלב אלארץ באלחראת A plowman, which is he that turneth up the ground by plowing.

In the next words הילילו כורמים Helilu Coremim, rendred, howl, O ye vine-dreſſers, of the firſt, viz. the verb Helilu, from ילל Yalal to howl, the [g] ſame is ſaid as concerning the ſtate and form of it, which was of the foregoing Hobiſhu, viz. that it may be indifferently taken, either of the præter tenſe, or the imperative mood, and is by moſt ſo taken as they took that, and ſo by Some rendred as the præter tenſe, ſo by the Vulgar Latin ululaverunt vinitores, the dreſſers of vines have howled, as the Doway. The Syriack in like way ܘܐܠܠܘ ܟܪܡܐ Wailelu corme, which the Latin Tranſlator renders, ululaverunt vinitores, Jun. Trem. ejulant vinitores, the vine-dreſſers do howl; but by Others as in the imperative mood, ſo by the Chaldee אלילו מפלחי כרמיא as in the [h] uſual tranſlation rendred, ululate cultores vinearum, and by Mercer, ejulate, &c. (though [i] Some render both this and the foregoing verb in him by the præter tenſe, pudefacti ſunt agricolæ, ululaverunt vinearum cultores, the forms being coincident) ſo in the Manuſcript Arabick ولولوا يا كرامين howl, O ye vine-dreſſers; and ſo Kimchi notes, that it ought to be taken as well as the foregoing verb, and ſeveral of the [k] modern Interpreters take it. The Greek here (as the printed Arabick following them) differ from the reſt in that they tranſlate the firſt of theſe verbs in the præter tenſe, ἐξηράνθησαν, the ſecond in the imperative mood, θρηνεῖτε, lament. The perſons ſpoken to, or of by this verb are כורמים Coremim, i. e. עובדי הכרמים Ovede hucceramim (as Kimchi explains it) ſuch as are employed in the vine-yards, in ordering, planting, and dreſſing them, ſo the Chaldee מפלחי כרמיא Mephalechi carmaya, cultores vinearum, the Syriack ܟܪܡܐ Corme, and the MS. Arabick كرامين Carramin, in words of the ſame root, ſound, and ſignification with the Hebrew, viz. vinitores, as the Vulgar Latin renders it vine-dreſſers, and ſo generally all modern Interpreters, but the Greek and printed Arabick here differ from all the reſt; the Greek rendring it by κτήματα, the Arabick مواشي Cattel. For reconciling the Greek with the Hebrew, ſome conjecture, that inſtead of Coremim, vine-dreſſers, they read in the Hebrew brew Ceramim, which ſignifies vines, and then that in the Greek they wrote κλήματα, which ſignifies, vitium propagines, ſhoots or plants of vines, 'tis Mercer's conjecture, and Druſius ſaith of it that it is emendatio non mala, no ill emendation; yet why we ſhould in whole embrace it, I think there is no reaſon. That they took Coremim in the ſignification of Ceramim, may ſeem probable, but that it ſhould in them be read κλήματα, and not κτήματα is not ſo evident, it being againſt the authority not only of the known copies, but of the ancient Latin tranſlation of the LXX. in Jerome, which renders it poſſeſſiones; and it's manifeſt that the Arabick alſo read it, while he renders it, cattel, which will come under the notion of poſſeſſions (though not ſuch as the Greek may ſeem to relate to) but not of vine-plants. Beſides the ſame word כרם Cerem, is elſewhere rendred alſo by the word κτῆμα, as uſually reading the Greek copies that we have. So Prov. xxxi. 16. where what is in the Hebrew נטעה כרם Nateab Cerem, ſhe planteth a vine-yard, the Greek renders κατεφύτευσε κτῆμα, plantavit poſſeſſionem, ſhe planteth a poſſeſſion. And ſo Hoſea ii. 15. where כרמיה Cerameha, is in it rendred τὰ κτήματα αὐτῆς. There indeed Druſius doth, as Mercer here, think it probable that it ſhould be read κλήματα, vine-branches; but what like reaſon there is to change the reading there, we have ſaid on that place, and little I ſuppoſe have we to change it here, the word κτήματα, poſſeſſions, though not ſignifying only vine-yards, will comprehend them better than the word that ſignifies only ſingle plants or branches, it being ſuppoſed that for Coremim, vine-dreſſers, they did read Ceramim, vine-yards: but then if it be ſo read, (viz. κτήματα) or otherwiſe, how ſhall the word be taken? whether as governing the verb, or governed of it? the uſual reading takes it in the firſt way, lament, O ye poſſeſſions, but Cyril otherwiſe diſtinguiſhing it, ſeems to take it in the ſecond, bewail the poſſeſſions; ſo it appears by his explication, which is, that without doubt the deſtruction of things in the fields brings ſorrow to thoſe that till the ground. Such difficulties and ſcruples ariſe from the verſion, which by keeping to the plain reading of the Hebrew and the rendring of ſuch as adhere to it, as Ours and Others, there is no cauſe of at all.

[c] Doway. [d] Druſ. à Caſt. [e] Mercer. Tarnov. [f] Munſt. Pagnin. Tigur. [g] Kimchi. [h] Polygl. [i] Pet. à Fig. [k] Pagn. Tigur. Munſt.

Thoſe that are bid to howl, are Coremim, the vine-dreſſers, thoſe whoſe chief poſſeſſions and emoluments were vine-yards, in the increaſe and fruitfulneſs of which, the chief pleaſure and profit both of themſelves, and Others that lived with them in their country, and enjoyed the fruits of their labours, did conſiſt: what reaſon they had to howl (though before ſufficiently declared) yet is farther expreſt in the next verſe, but before that, the reaſon why thoſe before mentioned, viz. the huſband-men, are bid to be aſhamed, in the remainder of this verſe, namely, for the wheat, and for the barley, &c. the chief grains for man's uſe, and in ordering of which the huſband-man's care conſiſts, and on the kindly growth of which his hope and livelihood depends, being ſo deſtroyed (according to the plain forementioned literal meaning) by the [l] Locuſts, and other noxious creatures above mentioned, (or as Others will, by the enemy) that there is no harveſt to be gathered out of the field, but all utterly periſhed, great cauſe is there that they whoſe hope is thereby fruſtrated ſhould be aſhamed and confounded; yet by conſequence all the people of the land, being by this means deprived of neceſſary ſuſtenance: ſo that it is a deſcription of a great and general calamity, which he mentions that they might all take due notice of it, as an argument of God's great diſpleaſure provoked againſt them, eſpecially there being added concerning the other fruits, for which the vine-dreſſers are alſo bid to howl, what follows in the next verſe; although I know not for what reaſon the LXX. Greek and printed Arabick here render the words קציר שדה Ketſir Sadeh, the harveſt of the field by the vintage, the Greek having τρυγητὸς ἐξ ἀγροῦ, the Arabick القطاف هلك من الحقل the vintage is periſhed out of the field. Though perhaps the general word harveſt, might be extended to the gathering of any fruits, as grapes or other, yet certainly here it appears to be more properly and ſtrictly taken, for the gathering, or reaping the wheat and barley, about which the אכרים Iccarim, or huſband-men are peculiarly occupied, and they are therefore particularly bid to be aſhamed for them, viz. ὑπὲρ πυροῦ καὶ κριθῆς; as the Greek alſo hath it, for the wheat and the barley; for I ſuppoſe the printed Arabick which follows them, in rendring theſe words, plainly miſtakes them, to the manifeſt marring of the meaning, while he reads اكثر من القمح والشعير more than the wheat and barley. The MS. Arabick renders the whole more conſpicuouſly, and agreeable to the Hebrew علي الحنطة والشعير اذا باد حصاد الصحرا for the wheat and the barley, ſeeing the harveſt of the field is periſhed; ſo that thoſe words properly concern the huſband-men, or tillers of the ground, the following, the vine-dreſſers, viz. The vine is dried up. Here have we the ſame word that we had twice before, viz. הובוש Hobiſh, which verſe the tenth is rendred in the text by the notion of drought, is dried up, and in the Margin by the notion of being aſhamed, and verſe the 11th, by the ſignification of being aſhamed; and it is here noted by R. Tanchum, as alſo by Others, that it is here capable of the ſame ſignification that it was there. And ſo find we it differently rendred, by Some, as by Ours, in the notion of being dried up; [m] by Others, in the other of being aſhamed. So the Vulgar Latin, vinea confuſa eſt, the [n] vine-yard is confounded: ſo the MS. Arab. الجفنة خزيت the vine is aſhamed: ſo among modern Interpreters Druſius, vitem pudet, for (ſaith he) ſucco ſuo & fructu ſpoliatæ vites quaſi erubeſcunt, ut homines ſolent cum illis mali aliquid præter opinionem accidit, cidit, the vines deprived of juice and fruit, are ſaid to bluſh or be aſhamed, as men uſe to do when ſome unexpected evil happens to them, or becauſe they fail of what is expected from them; or their being ſaid to be aſhamed, may be underſtood of their [o] cauſing ſhame to their owners, who are fruſtrated of their expectation from them, which ſoever of theſe ſignifications be taken, either the one of ſhame in a metaphorical, or the other of being dried up and withered in a proper ſenſe, the meaning will be the ſame, viz. their failing of fruit, or being profitable, which is from their being dried up, and for that is their ſhame. And the fig-tree, אמללה Umlalah, languiſheth, the ſame verb we had before, ver. 10. and ſo as here by Ours rendred. How diverſly it is by Others in that place rendred we have ſeen, and may obſerve that as they there rendred it, ſo they do here; ſo do the LXX. the printed Arabick, the Syriack, the Vulgar Latin, and the Chaldee expreſs it by the ſame word in both places, as do likewiſe many among modern Interpreters, though [p] Some change the word without much alteration of the ſenſe. The MS. Arabick here hath انقصفت Encaſaphat (which may be rendred, is weakned or broken) and ſo I ſuppoſe ought alſo to have been written in that 10th verſe, though there be, by leaving out a letter, in the copy which I uſe, only انقف Enkaffa. As to the meaning of the word I think we may well take Druſius's explication. The juice of the fig-tree being all ſucked out, the tree it ſelf languiſheth, i. e. debilis ac infirma relicta eſt, nec amplius uſum ſui præbet, is left weak and feeble, ſo as to yield no farther profit from it ſelf. So is the vine ſaid to languiſh, Iſaiah xxiv. 7. and the earth, xxxiii. 9. To theſe are ſubjoined for expreſſion of the evils befalling them, ſeveral other trees, whoſe fruit is not ſo neceſſary for ſuſtenance, [q] yet for both pleaſure and profit to men. As, the Pomegranate, the Palm-tree alſo, and the Apple-tree, even all the trees of the field are withered. The deſtruction of theſe is put as a cauſe why the vine-dreſſers ſhould howl, as [r] belonging to their care and inſpection, together with their vines, the chief among them, and the fruits of which were by them gathered and diſpenſed for the uſe of themſelves and all inhabitants of the land. Of theſe all he ſaith יבשו Yabeſhu, that they were dried up, ſcorched, or withered, viz. according to the plain meaning by many followed, by the miſchief of the [s] Locuſts and other noxious creatures above named, brought on them. Abarbinel, from this expreſſion draws an argument againſt the taking this and other miſchiefs before mentioned, for hurt done by thoſe creatures, becauſe though they devoured the leaves and fruits, yet it is not likely that they could kill the whole trees: but the learned Bochartus taxeth him as ignorant of the nature of thoſe peſtilent creatures, and of the miſchief which they are by Others obſerved to do; amongſt others in that kind, he cites an Arabick Author Al-Damiri, whoſe words (according to his copy) concerning Locuſts are, لعابه سم ناقع للنبات [t] والشجر ولا يقع علي شي منه الا اهلكه that their ſpittle, or moiſture, is a very ſtrong poiſon to plants and trees, and falls not on any of them, but that it deſtroys them, (in my copy is only لعابه سم ناقع ولا يقع علي شي الا اهلكه his ſpittle is very ſtrong poiſon, which falls not on any thing, but that it deſtroys it:) Out of Piſidas alſo he cites, as affirmed of them, that they make both trees and herbs to fade and wither; and himſelf thinks it plain that what here is ſaid, is ſpoken of ſuch miſchief as is by them done to the fruits of the earth and trees. But whatſoever, or whoſoever be the inſtruments, ſo great is the calamity thereby brought on the whole land, that what cauſe of ſhame and ſorrow is here deſcribed, manifeſtly reacheth not only to the huſband-men, and vine-dreſſers, who are named as more immediately concerned, but to all the inhabitants thereof univerſally, becauſe (ſaith he) joy is withered away from the ſons of men. The particle כי rendred by Ours and [u] Others, becauſe, is by Others rendred, [w] Imo, yea, Yea it is withered, &c. by [x] Others, ſane, certe, ſurely, by [y] Others, Ideo, therefore, &c by Munſter, ut ſcil. areſcat gaudium, &c. viz. that joy may wither. Theſe and like ſignifications the particle being found to have, as one or another of them ſhall be taken, there may be made ſome little nice difference, in connecting theſe words with thoſe that go before, or inferring them from them; but all will concur in making theſe words a deſcription of the extent of the calamity mentioned, to all ſorts of people in the land in general, and what great cauſe of ſorrowing there is to them: whether we look back only to the words immediately preceding, wherein the huſband-men and vine-dreſſers are called on, or farther back to ver. 3. where they are in general bid to lament, for the evils both before and between that and this, and now again deſcribed. As to the expreſſion, joy is withered we have in it the ſame ambiguous word which we had thrice before, viz. הוביש Hobiſh, and concerning it have the ſame note from R. Tanchum, which before, viz. that it [z] may be taken in the ſignification of الخزي Chazyio, ſhame, or being aſhamed, and ſo to import, الانقطاع والعدم failing and deprivation, or elſe of الجفاف being dried up, or withered, and accordingly have we variety of rendrings in ſeveral tranſlations. The ancient Latin appears to take it in the former of thoſe two notions, rendring it [a] confuſum eſt gaudium à filiis hominum, joy is confounded from the children of men. The LXX. alſo before them take the ſame notion, but with a different conſtruction, ſtruction, rendring ἤχυναν χαρὰν οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων (whom the printed Arabick following, لان بني البشر اخزوا الفرح, becauſe the children of men have made joy aſhamed, (or put joy to ſhame) in which their rendring Mercer thinks they took Hobiſh as paſſively uſed (I ſuppoſe he means, as if the words in Hebrew ſounded, Joy is put to ſhame of, or by the children of men,) and the Vulgar Latin may be ſo conſtrued alſo: but it is otherwiſe by Expoſitors uſually underſtood, as we ſhall by and by ſee: only by the way we may take notice of another way which Lud. Capellus takes for adjuſting the LXX. with the Hebrew. He ſuppoſeth that for הוביש Hobiſh, (from יבש Yebaſh) in the ſingular number they read הבישו Hebiſhu, as [b] from בוש Boſh, and in the plural number, and then in the following words מן בני אדם Min bene Adam, from the children of men, left out the prepoſition Min, from; but the former way of reconciling them ſeems the plainer, as not requiring that groundleſs different reading in the Hebrew which the other doth; in which will be found only a more irregular uſe of the word הוביש Hobiſh, by giving to it a paſſive ſignification, whereas it is by Others taken in an intranſitive, as by R. Tanchum it is obſerved here to be נוֹגֵי Dhati intranſitive, nor is it uſually looked on as taken by the Vulgar Latin otherwiſe than ſo, while that confuſum eſt is looked on as ſignifying the ſame with pudet, or pudefit, in Latin, and in filiis hominum, rendred, from the children of men, not, by the children of men. The ſenſe that [c] thoſe Expoſitors, who follow that rendring, give, is to this purpoſe, that joy by reaſon of the unuſual failure of thoſe good things (as corn and wine and other fruits of the earth) from whence it was wont to ariſe, and was now expected to ariſe to them, was as it were aſhamed to offer it ſelf to them, or to expect entertainment from them. And to the ſame purpoſe are the rendrings of ſuch among either modern or ancient Interpreters, as that of the MS. Arabick اذ خزي السرور من بني ادم ſeeing joy is aſhamed from the ſons of men, who take that notion of the word, and that of Druſius, Puduit gaudium à filiis hominum. Caſtalio in that notion alſo renders it, fœdata humani generis voluptate, the pleaſure of mankind being laid open to ſhame, or made ſhameful, or unſeemly, that which was wont to be their joy being now their ſhame. But moſt modern Interpreters preferring the other notion which Ours follow, render it, [d] exaruit, is dried up; their corn, vines, olives, and other fruit-trees, their whole harveſt being dried up and withered, as is deſcribed, well may their [e] joy, which was from the flouriſhing of theſe, and the enjoyment of them, [f] be ſaid alſo to be dried away from them. However the word be taken, as to the proper and literal ſignification of it; yet as to the meaning of it, both notions will concur ſo as to denote a ceaſing or failing of ſuch joy, as was formerly found, and might now have been expected, if things had gone on in their ordinary courſe among them, when God's bleſſing was upon them and their land; and ſo it is well given by the Chaldee Paraphraſt, פסקת חדותא, and ſo the Syriack Interpreter ܐܬܦܣܩ ܚܕܘܬܐ, &c. becauſe joy is ceaſed (or) failed from the children of men; and Jerome himſelf, who renders it by the notion of being confounded, makes that to be all one in meaning here with auferri, to be taken away from.

[l] Druſ. Dan. [m] So the LXX. Chaldee, Syr. printed Arab. and ſeveral modern, Mercer, Pagn. [n] Doway.

[o] Petr. à Fig. Confudit, & pudefecit eos, & eorum ſpes fruſtrata eſt. [p] So Pagnin. ver. 10. exciſum eſt oleum, ver. 12. ficus deſolata eſt. Munſt. exterminatum ſit oleum. ver. 12. ficulnea enervata eſt. [q] Tarnov. [r] Ar. Mont. Pet. à Fig. [s] So Jerome here takes it. [t] In him it is printed النبات but, I think, ill. [u] Vulg. Lat. Jun. Chald. Syr. MS. Arab. اذ behold, or ſith that. [w] Piſcat. Tarnov. [x] Merc. [y] Grot. [z] And ſo Kimchi. [a] So the Doway.

By that general expreſſion of the children of men, is here by [g] Some obſerved to be meant the inhabitants of that country, on which that calamity and cauſe of ſorrow lighted; it may yet well be uſed as a thing generally ſpoken; for had the cauſe been univerſal, and reached to all mankind on all parts of the earth, the effect would have been likewiſe univerſal, to the cutting off of joy from them all. By this Abarbinel taking all that ſhould befal them to be from the enemy, thinks to be noted their nations being led into captivity, עוברה ועצובת רוח, forſaken and [h] grieved in Spirit.

13. Gird your ſelves, and lament, ye prieſts: howl ye miniſters of the altar: come, lye all night in ſackcloth, ye miniſters of my God: for the meat-offering, and the drink-offering is withholden from the houſe of your God.

However ſuch preceding expreſſions, though in form hortatory as that, ver. 5, 8, 12. may be underſtood as not ſo much exhortations to repentance, [i] as ſarcaſtical exprobrations for, and declarations of ſuch behaviour and expreſſions of ſorrow which appears or ſhould appear in them, forced thereto by what they did or ſhould ſuffer, without viſible hope of redreſs, and to awaken them from their great ſtupidity, yet theſe words appear plainly to be a ſerious exhortation thereto, as a remedy againſt, and means for removing thoſe evils, which did either hang over their heads, or were already fallen on them.

Gird your ſelves,] that is, ſaith R. Tanchum, as [k] Others of the Jews, and Others alſo, שקים with ſackcloth, or clothe your ſelves with ſackcloth, which word may here be ſupplied from ver. 8. חגורת שק Chegurah ſak, girded with ſackcloth, or from what follows in this verſe, where it is expreſſed in ליני בשקים linu beſachim, lye all night in ſackcloth, although Some think that without ſupplying that, the meaning may be well made out, viz. [l] Feſtinate, make ſpeed to do what is in the next words expreſſed, or [m] parate vos ad planctum, prepare your ſelves for lamentation, agreeably enough to that ſenſe in which girding up ones ſelf to ſet about a thing is often taken, although [n] Some think no appoſite example of that uſe of it in this kind can be given. But the moſt take that way in the firſt place mentioned as moſt plain, and ſome both ancient and modern Interpreters do in their tranſlations expreſs the word ſackcloth, as in the Hebrew neceſſarily left to be underſtood. So the Syriack, حصّنا ولحدده هصر ſacerdotes accingimini ſaccis. The MS. Arab. شدوا المسوح gird about you ſackcloths. So Pagnin. accingite vos ſaccis; and Munſter, accingimini ſaccis, that being in thoſe times the uſual habit of mourners and penitents, as in many expreſſions in the Scripture appears: ſo that after his exciting them to this, properly follow words exciting to thoſe acts, lament and howl, as they are likewiſe joined to it, Jer. iv. 8. where the word שקים Sakkim, which is here only underſtood, is expreſſed; all of them called for as being both outward expreſſions, and ſigns of inward grief, and withal farther excitements to it, the geſtures of the outward man ſerving to ſtir up and increaſe the affections of the heart, by which they are firſt produced, and conducing to the humbling thereof, without which theſe outward actions were to no profit. The perſons called on to uſe theſe expreſſions of repentance are the prieſts, or in other words to the ſame purpoſe, the miniſters of the altar, ſuch who waited at the altar (1 Cor. ix. 13.) and there miniſtred about holy things, viz. whoſe duty was there to offer up ſacrifice, and perform ſuch ſervices, as by the law were required to be performed to the Lord, who were the prieſts, whom likewiſe in the following words he calls the miniſters of his God, ye miniſters of my God, the God that he, however Others forſake, faithfully ſerved; and his God who [o] ſent him with this meſſage to them, or [p] my God with whom I will intercede for you. The LXX. here leave out the affix my. The duty of thoſe named was to [q] offer up ſacrifice both for their own ſins and the ſins of the people, and to intercede for them; they therefore are here called on to lead them the way in the expreſſions of repentance; they, that the people may take example by them, are to gird themſelves, to howl, and lament; and that they might ſeriouſly, and not ſlightly or perfunctorily do it, the next words call farther on them, come lye all night in ſackcloth ye miniſters of my God: באו Bou, come. This verb ſeems by Ours, as by Others, to be taken as a particle of [r] exhortation, to ſtir them up to the performance of what they are bid in the next word to do. By Others it is properly rendred a verb, come or go in, viz. [s] to the court of the temple, that there, as in a place proper for it, they may perform it, viz. there lye all night in ſackcloth, not ſo much as there putting it off, or ceaſing to mourn, Kimchi, Druſ. The awfulneſs of the place, by reaſon of God's more peculiar preſence there promiſed to reſide, could not but add to the ſerioufneſs of their affections, and their long continuing in that mournful habit, would ſhew that they were indeed ſeriouſly and not ſlightly affected with the ſenſe of their ill deſervings.

[b] Although by what we have before ſaid, appears that he might as well have ſaid Hobiſhu, which would be the ſame thing, and leſs change, ſince that is uſed in the ſame ſenſe with Hebiſhu. [c] Mercer, Pudet gaudium hominum conſpectus hominum. So Ribera, Menoch. Tirinus, Tarnov. [d] Pagn. Munſt. Tig. [e] Pſalm iv. 7. Iſaiah ix. 3, 16, 10. & Jer. xlviii. 33. [f] Gaudium metonimicῶs pro illis rebus ponitur, ex quibus gaudium capiebatur, Lively. [g] Piſc. [h] Iſaiah liv. 6. [i] Mercer on ver. 5. [k] Aben Ezra, Kimchi. [l] Calvin. [m] Druſ.

What great reaſon there was to them for ſuch intenſe, and ſuch continued acts and expreſſions of penitence, as thoſe terms of girding themſelves, lamenting and howling, and lying all night in ſackcloth, call for, the next words declare, viz. to be the greatneſs of the calamities which their ſins had brought on them, for the meat-offering and the drink-offering is withholden from the houſe of your God. Much the ſame expreſſion have we, ver. 9. only what is here ſaid to be withholden, נמנע Nimna, is there ſaid הכרת Hocrat, is cut off, to the ſame meaning, both denoting the failing thereof, and an affix in your God, here added, which there is not, otherwiſe here needs not any thing for explication of the words to be added to what hath been there ſaid. By calling him, their God, he ſeems to mind them of their nearer relation that he had taken them into to himſelf, in chooſing them out of all the people, to wait on him at his altar, and to ſee all things belonging to his worſhip duly performed, and that in ſo doing they might live of his altar and the things thereon offered. So that the calamity expreſſed in theſe words, for the meat-offering and drink-offering is withholden from the houſe of your God, may be well looked on as in eſpecial manner concerning them, and as a cauſe of mourning in particular to them, both out of the zeal that they ought to have had to God's ſervice, which was by this means hindred, and in regard to their being together deprived of their own ſuſtenance, from that portion which God had allotted to them for doing him ſervice. How theſe offerings came to be withholden from the houſe of their God, is according to the plaineſt way which we have ſeen, by reaſon of the conſumption of thoſe fruits from which they were taken, and the great ſcarcity cauſed by thoſe devouring creatures before mentioned, of which the words may well be looked on as a farther deſcription. But [t] Abarbinel in his way, which we have ſeen, looks upon it as a threat of the deſtruction of the temple, the houſe of God, by which all offerings ſhould be together cut off, and ceaſe, which they were to lament, ולא היה זה באמת כי אם בחרבן הבית וביטול העבודה, and this (ſaith he) was not really done, but by the deſtruction of the houſe of God, and the neceſſary ceaſing of his ſervice. But, as hath already been mentioned on ver. 9. and is obſerved by Bochartus, the words ſeem to note the quite contrary, that what is ſaid was happened or ſhould happen ([u] the verb of the præter tenſe being taken as in the ſignification of the future, was done or was to be) while the houſe of God, into which theſe offerings for God's ſervice on his altar were to be be brought, was yet ſtanding; and becauſe, by reaſon of the great ſcarcity, and defect of thoſe things as they did conſiſt of, they failed and could not be brought, therefore the prieſts, whoſe office was to offer them, having nothing now in that kind of meat-offerings and drink-offerings to offer, are called on to offer up [w] themſelves, and to pour out at his altar, as a ſacrifice that might be accepted, their own humble ſouls and broken contrite hearts, [x] in prayer, tears, and ſupplications, as the only remedy now left them for removing the calamity (of dearth) befallen them, and obtaining again from God a reſtoring of ſuch plenty as might enable them for offering again ſuch oblations in the houſe of God, which now by him, provoked by their ſins, were cut off and withholden from it. And to this remedy are they called on here to betake themſelves, and as in their own private perſons (in theſe words) to perform ſuch duties, and be an example to the flock, ſo alſo by their directions and injunctions to work on the whole congregation, to do the like in the next words.

[n] Tarnov. [o] Calv. Tarnov. [p] Mercer. Tarnov. [q] Heb. vii. 27. [r] Merc. Druſ. [s] Enter בית יי into the houſe of God, ſcilicet in atrium Templi, ut ibi Deum invocetis, Piſc. [t] And ſo Arias Mont. and Doway Notes on verſe 9. [u] See Theodoret.

14. Sanctify ye a faſt, call a ſolemn aſſembly, gather the elders, and all the inhabitants of the land into the houſe of the Lord your God, and cry unto the Lord.

Sanctify ye a faſt, &c.] קדשו צום Kaddeſhu Tſum. So the LXX. ἁγιάσατε νηστείαν, the Syriack ܩܕܫܘ ܨܘܡܐ: the printed Arabick, قدسوا الصوم Kaddeſu Al-ſaum, the Vulgar Latin, ſanctificate jejunium, as ſeveral modern Interpreters alſo, which doubtleſs is the literal rendring of the words: as to the meaning the Chaldee renders גזרו Gezaru, decree a faſt: the MS. Arabick, עדו צום, prepare a faſt, as alſo Rabbi Tanchum explains it, اعدوا اياما للصيام prepare (or order) days for faſting, and R. Solomon הזמינו צום, and Aben Ezra by another word of the ſame ſignification הכינו Prepare a faſt, and Kimchi הזמינו העם לתענית prepare the people for a faſt, and to the ſame purpoſe among more modern Interpreters, [y] præparate, prepare, [z] indicite, proclaim, Druſius noting it to be an Hebraiſm, viz. ſanctify, for indicite jejunium, or præparate jejunium, bid a faſt, or prepare a faſt; which is all one as if he ſaid to the prieſts, curate ut plebs ad jejunium parata ſit, take care that the people be prepared for a faſt. So that if in this way the verb be tranſlated, prepare, proclaim, or order a faſt, dedicate, or ſet a-part a day or days for a faſt, it is a good tranſlation, juſtified by the uſe of the word elſewhere in ſcripture; but it ſeems more emphatical to retain the proper notion of ſanctify, which as it includes the other, ſo withal ſeems to require how the people, to whom the faſt is injoined, ought to prepare themſelves for it, and order and behave themſelves in it, viz. with more than ordinary ſanctity and holineſs, not thinking it ſufficient only to abſtain from meat and drink, which is ſufficient to denominate a man to faſt, but withal to abſtain from ſin and wickedneſs, which is required to a holy and religious faſt, ſuch as is the duty and ſign of an humble penitent, and which only is acceptable to God, and ſo profitable to them that exerciſe it, otherwiſe it will be but ſuch as God will not have regard to, like that which he ſpeaks of with loathing, Iſaiah lviii. 5. Is it ſuch a faſt that I have choſen? withal declaring how that is which he delighteth in: and Zach. vii. 5. When ye faſted and mourned, did ye at all faſt unto me? the faſt therefore that the prieſts were here to proclaim, is a ſanctified faſt, both by themſelves and the people under their charge, by their example, exhortation and inſtructions to be obſerved, and therefore he ſpeaks not only to them as of a thing concerning their particular, but bids them call a ſolemn aſſembly. The ſins were general, the calamity thereby pulled on them general, and they were therefore in general to join in the exerciſe of repentance, for obtaining pardon, and averting the judgments by thoſe ſins pulled on them. Call (ſaith he) a ſolemn aſſembly, in the Margin we have, or day of reſtraint; ſo elſewhere, where we have the ſame word עצרה Atſarah in the original, our Interpreters put in the Text, as here, a ſolemn aſſembly, and in the Margin, as a different, or rather indifferent rendring, day of reſtraint, as Levit. xxiii. 35. עצרת היא it is a ſolemn aſſembly, Text. Margin, day of reſtraint, ſhewing the meaning to include both, viz. a day wherein the people reſtrained from other their ordinary occaſions, were retained together in a publick aſſembly for ſome extraordinary occaſion. The verb עצר Atſar, from which this noun cometh, is looked on as chiefly ſignifying to reſtrain, to contain, to ſhut up, to forbid, to retain, to hinder, or to compel, whence may be judged of the interpretations given to the noun, which is as by Ours in the Text, and Margin, as we have ſeen, ſo by Others here ſomething differently rendred, though by all perhaps the ſame thing be meant. The Vulgar Latin render it cœtum, an aſſembly, and ſo is it by ſeveral of the Jews expounded, and by the Chaldee Paraphraſt rendred כנישא Ceniſha, and by the Syriack ܟܢܘܫܝܐ Cenuſhyo; ſo by R. Solom. אסיפה Aſipha, and to the ſame ſignification by [a] R. Japhet קהלה Kehalah, a congregation or company (in which ſenſe it is alſo taken, Jer. ix. 2. עצרת בוגדים an aſſembly of treacherous men, [b] ſo called לפי שנעצרים ומתעכבים במקום אסיפתם becauſe they are detained and ſtayed in the place where they are gathered together, and in this ſignification is it by ſeveral more modern rendred. Others do otherwiſe render it, ſo as not only to denote an aſſembly of men gathered and remaining together, but withal to intimate the reaſon or occaſion for which they ſo remain, and the manner of their behaviour there. So the MS. Arabick renders נאדו באלאעתכאף and in much the ſame words Rab. Tanchum, نادوا بالاعتكاف لله proclaim a retention, or ſtaying

[w] Merc. [x] Druſ. [y] Pag. [z] Munſt. Caſt. Jun. Tr. [a] In Aben Ezra. [b] Kimchi, Radic.

ing together for devotion, or waiting on God; and agreeably Kimchi on the place, that the people ſhould be reſtrained, ממלאכתם ויאספו לתפלה ולבקשה [c] from their work, and gathered together for prayer and ſupplication. Agreeable to theſe have we in Chriſtian Interpreters [d] proclamate ferias, that is, diem ceſſationis ab opere, proclaim a day of ceſſation from work, and diem interdicti, which is by our Tranſlators put in the Margin, a day of reſtraint: all theſe concur in the ſame meaning, and concur to make it a ſolemn aſſembly, for ſuch performances as the occaſion required; whether (as in other places for other holy duties) or (as here) to humble themſelves in faſting and repentance, and joint expreſſions of unfeigned humiliation before God, for averting his heavy judgments from them. The LXX. here, as alſo in chap. ii. 15. where the ſame words occur, ambiguouſly render it κηρύξατε θεραπείαν, which is anciently tranſlated in Latin, prædicate [e] curationem, proclaim a healing. So Jerome underſtands their word of a curing their ſins by repentance, and ſo Theodoret. And the Hebrew word עצרה may ſeem capable of that ſignification of healing, as the root עצר Atſar, may ſignify to cloſe and bind, [f] vulnera enim conſtrictione curantur, in as much as wounds are cured by binding up, and ſo may it be applied alſo to the cure of the wounds of the ſoul; and by the ſignification of binding, is it by the LXX. rendred δέω, Jer. xxxiii. 1. But the Greek word θεραπεία, hath other [g] ſignifications by which Others prefer here to render it, as more agreeable to the place, viz. [h] cultus divinus, worſhip of God, and likewiſe, famulatus, miniſterium, ſerving, yielding ſervice, and attending on; in which notion the printed Arabick taking it, renders (in both places) نادوا بالخدمة proclamate miniſterium, proclaim ſervice, viz. warn them to come together for ſerving God. The other Greek Tranſlators, as appears by the fragments of them left, rendred otherwiſe, as Symmachus, σύνοδον, Synodum, an aſſembly; Aquila, ἡμέραν συλλογῆς, a day of gathering together. Cyril ſeems to join theſe notions together, expounding it τὴν τῶν θείων θελημάτων ἐκπλήρωσιν, the fulfilling of ſuch things as God wills; in fine, all appear to mean the ſame thing, a day of a ſolemn aſſembly ſet apart from all other occaſions, for their joining together in faſting, repentance, ſupplications, and like parts of ſervice and devotion to God: for exciting to which he farther adds, Gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land, &c. זקנים Zekenim, the elders. The ſame word have we above, ver. 2. but there differently rendred from what it is here, viz. not the elders, but old men, by which varying of their language it may ſeem that they think, that it is taken in the one place in ſomething a different meaning from what is in the other; and ſo it is by Others alſo thought, though in both places they do uſe the ſame word, viz. ſenes, old men. The mind of ſeveral Others we may take in the words of Druſius, Hic ſenes accipiunt alio ſenſu quam ſupra, Here they take the word Old men in another ſenſe than above, nam ibi ætatis erat, hic eſt officii nomen, for there it denoted age, but here office or dignity, viz. magiſtrates, or men in place of dignity, men in authority, rulers, counſellors, ſuch by whoſe prudence, or authority others are ruled. For it is well known that [i] the word, though primarily ſignifying men of more years, yet is alſo uſed in that other notion; men of riper age being uſually moſt fit for ſuch employments, and choſen for them. Yet are there Others that take the word in the former notion, for ſuch who were ſtricken in years, to warn that the infirmity of their age ſhould not be a pretence to exempt them from the duty enjoined, they ſhould even lead the way [k] licet tremebundi & ſuis baculis innixi, though trembling and leaning on their ſtaves, that ſo, canorum authoritate juvenes ad pœnitentiam moveant, by the authority (and example) of their grey hairs they might move the younger people to repentance. Jerome ſeems much ſo to take the word, viz. for ſenes quorum ætas vicina morti, maturæque ſententiæ, magis timorem & cultum Dei ſuſcipit, old men, whoſe age near unto death, and more ripe in judgment, makes them more apt for the fear and worſhip of God: Others giving to the word its greateſt latitude, take in both, as well thoſe who were elder than others in age, as thoſe who had from their office and dignity that title of elders, [l] both of theſe Some look on as particularly called to thoſe duties of repentance, old men becauſe their offences were greater; men in place of dignity, becauſe their examples lead others to ſin. If either ſort be left out in the ſtricter uſe of the word in its place, they will be taken in here as obliged to the duty called for, by the following words comprehending them, viz. and all the inhabitants of the land, the conjunction, and, being by Ours (and [m] ſeveral Others) ſupplied, though not in the Hebrew, gives us plainly their mind, that both theſe are of thoſe that are to be called together, viz. الشيوخ مع كل جلاس الارض the elders (or old men) with all the inhabitants of the land, as the MS. Arabick gives it, and ſo both nouns governed of the verb, Gather, the nominative, to which then will regularly be the ſame which to the foregoing verbs, viz. the prieſts, and ſo are all Orders of men, by which the Jewiſh nation was then diſtinguiſhed, here to join, in making up this ſolemn aſſembly, viz. the prieſts calling it, the elders, the common people, (called the inhabitants of the land, and ſo by Jeremiah alſo as diſtinguiſhed from princes and prieſts, the people of the land, Jer. i. 18.) called to it. This is a regular conſtruction, and plain meaning of the words, and moſt generally received, yet they being capable of other conſtructions alſo, alſo, they are by Others given, who look no farther back for a nominative caſe than to theſe words themſelves, that they may ſound, either; O ye elders, gather all the inhabitants, &c. or, O all ye inhabitants of the land, gather the elders into the houſe of the Lord: the firſt of theſe is given by Aben Ezra, Gather אתם זקנים ye, O elders, all the inhabitants of the land of Iſrael; and this ſeems Arias Montanus to like: the other is obſerved as a rendring in ſome copies of the LXX. συναγάγετε πρεσβυτέρους πάντες οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν γῆν, Gather together the elders all ye that inhabit the land; and this among the more modern Caſtalio takes, convocate ſenes ô omnes incolæ, &c. call together the elders, O all ye inhabitants, &c. Againſt this way Mercer cautions, that the noun is accuſativus non vocativus, the accuſative not the vocative, ſeeing it was the duty of the prieſts, (not of the people) to call others together (for ſuch duties.) The Syriack goes a different way from all theſe, by taking the verb not in an active but a paſſive ſignification ܐܬܟܢܫܘ, &c. Be ye gathered together, ye elders, and all the inhabitants of the land; theſe differences in Others we may obſerve, but mean while have no reaſon to ſcruple at, or leave, our own tranſlation. According to all, or whatever conſtruction it be taken, manifeſt it is, that here is a ſummons, or exhortation to all ſorts and degrees of men amongſt them, to convene and join in a ſolemn national aſſembly for deprecating God's wrath, which by their national ſins they had provoked, and the averting thoſe calamities in which they were all by that means involved. The place where they are to convene is the temple, called the houſe of the Lord their God; he himſelf calleth it his houſe, and an houſe of prayer for all people, Iſaiah lvi. 7. It was Solomon's [n] prayer at his firſt dedication of it, that if there ſhould be in the land, famine, peſtilence, blaſting, mildew, locuſt, or caterpiller, or if their enemy ſhould beſiege them in the land of their cities, whatſoever plague or whatſoever ſickneſs there ſhould be, that then what prayer and ſupplication ſoever ſhould be made by any man, or by all the people knowing the plague of their own hearts, and ſpreading forth their hands towards that houſe, (or in that houſe as they render it, 2 Chron. vi. 29.) God would hear in heaven, or from heaven his dwelling place, and forgive and do, &c. and in the [o] next chapter, God tells him that he had heard his prayer, and had hallowed that houſe, which he had built, and put his name there for ever, and that his eyes and his heart ſhould be there perpetually. Thus then ſtanding the caſe now with the people of the Jews, in whoſe land that temple was, great calamity and famine being by Locuſts and Caterpillers devouring the fruits of the earth brought on them, (or according to Others by the invaſion of enemies) thither are they called on to have recourſe, there ſolemnly to aſſemble themſelves, not contenting themſelves with ſingle devotions in their private cloſets. The occaſion did require both their meeting all ſorts of them together, by mutual examples to ſtir up the affections of one another, and their meeting in that place, which could not, being, as it is ſtiled, the houſe of their God, but ſtrike into their hearts awe and reverence, as ſuggeſting to them that God was there preſent; and that therefore what they did there they ſhould do, as in his preſence, with ſincerity, and in ſuch heedful manner as ſhould be approved in his ſight, and regarded by him the ſeracher of their hearts, and overſeer of all their intentions. To ſtir them up to hearken to this exhortation, and encourage them in it, may be obſerved an [p] emphaſis in the pronoun here affixed to the name of God, viz. your God, which ſeems to give aſſurance that God will be ready to meet them, and yet to acknowledge them for his, and be there found of them, if they ſhall in right manner, and with hearts rightly prepared ſeek him, for which behaviour the next word calls upon them and directs them; and cry unto the Lord, put up with ardent deſires and greateſt expreſſions of inward affection, your prayers unto God. To fit them duly for this duty, are the former injunctions of putting on ſackcloth, faſting, and aſſembling in the houſe of God directed; without this they little avail, for the right ordering of this they conduce, which when by men with truly humble hearts, and joint affections put up to God, are prevalent with him for removing publick calamities. And ſuch prayer doth the word זעקו Zaaku, cry, here call for, though the word otherwiſe ſignify the lifting up the voice, yet it is manifeſt that here (as elſewhere in ſcripture) it denotes and requires the ardent affection of the heart affecting and moving the tongue and lips for ſuch expreſſion of it in prayer to God: that for which they are to cry to him, is that he would remove from them that heavy judgment in the former verſes, as alſo in what follows, mentioned and deſcribed. All this (ſaith Kimchi) doth the Prophet bid them to do when the Locuſts are come upon them, or elſe that they might by repentance return to God before the coming of them, that ſo God in his mercy might reverſe the decree. They that underſtand the evil to be from the invaſion of enemies, muſt look on the praying likewiſe directed againſt them. To the Lord are they to cry, who being provoked by their ſins, had threatned to them or ſent on them thoſe judgments, and who alone could remove them. What great reaſon they had to betake themſelves to this remedy, as it is evident from what hath been already ſpoken by the Prophet, ſo will farther appear by what he adds concerning the terribleneſs of thoſe judgments in what follows.

[c] So Aben Ezra, that no man ſhould do any work. [d] Caſt. Druſ. [e] And ſo cited by Tertul. and Cyprian. [f] Pet. à Fig. [g] Steph. Lex. [h] Mercer, Druſ. [i] Schindl. Lex. [k] Pet. à Fig. [l] So Calv. Tarnov. [m] Tig. Munſt. Jun. Trem.

15. Alas for the day! for the day of the Lord is at hand, and as a deſtruction from the Almighty ſhall it come.

The connecting of theſe words with the former is inſerted or ſupplied by Some at the end

[n] 1 Kings viii. 37, &c. [o] Ibid. chap. ix. 3. [p] Oecolamp. Merc. Tarnov.

end of the foregoing verſe, or beginning of this, ſaying, or and ſay, as follows, viz. אהה Ahah, Alas, &c. ſo the Syriack Verſion, ܘܩܐܠܘ, the MS. Arabick likewiſe, وقولوا, and ſay; Kimchi alſo, אמרו אהה, ſay, Alas, as if it were a form by the Prophet dictated to them, what they ſhould cry or ſay. So Jerome takes it for the voice ſacerdotum & populi ad Deum clamantis, of the prieſts and people aſſembled crying unto God; ſo Some more [q] modern, ſupplying therefore, dicentes, or dicendo, ſaying. But Others think that ſupply not to have place, and that the Prophet [r] ſpeaks here in his own perſon, in pathetick language lamenting the ſad condition of the impenitent people, and deſcribing the terribleneſs of the judgment that he is ſpeaking of: whichſoever of theſe ways it be taken, the literal meaning of the words will be the ſame, Ahah; the Hebrew word, [s] אהה ahah, appears both by the uſe of it here and elſewhere to be a particle of exclamation through [t] grief or fear, or both together, היא קריאה כך על הצער ועל הראגה, It is (ſaith Kimchi) a crying out ſo by reaſon of anguiſh or ſolicitude; and therefore is by Interpreters rendred in their ſeveral languages in ſuch words, as expreſs ſuch paſſion, [u] Eheu, Heu, Hui, Hei, Ah, Ahah, Oh! The LXX. ὤιμοι, woe me! but it ſeems, not thinking one ſingle word ſufficient to expreſs the greatneſs of the paſſion, with which here the ſpeaker ſeems affected, beſides their adding ἐκτενῶς, vehemently, after the preceding word cry, do [w] thrice repeat the particle, ὤιμοι, ὤιμοι, ὤιμοι, as likewiſe the printed Arabick, الويل لي الويل لي الويل لي, woe is me! woe is me! woe is me! and that perhaps may be the reaſon why the Vulgar Latin here, as in other places, trebling the letter a, reads, a, a, a, if they be ſo read diſtinctly as three letters; ſo that to pick out thence any other myſtery, [x] as Some do, will but lead to vain conjectures: but [y] Some then think all theſe ought to be read together as one protracted ſyllable, or [z] that it came by an error in the ſcribe, who ſhould have wrote aha. The Syriack Tranſlator likewiſe twice repeats, ܐܘܗ ܐܘܗ uh, uh, which uh, is a particle, استغاثة الي الله of crying out for help to God; and in that ſenſe appears the Author of the MS. Arab. to take the Hebrew to be, rendring الغوث الي الله من جهة هذا اليوم, I cry to God for help in regard to (or againſt) this day, and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, though here he renders it וי vae, yet in ſome other places renders it as a particle of deprecating or beſeeching, קבל בעותי יי אלהים Receive my ſupplication, O Lord God, as Jer. i. 6. and iv. 10. xiv. 13. xxxii. 17. Ezek. iv. 9, 8, 14. xi. 13. xx. 49. (the Greek alſo, Joſ. vii. 7. render it οἰμαι, I pray) That, by reaſon of which, or againſt which this lamentation is made, and he ſo dolefully crieth out, or implores help from God, is by no other name or indication, than the day, a ſingle day, by what it brings with it known and diſtinguiſhed from others, viz. by the grievouſneſs and calamitouſneſs of it; Munſter therefore in his tranſlation inſerts beyond the ſimple letter of the Hebrew, O calamitatem diei [a] illius! O the calamity of that day, and Mercer, Hei qualis dies! O, what a day is it! In the next words he calls it, the day of the Lord; that great name added to any word by way of epithet, uſually betokeneth ſome great or extraordinary thing denoted by it. Here it ſeems to denote ſuch a day, or ſuch time as ſhould be ſignal and notorious for ſome ſuch extraordinary judgment, as God would execute on the people for their ill deſerts. The word day it ſelf, is [b] obſerved to be ſometimes put for judgment, (as by the Apoſtle man's day is taken to be put for man's judgment, and ſo by Ours tranſlated, 1 Cor. iv. 3.) viz. becauſe judgment is denounced on a ſet day appointed for it; ſo that the meaning will be, the day of the judgment of the Lord. God's judgments may appear by what goeth before, and what we have, ver. 25. to have been in no ſmall meaſure upon them. So that by this day of the Lord, may ſeem to be meant a day of [c] greater evils yet threatned to be ſent by God upon them, except by ſpeedy repentance averted. By whom theſe judgments ſhall be executed upon them, and the coming of which is called, that day, is not expreſſed, they having been above named, ver. 4. viz. the Palmerworm, Locuſt, Canker-worm, and Caterpiller, noxious devouring creatures, ſuch as bring a famine to the land with them. Thoſe we ſaw by diverſe literally taken (which ſeems the plaineſt way) for ſuch animals: by Others figuratively to denote ſuch enemies as ſhould invade the land, and lay all things waſte, as they uſe to do. Such difference is here likewiſe betwixt Expoſitors; by thoſe who literally underſtand it of theſe creatures, that day, is here taken for the time wherein God ſent or ſhould ſend them in ſuch multitudes, as had not elſewhere been heard of, to devour the fruits of the earth, and cauſe an extraordinary grievous famine. So here Druſius expounds it, dies quo locuſtæ venient, the day of the coming of the Locuſts; called the day of the Lord, becauſe therein God did by that means execute his judgment on the Jews, and puniſh them for their ſins. So the learned Bochartus alſo takes that to be called dies Domini, the day of the Lord, that in which he ſhould ſit as a judge, ut in Judæos animadvertat, locuſtarum agmine in eos immiſſo, to puniſh the Jews by ſending a multitude of Locuſts on them. Others look upon upon it as ambiguous whether really meant of thoſe deſtructive creatures, or figuratively of enemies compared to them: ſo Cyril, "He "calls that the day of the Lord in which his "wrath was to be executed, either by Locuſts "ſent on them, which ſhould devour the "fruits of the earth, and put them in fear of "famine, yea of death it ſelf, or elſe by the "Babylonians, who ſhould lay all things waſte "among them, &c." [d] Some take both in, as if the one were a forerunner of the other, as if the Prophet did here declare the decree of God, de venturis Locuſtis & Chaldæis omnia vaſtaturis, concerning the Locuſts that ſhould come, and the Chaldeans that ſhould utterly deſtroy all things. But Others, without reſpect to Locuſts, and thoſe other creatures properly meant, underſtand it of the enemies, the Chaldeans, only: and for this way Abarbinel is poſitive; and therefore by the day of the Lord would have to be pointed out the ninth day of the month, Ab, (a month, as he [e] obſerves ſignally fatal to the Jews) on which the temple was deſtroyed, and ſo is to them a perpetual day of ſorrow and lamentation, and crying out to God in memory thereof. But I ſee no reaſon why we ſhould forſake the firſt plain expoſition: according to that, though they had already ſuffered evil things before ſpoken of, yet there appears yet a more grievous famine to be expected by them, if not by ſpeedy repentance prevented. That this pathetick exclamation is to awaken them, and excite them to ſuch repentance, is manifeſt; and that it might have due impreſſions on them for that end, here are two reaſons given; firſt, from the nearneſs of the day; ſecondly, from the terror and unavoidableneſs of it by any other means. Firſt, for the day of the Lord is at hand, ſuddenly like to come, ſpeed therefore muſt be made in uſing ſuch means as ſhall prevent it; no time for delay in this caſe, for when it is come, there will be no avoiding, no reſiſting it; for as deſtruction from the Almighty will it come, with irreſiſtible force; prevented it may be by ſpeedy repentance before it come, but when it is come not poſſibly be reſiſted by any ſtrength of man, being from the Almighty. The very ſame expreſſion have we, Iſaiah xiii. 6. Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand, it ſhall come as a deſtruction from the Almighty. The words here in the Hebrew are, וכשד משדי יבוא Uceſhod miſhaddai yabo, to which I look on our Engliſh Tranſlation exactly agreeing; but it will not be amiſs to ſee what Others alſo ſay concerning the words, and the expoſition of them, or any part of them. As to the particle כ ce, in Uceſhod, which is tranſlated, as, the Author of the MS. Arab. Verſion (though he himſelf render it مثل as, leaving out the conjunction ו u, before it, yet notes that it is by Others ſaid to be زايدة [f] redundant, and the meaning to be only שד ſhod, deſtruction ſhall come from Shaddai; and the Syriack Verſion omits it, rendring it, and ſpoiling ſhall come from God. Abarbinel though not looking on it as redundant, yet thinks it not to be taken as Others take it, for a particle of compariſon or likeneſs, but a particle denoting [g] time (כף הזמן) as it is ſometimes uſed, and ſo that the words ſhould ſound, for the day of the Lord is at hand, to take his vengeance; and when deſtruction ſhall be from the Almighty, it ſhall come in that day, as a day ſet and appointed for evil to them. This way he ſeems to take as agreeable to his expounding that day, particularly of the ninth day of Ab, which we mentioned: but it will not ſo well agree with that way which we with Others take, according to which that particle, as, will not want its due emphaſis, importing that theſe evils in that day to come were not by chance, nor things of ordinary courſe, nor from any ordinary power, which could not be reſiſted; but ſuch heavy things as were decreed to be inflicted, and ſhould be ſuddenly, when they expected not, be inflicted on them by an irreſiſtible power, againſt which they ſhould not be able to ſtand out, as ſuch things which are determined and executed by God uſe to be.

[q] Jun. Tr. and ſee Mercer, Oecolamp, &c. [r] Pet. à Fig. Piſc. and ſee Mercer. [s] Written alſo ſometimes without the letter א at the beginning, הה. [t] هو التحزن it is an expreſſion of grief, Abu Walid, דבר חפד of fear, ſaith Aben Ezra. [u] 1. Jun. Tr. 2. Druſ. 3. Calv. 4. Mercer, Gualter. 5. Oecol. 6. Pag. 7. Tig. Munſt. [w] Although in ſome Editions it is not at all mentioned, but only put ἐκτενῶς, which Kircher therefore puts for the ſignification of the word. [x] Jerom. quia offenderant Trinitatem. [y] Ribera, Modo unicam dictionem proferamus. [z] Pet. à Fig. Ribera, although it be alſo ſo put elſewhere, as Jer. i. viii. [a] Diem mœſtum & calamitoſum, lugubrem & miſeriarum plenam diem, Ar. Mont. Woe to men in that day, ſo Pet. à Fig. takes it to import, Væ hominibus in illo die. [b] Druſ. Bochart. [c] Lively.

As for the words שד ſhod, deſtruction, and שדי Shaddai, the Almighty, there is that alluſion and agreement in letters between them, as may argue between them affinity in the root, though difference in the ſignification. The word שד ſhod, is from the root שדד ſhadad, to deſtroy, and properly ſignifies as it is rendred, deſtruction. The word שדי Shaddai, by which God is here called, being from the ſame root, may ſeem properly alſo to ſignify a deſtroyer. And therefore though by ſeveral of the Jews, as Abu Walid, Aben Ezra, and Kimchi, as it is a name of God whereby he called himſelf (Gen. xvii. 1. Exod. vi. 3.) and is called in Scripture, it be referred to this root as regularly deduced from it, yet doth [h] Abarbinel except againſt this derivation of it from a word, which ſeems to import violence and injuriouſneſs, and doing hurt, or oppreſſing, which cannot be attributed to God. How ſhould the Scripture call or deſcribe the glorious God, בתואר מגונה אשר כזה by an epithet, or name of ſo ill a ſignification as this? Nor doth it ſatisfy him that by Others it is from the ſame root rendred מנצח Menatſeach, victor, or conqueror, God not waging war with any creature, nor any creature with him; the attributes of, potent, ruler, guide, governor, are attributes more convenient to be appropriated to him, and not either ſhoded or Menatſeach, and therefore he prefers to have ſome other derivation aſſigned for the word in this uſe, and in that kind he ſeems to like of the opinion of R. Saadiah [i] who would have the word to import מי שאמר לעולם די he that ſaid to the world, enough, or ſufficient; which though Aben Ezra ſeems to ſay he underſtands not the meaning of

[d] Pet. à Fig. [e] As here, ſo more at large on Jer. ii. 24. and Hoſea v. 7. whence he reckons up ſeveral evil things that happened to them on that day. [f] As he takes it to be Joſ. vii. 5. in כשלשים. [g] And ſo Ar. Montanus. [h] On Exod. vi. 3. and ſee Buxtorf de nomin. Dei. [i] Which is alſo ſaid by Some before him in the Talmud. Buxt.

of, yet he looks on, as denoting that he at his good will and pleaſure, by which, and not by any neceſſity, he created all things, ſet bounds and meaſures to them, which they ſhould neither exceed, nor come ſhort of, ſaying, when they came to that proportion, It is enough (here ſtop, go no farther.) He alſo approves of what Others ſay that it ſignifies, which is ſufficient, viz. Allſufficient to and in himſelf, having his being of himſelf, and never receiving it from any other, as he with Some interprets it, or as Others, he that is ſufficient for performing all things, or, who hath [k] in him what is ſufficient for all creatures, or is ſufficient for ſupplying all their defects. This derivation from, די, ſufficient, with the letter ſhin added to it, Maimonides ſeems to prefer (Moreh, p. 1. chap. 63.) The ſame appears the Author of the MS. Arabick to take, rendring מתל [l] אלנאהב מן אלכאפי, as ſpoil from the ſufficient, or allſufficient; others he thinks not ſo convenient, it ſeems, to mention, though from Others we meet with them, as namely, that this name ſhould be derived from שד ſhad, a breaſt or dug (and שדים ſhadaim, the dugs,) as if he did from his plenty, as it were from breaſts and dugs, fill with good and nouriſh all things; again from Others that it is from שדא Shada, (in Chaldee anſwerable to אשד Aſhad in Hebrew) to pour forth; as if it denoted the plentiful effuſion of good on all his creatures, and ſupplying them with all things neceſſary for them. But ſure among all theſe (though for meaning they are good, and much concur in one) there ſeems none ſo regular as the firſt mentioned referring it to שדד Shadad, and therefore we ſee that it is by ſeveral of as good authority as any among the Jews to it referred, and Abarbinel's exceptions againſt it ſeem not to go on any good grounds; they are (as we ſaid) founded on this, that that root imports and implies only deſtructive violence, and ſomething of injurioufneſs, and that the word would ſignify if thence taken גולן מעול וחומץ, a robber, perverſe or injurious, an oppreſſor; things not fit to be ſpoken of God. But he is ſingular in his opinion of reſtraining the word to this harſh ſignification, going therein contrary to the authority of ſeveral Others who refer it to this root, and to the reaſon by which they are led. They take it to ſound, [m] عزيز جليل potent, great, [n] תקיף מנצח potent, conquering, overruling, (not as if this word, as he alſo would have it, did ſignify only a conqueror in battle, but one who overrules and keeps under,) and מתגבר Mithgabber, prevalent, אלקראר predominant, (as one of them renders it) in Arabick. Their reaſon for ſo rendring it ſeems to be taken from the uſe of it in the Arabick Tongue, in which that root شد Shaddah hath the notion of being ſtrong, firm, (not of waſting or deſtroying, as in Hebrew it hath) whence اشد Aſhaddo, ſignifies the ſtrength, or ſtrongeſt part of a man's age, and شديد Shadid (anſwering to שדי in Hebrew) ſtrong, firm, which I find alſo put among the attributes of God by an [p] Eaſtern Writer; and in Syriack rendred by ܚܣܝܢ; and in [q] Arabick made ſynonymous to عزيز powerful. Hence have we grounds to think that heretofore, when the Hebrew Tongue was in common uſe in its latitude, שדד was uſed not only in the notion of waſting and deſtroying, but of being ſtrong, firm, potent, as now in the Arabick it is; yea that that might be the primary notion, viz. of having power, and ſtrength in general, which ſtrength the being able to deſtroy ſeems alſo to require, and ſo came to be uſed in that notion, though it were not only to be limited to it, and may therefore, when attributed to God, ſo be underſtood as to denote in him all power, ſuch whereby he was able to make all things, and is alſo able to deſtroy them. And if it be ſpoken of any other but God, then will it alſo denote ſome in whom is great and not eaſily reſiſtible power. This I mention becauſe there are ſome who looking on this as the ſignification of this word, viz. חזק ſtrong, and powerful, or mighty, do not yet take it to be reſtrained, as Ours and moſt Others do, to the Almighty, to God, but to be an epithet, that may be attributed to any other of great power. So one of great note among the Jews cited both by Aben Ezra and Kimchi by the name of הנגיד Hannagid (Prince) ſaith that במקום הזה אינו שם הנכבר [r] in this place it is not the name of the glorious God, but תואר an adjective common to others alſo, and ſo denotes an irreſiſtible deſtruction brought on them by ſome of great power, from which is no eſcaping: and of this Aben Ezra ſaith that יפה אמר he ſpeaks well in it: among the Latins alſo Ruffinus ſo takes it, explaining it of ſuch a deſtruction, quam potentiſſimus quiſque ultor inveheret, as any the moſt powerful taker of vengeance could bring on them. But whatever good meaning this way may give, the moſt emphatical ſeems that which is given by taking the word to be as Ours and moſt Others take it, an attribute or name of God, denoting his almightineſs, and irreſiſtible power, and ſo giving to look on deſtruction by him ſent or brought on them, as ſuch as will certainly have its effect, and cannot be poſſibly reſiſted or eſcaped. To avoid all ambiguity in the word whereby it might ſeem ſpoken of any other, the Chaldee couples with it the name יהוה (Jehovah) and the Syriack renders it ſimply by the name of God, ܐܠܗܐ ܡܢ ܐܬܐ ܘܣܝܢ and ſpoiling ſhall come from God. All theſe that we have yet had to deal with manifeſtly read it שדי Shaddai, but the LXX. give ſuch an interpretation as makes ſome think that they did not ſo read, rendring, ὡς ταλαιπωρία ἐκ ταλαιπωρίας ἥξει, ſhall come as miſery from miſery, (as the printed Arabick alſo following them, كمثل شقوة من شقوة ياتي) which makes Capellus conjecture that they read in the ſecond place alſo not as others שדי Shaddai, but only שד Shod, as in the firſt word, without the letter י yod, and ſo took both in the ſame ſignification. But it is obſervable that whereas the ſame words do occur in the Hebrew, Iſaiah xiii. 6. Ceſhod Misſhaddai Yabo, they do there render them in a very different manner, and more conſonant to others, καὶ συντριβὴ παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ ἥξει (as likewiſe والانكسار ياتي من قبل الله) and contrition ſhall come from God, which ſeems an argument that theſe two books, or prophecies were not tranſlated by the ſame perſons. Whatever the occaſion was that moved them to do as they did, we need not be ſolicitous, having the true reading by all others agreed on.

[k] R. Sol. Gen. xvii. 1. [l] I ſuppoſe it ought to be אלנהב as it is in him, Iſaiah xiii. 6. for as here written it ſignifies a ſpoiler. [m] Abu Walid. [n] Aben Ezra, Exod. vi. 3. and Kimchi in Radic. [o] So R. Samuel cited by Ab. Ezra. [p] Gloſſary Arab. and Syriack MS. and printed. [q] In the printed copy. [r] See in Tarnov. out of Mahana, vaſtitas à potente non ab omnipotente, quia non loquitur de Deo, ſed viro potenti, cujus vaſtationi nemo reſiſtat, which he laſtly rejects.

16. Is not the meat cut off before our eyes, yea, joy and gladneſs from the houſe of our God?

Having told them that the day of the Lord was at hand, and threatned them with the terror of it, that they might not yet through their ſtupidity and ſenſeleſſneſs put it far from them, and defer their repentance, the only means by which it, and the farther ill conſequences thereof, might be removed; he proceeds to ſet the plague as already begun before them, and to deſcribe the nature and condition thereof to be ſuch, as already ought ſeriouſly to affect them, and threatned yet worſe things to come. Let them but open their eyes and they cannot but perceive it. How is it already with them? Is not the meat cut off before our eyes? yea, &c. The words ſo put interrogatively do more earneſtly and evidently affirm and aſſure the truth of the thing ſpoken, ſo that we cannot but look on the particle הלא halo, nunquid, non, or nonne, or an non? what is not? as having its due emphaſis: yet is it by the LXX. here left out, and the words ſimply rendred as affirmative: κατέναντι τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν ὑμῶν βρώματα ἐξωλοθρεύθη, before your eyes meats are periſhed, and ſo by the Author of the printed Arabick Verſion, to the loſs of that emphaſis. In the Syriack that that may not be, but the force of it ſhewed, it is changed into a demonſtrative, ܗܐ ho, behold before your eyes meats are ceaſed. There ſeem, according as the words are by Ours diſtinguiſhed, two things here affirmed; their being deprived of that ordinary food that they ſhould live upon in their own houſes, and of ſuch things as they ſhould offer up to God in his houſe; both which the earth with its fruits was wont to ſupply them with, and of which one depended upon the other, the latter on the former. For diſtinguiſhing theſe two, in our Tranſlation the particle, yea, is ſupplied, being not mentioned in the Hebrew, which makes Some ſo to render as if by both expreſſions were meant but the ſame thing, viz. by meat in the firſt place no other than the offerings, expreſſed by joy and gladneſs of God's houſe, with which they were accompanied in the ſecond. So the MS. Arabick, אלים עלי אעיננא אנקטע אלקרבן מן בית אלאהנא מע אלפרח ואלטרב Is not before our eyes cut off the offering from the houſe of our God, with joy and gladneſs? and that his meaning may be underſtood he inſerts a note, that he calls the offering אכל Ocel, meat, becauſe it is מאכול אלנאר that which is eaten (or devoured) of the fire. To much the ſame purpoſe are the words of the Vulgar Latin, nunquid non coram oculis veſtris alimenta perierunt de domo Dei noſtri, lætitia & exultatio? (which the Doway Tranſlation renders; why, are not the victuals periſhed before your eyes, joy and exultation out of the houſe of our God?) by ſeveral Expoſitors interpreted, while by victuals, &c. they underſtand thoſe [s] ſacrifices brought to the houſe of the Lord, from which the prieſts had their maintenance, from which was wont to be mutual joy, tam offerentium quam ſacerdotum, both of thoſe that brought them, and of the prieſts; yet are they by Others ſo underſtood, as of different things, viz. meat, more generally of all things [t] quæ ad victum neceſſaria fuerunt, which were neceſſary for their food and ſuſtenance, and by the other words, joy and gladneſs, quæ ad lætitiam & feſtorum celebritatem, thoſe which pertained to mirth and the celebrity of their feſtivals. So that [u] as one expreſſeth the ſame meaning, it is by the words declared, that God had apparently cut off from them not only thoſe things, ex quibus vivamus, by which we (the Prophet taking in his own perſon with them) may live, but alſo quæ ſibi à nobis offerri juſſit ex terræ fructibus, ut cum eo lætaremur, thoſe things which he commanded by us to be brought to him of the fruits of the earth, that we might rejoice with him. To the ſame purpoſe doth Cyril make the Greek of the LXX. to ſound, viz. that by the firſt, (viz. the meat) are to be underſtood the fruits of the earth now ripe, the corn now calling for the reaper, and the grapes fully ripe for the treader, which now before their eyes, and ſeeming to be at hand for their enjoyment, being by ſudden invaſion of the Locuſts devoured, he ſaith their meat was cut off from before their eyes, taken as it were out of their mouths, when they were juſt ready, when they were ready to eat it: and then by joy and gladneſs, which he ſaith were cut off out of the houſe of their God, thoſe offerings (or ſacrifices) which they offered with rejoicing, out of the great plenty which their fields afforded, as χαριστήρια, offerings of thankſgiving to him, for his bounty to them. So among the Jews, David Kimchi in very like manner diſtinguiſheth the words, and explains them as that by the firſt clauſe, Is not the meat cut off before our eyes? is meant, that when the fruits of the earth appeared now ripe, the Locuſts came up before their eyes, and cut them off, and by the ſecond, that after the meat was cut off, joy and gladgladneſs were alſo cut off from the houſe of their God, becauſe they brought their offerings, according to what was appointed, at the time of harveſt, and then rejoiced, great being the joy of harveſt, according to what is ſaid, according to the joy in harveſt, Iſaiah ix. 3. Aben Ezra, for diſtinguiſhing the clauſes or members of this verſe, looks upon the words הלא נכרת is not there cut off, as to belong to both the former and the latter words, and to be before them repeated, Is not joy and gladneſs cut off from the houſe of our God? In which way [w] ſome Others alſo follow him, and it appears to have been the meaning of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who therefore gives two words of the like ſignification, one concluding the firſt clauſe, the other beginning the ſecond, rendring the firſt הלא עוד דאנחנא חזן עבורא סף hath not, even we ſeeing, the corn failed, and the ſecond פסק מבית מקדשא דאלהנא חדוא וביע Is not (for that is neceſſarily underſtood) ceaſed from the ſanctuary of our God, joy and gladneſs? R. Tanchum ſeems to doubt how the words muſt be diſtinguiſhed, and which of the two ways is to be taken; ſomething he ſuppoſeth neceſſarily to be underſtood and ſupplied, and that to be the conjunction, and, but then looks on it as ambiguous to what word that ſhould be joined, whether שמחה joy, ſo as that the words ſhould ſound, Is not the meat cut off before our eyes from the houſe of our God, and joy and gladneſs? (which way the Syriack takes, rendring, and behold before our eyes are ceaſed meats from the houſe of our God, ܘܫܘܒܚܐ ܘܚܕܘܬܐ and joy and exultation?) or elſe with the word בית אלהינו the houſe of our God, ſo as to ſound, Is not the meat cut off before your eyes, and from the houſe of our God joy and gladneſs? which is that which our Engliſh follow, and more exactly the Geneva, which hath not, yea, but, and joy and gladneſs from the houſe of our God. The difference betwixt theſe is, that in the one by meat, is underſtood peculiarly ſuch offerings as were brought with rejoicing to the temple, but in the other by meat, more generally what they all of them had any where to live on: and then by joy and gladneſs, ſuch things diſtinctly as were brought into the temple for offerings to God, and ſerved for the maintenance of the prieſts: which of theſe ways be taken it will be much to the ſame purpoſe, as to the meaning of the words, which are a neceſſary declaration of great ſcarcity. If the fruits of the earth had not failed, neither would they have failed of proviſions for themſelves, neither would have ceaſed that joy, with which thoſe offerings by God required to be brought to his temple were to be eaten, according to his command, Deut. xii. 7. and xvi. 11. both of theſe failings are from the ſame cauſe, and one infers the other, the ceaſing of that joy, a failing of that from which it ſhould have aroſe. So that this expreſſion may we look on as agreeing with what is ſaid above, ver. 9, &c. The meat-offering and the drink-offering is cut off from the houſe of the Lord; ver. 7. withholden from the houſe of the Lord, of your God, ver. 13. Aben Ezra looks on it as more particularly denoting the defect of wine, which is ſaid to cheer (or make glad) both God and man, Jud. ix. 13. But that expreſſion ſeems no proof why this here ſhould be underſtood only of ſuch joy as proceeds only from the wine-offerings, as we before ſaw from Kimchi (eſpecially thoſe at harveſt) being ſuch as were to be accompanied with joy, and God himſelf accepting of them might be ſaid to [x] delight in them, as things of a ſweet [y] ſavour to him, according to the uſual expreſſion of Scripture. By what means theſe things, both the meat, and the joy and gladneſs mentioned, are (or [z] ſhall be farther) cut off, is not by all agreed: the ſame difference which we before obſerved is between them: [a] many think this to be done by the enemy, and the deſtruction by them brought on the land. [b] Others by the Locuſts and ſuch other noxious creatures before named. [c] Some look upon the matter ſo doubtful as to ſay, dum Locuſta vel hoſtis, while either the Locuſt or the enemy, bereaves us of thoſe fruits of which we hoped even now to have received a plentiful crop; and [d] there is who aſcribes it to the Locuſts, as the plaineſt, of which [e] One takes theſe words to be probable proof, hic locus facere videtur pro illis qui veras locuſtas veniſſe intelligunt; this place ſeems to make for them who underſtand what is ſaid of the coming of true (or real) Locuſts upon them. And the learned Bochartus argues from it againſt Abarbinel, who looks on the calamities deſcribed as brought upon them by, or after the deſtruction of the temple by the Chaldees, to prove that it manifeſtly deſcribes ſuch evils as befel them while the temple was yet ſtanding, to which they had not now their wonted offerings to carry, being by the Locuſts deprived of them, to which that it will be agreeable to add the unſeaſonable drought of the weather, the next words make manifeſt.

[s] Sa, Menoch, Tirin. [t] Ar. Mont. [u] Tarnov.

17. The ſeed (or as in the Margin, grains) is (or are) rotten under their clods, the garners are laid deſolate, the barns are broken down; for the corn is withered.

According to this rendring, which I ſuppoſe to be the moſt convenient of any given, and ſhall after endeavour to ſhew, this which is ſaid, is an heightning in the deſcription of the calamity that he ſpeaks of, in that not only ſuch fruits of the earth which were already grown up, and they had hoped to enjoy, were, as it were, taken out of their mouths for the preſent, but that there [f] was no appearance or expectation of any better condition for the future: that ſeed which ſhould have grown up to them into an harveſt for the next year, being grown rotten and withered under the clods in the earth, and nothing likely to ſpring from it: ſo that by reaſon of what they already already ſaw and felt, the villages were become deſolate, their garners and barns neglected, broken down, or ſuffered to fall, ſeeming to be of no uſe to them, as neither having, nor being likely to have any thing to put in them. This rendring and interpretation that we may juſtify againſt others, that are very different from it, it will be neceſſary to go over particularly the words, and adjuſt the ſignification of them: which that we may make way to, it will be convenient in the firſt place, to ſet before the readers eyes thoſe rendrings, which we ſay are ſo different from what Ours chooſe to follow, eſpecially ſuch as by their antiquity and authority ſeem to challenge reſpect, as,

[w] Tigur. Pet. à Fig. [x] Mercer. [y] Levit. xxiii. 13. [z] So Some take it in the future tenſe. [a] Abarb. Ar. Mont. Ribera. [b] Jerome, Cyril, Kimchi. [c] Mercer. [d] Sanct. [e] Pet. à Fig. [f] Ar. Mont. Pet. à Fig.

1. That of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who renders the former part of the verſe, אחמסיאו גרבי חמר תחות מנופתהון [g] by the Latin Tranſlation in the Polyglot Bibles put, computruerunt [h] dolia vini ſub operculis ſuis, the wine veſſels are grown rotten under their coverings, as by Mercer, Soluta ſunt ſub ſuis operculis dolia vinaria, the wine veſſels are looſed under, &c. (I ſuppoſe disjointed,) It is by Abu Walid explained خبجت دنان الخمر وعفنت من طول مكثها فارغة the wine veſſels ſtink, or are become mouldy, or muſty, by reaſon of their ſtanding ſo long empty.

2. That of the LXX. who render Εσκίρτησαν σαμάλεις ἐπὶ ταῖς φάτναις αὐτῶν. The heifers leap (or ſkip) up and down in their ſtalls; with whom the printed Arab. alſo agrees.

3. That of the Syriack ܐܫܬܡܡܘ ܒܥܠܬܐ ܒܡܪܥܝܬܗܘܢ which the Latin Tranſlator renders, Incænatæ manſerunt juvencæ ſuper præſepibus ſuis, and the heifers remain without meat in their ſtalls (although I ſuppoſe the word more plainly ſignifies roaſted than without meat, ſo that it might be rendred, are ſcorched, or parched with drought.)

4. That of the Vulgar Latin, computruerunt jumenta in ſtercore ſuo, the beaſts are rotted in their dung. Theſe, we ſee, do much differ from what Ours chooſe to follow, and in which they agree with moſt of the Jews, and more modern Interpreters among Chriſtians alſo. That which is the cauſe of ſuch difference appears to be three Hebrew words in this clauſe, which are no where elſe in Scripture found, and therefore were by Interpreters rendred by conjecture, as they thought moſt agreeable to the meaning of the place. The firſt of thoſe words, as they lie in order in the Hebrew, is עבשו Abeſhu, by Ours rendred, is (or are) rotten, which being not elſewhere found in Scripture, but another near unto it, viz. עפשו Apheſhu, being in uſe in their Rabbins, which differs from the root of this only by turning ב, b, into פ, p, [i] which is in other words alſo found done, [k] divers of the Jew Doctors take this to be of the ſame ſignification with that, which is to grow muſty, mouldy, putrefied or rotten, muceſcere, mucidum fieri, putreſcere. But that antient learned Grammarian [l] Abu Walid chooſeth to give the ſignification of it by comparing it with an Arab. word عبس Abeſa, as it ſignifies much the ſame with يبس Yabeſa, to grow dry, which he looks on as beſt befitting this place, viz. becauſe the hurt here ſpoken of is rather done by drought than moiſture, as we ſhall by and by ſee. The Author of the MS. Arabick renders it by עתרת Oththat, by which I ſuppoſe he means, is worm-eaten, (for in Arabick the word being uſed to denote worms, or moths eating of wools, and عثث Athatho, from the ſame root, الفساد corruption) noting that there is no derivation of the word found in the Hebrew Tongue, and that therefore they interpret עבשו Abeſhu by Aththu, من موضعه as the place ſeems to require. Theſe all that we have mentioned appear to concur in taking the word to import ſuch a corruption or marring of the thing ſpoken of, whereby it becomes unprofitable for that uſe or end, which otherwiſe ordinarily might be expected and found from it, and in this do agree with them the generality of Interpreters in Latin or other languages, rendring it, computruerunt, (as the Vulgar Latin doth) or ſomething equivalent. The Chaldee likewiſe as to the ſignification of the word ſuggeſts the ſame: but as for the Greek which renders it ἐσκίρτησαν, what ground they had for it I cannot perceive from any thing in the Hebrew word as now read, and as to the Arabick عبس Abeſa, which might ſeem to give ſome light to it, Capellus obſerves it to have a ſignification even contrary to that of the Greek σκιρτάω, to leap or ſkip, viz. to be ſorrowful, or grieved, although he ſaith that a word transferred from one tongue to another, may, as it often (he ſaith) happeneth, have a contrary ſignification in one language to what it had in the other, and ſo I ſuppoſe he means that Abeſa, ſignifying, to be ſorry, or ſad in Arabick, might be from עבש Abaſh, in Hebrew ſignifying to leap or ſkip for mirth. But we find no other proof for it, than that which perhaps he would have this of the Greek, rendring it ἐσκίρτησαν, to be. He might perhaps better have compared it to عبث Abetha by change of ש ſh, into ث, which is not unuſual in thoſe tongues, and there ſignifies to play; but that which he looks on as the main reaſon for their ſo rendring it, is, that they read otherwiſe in the Hebrew than is now read, viz. not עבשו Abeſhu but בעטו Baetu from a verb which ſignifies to [m] kick, to be wanton; but theſe words are ſo different in ſound and writing, as that it is ſcarce likely that in any corrected copy one ſhould be put for the other. As for the Syriack, if the word ܬܥܘ Tavai, be rendred as it is by the Latin Tranſlator of it, incænatæ manſerunt, they remained without meat; I know not to which of the ſignifications before by any aſcribed to the Hebrew עבשו, it will be well reduced: if it be according to the more uſual ſignification of the word

(as

[g] In R. Tanchum it is written איתמאסו. [h] Vaſa vinaria, Pet. à Fig. [i] See Kimchi, Druſ. Kimchi, R. Tanch. R. Sol. [k] Ab. Ez. [l] In the words עבש and פרך. [m] Deut. xxxii. 15.

(as we ſaid) rendred, are ſcorched, or parched, it will be reducible to that which Abu Walid looks on as proper to it, To be dried, which ſignification alſo the forementioned عبس Abeſa in Arabick hath. Of theſe rendrings of this word, and the meaning given it by theſe Interpreters, we ſhall the better judge, by ſeeing how they underſtand the next word with which this is joined in conſtruction, which is פרדות Perudoth, by Ours rendred, the ſeed, in which rendring they agree with the moſt, both of the Jews and modern Chriſtian Interpreters, who look on the words as ſo ſignifying, and ſeem to have reaſon ſo to do both from the ſignifications of the root in the Hebrew, and ſuch dialects as much agree with it, and from ſuch forms as are therein derived from it. The root פרד Parad, having both in Hebrew, Chaldee and Arabick, the notion of ſeparating, or being ſeparate, may well have derived from it ſuch nouns as may ſignify that which is ſingle and ſeparate, or divided from others, as grains of corn, and ſeed ſown and ſcattered in the earth, and ſo may this noun therefore in Hebrew here be well thought ſo to ſignify, though of form ſingle, not elſewhere [n] as a noun ſubſtantive uſed in Scripture, there being no occaſion for it, as well as פְּרֵדְתָּא Pheredto in the [o] Syriack, which is of known uſe in that ſignification, (in the verſion of the New Teſtament,) viz. of grain or ſeed, and in its plural, grains, or ſeeds, and therefore ſo ſeems it here with good reaſon rendred, as by ſome of the [p] Jews explained גרגרי החטה והשעורה the grains of wheat and barley, or גרגרי הורע, &c. [q] of ſeeds which are ſown, ſeparated, ſcattered under ground; and as Abu Walid in Arabick الحبوب المبذورة or المبذورات للزرعة grains ſcattered for ſowing, and R. Tanchum, الحبوب المعدودة للزراعة لانها تغرق في الارض grains prepared for ſowing, ſo called becauſe they are ſcattered in the ground. The Author of the MS. Arabick gives it the ſame ſignification, and looks on it as derived from the ſame root, rendring it المتفردات Almotapharredatu (literally ſignifying ſeparated) in a note explaining himſelf to mean, קמח אלבדאר אלדי הו קמח מתפרד ליס פיה זואן ſeed wheat, which is ſeparated wheat, in which are no tares mixed, לאן כאן רסם אלנאס יבדרו אלגל מן אלקמח becauſe the cuſtom of men is to ſow the chief (or choiceſt) of wheat. Abarbinel alſo looks on it as ſo called from the ſame ſignification of that root, though for a different reaſon, viz. not becauſe ſeparate and diſtinct one from another, or from being mixed with tares, but becauſe ſeparated (or hidden) from the ſight of men, as ſeed in its holes under the ground is. In all theſe we have the ſame ſignification, and the ſame root of the noun, though with ſome difference in giving the reaſon of the derivation of it; and the notion ſeems ſo probable and proper, that the modern Chriſtian Interpreters generally take it, rendring, ſemina, grana, ſata, [r] ſemina diſperſa, [s] grana ſeminum. But for thoſe other rendrings by thoſe ancient Interpreters which we have named, there is not that probable reaſon found, why the Chaldee Paraphraſt ſhould render the word by גרבי חמר wine veſſels, I find no reaſon aſſigned but his bare authority; how the word might in his time be uſed, I know not. As for the Greek δαμάλεις (and the like may be ſaid of the Syriack and Arabick following them) heifers: that that cannot be a ſignification of the word פרדות Perudoth ſeems acknowledged; and therefore do [t] ſeveral conjecture that they read it otherwiſe, viz. פרות (without the letter ד, d,) Paroth, which doth ſo ſignify. The ſame may be for the ſame reaſon [u] ſaid of the Vulgar Latin rendring it, jumenta, beaſts, but is by [w] Some thought to have read the words, though with all the ſame letters, yet with other vowels; as if the Author thereof took it to be the plural number, from פרדה Pirdah the feminine gender of פרד Perid a Mule; and one ſort of beaſt named to comprehend all the reſt of the like nature, beaſts or cattle in general. But this way of flying to conjectures of different readings is very uncertain: it muſt be proved that they did read ſo, and ſome reaſon why they ſhould read ſo, when that reading from which they vary will give as good or better meaning as, or than that which they ſubſtitute, as here it doth.

Concerning the third word which is here uſed, and not elſewhere in Scripture, there is no leſs difference betwixt Interpreters, and Expoſitors, it is מגרפתיהם Megrephotehem, rendred to us, their clods. In rendring of this have Ours alſo going before them, both the Jewiſh, and moſt of the modern Expoſitors, which as to the moſt part, do though ſomething in their expreſſions, yet not in their meaning, ſeem much (if at all) to differ, between themſelves. [x] Abu Walid whom we look on as among the ancienter of the Jewiſh Grammarians which we have, renders it خطوطها כטוטהא Catuteha, the lines thereof, and explains it اي الخطوط التي يخطها الزارع بالسكة بعد البذر which the plower draweth with his plowſhare after [y] the corn is ſowed, which, ſaith he, are as خدوش في الارض ſcratches in the ground. And ſo [z] again in another place to the ſame purpoſe, ſaying that they are ſo called تشبيها بالخدوش والخوش for their likeneſs to ſcratchings or wounds made in the ſkin by ones nails, which are breakings of the ſkin. The ſame words almoſt hath [a] R. Tanchum, viz. that تحت מגרפותיהם tachath megrephotehem is תחת חדושהא under its ſcratches, i. e. تحت الخطوط التي يحفرها المحراث التي كانها كسور في الارض the lines which the plow diggeth, which are as it were breaches in the earth, (which alſo are elſewhere (Pſalm lxv. 10.) for much like reaſon called גדודים Gedudim, inciſions, [n] As a participle it is uſed, Ezek. i. 10. [o] And פרד in the Rabbins. [p] Ab. Ezra. [q] Kimchi, Rad. and Notes. [r] Tigur. [s] Munſt. [t] Merc. Capel. [u] Grotius. [w] Ribera, Chr. à Caſtr. [x] In the root גרף. [y] Which will be ſowing under furrow, except he mean a harrow. [z] In the root פרך. [a] Who in his Dictionary renders the words عفن الحب المبذور تحت خبب التراب المتراكم the ſeed is grown muſty (or putrefied) under the rows of earth, heaped up together.

incisions, (by Ours translated furrows) from גדד Gedad, to cut or make an incision. This signification they confirm from the word אגרוף Egroph, which is found, Exod. xxi. 18. and by Ours and most Others both Jews and Christians rendred the fist, but by them شادخ كاسر any thing that wounds or makes a [b] breach, كل شي يجرح او يشدخ به. Mean while it is apparent, that by these lines or scratches (as they call them) they must mean not the furrows laid hollow and open, but covered with the earth, which by the plow or harrow, is broken or drawn over them, the word תחרת tachath, under, joined to it, necessarily requires it so to be understood; and therefore Aben Ezra expounds it by העפר the dust, or earth, and Kimchi by חתיכות העפר fragments or portions of dust, (or earth) which Ours therefore render clods, and most other modern Interpreters glebas. For this [c] Some fetch confirmation from the Arabick, in which they say that جرف Jarph signifies a clot of earth which the water sweeps or carries away with it: so also that it may be used for gleba quævis, any clod of earth. The root of the word in the Hebrew גרף garaph, and in the Arabick جرف signifying in [d] both to sweep, and to remove away and disperse, may perhaps not unfitly afford a derivation to a noun that may signify the earth broken and cast, swept or drawn over the corn by the plow or harrow: the signification also of a clot or clod may be also confirmed by الجرفة signifying a piece of broken bread, and so perhaps any fragments or broken pieces of any other thing, as clods are of the earth. There is another rendring of the word made mention of by the Author of the MS. Arabick (although he render it by the very Hebrew word مجارفهم) viz. انادر which signifies either corn floors, or the heaps of corn in the floors التي منها بجرف القمح ويودا الي الصحرا from which the wheat (or seed) is removed (or swept, or taken away) and carried into the field to be sown; so making the notion of the root to be the same before mentioned, of taking or carrying away. This way seems also taken by some mentioned by Grotius, who render it acervos, as if it were said that the seed (or grain) were marred, and so made unfit for sowing, or uncapable of growing, being yet in the very floor laid up in heaps. All these, however else differing, agree in this that the mischief here described is such a marring of the seed from whence they were to expect an increase, that there was no hopes of a future harvest. But as to the other forementioned ancient Interpreters, as they are very wide from this exposition in the former words, so are they in this also; accommodating it as they thought best to the meaning that they give of those. The Chaldee renders מגופתהון Meguphathon their coverings, viz. of the wine vessels. The LXX. and agreeably to them the Syriack and printed Arabick ἐπὶ ταῖς φάτναις αὐτῶν, in their stalls, or stables (or by their mangers) The Vulgar Latin, in stercore suo, in their dung. In both which versions Mercer thinks relation may be had for the derivation of the word to the root גרף Garaph, as it signifies to sweep, as dung is swept away from under cattle, or out of their stables. But I know not how either of them will be so easily intelligible, or agreeable to the word, and the place, as that in the first place mentioned, as by Ours and many Others followed; and that therefore have we good reason to adhere to. But then doth occur here a question, which is by those, that embrace that way of interpretation, differently solved; and that is by what means the feed in the ground came to be marred, as it is here said to be. The reason is by Some given to be, from the [e] abundance of wet, or excessive plenty of rain. By Others from great drought and want of rain; there being no doubt but that either of these may be pernicious and destructive to the seed sown in the ground, the one by rotting it, the other by withering and shrinking, or drying it up, so that it shall not grow and spring up. Among those that attribute it to the abundance of rain, is by the learned [f] Bochartus reckoned Kimchi, whose words by him cited are only these יתעפשו גרגרי הורע מפני הגשמים, which he renders, Putrescunt grana seminis propter pluvias, the grains of the seed are perished by reason of the rains. But here is manifestly either a mistake in him, or defect in the copy that he followed. For in all the copies that I have seen printed and a MS. there are to the words by him quoted added others making up the full sentence with them, which shew him to be of a clean contrary mind, in which after מפני הגשמים by reason of rains, are שלא ירדו עליהם כי גם כן תהיה עצירה גדולה בשנים האלה because they descended not on them, because there will be also a great drought (or restraint of rain) in those years.

As for Diodati also, whom he cites as of that opinion, it is true the words which he cites are in [g] one edition found, viz. that the grains are so corrupted du soverchie pioggi by overmuch rain, but in [h] another later edition, which the English Translator follows, are found words to a clean contrary meaning, viz. that it could not bud (or spring up) per lestreme joccita by reason of extreme drought, as if he were in doubt, as Others seem to be, whether the hurt were by the one or the other of these causes, [i] vel pluviarum frequentia, vel rarita tenimia, whether by the excess, or by the defect of rain, or as [k] Some seem to join both, viz. post diuturnos imbres, sævientem siccitatem, seu æstum solis, after long rains, parching drought and scorching heat of the sun following. But Kimchi, as we said, manifestly attributes it not to the abundance, but to the defect or want of rain, which is manifestly the opinion of Abu Walid, whose words are that the meaning of the words Abashu Perudoth, the [b] Abu Wal. גרף. [c] Bochart. [d] Whence is מגרופה in the Rabbinical and Chaldee Dialect, and in Arab. مجرفة a shovel or like instrument to sweep away dirt or dust. [e] Jun. Trem. [f] P. 472. [g] In 4to Genev. 1607. [h] Genev. 1641. in Fol. [i] Pelican. [k] Danæus.

I

the grains are dried up, אלתשניץ ואלתעטים לאטר אלקחט אלדי נאלהם התי יבשת אלחבוב תחת אלארץ אד לא ינול עליהא מטר פלם תנבת is to ſet forth the foulneſs and greatneſs of the matter of the famine which ſeized on them, ſo as that the ſeeds were dried up under the ground, by reaſon that no rain deſcended thereon, and ſo they could not ſpring up. R. Tanchum alſo ſaith that this happened through extremity of drought, and this, ſaith he, ſheweth ان مع الجراد عدم الامطار that together with the Locuſts there was defect of rain, which alſo appears by what is ſaid in what follows, (ver. 20.) כי יבשו אפיקי מים for the rivers of water are dried up. This expreſſion (together with that, ver. 19. the fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs, the flame hath burnt up all the trees of the field, and that which follows, ver. 20. and the fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs) doth the forementioned learned man Bochartus, bring as an argument for proof, that it is extreme drought, and not exceſs of wet that is here intimated. For proof of the ſame he argues likewiſe, from that this calamity is joined to the deſtruction brought on the fruits of the earth by the Locuſts, and other noxious animals mentioned before, becauſe thoſe creatures do moſt abound when there is much heat and drought, not in times of wet and rain, which are deſtructive to them, as he proves out of ſuch [l] Authors as write of the nature of them, and in this way (as he obſerves) the ſeed will be ſaid, not ſo much putreſcere, to putrefy and rot, which will be from ſuperfluous moiſture, as vaneſcere, to vaniſh away, to come to nought, which will be when it is withered and ſhrunk up for want of moiſture, which we ſaw to be the notion by Abu Walid forementioned aſſigned to the word Abaſh עבש, viz. of being dried up. This tedious inſiſting on the words have we been forced to, by reaſon of the very great difference betwixt Interpreters in the rendring of them. As for the following words, which are a farther deſcription of the calamity befallen them, we ſhall find them though not at ſo great diſtance, yet not altogether to agree. They are, as by Ours tranſlated, The garners are laid deſolate, the barns are broken down. The garners אצרות Otzhroth, which ſignifies both things laid up for uſe, and the repoſitories or places, in which they are laid up, Treaſures or Treaſuries, as Theſaurus in Latin, and Θησαυροὶ in Greek, by which this is by [m] Some tranſlated. R. Solomon adding של יין ושל שמן of wine and oil, doth not expreſs whether he mean the ſtore of thoſe things, or the ſtore-houſes; but I ſuppoſe he means the latter. Kimchi more plainly expreſſeth himſelf ſo to do, while he explains it, the treaſuries התבואה of the fruits of the earth are deſolate (laid waſte, or forſaken) becauſe there is nothing to be carried into them, and ſo they be or lye waſte. And ſo is it manifeſt that for the moſt part, modern Interpreters take it, their words, though different, tending to the ſame thing, as horrea, theſauri, cellæ, thecæ, apothecæ, reconditoria, granaria; all taking it for repoſitories, in which things are laid up, or ſtored; though ſome more generally, of any ſort of things, others more peculiarly, of grain or corn, as Ours do, in rendring garners, as indeed the place ſeems here to require it to be underſtood, that being both in the words foregoing and following particularly ſpoken of. But the Tigurin Verſion, differently from them, underſtands it of the things laid up, rendring, vaſtata ſunt quæ repoſita fuerunt, which with the preceding words added, which according to it are, computruerunt ſemina diſperſa ſubter glebas ſuas, will ſound, The ſeeds that were diſperſed (or ſown) are putrefied under their clods, thoſe which were laid up or waſted (or deſtroyed.) Both theſe will concur in one meaning, to ſhew their being deprived of that ordinary plenty of corn which they were wont to enjoy, and had need of repoſitories to put it up in. If there be no corn, no need of garners, if the garners be laid deſolate, and let fall, it is a ſign there is no corn to be laid up, and taken care of. But I think it more agreeable to the place here, and with the following words, that it be underſtood of the garners, or repoſitories, wherein thoſe things ſpoken of were wont to be laid up, than of the things; and ſo I ſuppoſe it taken alſo by thoſe ancient Interpreters the Chaldee and the Syriack, which uſe words from the ſame root, and of the ſame ſignification with the Hebrew אוצריא Otſraya, tranſlated cellaria, or as Mercer, Apothecæ and ܐܘܨܪ̈ܐ Autzre, horrea, and ſo by the Greek Θησαυροὶ, treaſuries, as we before intimated, and again repeat, that we obſerve that in ſome [n] copies inſtead of it is read by a manifeſt error ταυροὶ, bulls, perhaps becauſe δαμάλεις, heifers went before in that tranſlation.

Much to the ſame purpoſe with theſe are the next following words, inſomuch that Kimchi ſaith that in them כפל הענין, he doubles the ſenſe (i. e. repeats the ſame thing, though in different words) inaſmuch as ממגורות Memmeguroth is the ſame ſignification with אצרות Otſeroth, both ſignifying repoſitories. R. Solomon ſeems to make this difference here, by Otſeroth, are meant ſuch in which wine or oil are ſtored up, by Memeguroth, ſuch in which wheat or corn is put. [o] Others ſeem to take it otherwiſe, as that by the firſt ſhould be ſignified a receptable of corn and like neceſſary proviſions, by the latter ſuch in which wine alſo is laid up. So ſeem the LXX. to take it, having rendred the firſt by Θησαυροὶ treaſures, the latter by ληνοὶ wine preſſes; as likewiſe the Syriack, who render the firſt by ܐܘܨܪ̈ܐ barns, this latter by ܡܥܨܪ̈ܘܬܐ Maatzrotho, wine preſſes (as the printed Arabick alſo by معاصر Maaſer.) All that we may gather from the difference between them, is that the words ſeem (as Kimchi obſerves) both of them, indefinitely to ſignify any repoſitory, or place, in which things for neceſſary uſe, whether corn, wine, or the like, are are brought together and laid up. As for this latter word which we are ſpeaking of, ממגרות Memguroth (which is from the root גור gur, in that ſignification wherein it ſignifies to gather together) Aben Ezra ſaith of it that it is מלה ורה a word of a ſtrange or unuſual form, viz. becauſe of the letter מ, m, doubled at the beginning of it, whereas one ſingle m would have been more regular, and that it ſhould have been מגרות Meguroth, and ſo the plural number of [p] מגורה Megurah, which occurs, Hagg. ii. 19. and there ſignifies a barn: So ſaith R. Tanchum, حق جمعه ان يكون מגורות فزادوا على الميم المركبة منها اخري فصارت ממגורות Its plural number ought to have been Meguroth, but by adding of another m, to that m which forms the noun, it is made Mammeguroth. By adding of that according to him, and moſt of the other Jewiſh Expoſitors, and Chriſtians alſo generally, is there nothing altered, either in the ſignification or conſtruction, from what it would have been in that more regular and ſimple form. Only Kimchi obſerves, that his father thought otherwiſe, viz. that the firſt מ, m, was not eſſential to the word, but as a miniſterial particle, or prepoſition prefixed to it, ſignifying, of, that ſo the ſenſe ſhould be, of the barns (ſome) are broken down, though that letter m, hath not that vowel which in ſuch caſes it uſually hath, viz. the vowel, i, but a. Abarbinel alſo is of that opinion that the firſt letter is a particle prefixed, and in the ſignification of מן min, from or by reaſon of, and then gives another ſignification to the noun, viz. of fear, and would have it then with alteration of the order in conſtruction, to ſound, that the garners were deſolate, and broken down, by reaſon of fear, viz. of the enemy, in as much as through fear of him there was neither ſowing nor reaping. But the firſt way mentioned ſeems, as of the ſimpleſt in conſtruction, ſo of the plaineſt meaning, and is as by the moſt, ſo by Ours, with good reaſon taken. As for the verb נהרסו Neherſu, rendred, are broken down: of the ſignification of it there is no queſtion, it importing ruin and deſtruction. Yet doth Kimchi mollify the expreſſion by ſaying it may be underſtood, באלו נהרסו, are as if they were broken down, or ruined, becauſe there is nothing brought into them: but adding, that if it be properly taken, that they were actually deſtroyed, or ruined, that it was ſo becauſe there was none that would take care of them, or repair them from year to year according to their uſual cuſtom, as having no uſe of them, and ſo they fell down and periſhed. For what reaſon they were ſo neglected and ſuffered to fall, is expreſſed in the next words; For the corn is withered. This added to what he before ſaid, that the ſeed was rotten (or withered) under the clods, if it be not a repetition of the ſame in other words, ſeems to import, [q] quod ſupererat ex illa ſemente, All that was left or remained of that ſeed not quite marred, (or came from it) that was alſo withered above ground, ſo that none came to perfection, and ſo there was nothing left to put into the barns, and ſo no need or uſe of them, that they ſhould take care of keeping them up (which makes alſo for them who render the foregoing word, barns, as proper for corn, againſt them that take it for cellars of wine.)

[l] Pliny, Ariſtot. as alſo out of Tertullian, &c and Druſ. [o] See Ribera, and Pet. à Fig. [m] Pagn. [n] Baſil. in fol. 1597. and ſee Kimchi Concord.

The verb הביש hobiſh, rendred by Ours withered, we have had before occaſion to ſpeak of more than once, as on ver. 10, 11, 12. and obſerve it to be differently uſed and rendred, in the notion of two different roots, viz. of יבש Yabaſh, to be dry, or dried, and of בוש Boſh, to be aſhamed, or confounded, as the place where it occurs ſeems to require. Both are here attributed to it, the one by ſome, the other by others. The firſt is embraced, as by Ours, ſo by many others ancient and modern, ſo the LXX. renders it, ὅτι ἐξηράνθη σῖτος, becauſe the wheat is withered. So the Syriack, ܡܝܒܫ ܚܛܐ Vibeſh oburo, and the corn is dried up, (or withered.) The printed Arabick alſo, لان القمح جف becauſe, &c. Among modern Interpreters alſo many render it by [r] aruit, or [s] exaruit, e ſecuto, ſaith Diodati, is dried up, in one edition, or as in another [t] edition, e periro per la ſiccita, is periſhed through drought. But Others again take it in the other ſignification of being confounded, or aſhamed. So the Vulgar Latin, quia confuſum eſt triticum, becauſe the wheat is confounded, which [u] Others alſo more modern follow, uſing either the [w] ſame word, or ſuch other as is equivalent to it, quod pudefactum ſit, becauſe the wheat is made aſhamed, and it is that which among the learned Jews Some alſo take. So the MS. Arabick Verſion [x] خزي الدجن the corn is confounded, or aſhamed, or put to ſhame. So R. Tanchum excepting againſt the taking it here in the other ſignification of being dried, or withered, becauſe (ſaith he) لا معني لييبس البر مع رءي الجراد له There is no convenient meaning in ſaying the corn is withered, with what was ſhewed that the Locuſts had eaten it. But this exception of his I ſuppoſe is of no neceſſity, if the words be taken, as above we ſaid they may, for repeating of the foregoing words, ſhewing what befel the corn in the ground under the clods, or if it be underſtood, as we ſhewed by Some it is, for what did remain of the corn not devoured by the Locuſts, as it is probable ſome might, though they made great deſtruction. As for the meaning of the word in his way, he taketh it not in its proper ſignification of confuſion and ſhame, which cannot properly agree to corn, but in a figurative way, للعدم والانقطاع for defect, or failing, or being cut off, or taken away, which notion the Chaldee Paraphraſt takes it in, expreſſing it by סק, defecit, hath failed; and ſo as [y] One for making the reaſon of ſo uſing the word, and the meaning, plainer, ex-explains it, defecit, & deficiendo homines confudit, pudefecit & ſpe fruſtratum eſt, hath failed, and by failing hath put men to confuſion, and ſhame, and made them fruſtrate of their hope, which being taken for the meaning of the word, may alſo as well agree to the other ſignification of it, viz. of withering or being dried up. Whatever nicety be made otherwiſe in diſtinguiſhing between them, in this expreſſion hitherto, we look on the calamity ſo deſcribed, as brought on them by Locuſts, &c. and drought properly underſtood, which we take to be the plaineſt way. They that underſtand the enemies to be by thoſe figured out, as it hath been before ſaid that many do, look on all the miſchief here mentioned, as done by them: by them all the fruits of the land devoured, by them the ſeed in the ground [z] trampled under foot, by them the garners laid deſolate, by them the barns broken down, and ſo the corn that was above ground and laid up in [a] heaps, marred, and ſpilled, as not having any covering or ſhelter to defend it; ſo Grotius renders the laſt words, ideo [b] fœtuit triticum, therefore the wheat ſtinks, not as if the failing of that were the cauſe that the barns were let fall, but the want of the covert of the barn, and ſo its expoſing to the weather, the cauſe of its being marred, and made muſty. And ſo Abarbinel explains כי, ci, which Ours tranſlate, for, by ולכן velacen, and therefore, as it is [c] obſerved ſometimes elſewhere to ſignify, Ideo, propterea, therefore, quare, quamobrem, wherefore.

[p] Grotius compares with it Meguria, by which the Phœnicians called their Cottages and country Villages. [q] Jun. Trem. [r] Pagn. [s] Munſter. [t] 4to, 1607. Gen. [u] Munſt. [w] Tig. Caſtalio, quippe fœdata frumenta, ſeem all agreeable. [x] He ſeems to retain the Hebrew name, which I think is not of known uſe in Arabick in that ſignification. [y] Pet. à Fig.

However in either of theſe ways, theſe emphatical and redoubled expreſſions, whereby the Prophet deſcribes the great calamity now fallen on the people, and to befal them, in that their land, in which before they lived in great pleaſure, and content, enjoying in great abundance all good things pertaining to the comforts of this life, and the ways and inſtruments by which they were brought on them, be underſtood, it appears by them, that they were ſuch, as, if they would at all conſider, and be ſenſible of their own condition, could not but make them ſee that God was highly provoked to diſpleaſure againſt them, and ſo excite them to a ſerious and ſpeedy repentance, and to return unto him in weeping, faſting, and praying, for averting his heavy judgments, before they were utterly conſumed by them. If they ſhould not ſo far conſider theſe things, but look on them as things by chance befallen them, and ſo might go off as they came on, or they might find other remedy againſt, it muſt needs argue them very ſtupid and brutiſh, yea leſs ſenſible than the brute beaſts that were among them, even which, for their better inſtruction, he ſeems to ſend them to in the next words, wherein he ſhews how they were affected by thoſe evils, which came on the land.

18. How do the beaſts groan? the herds of cattle are perplexed, becauſe they have no paſture: yea the flocks of ſheep are made deſolate.

How, [d] Some render, why, &c. but Others think that not right, but rather, How, &c. The firſt words being put by way of interrogation, argue the great meaſure of the thing affirmed, or vehemency in which it is done, and ſo therefore the Chaldee without interrogation affirmatively renders it, לחדא מתאנחא בעירא greatly doth the beaſt groan. The word rendred beaſts, is in the Hebrew alſo in the ſingular number, but taken [e] collectively in ſignification plural, as comprehending more, and the word alſo is [f] a general name, of which the particular kinds are after expreſſed, by cattle, and ſheep. For the noun Behemah, בהמה is of general comprehenſion, יקאל ען אלחיואן אלמאשי, is ſpoken of ſuch living creatures as go on four feet, as Abu Walid gives the proper ſignification of it: agreeable to which is بهيمة Bahimah in the Arabick dialect, [g] which is كل ذات اربع قوايم any four footed living creature, ولو في الما even ſuch as live in the water alſo, yea more generally yet, كل حي لا نفس any living creature without diſtinction. The forecited Abu Walid ſaith of it אן לפט בהמה יקע עלי נוע ואחד ועלי אנואע כתירה ויקע עלי אלשכץ אלואחד מנהא that the word בהמה Behemah, is ſpoken ſometimes of one ſort (of beaſts alone) and ſometimes of many ſorts of them, and ſometimes of ſome one particular beaſt of them. The [h] Jewiſh Rabbins are obſerved to diſtinguiſh between it and חיה chaiyah (which is found together with it, Gen. i. 25. and rendred one, beaſt of the earth, the other cattle) ſo as that (viz. chaiyah) ſhould be proper to wild beaſts, but this Behemah, to ſuch as are [i] tame, and made ordinarily uſe of for their ſervice. Under this more general name then will the following kinds, denoted by herds of cattle (or kine) and flocks of ſheep be comprehended, and thoſe words be well looked on as a particular explication of what ſorts of beaſts are here by it more peculiarly meant, according to Kimchi's expoſition, and it ſeems a good expoſition. But the name, as appears by what we have ſeen, extending to other kinds of beaſts beſides them, as to horſes, aſſes, mules, and moſt commonly, as Grotius thinks, when nothing is added to it, both in Hebrew, Chaldee, and Arabick taken for them, it is by Others here tranſlated by a word more proper to them, viz. [k] jumentum, which peculiarly denotes ſuch beaſts as men make uſe of for carrying, drawing, or tillage, as if it were not uſed here as a general name, comprehending thoſe two kinds here named, kine and ſheep, but as a name of other different kinds; which being taken, I ſuppoſe the note of interrogation, or exclamation ought to be added, as well to the following clauſes as to the firſt, which is by [l] Some done, but by [m] Others put only to the firſt, the others being expreſſed by ſimple affirmation, [z] See Ar. Mont. [a] In acervis ſuis congeſta, Grot. [b] Taking בוש to agree in ſignification with באש to ſtink. [c] See Noldius's Concordance. [d] Vulg. Pagn. Arab. MS. لماذا. [e] Piſc. [f] Kimchi, Pet. à Fig. [g] Kamus. [h] Buxtorf. Lex. Talmud. [i] Cicur domeſticum, and ſee Ar. Mont on this place. [k] Interlin. Tig. Munſt. Jun. Trem. [l] Jun. Trem. [m] As Ours; and Piſcator warneth that the two latter clauſes are not to be read with an interrogation.

firmation. The Vulgar Latin renders it by the general name of animal, the Chaldee and Syriack בעירא Beira, and ܒܥܝܪܐ· Beiro, which ſeems well to anſwer to the Hebrew Behemah. It is by the Syriack Lexicographers explained as ſignifying البهايم الانعام Beaſts, Cattle, among living creatures, ܕܐܝܟ ܕܐܝܟ ܕܡܢ ܕܐܝܟ ܕܡܢ ܕܐܝܟ ܕܡܢ ſuch as eat graſs, of which ſome are for meat, ſome for neceſſary ſervice. But between the LXX. (and the printed Arabick following them) there is a very ſtrange difference from the Hebrew, and thoſe who tranſlate from it. The LXX. rendring, Τί ἀποθήσομεν ἑαυτοῖς; which in the Latin from it in Jerome is, quid reponamus nobis? What ſhall we lay up for our ſelves? But this no way agreeing with the Hebrew as ordinarily read, have put Some, who have looked into ſuch things, to conjecture that they did read otherwiſe, and their conjecture is that inſtead of בהמה Behemah, they did read [n] בהמה Behemmah, or בהם bahem, and inſtead of נאנחה Neenchah, which is from אנח Anach, and ſignifies, doth groan ([o] ננחה Ninnecha: as it were from ינח to put, or lay up) but this being ſuppoſed, it doth not yet ſo reconcile the Greek to the Hebrew ſo read, but that they are forced to fly to the conjecture of a various reading in the Greek it ſelf, from what is uſually read in the ordinary copies thereof, viz. that inſtead of ἑαυτοῖς to our ſelves, ſhould be read either (according to Some) αὐτοῖς, to, or for them, or (according to Others) ἐν αὐτοῖς, in them. If the latter of theſe be received, then will it be referred [p] to the garners and barns before mentioned, laid deſolate and broken down, becauſe there was no need of them. For what ſhall we, what have we to lay up in them? If the firſt, then to the herds of cattle, and flocks of ſheep, perplexed and made deſolate, the mention of which follows, and ſo בהם, in them, may ſtand for [q] להם lahem, to, or for them, viz. [r] what ſhall we lay up for them (where ſhall we find food for them?) So have we here conjecture upon conjecture; which of them be the righteſt, or whether either of them be right, we need not be ſollicitous, having in the uſual reading of the Hebrew a far plainer and more appoſite meaning, which we have all reaſon to adhere to. It concerns not us to enquire what they read, ſo much as whether they had any reaſon to read ſo. How not only one, but ſeveral ſorts of beaſts are thus afflicted, he proceeds more particularly to ſhew, adding in the firſt place, the herds of cattle, בקר of kine, and oxen, and [s] ſuch as are of that kind, נבוכו Nabocu, are perplexed, the word is from the theme בוך Boc, which is not in its ſimple form found in Scripture; but ſuch forms or words as are derived from it, and occur therein, have manifeſtly in them that notion of perplexity, or being in confuſion, ſo Exod. xiv. 13. נבוכים הם בארץ, which Ours there render by a word of like ſignification, are intangled in the land, which Ainſworth likewiſe rendring it by, yet adds as the literal meaning of it, or perplexed, and ſo ſeveral Latin, [t] perplexi ſunt; ſo Eſther 3 ult. The city Shuſhan נבוכה was perplexed, and thence the noun מבוכה perplexity, Iſaiah xxii. 5. and Micah vii. 4. and this ſignification is well confirmed from the uſe of the ſame root in the Arabick Tongue, wherein from the root بوك Bawaca, باك baca, and انباك Enbaca, are ſpoken of men, whereas [u] رايهم اختلط عليهم فلم يجدوا مخرجا their minds (or councils) are ſo confounded (or in ſuch confuſion) that they find no way to get out (or diſtregue themſelves) whether to go or turn, which is much the ſame ſignification that Kimchi here gives of this word, that the ſignification of it is בלבול, confuſion (perplexity) כאדם המבולבל ברעתו ולא ידע מה יעשה as when a man is perplexed in his mind (or thoughts) and knows not what to do. So that there is no doubt, that Ours and ſuch other Interpreters, who here aſcribe to the word, as now in the Hebrew read, the notion of perplexity, do give to its due and proper ſignification. But the [w] LXX. rendring it ἔκλαυσαν βουκόλια βοῶν, the herds of oxen wept, hath given occaſion to [x] ſeveral learned men to conjecture that they did otherwiſe read it, viz. not Nabocu, (from בוך Boc, to be perplexed) but נבכו Nibcu, from בכה to weep, againſt which conceit of theirs is [y] objected, that as that word or form is not elſewhere found in Scripture, ſo if it were found would not regularly ſignify, to weep, or bewail, actively, but paſſively, are wept for, or bewailed. But indeed I think that this verſion of theirs doth not make it neceſſary to us to conjecture, that they did read it otherwiſe than now it is read; though ἔκλαυσαν doth not preciſely ſignify being perplexed, yet weeping, wailing and lamenting, being uſual ſigns, and effects of a perplexed, troubled mind, they might, I ſuppoſe, well enough think that by expreſſing this particular, they might not improperly comprehend whatſoever elſe perplexity of mind doth import, or diſcover it ſelf by. This, I imagine, is an eaſier and gentler way of reconciling what we find in them to what we find in the Hebrew, than to fly to ſuch a conjecture as ſhall violate the rules and propriety of the language by confounding active and paſſive forms in it; and the ſame way of reconciliation will alſo, I ſuppoſe, ſerve for reconciling to the Hebrew ſuch other tranſlations as are given, not having the ſtrict ſignification of perplexity, as, viz. that of the Vulgar Latin, mugierunt, have lowed, viz. we may well ſay, as expreſſing great perplexity; that alſo of Munſter, oberrarunt, wander up and down, and Caſtalio, plorant, cry. The reaſon of this perplexity in or to them is expreſſed, becauſe they have no paſture, all that they ſhould feed on being deſtroyed ſtroyed and conſumed by ſuch means as have been before mentioned, and ſhall again be mentioned in the following verſes. For aggravating this calamity that he deſcribes, is added that this penury and want of paſture reacheth not only to the greater ſort of cattle, which require a greater plenty of graſs, or ſuch things as they ſhould feed on, but alſo to ſuch leſſer ſorts of them which might be ſatisfied with leſs, as even poor ſheep which might be ſatisfied with ſcantier food, and ſhorter graſs. So he ſaith, yea the flocks of ſheep are made deſolate, even they are in a ſad deſolate periſhing condition, not finding wherewith to ſuſtain themſelves. This import, or emphaſis, for ſetting forth the extremity of the calamity fallen on the land doth Kimchi obſerve to be in the particle גם Gam, by Ours rendred, yea, ſhewing it to be ſuch as that even thoſe leſſer cattle, which often feed to ſuffice them in places where thoſe of the bigger ſort cannot; could not now find what to feed on. The word הצאן Hatſon, by our Tranſlators rendred, as by ſeveral Others, ovium, ſheep, as if peculiar to that kind of leſſer cattle, is by the Vulgar Latin and Others rendred by a word of larger comprehenſion, pecorum (or pecoris) cattle: and it is noted by the learned Jew Abu Walid to be a name تعم الضان والمعز جميعا that comprehends both ſheep and goats, ſo that he thinks that in Arabick it ought to be rendred by غنم Ganam, which likewiſe ſignifies both thoſe kinds, and not by ضان Ddan, although in letters agreeing with it, becauſe that in the Arabick is a name peculiar to ſheep as diſtinct from goats. He obſerves likewiſe that ſometimes يخص به الضان من المعز it is peculiarly ſpoken of ſheep as diſtinct from goats. (as 1 Sam. xxv. 2. where it is ſaid that Nabat had three thouſand צאן Tſon, ſheep, and a thouſand עזים goats) The ſame is noted by Kimchi alſo, that it is a name common to הבהמה חרקה leſſer cattle, viz. הכבשים והעזים ſheep and goats, and that ſometimes כולל כלם it comprehends them [z] all, but ſometimes is attributed peculiarly to [a] one kind, viz. ſheep, as in the forecited, 1 Sam. xxv. 2. and on the contrary that ſometimes it comprehends both הבהמה הדקה והבקר not only thoſe leſſer kinds of beaſts, but thoſe bigger ſorts alſo that come under the name of בקר Bakar, kine, &c. In that latitude he thinks it to be taken, [b] 1 Sam. viii. 17. That it cannot be ſo here appears, it being put as contradiſtinct from what is under that name בקר Bakar, [c] ſignifying bigger cattle before mention'd, underſtood, but muſt either be taken peculiarly for ſheep, as it is by Ours, and ſeveral Others, or taking in with them goats alſo, as by them that render it by pecus, and the Chaldee and Syriack rendring it ענא Ono, and the Arabick غنم Ganam, which words ſeem common to both thoſe ſorts of ſmaller cattle: Of theſe it is here ſaid נאשמו Neeſhamu, which our laſt Tranſlators render, are made deſolate, the Others more ancient to the ſame import, are deſtroyed, agreeable to what alſo the Greek hath ἠφανίσθησαν, and the Chaldee צריאה; the Syriack ܫܒܝ; the Arabick MS. استوحشوا (are made deſolate) the printed انغرضت; the Vulgar Latin diſperierunt, are periſhed; Munſt. damno affecti ſunt; Caſtal. mulctabantur: Grotius looking on deſolati ſunt as literally anſwering the Hebrew, explains it by, ad paucitatem redacti ſunt, are become few in number. All theſe take the root אשם Aſham in that ſenſe as it agrees with שמם Shamam, which hath the notion of deſolation, deſtruction, waſting, which ſignification R. Aben Ezra and D. Kimchi alſo note it here to have; as it hath likewiſe, Hoſea xiii. 16. and Iſaiah xxiv. 6. But this root hath alſo another ſignification, viz. of ſinning and being guilty or faulty, and in that notion doth the Tigurin Verſion here take it, rendring & greges ovium culpæ obnoxii facti ſunt, and the flocks of ſheep are made (obnoxious to blame) guilty or faulty, by which I ſuppoſe he muſt neceſſarily mean obnoxious or liable to ſuch puniſhment, or ſuch evils and judgments, as their owners had by their ſins provoked God to ſend upon them; for it were they, that had ſinned, as for theſe poor ſheep, what had they done whereby to deſerve what is befallen them? and ſo underſtood, it will well agree with that explication of R. Solom. Jarchi, in which he ſeems to take in both thoſe ſignifications of the root Aſham, viz. נתקלקלו באשמתם, which Mercer renders vaſtati ſunt delicto ſuo, are waſted or deſtroyed by their ſin: for explaining which I ſuppoſe is well added by [d] a learned man, ſc. Iſraelitarum, viz. the ſin of the Iſraelites. Mean while they ſuffer as if they had been themſelves guilty, and the ſenſe of their ſufferings they teſtify by their lamentable moans, and groanings, which certainly ſhould have moved their owners, for whoſe ſake it was they ſuffered, to have looked into the cauſe thereof, which was their ſins, and ſo to have put up their ſupplications to God for removing his judgments, and thoſe calamities which for their ſakes had fallen on the poor cattle that belonged to them. We may well look on the words as including a reproof or upbraiding of their ſtupidity, which were not ſo ſenſible thereof, as theſe poor irrational creatures were. Even the cries of thoſe ought ſo far to have awakened them. And ſeeing they did not, and would not take notice of them, The Prophet by his example whom they could not but think fit to follow, proceeds to inſtruct them, and lead them the way in the next words.

[n] Merc. Druſ. Capel, beſtiis recondamus? Mercer. [o] Mercer. [p] In illis, viz the Syriack and printed Arabick. [q] Capel. [r] Quid illis [s] Armenta Bucera, Grot. [t] Tig. Jun. Tremel. [u] Kamus. [w] As likewiſe [x] Mercer, Druſ. Cap. [y] Buxt. Vindic.

19. O Lord to thee will I cry: for the fire hath devoured the [e] paſtures of the wilderneſs, and the flame hath burnt all the trees of the field.

Theſe

[z] As Levit. iii. 6. where Ours render it the flock. [a] Yet may the naming one kind give to underſtand what ſhall be to the other, though the word do not ſignify them. [b] Where yet Ours render it ſheep. [c] Which Some look on not as proper only to kine, but other bigger cattle, as horſes, aſſes, and camels alſo, Druſ. [d] Jo. Leuſden. [e] Margin, or habitations.

Theſe words are by [f] Some looked on as ſtill ſuch as were by the Prophet preſcribed to the prieſts, to utter in their lamentations for thoſe calamities which had befallen them, continued all along from ver. 15. But by [g] Others, as ſuch wherein the Prophet, having in the former ſet forth the terribleneſs of the judgments that were befallen them, whereby to move them to a due conſideration of the miſerable condition they had brought on themſeves, and all belonging to them, their land, and their cattle, he now declares what he himſelf doth, and will do (and ſo by his example incites them to do) for averting thoſe heavy calamities, viz. by prayer and ſupplication making his addreſſes to God, that he would have mercy on them, and remove thoſe evils from them, which by again particularly deſcribing he ſhews himſelf, as he would have them alſo, the people, all with whom he hath to deal, to be duly ſenſible of, and to acknowledge as puniſhments by him for their ill deſerts ſent upon them. O Lord, to thee will I cry. This is the only remedy that he ſeeth for removing thoſe great evils which he deſcribes, viz. earneſt prayer to God who ſent them, and who only can remove them; and that only to the true God, whom he deſcribes therefore by that glorious name proper only to him, viz. יהוה, which is therefore by ſome of the modern Interpreters retained as a proper name, and written in its own proper letters, [h] Jehovah; but by Ours and Others, and generally all the more ancient, rendred in the ſignification of Lord; and that not only here, but for the moſt part whereſoever elſe it occurs: for (to ſpeak only of our own Tranſlation) in very few places, among the many in which it is found, it is ſo expreſſed. We find it ſet down, Exod. vi. 3. where we read, by my name Jehovah, was I not known to them, and ſo Pſalm lxxxiii. 18. Thou alone whoſe name is Jehovah, and Iſaiah xii. 2. The Lord Jehovah is my ſtrength, and xxvi. 4. in the Lord Jehovah is everlaſting ſtrength: but I believe no where elſe except in ſome compounded names, as Jehovah-jireh, Gen. xxii. 14. and Jehovah-niſſi, Exod. xvii. 15. and Jehovah ſhalom, Jud. vi. 24. Their expreſſing it in thoſe places to be read according to its proper letters and vowels, ſhews that they did not think it a thing unlawful ſo to pronounce it, nor ſuperſtitiouſly abſtain from it; but give us withal to think, that they thought it could not by any one word, which ſhould fully expreſs the force and import of it, in Ours or any other language be rendred, no ſuch one word do we find. St. John by the Holy Ghoſt himſelf inſpired, being in another language to expreſs it, doth it in more words, Rev. i. 4. ὁ ὢν καὶ ὁ ἦν καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he which is, and which was, and which is to come, (or ὁ ἐσόμενος, as Rev. xvi. 5. which ſhall be) The form of the word in it including the characteriſtical letters or ſigns of all thoſe three tenſes, or times, preſent, paſt, and future, denoting ſuch a one as ever was, ſtill is, and ſhall ever be, one and the ſame everlaſting being. But in that they do not frequently ſo expreſs it, but tranſlate it in the notion of another name, that of denoting abſolute ſovereignty and dominion (Lord) they ſeem to follow the authority and example of other ancienter Interpreters, who ſo have done before them, as the LXX. who do not at all read it, according to its letters, but generally render it by Κύριος, Lord; yet that when they ſo render it, they took that word in a ſingular and higher meaning, than when in ordinary uſe it is ſpoken of men in the greateſt power, may appear by what is [i] obſerved, that Origen in his copies of the LXX. did over-againſt it in the Margin ſtill write the letters J. H. V. H. יהוה in Hebrew, to warn the reader whom he was in that place to underſtand, ſeeming to intimate withal that the name was in it ſelf, to them ἀνεκφώνητον, as they call it, and many ſo do, only becauſe they have no proper letters according to their way of pronunciation to expreſs the right ſound of it, and again no one word by which to give the full meaning of it. No leſs cautious is the Author of the Vulgar Latin in abſtaining from the expreſſing that name in its proper letters, uſually rendring it Dominus, The Lord, except in one or two places where he thought it better to expreſs it, as that it might appear to be a proper name of God peculiar to him, yet neither then doth he ſo expreſs it, but put in place of it another Hebrew name of God, viz. Adonai, as Exod. vi. 3. where what is in the Hebrew, my name יהוה Jehovah, he renders nomen meum Adonai, my name Adonai, which he puts likewiſe in the apocryphal book of Judith, chap. xvi. 16. It appears that he thought fit out of reverence to it, altogether to abſtain from pronouncing it in the proper ſound of its letters, and this may he ſeem perhaps to have taken from the Jews, who do altogether abſtain from ſo pronouncing it, but in lieu of it ſtill read אדני Adonai, which ſignifies alſo Lord, except where that word is joined with it, and then read inſtead of it אלהים Elohim, God: (in which caſe Ours alſo with ſeveral Others render it, God:) the reaſon why they abſtain from pronouncing it according to its letters by the Jews pretended, is becauſe they think the right pronunciation of it, which was of old under the firſt temple, and for ſome time alſo under the ſecond, well known and uſed, to be long ſince loſt, ſo that they dare not commonly ad-adventure on it for fear of prophaning it, or calling God out of his right name. But divers learned men of late think this rather a piece of ſuperſtition, and needleſs fear, and that it may ſtill rightly be pronounced, and do therefore, according to its letters and vowels with which it is written, read and expreſs it. Ours, as we have ſeen, ſhew that they account it no way unlawful to expreſs it, yet out of reſpect to it, and following, as we ſaid, the authority and example of thoſe more ancient, do abſtain from frequent uſe of it, and chooſe to render it by Lord; and ſo whereas [k] Others here render, Unto thee, O Jehovah, Ours read, O Lord, to thee will I cry.

[f] Grot. [g] Calvin, Merc. Tarn. Ab. Ezra, דברי הנביא the words of the Prophet. [h] Pagni. Jun. Trem. [i] See the Preface to an Arabick Pentateuch in Bodly's Library, and ſee Procopius by Curterius on Iſaiah. The putting of which letters, at firſt done out of reverence, and for good intentions, afterwards proved, as that Arabick Tranſlator of the Pentateuch ſhews, an occaſion of a great error to ſome Greeks, who being ignorant of the Hebrew language, miſtook them for Greek letters, and reading them the wrong way took them for ΠΙΠΙ, which they ſeemed to reſemble, and ſo took Pipi for a name of God; and ſo ſome Syrians following expreſſed it by ܦܝܦܝ Phiphi, which they thought to ſignify الرب the Lord, or الرب السمايي Alrabbo ſſamaio, the heavenly Lord, as in Bar. Bahlul's Syrian Lexicon rendred.

Mean while the word in the original uſed is by all confeſſed the name of God, proper to him, and incommunicable to any other, his memorial, as he calls it [l] Hoſea xii. 5. by it therefore the Prophet calling on him, ſhews that on him, and him only, the true God, he looked, as only able to remove the great calamities which were come upon them, and who, he truſted, being ſought to, would remove them for his name's ſake. Unto thee, O Lord, כי אין מושיע זולתך, becauſe there is no Saviour beſides thee. Theſe [m] calamities he had before deſcribed to his hearers; yet doth he here again, as the cauſe of his crying unto God, in pathetical terms lay open before God the ſame; we may ſuppoſe as to ſhew how ſenſible, he is himſelf of them as judgments from him, ſo to ſtir up the people to the like conſiderations, and withal to move God to compaſſion on them by the ſenſe that they had of them. For (ſaith he) the fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs, &c. How dreadful the effects of the raging element of fire are, in devouring and conſuming any combuſtible matters on which it ſeizeth, is a thing ſo well known, that to compare any other thing and the effects of it thereto, is the higheſt expreſſion of much miſchief thereby done to, and utter deſtruction brought on thoſe things, by that which is ſo compared to fire, or called by its name; ſo that it may well be thought [n] nomen generale adverſitatum, a general name of all adverſities, or things that do miſchief, and a deſcription of very great miſchief brought by them. This I note, becauſe by moſt Expoſitors the name fire is not here taken in its proper notion, but underſtood of other things thereto likened for their force and the miſchief that they do. What thing it is that is here ſo called becauſe of its power in doing miſchief, is not by them agreed on. [o] Some take thereby to be underſtood thoſe Locuſts and other noxious vermin before ſpoken of, which are obſerved to have in them a malignity like that of fire in deſtroying of ſuch things which they light on; ſo is [p] cited from Pliny that expreſſion, ſaying of Locuſts, multa contactu adurunt, they do by their touch burn (or parch) many things: and in this way doth Kimchi comparatively expound the words באלו אש ולהבה עברה בהם כאשר עבר הארבה בהם As it were fire and flame paſſed (or ſeized on) thoſe things, when the Locuſts paſſed or ſeized on them. [q] Others underſtand that extremity of drought and heat which (as above we obſerved) Some think to have happened to them, and to have parched up all things in the land. So they look on the [r] immoderate ſcorching of the ſun to be called fire, Pſalm lxxxiii. 14. where he ſaith, As the fire burneth the wood, and the flame ſetteth the mountains on fire, and loca ſolis ardore torrida, places ſcorched or parched by the heat of the ſun, to be called חררים Chararim, burnt places, Jer. xvii. 6. If theſe two, viz. Locuſts and extreme heat of the ſun came both together, as we have above ſeen Some to think, and it is probable that they did, they may then be both well comprehended under the ſame name of fire, and they need not be looked on as two different expoſitions, nor will that of the Chaldee be much different from the laſt, which renders it קדום תקיף כאשר a violent eaſt wind like fire.

Others think it to be underſtood of their enemies, and miſchief by them brought on the land; ſo Abarbinel ſaith that he ſpeaks על צרת האיב of the calamity from the enemy, not from the Locuſts: and to this purpoſe [s] Some among Chriſtians, hoc tropo pictam belli imaginem volunt, will by this figurative expreſſion have to be (as it were) painted out the face of war; and ſo Munſter thinks this way it may be underſtood, hoſtes per ignem & gladium omnia devaſtaverunt, the enemies have by fire and ſword deſtroyed all things. (And ſo [t] fire will be taken in its proper ſignification) as well as in the former way, that paſcua ſunt vermibus corroſa ac ſi ignis exuſſiſſet ea, the paſtures were gnawn by worms (or Locuſts, &c.) as if fire had burnt them up. Whichſoever of theſe things before-mentioned be underſtood as the inſtrument of working thoſe ſad effects here deſcribed, there is no queſtion but that by God impowered and ſet to work, it would have force to produce them, as great as that of fire let looſe to the moſt combuſtible matter; mean while it is but his inſtrument, and worketh as by commiſſion or order from him kindled, and therefore by this fire here doth a learned [u] Commentator think it more convenient to underſtand it more generally of the fire of his burning wrath, which is called the fire of his jealouſy, Ezek. xxxvi. 5. and fiery indignation, rather than to name any particular which he choſe whereby to exerciſe the fury thereof. Whatever it was that is here called fire, it was by that kindled, and what dreadful effects it wrought, the following words deſcribe. It hath (ſaith he) devoured

[k] Pagnin. Jun. Trem. [l] See notes on that place. [m] Kimchi. [n] Flacius Illyr. that ſometimes ponitur pro re quavis valde lædente. [o] Druſ. [p] Againſt this interpretation may lay that objection mentioned by Ab. Ez. againſt R. Japhet from what is ſaid ver. 20. that the rivers of waters are dried up. (Which may ſeem not to be done by Locuſts.) [q] Jun. Trem. Lively, Piſcat. Bochart. [r] Lively, Bochart. [s] See Mercer. [t] Hoſtilis ignis, Ar. Mont. Incendio Chaldæorum, Ribera. Bellum cum incendio confertur quod omnia vaſtat, Tarnov. ex Winkel. [u] Tarnov. ſo Gualter. iſtis vero hoſtilem rabiem, vel potius horribilem Dei vindictam denotat.

נאות Neoth, the paſtures, (or as it is in the Margin, habitations) of the wilderneſs, which divers reading ſheweth the word ſo rendred to be ambiguous. That ſo it is, appears by the different rendrings of it both among the ancient and modern Interpreters. The LXX. rendring it τὰ ὡραῖα, τῆς ἐρήμου, as alſo the printed Arabick. The Vulgar Latin [w] ſpecioſa deſerti, the beautiful things of the deſert; agreeably the Tigurin Verſion, amæniſſima loca deſerti, the moſt pleaſant places of the wilderneſs; with which may well enough be joined that which [x] Others have, paſcua, paſtures, and [y] loca herbifera, places that bring herbs. Theſe all may we look on as agreeing with what we have in the Text, paſtures. But the Chaldee Paraphraſt hath for it דרות מדברא Diroth Madbera, habitacula (manſiones, ſo Mercer) deſerti, the habitations or manſion places of the deſert. The Syriack likewiſe ܒܝܬܐ ܕܡܕܒܪܐ, and the MS. Arabick مواطن البراري, to the very ſame Senſe; The habitations of the deſert. So among the modern, Caſtal. Stationes (or Manſiones in the following verſe) ſaltuum. Junius and Tremellius, habitacula deſerti. Druſ. habitacula, or habitationes deſerti. Others, caulas, the ſheep cotes, which is the ſame that the Jewiſh Expoſitors alſo take; as R. Sol. Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and Kimchi, who in other words expreſſeth it by אהלי הרועים the ſhepherds tents: and Rabi Tanchum, who in Arabick renders it مساكن dwelling places. The LXX. who here render it as we have ſeen, do, Pſalm xxiii. (or according to them xxii.) 2. render it τόπον, a place. I do not doubt but that any of theſe mentioned did know and acknowledge the word to have both the mentioned ſignifications, as referrible, and by the Grammarians referred to ſuch [z] roots, of which ſome have one, and ſome another, as either נאה, to be fair or beautiful, or אוה, [a] to deſire, or נוה Navah, to inhabit, to each one of which the noun in this form is looked on as referrible; but that every one of them, in the place where he found it (as in many places it occurs) gave to it that ſignification, which he thought moſt proper for the place. Mean while theſe ſignifications here given, though as to the literal notion they differ, yet do ſeem to concur in the meaning of the place, and to be comprehended in it; inaſmuch as the pleaſanteſt places and moſt abounding with herbage and graſs in the wilderneſs and open fields, were by thoſe that looked after their herds and flocks often choſen, there to ſet up cotes and cottages for ſhelter and habitation to themſelves, as being remote from any towns or cities, ſo that naming one, the other would neceſſarily be underſtood, the paſtures or feeding places, together with the manſions or ſhepherds houſes in them. So ſaith Kimchi on the following verſe, where the ſame words are repeated, that by the word נאות Neoth, he means, graſſy places (מקומות הדשא שהיו במדבר) which were in the wilderneſs, and calls them Neoth, caulas, or ſhepherds habitations, becauſe the ſhepherds, who inhabit the deſert, do there pitch their tents, though they were remote from any other habitations. R. Tanchum ſomething differently, he looking on the word as ſignifying مساكن habitations, or dwelling places, yet ſeeing in the wilderneſs there are not places of habitation, thinks to be meant the trees, التي تاوي اليها الوحوش ويستظل بها عبار الطرق to which the wild beaſts repair for covert, and travellers for ſhade and ſhelter. According to this the following words, and the flame hath burnt up all the trees of the field, are a more particular explication of what is ſaid in theſe. And by what hath been ſaid will it appear eaſy to reconcile the difference betwixt Interpreters mentioned, and that whether the word be rendred by paſtures, pleaſant places, beautiful things, or habitations, all which the word may ſignify, the meaning will be ſtill the ſame, and ſuch as comprehends them all; and ſo ſheweth that as well as in the cities, ſo in the fields and wilderneſs alſo, all things conducing to neceſſity, convenience or pleaſure, whether to man or beaſt, were deſtroyed by that which in one clauſe is called fire, in the other flame, all that might afford ſhelter to men, or covert and food for beaſts, all which the name of paſtures, habitations of the wilderneſs, and all the trees of the field, which he mentions likewiſe, do manifeſtly comprehend. In farther explication of the calamity he adds in the next verſe,

20. The beaſts of the field cry alſo unto thee: for the rivers of water are dried up, and the fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs.

The Prophet doth not only himſelf out of conſideration of the miſerable condition of things cry unto the Lord, but hath to bear him company out of the ſenſe thereof, even the beaſts of the field, even thoſe that live abroad, and ſo were not [b] tamed by men, and find food on the mountains, where Locuſts do not uſually come. The word by which their crying is expreſſed, is תערוג taarog, which word is ſpoken of the heart, Pſalm xliv. 1. כאיל תערוג As the heart panteth (or brayeth, as in the Margin of one tranſlation) after the water brooks. The word is therefore looked upon as proper to the noiſe or cry by them made, but manifeſtly here uſed to expreſs the noiſe or cry of other beaſts alſo, and therefore it is by ſeveral Interpreters rendred by a word of one general ſignification, as vociferari, clamare, to make a noiſe and cry, [c] or the like. The LXX. in a different notion of the word (though to the ſame meaning) render der it ἀνέβλεψαν, and the printed Arabick تنظر اليك denote, as likewiſe the Vulgar Latin, ſuſpexerunt, look up unto thee; agreeably likewiſe to that of the Chaldee מסברא קדמך Meſabro Kadamac, ſpectant coram te, expect or wait before thee, or as Mercer renders it, in te ſperant, hope in thee. Theſe all fall in one meaning, their cry ſeeming to imply expectation and hope for help. But the Vulgar Latin inſerts here ſome words, which neither in the Hebrew, nor any tranſlation are found, viz. quaſi area ſitiens imbrem, which the Doway renders, as a garden bed thirſting for a ſhower. The learned Grotius conjectures that inſtead of area, a garden bed, might at firſt be written, and is to be read cerva, an hart, viz. as an hart thirſting for a ſhower; which if ſo, then there needs no more to be ſaid, than that he laboured to expreſs the proper meaning of the word תערוג as properly ſignifying the cry or noiſe [d] of the hart, crying out, or braying through thirſt after water, to ſet forth the earneſt crying of the thirſting beaſts, that it was as [e] earneſt as that of the thirſty hart: otherwiſe it may be thought that he had reſpect to the notion of ערוגה as it ſignifies a furrow in the earth, made for ſowing of ſeeds in it. The words here, as to the conſtruction, being the noun in the plural number בהמות, Behemoth, beaſts, and the verb תערוג taarog, cry, in the ſingular, which literally ſound, the beaſts doth cry, which in the Latin, as Ours and ſome other languages, being no proper conſtruction, cauſeth ſome with a ſupply to render it, beſtiarum agri quæque glocitat, each one of the beaſts of the field doth cry, as in ſuch caſes they think it requires to be done, and ſo to ſound, as Aben Ezra alſo thinks, כל אחת ואחת every one of them. The Arabick Verſions, both the MS. and the printed, uſe the ſame conſtruction as the Hebrew, بهايم الصحرا تعج MS. all the beaſts of the field doth cry, (the printed تنظر doth look up) اليك unto thee, which in them yet, muſt properly ſound, do cry, and do look up; it being the general uſe of that tongue, ſo to join a verb ſingular of the feminine gender to a noun plural, without requiring any ſupply, or any alteration in the ſenſe at all, and perhaps that uſe may be thought alſo to have been known in the Hebrew; and ſo no other conſtruction need be made of it. This their cry, are theſe beaſts ſaid by the Prophet to direct to him, to whom he directed his, viz. the one only true God: They all (ſaith he) cry unto thee, as if that, even thoſe which were void of reaſon, and all diſtinct knowledge of God, and not capable of receiving it, or being inſtructed in it, yet by natural inſtinct guided, did acknowledge a dependence on his ſole providence, and to it ſeek for a removing of their ſufferings, and ſupply of their wants, in ſuch manner as they were able to do it, in loud cries, which were acceptable by him as ſupplications to him. This the expreſſion of crying to him ſeems to import, as likewiſe other like expreſſions elſewhere, as Pſalm civ. 21. where we read, the young lions roar after their prey, and ſeek their meat from God: again, Pſalm cxlvii. 9. He giveth to the beaſt his food, and to the young ravens that cry (i. e. unto him;) for though that be not expreſſed in the original, yet is it eaſily underſtood, and therefore in ſeveral tranſlations ſupplied, as in the Greek τοῖς ἐπικαλουμένοις αὐτὸν, invocantibus eum, which call upon him; and the printed Arabick الذي يصرخ اليه which cry unto him, and ſo in our ordinary ancienter Engliſh uſed in the Church Service, that call upon him, and ſo in Job xxxviii. 41. it is expreſly ſaid, who provided for the raven his food? when his young ones cry אל אל, El El, unto God. It is manifeſt, we ſee affirmed, that their cries are ſo heard and anſwered by God as if directly intended to him: yet is it in thoſe parallel places cited manifeſt, that thoſe irrational creatures are, as named, ſo, properly meant, and we doubt not but that here alſo we are ſo to underſtand the word in its proper notion of the beaſts of the field, who as the ox is ſaid to know his owner, and the aſs his maſter's crib, Iſaiah i. 3. may be ſaid after their manner, to know and acknowledge God, as him on whom they depend for their livelihood, their being, and well being, and by their moans and cries in their wants or ſufferings to teſtify it. Yet doth Abarbinel think this here to be taken otherwiſe, viz. by the term of the beaſts of the field, to be meant thoſe other nations, beſides the Jews, whom Nebuchadnezzar conquered and deſtroyed, and dried up their rivers, even all thoſe to whom the cup of God's fury was to be reached forth, Jer. xxxv. 15, &c. and him doth Arias Montanus follow in this, ſaying, ut familiares & fidei domeſtici gregum & pecorum appellatione definiuntur, ſic gentes etiam harum animantium agri generibus componi aſſimilarique ſolent; that is, thoſe that are of the family of God, and the houſhold of faith, are deſcribed by the name of flocks, and ſheep, ſo other people uſe to be likened and compared to other kinds of beaſts of the field. But againſt this a [f] learned Commentator objects, that thoſe heathen nations did not in their troubles look up unto the true God, or cry unto him as theſe beaſts of the field are here ſaid to do, but unto falſe Gods. But ſure there is no reaſon why we ſhould take this name of beaſts otherwiſe than in its proper notion. The Prophets joining the mention of their crying unto יהוה the Lord with his own, may well ſeem not only to ſet forth the greatneſs, and univerſality of the calamity which he is deſcribing, in that it extended both to men and beaſts, but to warn the people that he ſpake to, that they might take inſtruction, not only from him, but even from the beaſts of the field how to behave themſelves in the condition that they were in, viz. to addreſs themſeles in loud cries and ſupplications to the Lord, for removing thoſe evils, which either were come already on them, or were certain to come on them, if not by their repentance, pentance prevented, ſhewing that if they did not ſo, they [g] were more ſtupid than the very brute beaſts, which appeared more ſenſible than they in this kind, and teſtified it by their cries, of which they could not but take, certainly ought to take notice, and lay it to heart, and be aſhamed if they did not ſhew themſelves to have as much reſpect to God, as they ſhewed. The reaſon which moved both him and theſe beaſts, and ought to move all the inhabitants of the land to cry unto the Lord, is expreſſed in the following words. For the rivers of water are dried up. This may well confirm the opinions which we formerly mentioned, that the miſeries in this chapter deſcribed, did conſiſt as in the abundance of Caterpillers, Locuſts, and ſuch noxious vermin; ſo alſo in great drought, and parching heat, and want of rain, the proper effects of which, are the [h] drying up of rivers and brooks of water, which give drink to cattle and beaſts, and cauſeth them to ſuffer and periſh by thirſt. They that aſcribe this alſo to the miſchief done by the [i] enemy, ſtopping of ſprings or otherwiſe, may alledge what is ſaid, as in the name of Sennacherib, 2 Kings xix. 24. with the ſole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the beſieged places. Abarbinel thereby meant the overflowing of their kingdom by Nebuchadnezzar, but the former meaning ſeems plainer. However this ſhews that they ſuffered by thirſt having nothing to drink, and the following words ſhew that they had neither what they might eat, ſo he adds, the fire hath devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs. Theſe are the very ſame words which we have in the foregoing verſe, and therefore what was there ſaid may ſuffice here, I ſhall only add from [k] Kimchi for explication of the word מדבר Midbar, tranſlated the wilderneſs, that it ſignifies מקום מרעת הבהמות, the place where cattle (or beaſts) do feed, רחוק מן העיר או סמוך לעיר whether it were far from the city, or near the city, any ſuch place, and not only wild, remote, deſolate, barren places were called by that name; and ſo the ſaying that the paſtures uſed to be found in ſuch places, or as others will, the habitations, or ſuch places, where ſhepherds were wont to find food for, or to feed their cattle, were deſtroyed as by fire, will import that there was nothing left, or to be found there, which they might feed on, and ſo were through want driven to ſend out their cries to God for ſupplies. And ſo have we in this chapter, the deſcription of a ſad famine, extending both to man and beaſt, and admonitions to them how to behave themſelves, and by what means to ſeek for the removal of ſo great calamity, though as to the inſtruments or means of bringing on them that calamity we have ſeen Interpreters to differ, and ſo the verbs, by which it is ſpoken of, to be differently underſtood, by Some as of a thing already done or come, by Others as of what was to come, though by reaſon of the certainty of it, ſpoken of as what was either already paſt, or in preſent being. The ſame matter in much the ſame method ſhall we find him to proſecute in the next chapter alſo.

[w] Which Munſter retains. [x] Pagn. [y] Interlin. ſo Ours render נאות דשא Neoth Deſhe, green paſtures, Pſalm xxiii. 2. [z] See Note on Hoſea ix. 13. [a] To which the Hebrew Concord. refers the word; ſo in Arabick اوي Awah, is to Take for an habitation, and then ماوي mawa, an habitation. [b] Kimchi, feræ, wild beaſts, Grot. as the Syr. ܚܝܘܬܐ: Arab. MS. تعيج. [c] Caſtal. Mugire.

[d] Although Jerome on Pſalm xlii. explains it alſo area. [e] See Pet. à Fig. [f] Chr. à Caſtro.

CHAP. II.

VERSE 1. Blow ye the trumpet in Zion (Margin, or cornet) and ſound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand.

THAT for ſundry occaſions, and for ſeveral ends, the trumpets were wont to be ſounded of old among the Jews, and that by order from God himſelf, appears as by what we read elſewhere in Scripture, ſo by what we find, Numb. x. 2, &c. where we have both a command from God for making of them, and directions for the uſe of them, as, 1*ſt*, for calling together the congregation, for holy meetings, ver. 2, 3. 2*ly*, For giving a ſign to them for the journeying of their camps. 3*ly*, For giving warning by ſounding an alarm, in time of war, or when any ſhould oppreſs them, ver. 9. 4*ly*, In the day of gladneſs, and their ſolemn days, and the beginning of their months. According to the diſtinct ſounds given, they ſeem to have been given to underſtand, what kind the thing or occaſion, thereby given them to take notice of, was. This blowing here called on them for, ſeems to be referred to the third head, concerning which the [a] Jewiſh Maſters note that by the words in the Text הצר הצרר אתכם, the enemy that oppreſſeth you ([b] or diſtreſſer that diſtreſſeth you) is to be underſtood כל דבר שייצר להם every thing that ſhall diſtreſs them, as dearth, plague, or Locuſts (בצורת ודבר וארבה) or like things; ſo that whatever of ſuch kind be here looked on as inſtruments of the calamity here deſcribed, it will equally agree to them; and ſo do the words of the Prophet ſound, as a deſcription of ſome great diſtreſs, in ſome ſuch kind, which ſhould juſtly deſerve to be given notice of by ſuch ſign of blowing the trumpet to alarm the people, that they might be ſenſible of their miſerable condition, and ſeek ſome way how to free themſelves from it. And this warning of his to them ought as much to affect them, as if a watchman had ſet the trumpet to his mouth, and actually ſounded an alarm to them. This his warning he repeats in differing expreſſions, ſignifying the ſame thing, viz. תקעו and הריעו blow and ſound an alarm, the more to ſtir up their intentions and affections: לעורר הלבבות על התשובה to ſtir up their hearts to repentance (ſaith Kimchi). Zion alſo, and his holy mountain, are the ſame place, (as Pſalm ii. 6. upon my holy hill of Sion) the mentioning of which, being the place of their ſolemn meetings, ſhews of what concernment it was that they ſhould all have notice of the thing declared, and

[g] Calvin. Dan. [h] 1 Kings xvii. 7. [i] Ar. Mont. Rib. Grot. [k] In his roots. [a] Maimon. Yad in Taanioth, chap. i. 1. [b] Ainſworth.

and be admoniſhed of, as follows, let all the inhabitants of the land tremble, not only of Jeruſalem, but of all the country about. That was the uſual effect of ſuch ſounding of a trumpet to them, ſo ſaith he, Amos iii. 6. Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? It did ordinarily in ſuch a tune ſounded, give warning of ſome ſuch great evil appearing as might deſervedly put them in great fear. That the matter here ſpoken of was of ſuch nature as might require ſuch a ſounding, and ſuch effect of it, appears by the deſcription of it in the following words, for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand. The day of the Lord, i. e. a day in which he will ſend very terrible judgments on the land, and take vengeance on them for their ſins. It is ſo called likewiſe, chap. i. 15. (where more hath been ſpoken of the expreſſion.) But though ſuch were threatned to them, they might perhaps continue ſecure, as thinking he might defer his coming, and be ſlack in it: that they might not ſo deceive themſelves and put far away the evil day (Amos vi. 3.) he adds, it cometh, it is nigh at hand; ſo that if they will prevent it, or ſecure themſelves from the danger of it, they muſt not delay their betaking themſelves without delay to ſuch means whereby they may do it. [c] For who may abide the day of his coming, and who ſhall withſtand when he appeareth? (Malachi iii. 2.) To make them duly ſenſible therefore of the danger of their condition, and to awaken them from ſecurity, he proceeds to deſcribe the terror of that day.

2. A day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, a day of clouds and of thick darkneſs, as the morning ſpread upon the mountains: a great people and a ſtrong, there hath not been ever the like, neither ſhall be any more after it, even to the years of many generations.

A day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, &c.] A very calamitous day bringing with it much miſchief and diſtreſs, it being a known expreſſion, by [d] darkneſs to ſet forth figuratively a ſtate of miſery and calamity: and on the contrary by [e] light a time, or ſtate of proſperity. Although by ſome darkneſs be otherwiſe here taken, viz. properly for darkneſs of the air, cauſed by what ſhall then befal them in their land. So Kimchi הצרה נמשלת לחשך כמו שהשמחה נמשלת לאורה affliction is likened to darkneſs, as joy is likened to light, or elſe, ſaith he, the expoſition is כי מרוב הארבה חשכה הארץ that through the multitude of the [f] Locuſts the land is darkened, as it is ſaid, Exod. x. 15. For they covered the face of the whole earth, ſo that the land was darkened. This latter way is by Piſcator thought to be moſt agreeable to the words, as appears, he ſaith, by what after follows, of which the reader, when he hath ſeen that, will the better judge. Mean while I think it moſt convenient to take the firſt, as moſt applicable and agreeable to all expoſitions, whether they take by God's inſtruments in bringing the calamity ſpoken of on them, to be meant, either Locuſts and the like hurtful creatures, or the Chaldeans, or other enemies, as in this we have above in the firſt chapter ſeen them much to differ, and ſhall in what follows have occaſion to take notice of. This which he farther here ſaith, He adds in deſcription of the condition of that calamitous day, according to the diſtinction of the words in our Bibles of the laſt tranſlations, and ſeveral others, joining theſe words to the preceding, or according to that by many [g] Others made, joining them with the following, wherein he deſcribes that people, as he calls them by whom that calamity ſhall be brought on them, A great people and a ſtrong. It will be all one as to the meaning which of the [h] two ways we follow, either underſtanding that [i] day or that people to be, as שחר Shachar, the morning ſpread upon the mountains. In the expreſſions given of theſe words is as much difference as betwixt light and darkneſs, ſome underſtanding by the one, viz. light, and the other, viz. darkneſs. If שחר ſhachar be rendred as moſt generally, and I ſuppoſe aptly is, the morning, and the light thereof meant, then the meaning thereof ſeems to expreſs the ſudden coming, and the wide ſpreading of the thing ſpoken of, and ſo as not to be hindred, in that reſembling the morning light, which in a moment diſcovers itſelf on the tops of the mountains (on which it firſt appeareth) though at never ſo great a diſtance one from another. So Iſaiah lviii. 8. [k] To expreſs ſuddenneſs, is ſaid, Then ſhall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health ſhall ſpring forth ſpeedily. But although this be a very appoſite and perſpicuous meaning; and a known and moſt uſual ſignification of the word שחר ſhachar be, the morning, as in the Arabick سحر ſahar; yet are there who have preferred to give to it here a clean contrary notion of darkneſs. So Arias Montanus, of whom Chriſtopher à Caſtro ſaith, ſolus Montanus intelligit de tenebris, only Montanus underſtands it of darkneſs. So perhaps among the Latin Expoſitors before his time: but it is plain that all that Montanus hath is found in Abarbinel, and I ſuppoſe from him taken, for confirming this opinion, he obſerving that the ſame root hath the ſignification of blackneſs or darkneſs; and that thence the morning itſelf hath that name ſhachar, becauſe it is the antelucanum tempus, the time juſt before the day break, and the darkneſs gathered together is thicker than before, as Montanus expreſſeth it, or as Abarbinel, becauſe the blackneſs of the darkneſs is not yet gone, nor diſperſed by the light coming forth on the earth. But this interpretation is much ancienter than him too. That ancient Grammarian Abu Walid puts it as his opinion, and ſaith he prefers it before that which Others give of light; his words, becauſe cauſe the book is not printed, I will give, that it is the expoſition of Others that in the words כשחר פרוש על ההרים Caſhachar paruſh al haharim, שברא אנחשאר אלגראר פי אלבלאד באנחשאר אלצו פי אלנו הדא קול גירנא ותשביהה באנחשאר אלטלאם אולא, i. e. He likens the ſpreading of the Locuſts in the country, to the ſpreading of the light in the air; this is that which Others ſay; but the likening it to the ſpreading of the darkneſs is more convenient. As it is ſaid, Exod. x. 15. They covered the face of the whole earth, ſo that the land was darkened. But R. Tanchum, who had ſeen him, and, I ſuppoſe, well conſidered his opinion, thinks otherwiſe, who having given for the meaning that he likens אנחשאר אלגראר באנחשאר אלצו ענד אלצבאח the ſpreading of the Locuſts to the ſpreading of the light in the morning, adds, וקיל אן שחר הנא אלטלאם משתק מן שחור אי אנה יחגב אלצו לכתרתה פיצ'יר אלטלאם מבסוטא עלי אלגבאל כמא קאל, &c. and it is ſaid (by Some) that ſhachar here is darkneſs, being derived from ſhachor, black, viz. becauſe they hinder (or vail) the light through their multitude, ſo that darkneſs is thereby ſpread on the mountains, according to what he ſaith before, a day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, a day of clouds and thick darkneſs, agreeably to what he ſaith (Exod. x. 15.) they covered the face of the earth. But (ſaith he) אלאול אטהר ואנסב the former meaning is more perſpicuous and more pertinent. Yet among modern Interpreters Junius and Tremellius, though they differ not from thoſe who render ſhachar by morning, as to the ſignification of that word, ſeem, as to the meaning, to agree with thoſe others, who take it in the contrary notion of darkneſs, while with a ſupply of a word, which they think underſtood, they render it, ut nubes auroræ panditur ſuper montes, ſo that according to them the words run, a day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, a day of clouds and thick darkneſs, as a morning cloud is ſpread upon the mountains, which is by them expounded, tempus tam injucundum atque difficile, &c. a time as unpleaſant and difficult, as uſeth to be the day, at the dawning of which very thick clouds riſe up to the mountains, which hide the ſun and the heavens, at the morning light, and darken the air and threaten the certain coming of ſhowers. But [l] Others do wonder at them for ſo departing from the more uſual tranſlation, which is ſo agreeable to the words; and Piſcator ſaith he rather chuſeth, leaving out nubes a cloud, to render it, Ut aurora, as the morning, i. e. (ſaith he) ſplendor ſolis orientis, the light of the ſun riſing. According to one of theſe interpretations, the words deſcribe, as we ſaid, the ſudden coming and wide ſpreading of the calamity ſpoken of; according to the other the greatneſs, or grievouſneſs of it, and may be (as we have ſeen Some to take one way, Some another) joined either to the preceding words, wherein the calamity it ſelf is deſcribed, or to the following, wherein is deſcribed the quality of thoſe by whom it is to be brought on them. They are ſaid to be, a great people, and a ſtrong. [m] The ſame, that are above, chap. i. 6. called a nation, ſeem here called a people. That they that are called by one of thoſe names, may, they ſignifying but the ſame thing, be called by the other is no queſtion; but who they are, as there above we ſaw, is betwixt Expoſitors a difference not eaſy to be reconciled, ſome thinking thereby to be meant Locuſts and thoſe other like creatures above, chap. i. named; others, enemies, as Aſſyrians or Babylonians, Others thinking the Locuſts to be named but the Aſſyrians meant. Among the Jews the [n] moſt take the Locuſts to be meant, but Abarbinel the enemies, to whoſe coming upon them, ſpoiling them and carrying them captive, he refers all that is ſaid in this and the foregoing, and ſome of the following verſes. In that expreſſion, blow the trumpet, &c. he looks on as alluded to the blowing of the trumpet in the year of Jubilee, Levit. xxv. though for a contrary end, that being to give notice to every one to go to his own poſſeſſion, but this to warn them to depart from it into captivity, [o] שיצאו איש מאחזתו ואיש ממשפחתו ילכו בגלות, that they ſhould every man go out of his poſſeſſion, and every one depart from his family to go into captivity. The [p] day of darkneſs ſpoken of, and the ſeveral words by which it is deſcribed he takes to be כנוי לחרבן בית ראשון והצרות שיהיו בו a title or denomination of the deſtruction of the firſt temple, and of the afflictions that were at that time, by the great people, &c. thoſe that Nebuchadnezzar brought with him againſt Jeruſalem. From of old hath the like difference been betwixt Chriſtians alſo and not yet decided. Jerome ſeems to be at a doubt which opinion to take, while he looks on the words as ſo properly denoting the Locuſts, as figuratively to deſcribe the Chaldeans, as that dum locuſtas legimus Babylonios cogitemus, while we read of the Locuſts we cannot but think of the Babylonians. Per metaphoram locuſtarum deſcribitur impetus Chaldæorum, ſaith he, by a metaphor of Locuſts is deſcribed the force of the Chaldeans. Cyril alſo ſeems to be in doubt of which it ſhould be underſtood, of Locuſts, or ἐξ ὁμοιότητος αὐτῶν by likeneſs or compariſon to them, of the Aſſyrians, and that it is ἐπ' ἀμφοῖν ἀληθὲς true of both. So Theodoret ſaith that by what is here ſaid he deſcribes both, both the Locuſts and cloud of the enemies. Ruffinus looks on it as peculiarly ſpoken of Locuſts. Among more modern Interpreters [q] there are, and thoſe of note, who are peremptory for underſtanding the enemies, Aſſyrians or Babylonians: [r] Others are as poſitive for underſtanding the Locuſts. 'Twill be hard to decide the controverſy where are ſuch authorities on both ſides. I ſhall endeavour ſo to explain the words according to their literal meaning, meaning, as that though I apply them to the Locuſts, which opinion, I think, moſt agreeable to them to embrace, as that yet if any chuſe rather to apply them otherwiſe, he may have the genuine ſignification of them. Theſe ſpoken of and called a people, have added to them the epithets of רב Rab, great, and עצום Atſum, ſtrong: great, i. e. in number; ſo great, it is ſaid of them, as we have ſeen, chap. i. 6. that אין מספר they are without number; and ſtrong though not ſingly and ſimply in themſelves, [s] yet by the might of him that employs them, ſo ſtrong as to bring deſtruction on the whole land; for he is ſtrong that executeth his word (by them) as it is ſaid below, ver. 11. It is added in deſcription of them. There hath not been ever the like, neither ſhall be any more after it, even to the years of many generations. Much the ſame concerning this people (as they are called) ſpoken of have we been given to underſtand above in chap. i. 2, 3. where he puts the queſtion to them, whether the like to what he now ſhould ſpeak of had ever been in their days, or in the days of their fathers, and bids them to tell their children, and their children again to tell their children, and their children alſo another generation; which is plainly to ſhew the ſame that is here ſaid, that there had neither been the like to what is now ſeen (or ſhould be ſeen) in former generations, and that the like ſhould not again be ſeen in many generations; but that they, when they were told of it, ſhould look on it as a miraculous and ſtrange thing, not uſually heard of, nor by themſelves ever ſeen. In both theſe places ſeems to be ground for the ſame queſtion, viz. (the nation or people being underſtood of Locuſts) How what is in either of them may agree with what is ſaid, Exod. x. 14. concerning thoſe Locuſts ſent by God on the land of Egypt, that before them there were no ſuch Locuſts as they, neither after them ſhall be ſuch? What ſolutions are given of this difficulty we have already ſeen on thoſe words, which may, I ſuppoſe, ſuffice for clearing theſe alſo: yet if it may not be tedious to the reader, as being but a repetition of the ſame things, I ſhall here give him a tranſlation of R. Tanchum's note on this place. If this (ſaith he) be taken as a narration of the coming of real Locuſts, it will be contradictory to what God ſaith of thoſe Locuſts, which were among the plagues of Egypt, before them there were no ſuch Locuſts as they, neither after them ſhall be ſuch. This contradiction [t] ſome learned men ſolve by conſidering the places, viz. that that ſaying (in Exodus) was in reſpect of the land of Egypt, only concerning the Locuſts that were there, and which ſhould be never after them in it: but this here in reſpect to the land of Iſrael alone in like manner alſo. And it is by [u] Others ſaid that the meaning is, that there had not been the like in regard that there were four ſorts of them together (viz. thoſe named, chap. i. 4.) whereas in the firſt (viz. what was in Egypt) were only Locuſts. But Some do ſay, that this and the like expreſſions in the prophecies, or books of the Prophets כלה מבאלנאת פי אללפט are all hyperbolical language, וליס יראר בה אל תחקיק, and that it is not meant that the truth of things ſhould exactly anſwer to the preciſe ſignification of the word, (but by words denoting what is exceſſive, meant what is very great, and exceeding the ordinary courſe of nature, or what is uſually ſeen.) What is rendred in the Text in our Bibles, Of many generations, in the Margin is noted to ſignify literally, of generation and generation, viz. דור ודור, and ſo it is according to the letter tranſlated by many both of ancient and modern Interpreters. So by the Chaldee retaining almoſt the ſame words with the Hebrew. So by the Vulgar Latin, uſque in annos generationis & generationis. So the MS. Arabick الي سنين جيل وجيل and many Latin Verſions. Nor do the LXX. much differ, ἕως ἐτῶν εἰς γενεὰς γενεῶν: nor the printed Arabick الي سنين الي جيل جيال الا unto years to generation of generations: the Syr. ܥܕ ܫܢܝܢ ܕܕܪ ܘܕܪ until years of generation after generation. Junius and Tremellius render it as, Ours in the Text do, ad annos multarum generationum, which ſeems a proper and genuine explication of the words literally ſounding, to the years of generation and generation, the repetition of the word generation twice implying contrariety, multitude or plurality, [w] not only the two next generations, but a diſtance of long time after the preſent generation, though unlimited and undetermined, as to the preciſe number, yet terminated by bounds of time, as much as to ſay, not in haſte or ordinarily in [x] every generation; not till after many years, years of more than the preſent and next following, and perhaps more be paſſed, i. e. not for a long time, ſuch as God ſhall ſee fit, ſo indefinitely. Mean while the [y] word years here added ſeems to imply that in proceſs of time ſuch may or ſhall again be, and [z] not to be an utter denial that the like ſhall ever again be, as Some ſeem to underſtand, explaining it by [a] nunquam ultra, or [b] neque ullis ſæculorum annis futurus eſt, never hereafter, or not in any years of ages. Thoſe that think here meant the Locuſts, take it for a long time indefinitely as we ſaid, but they that underſtand it of enemies reſtrain it to the time of the coming of the Romans many years after the Chaldeans, as among the Jews Abarbinel, and of Chriſtians ſeveral.

[c] See ver. 11. of this chap. [d] Amos v. 18, &c. [e] Eſt. viii. 16. [f] See R. Sol. and Ab. Ezra. [g] LXX. printed Arab. Caſtalio. [h] See Mercer. [i] Some refer it to both, dies ille, & exercitus locuſtarum vel Babyloniorum. Pet. à Fig. [k] Druſ.

[l] Lively. [m] Yet Danæus thinks otherwiſe. [n] Abu Walid, R. Sol. Aben Ezra, Kimchi, R. Tanchum. [o] Ar. Mont. differently explains this. [p] By which he looks on particularly declared the ninth of the month Ab. [q] Calvin. Munſt. Grot. Danæ, Genev. notes. [r] Jun. Trem. Piſc. Bochart. &c.

3. A fire devoureth before them, and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a deſolate wilderneſs, yea nothing ſhall eſcape them.

In this and ſome following verſes proceeding to deſcribe in ſeveral high and figurative ex-

[s] See note on chap. i. 6. [t] This way Bochartus takes. [u] See R. Sol. Aben Ezra, Kimchi. [w] Ne duas tantum generationes accipe, ſed pro ſcripturæ uſu multas, Merc. [x] Cujuſque generationis, Lively. [y] Ar. Mont. [z] Theodoret, Rib. Caſtr. [a] Vat. [b] Caſtr.

expreſſions the ſad circumſtances and effects which ſhould attend the coming of that great and ſtrong, numerous and miſchievous people in the foregoing words mentioned and deſcribed, he in the firſt place, ſaith a fire devoureth before them, or as in the ancient Geneva Engliſh, and moſt Latin Tranſlators, as it is in the Hebrew in the ſingular number לפניו lephanau, before him: but it being referred to the noun people going before, which is a name of multitude, though in form ſingular, what is referred thereunto may indifferently be put in either number לפניו lephanau, before him, or them. This word is firſt in order in the original, and ſo ſignifies before, as to admit of ſome ambiguity, whether it be here to be underſtood of precedency in reſpect to time or place, as being elſewhere indifferently uſed for both, and is here therefore differently underſtood, by ſome in the one way, by others in the other, and in either ſeeming to make a good and perſpicuous meaning, whatever be by that people underſtood: which is likewiſe to be ſaid of the word ואחריו Veeccherau, which follows, and after him or them, that it may be referred either to place and poſition, what was behind hand, or to time, what was remaining after them. Among thoſe who refer it to order of place ſeem to be the LXX. who render [c] τὰ ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῦ πῦρ ἀναλίσκον, κ᾽ τὰ ὀπίσω αὐτῦ ἀναπλομμήν φλόξ. The things that are before him a conſuming fire, and behind him a kindled flame, which Cyril underſtanding of the Locuſts, ſaith to be ſpoken becauſe ταῖς τῶν ἀκρίδων ἐμβολαῖς, by the incurſion of the Locuſts whatſoever comes in their way is ſtraigtway conſumed, and if there be any thing left behind them ἔργον κ᾽ αὐτὸ ἔσαι τῶν ἑπομμένων ταῖς πρωταῖς, that will be the work of thoſe that follow thoſe former (to conſume that likewiſe.) The like miſchief he ſuppoſeth may alſo be ſaid to be done by enemies. The Vulgar Latin alſo plainly ſo takes it here to be meant, rendring, ante faciem ejus ignis vorans, & poſt eum exurens flamma, [d] Before the face thereof a devouring fire, and after it a burning flame. St. Jerome gives for the meaning of it, Quicquid attigerit quaſi vorax flamma conſumet, nihilque poſt ſe integrum derelinquet, whatſoever he ſeizeth on he ſhall conſume as a devouring flame, and ſhall leave nothing ſound behind it. To the like ſenſe R. Solomon, they conſume all things as if a fire devoured before them, and a flame burnt after them. Kimchi alſo not much different, In the place whereſoever they ſettle, it looks before them and behind them, as if fire had devoured and burnt up every green thing before them, ſaith he, and behind them, becauſe the place on which they are is covered (at the preſent) by them. According to theſe (the words before and behind being thus taken) there is a compariſon of the Locuſts, and what is by them done, to fire, and what miſchief is by it when it ſeizeth on things, uſually done; and the ſimilitude is looked on as very agreeable to the nature of Locuſts, which by reaſon of that noxious quality which is in them, are ſaid to [e] burn ſuch things as they light on, as hath been above obſerved on chap. i. 7. But the learned Bochartus, though he thinks the Locuſts here ſpoken of, and meant by that people mentioned, doth not think them compared to fire, and their doings to the effects thereof; but by the fire to be meant another thing, viz. great drought and parching heat, which precede their coming, before likewiſe ſpoken of in the foregoing chapter, ver. 17, 19. according to what we there mentioned concerning the opinion of him and Others. And then taking the word לפניו, before him to denote not order of place but of time he ſaith, utrobique agi de ſumma ſiccitate quæ locuſtarum adventum præceſſerat, & ſecuta ſit, in both places to be ſpoken of [f] extreme drought, which both went before and followed (or continued) after the coming of the Locuſts among them, whereby together with what miſchief was by them done, all things that grew on the earth, were ſo ſcorched and conſumed, as by fire and flame; [g] which either of theſe ways we take, it comes to paſs (he ſaith) the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a deſolate wilderneſs. Here again the words before and behind, are capable of being referred, either to order of place, or time, as that it may ſound, either that part of the land which they were not come to, and that which in their going farther on, they left behind them. So Jerome, quaſi hortus & paradiſus voluptatis omnis terra eſt quam non tetigerit: quaſi ſolitudo & deſertum quicquid fuerit prædatus, As a garden and paradiſe of pleaſure (ſuch as was of old the garden of Eden, Gen. ii. 8, &c. called alſo the garden of God, and uſed upon compariſon whereby to ſet forth extraordinary pleaſant and delightſome places, as Gen. xiii. 10. Ezek. xxxvi. 35.) is all the country that they (this people) have not touched, and as a wilderneſs or deſert all that they have preyed upon, or elſe [h] before their coming, and after their departing, viz. that that land which before their coming was ſo pleaſant as is deſcribed, after they had been there, was left wholly deſolate. This meaning is here taken even by [i] Some who in the former underſtood the words of order and place, and it may ſeem indifferent which way it be taken, as to the thing intended, viz. the deſcription of great miſchief, the extent and generality of which to expreſs is added, yea and nothing ſhall eſcape them, ſo Ours well render the meaning of the words וגם פליטה לא היתה לו vegam pelitah lo haytah lo, which literally ſound, and alſo there ſhall be no eſcaping to him (or [k] from him.) So the word פליטה Pelitah, properly ſounds [l] evaſio, eſcaping, but withal is often ſo uſed as to ſignify not only the [m] act of eſcaping, eſcaping, but alſo the things or perſons that eſcape, and remain. So as that, there ſhall be no eſcaping to him, will mean, [n] no eſcaper, or nothing ſhall eſcape, no [o] remainder left. So Aben Ezra explains it, אין דבר שנמלט ממנו there is nothing which hath eſcaped, (or may eſcape) from him or them. And ſo Kimchi, שלא הניח דבר מן הצומח שלא אכל becauſe they have left nothing of ſuch things as grow, which, he ſaith, they have not devoured. Now there is betwixt Interpreters a little difference, in that, what Ours with theſe that we have mentioned, and Others, attribute to things, they attribute to perſons; ſo the LXX. καὶ ἀνασωζόμενον οὐκ ἔσται αὐτῷ, & qui ſalvetur non erit ei, and the [p] printed Arabick following, ولَيس من يَنجو, and there is none that can eſcape: So the Vulgar Latin alſo, nec eſt qui effugiat eum, neither is there any one that can eſcape him, which Jerome explains, neque ullus poterit inveniri, qui illius effugiat manus, neither can any be found which may eſcape his hands. The Syriack ܘܠܝܬ ܕܢܫܬܙܒ ܡܢܗ ܐܠܐ ܕܢܫܬܙܒ (may indifferently be referred to perſon or thing) and there is not that may be delivered from him. The Chaldee plainly refers it to the perſon, ואף שובא לית ליה לרשיעיא, and alſo there is no eſcaping to him (or from him, or becauſe of him) for the wicked. Among more modern Interpreters Some alſo render, not nihil, nothing, but [q] nemo, no body or perſon. Theſe that ſo by what ſhall not eſcape, underſtand men or perſons, may ſeem by thoſe, from whom they ſhall not eſcape, to underſtand, not Locuſts, and ſuch creatures, but enemies, who, and not thoſe ſorts of creatures, uſe to ſeize on the perſons of men; yet if any do ſo render the word, viz. no man, may it make alſo a convenient meaning, in as much as thoſe vermin, univerſally devouring all the growth of the earth whereby men ſubſiſt, they alſo may be lookt on as ſufferers in that general devaſtation, and none of them be ſaid to eſcape without miſchief to him, or be out of fear of ſuffering by a general famine. But the word פליטה being of the feminine gender, and ſignifying as we have above ſeen, doth ſeem rather here to favour the referring it to things in general, than particularly to perſons: and that will be a plainer interpretation, to render nothing, than no man, as taking in both. Among thoſe that think the people here ſpoken of to be meant enemies, and not Locuſts, the former words of fire and flame, which are ſaid to devour before and behind them, Abarbinel, by the fire devouring before them, underſtands, the vanguard, or fore part of the army, by the flame burning behind them, the hinder part thereof, which though in other armies it is uſually made up of women, and children, and old and weaker people, not fit for fighting, yet in that army of the Babylonians was not ſo, but conſiſted of ſuch who deſerved alſo to be compared to a flame that burnt up all things upon the earth; and by what is ſaid, there ſhould be to him none that ſhould eſcape, he thinks intimated that which befel Gedaliah the ſon of Ahikam, and thoſe that the King of Babylon left with him in the land of Judah, where after a ſhort time [r] Iſhmael the ſon of Nethaniah came and ſlew them, ſo that there was none of them, that Nebuchadnezzar had ſpared, left remaining.

[c] In the printed Arab. [d] Doway Tranſlation. [e] So that Some will have the name Locuſts, to be derived from loca uſta, ſee Bochart. who ſlights it. [f] Tarnov. underſtands by fire, Zelus Dei, the zeal (or burning wrath) of God. [g] But thoſe that underſtand not the Locuſts but enemies to be here ſpoken of, look on by fire and flame to be denoted, their ſetting all things every where on fire. [h] Bochart. [i] Mercer. [k] Mercer ei, to him, that is, ab eo, from him. [l] Druſ. [m] Actio & res, Schindler. So it is in other words, as, captivity, for captives, &c. Druſ. ſo ver. 32. the ſame word.

By that fire before them [s] a learned Latin Commentator would have to be underſtood, and alluded to that fire which was by the Chaldeans (who worſhipped that element as a deity) carried before their arraies to direct them in the way and threaten their enemies; and that behind them, that with which they ſhould ſet on fire ſuch things as they met with. This conceit though he ſeem much to pleaſe himſelf with, and may ſeem a nice obſervation, yet is by [t] Some thought not to be here much to the purpoſe. The plaineſt meaning, if it be underſtood of the enemies, will be, their ſetting [u] on fire round about all things, and ſo deſtroying all that they meet with. But I rather think thoſe to be in the right who underſtand it of the Locuſts, and ſuch other vermin before mentioned, which, and what they did or ſhould do, we take likewiſe to be farther deſcribed in the following words.

4. The appearance of them is as the appearance of horſes, and as horſemen ſo ſhall they run.

מראהו Marehu, viſio, vultus, ſpecies, [w] forma, facies, the ſight, countenance, (or viſage) the form of them, is like that [x] of horſes. That it was no unknown compariſon to liken Locuſts to horſes, appears by what is ſaid of theſe Locuſts, Rev. ix. 7. (whoever are meant by them) that the ſhapes (or likeneſſes) of them were like unto horſes prepared to battle, which reſemblance in whatever elſe it may conſiſt, we may think by what is by Others obſerved to be chiefly in their look, their head and face. So Theodoret on this place ſaith, that if any ſhall accurately conſider the head of a Locuſt he ſhall find it σφόδρα τῇ τοῦ ἵππου ἐοικυῖαν, very like to that of an horſe, which Bochartus obſerves to be noted by other later writers. The Arabians, who are well acquainted with thoſe kinds of creatures, obſerve the ſame of them, as in the words by him cited out of Damirie's hiſtory of living creatures, wherein the Locuſts being ſaid, though a weak creature, yet in the make of its body, and ſeveral parts thereof, to reſemble ten ſorts of creatures of ſtronger kind, there is put in the [y] firſt place وجه فرس The face of an horſe, and a Poet among them in particular manner expreſſeth the ſame ſaying, وانعمت عليها جياد الخيل الراس والغم nimble horſes have conferred on them the head and mouth; ſo that aptly we may look on the Locuſts in this expreſſion in the firſt clauſe to be compared to horſes, in reſpect to their looks and appearance, and to the very make and form of them, to which may be added what [z] Others take it to conſiſt of, viz. their fierceneſs, boldneſs, and undauntedneſs, deſcribed, Job xxxix. 19, &c. Then in the following clauſe have we them again compared to them, in reſpect to their undaunted ſpeed and boldneſs in their progreſs, when put to it by their riders: and as horſemen ſo ſhall they run. For 'tis ſtill the horſe that runs, though pricked forward by the horſeman; with ſuch ſwiftneſs ſhall they overturn all before them, not to be ſtopped or ſtayed; and here it ſeems to many a very convincing argument, that the words are to be underſtood properly of Locuſts, not of the Chaldeans or enemies, in regard that they are ſaid to be like horſes, and like horſemen. For the enemies were really horſemen riding on horſes, not only like ſuch, they nor their horſes. Some of them therefore that will have it underſtood of enemies, for eluding this ſay, that the letter כ, c, rendred in Greek ὡς, in Latin ſicut, uſually put as a particle of likeneſs, is yet ſo put, not παραβολικῶς, by way of compariſon, or ſimilitude, but, as elſewhere ſometimes it is, ἐπιτατικῶς, as Theodoret ſpeaks, ad intenſionem ſignificandam, for the heightning of the thing ſpoken of, and to ſhew that it is eminently ſuch as it is ſaid to be; ſo that his ſaying, their appearance is as the appearance of horſes, will be as much as to ſay, [a] that their horſes appear to be indeed gallant horſes: and as horſemen they ſhall run, as much as to ſay, they ſhall ſhew themſelves to be gallant expert horſemen. Others retaining the comparative ſignification will have it to be underſtood of the foot or infantry of the army, as that even they of them appeared as fierce as horſes, and were as bold and ſwift as horſemen. Pedites iſti erunt velociſſimi, ſaith Grotius, Their very footmen ſhall be ſo ſwift. And Abarbinel, after an impertinent ſtory, as if they were likened to Centaurs, which were thought to be half men and half horſes, which he thinks might here be alluded to, ſaith that elſe it may be, that their faces were great, and their members ſtrong like the appearance of horſes, and that their footmen ran with as great ſwiftneſs, as horſemen with horſes. But Bochartus's cenſure of this is, Pedites cum equitibus conferri novum eſt, & inauditum, It is a new unheard of thing that footmen ſhould be compared to horſemen, and, quis Aſſyrios dixerit ut equites fuiſſe, cum revera equites fuerint, iique magno numero? who ſhall ſay that the Aſſyrians were as horſemen, when they were indeed horſemen, and they in great number, and as ſo elſewhere deſcribed, as Ezek. xxiii. 6, 12, 23. and xxvi. 7, 10, 11. Habak. i. 8, &c. yet find we [b] another to ſay, nec mirum eſt viros bellicoſos comparari equis generoſis, pedites equitibus, ad indicandum fortitudinem & celeritatem eorum, It is no wonder that warlike men ſhould be compared to generous horſes, and footmen to horſemen, for ſetting forth their valour and ſwiftneſs. But, I think, the moſt perſpicuous meaning to be had, by likening the Locuſts and other like inſects with them, being employed by God for executing his judgments, though otherwiſe ſeeming weak and contemptible creatures, to ſuch as are of greateſt ſtrength and power. To them likewiſe will the other comparative expreſſions in the following words, by which other circumſtances attending their coming and behaviour for the ſame reaſon, aptly agree; as firſt, that whereby the tumult and great noiſe which they ſhall make, in the next words compared to that of chariots ratling on the tops of mountains, and to the noiſe of crackling fire among ſtubble, or dry combuſtible matter, and to that of a ſtrong people ſet in battle aray.

[n] Non erit evaſor, Pag. [o] Reliquiæ, reſiduum, nempe quod quaſi effugio ſuperſtes remanſit, Full. Cap. Conc. [p] The MS. Arabick literally according to the Hebrew, ولا يكن له فليطة. [q] Fig. [r] Jer. xli. 23. [s] Sanctius. [t] Aſſemblies notes Engliſh. [u] Grot. Quaqua ibit omnia lucebunt incendiis. [w] Full. Cap. Conc. [x] Schindler. [y] 2. The eyes of an Elephant. 3. The neck of a Bull. 4. The horn of a Hart. 5. The breaſt of a Lion. 6. The belly of عقرب a Scorpion, (ſo it is in my copy as well as in that of Bochartus, for which he thinks ſhould be read غقاب which is a ſort of Eagle.) 7. The wings of an Eagle. 8. The thighs of a Camel. 9. The feet of an Oſtrich. 10. The tail of a Serpent.

5. Like the noiſe of chariots on the tops of mountains ſhall they leap, like the noiſe of a flame of fire that devoureth the ſtubble, as a ſtrong people ſet in battle aray.

The words קול מרכבות על ראשי ההרים ירקדון Cekol Marcaboth al roſhe haharim Yerakkedun, ſeem capable of a double conſtruction, either ſo as to ſound, that the Locuſts ſhall leap (which is a proper term for their way of motion) on the tops of mountains with ſuch a noiſe as that of chariots jumping, and are therefore by Junius and Tremellius rendred, Quaſi ſtrepitu curruum ſuper cacumina (or [c] cacuminibus) montium ſalient, as with the noiſe of chariots on the tops of mountains ſhall they leap, as likewiſe the Tigurian Verſion before them, Irruent ſtrepitu quodam per cacumina montium ut currus, they ſhall ruſh (or go on) with a certain noiſe on the tops of the mountains as chariots; or elſe, ſecondly, as the noiſe of chariots which leap, (or when they leap) on the tops of mountains, with an ellipſis underſtanding to be ſupplied either, which, or when they leap on the tops of mountains: So that whereas the words, ſhall leap on the tops of the mountains, are in the firſt referred to the Locuſts, or who elſe are ſpoken of likened to chariots, in the latter way they are referred to the chariots, to which they are likened. This latter way doth Druſius mention, and it is that which the Syriack takes rendring, ܐܝܟ ܩܠܐ ܕܡܪܟܒ̈ܬܐ ܕܥܠ ܪܝܫ̈ܐ ܕܛܘܪ̈ܐ ܕܡܬܪܓܫ̈ܢ like the voice of chariots, which make a noiſe on the tops of mountains. But the former way way is more by other Interpreters followed. So the LXX. ὡς φονὴ ἁρμάτων ἐπὶ τὰς κορυφὰς τῶν ὀρέων ἐξαλοῦνται; and ſo the printed and MS. Arabick, and the Vulgar Latin, ſicut ſonitus quadrigarum ſuper capita montium exilient, as the ſound of chariots upon the tops of mountains they ſhall leap, and ſo moſt of the modern; yet not without ſome difference again, whether only the word they, or all thoſe words, on the tops of the mountains ſhall they leap, be to be referred to the Locuſts, or only they ſhall leap, to them, and, on the tops of the mountains to the chariots. Mercer obſerves it as the opinion of ſeveral [d] Jews, that all are to be underſtood of the Locuſts, which get up to the tops of mountains, whither chariots cannot climb: ſo that though for the noiſe and leaping, they be compared to chariots, and that be common to them both, yet the doing this upon the tops of mountains be proper to them; but himſelf prefers rather to take a middle way and part the words, ſo as, to join on the tops of mountains, to the preceding, like the noiſe of chariots, and then to refer, they ſhall leap, to the Locuſts underſtood in the word they; ſo that the words ſhall ſound, ſuch a noiſe as chariots make when they are driven over the tops of mountains, ſuch do theſe Locuſts leaping (or in their leaping) make: for though it be not uſual to drive chariots in ſuch places, yet if they be there driven, they will make a very great noiſe, and ſo the compariſon is by that heightned. But whatever difference be between theſe Expoſitors mentioned, as to the conſtruction of the words; it will be indifferent as to the ſcope and meaning which we take, it being ſtill a compariſon brought to expreſs the horrid noiſe, which thoſe ſpoken of ſhall make in their approach, and thereby ſtrike terror into the people, by their coming in ſo dreadful a manner. How great a noiſe Locuſts uſe to make where they go, may be gueſſed by what Remigius reports of them, from ſuch whoſe territories uſed to be infeſted by them, viz. that it is ſuch, ut a ſexto milliari audiri poſſit ſonitus eorum, that it may be heard ſix miles off. But it may be ſufficient for illuſtrating the preſent words (if underſtood of Locuſts) to add thoſe of much like ſound, Rev. ix. 9. where of thoſe Locuſts there ſpoken of, it is ſaid that the ſound of their wings was as the ſound of chariots, of many horſes running to battle. The joining together theſe two places, ſhews that it was looked on as a proper, and uſually received compariſon, to liken the noiſe made by the Locuſts in their motions to that of horſes trampling, and chariots jumping, which is known to be great. There follows in the next words another compariſon, whereby the frightful noiſe that they ſhall make is expreſſed, like the noiſe of a flame of fire that devoureth the ſtubble, and [e] ſuch noiſe as is of ſtubble burned by fire, which is known to make a great crackling noiſe. The noiſe may be ſaid to proceed from the ſtubble and from the fire, when ſuch [f] combuſtible things, as ſtubble and ſmall ſticks, are ſet on fire, there is a great noiſe made; with which expreſſion is much agreeable what is ſaid, Eccleſ. vii. 6. as the crackling of thorns under a pot, &c. The noiſe in the former compariſon ſeems to be made by their motion, leaping or flying; this probably meant of that which is made by their chawing, or eating. So Cyril appears to have underſtood it, who ſaith, they report that their falling on the field is not without a noiſe, and that they make alſo [g] a great noiſe with their teeth, while they chaw the corn caſt down before them, like that of the wind driving the flame of fire. And ſo Mercer explains the words, as the noiſe of flaming fire conſuming the moſt combuſtible matter, talis eſt & ejus plantas erodentis ſtrepitus, ſo is the noiſe of them gnawing of the plants, (or things that it feeds on) ſo Pet. à Fig. Devorantium Locuſtarum ſtrepitum declarat, he declares the noiſe of the Locuſts devouring things, [h] magno ſtrepitu volant, & in agros decidunt, & ſegetes dentibus commolunt, with great noiſe they fly, and fall down on the fields, and grind the corn with their teeth. Theſe words may be jointly conſidered with thoſe preceding, ver. 3. according to thoſe who there take likewiſe a compariſon to be made of Locuſts to fire (as we have ſeen,) and ſo both will direct us to look on the Locuſts, and thoſe other inſects with them comprehended, under the name of that great and ſtrong people (ver. 2.) as carrying along with them fire and the ſad effects thereof, wherever they go. There follows another compariſon of them, As a ſtrong people ſet in battle aray, for connecting of which words with the preceding, [i] Some will have to be underſtood, and repeated from them, either ירקדון yerakkedun, they ſhall leap as, &c. or elſe קול Kol, the noiſe, as the noiſe of a ſtrong people, &c. ſo ſhall the noiſe of theſe be, leaving to be inferred the latter part of the ſimilitude from the firſt being alone expreſſed, it being the uſual cuſtom of ſuch, who are ſo ordered to encounter their enemies, to make a great noiſe and ſhouting, thereby to ſtrike terror into them (as Kimchi ſo underſtanding the words explains them.) It ſeems to [k] Others enough to underſtand, they are as, &c. eſt ut populus validus ad pugnam inſtructus, this people (or theſe people ſpoken of) are as a ſtrong people ſet in battle aray; as if from ſpeaking of the noiſe they made, he paſſed to deſcribe the order in which they went on in executing their work. Here is obſervable the alteration of this expreſſion from that before in ver. 2. there thoſe ſpoken of are called a great people and ſtrong, here the ſame ſaid to be as a ſtrong people; which is an argument that in that firſt place they are called a people [l] not properly, but but figuratively, becauſe like, or as a people, ſo reſembling them in ſuch or ſuch reſpects, that they deſerve in that regard even to be called by their name, which ſeems an evident proof, that [m] neither the Babylonians, or any other, that as enemies ſhould invade the land, are here meant, but really Locuſts and ſuch worms ſent by God to execute his judgments on them, it being uſual for amplifying, or extolling leſſer things, to compare them to greater; not on the contrary greater things to leſſer, except by way of diminution or vilifying them, [n] unleſs in ſuch particulars where they do exceed them, though in others inferior to them. The reſpects for which theſe here, (according to this way of underſtanding theſe words, they are, &c.) are ſaid to reſemble a ſtrong people ſet in battle aray, pointed out, ſeem to be, 1. their number and power of doing hurt; for their number, they are as a people, for their power, ſtrong: ſuch by experience they are acknowledged to be, [o] Quid locuſtis innumerabilius & fortius, quibus humana induſtria reſiſtere non poteſt? what doth more exceed number, and what is ſtronger than Locuſts, which no induſtry of man can reſiſt? ſo Cyril ſaith of them, that they are devouring things, and διὰ πληθὼ ἀμέτρητον ἔκ δικαταγώνιςον, μᾶλλον δὲ κ᾽ δυσάντητον, by reaſon of their innumerable multitude not eaſy to be encountred, but rather very dangerous and unlucky to be met with, and that their breaking in is χρῆμα ἄμαχον καὶ δυσκαταγώνιςον παντελῶς ἀνθρώποις, an irreſiſtible thing and altogether inſuperable by men.

[z] Merc. Pet. à Fig. Ribera. [a] Revera præ ſe ferunt equorum aſpectum & ut vere equites current, Chriſt. à Caſtro, who obſerves ὡς, as, in Greek ſo to denote, John i. 14. ſo in our ordinary ſpeech we ſay, he quitted himſelf as, or like a man, i. e. ſhewed himſelf truly ſo to be. [b] Brentius. [c] Piſcator.

[d] So of Ab. Ezra, Kimchi, and ſo of ſome among Chriſtians, Qualem ſtrepitum in bellico tumultu edunt currus ſaltitantes, talem hæ beſtiæ edent ſuper cacumina montium ſalientes, Lively. [e] Druſ. [f] Kimchi. [g] ἠχὼ βλωχρὰν, which word ſignifies both weak and ſtrong, the laſt ſeems here moſt apt, though Bochart renders it tenuem ſmall, but Others, non tenuem, not ſmall. [h] Bochart. [i] Druſ. [k] Bochart. [l] Bochart.

2. Their order and reſoluteneſs (if I may ſo ſpeak) in their progreſs and poſture, in that he adds in deſcription of thoſe ſtrong people, to whom he likens them, ſet in battle aray; well diſciplined ſoldiers ſo and on ſuch occaſion ordered, conſtantly keep their ranks and places, and maintain their ſtations. His comparing theſe creatures that he ſpeaks of to ſuch, ſhews that they alſo did ſo keep order in their motions. That ſo they are obſerved to do, ſeems intimated by what is ſaid of them, [p] Prov. xxx. 26. (according to our Tranſlation) that they go forth all of them by bands, and more plainly by what the Greek ſaith in rendring that place, that they go on as in battle aray guided by one alarm, εὐτάκτως, in good order, and what the printed Arabick Verſion there, that all their carriage بعسكره in their army is بحسن ترتيب in excellent order. [q] By other Authors it is obſerved of them, that they keep as conſtant in their places, when they fly, as the ſtone ſquares in a chequered pavement, without any moving out of them; ſo by Jerome as an eye witneſs: their ſtedfaſt keeping their order, and not by any means ſuffering themſelves to be put out of it, is obſerved by Theodoret and Cyril. [r] Arabian Authors, who were well acquainted with them, obſerve likewiſe their framing themſelves into a body كالعسكر like an army, in which, when the firſt or leader moveth, the reſt all move, and when he ſettles the reſt all ſettle together; and therefore they call a company of them [s] منظوم Mandhum, which ſignifies a thing ſet or joined together in order: ſo exact are they reported to be in ſetting themſelves therein and keeping it, that they may ſeem to be as expert in, and as obſervant of military diſcipline, as the beſt martialled ſoldiers. In this regard the compariſon of them to ſoldiers ſet in battle aray ſeems very apt; if we take in alſo, with Others, the noiſe that they make like to ſuch, it will make for amplifying the terror of their coming. A dreadful thing certainly muſt it be to hear and ſee ſuch circumſtances by which it is here ſaid to be accompanied. How people ſhould therefore be neceſſarily affected with it, he deſcribes in the next words.

6. Before their face the people ſhall be much pained: all faces ſhall gather blackneſs.

מפניו Mippanau, before his face, i. e. at the very ſight of them, or as Vatablus, præ metu ejus, through fear of them appearing, the people, יחילו Yachilu, ſhall be much pained, viz. with great [t] pain, as thoſe of women in travail. The word, though of greater latitude, is uſually applied to the ſignifying of thoſe, and ſo where it is otherwiſe uſed may be looked on as denoting no ordinary pains, but ſuch as are very grievous and hard to be ſuffered: and therefore do Ours add for giving height to the ſignification of it, the word much, as if it were in the notion of the verb neceſſarily included, although not by others ſo fully and diſtinctly expreſſed, they contenting themſelves with one bare verb of more general ſignification, as [u] dolebunt, [w] cruciabuntur, [x] horrent, (or [y] contremiſcent.)

How much they ſhould be pained, how greatly diſturbed, ſhould be diſcovered by their looks; ſo he adds, All faces ſhall gather blackneſs, or as in the Margin, pot, which is by many looked on as the proper ſignification of the word פארור Parur, as if it were altogether the ſame with פרור Parur, without the letter א, a, which occurs, Numb. xi. 8. where it is by Ours rendred pannes, by Others χύτρα, and olla, [z] a pot, or cacabus, a kettle, all to the ſame purpoſe, viz. ſuch a veſſel as things are boiled in over the fire, and it being therefore taken as the ſame with that, is literally rendred, olla, pot. So the Vulgar Latin, redigentur in ollam, ſhall be made a pot, or turned to a pot, by which, what is meant is manifeſt, and by Others generally ſhewed, viz. to be made in colour [a] like a pot. So the Doway Tranſlation, which very literally uſed to render the Latin, expreſſeth it, adding that par-particle of ſimilitude in this place, all viſages ſhall be made like a pot. The LXX. πᾶν πρόσωπον ὡς πρόσκαυμα χύτρας, (as likewiſe the printed Arabick which follows them كل وجه كسخام القدر every face is (or ſhall be) like the burntneſs, or blackneſs of a pot. The MS. Arabick likewiſe all faces, قبضوا سخام الطنجير have gathered the blackneſs of a pot. The Chaldee. All faces are covered אברום אוכמין כקדירא, with ſoot, black as a pot. The Syriack ܟܠ ܐܦܝ ܢܬܟܢܫ ܘܟ ܐܦ ܣܡܘ ܐܝܟ ܩܕܪܐ and all faces ſhall be black like the blackneſs of a pot. All theſe, it's manifeſt, underſtand alike, a compariſon here to be drawn from the colour of the pot, and not the matter or metal of the pot to be meant, although from that alſo in other reſpects a compariſon between that and the face may be drawn, as Iſaiah xlviii. 4. there he ſaith, their brow was braſs, but here it is otherwiſe; and therefore as in thoſe tranſlations which we have ſeen, ſo generally in moſt of the modern, in the rendring, reſpect had not ſo much to the pot as to the colour, as Ours in the Text renders blackneſs, without mention at all of the pot which the word properly ſignifies. So [b] Some render it only, nigredinem, or nigrorem, blackneſs. [c] Some luridum ollæ colorem, pale pot colour. [d] Some pallorem, paleneſs, which the learned Mr. Lively prefers among the reſt, as proper to the meaning of this place, even though it ſhould be granted that the word did more properly ſignify blackneſs; and ſeems to approve Mercer's explaining it, nigricantem pallorem, a black paleneſs, or wanneſs. All of them agreeing in this, that by it is meant ſuch alteration as is cauſed in the face and looks, through much fear and perplexity, and is a ſign of it, which likewiſe is the ſcope of another interpretation, which is clean contrary to this, as to the rendring of the noun Parur, making it not to ſignify blackneſs but beauty (both here, and Nahum ii. 10. where the ſame expreſſion occurs) as from פאר peer, beauty, ſhining comlineſs, (by doubling the laſt radical letter) ſo that the words may ſound, All faces have gathered in, contracted, or withdrawn their beauty, which way take ſeveral of great note among the Jews, as Abu Walid and R. Tanchum, rendring in Arabick جمعت جمالها وقبضته [e] have gathered in and contracted their beauty: So looking on the affixe their as underſtood with the noun. Aben Ezra alſo looks on the noun ſo to ſignify, viz. the ſame that Peer, beauty or comlineſs, and the ſenſe of the verb to be שיתקבץ ויתאסף that it contracts or gathers it ſelf, [f] contrary to יתפשט Yithpaſhet, which is ſpoken of a thing when it openly ſhews it ſelf (or lays it ſelf open,) and for illuſtration of this expreſſion they bring, that where it is ſaid וכוכבים אספו נגהם, and the ſtars ſhall withdraw their ſhining, (ver. 10. of this chap. and chap. iii. 15.) as looking on אסף Aſaph, and קבץ Kabats, being of the ſame ſignification, viz. of gathering, or gathering up, both alike to denote withdrawing,) or taking up, or gathering in. But here Kimchi tells us that his father excepts againſt this interpretation, as not proper, in regard that (as he thinks) the verb קבץ Kabats, is not uſed for gathering up together, or gathering in a thing that is already preſent, as אסף Aſaph is, but of gathering together that which is diſperſed, or not preſent; But for all this nicety, that he will have to be in the diſtinct ſignification of theſe verbs, Rab-Tanchum comparing both ſignifications of the words, this laſt mentioned ſhall draw in or withdraw their beauty, and the former, viz. gather blackneſs, or paleneſs, ſaith that this, احسن واقوم بالمعني, i. e. makes a better and righter ſenſe. Mean while whatever difference and even contrariety there be in the literal rendring of the words, they meet in one meaning, viz. to ſhew a great change and alteration in the countenance, from beauty to what is contrary to it; and to ſay a face hath loſt its beauty, or that it hath gathered paleneſs or blackneſs, is much the ſame thing, the receding of the one introducing the other. Ours we ſee in rendring it as they do, have the opinion and authority of the moſt Interpreters and Expoſitors on their ſide.

[m] Pet. à Fig. [n] As when great armies are compared to Locuſts in reſpect of their number, Bochart. part poſter. p. 467. [o] Jerome on chap. i. 5, 6. [p] Of the ſeveral interpretations of that place ſee Bochart. part poſt. p. 459. [q] See Bochart. [r] Aldamiri. [s] Kamus, as likewiſe نظام in Aſap. [t] Druſ. Tarn. [u] Jun. Trem. [w] LXX. [x] Chald. [y] Merc. the ordinary Verſion of the Chald. Syr. Bochart. [z] And Judges vi. 29. 1 Sam. ii. 14. [a] Kimchi.

What juſt cauſe of ſuch conſternation, and effects and ſigns thereof there ſhould be to them, ſufficiently appears from the preceding words, wherein the approach of thoſe executioners of God's judgments by him ſent on them, ſo full of terror, is deſcribed. The ſame is yet farther amplified in ſome following verſes, by declaring the terror of their acting, being come and ſet on their work. So ver. 7.

7. They ſhall run like mighty men, they ſhall climb the wall like men of war, and ſhall march every one on his ways, and they ſhall not break their ranks.

They ſhall run like mighty men] i. e. they ſhall go on with reſolution, ſpeed, and conſtancy, not fearing, failing, or fainting in their way. Such a conſtant unwearied proceeding in their courſe to be denoted by this expreſſion we may perceive, by comparing it with the like, Pſalm xix. 5. where it is ſaid of the ſun, that he rejoiceth as a ſtrong man to run a race, the word is the ſame in both places, viz. גבור Gibbor (there in the ſingular, and here in the plural Gibborim) ſignifying a mighty or ſtrong man; and in both places by Some rendred Giant, a known appellation of a man of ſuch condition. The verb alſo in both places is the ſame רוץ, ruts, donoting running apace, importing [g] ſpeed and ſtrength. Both concurring in theſe ſo deſcribed, ſhews that they ſhould go on [h] throughly in their work, as farther appears by what is added, they ſhall climb the wall like men of war, nothing ſhall ſtop them in their proceedings, no fence ſecure any thing from them. If they meet with any ſuch they ſhall ὄχνʋ ἀμελίαʋ καὶ δειμάτων ὑπάρχʋσαι (as Cyril ſpeaks) being above ſloth and fear, and like reſolute ſoldiers ſcaling the walls of ſuch places as are thereby defended, climb and paſs over them, ſo that any immured [i] gardens in incloſures ſhall be devoured by them, as well as open the fields; and in ſuch their proceeding he ſaith, they ſhall march every one on his ways, and they ſhall not break their ranks, they will not be ſtopped or put out of order, but keep themſelves in battle aray, as above, ver. 5. where what is ſaid will agree to theſe words alſo. What Ours render, they ſhall march every one on his ways, in the Vulgar Latin is read, Viri in viis ſuis gradientur, which thoſe of Doway render, the men ſhall march in their ways, but Ribera thinks it to be an error of the ſcribe, who ſeeing the verb plural, gradientur, they ſhall march, to follow, thought that the noun was therefore to be of the plural number, and made it viri, men, inſtead of vir, which literally anſwers to the Hebrew איש Iſh, which ſignifies indeed a man, but in ſuch conſtructions imports as much as, ſinguli, they every one of them; ſo that the [k] verb is to be in the plural, though the noun be ſingular, by reaſon of, they, which contain as many ſingulars, each of which did ſo, underſtood. Evrey one of them ſhould in ſuch ſteady order march on in his way, that none of them ſhould in the left violate it; ſo he adds, and they ſhall not break their ranks. Which words in our language as they are of a clear meaning, ſo I doubt not but they give the proper meaning of the words in the Hebrew; yet becauſe there is a difference betwixt Interpreters in their tranſlations, as concerning the literal meaning of the verb by Ours rendred, break, it will be convenient to look ſomething into it, that ſo we may ſee, how they and ours may be reconciled one with another, and all with the original, which they labour to expreſs. That verb in Hebrew is יעבטון yeabbetun, of which [l] R. Sol. Jarchi, and [m] Kimchi note, that it is not elſewhere in the Scripture found ſo uſed, which makes it neceſſary to enquire more diligently in what ſenſe it is here uſed, and upon what grounds Expoſitors do or may go. For this end the Hebrew Grammarians look on theſe as the moſt probable ways. Firſt, that in giving the ſignification, reſpect may be had to a known and uſual ſignification of the root עבט abat, which is to give a thing, or take a thing in pawn, or for a pledge, which thing is called עבוט Abot, and that becauſe a thing ſo given is retained and held back till it be redeemed by him that pawned it, this verb עבט Ibbet ſhould ſignify to ſtop, or ſtay, or retard and withhold. To this notion the Chaldee Paraphraſt renders it ולא מעכבין ארחתהון, and they do not retard their way, or make ſtop in their way. In which way ſeveral Others follow him, ſo Abu Walid لا يحتبسون في طرقهم they do not retard themſelves, or make ſtop in their ways: which rendring is alſo mentioned by R. Tanchum, and by Kimchi (although they mention Others alſo) and the reaſon for this uſe of it which we have mentioned is in R. Tanchum's words, משתמ מן לעבוט עבוטו והו אלרהן לאן אלרהון מחבוס מעאק עלי קימה פנאכרה, it is derived from abot (in leabot aboto, Deut. xxiv. 10.) which ſignifies a pledge (or pawn) inaſmuch as what is pawned (or given for a pledge) is reſtrained and ſtopped for the value of that by which it is to be redeemed (or till the value of what it is pawned for be paid.) Hence they look on it as evident that the root hath in it the notion of reſtraining, ſtopping, or keeping back, and in this notion is it, as by the Chaldee, ſo by ſeveral modern Interpreters taken, as Pagnin. neque retardabuut itinera ſua, and Munſter, nec tardi erunt in ſemitis ſuis; and in our ancienter Engliſh Tranſlation, that was in common uſe, it is read, and they ſhall not linger in their paths; and in that from Geneva, and they ſhall not ſtay in their paths.

Jun. Trem. [c] Tig. [d] Caſt. [e] i. e. ſaith he, زال رونقها منها لشدة الزمع والخوف. [f] So in Arabick قبض Kabada is contrary to بسط Baſata, to ſpread or lay open. [g] Conjuncta eſt enim cum fortitudine velocitas, Rib. Tarnov. [h] Strenue munus ſuum obeunt, Mercer.

2. There are who do likewiſe look on the meaning of the word here to be taken from that of a pledge or pawn, but in a reſpect different ſomewhat from that before mentioned, viz. in regard that in giving a pledge, a thing is borrowed and ſo transferred by loan from one to another, as if it ſounded (as Kimchi, in his book of roots, gives that way of meaning) ולא ישאילו אורחותם זה לזה, and they ſhall not lend their way one to another, as Mercer well obſerves his words to mean, and not as by [n] Some they are rendred, they ſhall not aſk one another the way, as Vatablus alſo reports it from Some, non interrogabunt iſte ab illo de ſemitis ſuis, as if they ſhould not ſtand ſo much as to enquire of one another the way.) In this acceptance of pawning or lending the MS. Arabick may ſeem to take it, rendring وكل واحد في طريقه يسيرون ولا يرتهنون سبلهم and every one ſhall go on in his way, and ſhall not give (to take) in pawn their ways, viz. they ſhall not recede from their ways, or part with them one to another, but every one keep conſtantly their own. And the word being taken in this notion, a learned [o] Commentator looks on it as an elegant expreſſion, by which is denoted, quod non permutent inter ſe, vel non mutuent vias ſuas unus alteri, that they do not change among themſelves, or lend as it were one to another their ways, but every one hold their own, keeping every one their place which they firſt occupied.

3. There is yet a way different from this, and not having reſpect to that ſignification of a pledge, but looking on it as ſignifying the ſame that עורת Ivvet (with which it agrees in ſound with a change of letters) doth, viz. to pervert, wry, or make crooked, as Aben Ezra and Kimchi ſay the word likewiſe to ſignify in the Arabick Tongue. I think it well obſerved by

I

[i] Pet. à Fig. [k] As likewiſe ſometimes in Latin. [l] אין לו דמיון it hath no like: none is like it in the Scripture. [m] אין לו חבר במקרא Pagnin. Lex. [n] Tarnov.

by the [p] learned L. de Dieu, that that word is not in the Arabick Lexicographers given properly in that ſignification, however Aben Ezra might find it in his time uſed, and though ſome other notions of it reducible thereto may be found in it, as of cleaving, &c. But however, it is thought ſo probable that the word in Hebrew hath that notion, that we find moſt to follow it, both ancient, and modern Interpreters. The LXX. ſeem to take it, rendring, καὶ ὃ μὴ ἐκκλίνωσι πὰς τρίβυς αὐτῶν. The printed Arabick follows them, ولا يميلون عن سبلهم: the Syriack alſo ولا تنحرف عن سكك: and in the Vulgar Latin, non declinabunt à ſemitis ſuis, all to the ſame purpoſe, they ſhall not decline, turn or go aſide from their paths. Several among the more modern alſo, among whom we find theſe and the like rendrings, [q] Neque de ſemitis ſuis deflectunt, neither do they go aſide from their paths. [r] Nullus à ſemita ſua deflectit, none, &c. [s] Non pervertent ſemitas ſuas, they ſhall not pervert (or make [t] crooked) [u] non obturbabunt itinera illorum, they ſhall not diſturb their ways. Theſe and the like all appear to take the word in that ſignification as agreeing with עות Ivvet, as we ſaid, to pervert; and their meaning doth our laſt tranſlation, in language proper to the thing ſpoken of, ſo expreſs, as that likewiſe it is appliable to either of the other rendrings, and all of thoſe ways in them mentioned, either the ſtopping of any when they ſhould not, or their going, or thruſting others out of their places, or their not keeping ſtraight in their ways, or even with others, but thwarting and croſſing them, being, or cauſing, a breaking of their ranks. By this is their orderly proceeding denoted, which is farther expreſſed alſo in the next words.

8. Neither ſhall one thruſt another, they ſhall walk every one in his path: and when they fall upon the ſword they ſhall not be wounded.

So ſteadily ſhall they keep their ranks and their places which they at firſt take, that though they be ſo exceeding many, yet they ſhall not throng, or juſtle, or take away their room one from another, but keep every one exactly in his own path. Such accurate order being requiſite to be obſerved in great armies, leſt their number rather bring confuſion to themſelves, than hurt to their enemies: it is that wherein the ſkill of military diſcipline conſiſts in bringing them to, as that without which things are not like to ſucceed with them, for [w] exercitus incompoſitus res eſt turbulentiſſima, & hoſtibus captu facillima, & penitus inutilis, a diſorderly army is a very troubleſome thing, eaſy to be conquered, and altogether uſeleſs; while they hinder one another by their diſorder, how ſhall they fight? Exercitus vero pulchre diſpoſitus, & ordine collocatus, & amicis pulcherrimus videtur, & hoſtibus propemodum invictus, & inexpugnabilis, but an army well compoſed, and ranked in good order, is both a very fair ſhew to their friends, and a terror to their enemies, and almoſt invincible, and hardly conquered by them; ſuch well ordered armies have at all times and places done great things. If the words here then ſhould be applied to enemies, as by ſome they are, they would in an high manner expreſs both their courage and ſkill in war, and repreſent them as very terrible. Being applied to Locuſts and like vermin, as with others we apply them, who having no king, no commander to ſet them in order, yet go forth all of them in bands ſo exactly ordered, what leſs ſhall they give to be thought of them? the great hand of God, ex cujus jubentis diſpoſitione volitant, as Jerome ſpeaks, by whoſe command (or ordering) they proceed, muſt needs be acknowledged in them: they muſt needs be acknowledged as his great army by him inſtructed and ſent among them (as he ſpeaks, ver. 25.) for performance of ſome great work, and their appearance muſt needs ſtrike ſuch terror into them, as hath been deſcribed, ver. 6. eſpecially, when it ſhall be conſidered with what undaunted reſolution and ſucceſs, not by any means to be fruſtrated, they ſhall in ſuch their order and unretarded courſe proceed; which in the next words is ſhewed by his ſaying, and when they fall upon the ſword they ſhall not be wounded. Their boldneſs and reſolution is ſhewed in that they ſhall not fear the ſword, but dare to light even upon that; and their ſucceſs in that, though they do ſo, yet they ſhall not be wounded. So [x] Kimchi expounds theſe words אין החיל הזה כשאר אויבים, &c. this army is not like other enemies, whom you may hinder with the ſword from coming upon you, but theſe light even upon the very ſwords, and are not wounded, viz. ſaith he, לקלותם, by reaſon of their lightneſs. This might ſuffice for giving the meaning of this verſe, according to our Tranſlation which we look on as moſt agreeable to the Hebrew; yet becauſe we find very different rendrings among ancient Tranſlators, as to ſeveral of the words, it may be convenient a little more narrowly to ſearch into the ſignification of them. And, firſt, as to theſe words by Ours rendred, neither ſhall one thruſt another, which are in Hebrew ואיש אחיו לא ידחקון veiſh achieu lo yidchakun, and by moſt tranſlated into the ſame meaning, as by Ours, giving to the verb the ſignification of [y] preſſing or thruſting, the LXX. uſes a word ſeeming different in ſenſe, rendring ἕκας ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἀφέξεται, every one ſhall not recede from his brother, and the printed Arabick following them, وكل واحد من اخيه لا يهرب, and each of them ſhall not fly from his brother, viz. they ſhall not one part from another. This rendring of the Greek makes [z] Some to conjecture that that inſtead of yidchakun, they read ירחקון irchakun, with ר inſtead of d, from רחק Rachak, to be diſtant, or far from, to remove from. But perhaps it may not be neceſſary to ſay, that they read otherwiſe in the Hebrew than we now do, but only took the word רחק Dachack in a larger ſignification than is uſually given it, of preſſing or thruſting, viz. that, which in the Chaldee and Syriack it hath, of repellere, propellere, &c. to drive, or put off, or thruſt away, and ſo might think it well enough expreſſed by a word that ſignifies to abſtain, to fly, or keep himſelf from Others, which will be of like import with putting that from himſelf. As to the next words they ſhall walk every one in his path, they are in the Hebrew גבר במסלתו ילכון Geber bimſellato yelecun: there is likewiſe very great and ſcarce reconcileable differences betwixt ancient and modern Interpreters. The firſt word, גבר Geber, doth uſually ſignify a man, one of power, ſtrength, or authority, שיש לו גבורה על האישה, who hath power over the woman, [a] as Kimchi explains it, and is properly ſpoken על בני אדם of mankind; yet as the ſame Author obſerves, here attributed to Locuſts, or ſuch creatures as he had before compared to גבורים Gibborim, ſtrong men, (ver. 7.) and uſed as איש Iſh, a man, foregoing, is to denote every one of them ſingly. The ſecond word, [b] מסלה Meſillah, ſignifies properly, a way caſt up, or paved, from סלל ſalal to pave or caſt up, yet uſed for a way or path in general. Theſe being the known and undoubted ſignification of the words; How comes it to paſs that in the Greek there is nothing like to either of them? for in that we read, καταβαρυνόμενοι ἐν τοῖς ὅπλοις αὐτῶν πορεύσονται, they ſhall go laden in their arms (or with their weapons) what is in this reconcileable with the Hebrew? Capellus, that he may make ſomething towards it, ſaith, that inſtead of גבר Geber a man (or each one) they read with change of letters כבד Cabed, which ſignifies heavy; but how then ſhall מסלתו Meſillato ſignify his armour, or what word ſo ſignifying doth he think was read by them in place of it? Perhaps it might be eaſy to ſay that they read the firſt word Geber, as it now is, but looking on it in its notion of a ſtrong, great, robuſt man (as elſewhere they render Gibber of the ſame note) πολεμιστὴς, a man of might, think it here to import a man of arms or in armour, and that inſtead of ἐν τοῖς ὅπλοις, in arms (which was included in that former word) was by them put ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς, in their ways, ſo that the change was made by the ſcribe, not in the Hebrew Text, but in their tranſlation, except we ſhould think that for מסלתו they read משלחו, or משלחתו Miſhlacatho, his armour. This I do not mention as placing any ſtreſs in it, but as ſeeming almoſt as probable as the other: as for the whole clauſe we ſay with Mercer, that the Greek reading ad Hebræum contextum applicari non poteſt, cannot be made agree with the Hebrew Text, niſi ſenſum eos potius ſecutos dicamus, unleſs we ſay that they followed rather the ſenſe, quaſi etiam graviore armatura induti, non propterea impediantur quo minus in armis ſuis via ſua vadant, as if, though theſe that ſhould ſo run like mighty men, &c, were clad in heavy armour, yet they ſhould not thereby be hindred from going on even in their arms, with expedition in their way. But what may be their intention in their ſo rendring we need not put our ſelves on uncertain conjectures, having ſo plain a meaning from the Hebrew, both in our own and other tranſlations agreeable with it, and with the plain meaning both of the preceding and following words, as we have. Among Others we have in the verbal rendring of this clauſe on our ſide, the Vulgar Latin, which is, ſinguli in calle ſuo vadent; but in the next clauſe he is farther diſtant from us, than either the Greek, or any other ancient or modern tranſlations that we have, as will by a brief view of it and ſome of them appear. The words in Hebrew being, ובעד השלח יפלו לא יבצעו Ubead haſſhelach yippolu lo yibtſau, which Ours very well render, and when they fall upon the ſword (or dart, as in the Margin) they ſhall not be wounded. The Latin renders, & per feneſtras cadent, & non demolientur, which the Doway renders, and through the windows they ſhall fall, and ſhall not [c] demoliſh (or ſhall take no harm, as the Margin hath it.) A very great difference is here, we ſee, in the rendring the word ſhelach, from what is in Ours found, while what we render ſword, he renders feneſtras, windows; which ſignification why he gives to the word I know not: a known ſignification of it, and by all received, is a ſword, dart, or other like arms, and in it elſewhere in the ſame Vulgar Latin ſeveral times uſed. Of the ſame notion is likewiſe سلاح Salaho in the Arabick Tongue, and שלחא ſhalca in the Chaldee, but the ſignification of it for a window, I ſuppoſe is not elſewhere given; nor for the rendring it ſo doth St. Jerome himſelf give any reaſon, or alledge any authority; yet doth he take notice of the difference of it from the LXX. who render ἐν βέλεσιν on darts, and whom he cenſures for their tranſlation of this verſe, as if it did not at all, expoſitionis ordini convenire, agree to the order of the expoſition: but his cenſures, I ſuppoſe, may rather agree to them in reſpect of the preceding words, which we have already conſidered, than of this word which they take in a known ſignification, although he faſten the ground of their error on their ſo underſtanding this word: but ſure as to this ſingle word, they give no improper notion. The fault that is, and occaſion of difficulty, muſt be from the other words that they join with it, as beſides thoſe that precede, ſo from their ſubjoining to it αὐτῶν theirs, their darts, which is not found in the Hebrew, and clean alters the ſenſe from what it would be without it; for whereas without it the words ſound, that they ſhould fall or caſt themſelves on any weapons that ſhould be held out againſt them, this muſt either ſound, that they ſhould fall [d] with their own weapons, ſtill keeping them about them, when they light or reſt any where, which ſeems Theodoret's opinion: or that others ſhall fall by their weapons, which ſeems Cyril's, as if by their conſuming the fruits of the earth, and like proviſions, with their teeth, which he takes to be underſtood by their darts, or weapons, people fell, i. e. were killed through famine: and then in their rendring the laſt words לא יבצעו lô yibtſau, by οὐ μὴ σωτελεσθῶσι, & non conſumentur, they ſhall not be conſumed, ſeems ſome difficulty, Theodoret, underſtanding it, they ſhall not be ſatisfied, viz. in exerciſing hoſtility; and Cyril, that they (viz. the people) ſhall not be yet at an end, (viz. in their ſuffering what they did by the loſs of the fruits of the earth, but muſt look for farther trouble and miſchief from them coming into their cities and houſes as follows,) but the printed Arabick done out of Greek renders the whole clauſe thus, وبسهامهم يسقطون ولا يكملون jaculiſque ſuis corruent, & rem ad exitum non perducent. And ſhall fall with their own darts, and ſhall not perfect or bring the matter to an end. By which verſion it appears that he read, as it is obſerved in ſome copies to be read, σωτελέσωσι, actively, perficient, ſhall perfect or bring to perfection; which rendring may be confirmed by the rendring of the Syriack Interpreter in this place, ܒܣܗܡܗ ܢܬܪܡܘܢ ܘܠܐ ܢܫܠܡܘܢ ܥܒܕܐ, rendred in Latin, præ armorum ſuorum pondere cadent, & rem ad exitum non perducent, they ſhall fall through the weight of their arms, and ſhall not bring the matter to an head. But however theſe may agree one with another, they differ, which is that we are to ſhew, all from that which Ours take to be the true meaning, and ſo doth the Chaldee Paraphraſt alſo, who gives for the meaning of this laſt part of the verſe, גבר בכבישיה אולין לאתר דאנון שליחין קטלין ולא מקבלין ממון, every one goeth in his path, to the place (or at the place) whither they are ſent, [e] they ſlay (or fight) and do not take money: where it appears that he takes the word השלח Haſhelach, which the moſt render arms, or weapons (only the Latin, windows,) in the uſual ſignification of the root, ſending, as if it devoured the place whither it was ſent, [f] or that for which they were ſent; then he adds, fighting or ſlaying, which is not in the Hebrew; by his adding which Pet. à Figuiero thinks that he underſtood the words to be ſpoken not of Locuſts but of enemies; then the laſt word, יבצעו Yebtſau, he takes in a different ſenſe, from what the others that we have ſeen do, viz. of taking money, as if he ſhould ſay that they were not as other enemies, who would be ſatisfied, and taken off for money; but that was not it which theſe deſired. Yet are there among modern Interpreters, who follow him in the rendring of this, who in the other take the ſame way that Ours do, which gives us occaſion to enquire ſomething into the ſignification of that word. The root בצע Batſa therefore we ſhall find to have ſeveral ſignifications, as, 1. The notion of coveting, and ſeeking after gain or profit, as Prov. xv. 27. בוצע בצע, he that is greedy after gain, and Habak. ii. 9. בוצע בצע רע, that coveteth an evil covetouſneſs, and oft elſewhere; and in this way the Chaldee, we ſee, here takes it, and ſo the Tig. nec lucro inhiant: another (in Vatab.) non ſtudebunt avaritiæ: and ſo (in Calvin) non concupiſcent: the MS. Arabick alſo done out of the Hebrew, ورا السلاح يقعون ولا يطمعون, They ſhall fall after the ſword (or weapons) and ſhall not covet. 2. The notion of perfecting, or bringing to an end, as Iſaiah x. 12. כי יבצע יי את כל מעשהו, when the Lord hath performed his whole work, and Lament. ii. 17. בצע אמרתו he hath fulfilled his word. In this it is here, we ſee, taken by the Greek, printed Arabick, and Syriack.

[p] Who thinks it may be illuſtrated rather from the Ethiopick Tongue. [q] Caſt. [r] Tig. [s] Jun. Trem. [t] Non obliquent, Merc. [u] Oecol. ſee Diodati Edit. in 4to. [w] Lively out of Xenoph. [x] And ſo Abu Walid. [y] Vulg. Lat. coarctavit. The Chaldee and Syriack having the ſame word with the Hebrew; other Latin Verſions, prement, urgebunt, impellent, all to the ſame purpoſe. [z] Schindler, Capel.

[a] In radic. [b] Druſ. [c] Others think it ought to be rendred paſſively, ſhall not be demoliſhed, or hurt.

3. The notion of cutting, cutting off, wounding, and the like, as Job vi. 9. ויבצעני Vayibtſeni, and would cut me off, and Iſaiah xxxviii. 12. יבצעני, he will cut me off, and Amos ix. 1. ובצעם Ubetſaam, and cut them (or wound them, as in the Margin.) In this ſignification it agrees with פצע Patſa, (b being changed into p) which ſignifies to wound, and as it is confirmed by R. Tanchum from the Arabick Tongue, in which بضع Badaa ſignifies to cut, cleave, or to break in pieces, as alſo in the Chaldee; and therefore is it by him, and by Abu Walid, here rendred by يتجرحون, viz. they ſhall not be wounded. In this notion we ſee Ours take it with many Others, among whom perhaps the Vulgar Latin may alſo be reckoned, as by [g] Some demoliri in him is intepreted by concidere, and the meaning ſaid to be concident ſe, vulnerabunt ſe, ſhall cut or wound themſelves. The verb, though in form active, and ſo alſo in other places uſed, yet is here obſerved by Kimchi to be עומד Omed, intranſitive, and to have a paſſive ſignification. It having manifeſtly theſe different ſignifications, and each of them having thoſe of good note that chuſe it and prefer it, we have, we ſee, liberty of choice, and take which way we will, we have ſuch as are of good credit and authority to bare us company. But as far as I am able to judge, that, which Ours with many Others take, is in this place ſo far more conſpicuous, (as agreeable to the undoubted ſignification of the Hebrew words) and of ſo good coherence with the preceding and following words, than either of the other, as that were it not in reſpect to the authority of thoſe that take them, I ſhould think all that we have ſaid in mention of them, to be but a digreſſion. To this way therefore we keep, and by it are directly led on to what follows in the next words, in which is farther deſcribed, what this army of God here ſpoken of, being of ſuch boldneſs and agility, as theſe and the foregoing words ſet forth, ſhall proceed to do, viz.

[d] Mercer otherwiſe, in ſua ipſorum ruunt jacula. trucidabuntur, Pet. à Fig. [e] Trucidant, though Some read trucidantur (Leuſden) or [f] R. Sol. [g] Ribera.

9. They ſhall run to and fro in the city: they ſhall run upon the wall, they ſhall climb up upon the houſes: they ſhall enter in at the windows like a thief.

They ſhall run to and fro, &c.] The word ſo rendred is ישקו Yaſhokku, and that it is properly ſo rendred I think may not be doubted, being from the root שקק ſhakak, and ſuch forms as are derived from it. [h] Kimchi notes the proper ſignification to be ההליכה בהתמדה, a going with continuance (or continual going up and down, as in his notes on this place התמדת ההליכה) and he (as likewiſe Aben Ezra) thinks it to have affinity with the word שוק ſhok, which ſignifies a leg; and that it is here properly ſpoken of Locuſts, who have long legs, and with them הולך תמיד ולא ינוח אלא מעט are continually going, and ſeldom reſt. But whatever may be thought of the nicety of that conceit, it is manifeſt enough that our word doth ſo ſignify, and that it is elſewhere alſo ſpoken of Locuſts, as Iſaiah xxxiii. 4. כמשק גבים שקק בו, which Ours render, As the running to and fro of Locuſts ſhall he run upon them. In this ſignification of running up and down, or going, is the word here by many Interpreters apparently taken; as by the Vulgar, rendring, Ingredientur, they ſhall enter the city; by Others alſo, per urbem [i] gradientur, or [k] per civitatem ambulabunt, or [l] in civitate diſcurrunt, or [m] civitatem percurrent, or [n] per civitatem current, or [o] urbem pervadunt. Theſe all manifeſtly take that ſignification of the word, nor need we to think that the Greek take it otherwiſe, rendring, τῆς πόλεως ἐπιλήψονται, and the printed Arabick following them, يأخذون المدينة they ſhall take, or, ſeize on the city; or the Syriack rendring ܢܣܬܘܢ ܠܩܪܝܬܐ, they ſhall go up into the cities; and the MS. Arabick في المدينة يغيصون, they ſhall pour out themſelves (or ruſh together) in great multitudes in the city. R. Tanchum, ירסון (or rather ידוסון) they ſhall trample. But the Chaldee Paraphraſt ſeems to go wider off from any ſuch ſignification, rendring בקרתא מדינין, in urbe armantur, or in civitate armati, &c. they are armed in the city, they run, &c. or as Others diſtinguiſh the clauſes, In the city, being armed, they run upon the wall, &c. ſo that according to him the verb Yaſhakku ſhould ſignify to be armed, as if it were from נשק, which ſignifies armour. R. Sol. Jarchi alſo goes as different from what Others follow, ſaying that the word ſignifies, השמעת הקול to make a noiſe: he doth indeed ſeem to take it for the ſignification of the word in the forecited Iſaiah xxxiii. 4. explaining it by נהם Nohem, [p] roaring, or making a roaring noiſe, of which, beſides his authority, I know no proof, as neither of the Chaldees rendring it, being armed; yet doth Abarbinel ſeem to like both theſe Interpreters, and to prefer them before the other, that in the firſt place, as taken by Others, whom Ours chooſe to follow, we mentioned, and looks on both of them as ישרות right. His reaſon why he doth ſo is plain from himſelf, viz. becauſe he thinks them better ſo to agree to thoſe of whom he thinks the words here ſpoken, viz. not of Locuſts, or ſuch creatures, but of the Babylonians, who having gotten over the walls into the city, ſhall ſhout for triumph, and not preſently ſet themſelves to eat and drink and take their pleaſure (as other enemies uſe to do) but arm themſelves for farther fighting. The expoſition of R. Solomon ſeems to follow Arias Montanus, in the Interlineary, putting in urbe crepabunt armis, in the city ſhall make a noiſe with their arms, (and Grotius himſelf rendring, adverſus urbem concrepabunt arma, their arms ſhall make a noiſe (or rattle) againſt the city) whereas Pagnin had before put, per urbem incedent, they ſhall go through the city. But the rendring, which Ours follow, ſeems much more agreeable to the words, and the known ſignification of them, and the following clearly agree with them, declaring, what, being got into any city, they ſhould there do in every part thereof, leaving none free or unaſſaulted, none being inacceſſible to them. They ſhall run upon the wall. Above, ver. 7. he ſaid, they ſhall climb the walls, here בחומה ירוצון Bachomah yerutſun, they ſhall run upon the wall, as having gotten poſſeſſion thereof, and not to be hindred from going from place to place, none being able to ſtay them; nor ſhall the houſes in the city be freer from them, They ſhall climb up upon the houſes; 'tis not the height of any of them that ſhall hinder them from getting into them, nor the ſhutting of the doors thereof againſt them, that ſhall keep them out, for if they find no other entrance, they ſhall enter in at the windows like a thief. That it is the practice of thieves ſo to make an entrance into houſes, that they find otherwiſe ſhut or barred, appears, as by common experience, ſo by that expreſſion of our Saviour, John x. 1. that he that entreth not in by the door, but climbeth up ſome other way, is a thief: [q] This ſeems not here ſaid as if they ſpoken of were afraid, as thieves often are, to be diſcovered, but to ſhew that they would not be hindred by any means of ſhutting doors, or the like, but would find out any way of entrance, were it never ſo high or uneaſy to be come to, and ſo by no means kept out. Theſe words, by which the bold carriage of thoſe in this and the former words ſpoken of, is deſcribed, might well agree to a ſtout victorious army, ſuch as that of the Babylonians, which Abarbinel and Others would have here to be deſcribed: yet that it may alſo be well ſpoken of Locuſts, or ſuch creatures which are God's army, may appear by what is ſaid of them, Exod. x. 5, 6. that they ſhould cover the face of the earth, that one ſhould not be able to ſee the earth, &c. and that they they ſhould fill Pharaoh's houſes, and the houſes of all his ſervants, and the houſes of all the Egyptians, &c. Of them Jerome here ſaith, nihil Locuſtis invium eſt, that there is nothing inacceſſible to them, they not only ſeizing on the fields, corn, trees, but alſo, entring into cities, houſes, and the moſt private chambers. Cyril alſo to the ſame purpoſe: Theodoret likewiſe, that no height of walls can keep them from entring, for that they eaſily get over the walls, and like thieves enter into the houſes through the windows, which, ſaith he, as an eye-witneſs, οὐ μόνον ὑπὸ πολεμίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὑπὸ ἀκρίδων γεγενημένον πολλάκις ἐθεασάμεθα, we have ſeen done not only by enemies, but by Locuſts, &c. To the ſame, that are ſpoken of in theſe words, is reſpect had likewiſe in the following words, declaring what dreadful things ſhall attend or enſue on their coming with ſuch violence, and in ſuch great multitudes.

[h] In his Notes. [i] Pag. Druſius. [k] Munſt. [l] Tig. [m] Jun. Trem. [n] Piſc. [o] Caſt. [p] Yet may it be here brought to the firſt mentioned notion, if it be underſtood of ſuch a noiſe as they make with their legs, as Mercer ſeems to underſtand it. [q] Merc. Tarnov.

10. The earth ſhall quake before them, the heavens ſhall tremble, the ſun and the moon ſhall be dark, and the ſtars ſhall withdraw their ſhining.

רגזה ארץ Rageza arets, literally, the earth hath quaked, the verb, as likewiſe thoſe that follow, being of the præterperfect tenſe, and ſo by ſeveral tranſlated; ſo the Vulgar Latin renders, Contremuit terra, moti ſunt cæli, Sol & Luna obtenebrati ſunt, & ſtellæ retraxerunt ſplendorem ſuum, The earth hath trembled, the heavens have been moved, the Sun and Moon have been darkened, and the ſtars have withdrawn their ſhining, all in the preter tenſe; ſo are all alſo in the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and in the Syriack Verſion, and the MS. Arabick; and in ſome modern tranſlations, as the Interlineary, movit ſe terra, &c. Munſt. contremuit terra, & commoti ſunt cæli, &c. Druſ. commota eſt terra: yet do [s] Others render them in the preſent tenſe, contremiſcit terra, &c. and Mercer in his tranſlation of the Chaldee, though in that the verb be, as in the Hebrew, of the preter tenſe. [t] Others again, whom Ours chooſe to follow, put all in the future tenſe, and that they do well in doing ſo there is no queſtion, in regard that in the prophetick ſtile, the preter tenſe is uſually put to ſignify what is yet to come, it, which is ſpoken of, being (God having determined and ſaid it) as certain as if already done; and therefore in ſuch things, as are ſpoken by way of prophecy, as theſe are, are verbs, which according to their form ſeem to ſpeak of what is paſt, as well rendred by the future or preſent tenſe, as by the preter; and according as the matter requires, ſo is the time to be aſſigned. A greater difficulty will be to know, in what meaning the words ſhall be taken, whether in their proper ſignification, as that the earth ſhall really quake, the heavens tremble, the Sun and Moon be darkened, &c. or ſo as to give us to conceive ſome other thing, than what they do properly ſignify. For in this is no ſmall difference betwixt Expoſitors. Some will have the words to be properly underſtood as they ſound; that they ought ſo to be, Theodoret thinks it probable, though he thinks they may be otherwiſe underſtood. But Arias Montanus is very peremptory for it againſt other acceptions, ſaying, that he doth not interpret them hyperbolically, or ſpoken only of men, that by the army here ſpoken of (whether he underſtood it of Locuſts or Aſſyrians, as I ſuppoſe he did, will be all one, as to this matter) they ſhould be brought into ſuch a fear, as if the earth ſhould ſeem to them to tremble, the heavens to be ſhaken, the ſun and the moon not to give light, by which kind of expreſſions, Poets do uſe to ſet forth great fear in men and great diſturbance of things. What great fear and perplexity the people ſhould be in, he ſaith the Prophet had before expreſſed, ver. 6. that before their face the people ſhould be much pained, all faces ſhould gather blackneſs; but what things are here ſpoken of, he thinks are ſimpliciter expectanda, ſimply and really to be expected, like thoſe things by it foretold ([u] Luke xxi. 25.) that there ſhould be ſigns in the Sun, and in the Moon, and in the Stars, &c. Of the ſame mind with him ſeems to have been Druſius, in underſtanding it to denote, that together with the Locuſts ſhould be thunder, by which he ſhould ſhake the heaven, and an earthquake by which he ſhould cauſe the earth to quake, whether to ſhew that the army, with ſuch ſigns accompanied, was from him, or rather to ſtrike the greater terror into the ungodly people, to deter them from ſinning and bring them to repentance. But whatever reaſon there ſeems to be to theſe for ſuch a literal underſtanding of theſe words, yet do Others chooſe to embrace that way, which Montanus rejects, viz. that the words ſhould rather be looked on as an hyperbolical expreſſion, of what was not really ſo as the words ſound, but ſuch as might make men conceive things ſo to be, or as rare and great above what is ordinarily ſeen, as if they were ſo. This was anciently St. Jerome's opinion, viz. that theſe things are ſpoken of hyperbolically (or above what was really done) non quod Locuſtarum aut hoſtium tanta vis ſit, ut poſſit movere cælos & terram concutere, &c. not as if there were ſo great force, either in Locuſts or enemies, as that they could move the heavens or ſhake the earth; but becauſe adverſa patientibus præ terroris magnitudine, & cælum ruere, & terra fluctuare videntur, to thoſe on whom any great calamity is fallen, through the greatneſs of the terror they are in, the heavens ſeem to fall, and the earth to rock up and down, and withal (as to the laſt words) by reaſon of the multitude of the Locuſts here ſpoken of, that ſhould cover the heavens, the Sun and the Moon ſhould (it is ſaid) be turned into darkneſs, and the ſtars withdraw their light, viz. while by a cloud of them interpoſed, the light of them ſhould be hindred from coming to the earth.

2

[r] So Bochart. obſerves it is to be read. [s] Tig. Caſtal. [t] Pag. movebit, Jun. Trem. movebitur, &c.
[u] And ſee Mat. xxiv. 29.

earth. This is the meaning of the words by him given, the like to which Theodoret, beſides what we have already ſaid of him, mentions; Cyril appears to be of the ſame mind, underſtanding it of ſuch a confuſion made by Locuſts, ὡς ἤδη σοκεῖν καὶ αυτὸν σεσονῆϛ τὸν ὐρανὸν, &c. as that even the very heaven ſhall ſeem to be ſhaken, and the ſun and moon and ſtars, as it were, to reſtrain their light, and ſo with him alſo is this, ὑπερβολικὸς ὁ λόγος, an hyperbolical ſpeech, denoting an intolerable and very grievous calamity to the inhabitants of the land: which he ſaith will hold true, as well if underſtood of enemies, as Locuſts. The Jewiſh Expoſitors ſeem to be likewiſe of this mind, ſo Kimchi, הכל משל לרוב הצרה כי כן דרך הכתוב that all the expreſſions are parabolical (or figurative) to ſet forth the greatneſs of a calamity, it being the uſe of the Scripture ſo to ſpeak, as Iſaiah xiii. 10. The ſtars of heaven, and the conſtellations thereof ſhall not give their light: the ſun ſhall be darkned in his going forth, and the moon ſhall not cauſe her light to ſhine, and [w] elſewhere. Abarbinel to the like purpoſe, that by ſaying the earth ſhall quake, is meant, the inhabitants of the land of Iſrael ſhall quake by reaſon of them, and that לרוב הצרה becauſe of the great affliction it is ſaid, The heavens tremble, the ſun and the moon are dark, and the ſtars withdraw their ſhining, שהוא כלו משל לצרות בני יהודה, which all is a parabolical expreſſion of the calamities of the Jews, like to what Solomon ſpeaks in deſcription of ſuch accidents, as befal an old man (or, old age) [x] עד אשר לא תחשך השמש, while the ſun is not darkned, &c. So that the paſſions or effects wrought, whether by the coming of thoſe clouds of Locuſts, which Kimchi looks on as here ſpoken of, or of the great army of the Babylonians, of which Abarbinel underſtands them, [y] are in the people, the inhabitants of the land, and who were wont with comfort to enjoy the orderly courſe of the heavens, and the pleaſant light of the ſun, moon, and ſtars, are put into ſuch diſorder, as that all thoſe things ſeemed to them to be out of order, and their uſual courſe; and not in thoſe things themſelves: yet doth Abarbinel withal ſay that thoſe words, the heavens tremble, &c. may in his opinion be literally underſtood, ſo as to denote that the heavens and the powers therein, ſhould now have evil influence on Iſrael, who had cauſed God to hide his face from them. That the words are in ſuch parabolical, or hyperbolical meaning to be taken, is likewiſe the opinion of ſeveral (we may ſay moſt) modern Expoſitors among Chriſtians, whether ſuch as think Locuſts, or ſuch as think enemies here to be ſpoken of) viz. that men ſhould be in ſuch a conſternation through the clouds of Locuſts filling the air, and even darkning the heavens, or through the multitude and great tumults of the enemies putting all things into a great hurry, or confuſion; ſo that things ſhall be in as great diſorder to them, as if thoſe things, which are literally expreſſed, had been really done. So Druſius on the latter words (though different from what we ſaw of his opinion of the whole verſe) ita videtur metu conſternatis, ſo it ſeems to thoſe that are aſtoniſhed with fear. He alſo cites that place which expreſſeth the old man's dimneſs of ſight, by ſaying the ſun light and moon were grown dark to him, Eccleſ. xii. 2.

There is yet another interpretation of theſe words by Some taken, who looking upon the expreſſions as allegorical, will have by the earth to be underſtood men, or things of a lower degree, or ordinary rank; by the ſun, moon, and ſtars, ſuch as are more noble, or of higher degree, and ſo by ſaying what is ſpoken of as to both the one and the other, under the notions of quaking, being darkened, and withdrawing their ſhining, to be denoted ſuch great fear and calamities, as ſhould befal them all in their ſeveral conditions, none eſcaping fire. This way [z] Some approve of, and Dr. Stokes in his Engliſh Paraphraſe takes his words, being, "The terror of the lower and meaner "ſort of people may be conceived by the "fearful effects of an earthquake, ſo may the "ſad ruin of the nobles by the ſhaking of "the heavenly or higher powers, and the "woful confuſion of all order and command "(that followed upon that) by the darkning "of the ſun and moon, and the ſtars with-"drawing their wonted luſtre, to the aſtoniſh-"ment of all the ſpectators, as well as thoſe "eminent perſons, that will be moſt concern-"ed in that calamity." But however this allegory may otherwiſe be made good, and that which theſe ſay be alſo true as to matter of fact; yet I ſuppoſe it not ſo proper a meaning of this place, as the former, taking the words as hyperbolical, and expreſſing things more than ordinary in their kind, in terms agreeing properly to other of an higher nature. That ſuch inſtruments of miſchief as are ſpoken of, whether Locuſts, or even the ſtrongeſt enemies among men (as Others will have it) ſhould work ſuch dreadful effects, as the words ſeem to import, may ſeem ſtrange; but all the wonder will be taken off, if we ſhall conſider how and by whom they are ſet on work, by whoſe might and command they act, which the next words declare.

11. And the Lord ſhall utter his voice before his army: for his camp is very great: for he is ſtrong that executeth his word, for the day of the Lord is great and very terrible, and who can abide it?

Different expoſitions have we of theſe words, though all tending to the ſame ſcope. And the Lord (ſaith he) נתן קולו Natan Kolo, ſhall utter his voice, literally, hath given (or uttered) uttered) his voice; for the word is of the preter-tenſe, and is as ſo by ſeveral rendred, amongſt others by the Vulgar Latin, & dominus dedit vocem ſuam, and the Lord has given his voice. So ſeveral others both ancient and modern, as the Syriack ܝܗܒ ܩܠܗ ܝܗܒ Yahab Koleh, hath given his voice (though the Latin Interpreter renders it dabit, ſhall give.) The Chaldee ארים מימרה, hath lifted up his word, and agreeably to him the MS. Arab. رفع صوته hath lifted up his voice. So among the more modern the Interlineary and Munſter, &c. But the LXX. give it in the future-tenſe, καὶ κύριος δώσει φωνὴν αὐτοῦ, and the printed Arabick following them, والرب يعطي صوته, and the Lord will give his voice, and ſo ſome [a] more modern, which we ſee Ours chooſe to follow, rendring, ſhall utter, and it is by Some [b] noted that the preter-tenſe ſtands here for the future. [c] There be alſo who render it in the preſent-tenſe, edit vocem ſuam, or ſonitum edit, doth utter his voice, or give a ſound or alarm. Theſe all have to juſtify them the uſe, which we have formerly [d] obſerved, of the prophetic ſtile, in putting verbs, whether they ſpeak of things preſent, or yet to come, as well of things paſt, in that tenſe, by reaſon of their certainty, and neceſſary accompliſhment: ſo that whether we look on the judgment ſpoken of (if it be underſtood of Locuſts and ſuch like nouns above named) as already begun, and having ſeized on them, or as yet only menaced, as to the expreſſion it will be all one. Junius and Tremellius alſo leave it indifferent, in their rendring the word not in any of theſe tenſes, but in the participle, which will be to be underſtood as to the time, according as that to which it is connected is. Jehovah autem edente vocem ſuam ante copias ſuas, &c. ecquis ſuſtinebit eum? The Lord uttering his voice before his armies, &c. who ſhall abide that day? A greater difference betwixt Expoſitors is concerning that voice of his, which it is ſaid the Lord ſhall utter before his army; what is meant by it we have here in the firſt place the opinion of [e] ſeveral among the Jews, who by this voice of the Lord underſtand, The word of the Lord in the mouth of his Prophets, foretelling of the judgment here threatened, as if he had ſaid that theſe things came not (or were not to come) on them unawares, but ſuch as they were forewarned of by the miniſtry of the Prophets, that ſo they might turn by repentance. But this interpretation another of them (Aben Ezra) ſaith איננו על ררך הלשון not to be agreeable to the language or letter of the words, but the voice [f] to be the great noiſe by them made, God giving them power to make ſuch a noiſe, as that both the inhabitants of the land, and of the earth itſelf ſhould tremble at it, and [g] whereby they ſhould be incouraged and encourage one another [h] in their going on to execute God's command. But the firſt of theſe opinions Mercer cenſures as frigid. And the ſecond (that of Aben Ezra) to be longe alienius, much leſs to the purpoſe. In the ſecond place then among [i] Chriſtians there are, who by his voice will have to be underſtood thunder, with which the coming of theſe his forces ſpoken of ſhould, for teſtifying his preſence and ſtriking terror in men, be accompanied. For that the thunder is elſewhere called his voice is manifeſt. As Pſalm xviii. 13. and xxix. 5, &c. Yet do Others not think it neceſſary to underſtand it of any ſuch audible voice, but of God's ordering and ordaining ſuch his army and camp, as he calls it, and putting courage into them for executing his command or will, [k] which prevailed on them as much as the voice or words of a commander animating his ſoldiers: his ſo doing ſhewing them that he owned them as his forces; and they, his camp being very great and numerous, requiring that they ſhould be ſo directed and ordered by him, that they might all keep their rank and do their duty, which they accordingly with irreſiſtible force and courage ſhould do. For he is ſtrong that executeth his word, i. e. he that is employed by him in executing his word, and is ſet on work by him, ſhall by him be endued with power and ſtrength ſo as not to fail, nor poſſibly be hindred in performing what he is commanded to do: and by this means great calamity muſt needs befal them againſt whom they are by him ſent, for the day of the Lord is great and very terrible, and who can abide it? The day of the Lord] [l] The time when he ſhall make himſelf known, by executing ſuch his judgments on his enemies, ſhall be a very extraordinary day, and very terrible, by reaſon of the great calamities that he ſhall in it by the inſtruments of his wrath inflict upon them, ſo that none ſhall be able to abide it. The putting it by way of queſtion, who ſhall, &c. is a denying that any ſhall be able to do it. The learned Bochartus rendring the words, Dominus dedit vocem ſuam ante exercitum ſuum, ut magna ſint caſtra ejus, & multus ſit, &c. The Lord hath uttered his voice before his army, that his camp may be great, that there may be many to execute his word; For great is the day of the Lord, and very terrible, and who can abide it; explains them thus, Dominus verbo ſuo multas conſcripſit copias, ut grave in peccatores judicium exerceat, quodque nemo ſuſtinere poſſit. The Lord hath by his word liſted (or muſtered) great [m] or many forces, that he may execute heavy judgments on ſinners, ſuch as none ſhall be able to abide: and this he ſaith ſeems to him to be the meaning of the Prophet, quamvis interpretes longe aliter ſentiunt, although other Interpreters ſeem to think far otherwiſe. There are alſo different rendrings and expoſitions, as the firſt, ſo of either of the words; for whereas Ours render, for he

[w] Ezek. xxxii. 7. [x] Eccleſ. xii. 2. which Aben Ezra alſo quotes. [y] Aben Ezra, רגשו אנשי ארץ, the men on earth tremble. [z] Oecolamp. Danæus, omnibus rebus eum pavorem denuntiat futurum Joel, cum minimis quæ terræ nomine deſignantur, tum etiam maximis ac eminentiſſimis quæ ſolis lunæ ac ſtellarum vocabulis hic comprehenduntur.

[a] Pagnin. [b] Vatab. Piſcat. [c] Tig. Merc. Caſtal. [d] See on chap. i. ver. 4. and the verſe before this. [e] R. Solomon, R. D. Kimchi, Abarbinel. [f] Verſe 1. [g] Verſe 10. [h] Druſ. [i] Lively, Druſ. [k] Mercer. [l] So above alſo called, chap. i. 15. and Maimonides obſerves any ſuch day, wherein the Lord manifeſts any ſignal deliverance or execution, to be ſo called in this place, part. 2. chap. 29. [m] Druſ. obſerves that ſtrong men be underſtood as well of number as ſtrength, or that they were many that executed his word.

he is ſtrong that executeth his word, the Vulgar read quia fortia & facientia verbum ejus, becauſe they (i. e. caſtra ejus, his camp) are ſtrong and doing his word. The Greek ὅτι ἰσχυρὰ ἔργα λόγων αὐτοῦ, becauſe the works of his words are ſtrong; as likewiſe the Syriack and printed Arabick, ومعمل جبرا هو قوي and ſtrong is the work of his word, ſo the printed Arab. اعمال كلماته قوية: But the MS. Arab. عظيم فاعل خطابه he is great or ſtrong that doth his word, as Ours. But which ſoever of thoſe rendrings or expoſitions of the words, that we find, we ſhall take, the ſcope of them ſtill ſeems the ſame, viz. that they are to make them duly ſenſible of the great danger of their condition, that they muſt certainly expect that thoſe heavy judgments, which have all along hitherto in this prophecy been threatned to them, ſhall fall upon them if not prevented, and that they cannot by any power of their own be prevented, however the inſtruments by which 'tis ſaid they ſhall be executed may ſeem in themſelves not of ſuch irreſiſtible force, ſeeing they act not of themſelves alone, but by the command of God who employs them, and by his might, which none can be able to reſiſt, and ſtand out againſt: ſo that there is no way for eſcaping the terror of their coming but by making peace with him, and being reconciled to him by repentance, that ſo he may recall his command to them, and repent him of the evil which he had employed them about; which way, as the former words all along have ſhewed what need they had to take, ſo the following exhort them to, giving hopes of good ſucceſs in it.

12. Therefore alſo now, ſaith the Lord, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with faſting, and with weeping, and with mourning.

וגם עתה נאם יהוה שבו, literally, and alſo now the ſaying of the Lord, Turn ye, As to the conſtruction of theſe words, Druſius notes that the particles, alſo now, are not to be joined with the verb return, ſo as to ſound, The Lord ſaith now (or yet even now) turn ye; but with, The Lord ſaith, ſo as to ſound, The Lord alſo now ſaith, turn ye unto me: as he had before called upon them oft by his Prophets, ſo even yet, now alſo, he calls upon them that they would return. [n] Others ſeem to take rather the other conſtruction, as if that, which the Lord ſaid, were, even now turn ye unto me: which either be taken, the meaning will be much the ſame, that though the heavy judgments hitherto deſcribed and threatned were ſuch, as they could by no force reſiſt, nor be able to ſtand out againſt; and therefore the caſe ſeemed deſperate with them, yet there was a door of hope by God himſelf amidſt his threats opened unto them, which by himſelf, though by them provoked to ſo great wrath, they were invited and called upon to make uſe for their eſcape, either by preventing them before they were come, or averting them being come. As to aſſigning the time to which this call is to be adapted, Abarbinel ſeems to take it to belong to that which was after the deſtruction of the firſt temple, and the interim of their being captives in Babylon, [o] and to have reſpect to their return from captivity, and the building of the ſecond temple; as if he ſhould ſay, that though they had not repented before the coming of thoſe things on them, yet even now after that deſtruction and their captivity God did ſay to them, Turn, &c. With him in this agrees Arias Montanus ſaying, that in hoc loco divina illa Judaicarum rerum reſtitutio prædicitur, quæ poſt certos annos, hoc eſt ſeptuaginta, contigit, in this place is that prediction of the reſtoration of the Jewiſh affairs, which happened after a certain number of years, viz. ſeventy, which God ſo brought to paſs, that he might preſerve that nation, out of which the great Redeemer of the whole world was to ariſe, yet it not being convenient, that the greateſt benefits of God's mercy ſhould come on men without faith and repentance, etiam in hoc tempore & in hac conditione conſtitutos Judæos, even at that time he exhorts the Jews, being in that condition, to the exerciſe of repentance for that end. But this way of expoſition I look on as ſingular to them; Others, ſuch as look on the executioners of God's judgments before ſpoken of to be Locuſts, and ſuch creatures above mentioned, as we have ſeen, and whoſe opinion we think moſt probable, looking on theſe words as preſcribing the only way for preventing their coming, or removing them being come; and ſuch as look on them to be other enemies, taking them likewiſe to preſcribe the only way for preventing them; ſtill that way is the ſame, viz. ſuch repentance as is by the words deſcribed, by its nature and requiſite conditions, which will by viewing the words in order appear. Turn ye (ſaith he) unto me. The ways, it appears, that they had taken, and were now in, were wrong, and ſuch as led them away from God, and cauſed him to turn away his gracious preſence from them, and to threaten to, or ſend on them, all thoſe forementioned evils, for averting which it is neceſſary that they change their courſe, and turn from thoſe ways, that they might turn to him, and to ſuch as pleaſed him, עדי to me, ſaith he, i. e. ſaith the Chaldee לפולחני lepulchani, to my ſervice, as if they had forſaken his ſervice, yielded themſelves as ſervants to Others, whether idols or ſins be meant, or moſt probably both, both muſt they neceſſarily turn from, that they may turn as they ought to God, who calls on them, Turn unto me, עדי Adai, even to me; ſo Ours render it, adding, above what divers others have, the particle even, to ſhew that there is great emphaſy in the word for expreſſing the manner of the converſion which is required; that it be ſuch as do not only cauſe them to look backbackwards towards God, but to come fully home to him, and with what integrity and ſincerity that ought to be done, the next words ſhew, being בכל לבבכם with all your heart. With the heart it muſt be done, not in outward ſhew only, but with inward affection of the heart, and that of the whole heart שלא תיהה התשובה בלב ולב (ſaith Kimchi) ſo that their repentance be not with (or from) an heart, and an heart, [p] a double deceitful heart, an heart divided between God and their idols, or other ſins, which, while it makes ſhew of turning to God, yet hath affection to thoſe other things, ſo contrary to him as that he cannot be entirely loved and ſerved together with them. 'Tis that which he requires in our love and ſervice to him, that it be with all our heart, with all our ſoul, and with all our might, Deut. vi. 5. with all our mind, as our Saviour [q] adds in repeating that firſt and great commandment, (without obeying which no other can be duly obſerved) Mark xii. 30. In obſerving this the firſt mover and acter muſt be the heart, without whoſe ſetting on work, all performances of the outward man are inſufficient and vain, yea diſpleaſing. And therefore in their returning to him it is required in the firſt place, that it be with the heart in the inward man; but when this ſhall have duly performed its part, then is not the outward man left unconcerned, but hath his part to act alſo in performance of ſuch things whereby he may expreſs, how the inward man of the heart is really affected; and ſo by the joint concurrence of both is true converſion or repentance made up. So therefore to what is to be performed by the hidden man of the whole heart, he adds what it is to be expreſſed by, or accompanied with, in the outward man, And with faſting, and with weeping, and with mourning. 1. With faſting, which will make for the humbling of the heart, which pampering of the fleſh is apt to puff up, and make inſatiate and inſenſible of its own condition, and forgetful of God and his ſervice, as Jeſurun, who being waxed fat kicked, and forſook God which made him, and lightly eſteemed the rock of his ſalvation (Deut. xxxii. 15, &c.) To waiting therefore on God's ſervice and prayer, is it uſually joined in ſcripture, as almoſt a neceſſary concomitant, called for by God, and by holy men practiſed. 2. And with weeping, and with mourning, thoſe alſo are uſually ſigns by which an heart throughly affected with grief and ſorrow expreſſeth its paſſions, which, being by it ſtirred up, do alſo gain farther, by a reflexed act, ſtir up in it thoſe paſſions, and work in it more ſorrow, [r] and ſo have their effects on the perſon himſelf, for increaſe of his repentance, as well as for the ſhewing it: beſides the uſe of it for ſtirring up in Others like paſſions, and provoking them alſo to repentance; which in publick aſſemblies, or days of humiliation and penitence, ſuch as here ſeems called for, will be of great uſe, and a great help to devotion; [s] people by their example provoking one another. Of theſe things named (viz. faſting, weeping, and mourning) Arias Montanus well ſaith, hæc enim, ſi pure ſanctèque fiant, non quidem converſio ipſa, ſed laudatiſſima ſunt converſionis argumenta. For theſe things, if in ſincerity of heart, and in holy manner done, though they be not the very converſion, or turning to God itſelf, yet are they very commendable arguments or tokens of turning to him: what is required therefore in ſuch a turning to God, as ſhall be acceptable to him, he expreſſeth farther in the next words.

[n] Tamen ſi vel nunc ſaltem reſipueritis, &c. Lively, O that even now you would return. Dr. Stokes etiam in hoc ipſo temporis articulo ſpem veniæ reſtare clamitat. Tarnov. [o] הם רמז לפקידת בית שני.

13. And rent your heart and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord your God: for he is gracious, and mercifnl, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſs, and repenteth him of the evil.

That in token of great indignation, grief, and ſorrow of heart, and like paſſions, it was anciently a cuſtom among the Jews (not to ſpeak of other nations) to rent their clothes, is made manifeſt by many expreſſions and examples in ſcripture, as that it will be needleſs to give any particular inſtances of it. It being grown into a cuſtom, there is no doubt but that it might be as well done in hypocritical and feigned manner, as well as in real and ſincere, as well to make a ſhew of ſorrow only, as really to teſtify it. The Prophet therefore here exhorting to true and ſerious repentance, with hearty compunction and grief for ſins, and to expreſs the ſame by true ſigns and tokens of it, cautions together againſt ſuch hypocritical behaviour, whereby if they thought to deceive God, they would certainly deceive themſelves. He doth not forbid the uſe of ſuch outward behaviour, by which their repentance might be expreſſed; his calling on them for ſuch as are before expreſſed, ſheweth that he rather required them, and ſo his expreſſion here is not to prohibit that here mentioned, but only to require it to be done in acceptable manner, which is when it is not only done in outward ſhew, but accompanied with the inward affection and ſincere intention of the heart, which is called here, the renting of the heart, and not of the garment (viz.) only. What is meant by renting of the garments, is eaſily at the firſt hearing underſtood, being plain and proper language: but what by renting of the heart not ſo eaſily, as being a figurative expreſſion, and ſo ſomething by it meant, which the words do not properly ſound. For here is meant plainly ſomething, which may be for the bettering and rectifying of the heart, not the total deſtruction of it, as the rending of it would neceſſarily be. I ſuppoſe therefore it may be ſufficient to take by rending of the heart here, in oppoſition to the rending of the garments, to be underſtood, as required to be in the heart, that which by the rending of the garments they would make ſhew of, viz. an hearty ſorrow for their ſins, with a deſire of being rid of them, with which a penitent nitent heart really affected is ſtiled a [t] broken and contrite heart, or agreeable to the expreſſion here a rent and torn heart; agreeably any greatly grieving thing in ordinary language is ſaid to cut ones heart, or cut him to the heart. To this purpoſe is the meaning of the words given by the Chaldee Paraphraſt, ואעדו רשע לבכון, and remove (or do away) the wickedneſs of your heart, taking the heart for things contained in or proceeding from the heart, and (that) not with the rending of your garments (viz. alone.) [u] For illuſtrating this expreſſion of rending the heart, [w] Some compare it with that other expreſſion of circumciſing the foreſkin of the heart, Deut. x. 16. which cannot likewiſe be underſtood of cutting the ſubſtance, or material part of the heart, but of the removing the corrupt affections thereof, the fooliſhneſs or groſſneſs thereof, as the Chaldee there renders it, which is the work of ſerious repentance, and to be wrought on, and in the inward man, without which any things wrought on the fleſh or garments of the outward man are but unprofitable ſhews, however with it ſignificant, and making both for ſtirring up and giving teſtimony of it. And as that is called circumciſion made without hands (Col. ii. 11.) ſo is this alſo a rending of the heart without hands; both being of the heart in the ſpirit, and not in the letter (as he ſpeaks of the one, Rom. ii. 29.) both conſiſting in putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, Col. ii. 11. The work of a truly penitent heart on itſelf, is cutting off from itſelf thoſe ſins which by long continuance were become as it were natural to it, and part of itſelf. When they ſhall have thus and for that end rent, and ript up by a narrow ſearch the receſſes of their hearts, to diſcover the abominations thereof, and waſhed them away with weeping and unfeigned repentance, reſolving not to continue in committing the like. Let them not (though they have by their former ſins ſo far provoked God as to threaten them with ſevere and ſeeming irrevocable judgments as have been mentioned) yet deſpair, as if there were no hope of eſcape, but turn unto the Lord their God, and yet beg mercy at his hands. And turn (ſaith he) unto the Lord your God. We have in the foregoing verſe the ſame exhortation, as from the mouth of God himſelf, ſpeaking in his own perſon. Turn to me. Here we have it as from the mouth of the Prophet ſpeaking from him, with addition of ſuch words as may give them [x] boldneſs of acceſs with confidence, to him, whom otherwiſe, conſidering how greatly they had provoked him, and with what terror of threats and judgments he had hitherto in this Prophecy revealed himſelf unto them, they might have feared to approach unto, and deſpair of finding mercy. The names, by which he is here called יהוה and Elohim, ſet him forth as a God of [y] judgment, ſo of mercy, as infinite in mercy alſo to pardon in the former he had ſhewed himſelf to them; his intent here of diſcovering himſelf to them, in the latter, viz. of mercy, is ſhewed ſufficiently in the affixe כם cem, yours, by his owning them yet for his people, and calling himſelf their God, for the Lord will not certainly forſake them whom he yet owneth for his. But this is much more fully yet declared, amplified, and aſcertained to them by thoſe other epithets and properties of his ſubjoined and added as a reaſon why they ſhould not doubt nor delay to turn unto him, viz. that he is, gracious and merciful. Theſe attributes of God here mentioned are agreeable to thoſe which he proclaimed, whereby to make his name known, Exod. xxxiv. 6. The very words, all the former of them (only with the change of order in the firſt two) are there found; though ſomething differently tranſlated by Ours, there read by Ours merciful and gracious, long-ſuffering, and abundant in goodneſs and truth, but here gracious and merciful, ſlow to anger and of great kindneſs. The words of all theſe in the Hebrew are the very ſame in both places, though it pleaſed our Tranſlators differently to engliſh them in the one from what they do in the other, of which one may ſerve for the explication of the other, the meaning being in both the ſame, but the laſt attribute ונחם על הרעה and repenteth him (or repenting which Aben Ezra obſerves a noun adjective) of the evil, it is not there in Exodus expreſly joined to them, though it may be well underſtood out of what there follows, forgiving iniquity, tranſgreſſion and ſin; for forgiving theſe will [z] include that which is meant by repenting of the evil, which he had threatned to ſend. The former of theſe attributes will to any conſidering man be, I ſuppoſe, as well underſtood of themſelves, as they would be by endeavouring to explain them in other words, but as for the laſt, repenting of the evil, it is not ſo eaſily intelligible; the meaning of the word repenting admitting of ſome ambiguity. For whereas here and elſewhere it is ſaid of God that he repenteth, as, Gen. vi. 6. that it repented him that he had made man, and 1 Sam. xv. 11. that it repented him that he had ſet up Saul to be king, and Jonah. iv. 2. as here, that he repenteth him of the evil: and when Moſes beſought the Lord that he would turn from his fierce wrath, and repent of the evil that he had pronounced againſt his people, Exod. xxxii. 12. and it is ſaid, ver. 14. And the Lord repented of the evil which he thought to do unto unto his people, it is elſewhere on the contrary ſaid that God doth not, or cannot repent. So Numb. xxiii. 19. God is not a man that he ſhould lie, neither the ſon of man that he ſhould repent; and 1 Sam. xv. 11. of which before cited it was ſaid that he repented, it is in ver. 29. ſaid, The ſtrength of Iſrael will not lie, nor repent, for he is not a man that he ſhould repent. From which ſeeming, at firſt hearing, contradictory places it is manifeſt, that repenting or repentance

[p] Pſalm xii. 3. 1 Chron. xii. 38. [q] Mat. xxii. 38. [r] Lament. iii. 51. Mine eye affecteth mine heart. [s] Kimchi.

[t] Pſalm li. 17. [u] Kimchi alſo ſo gives the meaning. If ye would rent your heart and remove from it evil thoughts, ye ſhould not need to rent your garments, as men uſe to do in time of ſorrow. [w] Aben Ezra. [x] Eph. iii. 12. [y] Elohim is obſerved to be nomen judicii, יהוה nomen gratiæ. Ar. Mont. Buxtorf. [z] Mercer.

tance is taken in different ſenſes; ſometimes ſo as to be properly and peculiarly ſpoken of men, but not of God, nor to be attributed to him: ſometimes ſo as that it is ſpoken of God alſo, and attributed to him. Properly therefore and in its ſtricter ſignification taken, it imports a change of mind in the perſons ſpoken of, with ſorrow for ſomething done, which proves or ſucceeds otherwiſe than they were aware of, or do now like and approve of, and could therefore wiſh it had not been done, and now ſeek, if it be in their power, to revoke and alter it, ſuch is uſual in men and their actions; but ſure of God and his dealings, no ſuch thing can properly be ſaid. He is unchangeable, and ſo are all his purpoſes, nor hath any thing that he doth, any other iſſue than he foreknew and foreſaw, and what alteration ſeems to men to be in any of them is not in reſpect of his determination, but in reſpect to their opinion of them, ſeeing things fall out otherwiſe, than he ſeemed to them to have intended, and the event to be different from what they expected, and ſuch as if they had been ordered by men, would have argued a real change in their minds, and intentions. So that his forbearing to ſend on men repenting of their ſins ſuch puniſhments, or evils, as he had threatned againſt them going on in their ſin, is in ſuch language as men uſe among themſelves, and of their own doings, called his repenting. God repenting therefore of evil to men is indeed nothing elſe but his accepting of their repentance, on which the removing or ſtopping ſuch judgments is not from any change of mind, or new reſolution in him, but the making good a condition, in the firſt denouncing thereof included, as he declares it to be in all his threats, Jer. vii. 8. and xxvi. 3. and on the contrary, that in all his promiſes of good to any, there is included a condition of their perſeverance in obedience to him. Though ſometimes not mentioned, perhaps, leſt it ſhould make them careleſs in their repenting, as preſuming too much on his mercy above his promiſe. So therefore the Chaldee Paraphraſe gives the meaning, ומתיב מימריה מלאיתאה בישא and revokes his word from bringing (or inflicting) evil, and agreeably to him the Syriack Tranſlation ܘܬܦ̈ܢ ܒܝܫܬܐ and turning away evil, the MS. Arabick alſo ويصفح عن البلية and turning [a] away from affliction (or from inflicting evil.) Theſe rendrings give a plain ſenſe of the words, not only ſhewing what is meant by repenting of the evil, but at once what evil it is that is ſpoken of, viz. not of ſin, but of puniſhment, whereas other ancient tranſlations of great authority ſeem to leave the matter doubtful, as the Greek rendring, καὶ μετανοῶν ἐπὶ ταῖς κακίαις, and the Vulgar Latin, & præſtabilis ſuper malitia, which the Doway renders, and ready to be gracious upon the malice; for although theſe are by Expoſitors underſtood in that meaning, which we have before given, as appears by Jerome, Cyril, and moſt Others; yet that they may be otherwiſe taken appears by what we have in the printed Arabick, which following the Greek renders وتواب علي قبايح البشر which is latined, & quem pœnitet ſcelerum humanorum, and who repents of men's evil doings. But Cyril, though the words in the Greek, viz. and repenting for evils, may be taken otherwiſe, ſaith, that in his opinion the beſt meaning of them is, that though he hath ſet on afflicting ſinners, yet he will ere long become gentle μεταχωρεῖ γὰρ ἐυκόλως ἐπὶ τὸ βούλεσθαι τὰ χρηστὰ, for he eaſily turneth himſelf again to will (or ſhew) kindneſs. Manifeſt it is that κακία, as it ſignifies wickedneſs, or evil done by men, ſo it alſo ſignifies evil done to men or brought on them, and is ſo uſed in the New Teſtament, Mat. vi. 34. And as for malitia uſed here in the Vulgar Latin (as likewiſe in Matthew) Jerome notes of it. Malitiam in hoc loco non contrariam virtutis debemus accipere, ſed afflictionum, that it is not taken in this place for evil or wickedneſs contrary to goodneſs or virtue, but for evil of afflictions. Thus he deſcribes the nature of God, and his manner of dealing, as an argument to move them, ſeriouſly, and with ſpeed, according to his exhortation, to turn unto the Lord: For farther perſuading them to which the next words alſo make, from the good effects, which they ſhall probably find on their ſo doing.

14. Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a bleſſing behind him, even a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the Lord your God.

He had affirmed of God in the former words that he is apt to return and repent, and why ſhall they deſpair of finding him in their caſe, though both their ſins, and ſufferings, or judgments threatned were greater than ordinary, and ſuch, as if it were not ſuch a one as he, who is here deſcribed, whom they had to deal with, might move them to deſpair. But now his being ſuch, gives them to hope, though not to preſume on ſlight terms, to obtain mercy. For ſuch is the expreſſion rendred by an interrogation, ſeeming to include doubt, [b] as ſpem metu miſcet, doth mingle hope with with fear, ne aut ſecuritatem foveat, aut deſperatione veniæ illos in luto relinquat, as neither to cheriſh in them ſecurity, nor through deſpair of pardon to leave them to ſink in the mire. The like expreſſion have we, Jonah iii. 2. uttered by the king of Nineveh to ſtir up the people to repent on Jonah's preaching deſtruction to them; Who can tell if God will return and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger that we periſh not? where it is manifeſt that his drift was not to put them in doubt, but in hope, of mercy. From the expreſſion, ſeeming, as we ſaid, to include doubting, yet together with it, hope and confidence, we may obſerve, that the doubt is not, whether God will be merciful to thoſe that truly repent, which certainly he will be; but whether he will avert his judgments, in that kind which they could wiſh or deſire he would. For where where ſin is committed, and God threatens puniſhment for it, there are two [c] things which by thoſe that have committed it, and are now duly ſenſible of their offence and repent of it, may be deſired and ſought for at God's hand, the remiſſion both of the ſin and of the puniſhment; as for the firſt it is not to be doubted that God will to the truly penitent pardon it; it is his property by himſelf declared, and unalterable, ſo to do, but as for remitting and wholly taking away the puniſhment, that is not that, which he hath promiſed always to do; and therefore they that are ſure of the other, have not ſuch grounds as to aſcertain themſelves of that, nor doth he always confer it, as appears in the caſe of David, to whom though God had promiſed to put away his ſin, yet he would not ſpare the child which he had begotten of Bathſheba in adultery, though for obtaining its life he faſted and wept, ſaying (by way of interrogation much like this here) who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live? 2 Sam. xii. 13, 14, 22. So in this place the doubtfulneſs intimated in the expreſſion, ſeems not to be ſo much concerning the forgiveneſs of their ſins on their turning to God by unfeigned repentance, as how far he would mitigate his ſentence of judgment againſt them, and limit that deſtruction threatned againſt them, that it ſhould not be total; but there ſhould yet be left a bleſſing behind it, as the following words intimate, and in regard to this alſo the words ſeem to be an expreſſion, [d] non tam dubitantis, quam bene ſperantis, & opem Dei deſiderantis, not ſo much of ſuch as doubted, but of ſuch as hoped for good, and deſired for that end help from God, as not doubting but that as far as may conſiſt with the glory of his juſtice, they ſhall find in reſpect of ſuch temporal evils alſo, either a removal, or ſuch a mitigation, as that the iſſue ſhall be for good to them, for fatherly correction, not for utter deſtruction. This or the like is to be ſaid, if the words be read as by Ours and moſt other Interpreters they be, with an interrogation, and particle of doubting, as I ſuppoſe they conveniently are. But meanwhile it is to be obſerved that that particle is not expreſſed in the original Hebrew, but by them ſupplied as underſtood, which hath given occaſion to Others of not ſo rendring it, but without an interrogation, or ſuch form of doubting. So the Chaldee to the alteration of the meaning through the whole verſe, not, Who knoweth if, &c. but מן ידע דאיתי ביה חובין יתוב מנהון ויתרחם עלוהי, &c. He that knoweth that he hath ſinned, let him repent of them, and he ſhall have mercy ſhewed him, &c. R. Solomon alſo follows him. Kimchi likewiſe, having expounded in the firſt place the words, as read interrogatively, doth give as a ſecond interpretation, which he thinks they will bear, [e] He that knows the ways of repentance, let him repent, and God will repent of this evil. In theſe all we ſee a difference from the former way, in that the verb ישוב yaſhub, will return, which in that is referred to God, is by them referred to men, to thoſe called on to return to God, as likewiſe ונחם will repent, by the Chaldee and R. Solomon, though Kimchi refer that to God. But that reading by way of interrogation, which Ours and moſt Others follow, ſeems to give a much more plain and perſpicuous meaning, being ſo an incitement and encouragement to them to turn (as he exhorts them) to their gracious God, not doubting, but hoping, that though they had provoked him to great diſpleaſure, as the judgments deſcribed ſhew, yet upon their ſincere converſion he would alſo return and repent him in that ſenſe, in which that language, as we ſhewed, agrees to him, viz. ſo as to revoke that ſentence of utter deſtruction denounced againſt them, and to be yet gracious, and ſhew ſigns of mercy to them. This the Hebrew expreſſeth by ישוב ונחם will return and repent, as Ours after Others literally well render it. So anciently the LXX. literally, ἐπιστρέψει καὶ μετανοήσει; and ſo the printed Arabick agreeably to them: but the Vulgar Latin more to the meaning than to the letter, convertatur & ignoſcat, will convert and forgive. The Syriack ܡܢ ܝܕܥ ܐܢ ܢܬܘܒ ܘܢܚܘܡ ܠܢ who knoweth if he will return and have mercy upon us? That wherein they ſhould deſire and hope that God would ſo ſhew himſelf merciful unto them, as a token of his turning and repenting, is expreſſed in the following words, and leave a bleſſing behind him, even a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the Lord your God. Such a bleſſing, i. e. ſuch plenty of the fruits of the earth, which now in appearance they were likely to be altogether deprived of, as that they might have wherewith to rejoice before God, and bring unto him ſuch oblations as were by the law preſcribed, thereby to teſtify to him their gratitude for his bleſſings beſtowed on them, which would be a [f] certain ſign of his being reconciled to them, and expecting and accepting yet their ſervice. It was above ſaid, chap. i. 9, 13. in the ſetting forth their condition, as ſad and lamentable, and for which they were to ſhew the greateſt tokens of grief, The meat-offering and the drink-offering is [g] cut off, or [h] withholden from the houſe of the Lord, ver. 9. of your God, ver. 13. Very ſad muſt needs be their condition while it was ſo with them, as that they had not wherewith to ſerve God: as not only denoting ſcarcity and penury among them, but that they were even rejected by God, who depriving them of thoſe things, without which they could not do him that ſervice which in his law he required from them, ſhewed that he would no longer have intercourſe or communion with them, or accept any longer any ſervice from them: but if he ſhall now again ſupply them with ſuch things, it will be a ſign of great alteration for the better in their condition; and that God did yet own them, and had good affection and kindneſs for them, and would upon their turning i and repenting accept of them, and that tugh he had ſent heavy judgments on them, bearing ſtill love to them, did not thereby nd their utter deſtruction, but their amend-nt, their turning to him that he might re-n to them. His giving them wherewith to ve him will be an argument that he will ac-ot of them and be pleaſed with their ſervice. lis, in a diſtinction made by the Jewiſh ctors betwixt judgments or calamities ſent God on men, obſerved, that ſuch as leave lity and opportunity of ſerving God, how-er ſharp and ſevere, are yet יסורין של אהבה Juriu ſhel Ahabah, chaſtiſements of love, ch as argue that he yet loves them, and in-ads [i] to do them good, and to make them ca-ble of receiving it, by turning them from hat hath withholden it from them. If God all now conclude theſe evils in the former ords deſcribed with ſuch a bleſſing, whereby ey ſhall be enabled ſtill to ſerve him, it will e certainly a token that he hath yet a love for em, and his directing them to deſire in chief ch a bleſſing, whereby they may be enabled to ſerve him, and not ſuch things as reſpect heir own welfare, profit and diſpleaſure, ſhews hat ſuch his chaſtiſements [k] ought alſo to in-reaſe their love to him from a ſenſe of his ove to them. And withal that the chief end hat they propoſe to themſelves in enjoying ufficiently of worldly good things, ought to e that thereby they may be able to ſerve him with cheerfulneſs and gladneſs of heart, not hat they may uſe them only for the ſatisfaction of their own luſts, and worldly deſires, and that they ought to look on as a bleſſing chiefly in that regard. And when men in any judg-ments ſent on them by God, have ſuch inten-tions in their praying to God for deliverance from them, it will ſerve to ſtrengthen their faith and hope of delivery, that though they deſerve no ſuch thing, yet God will hear them in [l] reſpect to his own glory, and for preſerv-ing his own worſhip entire, and encouraging it. By the mentioning of meat-offering and drink-offering unto the Lord, which were then under the law conſtant and neceſſary parts, and requiſites of his worſhip, all parts of it, and all things neceſſary to it may ſeem under-ſtood and included. But Abarbinel, I know not how, looks on them alone mentioned, with excluſion of other bleſſings, which they could not hope for, nor have left any more to them. He not taking the calamities here meant to be that of famine and ſcarcity, brought on them by Locuſts and ſuch crea-tures, deſtroying the fruits of the earth from whence the meat-offering and drink-offering were taken; but, looking on the former words, (as we have all along ſeen) as a foretelling of that deſtruction both of their land, and the firſt temple, which ſhould be brought on them by the Chaldeans, to be a prophecy indeed of their return from that captivity, and rebuilding of the temple, and being reſtored again to in-habit Jeruſalem, and to the worſhip of God; yet withal to ſhew that it ſhould not be in that glory and enjoyment of ſuch privileges as they did formerly there enjoy: they ſhould again be ſo bleſſed as under the ſecond temple to offer ſacrifices, meat-offerings and drink-offerings unto the Lord, but that ſhould be all: thoſe other glorious privileges of having among them הנבואה, propheſy, אורים ותומים, Urim and Thummim, ארון the ark, ושכינה and the Shecinah or majeſtatick preſence, ושאר הדברים שחסרו שם with the other things which were there; they ſhould not expect or find in the ſecond temple; אבל בלבד תשוב עבודת הקרבנות but the opportunity of offering ſacri-fices only ſhould return or be reſtored to them. In this Arias Montanus ſeems to follow and agree with him; but I know not what ground the words here afford them for it; it may ſuf-fice to have mentioned it as a ſingular opinion of theirs, for I know not whether any elſe accord with them. The expoſition which we before gave, is that which is more probably and generally agreed on, whether they look on Locuſts and like creatures, or enemies threat-ning ſuch a deſtruction, as ſhould not leave them ſo much as whence to be ſupplied with what the law required they ſhould offer to God; and that [m] while the firſt temple was yet ſtanding, where they enjoyed all thoſe other privileges.

[a] With which agrees among Latin Interpreters Caſtalio, qui ſe ab inferendo malo contineat. [b] Grot.

[c] Lively. [d] Glaſſ. Grammat. ſacra. p. 497. [e] The MS. Arab. ſeems to agree with theſe, מן יערף ירגע ונרם.
[f] Danæus. [g] Verſe 9. [h] Verſe 13.

Before we paſs from theſe words, we may obſerve a difference made betwixt Interpreters in the conſtruction, beſides what we have al-ready ſeen, though not much in the meaning, of ſome of the words, as namely in thoſe, and leave a bleſſing behind him, viz. who it is that ſhall leave that bleſſing, and who meant by him, when it is ſaid behind him, whether himſelf, the ſame perſon, ſhall leave that bleſ-ſing, or ſome other, after whom he ſhall leave it. There be who underſtand both of the [n] great people, or God's [o] army before ſpoken of, which they underſtand of the Locuſts. So R. Solomon והגום החסיל, and Aben Ezra, perhaps God will repent, והשאיר וה החיל ברכה and that army ſhall leave a bleſſing, out of which they may make a meat-offering and a drink-offering. So Druſius in the firſt place, poſt ſe locuſta, the Locuſt ſhall leave after himſelf. R. David Kimchi underſtands the firſt of God, but the ſecond of the Locuſts, והאל יחברך וישאיר, &c. and God ſhall leave behind the locuſt a bleſſing; for if ye repent, he ſhall far remove him, and leave remaining in the things grow-ing out of the earth a bleſſing, that all ſhall not periſh, and what remains may be for a bleſſing of which ye may take for a meat-offering and drink-offering, which before he ſaid, were cut off from the houſe of the Lord. So Druſius in the ſecond place, with ſeveral others rendring [p] poſt illum. There be again who underſtand both of God, viz. that he ſhall leave behind him, poſt ſe, behind himſelf, viz. after that he hath done, [q] ira depoſita, his anger being now put away, in the place of the curſe, a bleſſing. This I ſuppoſe is the obvious mean-ing ing of our tranſlation, and of [r] ſeveral Others who render, poſt ſe, after himſelf. It may ſeem indifferent which of theſe ways be taken, whatever is done by any as God's inſtrument, being done by his power and order, and their ceaſing to do may be ſaid to be his ceaſing, who hath ſaid to them, thus far they ſhall go, and no further, and what remains after they have fulfilled his command, ſaid, to be left behind him. The Chaldee Paraphraſt, who as we before obſerved, leaves out the interrogative at the beginning of the verſe, goes on in rendring the latter part alſo aſſertorily, and that he may ſo make out the ſenſe plainer in his way, both changeth the perſon ſpoken of, and alters both the ſignification and conſtruction of the words; inſtead of, if he will return, and repent, and leave a bleſſing behind him, even a meat-offering, &c. renders, And whoſoever ſhall repent, his ſins ſhall be remitted unto him, and he ſhall receive bleſſings and conſolations, and his prayer ſhall be as of a man which offereth oblations, and drink-offerings of the Lord your God, but this helps us not ſo much in a literal tranſlation of the words, which we chiefly look after.

[i] Pſalm cxix. 71. [k] Heb. xv. 5, 6. [l] Calvin. [m] See above, chap. i. 16. [n] Verſe 2. [o] Verſe 11. [p] Jun. Trem. Piſcator. [q] Mercer.

15. Blow the trumpet in Zion, ſanctify a faſt, call a ſolemn aſſembly.

16. Gather the people: ſanctify the congregation: aſſemble the elders: gather the children, and thoſe that ſuck the breaſts: let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her cloſet.

17. Let the prieſts, the miniſters of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them ſay, Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach; that the heathen ſhould rule over them: wherefore ſhould they ſay among the people, Where is their God?

The very ſame words have we at the beginning of the chapter, Blow the trumpet in Zion] and, we may well think, on the ſame occaſion, and to the ſame purpoſe, that here. But Abarbinel thinks that they have reſpect to different occaſions, and that they were in the firſt place to give them warning of the invaſion of their land by the Chaldeans, and of their being led captive by them, and of the deſtruction of the firſt temple, and their reſtoration after it, but here in the ſecond place, of the deſtruction of the ſecond temple, and the exile that they are now under, and the reſtauration that they expect from it, בגאולה דעתידה, in a redemption yet to come: ſo ſound his words on chap. ii. 1. שנבא בהן על שני הגליות והחרבנות חרבן בית ראשון ופקידתו בפרשה הראשנה וחרבן בית שני וגאולה בפרשה השנית. And him in this ſeems Arias Montanus to follow, here taking, in theſe words and the following, to be deſcribed all thoſe calamities ſince the ſacking of Jeruſalem by the Romans, but by the former thoſe brought on by the Aſſyrians, and other e- mies; but ſure we cannot follow him ſafe in this, it being plain that Abarbinel's drift in this, is to elude ſuch predicting in this p- phecy, the fulfilling of which will neceſſ ly prove againſt him, and thoſe of his relig, that the Meſſias is come; and the gran them not to be fulfilled, will be to deny at he is yet come; and to bid men to expect et his coming, as will appear by what we ill meet with hereafter, as particularly, ver. 8. The plainer and certainer way therefore, a to the intent of theſe words, is to take them a repeating of what was before ſaid, and n the ſame occaſion, for a farther and more e- neſt exciting them to the duty of repentae exhorted to, after he had ſhewed what nd there was to them of it, it being the o y means for removing thoſe heavy judgmen, which he had ſhewed to hang over their hea. Their ſins being national, the judgment n them national, they ought likewiſe to join n the uſe of theſe means by which they m y obtain mercy and pardon for their ſins, an a removal of the judgments by them called n them, and that they may not be backward i ſo doing, they are a ſecond time earneſtly e horted to it, in proclaiming a ſolemn public faſt, in teſtimony of unfeigned repentanc, and their concurring in it. For ſuch he he calls, and preſcribes methods for it, or [s] form of it, as by taking the words in orde we ſhall ſee.

Blow the trumpet in Zion.] On what occ- ſions the trumpet was uſed to be blown amon them, we have above ſeen on ver. 1. Wha the occaſion was, for which it was here bid t be blown, the following words declare, viz. that it was to call on them ſolemnly to aſſem ble themſelves, that they might obſerve publick faſt, and day of humiliation, an joint ſupplications to God, for removing thoſ heavy things denounced againſt them, o which they ſuffered, or were in danger o ſuffering under, whether by Locuſts, &c. o enemies, according to thoſe different opinion which we have all along ſeen, ſo including both the firſt and the third of theſe uſes which we there on ver. 1. mentioned, of blowing the trumpet. This trumpet is to be blown in Zion, which is alſo, ver. 1. called his holy mountain, as elſewhere, his holy hill of Zion, Pſalm ii. 6. whither, as it is ſaid of Jeruſalem, ([t] the whole of which here by naming that one part of it may well be meant) the tribes went up, the tribes of the Lord unto the teſtimony of Iſrael, viz. the ark there placed in the temple, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord, Pſalm cxxii. 4. their moſt ſolemn place of their religious meetings. The aſſignation of this place ſheweth what is bidden there to be done, to be of great and general concernment to them: What was by God commanded ſo to be publickly proclaimed muſt needs be thought ſo; withal the proclaiming it in that place of greateſt concourſe from all parts of the land, was a means of making it publickly known to all, whether for the drawing them thither for obſerving it there, or whether for obſerving it [u] in all other places and ſynagogues in the whole land, at that ſame ſet time. What is the thing there to be proclaimed, the following words, with expreſſion of ſeveral circumſtances, declare, Sanctify a faſt, קראו עצרה call a ſolemn aſſembly (or day of reſtraint, as the margin, chap. i. 14. hath it.) For theſe very words in Hebrew had we there before, where of what may concern the meaning and interpretation of them hath been ſaid what may ſuffice.

[r] Tig. Munſt. Calv. Pet. à Fig. [s] Jun. Trem. Danæus. [t] Pet. à Fig. on ver. 1. Danæus.

Verſe 16. Gather the people.] viz. Cauſe that they come together, [w] ad publicas ſupplicationes, to put in joint and publick ſupplications. Sanctify the congregation.] Of the word קדשו Kaddeſhu, Sanctify, which occurs in the former verſe, as likewiſe (as we ſaid) chap. i. 14. hath on that firſt place been ſpoken what is here applicable to it. R. Tanchum notes that the ſame ſignification will here well agree to it as in the former place; and that he takes to be الاعداد, that of preparing or ordering, and ſo the MS. Arabick here alſo renders it عدوا الجوق prepare the congregation, by which, though the word may ſeem elſewhere uſed of any ordinary preparation, the place here will ſeem to require to be meant a warning them ſo to prepare themſelves to meet, [x] as for the performance of a holy duty, viz. of a ſolemn faſt, with obſervance of ſuch rules and circumſtances, as by the law were required to be obſerved for the performing of it. By this congregation, Grotius underſtands peculiarly the Levites, as hereby bid to prepare themſelves; but ſure that the word may ſeem to be of larger comprehenſion, including all ſorts and conditions of men, of whom gathered together it was to be made up, the following words by naming the particulars declare, viz. the elders, the children, thoſe that ſuck the breaſts, the bridegroom, the bride, and the prieſts. Aſſemble the Elders.] By the Elders, the ſame learned Man takes to be underſtood, tum illum ſummum ſenatum, tum illos qui urbibus ſingulis præſident, both the whole great council of Sanhedrim, and them alſo which did preſide in particular cities. The ſame word have we above likewiſe, chap. i. 14. where what was ſpoken may agree alſo to this place. That it may be, and uſeth to be, applied to ſuch as we may call Senators, men eminent for gravity and dignity, as well as to men exceeding in age, is no doubt, yet that it is here more particularly to be underſtood of ſuch who in reſpect of their years are ſo called (which ſeems the more proper and ſtrict ſignification of it) [y] is probable from what follows, as contradiſtinct to it, viz. Children, and thoſe that ſuck the breaſts. The reaſon why thoſe ſhould be called on to aſſemble themſelves, in a day of a national repentance, to be teſtified by faſting and ſupplications, is probably given by [z] Some, both becauſe their ſins were greateſt, and becauſe their example would be prevalent in drawing Others on in the ways of repentance. But beſides this, the naming them with thoſe that are joined with them, viz. children, and thoſe that ſuck the breaſts, ſeems to require that in this people to be gathered, and a congregation to be ſanctified, there be none exempted on any pretence whatever, that not only men of better vigour, age and ſtrength, and ſo better able to endure ſuch hardſhips as ſeem'd in performance of ſuch duties of humiliation to be required, ſhould for the end named aſſemble themſelves, but even from all the oldeſt, whoſe ſtrength was decayed, to the youngeſt, who might ſeem not yet of ſtrength. The judgments did ſo generally concern them all, as that it concerned all to be joined in ſeeking mercy from God, by ſuch means as they were able, for the removing of them. All others then muſt needs be inexcuſable, if they do under any pretence keep back or abſent themſelves.

Gather the children, and thoſe that ſuck the breaſts.] Theſe innocents may not be thought to have by their ſins pulled on the nation thoſe judgments, under which they ſuffer, nor to be of diſcretion to underſtand the methods of repentance, and what is intended thereby; why then are theſe to be gathered together to the performance of that duty here enjoined? What reaſon there is for it will be evident, when we conſider, that it is juſt with God to viſit the ſins of the fathers upon the children, and that the fathers conſidering the ſufferings of their children, and cries, cannot but thereby be moved with greater earneſtneſs, to ſeek unto God for removing thoſe evils, in which their innocent children are for their ſakes involved together with themſelves, from which they are not able otherwiſe to relieve them. Beſides that by this means they may hope to find compaſſion from God, who will be moved with the cry of poor children and infants. He that feedeth the young ravens, when they cry, will not neglect the cry of poor children: what tender reſpect he hath to them in his executing his judgments on nations, appears by what he ſaith to Jonah, whom he ſent to denounce deſtruction to Nineveh, giving a reaſon why upon their repentance he reverſed his ſentence againſt them. Should not I ſpare Nineveh, Nineveh that great city, wherein are more than ſixſcore thouſand perſons that cannot diſcern between their right hand and their left hand, and alſo much cattle? Jonah iv. 11. In their ſolemn faſt their king proclaimed, and publiſhed that neither man nor beaſt ſhould taſt any thing, not feed, nor drink water, &c. probably children and infants were likewiſe kept faſting, and as the ſuffering in the humiliation was extended to them, ſo by the words cited it appears that God had in his ſhewing mercy eſpecial regard to them. That it was thought of old a motive to compaſſion in God to join in children alſo, in their addreſſes to him for mercy, appears by what is read in the book of Judith, chap. iv. 9, 10, 11, 12. where where the little children are ſaid to be taken into the number, that they might with great vehemency humble their ſouls, and cry unto the God of Iſrael all with one conſent earneſtly. So here according to Kimchi are they bid to gather them together with the others named ויהיו כולם באסיפה אחת, &c. that ſo they might be all in one congregation, and then the little ones hindred from ſucking might cry for hunger, and thoſe of riper age moved by their crying, might humble themſelves, and repent, and God might of his great mercy take compaſſion on the cry of thoſe little ones. And as no age could excuſe any from bearing their part in this duty of publick humiliation, ſo neither any circumſtances they could be under, or any concerns they might pretend. If any might have been born with in that kind, probably ſuch as were newly married might, who were by the law excuſed from other publick ſervices, as of ſerving in the army in time of war, or the like occaſions. So we read, Deut. xxiv. 5. when a man hath taken a new wife, he ſhall not go out to war, neither ſhall he be charged with any buſineſs, but he ſhall be free at home one year, and ſhall cheer up his wife, which he hath taken. But here is no ſuch privilege granted in this caſe of publick humiliation. Let the bridegroom (ſaith he) go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her cloſet. They muſt not (as in other caſes they might) enjoy themſelves, and take their pleaſure, while Others perform the ſervice required, but they alſo muſt here do their part of removing the publick calamity, though in the very day of their marriage, or while the ſolemnity thereof was otherwiſe to have been celebrated; what mirth and jollity would be otherwiſe ſeaſonable, and even commendable, muſt now, God calling for other behaviour, be laid aſide. What danger it will be at ſuch a time to indulge to it, appears by what he ſaith, Iſaiah xxii. 12, &c. In that day did the Lord God of hoſts call to weeping and to mourning, &c. and behold joy and gladneſs, &c. Surely this iniquity ſhall not be purged from you till ye die, ſaith the Lord God of hoſts. No pretence then may at ſuch a time, when God calls on them for publick humiliation, excuſe from it. Theſe here named are called on to attend on it, if they ſhall refrain from it, what ſhall it be but a farther provoking that wrath, which by it they are put in hope of appeaſing, and directed by that, as the only means left, to ſeek it. Let therefore in the time of publick calamity, even the bridegroom and the bride, laying aſide thoſe privileges of mirth and ſolacing themſelves, which at other times they might lawfully challenge, go the one forth of his chamber, the other out of her cloſet, to join with others of all conditions, in publick acts and exerciſe of humiliation. The word חפה Chuppah, by Ours rendred cloſet, is to the ſame purpoſe generally by Interpreters rendred, in their ſeveral languages, by ſome ſuch word as may denote thalamus, properly a bride-chamber (as it is alſo taken, Pſalm xix. 5.) So ſounds the Chaldee בית גנונהא, which the Syriack alſo hath ܒܝܬ ܟܠܬܐ, the Greek τῆς παστῆς αὐτῆς. The MS. Arab. حِلَقِها. The printed Arabick خدرها, the ſame with the Hebrew חדר attributed to the bridegroom, and rendred chamber: and by him rendred حِلَقِها which is in the MS. there خدرها as if the two words were ſynonymous. R. D. Kimchi ſaying likewiſe that this hath the ſame ſignification, with that former word חדר, yet gives another meaning which it may be capable of, viz. החליים והעדיים שחופפים עליה בימי החתונה that he ſhould go out of, or put off thoſe ornaments and attires, with which they covered her in the days of her eſpouſal (or marriage.) The word may be indifferently capable of either of theſe ſignifications, being from חפה chaphah, to cover, and ſo appliable to any covering. Which either of them be taken the ſcope will be the ſame, viz. that laying aſide all nuptial pomps, and ſigns of mirth and jollity, both the bridegroom and his bride come forth and join with the aſſembly in ſuch ſolemn rites of humiliation, and expreſſions of ſorrow and repentance, whereby both their hearts may be duly affected with their condition, and God moved to compaſſion. The aſſembly conſiſting of ſeveral orders and degrees of the people being thus gathered: The prieſts are in the next place called on to perform their parts. Let the prieſts, the miniſters of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar. The prieſts as here, ſo above, chap. i. 9. called the Lord's miniſters, and ver. 13. the miniſters of the altar, and the miniſters of my God. Theſe are bid to weep, not as if it were not required of the Others alſo ſo to do; but that they whoſe duty was mainly to attend the ſervice of God, and to direct others in performance thereof, were to lead them the way in it. What is done by them interceding is looked on as done by all with joint affections, as they ought to do, accompanying them. They are bid to weep for the ſins and calamities both of themſelves and the people: they are above, chap. i. 13. called on ſo to do, becauſe the meat-offering and the drink-offering are withholden from the houſe of their God. The place where they were to perform this duty is ſpecified between האולם Haulam and מזבח Mizbeach, the porch and the altar. What the אולם Ulam or porch was we learn, 1 Kings vi. 3. what altar here meant, 2 Chron. viii. 12. in the altar for burnt-offerings, [a] which Solomon built before the porch, in the inner court of the Lord's houſe, (Ezek. i. 16.) not that other of incenſe, which was within the holy place, or temple; although Druſius will have to be underſtood aram ſuffimenti, the altar of incenſe. But I ſuppoſe we may better conceive of the place deſcribed by a draught of the ſeveral parts of the temple, and courts belonging to it, which I find in an ancient MS. of Maimonides, in his Commentary on the Miſnaioth, in the tract Middoth, of the text of the Talmud, where where he thus ordereth them, viz. placing on the eaſt ſide, firſt עזרת הנשים Ezrat hannaſim the women's court; 2. עזרת ישראל Ezrat Iſrael, the court of Iſrael; (or the people or men.) 3. עזרת הכהנים Ezrat haccohanim, the court of the prieſts, in which was מזבח Mizbeach, the altar; 4. אולם the porch, beyond which was היכל Heical, the temple (or holy place) and in that מזבח הזהב Mizbeach hazzahab, the golden altar (that for incenſe) and the table and candleſtick; and 5. קודש הקדשים Kodeſh hakkodaſhim, the holy of holies. Now the place here deſigned, according to this, will ſeem to be that ſpace, or part of the court of the prieſts, which was between the altar and the porch, in which court they were wont to ſtand and prepare their burnt-offerings; ſo Ezek. viii. 16. is that ſpace, which is between the porch and the altar, ſaid to be in the inner court. And of this place ſeems Kimchi to underſtand it, whoſe words ſound, Becauſe there ſtood the prieſts to perform their miniſtry, and their miniſtry ceaſing; becauſe as he ſaid (chap. i. 9.) the meat-offerings were cut off from the houſe of the Lord, there in that place of their miniſtring let them weep, and put up their prayers unto God, in the houſe of his ſanctuary (under which laſt word I ſuppoſe he underſtood the whole belonging to the temple, without as well as within) Aben Ezra likewiſe ſeems to underſtand the ſame place, ſaying by way of explication, אין נכון לבכות בבית השם בהיכל לפני it is not convenient to weep in the houſe of God, in the temple before me; which Abarbinel obſerves to be well ſaid by him, שאין נכון לבכות בהיכל השם [b] that it is not right to weep in the ſanctuary of God: without it therefore, and before it are they bid to weep, though even there [c] (as Some obſerve) it was prohibited to ſhew ſigns of grief. The ſame place is thought to be that which is between the temple and the altar, where Zachariah was ſlain, Mat. xxiii. 35. The whole temple may be named, the porch being looked on as part of it. Why in that place they are bid to weep, other probable reaſons, beſides thoſe intimated, are aſſigned, as firſt, from the conveniency of the place, ſo ſituated as that thence the people from the outward court (ſeparated from it with a low wall of three cubits height only) might obſerve the humble poſtures and behaviour of the prieſts, and thereby be excited to the like, and to join with them in a general humiliation. 2. That ſtanding in the place, which was between the temple of God and the court of the people, they might appear [d] as interceſſors between them, making interceſſion to him for their ſins: or, 3*dly*, In token of their humiliation, out of a ſenſe of their unworthineſs to draw nearer unto God, like that of the penitent publican, who out of ſenſe of his unworthineſs to approach nearer to God, ſtood afar off, &c. Luke xviii. 13. [e] Some obſerve, that becauſe they were to weep and pray beyond the altar, that this was to be done after they had firſt appeaſed God with ſacrifices. But by what is ſaid, chap. i. 13. and in this chapter, ver. 14. it ſeems that they had not, or ſhould not have any ſacrifices to offer, and therefore, as they were wont to perform ſuch duties as prayer and thankſgiving, which is to be performed with gladneſs and chearfulneſs of heart, in that place, they are now called on therein to weep; which why in that place they ſhould do, ſuch probable reaſons as we have ſeen, are or may be aſſigned, but here is none expreſſed, and therefore is it not neceſſary to ſeek for any. It is by God ordered that in that place they ſhould do it, and therefore neceſſary to them that they ſhould, as by him required, do what he bids them to do, even there to weep in token of ſorrow for both their own, and the ſins and calamities of that people, and to put up their ſupplications for themſelves and the people; for ſo is here to their weeping joined, as neceſſary, praying alſo, to ſhew that their eyes are affected by their hearts, and that what they do is not only out of ſenſe of what they ſuffer, but of what they do deſerve, and out of ſorrow for their ſins. So he adds, Let them ſay, preſcribing alſo to them a form of prayer, or what they ſhall ſay, viz. Spare thy people, O Lord, which form both ſhews how they ought to be affected with the ſenſe of their own, and the people's condition, and by what motives they may hope and endeavour to prevail with God to have mercy on them. They muſt ſay, Spare thy people, they acknowledge themſelves to be guilty and to deſerve puniſhment, to ſtand in need of mercy from God, and that they have no other hope of help but from that. He being juſtly provoked to wrath againſt them, and to inflict puniſhments, and ſend judgments on them; the motives, by which they may hope to prevail with him for pardoning their offences and removing his judgments, are firſt, their relation into which he had received them to himſelf; their acknowledging him as the only true God; his compaſſion to thoſe that are in miſery, and the preſervation of his own honour and glory. That relation is by them to be expreſſed in calling themſelves his people, his heritage. 2. Their acknowledging him the only true God in calling him יהוה Jehovah, rendred Lord, which was his proper name, not communicable to any other but him the true God. 3. His compaſſion on their miſery, becauſe if he do not ſpare them, but go on in executing his judgments on them, they ſhall be given up to reproach, and the heathen ſhall rule over them. 4. The preſervation of his glory, for if he ſuffer them to be deſtroyed, they will ſay among the people, where is their God? as taking it for a ſign that he was not able to make good to them thoſe his promiſes, which he had made to them in their forefathers, or were worſe than his word to them; and ſo would [b] Mercer, Ar. Montan. ſaith that even in that place they are now bid to weep, it was not ordinarily lawful ſo to do.

[u] Danæus. [w] Piſc. Tarnov. [x] Calv. Merc. [y] Brenn. [z] Calvin. Danæus.

[a] Lively.

[c] Biſhop Hall's Paraphraſe. [d] Merc. Calv. [e] Chr. à Caſtro.

would thoſe idolaters take thence occaſion of blaſpheming his name, and his honour, an argument elſewhere [f] often uſed in ſcripture, to move God to ſhew himſelf what his people owned, and profeſſed him to be, and that they might not ſeem in vain to put their truſt in him, as their enemies were apt to object they did, as though he were not able to do for thoſe that truſted in him more than the Gods of the heathens could do for them.

Of how great force this motive is to prevail on God, appears elſewhere not only from Moſes's and David's, and other holy men's making uſe of it for that end, as Exod. xxxii. 12. Numb. xiv. 13, 15, 16, &c. Deut. ix. 28. Pſalm lxxix. 9, 10. and cxv. 20. Dan. ix. 19. but from what he from his own mouth declareth, that he ſpared his people, whom he would otherwiſe have ſcattered, and have cauſed the remembrance of them to have ceaſed among men, becauſe he feared the wrath of the enemy, leſt their adverſaries ſhould behave themſelves ſtrangely and ſay, our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this, Deut. xxxii. 26, 27. and what he ſaith to the ſame purpoſe, Ezek. xx. 13, 14, 21, 22. The words למשל בם גוים Limſhal bam Goim, rendred by Ours in the Text, That the heathen ſhould rule over them, and ſo generally by Others to the ſame purpoſe. We have in the Margin put as a different interpretation, ſhould uſe a by-word againſt them. They are ſo explained by R. Solomon Jarchi, who here expounding the word Limſhal, ſaith that it is לשון משל ושנינה in the ſignification of Maſhal veſhaninah, which words we have in other places, as Deut. xxviii. 37. where is threatned to Iſrael that upon their falling away from God, they ſhall become לשמה למשל ולשנינה בכל העמים Leſhammah lemaſhal veliſhninah becol haammim, an aſtoniſhment, a proverb, and by-word among all nations. So likewiſe, 1 Kings ix. 7. and Jer. xxiv. 9. in which places the noun משל proverb being uſed in an ill ſenſe, as for a taunt, reproach, and by-word, it is manifeſt he thinks that the verb alſo ought to be here taken in the ſame ſenſe; and the meaning ſo made out would be [g] convenient enough. But it is by Others generally taken in its more ordinary ſignification of bearing rule, and from it ſo taken Jerome thinks here to be made manifeſt what was hitherto doubtful, viz. who it be by whom the calamities hitherto deſcribed ſhould be brought on them, whether Locuſts and other ſuch noxious creatures, or enemies. From this expreſſion he thinks it manifeſt that it is not ſpoken of thoſe vermin, but of their [h] enemies among the nations. Cyril alſo thinks it hence made probable, that enemies are thereby meant, yet that nevertheleſs it may be well enough underſtood of Locuſts. But among more modern Expoſitors Calvin taking hence his ground ſaith, Ideo ridiculum eſt, quod multi putant, contexi ſermonem de locuſtis, &c. it is therefore a ridiculous thing to think that the Locuſts are ſpoken of, and altogether different from the meaning of the Prophet. But this ſeems ſomething haſtily ſpoken by him. As Others before him, ſo Others after him, who had ſeen and conſidered what he ſaith, are yet of opinion, that it may very well, and ought to be interpreted of ſuch ill conſequences as were, by God's ſending of the Locuſts among them to deſtroy the fruits of the earth, brought on them, and ſo the Locuſts in the preceding words moſt probably, properly meant. Among the Jews Aben Ezra ſeems ſo to take them, by reproach, underſtanding רעב famine, and explains what is ſaid that the heathen ſhould rule over them, becauſe thoſe that were oppreſſed by famine would fly to them, and if they ſhould come againſt them, they would have no ſtrength to fight [for themſelves.] And ſo alſo Kimchi, Give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen ſhould rule over them, כי כשהיה רעב בארץ ישראל, &c. becauſe when there was a famine in the land of Iſrael, many went forth of it to ſojourn in Egypt, and in the country of the Philiſtines, by reaſon of the famine, and this was a reproach to them, and the nations bare rule over them while they were ſtrangers in their land. So that according to thoſe and ſuch as go their way, the words ſound, [i] as one among Chriſtians more modern well paraphraſeth them, Spare thy people, in removing from them the plague of Locuſts, which if it continue to run and ſpread among them, will bring on them a very great famine, and ſo thy people ſhall be forced for relief of it to fly to the countries of the nations, and ſerve them for bread, and to ſuffer their rule and their reproaches, as of old they fled to the Egyptians, and became their ſervants. [k] Other alſo among Chriſtians later than Calvin look on this as the righter meaning, viz. that it is the enemy that is here ſaid ſhould rule over them, but thoſe inſtruments of miſchief to them all along before deſcribed, not thoſe enemies among the nations, but ſuch vermin by which they ſhould be ſo impoveriſhed, as that they ſhould be forced to ſubmit themſelves to thoſe nations, or be eaſily overcome by them.

That which is in the verſe ſaid, let the prieſts weep between the porch and the altar, manifeſtly argues, that what is ſpoken was to happen while the temple, with its porch and other parts belonging to it, was yet ſtanding, and the prieſts had free acceſs to it, and liberty of exerciſing there ſuch offices as belonged to their function, which is contrary to what Abarbinel thinks, that it belongs to the times after the deſtruction thereof, yea of the ſecond temple, and the condition that they are now under (compare this with what expreſſions we find, chap. i. 9, 13, 14, and 16. and 14. of this chapter.) His words in which he declares his opinion are, that he cannot underſtand thoſe words, Give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen ſhould rule over them, them, כי אם על הגלות הארוך הזה אשר אנחנו בו לחרפה בידי ארום but of this long captivity in which we are for a reproach in the hands of the Edomites, and that the weeping here ſpoken of is that in this captivity, שבכו העם והתאבלו בגלותם כל כך מהשנים in which the people have wept and mourned in their captivity ſo many years. But how can this be ſaid to be between the porch and the altar? this muſt concern what was done while they were ſtanding.

[f] Accuſabunt enim gentes verum Deum infirmitatis & mendacii quaſi qui ſuos tueri non poſſit, Danæus. According to Rabſhakeh's blaſphemous way of arguing, 2 Kings xviii. 34. [g] Mercer. [h] And ſee Lyr. [i] Pet. à Fig. [k] Piſc. Mercer, Druſ. Tarnov.

Having thus exhorted them to a general humiliation and ſolemn repentance, out of conſideration of the calamities that they were under, or in fear of, and preſcribed a form for it, that they may not think it in vain to hearken to him, and duly perform what he requires them to do, in the next words he ſhews what good effects ſhall certainly enſue on their ſo doing, as certainly as if it were already come to paſs.

18. Then will the Lord be jealous for his land, and pity his people.

So do Ours and ſome Others render the words in the future-tenſe, will be jealous, &c. will pity, and ſo are the verbs in the Hebrew of that tenſe יקנא yekanne, and יחמל yachmol, but then the conjunction ו ve, and, being prefixed to them, being of that nature as uſually to give to the form of the future the ſignification of the preter-tenſe, it is by many here ſo rendred, hath been jealous, hath pitied; ſo by the Chaldee וחס ורחים and, hath ſpared and hath pitied; by the Greek, καὶ ἐζήλωσε, and καὶ ἐφείσατο, hath been jealous, and hath ſpared; and the Syriack, ܘܬܘ Vtan, ܘܐܟܘ Uchos; and both the Arabick verſions, وغار wagara, وشفق waſhaphaka, all agreeing with the Vulgar Latin & zelatus eſt, and, & pepercit, which the Doway render, and our Lord hath been zealous, and hath ſpared. Among more modern Tranſlators alſo ſeveral, as Munſter, and the Tigurin verſion, commotus eſt zelo, &c. hath been moved with zeal. Junius alſo and Tremellius, Jam Zelotypia affectus Jehovah terræ ſuæ, clementia uſus eſt erga populum ſuum, The Lord hath been already moved with jealouſy to his land, and hath uſed mercy towards his people. That the words are regularly ſo rendred in the preter-tenſe, for the reaſon which we have mentioned, there is no queſtion; yet that they may mean while be underſtood of what is future is as evident, for another known obſervation backed with frequent examples (as we have elſewhere ſeen) viz. that the Prophets foretelling things to come do oft ſpeak of them as of things already paſt; what is by God determined to be done being as ſure as what is already done; and of that nature are theſe expreſſions here [l] by many looked on to be. So we ſee they are by Ours taken, and ſo by [m] Others. Aben Ezra notes to theſe words, that which he ſaith he had obſerved alſo before on Others, כי דבר ננור להיות יאמרוהו הנביאים על לשון עבר that the Prophets do uſe to [n] ſpeak of a matter determined to be, in the language of the preter-tenſe; and in that reſpect Piſcator would have that of Junius and Tremellius, Jam Zelotypia affectus eſt, &c. changed into, tunc Zelotypia afficietur & clementia utetur, Then the Lord will be moved with jealouſy for his land, and will ſhew mercy towards his people, &c. becauſe, though the other be a regular conſtruction, according to the uſe of that conjunction ו v prefixed, yet, ipſa ſententia hic ſignificationem futuri poſtulat, the ſenſe of the place here requires that the ſignification of the future be uſed. Yet is the learned Mr. Lively for the other way againſt it. His opinion is that the Prophet doth not here ſhew quid facturus aut dicturus ſit Deus, what God would do or ſay, ſed quid jam dixerit aut fecerit, but what he had already ſaid or done, viz. that upon ſuch repentance and acts thereof, which he had called them to, by them performed, he had ſhewed himſelf jealous for their land, and had pitied them, removing ſuch judgments as he had ſent on them: ſo that by him is declared both that upon God's warning given in ver. 12, 13, 15, 16. they had already repented them, and done ſuch things as he had exhorted them to, and he had removed the evils which their ſins had pulled on them, and had comforted them with the promiſes of many good things to them. It is objected that there is not any mention in the hiſtory of ſcripture of any ſuch publick repentance, or ſolemn aſſembling for it, or faſts in token of it. This he thinks not to be of any moment againſt it, inaſmuch as many ſuch things, as muſt neceſſarily be taken for granted to have been done, are not yet expreſly mentioned, of which he gives examples, as of Iſaiah with his ſon Shear-Jaſhub going to meet Ahaz, as he was commanded, Iſaiah vii. 3, &c. which it is not to be doubted that he did, yet not mentioned at all there; and of Moſes's being bid by God to go to Pharaoh and threaten him, except he would let Iſrael go, with ſending ſwarms of flies on him and his ſervants, Exod. viii. 20, &c. which accordingly it follows, ver. 24. that God ſent, without mentioning between, either what Moſes did, or Pharaoh anſwered, which yet muſt neceſſarily be underſtood, viz. that when Moſes had delivered this meſſage from God to Pharaoh, and he refuſed to obey, then the Lord did ſo, and there came a grievous ſwarm of flies, &c. Then with great modeſty he concludes, Hæc mea de hujus loci intelligentia ſententia eſt, quam a doctioribus expendi cupio, this is my opinion of the meaning of this place, which I deſire may by learned Men be weighed. Jerome's words, ſo much ancienter than he, may perhaps be ſo interpreted as to agree with him, as interpreting all in the preter-tenſe. But I know not whether any have taken his opinion into conſideration. Ours, we ſee, with Others later than he, and who probably had ſeen what he ſaith, chooſe to underſtand what is here ſpoken as of the future, and as a prophecy of what ſhould be done, rather than a narrative, of what had been already done, though [o] to ſhew the certainty of it, expreſſed (as we have ſaid) in ſuch language as might agree to what was actually paſt: with God is no diſtinction of times, what he will do is as already done, all things are preſent to him, and what ſhall be as that which hath been. Then the Lord will be jealous for his land, ויקנא יהוה לארצו. He will be jealous for, with great affection be moved for, ſo as to remove what is hurtful, and injurious to it, and to ſeek its good, that it continue not [p] deſolate, and a reproach to its enemies. It is [q] obſerved that when this verb is conſtrued with the prepoſition ל le, as here it is, that it is taken in good part, denoting a being ſollicitous of good to thoſe whom one is ſaid to be jealous for, as that when it is conſtrued with ב be, it is taken in ill part, denoting a ſuſpicion of evil in ſuch as he is jealous of, or over, or being evil affected to. It is manifeſt that how ever the verb be otherwiſe uſed ſo as to denote ill of, or to thoſe ſpoken of, as to be jealous of, to envy, emulate, or the like, yet that here it notes intention of good to them, for whom it is ſaid he will be jealous. The Chaldee therefore here gives the meaning of it by וחס יי and the Lord hath ſpared. Such words denoting paſſion, and affections being [r] ſpoken of God, do not (as elſewhere, I remember, hath been obſerved) denote him to be ſubject to ſuch affections ſo as men are, but to expreſs in language underſtood by men, ſuch effects wrought by him as in men would argue ſuch affections, and proceed from them. His being jealous for his land imports his intentions for good to it, for ſuch reaſon as we have mentioned from the conſtruction of the verb, ſo appears it alſo from the other word joined with it, which is, and pity his people, ויחמל על עמו, viz. ſo as not to deal with them in ſeverity of juſtice according to their deſerts, but upon their repentance to ſpare and pardon them, and remove from them thoſe evils which they had deſerved: of which they have confidence given them by thoſe terms of near relation to himſelf, by which he owns them, his land and his people, as yet ſtill more peculiarly belonging to him than any other; which neceſſarily imports and gives aſſurance that he will in peculiar manner yet take care of, and ſhew kindneſs to them, both in removing evils from them, which ſeems the more particular import of this verſe, and alſo giving good things to them, as is in the following verſe more expreſly declared.

[l] Mercer, Druſ. Ch. à Caſtro, Tarnov. [m] On chap. i. 7. [n] So Abarb.

19. Yea the Lord will anſwer and ſay unto his people, Behold I will ſend you corn, and wine, and oyl, and ye ſhall be ſatisfied therewith: and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen.

Here again the Vulgar with Others, reſpondit, &c. So Jerome expounding both together ſaith, Zelatus eſt Dominus terram ſuam, quam prius quaſi alienam contempſerat, & paſſus fuerat locuſta vaſtante populari, & in tantum pepercit pœnitentibus, ut eos dignos ſua reſponſione faceret, diceretque, &c. The Lord hath been zealous for his land, which before he had contemned as a ſtrange land [belonging to another] and had ſuffered to be laid waſte by the Locuſt deſtroying it, and hath ſo far ſpared them upon their repentance as to make them worthy of an anſwer from himſelf, and to ſay to them, &c. But as before we ſaid that according to moſt, Hath been jealous, and pitied, is taken for, will certainly be jealous and will pity (as by Ours rendred,) ſo here again, hath anſwered, &c. is taken for, undoubtedly and without delay, or putting off, will anſwer, &c. viz. when they had in due manner [s] done what was in the foregoing verſes required of them to do, in token of unfeigned repentance, and in ſo doing ſhewed themſelves his people. What he will anſwer and ſay, and make good to them is as follows, Behold I will ſend you corn, and wine, and oyl, and ye ſhall be ſatisfied therewith. Behold, take notice of it, as what I will ſpeedily and certainly make good (however contrary it be to what I threatned) that I will ſend corn, &c. This anſwer which he promiſeth to return to them on their turning, and making their addreſſes to him, how ſeaſonable and ſuitable in reſpect to their preſent condition, as well as gracious it is, appears by what that hath all along hitherto in this book been deſcribed to be. It is ſaid in the foregoing chapter, ver. 4. That what the palmer-worm had left to them the locuſt had eaten, and what the locuſt had left the canker-worm had eaten, and that which the canker-worm had left the caterpiller had eaten. And ver. 5. The new wine was cut off from their mouth, That their vines were laid waſte, &c. ver. 7, 10, &c. that the corn was waſted, the new wine dried up, the oyl languiſhed, the harveſt of the field periſhed, all the trees of the field withered, and ſuch a ſcarcity by this means cauſed, that not only joy, through the plentiful enjoyment of the good things of this life, was withered away from the ſons of men, but even the meat-offering and drink-offering withholden from the houſe of their God, and joy and gladneſs cut off from them alſo, ver. 16. yea that the very beaſts did groan, and herds of cattle were perplexed for want of paſture, &c. ver. 18, &c. with like expreſſions ſhewing that they were under, or in danger of ſuch extremity of dearth and famine, by which they were forced to ſeek out for relief to other people, and become a reproach to them, as not having any God to help them, chap. ii. 17. To men in ſuch a deplorable condition, and with penitent hearts ſeeking for relief from God, what anſwer can be more comfortable, more ſuitable than this that the Prophet aſſureth them that they ſhall receive from God, of promiſe of certain and ſpeedy alteration of their condition, from extremity of want to a plentiful enjoyment of all things things neceſſary for their well being, not only in ſome competent meaſure, but to a full ſatisfaction, ſo that they ſhall not need to ſeek out for help to others, but with confidence rely upon God as allſufficient to them? He will ſend them corn, and wine, and oyl, all things neceſſary for their being, and well being, and that in ſuch plenty, that they ſhall be fully ſatisfied therewith, [t] have all things neceſſary for their own uſe, and for offerings, meat-offerings, and drink-offerings in the houſe of God, with joy and gladneſs; and will not make them any longer a reproach among the heathen, [u] they ſhall no longer be forced to ſerve them for bread, that they ſhould ſcorn them as an indigent people, whoſe God was not able to ſupport them, or elſe had forſaken them. So the Chaldee here renders, And I will not give you חיסודי כפנא to be reproaches (or reproached) for hunger, and famine among the people, which is, as R. Solomon expounds it, שיקראו אתכם חסירי לחם, that they ſhould call you wanters of bread (ſtarvlings.) That which he ſaith, I will ſend you corn and wine, the Chaldee renders, Behold I bleſs (or will bleſs) to you corn, and wine and oyl; and Kimchi expounds it, I will cauſe to ſpring (or grow) to you the trees of the field, and the herb of the ground. That this may be brought to paſs, it is neceſſary that thoſe inſtruments of miſchief, which had deſtroyed or would deſtroy thoſe good things to them, ſhould be reſtrained or removed, and taken out of the way; that therefore no obſtacle may ſtand in the way, nothing that may make them doubt of the performance of his good promiſe, as to this he expreſly adds his promiſe of removing all ſuch as they had ſuffered, or were in danger of ſuffering, by adding what follows.

[o] Abarb. [p] Kimchi. [q] Aben Ezra on Zach. i. 14. [r] Calv. Petr. à Fig. [s] Calv.

20. But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and deſolate, with his face toward the eaſt-ſea, and his hinder part toward the utmoſt ſea; and his ſtink ſhall come up, and his ill ſavour ſhall come up, becauſe he hath done great things.

The northern army. ואת הצפוני, Veeth Hatſephoni, the northern one, that is all that is in the words expreſſed, the word army is here ſupplied as to be underſtood by our Tranſlators, as the printing it in different characters gives to note. Nor is there in ſeveral tranſlations found more, the Greek rendring τὸν ἀπὸ βορρᾶ, the Vulgar Latin, eum qui ab Aquilone eſt, the Syriack, ܗܘ ܕܡܨܦܢ the printed Arabick, والذي من الجربيا which the Latin renders, eum qui eſt ex Aquilone, (though perhaps the word do not properly ſignify ſo,) the MS. Arabick, אלכראסאני, him that is from Choraſan. God's having called thoſe inſtruments of his wrath, in the foregoing words all along deſcribed, his army, ver. 11. and here with the epithet of northern added, which may note either, he that came from the north, or is ſeated or placed northward, makes again a great [w] difference betwixt Interpreters, concerning thoſe of whom it is to be underſtood, whether Locuſts and ſuch vermin in great number infeſting them, and devouring the fruits of their land, or elſe enemies invading and ſpoiling it. The words ſeem ſo appliable to both, that by Some they are underſtood of the one, by Others of the other, and Some leave it in doubt which way ſhould be taken. So R. Tanchum, נסגר אלי צפון, he denominates him from the north, or he is called northern, قيل لان مجيه اعني الجراد من جهة العراق, as it is by Some ſaid, becauſe his coming, to wit, the coming of the Locuſts was from that part of Erak (or Chaldea) وكذلك مجي العدو ان كان مثالا له and ſo likewiſe was the coming of the enemies, if it be a comparative expreſſion of him. R. Solomon likewiſe ſaith that it may be expounded of the army of Locuſts, or in another way, of a people coming out of the north (country) of the kings of Aſſyria. Cyril alſo having expounded it of the Aſſyrians, as being toward the north, ſaith, that if any ſhall expound it of the Locuſts, as coming from the more northern parts of Judea, there is nothing to hinder why that expoſition may not be approved of; but Others do ſo take the one as to reject, and diſapprove the other. Abarbinel among the Jews (who, as we have formerly ſeen, is peremptory for having it underſtood of the enemy) thinks this epithet to agree to the Aſſyrians, the Babylonians, and the Romans, the two former being North-Eaſt, the latter North-Weſt of Judea, and all theſe he will have under it comprehended, and the miſchief by them all done to the Jews here pointed to, and not any by Locuſts, or ſuch creatures literally underſtood; and what is here ſaid ſhall be done, to be that which hath been already done to the former, and ſhall be done to the latter. [x] Others think thereby denoted ſingly the Aſſyrians, who led by Sanacherib, invaded the land in Hezekiah's time; [y] Others the Chaldeans who carried them captive; [z] Others the Aſſyrians under Holofernes, all ſo called from the ſame reaſon of their ſituation in reſpect of the land of Iſrael. But whatever reaſons theſe, any of them, have for their opinions, they ſeem not ſo well to agree to what the Prophet expreſſeth both in the foregoing and following paſſages, as that of thoſe other learned Men, who look upon it as denoting the Locuſts, and other ſuch noxious vermin before mentioned and deſcribed. Theſe both Aben Ezra and Kimchi (with [a] Others following them) think to be called הצפוני, the northern one, as coming or brought מצפון out of the northern coaſts to them (though Jerome thinks this a proof, that it is to be underſtood of the Aſſyrians, and not Locuſts, becauſe theſe more uſually came came from the ſouth than from the north.) [b] Others rather think thereby to be meant ſuch part of them, as had ſettled themſelves on the north ſide of Jeruſalem, or the northerly part of them. Of this part of them he ſaith, that he will remove them far off from them, and drive them into a land barren and deſolate, that is, ſays Aben Ezra and Kimchi, into a land in which they ſhall find nothing at all that they may eat, and ſo die and periſh for want of food, i. e. ſaith Bochartus, into Arabiæ deſerta, the deſerts of Arabia. Junius and Tremellius ſeem to underſtand by the northern one, partem quam in Aquilonem a regione veſtra depulſurus ſum, that part of the Locuſts which he will drive from their country into the north, and then inſtead of, and will drive him, rendring, depellam ex eo, I will drive of him, i. e. of that army, underſtand that part which was on the ſouth, or, he would drive toward the ſouth, where was that horrid deſert deſcribed, Deut. viii. 15. But Bochartus thinks no mention to be here made at all of the ſouthern part of them, becauſe the city of Jeruſalem, being in the extreme ſouthern part of the land of Canaan, paucæ erant reſpectu urbis & ſub aliis comprehenſæ, they were but few on that ſide of the city, and comprehended under the others that were named, ſo that thoſe words, I will drive him, belong to thoſe northern ones mentioned; then in the following words, with his face toward the ſea, by his face he underſtands that part of them, quæ ad mundi faciem, i. e. ortum, which had ſettled itſelf toward the face of the world, that is, the eaſt. Junius and Tremellius render it, primum agmen, the foremoſt troop, theſe he ſaith he will drive towards (or into) the eaſt ſea, i. e. the dead ſea, which was eaſt of Jeruſalem, or as Others, Genezareth, or the lake of Tiberias; and then by his hinder part, he with Others will have to be meant, occidentalem ejus partem, the weſtern part of them, and thoſe he threatens to drive towards, or into the utmoſt ſea, i. e. ſay they, occidentale ſeu meridianum, the weſt or Mediterranean ſea: into theſe places driven ſhall they periſh, be all killed and deſtroyed, and his ſtink (ſaith he) ſhall come up, and צחנתו Tſachanato, his ill ſavour ſhall come up; this laſt word is not elſewhere found in ſcripture, but its being joined with the former of more known uſe, באשו, his ſtink, ſhews it (as the [c] Rabbins obſerve) to be of much the like ſignification, ſo that here הטעם כפיל, the ſignification is but doubled, or the ſame thing repeated in different words, as Aben Ezra ſpeaks, and it is ſo by Interpreters generally taken for an ill or ſtinking ſavour, except by ſome copies of the Greek and their [d] Interpreters, which render here ὁ βρόμος αὐτοῦ, by his ſound, but that is by Bochartus obſerved to be a miſtake only in the writing of the Greek word, which he ſaith ought to be written [e] βρῶμος; that ſo ſome copies of old had it, as plainly to ſignify ſtench or ill ſavour, appears by what is read in the printed Arabick done out of it, viz. ويصعد نتنه وترتفع رائحته and his ſtink ſhall aſcend, and his ſmell be lifted up: which is a ſign of their lying dead by great numbers in thoſe places, as either ſtarved or drowned in the ſea, and their carcaſes caſt again on the ſhore, which to be a thing to happen to and from Locuſts appears by many expreſſions mentioned in creditable authors, and out of them cited by Bochartus; it ſhall ſuffice us to give what Jerome reports, that in his time he ſaw ſuch troops of Locuſts as even covered the land of Judea, quæ poſtea vento ſurgente in mare primum & noviſſimum præcipitatæ ſunt, which afterwards by a wind ariſing were caſt headlong into the foremoſt and uttermoſt ſea; and then afterwards he ſaith that the ſhoars of both ſeas being full of heaps of ſuch dead Locuſts, which the waters had caſt up, the corruption and the ſtink of them was ſo noxious, that it did alſo corrupt the air, and bred a peſtilence tam jumentorum quam hominum, both among cattle and men.

[t] See ver. 26. [u] Ut diſpergantur ad quærandum panem, Ab. Ezra, as it is ſaid of them, Lament. v. 6. [w] The Chaldee ſupplies Populum. Others Inimicum, Piſc. Others exercitum, Pagn. Others Hoſtem, Munſt. [x] Hieron. Theod. and ſo the Engliſh at Geneva giving for a note, That is, Aſſyrians your enemies. [y] Ch. à Caſt. [z] See in him and Ribera. [a] Druſ. Caſtal.

This may well give us to conceive what it is, that God here threatens, and how he will deal with thoſe inſtruments of his wrath, which were before deſcribed, if we literally underſtand them of Locuſts and the like vermin, the names of which are made uſe of. They that underſtand thereby other enemies, as Aſſyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, or the like, as we have ſeen, cannot ſo literally neither underſtand this deſcription of their deſtruction. But of whomſoever this northern army (as our Tranſlation renders) be underſtood, and what interpretation ſoever be put on the expreſſions, in this threat of God here againſt them, it is plain that he promiſeth to his people, upon their ſincere repentance, that he will fully clear them of them, and free them from ſuch deſtruction as might be feared from them, however great things they had formerly done, and it might be expected would be farther done by them, did not God by his mighty power interpoſe. This may the following words ſuggeſt to us, which are כי הגדיל לעשות, rendred by Ours in the Text, becauſe he hath done great things; in the Margin, as more agreeable to the letter, he hath magnified to do. The Engliſh from Geneva, becauſe he hath exalted himſelf to do this, as alſo the other ancient Engliſh tranſlation, which as ſeveral other tranſlations in other languages, though ſomething differing in the way of expreſſion, yet as to the ſenſe will eaſily be reconciled, if it may be agreed who is ſpoken of as ſo doing, and likewiſe what is the import of the particle כי Ci, which is the firſt word in the clauſe, and ſhews the connexion of it with the foregoing part of the verſe. It is a particle that hath diverſe ſignifications, among which it may be to our purpoſe to take notice of theſe, [f] Quia, becauſe, cum, poſtquam, when, or whereas, ſeeing that, or after that, etſi, quamvis, although; it is by Ours and moſt Others tranſlated here in the firſt of theſe, becauſe, and and ſo ſeems to give a reaſon why God would do what he ſaith in the former words, but then from it being ſo taken ariſeth a difference between Interpreters in the application of the words following, whether they ſhall be attributed to the enemy, or the locuſts, or to God, which of thoſe ſhall be ſaid to do, or to have done great things; ſome we ſhall find be for one of theſe, ſome for another. Thoſe that underſtand before all along the enemy, whether Aſſyrian, Chaldean, or other, here think him alſo ſpoken of, and the reaſon why God will puniſh him, as is in the foregoing words deſcribed to be given, becauſe he did great things; or magnified to do, or as the Vulgar Latin renders it, quia ſuperbe egit, becauſe he did proudly: and whereas God had ſent them to chaſtiſe his people, [g] did exerciſe their own cruelty beyond meaſure, and uſe all inſolency toward them, and thought that by their own might and power of their own hand they did all this. All things in the words may ſeem agreeable enough to this interpretation, whereas againſt thoſe that underſtand it locuſts, ſeems to lay an [h] objection, that it cannot be properly ſaid of locuſts, that there is pride or inſolency in them, that they ſhould be ſaid ſuperbe agere, to deal proudly, or magnificare ſe, to exalt themſelves, or to have done it out of choice, but according to their nature, wherever they come, and are by God ſent at any time for judgment. This probably may have given occaſion to ſome, who all along before look on the locuſts as ſpoken of, yet here to think that it are not they that are ſaid to have done great things, but God, whoſe name is here to be underſtood as in the next verſe it is expreſſed with the ſame words, and ſo by the verb הגדיל hath done great things, to be underſtood, doth, in the preſent-tenſe, or ſhall do, in the future: of this opinion are ſome very learned Men; ſo Junius and Tremellius render, quia magnifice Jehovah agit, for which Piſcator puts aget, becauſe God doth (or ſhall do) wonderfully, and ſo Caſtalio, tam magna ille faciet, adding as a note in the margin, Scilicet Jovah, i. e. ſo great things ſhall he (that is, Jehovah) do: of which the learned Mr. Lively ſpeaking, ſaith, quod valde probo, which I do exceedingly like; though there be an irregularity in the words ſo underſtood, viz. a change of the perſon from the firſt to the third, for I, in I will remove, &c. he, the third, he will do: but Druſius taking notice of this way, ſaith that he [i] likes not to follow it, as rather arguing with ſuch of the Jews [k] who conſent in it that it is meant of the locuſts: and the Chaldee Paraphraſt Jonathan interprets his doing great things, of his doing many evil things [ארי אסגי למעבד בישין.] He therefore, as many Others, underſtands it of the locuſts, of whom the Vulgar Tranſlation quia ſuperbe egit, becauſe he hath dealt proudly, if it be followed, muſt then, as Pet. a Figu. obſerves, be [l] metaphorically underſtood, becauſe pride cannot be properly attributed to locuſts, and ſignify no more than others more literally render, to do great things; which anciently Ruffinus obſerved, ſuperbe eum egiſſe pronuntians, haud vitium mentis, verum magnitudinem calamitatis expreſſit, i. e. ſaying, that he had dealt proudly, expreſſeth not any fault in the mind, (of the doer) but the greatneſs of the calamity (or the miſchief by him wrought.) But why then ſhould he that was ſent to do this, and did it not of his own ill intention be puniſhed, becauſe he did it? it may be thought therefore that the particle כי ci, if ſo tranſlated, becauſe, hath not ſo much reſpect alone to the words immediately going before, I will remove, &c. and will drive him, &c. but withal to what is ſaid in thoſe before them, wherein it is ſaid, the Lord will be jealous for his land, and pity his people; and ſo it will follow as an effect of that his mercy and his pity, that he would remove thoſe inſtruments of his former diſpleaſure, becauſe they had done great things, as great as he would now ſuffer them to be done to his land and people. This ſeems to have been Kimchi's mind, whoſe words are, כי הארבה הגדיל לעשות רע בארץ והאל ית ריחם על הארץ והמיתו, becauſe the locuſt hath magnified to do (or done great,) evil in the land, but God bleſſed for ever, hath had (or will have) mercy on the land, and deſtroyed (or will deſtroy) him. This ſeems to take away all objection againſt underſtanding it of the locuſts, though כי ci, be rendred, becauſe. Yet are there who think it plainer in that meaning, to take one of thoſe other ſignifications which we mentioned, viz. after that, or although. The firſt of them is taken by the Reverend Diodati, who in Italian renders, dopo che haura fatte coſe grande, after that he hath done great things: The other by the Reverend Mr. Gataker, who ſo [m] gives the meaning of theſe words, quamvis magna geſſerit, although he hath done great things, he, locuſtarum ſcilicet agmen illud, viz. that great company of locuſts, exterminabitur tamen, & internecioni dabitur, fœtore ſolo pone relicto, yet he ſhall be driven out of the land, and given up to ſlaughter, leaving only a ſtink behind him. I ſee not what can be excepted againſt either of theſe in underſtanding the words of locuſts; and they well concur in one meaning, viz. That although thoſe hurtful creatures, ſent by God in his diſpleaſure for puniſhment on the land for the ſins of the people, had as commiſſioned by him done great miſchief, yet they could do no more than God would permit; and therefore after they had done great things, ſuch as might make the people fear, they would continue to do, and bring utter deſtruction upon them, yet God upon their repentance, to ſhew that they were but his army, and did all things only by his order, would not ſuffer them to do more hurt, but wholly take them out of the way, and repair ſuch loſs as had been ſuſtained from them, them, ſo that the people reconciled to him ſhould not need farther to fear them, though they had hitherto found them ſo terrible: Of that in the following words he proceeds to aſſure them. But before we paſs to thoſe words, we may as by way of digreſſion, take notice of ſome allegorical expoſitions that are made of theſe, as that of Cyril, who ſo interprets them of Chriſt's expelling out of us, τὴν ἀκρίδα τὴν νοητὴν, thoſe locuſts conceivable in the mind, thoſe legions of devils which he hath ſhut up in hell, as if drowned in the ſea, and made their ſtink to appear odious, which before did not appear ſo. But more eſpecially take notice of the expoſition which D. Kimchi, and [n] Others obſerve the ancient Jewiſh Doctors to give of theſe, viz. that they do belong to the coming of the Meſſiah, and that by הצפוני Hattſephuni, (which is uſually rendred the northern one) is underſtood (according to another ſignification of the word) the hidden one, i. e. ſay they, יצר הרע שצפון ועומד בלבו של אדם, the evil figment or frame, i. e. as it is uſually underſtood, evil concupiſcence, natural corruption, or original ſin (that fiend) which is hidden and reſideth in the heart of man; and by his ſaying that he will drive it into a land barren and deſolate, to be meant a place where are not found men להתגרות בהם with whom to quarrel; and by his face toward the eaſt ſea, to be intimated, that it ſet its eyes on the firſt ſanctuary (or temple) and deſtroyed it; and by his hinder part toward the utmoſt ſea, that he ſet his eyes במקדש שני והחריבו on the ſecond ſanctuary and deſtroyed it, and ſlew the diſciples of the wiſe men that were in it; and then by what he ſaith, and his ſtink ſhall come up, and his ill ſavour ſhall come up, to be noted, שמניח אומות העולם ומתגרה בשונאי ישראל, that he letting alone the gentile nations contended with the haters of Iſrael, (i. e. with Iſrael, for ſo is meant, and in Yalkut the word שנאי Sonee, haters of, is left out, and put בהם בישראל with them, i. e. with Iſrael, and by, becauſe he hath done great things, according to R. Abai, to be meant, ובתלמידי חכמים יותר מכולם, that it was more buſy with the diſciples of the wiſe men, than with any others. Thus far have we the allegorical explication of the ancienter Rabbins cited by Kimchi (for I ſuppoſe they meant it not for literal, though the word צפוני ſignify as well hidden and ſecret, as northern.) I ſhall not go to ſhew how agreeable their deſcant is to the words, nor what good meaning it makes of them. I ſhall only ſay, that if the words of the text be granted ſo to be meant, as to point at what ſhould be done in the time of the Meſſiah for conquering that hidden enemy, lurking, devouring, and making war in the heart of men, it may be looked on as fully performed in the time of our Lord Jeſus, and by him, ſo as that we may look on him, and not expect any other to come, as the true Meſſias. For by his doctrine have we been taught, and by his grace are enabled to put off, concerning the former converſation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful luſts, which is that יצר הרע Yetſar hara, that inbred corruption, which by הצפוני that hidden one, (as they render it) they would have to be meant, and to be renewed in the ſpirit of our mind, and to put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſs and true holineſs, Epheſ. iv. 22, 23, 24. For with him is the old man crucified, that the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin, nor ſin ſhould reign in our mortal body, that we ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof, nor yield our members as inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin, but ſhould yield ourſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead, and our members as inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God, ſin having no more dominion over us, Rom. vi. 6, 12. For this purpoſe was the Son of God manifeſted that he might deſtroy the works of the devil, 1 John iii. 6. So that whatſoever things in that kind the Jews can in reaſon look on as by theſe words ſignified, and required to be done under the Meſſias, as a proof of his being come, have certainly been ſo fully performed by our Lord Jeſus (as we ſaid) that if the fulfilling of them may (as by this their expoſition of them appears confeſſed) be a proof of it, it muſt appear mere obſtinacy in them to continue to deny him. This expoſition of theirs Ribera excepts againſt as not congruous, firſt, becauſe enemies from abroad being all along ſpoken of, Tſephoni cannot be well rendred the hidden one, any thing at home within them, as that natural concupiſcence is; and again becauſe they hereby ſeem to expect that that inbred original evil ſhould under the Meſſiah be clean taken out of the heart of men, which is contrary to ſound doctrine. But I ſuppoſe he in this miſconſtrueth their meaning, it being a known ſaying among them, that as long as godly men live, הם נלחמים עם יצרן they ſhall have to fight with their concupiſcence: their meaning ſeems to be therefore that they ſhall then receive ſtrength to fight againſt it, and quell it. Arias Montanus ſeems to look on it as well agreeing to the words, and as ſo to be underſtood as we have given the meaning, yet if any ſhall deny it ſo to be, as Ribera doth, I ſhall not contend for it, but be contented with a more literal meaning of theſe words, ſeeing we ſhall ere long in this very chapter meet with ſo plain a teſtimony of Chriſt, as cannot be denied according to the ſtrictneſs of the letter. To proceed therefore here, according to the more literal expoſition of the words which we firſt gave, upon that it follows, ver. 21.

[b] Jun. Trem. Lively, Bochartus. [c] R. Sol. Ab. Ezra, Kimchi. [d] See Cyril. [e] See Druſ. conjectanea. [f] See Schindl. Nold. Conc.

[g] Iſaiah xlvii. 6. [h] Lyra, and ſee Pet. à Fig. [i] Quos ideo non ſecutus ſum quia Hebræi omnes in Locuſt. conſentiunt. [k] R. Sol. Ab. Ezra, Kimchi. [l] Id quod de locuſtis metaphorice intelligitur, quibus proprie non convenit ſuperbia. [m] In his Adverſaria.

21. Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice: for the Lord will do great things.

How ſhould they but fear all manner of evil, when they before heard ſuch terrible judgments deſcribed, which were already either gone forth, or threatned as unavoidably to come upon them? They were, ver. 1. bid, even all the inhabitants of the land, to tremble, be- becauſe of the day of the Lord; and that day, ver. 11. is ſaid to be very terrible: yet here have we clean contrary language, they are bid not to fear, yea to be glad and rejoice. That, which ſo clean alters the caſe with them, is that duty of repentance before required, ver. 16, 17. by them duly performed: While they perſevered in rebellion againſt God, and had him their enemy, there was occaſion and reaſon of continual fear, of weeping and howling (chap. i. 5.) and mourning (hereby) and they were called upon for it, but now being on their repentance reconciled again to him, they are bid not to fear, but to be glad, and rejoice, Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice. O land, i. e. O land of Iſrael, as the Chaldee adds for explication ſake, and by that meant, as Kimchi farther explains, יושביה, let not the inhabitants thereof fear, not unlike to which is Aben Ezra's explication of the ſame word אדמה, where is ſaid the land mourneth, by יושביה the inhabitants thereof, chap. i. 10. and ſo of the word ארץ, earth, (chap. ii. 10.) the earth ſhall quake, by אנשי ארץ the men of the earth. The land itſelf, to which his ſpeech is directed, by a proſopopœia, being not capable of ſuch affections as are here mentioned, it is manifeſt that it may only be ſaid to be ſecure from fear, and to be glad and rejoice, when it yields occaſion of ſo being, and ſo doing to thoſe, whoſe ſecurity, joy, and gladneſs depends much on the thriving and proſpering of it, viz. in its [o] yielding to them food, wine to make glad their hearts, oyl to make their faces to ſhine, and bread to ſtrengthen their hearts; by bringing forth graſs for the cattle, and herb for the ſervice of man. Its failing to bring forth theſe and like things neceſſary for their ſuſtenance, muſt needs bring them to ſo ſad a condition as hath been before deſcribed; his bidding it now not to fear, but rejoice and be glad, is then equivalent to a promiſe of making it again fruitful in ſuch good things, which ſhall give ſure hope and comfort to them whoſe well-being depends on it. That they may not doubt that they ſhall have juſt occaſion of doing what he bids them to do, to put away fear, to be glad and rejoice, he backs his exhortation to it, with a reaſon on which it is grounded, and to enforce it. For the Lord will do great things. That the Lord can do great things, even whatſoever pleaſeth him in heaven and earth, they having experience of all his wonders wrought for their forefathers, could not doubt; when then he ſaith he will do great things, they may be aſſured they ſhall be as certain, as if already done, and indeed the verb הגדיל Higdil, doth properly ſignify hath done great things, and is ſo by moſt ancient, as well as diverſe modern Interpreters, tranſlated, as by the Chaldee ארי אסגי ויי לאעבד; by the LXX. ὅτι ἐμεγάλυνε κύριος τοῦ ποιῆσαι; and by the Syriack ܡܛܠ ܕܐܪܒܐ ܡܪܝܐ ܠܡܥܒܕ, becauſe the Lord hath exalted himſelf to do, though the Latin Interpreter of it, renders it in the future, quoniam Dominus magnifice aget; by both the Arabick verſions alſo; the MS. אן אללה קד עטם אלפעל, and the printed, لان الرب عظم صنيعه for the Lord hath made great his works, or his doings; and ſo among modern Tranſlators, by Munſter, agendo magnifice egit; and in the Interlineary, magnificavit Dominus [p] ad faciendum; but Ours (agreeing therein with [q] many Others) chooſe rather to render it in the future-tenſe, will do, aget, or faciet, taking it, though it be in Hebrew in the præter-tenſe, yet not to denote what he had already done, but what he would as certainly do, it being the uſual ſtile of ſcripture, in ſo ſpeaking of what God had determined to do, though not yet effected. The very ſame words, except that the name יהוה is not expreſſed with them (viz. Higdil leaſoth) conclude the foregoing verſe, as theſe do this, and are therefore (as we have ſeen) by ſeveral thought to have there the ſame meaning as here, and to be ſpoken of God; his name being in them underſtood, though not mentioned; but by Others, whom I think we may rather chooſe to follow, not ſo, but of thoſe inſtruments before deſcribed, which God had made uſe of for executing his judgments on his people periſhing in rebellion againſt him, and ſo what is here ſaid, to be ſpoken, though in the ſame words, in oppoſition to what is there ſaid, and the great things there to be meant בישן Biſhan, as the Chaldee explains it, [r] evil things, but here טבין Tobin, good things. Yet will all difference, which may ſeem to be between the words in that place and this, be eaſily reconciled, the power by which thoſe great evil things there, and theſe good here were wrought, being ſtill originally the ſame, viz. the power of God, though there ſet forth is exerted by ſuch inſtruments of evil as he employed for that end, here as more immediately by himſelf ſhewed forth. Though it be there ſaid of the locuſt, he hath done great things, it is becauſe God gave him power ſo to do, and the ſame power of God is here ſaid ſhall do great things, in not only taking away from him that power again, but taking even him alſo, that ſeemed to have ſuch power, out of the way, and making good to the people that damage, which by him, while God gave him leave, they had ſuſtained; ſo that the ſame power, which before, while they were at enmity with him, was a ground to them of fearing, is now to them, at peace with him, a ground not to fear. And on the ſame ground proceeds he to ſpeak in the like conſolatory words to the beaſts of the field alſo, which though they had not reaſon to diſcern the cauſe, yet had ſenſe to perceive the great alteration betwixt their former condition under God's diſpleaſure with the people, and their preſent under his favour to them reſtored: to them therefore he ſaith in the next words as follows.

[n] Yalkut, R. Solom.

22. Be

[o] Pſalm civ. 14, 15: Kimchi. [p] Or, ut faceret, Margin. [q] Pagn. Tig. Caſt. Jun. Trem. [r] See Aben Ezra, 22. Be not afraid, ye beaſts of the field: for the paſtures of the wilderneſs do ſpring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their ſtrength.

Of thoſe beaſts of the field is above, chap. i. 18. ſaid, that they groaned, and were perplexed, and ver. 20. The beaſts of the field cry alſo unto thee, and the reaſon of their ſo doing given, becauſe they had no paſture, and becauſe the rivers of waters were dried up, and the fire had devoured the paſtures of the wilderneſs. Here that they may not continue ſo to cry, or to ſhew that they ſhall not have occaſion ſo to do, they are bid not to fear, in regard that they ſhall find all things contrary, as to the ſatisfying their neceſſities, through which they did formerly ſo cry out. Though the filling of the rivers be not mentioned, yet (as Kimchi obſerves) ſeems it neceſſarily underſtood with the expreſſing of the reſtoring of the other defects, as to the paſtures of the wilderneſs, which having been as by fire devoured, he ſaith do now ſpring. Deſervedly may this be reckoned among the great things of the Lord's doing, that ſo great a deſolation whereby the fruitful land was turned into meer barrenneſs, wherein neither men nor beaſts could find food, ſhould by his power be on a ſudden changed again into a garden of Eden, and afford all things neceſſary for the being and well being of both. For ſo do the words here declare, as that the parched paſtures ſhould again ſpring, ſo alſo the tree which above he ſaid was withered (chap. i. 12) and the fig-tree and the vine, which there alſo he ſaith languiſhed, and were dried up, ſhould yield their ſtrength, i. e. put forth plenty of fruit, the greateſt that could be expected from them. What change of behaviour therefore, ſhould be in them on this change of things, by the bleſſing of God reconciled to them, he proceeds farther to ſhew in the next verſe alſo.

23. Be glad then ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cauſe to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the firſt month.

Ye children of Zion, ye inhabitants of Jeruſalem, part of which was built on mount Zion. They that before were called on to turn unto the Lord with weeping and with mourning in token of repentance, are now upon their repentance, and God's gracious acceptance thereof, bid on the contrary to rejoice in the Lord their God. In the Lord, not ſo much in the plenty of ſuch good things, as upon their repentance they had received, or ſhould receive, having been before deprived of them, as [s] thoſe beaſts of the field in the former words, as in the favour of the donor thereof, who thereby teſtified the renewing of his loving kindneſs towards them, and that he owned them, as their God. For to aſſure them that he is ſo, he adds in expreſſion of his great goodneſs to them, For he hath given you the former rain moderately, &c. Hath given, or as [t] Others, will give, viz. as certainly as if he had already given; this, as we have elſewhere ſeen, being the import of the preter-tenſe, put in place of the future, viz. to denote the certainty of it.

אֶת הַמּוֹרֶה לִצְדָקָה, Eth hammoreh litſdakah. Theſe words our Tranſlators rendring in the text, the former rain moderately, do in the margin put as another tranſlation, which the words will likewiſe well bear, a teacher of righteouſneſs; which is the rendring that here the Vulgar Latin, and moſt Others alſo among the modern do give, and great contention is there among Expoſitors about it; the ground of which is from the ambiguous ſignification of the word מוֹרֶה Moreh, which indifferently ſignifies either a teacher, or rain. The root of the word is יָרָה yarah, which is found eſpecially in three ſignifications. The firſt, perhaps more proper, of caſting, darting or ſhooting; the ſecond of raining (or diſtilling); the third of teaching or inſtructing, and the noun מוֹרֶה Moreh thence derived, hath agreeably thereto three ſignifications, as firſt, a ſhooter or archer, as 1 Sam. xxxi. 3. and 2 Sam. xi. 24. Secondly, of rain, as Pſalm lxxxiv. 7. and by the confeſſion of all Expoſitors in what follows in this verſe. Thirdly, of a teacher, as Job xxxvi. 22. Iſaiah ix. 15. Habak. ii. 18, &c. The firſt of theſe doth not to any ſeem agreeable in this place; concerning the two latter there is (as we ſaid) great contention, which of them ſhould be here taken. If we ſhould go by the number of abetters, that, I ſuppoſe, in the laſt place named, viz. of teacher, would have the preeminence. For not only the ancient Latin, and thoſe Expoſitors that follow it as moſt authentic, but many Others more modern, who make, or follow, other tranſlations, whether in Latin or other languages, chooſe to prefer it. So Pagnin, Doctorem illum juſtitiæ, that teacher of righteouſneſs. The Tigurin verſion, as likewiſe Caſtalio, Doctorem ad juſtitiam, an inſtructer to righteouſneſs. Munſter, qui doceat juſtitiam, which may teach righteouſneſs. So two Spaniſh tranſlations, one by a Chriſtian, and having the privilege of the Duke of Ferrara, which hath, ſennador de juſtitia, a teacher of juſtice; the other, I ſuppoſe, from the Jews, yet allowed by the Inquiſitors, to the ſame purpoſe hath, & amoſtrador de juſtedad. Such Expoſitors which follow them, being many, and of great note and learning, I omit the naming of: with theſe, as to the ſignification of this word, agree alſo ſeveral of the Jews, as the Chaldee Paraphraſt who renders, אתיב לכון ית מלפנון בוכו hath reſtored to you your inſtructer (or as Others render inſtructers) to righteouſneſs, and ſo R. Solomon expounds it, your Prophets, המורים אתכם; who teach you, לשוב אלי כדי לצדק אתכם, to return unto me that I may juſtify you, or as a MS.

[s] Calvin. [t] Jun. Trem. Dedit pro dabit, Druſ.

MS. אליו כדו לצדק אתכם, unto him that he may juſtify you. R. Japhet alſo cited by Aben Ezra, by המורה Hammoreh, will make to be underſtood, הנביא שהוא מורה אותם בדרך צדק, a Prophet that ſhall inſtruct them in the way of righteouſneſs, ſo that good ſhall come unto them. Abarbinel likewiſe takes it in that ſignification expounding the words, But ye O children of Zion in particular above all other nations, be glad and rejoice in the Lord your God; for in him ye ſhall have perfect joy, in the time of your captivity; for he will give to you a teacher of (or inſtructer to righteouſneſs,) והוא מלך המשיח שיורה את הדרך ילכו בה ואת המעשה אשר יעשון and he is the King Meſſias, which ſhall teach them the way in which they ſhall walk, and ſuch things as they ſhall do. Among thoſe that ſo take the word in that ſignification, there is indeed difference concerning who ſhould be meant by this teacher; Some underſtanding [u] any Prophets that he ſhould ſend, as [w] Haggai, Zacharias, Malachias, &c. [x] Others Iſaias; Others King Hezechiah, as [y] Ruffinus; but the moſt Meſſias or Chriſt; mean while agreeing all in that ſignification of the word. But on the other ſide, Others both Jews and Chriſtians prefer the ſignification of rain, as thinking it to make a plainer ſenſe, and more agreeable to the place. So Aben Ezra having mentioned the opinion of Japhet, which we have ſeen, ſaith that in his opinion מורה Moreh here is the ſame that יורה yoreh (which, Deut. xi. 14. Ours tranſlate the firſt rain.) Kimchi alſo thinks it here to be the ſame that יורה yoreh, this he ſaith, that in ſaying, he will give them לצדקה litſdekah in juſtice (or according to righteouſneſs) he means in that righteouſneſs (or mercy) which he ſhewed them, after he paſſed over their iniquity, and viſited them with rain. R. Tanchum likewiſe takes it in the ſame ſignification with yoreh, and לצדקה to juſtice to be either the ſame with בצדקה, i. e. بعدل لما تبتم الي in equity after you have returned by repentance to me, or elſe بلا استحقاق منكم of mercy without deſert (in or) from you, or on your part. The MS. Arabick alſo (done from the Hebrew) الذي اعطاكم [z] البكير للعدالة who hath given you Albakir, the former rain, to equality (or in juſt meaſure.) Modern Interpreters alſo, whether in Latin or other languages, ſeveral of them prefer this ſignification; ſo Calvin, mentioning both, ſaith of that other, non videtur ferre hunc ſenſum circumſtantia loci, that the circumſtance of the place doth not ſeem well to bear that ſenſe; the Prophet yet ſpeaking to them of temporal benefits (and not of ſpiritual, of which he ſpeaketh not till verſe 28. in theſe verſes before) to inſtruct them by degrees for a right conceiving of them, and that it is therefore here to be rendred pluviam, rain, and ſo Junius and Tremellius, ipſum imbrem tempeſtivum juſte, the ſeaſonable ſhower itſelf juſtly, for which Piſcator would have to be put pluviam tempeſtivam, juſto tempore, the ſeaſonable rain in its juſt time. So Diodati in his Italian verſion, e'ha data pioggia giuſtamente hath given you rain juſtly. So a French tranſlation printed at Geneva 1637. la pluye ſelon juſtice (and I ſuppoſe others whom I have not ſeen or underſtand not) and with theſe agree our neweſt Tranſlators (whom we follow) putting in the text, the former rain, as alſo Others, as that from Geneva, rain. The LXX. here give a different expreſſion from either of thoſe, rendring τὰ βρώματα εἰς δικαιοσύνην, meat or food to juſtice (or righteouſneſs) or, as [a] Some copies, δικαιοσύνης, of righteouſneſs, with which agrees the Syriack ܠܙܕܩܬܐ ܕܡܙܘܢ eſcam juſtitiæ; and the printed Arabick with the former, rendring الاطعمة للعدل cibos ad æquitatem, meat to juſtice: yet may we with [b] Some look on theſe, not as following any other rendring, nor taking the word מורה moreh in any other ſignification than that of rain, but only to have expreſſed the effect inſtead of, or meant by the cauſe, viz. that of things apt for food brought ſo out of the earth by that ſeaſonable rain, and ſo to mean the ſame with thoſe that render it by rain.

For that word, which Ours in the text render moderately, and in the margin obſerve to ſound, according to righteouſneſs; the Geneva Engliſh render it, the rain of righteouſneſs; but another ancient tranſlation agreeably to the new, which hath given you moderate rain. The known and moſt uſual ſignification of the word צדקה Tſedekah, is righteouſneſs, but with that latitude as to comprehend what is juſt and equal, and what is of bounty and beneficence alſo, and likewiſe [c] truth (which is the moſt frequent uſe of it in the Arabick tongue) and in any of theſe may it be taken, according to the matter ſpoken of, and as ſhall be moſt agreeable to it. It may ſeem in this place to comprehend all of them, viz. that God would ſo give them rain upon their repentance, as to approve himſelf juſt in his promiſes of mercy to penitent ſinners; ſuch rain as ſhould be a token of his great bounty and free mercy to them; ſuch as ſhould be in [d] juſt time, and in [e] juſt meaſure (which Ours, I ſuppoſe, expreſs by moderately) to ſupply their neceſſities, neither defective, ſo as to fail to do them good, as far as was requiſite for bringing forth in plenty the fruits of the earth, ſo as not to wither; not exceſſive, ſo as to [f] corrupt and rot them: though Interpreters ſeem to reſpect and expreſs ſome of them one of theſe ſignifications of the root more particularly, others another; yet they cannot but at once take in the others with it: we may well comprehend all under according to righteouſneſs.

In farther declaration of the fulneſs of his bounty and goodneſs to them, he adds in the next words, and he will cauſe to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain, גשם Geſhem, the rain, this word ſeems more [g] generally to ſignify rain, the other two Moreh, the former rain, and Malkuſh, the latter rain, more particularly ſuch, as fell at ſuch ſeaſons, viz. the [h] firſt of them, at or after the time of ſowing, which made the corn to grow; the ſecond towards harveſt time, to fill it, that it might kindly ripen; they are elſewhere alſo ſo joined together, as Deut. xi. 14. and there put as diſtinct ſorts of rain, under the general name for rain, only that for that general name there is put מטר Mator (which ſo likewiſe ſignifieth in the Syriack and Arabick tongues) for which is here גשם Geſhem, which is an argument that it, as we ſaid, doth alſo ſignify the ſame with that, rain [i] in general, and not only violent rain, as [k] Some ſeem to think; and inſtead of מורה Moreh, there is יורה yoreh, being, though with difference in the firſt letter, the ſame in ſignification. Theſe laſt two St. James likewiſe joins, James v. 7. calling them in Greek πρωΐμον and ὄψιμον, as they are here by the LXX. rendred, and by Ours there rendred the early and the latter rain, as here the former and the latter rain.

[u] R. Solomon, R. Japhet, Lyra. [w] See Ch. à Caſtro. [x] Grot. [y] Et nonnulli alii, Ch. à Caſtro. [z] The Arab. Lexicographers, mean that الباكور Albacur. [a] See various readings in Bib. Francford, 1597. [b] See Chr. à Caſtro, probat hunc ſenſum verſio LXX. quoniam dedit vobis eſcas ſeu alimenta juſtitiæ vel in juſtitiam, eſcas ſc. quæ ex pluvia, Moreh, proveniunt, quibus eſcantur & lætantur. [c] Veracitas, Full. cap. Concord. [d] Juſto tempore, Piſcat. [e] Juſta menſura. Lively. [f] See chap. i. 17.

The word מורה Moreh, being the ſame in form and writing with that in the preceding words, and being here by general conſent of Interpreters rendred in the notion of rain, ſeems to [l] Some an argument that in the former place it ought to be taken in its other ſignification of a teacher. But it is not neceſſary that it ſhould be taken in different notions, the taking it in the ſame in both places (viz. in the firſt, as it is by all in the ſecond, for rain) will not be a ſuperfluous repetition, but have, as joined with the other words, great weight and emphaſis in it, for expreſſing (as we ſaid) the full meaſure and perfection of God's bleſſings to them; while in the firſt place having promiſed that he will give them the former rain, moderately, or according to juſtice, of which they ſeemed at the preſent to have need: he here ſeems to add, yea not only ſo, but all convenient rain at its due ſeaſon alſo; and as the former ſo the latter alſo, ſo as that his bleſſing ſhall not be imperfect or defective in any part, but ſuch as ſhall ſupply all their needs, and at all neceſſary times as occaſion required, which ſeems farther intimated by what is added בראשון, which Ours render in the firſt month, as it is alſo in former Engliſh tranſlations read. Great difference is there in the rendring and giving the meaning of this word among Interpreters. Many ſo render it as Ours do by underſtanding [m] month, and the Chaldee Paraphraſt expreſſeth by name, in the month Niſan, which if it be followed, this deſignation of time Piſcator notes muſt be referred to only the latter word מלקוש Malkoſh, the latter rain, for between the falling of that and the Moreh, the former rain, there were betwixt the ſeaſons or months; in which the one and the other ordinarily fell the [n] ſpace of ſeveral months; ſo that it will not be eaſy to underſtand how they ſhould be ſaid to fall both in the ſame month. The Jews, which follow that way, ſtrive to expedite the matter by referring it to a miracle, as Kimchi cites out of them, viz. that in that year both thoſe rains fell in that one month, ſo that whereas there had not in it before that fallen any rain, there did on the firſt day of the month Niſan, or March, fall the former rain, which uſually fell in Marcheſvan October, and on the fifth, the latter rain; betwixt which days they ſowed their corn, which by the ſixteenth day grew to ripeneſs, ſo that in eleven days, by reaſon of thoſe two rains falling otherwiſe than in other years, the corn came to that perfection for which ordinarily ſix months were required. The ſame ſtory is referred to by R. Solomon, and Aben Ezra, who ſeems to believe it, as done במעשה נס by way of miraculous ſign, according to what is ſaid, ver. 21. that the Lord would do great things. From being put on the difficulty of believing this ſtory, though following this rendring (viz. in the firſt month) we are ſecured by that note, that this is to be underſtood only of the latter rain, that it ſhall then be given, the former having been before in its due ſeaſon given. Thus Kimchi ſeems to take it explaining it, to mean that he ſent to them the firſt rain called Moreh in its proper time, which was the month Marcheſvan, and likewiſe the Malkoſh (or latter rain) in its ſeaſon, which is the firſt month, which is Niſan: and ſo I ſuppoſe our Tranſlators took it to be meant, by either putting a comma, or pauſe, betwixt the words, former rain, and the following words, but none between latter rain, and in the firſt month. But Others avoid all difficulty in this place by not looking on month at all here underſtood. R. Tanchum looks on it as not proper at all, that the word ראשון firſt, be underſtood for חודש הראשון the firſt month, which is Niſan, לאן דלך ליס דלך אואן אלמטר becauſe that, he ſaith, it [o] is not due ſeaſon for rain. He therefore, as many Others, prefer other rendrings of the word; and different other ways are yet taken in it. He gives us them, viz. theſe two, 1*ſt*, That by בראשון, in the firſt, may be meant פי אול וקתה in its firſt time, or the firſt of its ſeaſon, as ſoon as it ſhall be ſeaſonable or needful. With this agrees that rendring of Junius and Tremellius, primo quoque tempore, at every firſt time, as likewiſe that of Caſtalio, in primis, with the firſt, all meaning, as Mr. Lively explains it, mature cum primum ea opus eſt, [p] in good time, as ſoon as there ſhall be need of it: This as the Rabbin puts in the firſt place, ſo he ſeems to like the beſt. 2*dly*, That (as Others ſay) as he he obſerves, may be meant the ſame as by בראשון (as at firſt or formerly) viz. כחאלכם אלאולי as in (or according to) your firſt or former condition, viz. before the late damage, for puniſhment on their ſins, had come upon them. This is that tranſlation which the LXX. give of theſe words, Καθὼς ἔμπροσθεν, as before (or as formerly) and the printed Arabick following them كما من قبل; the Syriack alſo ܐܝܟ ܕܩܕܡ ut antea, as before; and the Vulgar Latin likewiſe, ſicut in principio, as in the beginning; and in this ſenſe is it by [q] Others more modern alſo taken. This makes [r] ſeveral here to conjecture a various rendring, and that inſtead of בראשון Bariſhon, in the firſt, they read בראשון Cariſhon, as the firſt; haud dubie, ſaith Druſius, ſpeaking of the LXX. כ (c) pro ב (b) without doubt they read c for b. But I rather think it without doubt that they did not, but only underſtood the particle כ Ca, ſignifying as, though not expreſſed (as other when it is, as Ribera obſerves, oft omitted) or elſe took the meaning of in the firſt, or former, to be the ſame with as heretofore. So we ſee that thoſe Jews, whom R. Tanchum ſpeaks of, underſtood it, who we may be ſure did not read otherwiſe than we now have it, which likewiſe is confirmed by what Abarbinel ſaith, that בראשון here is as much as כבראשונה, as at firſt, or in former times, that ſo in the words may be a promiſe שיתברכו תבואות הארץ כאשר היו בימי קדם that the fruits of the earth ſhall be bleſſed as in former days. So that if we follow this interpretation according to the opinion of them, we need not change our reading of the words, but have a perſpicuous meaning of them.

[g] Calvin. [h] Druſ. [i] Reuchlin. Concord. [k] Kimchi, Rad. [l] Ribera. [m] So the MS. Arab. في الشهر الاول. [n] A quorum una ad alteram ſex minimum menſes ſolent intercedere, Merc. ימים רבים Many days, Aben Ezra. [o] Know not from whom. So notes Tarnovius, quod hæc pluvia in illo menſe non ſit data. [p] Agreeably to this way Calvin, in tempore ſuo, i. e. unamquamque pluviam, tempeſtive & opportune, ſo that Grotius expreſſeth it, both in ſeed time and harveſt he will give ſeaſonable weather.

Now though both thoſe, who do render the word מורה moreh in the firſt place, by a teacher, and by rain, do agree all in rendring it in the ſecond place by the former rain; yet do they in giving the meaning of it ſtill differ: they who render it in that firſt place, a teacher, here many of them underſtanding by rain mentioned ſpiritual good things belonging to the kingdom of Chriſt: [s] as the happy ſucceſs of the goſpel, and propagation of it like corn, which, by the bleſſing of ſeaſonable rain watering it, groweth and increaſeth abundantly, or [t] copiam fructuum & bonorum ſpiritualium per Chriſtum, plenty of good fruit and ſpiritual good things conferred in Chriſt, [u] gratiam prævenientem & co-operantem, & copiam doctrinæ & auxiliorum Dei, preventing and co-operating grace, plenty [w] of heavenly grace and doctrine, and of helps from God, with ſuch like other expreſſions, taking the words [x] allegorice & principalius, as one of them ſpeaks, allegorically and more principally, to be ſpoken of ſpiritual good things, as we ſaid: but they, who render it in the firſt place by rain, both there and here underſtanding it literally of the bleſſing of ſeaſonable rains, whereby ſhould be produced to them ſuch good effects, as were in the foregoing verſe mentioned, and in the following farther deſcribed; which, as the plainer way, we follow, as likewiſe beſt agreeing to the next words, though in them alſo many proſecute the allegory mentioned. The words are,

24. And the floor ſhall be full of wheat, and the fats ſhall overflow with wine and oyl.

A great alteration in their condition, from what they were before in, do theſe words deſcribe. The corn before, chap. i. 10. is ſaid to be waſted, the new wine to be dried up, and the oyl to languiſh; and ver. 17. the garners to have been laid deſolate, and the barns broken down, becauſe there was no corn to put in them, and that both the meat-offerings and the drink-offerings were cut off, ver. 9. with the like expreſſions of extreme penury, and want of all things neceſſary for their own uſe, or whereby they might ſerve God. So was it with them while they continued in their rebellion, and God's anger and judgments were upon them. But now upon their turning to God, and his being turned unto them, and having received them into his favour, things are here deſcribed as clean contrary, and they are aſſured of the greateſt plenty of all good things, which may be in words expreſſed. The floors of their barns ſhall be full of wheat, and their fats overflow with wine and oyl, under theſe three, wheat (or corn) wine and oyl, ſeem comprehended all things neceſſary for the uſe of man, [y] and by the failure of theſe are uſually deſcribed dearth or famine, and want of all good things needful for comfortable living; and on the contrary by the abounding of them, fertility and plenty of all ſuch things, and ſuch here is promiſed, even to fulneſs and overflowing. The verb השיקו heſhiku, rendred, overflow, is (I think) not elſewhere found in ſcripture, in this form and that ſignification, which it ſeems here to require, but in this place, and again, chap. iii. 13. which I ſuppoſe to be the occaſion that Expoſitors do not at all here agree in the rendring of it. In the Interlineary, as corrected by Arias Montanus, it is in the text put, ſtridebunt torcularia, the wine (or olive) preſſes ſhall make a noiſe: and ſo in the Tigurin, (although in both, in the margin, redundabunt, ſhall overflow.) They appear to follow in it R. Solomon, who ſaith (I know not on what authority but his own) that it denotes השמעת קול בשהקילוח יורד מן הגת אל תוך הקב, the making a noiſe by the ſtream of the liquor running from the preſs into the fat (or through) for ſo withal he notes that יקב is properly the הבור pit or fat, which is before the preſs: for which reaſon Druſius changeth the old tranſlation of it from torcularia, wine-preſſes, into lacus torcularis, as Junius and Tremellius render it, torcularium lacus, the fats of the wine-preſſes, which receive what is preſſed out by them.

[q] Geneva Notes, and Pet. à Fig. [r] Druſius, Mercer, &c. Tarnov. Pet. à Fig. [s] Mercer, and ſee Ribera, and Ch. à Caſtro. [t] Tirin. [u] Menoch. and ſee Ar. Mont. [w] Intellige gratiam excelſam, & doctrinam. [x] Tirinus. [y] Pet. à Fig.

them. Ab. Ezra, would have it here taken in the ſame ſenſe that משיקורת Maſhikoth, Ezek. iii. 13. which is by Ours there rendred, touched, or as in the margin, kiſſed, the word being looked on as properly ſo ſignifying.) But what he would have to be the meaning, he doth not declare, perhaps he would have it meant, that through abundance of wine and oyl, they ſhould have need of ſeveral fats or veſſels to receive it, ſet near one to another to make room for them; but that word there is looked on as derived from the word נשק Naſhak, ſignifying properly to kiſs, and ſo conſequently to touch one another, or the like; but this here from שוק, from which the noun שוק ſhok, hath the notion both of a leg and of a ſtreet. As for the verb in the form that here it is in, it is by the moſt, whether Jews, except thoſe whom we have mentioned, or Chriſtians, agreed on to have the ſignification of running over, or overflowing: So by the Chaldee rendring, יטיפון; and Kimchi ſaith it to be the ſame with הציפו hetſiphu, from צוף, and R. Tanchum (as the MS. Arabick verſion) in Arabick renders it by تفيض, which all ſignify to the ſame purpoſe of ſwimming, flowing, or overflowing, as likewiſe what the LXX. have ὑπερχυθήσονται, the Vulgar Latin, redundabunt, the Syriack, ܢܦܩܘܢ, the MS. Arabick, تفيض, the printed Arabick, تتدفق, all which will be well expreſſed by what Ours have, ſhall overflow. To which of thoſe ſignifications of the noun this given to the verb ſhould be referred, ſeems doubted. The accurately learned Mr. Nicholas Fuller takes that wherein it ſignifies a leg, the inſtrument of running, and looks on the primary ſignification of it to be, currere, diſcurrere, excurrere, to run, to run about, or abroad, to run out, as if we ſhould ſay, crurare, to leg it (or foot it) and then by way of metaphor, in things that have not legs, effluendi ac redundandi notio, the notion of running out and overflowing. But Junius and Tremellius refer it to that other notion, whereby it ſignifies a ſtreet, (though that alſo may be referred to the former, as being a place of concourſe, and wherein people run about) expreſſing it in their rendring, plateaſque perfundent torcularium lacus muſto & oleo, and the fats of the preſſes ſhall overſpread the ſtreets with wine and oyl, as if they ſhould for abundance ſo overflow, as even to make thoſe liquors run about the ſtreets; whatever be ſaid, as to the nicety of the derivation and deduction of the word, manifeſt it is from what follows, that great abundance of the things named is here by it intimated: and the ſignification of it in this kind may alſo be illuſtrated and confirmed from the uſe of the ſame theme in the Arabick tongue, which is known much to agree with the Hebrew. For in that from the theme, سوق the firſt conjugation of the verb ساق Saka, denotes to drive on, or put forward; in the ſixth تساوق taſawaka, to follow one another, and to go ſo cloſe as to preſs or juſtle one another; and in the ſeventh انساق Enſaka; (as Grotius out of the Dictionary of Ebn Maruph) Fluxit & progreſſus eſt, to flow and to go forward, to note ſtore, through which things follow one another. They, which ſtill adhere to the allegorical meaning of the words, will tell us that the thing here underſtood is likewiſe, [z] Evangelii diffuſio per totum orbem, the overſpreading of the goſpel through the whole world. [a] Some go on more particularly to ſay, that by the floors being full of wheat, &c. are underſtood plenty of graces and virtues given by Chriſt to particular churches, which are meant by floors, olive-yards, and vine-yards, and the preſſes (or fats) in which wine and oyl are preſſed out, to be, Gymnaſia, Monaſteria, Collegia, &c. Schools, Monaſteries, Colleges, and other like places; and alſo perſecutions and tribulations, quibus vinum ſapientiæ, & fortitudinis, ac oleum conſolationis divinæ exprimitur & hauritur, by which the wine of wiſdom and fortitude, and the oyl of divine conſolation is preſt out. But however theſe words may by way of compariſon be applied, I ſuppoſe the moſt plain and proper way of expounding them is here alſo according to the literal ſenſe, as likewiſe in the two next verſes, wherein he farther declares what great good things God will beſtow on them upon their repentance, which he had for puniſhment of their ſins before deprived them of, that [b] he would make them glad according to the days wherein he had afflicted them, and the years wherein he had ſeen evil. So he himſelf ſaith unto them by the mouth of his Prophet, ושלמתי, &c.

25. And I will reſtore to you the years that the locuſt hath eaten, the canker-worm and the caterpiller, and the palmer-worm, my great army which I ſent among you.

The damage, which they had for ſeveral years received by thoſe devouring creatures mentioned, which waſted all the fruits of the earth, ſo that they had not any thing left whereby to ſubſiſt, he would now henceforward make good to them, by giving them an extraordinary plenty, and preſerving it for their uſe. The locuſt, the cankerworm, the caterpiller, and the palmer-worm; theſe are the ſame that were above mentioned, chap. i. though in different order. There the הגזם haggezem, rendred the caterpiller, is put in the firſt place, here the laſt; which the learned Bochartus looks on, as an evident proof that theſe vermin here named came altogether in one year, and not ſingly, one ſort in one year, and another in another, as ſome of the Jewiſh Interpreters would have it; for then he would not have named that in, or for, the fourth year, which was in the other place ſaid to come in the firſt, as we have on that place obſerved. All theſe probably came together, and ſo continued to do for ſome years, as the word השנים haſhanim, years, put in the plural number ſhews. And of theſe he ſaith, my my great army which I ſent among you. We heard above, ver. 11. of this army, his very great camp: Who by that his army and camp are meant, we have expreſſed by the names of locuſt, canker-worm, caterpiller, and palmer-worm, or ſuch creatures as are by thoſe names in the Hebrew, which are by Ours ſo rendred, meant; whether they were exactly the ſame, or others of like nature, not ſo well known to us in theſe countries: and the reaſon why he calls them his army is expreſſed, viz. becauſe he ſent them among them. They came not by chance, nor by any ordinary natural neceſſary reaſon, but were of his ſending, to do his will, and execute his commands. The queſtion here ſtill will be the ſame which hath all along been in this prophecy, even from the 4th verſe of the firſt chapter, whether by thoſe names are literally to be underſtood thoſe creatures by them ſignified, or ſome other to them compared, in reſpect to the miſchief by them wrought. They are by many taken in their proper ſignification, and to call them God's army will be a language very eaſily admitted by thoſe, among whom thoſe creatures are more uſual and familiarly known. So among the Arabians to call locuſts the army of God, is an expreſſion well known, and uſed by [c] Mahomet himſelf, who forbad to kill them, becauſe they were جند الله الاعظم the army of God Almighty: and it is a ſtory received among them, that there fell between his hands, or before him, a locuſt, on whoſe wings was written, بالعبرانية in Hebrew, نحن جند الله الاكبر, we are the army of the moſt great God. However fabulous this ſtory be, it matters not, it makes good what ſufficeth for our preſent purpoſe, viz. to prove that it is proper and congruous to apply the title of God's army to locuſts; without its being written on their wings, it is very legible that they are ſo, by the great things which they have, being by him ſent and impowered, often done, not uſual, or beyond what could by the greateſt and ſtrongeſt armies of men be done for working deſtruction in the earth. So that there is no exception againſt applying to them the word literally taken, nor any reaſon for any incongruity in the language why we ſhould not think it to be meant really of them; and that verb eaten, being uſed to expreſs that miſchief that they did, well agrees to them. The rendring here of the Vulgar Latin, fortitudo mea magna, or [d] Others to the ſame purpoſe, my great power, or ſtrength, what before it rendred, ver. 11. exercitus, army, doth not make any difference. The Hebrew word is in both places the ſame, viz. חיל Chail, and hath both theſe ſignifications, which in this caſe here ſeem equivalent. They are for their multitude deſervedly called God's army, for the great things that by him ordered they did, his great power and ſtrength. But notwithſtanding that the words may ſo fitly be applied to locuſts, and ſuch like hurtful creatures, are they by Some underſtood otherwiſe, viz. of men, enemies and authors of miſchief to them. So by the Chaldee Paraphraſt is the verſe expounded, and I will repay (or reſtore) to you good years for thoſe years, דבזו יתכון עמזיא אומיא ולישניא ושלטוניא ומלכותא פורענות חילי רבא דשלחית בכון, in which people, nations and languages, and princes (or principalities), and kingdoms of revenge (or ordained for revenge, or, as [e] Others, the vengeance of my great army,) my great army which I ſent againſt you, ſpoiled you: who, D. Kimchi thinks, doth in ſo expounding them, take them to be a prophecy to be fulfilled in the times of the Meſſiah.) Abarbinel underſtands by them to be meant the four kingdoms, which before (chap. i. 4.) he would have to be intimated by thoſe names of thoſe four deſtructive creatures, and thoſe to be called by God my great army which I ſent among you כי הם היו חיל השם ושלוחי השגחתו להעניש את ישראל על ידיהם, becauſe they were the forces of God, and meſſengers of his providence for the puniſhing of Iſrael by them; and ſo thinks the good things here promiſed to be great plenty, which after their reſtauration from their captivity they ſhall enjoy. To omit Others which take much the ſame way, Grotius thinks by them to be underſtood [f] Pul, [g] Tilgathpilneſer, [h] Shalmaneſer, and [i] Sennacherib, four Aſſyrian Kings, who invaded the land of Iſrael and Judah, and did great miſchief therein. Of any of theſe named may it be ſaid that they were God's army, and by him ſent, as he ſaith of the Aſſyrian, that he was the rod of his anger, and that the ſtaff in their hand was his indignation, Iſaiah x. 5. All the great things that they did were by his power, not their own; they were without that as contemptible as the vileſt worms, and he could as eaſily deſtroy them, as appears by what became of Sennacherib and his army, Iſaiah xxxvi, &c. And by his power could the moſt contemptible among creatures do as great miſchief to any people, as the greateſt of them, as appears in the plagues of Egypt. There is no need therefore that we ſhould here leave the letter of the text, and fly to a figure for underſtanding the weak creatures here mentioned of the ſtrongeſt kings or nations. Thoſe creatures could fulfil God's command for puniſhment of a ſinful people as fully as any of them: Nor more need have we here to fly with Others to a continued allegory, according to which the happineſs here promiſed [k] will be that, which under Chriſt and the Goſpel ſhould be enjoyed above that under the more barren times under the law, while men were under the tyranny of death and the devil; or that here are ſpiritual bleſſings meant, and things [l] concerning the happineſs of the ſoul, and thoſe heavenly divine fruits, which the earth (or ſoil) of humane nature, enriched by the ſeed and virtue of Chriſt, bringeth forth; or that by the noxious creatures here named are underſtood, [m] devils, or [n] armies of ſpiritual enemies, with their temptations; or by the fruits of the ſeveral years to be reſtored, [o] the true worſhip of God, which among the Gentiles was not at all, and among the Jews almoſt loſt, while the Gentiles oppreſſed them. Such allegorical meanings do Some think to belong to the words, [p] apertius, more openly; but I think that may rather be ſaid of the plain literal meaning, according to which, conſequently on what hath all along before been ſaid in this prophecy, they are given to know that all the evils before deſcribed or threatned unto them, were from God ſent on them as a puniſhment of their ſins, and that thoſe contemptible creatures named were his powerful army, which they could not reſiſt, nor free themſelves from, as by more years experience they had found, and might juſtly fear utter deſtruction: but that upon their repentance, and making peace with him, they ſhould find that he that ſent them, and by whoſe power and commiſſion they acted and had done great things, and ſeemed to threaten more, could as eaſily remove them (as ver. 20.) and not only ſo, but alſo could and would make good to them all that damage that they had ſuſtained by them. So that whereas before they had occaſion, all ſorts of them, to houl and cry for the great penury and miſery that they were brought to, they ſhall no more have ſuch occaſion, but of clean contrary behaviour, ſuch as is in the next words deſcribed and promiſed.

[z] Mercer. [a] R. Menoch. [b] Pſalm xc. 15.

[c] Damiri. [d] LXX. and printed Arab. [e] Mercer, and Pet. à Fig. [f] 2 Kings xv. 19. [g] 1 Chron. v. 26. 2 Kings xv. 29. [h] 2 Kings xvii. 3. [i] 2 Kings xviii. 13. Iſaiah xxxvi. 1. 2 Chron. xxxii. 1, &c. [k] Mercer. [l] Ar. Mont. [m] Menoch.

26. And ye ſhall eat in plenty, and be ſatisfied, and praiſe the name of the Lord your God, that hath dealt wonderouſly with you: and my people ſhall never be aſhamed.

Theſe words, as to the literal ſenſe, which we follow, are plain, aſſuring them, that whereas they had for ſome years been in great want and penury, they ſhould now have abundant plenty of all good things neceſſary for a comfortable livelihood to them, even as much as ſhould fully ſatisfy their utmoſt deſires; ſo that now they ſhould not have any occaſion to murmur or repine and crave for more, but on the contrary, to praiſe the name of the Lord their God, who had dealt ſo wonderouſly with them, in giving them all things which they had need of, or could wiſh for; by which means that reproach, which before for their poverty they were in among other nations, was now taken away, and they looked on as a people owned, and taken care of by God, who will never ſuffer thoſe whom he owns for his, to be aſhamed, as if they relied on one who were not all-ſufficient to them. But they are not only a deſcription of great plenty to them, but withal a gracious promiſe of God's bleſſing with it, of power to enjoy it, and hearts to be duly ſenſible of God's goodneſs to them in it: without this bleſſing, they may have to eat, and eat, and yet not have enough (or not be ſatisfied) and drink and be not filled with drink, [q] Hagg. i. 6. which is an evil which the Preacher ſaith he ſaw under the ſun, and it is common among men, when God giveth riches to a man, ſo that he wanteth nothing of all that he deſireth, yet giveth not power to eat thereof, Eccleſ. vi. 2. this is the good gift of God, when God giveth riches and wealth, and withal giveth him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, Eccleſ. v. 19. This is that which he here promiſeth to theſe, that they ſhall eat in plenty and be ſatisfied, (which I think they well take to be the meaning of ואכלתם אכול, & comedendo comedetis, and eating ye ſhall eat, i. e. have ſtill to eat as oft as ye ſhall have need, and never want till they be fully and conſtantly ſatisfied.) Again, there is an evil too common among men, [r] that when they have eaten and are full, they forget God and ſay in their heart, my power and the might of my hand hath gotten me this wealth, Deut. viii. xiv, 47. (Hoſea xiii. 6.) Such behaviour turneth his bleſſings into a curſe to men: that it may not be ſo with theſe, he promiſeth them together, to give them hearts to acknowledge him the donor and be thankful unto him, ſo he may continue to bleſs them. So ſaith he, and ye ſhall praiſe the name of the Lord your God, who hath dealt wonderouſly with you. The words ſeem to intimate that as they ſhall have manifeſt occaſion ſo to do, ſo alſo they ſhall be ſo affected as to do it out of the ſenſe of God's wonderful dealing with them, and as above, ver. 21. he ſpeaks, doing great things: wonderful it muſt needs ſeem, that whereas all the proviſions of their land, had been totally deſtroyed by thoſe devouring creatures named, he ſhould by a ſudden change not only remove them, (as ver. 20.) but reſtore to them all that they had eaten. The words [s] Some think to import, and the wonder to conſiſt in, this, that now in one year, he would give them as much as the locuſts, &c. had devoured in four years paſt, or as much as they ſhould have enjoyed in ſo many years, if it had not been devoured: and ſo ſhall it be by God's dealing with them, that his people ſhall never be aſhamed. While they revolted from him, and were by him diſowned, it is manifeſt by what we have ſeen, that ſhame and confuſion had ſeized on them. So chap. i. 11. The huſband-men are bidden to be aſhamed; and that the whole nation having forſaken him, and being by him forſaken, were to become a reproach amongſt other nations, appears by what they are taught to pray, ver. 17. Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach, &c. and his promiſing, ver. 19. that he would no more make them a reproach among the heathen. So that it appears they had been or at preſent were in ſuch condition. So was it with them when God had caſt them off, and ſhewed his diſpleaſure againſt them, but being now upon their repentance received again into his favour and owned by him, they are aſſured that it ſhall be otherwiſe with them; that that all reproach and cauſe of it ſhall be taken away, this being aſſigned as an undoubted privilege of his people, that they ſhall never be aſhamed. What ground they would have for this aſſurance or ſecurity, appears in the next following words.

[n] Sa. [o] Pet. à Fig. [p] Ribera. [q] Mic. vi. 14. [r] And ſee Deut. xxxii. 15. and Prov. xxx. 9.
[s] Kimchi, which Others ſeem likewiſe to think meant, Tarnov.

27. And ye ſhall know that I am in the midſt of Iſrael, and that I am the Lord your God, and none elſe: and my people ſhall never be aſhamed.

By ſuch things and good effects, as are certain ſigns of God's owning any people for his, and his gracious preſence and peculiar providence over them, ſhall they know and be aſſured, that God now upon their being turned to him, is returned to them, and is in the midſt of them, and that he is their God by a peculiar right, owning them, and being owned by them, and that there is none other that hath done or can do ſuch things as he hath done, and will do for them, viz. in removing evil and doing good, both in ſuch an extraordinary manner as by none but his infinite power can be done; as in the particular caſe here ſpoken of, in removing thoſe locuſts that he had ſent to puniſh them, and making good by ſuch extraordinary plenty the damage that they had by them ſuſtained. By the extraordinary evils which befel the Iſraelites upon their rebellion and breach of covenant with God, it is ſaid that they ſhall be forced to ſay, Are not theſe evils come upon us, becauſe our God is not amongſt us? Deut. xxxi. 17. Here on the contrary, by like reaſon, it is ſaid, that by God's dealing wonderouſly with his people upon their repentance, in reſtoring to them the years that the locuſt, &c. had eaten, and given them all things richly to enjoy and to eat in plenty, &c. they ſhould know that he was in the midſt of them, and that he was the Lord their God, and none elſe. By God's being in the midſt of them, will be manifeſtly underſtood, his being ready to [t] hear their requeſts, to [u] afford help and relief to them on all occaſions; and by his being the Lord their God, that he, who is Lord over all, doth in a particular manner own them, and hath reſpect to them as his peculiar people, to whom he will have regard, [w] more than to any other, to order things concerning them, for good to them; and by ſaying none elſe, that there is no other god, none among thoſe, whom [x] other nations, or they, when they forſook him, did worſhip, [y] who could do ſuch things as he now did, and could and would continue to do for them. This they having by experience certain aſſurance of, cannot have any occaſion of being aſhamed of his ſervice, or finding, while they ſhall ſerve him, any thing which ſhall be for ſhame to them; as if they relied on one, who either would not or could not help them, and do good to them on any occaſion, having both of his power and mercy, both infinite and ſuch as is in none elſe found, engaged to them; and therefore for confirmation and full aſſurance ſake, he again repeats it, and my people ſhall never be aſhamed. My people, ſuch as continue faithful with him, conſtant in his ſervice, they ſo continuing faithful to him, ſhall never be aſhamed, never be deceived in their hope and truſt in him, but be ſure to find made good to them all his promiſes, and a joyful iſſue to, and deliverance from all troubles and evils that ſhall befal them, and by which, were it not that he were with them, in the midſt of them, and ready to deliver them, they might be expoſed to reproach, and ſhame, and brought to confuſion. This ſeems a plain expoſition of the words, according to the literal meaning, and as by Ours aptly rendred: but they are by Others ſomething differently rendred, and by conſequence ſomething differently underſtood, לעולם leolam, by Ours and Others, rendred unquam, ever, and with the negative joined to it, never, is by Others rendred in ſempiternum, or [z] perpetuo, for ever, or always; as if he ſaid, that though they might be ſometimes under afflictions and calamities, yet there ſhould be a good iſſue to all, and ſuch as ſhould take away occaſion from thoſe that derided them, of ſaying, where is now their God? This well agrees with the former to make for a right underſtanding of it, by bidding not to judge of the condition of God's children, or people, always from their preſent ſtate or ſufferings, but from the end and iſſue that God would give to them, which ſhould certainly be ſuch as ſhould not be for ſhame, but for joy and glory to them, if not in this preſent time, [a] yet in the life to come, and mean while they ſhould be ſuſtained by comfort from him, and aſſured hope, which ſhould keep them from [b] being aſhamed, and make them rather [c] glory in their tribulations, than faint in them, or think themſelves forſaken of God; but that hereby [d] he manifeſteth his fatherly love to them, and care of them, in humbling and proving them, that he may do them good at their latter end, Deut. viii. 2. making all things to work together for good to them that love him, Rom. viii. 28. Mean while, whether whole nations or particulars, they are here manifeſtly given to know, that as they will find ſecurity againſt ſhame and confuſion at all times, and on all occaſions, they muſt keep themſelves near to God, acknowledging him and none elſe for their God, that they may by him be owned for his people. To ſuch only is this promiſe here made, and ſuch ſhall never fail of having it made good in ſuch manner, as ſhall be beſt for them, and ſo as that they ſhall know and acknowledge him to be, as is here deſcribed, in the midſt of them, the Lord their God, and that there is none elſe beſides him able ſo to order things for good to them.

Beſides

[t] Kimchi. [u] Grot. on Mat. xviii. 20. Pſalm xlvi. 5. [w] Pſalm cxlvii. 20. [x] Kimchi. [y] Hoſea xiii. 4. [z] Tig. [a] Pet. à Figuer. [b] Rom. v. 5. [c] Rom. v. 3. [d] Heb. xii. 5.

Beſides theſe ſignifications of the word לעולם leolam, whereby it may be rendred, either, unquam, ever, at all, or perpetuo, for ever, always, and with the negative joined with it, never, not at all, or, not for ever, not always; there is another notion in which it is ſometimes uſed, for a long time, or a good while, though known when it ſhall end. In this way Lyra here takes it, ſaying that it doth [e] not import perpetuity. And in the ſame notion [f] Grotius taking it, explains it to denote, per longum tempus, quamdiu vivet Ezechias, for a good while, as long as King Hezekiah ſhall live, in whoſe days we find that peace and happineſs was promiſed, 2 Kings xx. 9. Iſaiah xxxix. 8. But though the word be ſo elſewhere uſed, here it ſeems too narrow a reſtraining of God's promiſe to his people ſo keeping themſelves in their relation to him, as if it were to be made good only for ſo ſhort a ſpace of time, and not a perpetual privilege belonging to them, which they ever had and always ſhould be aſſured to enjoy. It is manifeſt that the words were, when ſpoken by the Prophet, ſpoken in particular to the Jews, in regard to the different conditions they had been in, or ſhould be in (whether by the invaſion of the Aſſyrians, as he with Others takes it meant, or as Others, more plainly and literally, by reaſon of a famine cauſed by the locuſts devouring all the fruits of their land) while they continued in their ſinful rebellious behaviour, and ſhould be for the juſtice in, on their turning unto God by repentance: both which have been in the foregoing words deſcribed, the former of which made them a ſhame and reproach to other nations, the latter ſhould take off that ſhame and all occaſion thereof. The aſſurance of this alteration of their condition, is in theſe words ſet down as an undoubted truth, that God's people ſhall never be aſhamed. So that it ſeems a privilege belonging not only to them, and that for a ſhort while, but to all that make good to themſelves that title of God's people, and as long as they ſhall continue to be ſo. Though it be applied to that their particular caſe, the thing aſſerted ſeems an univerſal truth, which ſhall be always made good to God's people, viz. that all things ſo [f] work for good to them that cleave ſtedfaſtly to God, that they ſhall never be aſhamed, but find occaſion to joy and glory in their condition, it having [g] the promiſe both of this life and the life to come. Their happy condition even in this preſent life we have [h] frequently in the ſcripture deſcribed, both as concerning particular perſons, and the whole body of nations. As thoſe, who confine this promiſe to the times of Hezekiah, much take off from the greatneſs and graciouſneſs of it, in reſpect to the duration of it; ſo doth Abarbinel much derogate from it on the other hand, by putting forth and delaying the time of its being made good, while he would make it not to be to take place till after their reſtoration from their laſt exile, which they are ſtill under, and the days of the Meſſiah which they expect, denying him to be yet come, which certainly fruſtrates, and will ſtill fruſtrate the benefit of it to them, while they continue in that obſtinacy of unbelief, whereby they have forfeited to themſelves the right of being for the preſent his people, and the benefits belonging to ſuch as are ſo. Nor can we yet fully aſſent to thoſe among Chriſtian Expoſitors, who having taken the former words and paſſages in an allegorical way, as we have ſeen, look on theſe alſo, as only a promiſe of ſuch ſpiritual good things, as were to be conferred in [i] Chriſt, by whom our corrupt nature is repaired, and the ſhame and confuſion of the law and ſin taken away by the ſalutary doctrine of the goſpel.

But however theſe words may be applied, or to whatſoever referred, according to the plain literal ſenſe, which we chooſe to follow, they ſeem particularly ſpoken by the Prophet to the Jews of his time, with reſpect to their condition, as we have before ſeen and ſaid, which they had been or were at preſent, or ſhould certainly be, in. It will be much one which of the tenſes we uſe, as ſignifying that (in prophetic language) which was as preſent with God, as if paſt or already done. They are deſcribed as by their grievous provocations, having been brought into ſuch a calamitous condition, by penury [k] and famine brought on them by locuſts and ſuch noxious vermin, utterly deſtroying all the fruits of their land, and by other ſuch means that they were become a ſhame and reproach, a ſcorn and deriſion to other nations. They are exhorted therefore, for removing of ſuch evils, to turn unto God by ſerious repentance, and promiſed that upon ſo doing they ſhould find ſuch mercy from him, that he would again receive them into favour, and own them for his people, and do ſuch great things for them, as that they, while they continued in that behaviour to him, ſhould not longer, yea, never more, be aſhamed. This good promiſe is concluded with ſuch words as are, though there particularly applied to their preſent caſe, yet of univerſal and perpetual truth, My people ſhall never be aſhamed. Being abſolutely taken, they are an aſſurance to all who cleave to God, ſo as to approve themſelves his people, that they ſhall never be left deſtitute of any thing conducing to their welfare, whether concerning their temporal or ſpiritual eſtate, ſo as that they ſhall fail of their hope in him, or have reaſon to be aſhamed of their condition in his ſervice: but do ſeem here more particularly referred and adapted to the reſtoring them to a flouriſhing condition in their land, a plentiful enjoyment of the temporal good things thereof, of which they had been for puniſhment of their ſins and rebellion againſt God deprived.

A

[e] As elſewhere it denotes the time only to the year of Jubilee. [f] And Others, ſee Pet. à Fig: [g] Rom. viii. 28. [h] 1 Tim. iv. 8. [i] Deut. xi. 13, 14. and xxviii. 1, &c. Pſalm xci. [k] Mercer. [l] Id. Merc. Ad literam, ad probrum famis hoc pertinet, quo inter gentes laborabant.

A more expreſs promiſe of ſpiritual good things we have in the following words.

28. And it ſhall come to paſs afterward, that I will pour out my ſpirit upon all fleſh, and your ſons and your daughters ſhall propheſy, your old men ſhall dream dreams, and your young men ſhall ſee viſions:

29. And alſo upon the ſervants and upon the hand-maids in thoſe days will I pour out my ſpirit.

He proceeds in gracious promiſes to them; but ſuch as are of a diſtinct nature from the former, which I ſuppoſe gave occaſion to Abarbinel, who divides this book of Joel into two prophecies, or prophetical ſermons, to take theſe words to be the beginning of the ſecond of them, (as Others for the ſame reaſon make them to begin a new chapter.) The foregoing promiſes were great, but theſe much greater, and of an higher nature. Thoſe, according to the expreſſions, of temporal things (however Some extend them farther) theſe plainly of ſpiritual, which, when they ſhall be conferred, what they are, and to whom they ſhall pertain, or ſhall be given, is in theſe words deſcribed. 1. We have the time והיה אחרי כן vehayah achare cen, and it ſhall come to paſs afterward; after thoſe promiſes before made good. The ſpiritual things here promiſed are as firſt in dignity, and of a more excellent nature than thoſe temporal before promiſed, ſo certainly before and above them to be deſired, according to that method by our Saviour preſcribed, Mat. vi. 33. of ſeeking firſt the kingdom of heaven, not doubting but then all other things belonging to this life, as food and raiment, ſhall be added to them: but it pleaſeth God here in the firſt place to aſſure them by promiſes of thoſe lower neceſſary things, in compaſſion of their [m] weakneſs, to which thoſe things were more obvious, and their preſent need ſeemed to require; that ſo by the enjoyment of thoſe they might be brought to an acknowledgment of him, the giver of all good gifts, and ſo brought near unto him, and made his people, deſire and receive from him theſe other better things alſo, which he here promiſeth to give. But what then is the time aſſigned for the giving of theſe, by the expreſſion אחרי כן afterwards, viz. after thoſe things before ſpoken of performed, and made good, or in time that ſhould be after? We need not ſolicitouſly to enquire after the grounds on which Others go, who either aſſign it to the times of [n] Jehoſhaphat (whoſe valley is afterwards mentioned, chap. iii. 12.) in whoſe time there appear to have been many Prophets, by what is ſaid of their coming to Eliſha, [o] 2 Kings ii. 15. or to the time in which Iſaiah lived, as [p] Grotius appears to think, by expounding the following words (upon all fleſh) i. e. ſuper multos, non ſuper Iſaiam ſolum, upon many, not upon Iſaiah alone; or any [q] other like conjectures. We are infallibly directed to the time when this promiſe was to be, and was fulfilled by St. Peter, Acts ii. 17. where citing this place, he ſheweth that then was the time, when was made good what is here ſaid, and ſo the time pointed out by אחרי כן Achare cen, afterwards. This, ſaith he, to the people amazed to ſee ſuch wonderful, and before never ſeen or heard of, gifts of the Holy Ghoſt as were conferred on the Apoſtles, and doubting whence it ſhould be, This is that which was ſpoken by the Prophet Joel. And it ſhall come to paſs in the laſt days, &c. His affirming this prophecy to have been then fulfilled, plainly argues that there was no time before, in which it had been fully made good, and likewiſe that there was no need of expecting after times for the completion of it, as if it were not now ſufficiently verified, but ſuch things only done, as did belong to it or were part of it. And this time was the days after Chriſt's coming, and his aſcenſion again into heaven, whence, having led captivity captive, he gave gifts unto men, Eph. iv. 8. even all thoſe here promiſed, ſo that he plainly directs us to underſtand by אחרי כן Achare cen, afterwards, the times after Chriſt uſually called, the days of the Meſſiah. It may be obſerved that what the Prophet here ſaith Achare cen, afterward, St. Peter there expreſſeth by ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις, in the laſt days, which in ſenſe to be all one with the former, only in plainer words, we have from the confeſſion of ſome of the learneder Jews themſelves. So R. David Kimchi ſaith אחרי כן Achare cen to be all one in ſenſe with באחרית הימים Beacharith hayamim, In the laſt days, Iſaiah xxiii. where is deſigned the coming of Chriſt's kingdom, and doth therefore (as Others of them) confeſs theſe words here to pertain to that time, though not taking notice of the fulfilling of it, ſo as to be convinced thereby that he is already come; he with the reſt of them obſtinately deny him to be yet come. Without doubt then, warranted by the authority of the divinely inſpired Apoſtle, by evidence of fact, and by the acknowledged uſe and propriety of the word, we have all reaſon to underſtand by the expreſſion, afterward, in our Prophet, by St. Peter explained in the laſt days, in which God, ſaith he, would beſtow on men ſuch extraordinary gifts, and in ſo extraordinary manner, meaſure, and degree, and on ſo many and ſuch perſons as in the following words is expreſſed, the days of the Meſſias, the time of the Goſpel. The word of which was confirmed with the ſigns following, Mark xvi. 20. God bearing witneſs to the firſt Preachers thereof, with ſigns and with diverſe miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt according to his own will, (Heb. ii. 4.) and according to his promiſe here made. Doubtleſs this prophecy cannot be ſaid at any former time to have been duly fulfilled, nor denied at that time to have been ſeen ſo, as will more appear by conſidering ing farther the good gifts here expreſſed, which were to be conferred, and the perſons to whom they were to be conferred. 1. The gifts] i. e. a plentiful meaſure of God's ſpirit; a plentiful meaſure I ſay, for ſo doth the verb here uſed אשפוך, and rendring will pour out, denote, not a bare conferring, but a conferring in great abundance, in a larger manner. What he ſaith, he will pour out his ſpirit, which is the [r] fountain, and author, on the perſons named, muſt neceſſarily import a filling them with all good gifts and graces, which are the [s] effects of the ſame holy Spirit; and where his gifts and working appear, there is he well ſaid to be given to, or received by men, be they never ſo many, or different, being preſent with every one, and with all now here, or to any confirmed, as will after be occaſion to tell. What we have here in the Hebrew, Ours, and other tranſlations, את רוחי, Eth Ruchi, my ſpirit, the LXX. rendreth, and the Apoſtle St. Peter alſo citeth, ἀπο τȣ̃ πνεύματός μȣ, of my ſpirit. Which tranſlation of the LXX. Some find fault with, as not exact, yea that [t] perperam verterit, they tranſlated it wrong, as thereby diminiſhing (or leſſening) the bountiful promiſe of God, ac ſi portiunculam aliquam Spiritus ſui Deus promitteret, As if he did promiſe only ſome little portion of his Spirit. But I think we ought not ſo to ſay, ſeeing St. Peter doth in the ſame manner cite it, who would not certainly give a wrong meaning of for the Septuagint's or any Other's ſake, but give the true meaning of the words. It is manifeſt by his different rendring the words going before, that he did not tye himſelf up to them, but give the true meaning of the Prophet's words, himſelf being inſpired and taught by the ſame ſpirit that the Prophet was: nor indeed doth this expreſſion in the Greek ſeem any way to differ from the Prophets in the Hebrew, nor denote any thing leſs than that doth. For it plainly imports, firſt, an inexhauſtible fulneſs of that Spirit, which is ſufficient to fill all. 2. That the gifts of the Spirit are many and diverſe, enabling men for different performances, as the glory of God, and the good of his church or people ſhall require, and that all thoſe good gifts ſpoken of, though never ſo many, and different, were from that one and the ſame ſpirit. And what more can be underſtood from the literal rendring according to the Hebrew, I will pour out my ſpirit. It cannot be meant that the whole ſpirit ſhould in the ſame manner and meaſure be conferred on every perſon, according to the forecited, Heb. ii. 4. and 1 Cor. xii. 4, &c. and it appears from what follows in this very place, by that enumeration of different gifts to be beſtowed on different perſons; ſo that that reading in the Greek in both Teſtaments is not a diminution of what is ſaid in the Hebrew, but a perſpicuous explication of it, pointing out thoſe different gifts (as we ſaid) which under the general name of his ſpirit are comprehended, and afterwards diſtinctly named, as likewiſe thoſe perſons, on which they ſhall be beſtowed: but before we come to either of thoſe, here is in the order of the words given us to conſider a more general name alſo, under which the perſons are comprehended, which is כל בשר Col Baſar, all fleſh. כל, col, all, we know, is a note of univerſality, and בשר, Baſar, fleſh, a comprehenſive term, including as well all other creatures, as men, but it is manifeſt, they are both here, as elſewhere alſo they are known to be taken, in a more reſtrained ſenſe, viz. all, ſo as not to ſignify every one of all ſorts, but all ſorts, or ſome of all ſorts, and every condition, and fleſh ſo as to ſignify men, not other creatures. So is כל, All, uſed, 2 Kings viii. 9. when Hazael is ſaid to take with him for a preſent to Eliſha כל טוב דמשק, omne bonum Damaſci, all the good of Damaſcus, i. e. as Ours well render it, of every good thing of Damaſcus, ſomewhat of every kind: and as for בשר baſar, fleſh, that is alſo uſed (as we ſaid) to denote not all living creatures, but בני אדם לבדם [u] peculiarly men; ſo Pſalm cxlv. 20. Let all fleſh (that is all ſorts of men) bleſs his holy name, and Iſaiah lxvi. 23. All fleſh ſhall come to worſhip before me, ſaith the Lord; and in this ſignification alone is the ſame word بشر Baſhar uſed in the Arabick tongue, attributed in it peculiarly to men among other creatures, whence Adam is called by them ابو بشر Abu Baſhar, the father of men, or mankind. Thus far will all Expoſitors, as well Chriſtians as Jews, neceſſarily agree in limiting the ſignification of theſe general words; but the Jews go yet farther (in which we may not accompany them) in reſtraining them to the Iſraelites alone, with excluſion of all other nations of men, as well as other creatures, and only to thoſe among them alſo, which were in the land of Iſrael. So Aben Ezra, On all fleſh, בארץ ישראל, viz. in the land of Iſrael, which, ſaith he, is מקום ראוי להנבא the place convenient to propheſy in. So Kimchi alſo, upon all fleſh, i. e. of Iſrael, which were worthy on whom the holy ſpirit ſhould come, and by כל col, all, he underſtands הגדולים והקטנים great and little among them. Grotius ſeems as much or more to limit this prophecy, explaining, all fleſh, by, ſuper multos, non ſuper Iſaiam ſolum, upon many, and not upon Iſaiah alone, as if it belonged only to ſuch as were in Iſrael, about that Prophet's time. [w] R. Joſeph Albo alſo ſo reſtraineth it as to import but a ſmall part of the generality of Iſrael, not all of them, nor of other nations, and the meaning to be, on any of all fleſh (of them) although he were not fitted (or prepared) for prophecy (or trained up in a prophetical office.) But that the words are to be taken in a larger extent, we are infallibly taught by the event and completion, which is the beſt interpreter of prophecies, and the meaning of them.

[m] Calvin. [n] See in Aben Ezra from one R. Moſes. [o] And chap. iv. 38. [p] See him on this place, and on Acts ii. [q] See Ruffin.

The

[r] With this expreſſion of pouring out his ſpirit, compare Iſaiah xliv. 3. though the Hebrew word be there different, Acts ii. 17. Rom. v. 5. Tit. iii. 6. [s] 1 Cor. xii. 11. gratia ſpiritualis in nobis eſt, quæ ſunt effectus ſpiritus ſancti, Druſ. Dan. Spiritus mei, Piſc. [t] Calvin. [u] See Kimchi and Ainſw. [w] Ikkarim, l. 2. c. 20.

The Jews of old, at the firſt preaching of the Goſpel (yea Peter himſelf) were, it appears, of the ſame mind with thoſe of later times, which we have cited, viz. that the promiſes of the good gifts of God's ſpirit, did belong and were to be performed only to their nation; but by what happened to Cornelius and his family they were convinced that on the Gentiles alſo was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghoſt, Acts x. 45. The ſame word of pouring out uſed there in the deſcription of the event, as here in the promiſe (which as we have ſeen is by him alſo cited, Acts ii. 17. to the like end) ſhews that to have been the making good of this, and which by virtue of this prophecy was to be expected, and was done for fulfilling it, ſo that by all fleſh, here is manifeſtly to be underſtood (as we have ſaid) ſome of all, or any ſorts of men, without excluſion of any, by reaſon of their country, ſex, age, or condition. There being in Chriſt, of the extraordinary benefits and privileges of whoſe times this prophecy (as we have ſeen) is, [x] neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free, male nor female, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) Gal. iii. 28. but all being one in Chriſt Jeſus, all have right to the good promiſe of God's ſpirit, and ſhall receive the graces thereof in ſuch manner and meaſure as ſhall be conducing to his glory, and to the good of his church and their own ſouls; as appears by his reciting more particularly, in the following words, both what perſons, and what ſpiritual gifts belonging to them, are under thoſe more general terms comprehended. But before we proceed yet to conſider them, we may take notice of a different meaning which Some underſtand the word fleſh in, from that which we have mentioned; ſuch is given by R. Solomon Jarchi, who by כל בשר col baſar, would have to be underſtood, מי שנעשה לבו רך כבשר, ſuch whoſe heart is become tender as fleſh, alledging for his taking the word in that meaning, thoſe words, [y] Ezek. xi. 19. I will put a new ſpirit within you, and I will take the ſtony heart out of their fleſh, and will give them an heart of fleſh. By this he ſeems to prove that fleſh may be uſed to denote, or be taken for a fleſhly tender heart; the compariſon between the two places will not farther hold to his purpoſe; an heart of fleſh being there mentioned, as a gift or effect of God's ſpirit, but here he would have it, for an heart prepared for the receiving of the ſpirit. This expoſition of R. Solomon's [z] Some ſeem to like: but Mercer ſaith of it, that, non eſt ex phraſi Hebræi ſermonis, that it is not a proper phraſe (or way of expoſition well agreeing) to the Hebrew tongue, in which Col baſar muſt ſignify omnes mortales, all mortals, i. e. all men; much alike to Abarbinel's cenſure of it, who will not allow of it but only as by way of דרש, or as an allegorical expoſition, or deſcant, not a proper interpretation: Abarbinel ſaith, that the expreſſion of col Baſar, all fleſh, הוא באמת כולל לכל בני אדם מאיו אומה שתהיה doth in truth comprehend all ſorts of men of whatſoever nation they be, and therefore doth he not aſſent either to Aben Ezra, or thoſe other Expoſitors, who would have the promiſe of the ſpirit here made to belong only to Iſrael, whereas the word בשר Baſar denoting to whom it is made, is manifeſtly of greater extent; and then in the thing promiſed, the word רוח ſpirit, he differs from them alſo, not taking it as they do for the peculiar ſpirit of prophecy, but for that which is more common, viz. the ſpirit of knowledge, or which ſhall inſtruct them in the knowledge of God; for as for the gift of prophecy, which is in the next words mentioned, that he alſo reſtrains to the Iſraelites, and ſuch of them as were fitted for it. The words then being neceſſarily of ſuch comprehenſion, I know not why [a] Others ſhould yet ſo far reſtrain them, as to ſay that the promiſe was made more peculiarly to the Jews, and theſe things not due to Gentiles by virtue of it here made, but as by grace afterward taken into the right of it. It was, as we have ſaid at the beginning, given in theſe comprehenſive terms, which include them alſo, and, after its making, was never, nor could ever be ſaid to have been fulfilled, but by the making it good to the Gentiles, by pouring out and conferring on them the good gifts here mentioned and meant. Having began his promiſe in theſe general terms of pouring out his ſpirit (which may comprehend all the gifts thereof,) on all fleſh, which comprehended, all ſons of men, he proceeds to ſpecify what gifts of the ſpirit he here more particularly means, and what ſorts of men, and how they ſhall be conferred on. The gifts mentioned are ſuch as ſeem not only to belong to the perſons named for their private good, but ſuch as may make them profitable to others alſo, and inſtruments of good to them; for making known to them alſo the will of God, for bringing them unto him, for propagating his doctrine, and for edification to them. The firſt named is prophecy, then dreams, then viſions; the perſons, on which the firſt is ſaid to be conferred, are their ſons and daughters, on which the ſecond, the old men, on which the third, the young men.

As to the firſt, the gift of prophecy, Abarbinel thinks ſo properly and peculiarly to belong to Iſrael, or be made good to them under their expected reſtauration (בזמן הגאולה) that though he grants the former word of Spirit, and what is by it meant, to belong as well to other nations, as to them, yet limits this to Iſrael alone, and to מוכנים מהם ſuch of them as were rightly prepared for it, and that it never did belong, or ever ſhall be made good to any other nation: ſo are his words, מה שלא היה ולא יהיה בשאר הגוים, But ſure that, with other gifts here named, plainly ſeem to be but (as we ſaid) a ſpecifying of ſuch particular gifts as are under that more general word ſpirit comprehended, and ſo to be, as all in that compriſed, to belong to all that that that did, even all fleſh, any nations of men, all conditions and ſexes, as naming ſons and daughters ſhews.

[x] See Rom. x. 12. [y] As likewiſe chap. xxxvi. 26. [z] Lyra (though he ſaith it may be underſtood otherwiſe ſo as to comprehend both Jews and Gentiles) and Tarnov. [a] Chr. à Caſtro.

The affix כם, cem, yours, though aſſuring the promiſe to thoſe then ſpoken to by the Prophet, viz. the Jews of his time, yet doth not ſeem to reſtrain it to their children only, as if their ſons and daughters alone with excluſion of others were here meant; but the ſons and daughters alſo of all comprehended under that general term of, all fleſh. The promiſe made being of that great latitude, as that word imports, we have no reaſon to think it here limited with narrower bounds, but to belong to as many as that did, viz. to the children of the believing Gentiles alſo, as many as [b] God ſhould call; they ſhould alſo, as well as Iſrael according to the fleſh, be capable of receiving this good gift of God's ſpirit. Your ſons and daughters ſhall propheſy. Kimchi by the naming of ſons and daughters, thinks to be underſtood in reſpect of their age, ſuch as were yet בנערותם of tender years, as yet but boys and girls (if we may ſo ſpeak) כמו שמואל הנביא, as it is in Samuel the Prophet, 1 Sam. iii. who was eſtabliſhed to be a Prophet of the Lord, from, yea even in his childhood. If the words be thus underſtood, then have we all ages here named, there following old men, and young men, ſo to ſhew that no [c] age is excluded from being capable of receiving the good gifts of God's ſpirit; as by naming daughters as well as ſons, is ſhewed that neither ſex is excluded or excepted, as of women propheteſſes we have alſo examples in ſcripture. Acts xxi. 9. it is ſaid Philip had four daughters that did propheſy; and the like is ſhewed by St. Paul's forbidding a woman to propheſy with her head uncovered, 1 Cor. xi. 5. Otherwiſe [d] naming theſe ſons and daughters ſheweth God's promiſe to pertain not only to the fathers, but to their children alſo. The promiſe is to you and your children, and to all that are afar off, &c. Acts ii. 39.

In the next place as comprehended under all fleſh, are named theſe [e] old men, and the gift of the ſpirit that ſhall be conferred on them, that they ſhall dream dreams; and then after them, their young men, and that wherein the ſpirit ſhall manifeſt itſelf in them, that they ſhall ſee viſions. On which diſtribution of perſons [f] Maimonides looking, it ſeems, on ſuch indefinitely named as belonging to any part of men, as no fit perſons for receiving any degree of true prophecy, taketh what is ſaid to be underſtood not of ſuch only who had any true prophetical gifts beſtowed on them, but alſo of any that undertook to foretel, or ſhew things by way of ſoothſaying or divination, in as much as ſuch alſo have the name of Prophets given them, as the Prophets of Baal, and the groves, and it is ſaid, Deut. xiii. 1. If there ariſe among you a Prophet or dreamer of dreams.

Againſt this expoſition of his, Abarbinel wiſhes the reader to peg his ears, and wiſhes his words had never been written, as being manifeſtly untrue, as there is good reaſon to think, for how ſhall it be thought that the Prophet here promiſing an extraordinary bleſſing from God, ſhould name or mean the giving of ſuch things, ſuch ways of pretended propheſying, as were utterly diſpleaſing to God, and forbidden in his law, and how ſhould he call it his ſpirit, i. e. as the Chaldee explains it רוח קודשי my holy ſpirit, which he would pour out on them? neceſſarily then muſt theſe dreams and viſions here meant be ſuch only, as are from God, ſuch he himſelf promiſeth in the law alſo, and they are degrees or kinds of true prophecy, or divine revelation, If there be a Prophet among you, I my ſelf will make my ſelf known unto him in a viſion, and will ſpeak to him in a dream, ſaith the Lord, Numb. xii. 6.

Your old men ſhall dream dreams, &c.] Kimchi, as alſo after him Abarbinel, here obſerves that the Prophet doth not here add the note of univerſality, all, as he did in the foregoing clauſe, but ſpeak only indefinitely, your old men, and your young men, not univerſally, all your old men, and your young men, which, they ſay, is for that reaſon, that it may be underſtood only of ſuch of them as are, מוכנים Mucanim, fit or rightly prepared for receiving the gifts, yea from their firſt conception, as Maimonides by Kimchi indeed obſerves. This obſervation belongeth alſo to the former words, your ſons and your daughters, and had not they obſerved it, or warned of it, the reader certainly could not but eaſily perceive, that as that note of univerſality, the word all, is not here expreſſed, ſo neither ought it to be underſtood, nor can have place. For it was never ſo that all had the ſame gifts, that either all that had the ſpirit poured on them did propheſy, or had divine revelations by dreams or viſions; it was never ſo brought to paſs, and therefore never promiſed, God bringing ſurely to effect whatever he promiſed. In thoſe times after Chriſt's aſcenſion, when he in moſt plentiful manner fulfilled this prophecy, by conferring wonderful gifts of his ſpirit on believers, ſo that there were many endued with them in all the churches of the Gentiles as well as Jews, (as for example ſo many Prophets in the church of the Corinthians, that St. Paul was [g] feign to limit them to order in ſpeaking, that they ſhould not interrupt one another, yet were not all of them Prophets, nor did they all receive the ſame gifts of the ſpirit, nor all in the ſame meaſure. Are all (ſaith he ſpeaking to thoſe of that church) Apoſtles? [h] are all Prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles, &c. No, But as he having reckoned up ſeveral ways, in which God poured out his Spirit on thoſe that were converted to Chriſt, [b] Acts iii. 39. [c] Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings he can ordain his praiſe, even ſuch are fit for his employment, Pſalm viii. 2. Mat. xxi. 16. [d] Mercer. [e] Acts ii. 17. St. Peter citing theſe words inverteth the order, putting your young men, that is your ſons, in the firſt place, but the ſenſe is ſtill the ſame. [f] Moreh Neb. l. 2. c. 32. [g] 1 Cor. xiv. 29. [h] 1 Cor. xii. 29.

Chriſt, in the ſame chapter, ver. 11. ſaith, that all theſe that one and the ſame ſpirit did work in them, dividing to every one as he willed, and that whether they were Jews or Gentiles, bond or free, ver. 13. or if we ſhall take the words here uſed, Sons and daughters, old men or young, free or ſervants and hand-maidens, the different giving of ſuch diverſe gifts, he aſcribes to the only good pleaſure of God's will, as ſo again, Heb. ii. 4. which will of his therefore is that which muſt make them מוכנים Mucanim, fit, (as we have ſeen the Jews in this caſe to require) more than any thing in their natural conſtitution found in them, or by their own induſtry (as they will have,) acquired. That which muſt make them fit to receive what they do, is his gift, as well as the gift itſelf. [i] Poteſt Deus quocunque tempore non ſolum munera ſua conferre, ſed etiam ſuſcipientes ad id aptos efficere, God can, whenſoever he will, not only confer his gifts, but alſo make thoſe that ſhall receive them fit for it.

Which words of the Apoſtle furniſh us alſo with an anſwer to another queſtion, which Abarbinel here raiſeth, viz. why revelation by dreams ſhould be appropriated to old men, and by viſions to young men? It may certainly ſuffice us, that God ſheweth it to be his will that it ſhall be ſo: Nothing that he will do is certainly without great reaſon, though for what reaſon he will ſo or ſo do it, be above the reach of our weak reaſon; yet doth Abarbinel here go to aſſign the reaſon, why God ſhould reveal his will, and make known what he intends to do, to old men by dreams, and young men by viſions, to be from the different conſtitutions and tempers of thoſe ages, by which the one are fitter for the one way, and the other for the other; of theſe two different kinds of prophecy, old men לרוב לחותם המקריי, by reaſon of the much accidental moiſture uſually happening in that age, and the working of their imaginary faculty or fancy, increaſed by reaſon of the many men and their affairs which they have ſeen and known, are, he ſaith, fitter to receive the influence of the Spirit by dreams, but young men, in whom it is otherwiſe, they not ſo abounding with moiſture, nor their imaginary faculty ſo full of fancies, are fitter for viſions.

[k] Others give other reaſons for it, as, viz. becauſe ſuch dreams, as are here meant, are an higher and nobler degree of prophecy than viſions, and therefore the firſt promiſed to old men, who are by reaſon of their age more to be reverenced and honoured: the ſecond are inferior in degree to thoſe that are ſuperior in dignity, becauſe ſo in age. This reaſon Ribera gives, yet becauſe [l] Others ſeem to affirm the contrary, and that viſions are an higher degree than dreams, it being a matter of greater power to take men, that are awake, from the contemplation of ſenſible things, about which they are occupied, and raiſe them to the beholding of ſupernatural things, than to work ſuch effects on a ſoul in ſleep already, abſtracted from ſenſible things. For aſcribing then preeminence to dreams, he will have by dreams underſtood, ſuch dreams wherein God ſeems immediately to ſpeak to them (according to what is ſaid in the forecited, Numb. xii. 6. I will ſpeak to him in a dream) but if in the dream be repreſented ſuch viſions, as are to waking men, then he thinks ſuch dreams to be a lower degree, than that of viſion to a waking man.

This queſtion, viz. why dreams are attributed here to old men, and viſions to young, he thinks neceſſary to be raiſed from theſe words, and to this purpoſe gives his ſolution of it. But I know not what neceſſity there is of inſiſting on this queſtion, it may be ſufficient to underſtand for the meaning of the words here, that God promiſeth ſuch a plentiful meaſure of his Spirit, which in the time ſpoken of, and that without excluſion of any by reaſon of their age from receiving the gifts of it, he will confer, even that excellent gift of prophecy, both on old or young, as he ſhall ſee fit for the good of his church, revealing his will to them both by dreams and viſions, thoſe known ways of prophetical revelation. Kimchi ſeems not to make that difference here betwixt dreams and viſions, which by a nice Grammatical diſtinction of the preciſe ſignification of the words may otherwiſe be made, the one being more properly attributed to men ſleeping, the other to them being awake, yet not ſo as if revelations by dreams were peculiar to one age, viſions to another: He explains the words, והנבואת תהיה להם במראה החלום, and prophecy ſhall be to them in the viſion of a dream, as if viſions and dreams were not ſo diſtinguiſhed, but that to whom the one of them agreed, the other alſo did agree, and viſions might be in dreams ſo, that either name might agree to the revelations made to either age. Examples we have of viſions appearing as well to old men as to young, as of Cornelius, Acts x. 3. and of Peter, in the ſame chapter, ver. 17. and chap. xi. 5. of Ananias it is likewiſe ſaid that the Lord ſpake to him in a viſion, Acts ix. 10. and of Paul, chap. xvi. 9. we read of a viſion that appeared to him in the night, a man of Macedonia praying him to come to Macedonia. Theſe named we may reckon among old men, yet it is not ſaid that they dreamed dreams, but ſaw viſions. That which Paul had, being ſaid to have appeared to him in the night, may probably ſeem to be the ſame with a dream, and is ſo by St. Jerome called a dream, ſaying, ſenes quoque viderunt ſomnia, quando Paulus jam ſenex audivit virum Macedonem, &c. old men alſo have ſeen dreams, as Paul now an old man heard a man of Macedonia, &c. which with the other named and like examples ſeem to confirm the two things mentioned, viz. that viſions are not peculiar to young men only, and that viſions and dreams do ſometimes import the like or ſame kind of revelation, ſo that to ſay, Old men ſhould dream dreams, and, young men ſhould ſee viſions, will not be nicely to diſtinguiſh guiſh betwixt thoſe two ſorts of divine revelation, but to aſſure them of both ages that God will communicate to them both thoſe gifts of a prophetical ſpirit, ſometimes in one way, ſometimes in another, as he will; though [m] Some would rather have the names but ſynonymous for one and the ſame thing, that ſo the queſtion concerning the preeminence of one of theſe ways above the other (which they think would rather be given to viſions, if the compariſon be made betwixt them) may be taken away. But this I ſuppoſe is not a thing here to be inſiſted on, but that other which we mentioned, viz. that God will ſo liberally pour out his ſpirit on all fleſh, that perſons of all ages, as well as ſexes, ſhall receive of his grace and bounty in that kind, the largeneſs of which bounty of his is yet in the next words farther inlarged, by ſhewing that neither any condition of men ſhall be accepted or excluded from the partaking of it: So ſaith he,

[i] Pet. à Fig. Tho. Aq. [k] Ribera. [l] Thom. Aq. by him cited.

29. And alſo upon the ſervants, and upon the handmaids, &c.] and alſo, This connexion of theſe words with the precedent, ſhews that thoſe here mentioned, are ſpoken of in a different reſpect, from what reſpect was had to in the forementioned, viz. not only their ſex and their age, but the condition that they were in, viz. that though they were ſervants under the power of others, yet they ſhould, as well as thoſe which were free, and had rule over them, be capable of receiving the good gifts of God's Spirit. In thoſe days. The days ſpoken of, viz. under the kingdom of Chriſt, in which there is no difference as to ſuch things as concern their return to God, and right to the privileges of his kingdom, no difference betwixt bond and free, Gal. iii. 28. He that is called in the Lord being a ſervant, is the Lord's freeman, and likewiſe he that is called being free, is the Lord's ſervant, 1 Cor. vii. 22. The words in the Hebrew do plainly ſo ſound, as they are by Ours literally rendred, and the import of them as ſo plainly ſeems that which we have given. But by St. Peter they are ſomething differently cited, Acts ii. 18. as firſt in that he doth not ſay indefinitely, on the ſervants and upon the handmaids, which is all that is read in the Hebrew, על העבדים ועל השפחות, al haabadim veal haſhphacoth, but with an affix ſubjoined, ἐπὶ τοὺς δούλους μου, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς δούλας μου, upon my ſervants and my handmaidens, as the Vulgar Latin here alſo hath it, Sed & ſuper ſervos meos & ancillas, which may ſeem to alter the ſenſe and acception of the words, as if they were not to be taken in that ſenſe, as to denote ſuch as were in a ſervile condition, and inferior to other men, but in ſuch a ſenſe as may agree to all orders and conditions of men, even the higheſt among them, it being a glory to the greateſt of them to be called God's ſervants, and ſo would they comprehend even thoſe of all ſorts before mentioned.

But that they are not for all this to be taken here in that ſenſe, but ſo only as to denote thoſe of a ſervile and mean condition, is well obſerved by [n] Some, and that my ſervants and my handmaidens doth not denote here all ſorts of men, who are true believers and worſhippers of God, but peculiarly ſuch as being ſo, were yet in the condition of ſervants among men alſo, intimating that even they ſhould, notwithſtanding that their low eſtate, be by God made worthy of receiving any of thoſe eminent and extraordinary gifts of his holy Spirit, as well as their maſters, or any of the freeſt and nobleſt condition among men. Of perſons therefore of ſuch condition, in both places, I ſuppoſe, it ought to be underſtood, though Calvin here thinks that by ſervants and handmaids, are meant ſuch as had before the gift of prophecy, to denote that there ſhould be ſuch a ſuperabundant effuſion of God's Spirit, that even they on whom he was before ſhed, ſhould have him in a far greater meaſure. As before by St. Peter citing this text, inſtead of what the Hebrew founds, I will pour out my ſpirit, is ſaid of my ſpirit, ſo is it here again: what gifts of the Spirit are meant in the Hebrew we ſee is not expreſſed, but in that reading of St. Peter given, it is ſaid to be the gift of prophecy, there being added beyond what is in the Hebrew, καὶ προφητεύσουσι, though here neither in the LXX. be any ſuch thing expreſſed. By his authority we have ſufficient warrant ſo to underſtand it: and in the ſame manner doth the Arabick MS. Verſion underſtand it, rendring, ואיצא עלי אלעביר ועלי אלאמא אצב נבותי, and alſo upon the ſervants, and upon the handmaidens [o] will I pour out my prophecy. Contrary to this ſeems what the Jewiſh Doctors ſay, [p] אין הנבואה שורה אלא על חכם גבור ועשיר, Prophecy doth not reſide on any but on one that is wiſe, valiant and rich, and as Grotius cites it on Acts ii. 18. Spiritus ſanctus non requieſcit ſuper animam pauperis, The holy Spirit doth not reſt on the ſoul of a poor man. They ſay alſo that prophecy doth not reſide [q] מתוך עצבות, where men are in ſorrow. On ſuch grounds Abarbinel taking ſervants and maid-ſervants, to be properly taken, according to the ſound of the words denoting ſuch a condition, thinks that by the Spirit cannot be here meant the gift of prophecy, but only על היריעה והכרה באלהותו of the knowledge and acknowledgment of his duty: again he ſaith, ואמנם העברים והשפחות שמפני עבדותם יהיו תמיד בעצבון לא יוכלו להנבא אבל ישפיך השם את רוחו עליהם ר"ל רוח דעת ויראת השם, but as for ſervants and handmaidens, becauſe by reaſon of their ſervile condition, they are continually in ſorrow or trouble, they cannot be able to propheſy (or obtain the degree of propheſying) But God will pour out upon them his ſpirit, viz. the ſpirit of knowledge, and fear of the Lord.

Kimchi makes not any queſtion here, concerning either thoſe, who are called ſervants and

[m] Petr. à Fig. Magis placet ut ſomnia & viſiones pro eodem accipiantur. Poſſunt etiam viſiones intelligi omnia viſa prophetica quæ fiunt ſive in ſomno ſive vigilia, &c. [n] Druſ. Veil. [o] There is left out in the copy, In thoſe days. [p] Moreh. Neb. l. 2. c. 32. [q] Moreh. Neb. 2. c. 36.

and handmaidens, as to their condition denoted, or the gifts of the ſpirit, which are ſaid ſhall be poured out upon them, but puts another reſtriction on the words, by limiting thoſe called ſervants and handmaidens, who ſhall enjoy the privilege mentioned, only to ſuch, who though of Gentile nations, ſhould yet live in the land of Iſrael, and ſerve Iſraelitiſh maſters, as if only their ſo doing ſhould make them capable of the privileges of receiving the holy Spirit, which ſervants elſewhere are not capable of. But we find no ſuch limitation expreſſed in the words, and by St. Peter's citing them are given to extend them farther, even to any ſervants of either ſex, who were converted to God in Chriſt. Aben Ezra ſaith, ששבו לתורת השם, which are converted to the law of God, meaning, no doubt, the law of Moſes, but we by the more certain authority of St. Peter, ſay to the law of Chriſt, or the Goſpel, it being promiſed to thoſe days, viz. of Chriſt's giving a preeminence to them above the days under the law, in which was no difference longer made betwixt nations or conditions of men, Col. iii. 11. and compare Iſaiah lvi. and no doubt was then made good, God having promiſed it, though we have not particular inſtances of ſuch, as well conditions which were then endued with the gift of prophecy, as well as other gifts of the Spirit. What the uſual notion of propheſying is, every one at firſt hearing underſtands; yet it is again known to be ſometimes taken in a larger ſenſe than for what it properly ſignifies.

30. And I will ſhew wonders in the heavens, and in the earth, blood and fire, and pillars of ſmoke.

31. The ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſs, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come.

Having in the two foregoing verſes ſet forth ſuch extraordinary graces of his holy Spirit, as he would under the times of Chriſt liberally confer on believers, his faithful ſervants of all ages, ſexes, conditions and nations, for comfort to them, and edifying of his church, he here proceeds to enumerate ſuch terrible and fearful things, as he would alſo ſhew for terrifying the wicked, and to make all to fear before him. Much difficulty there is in the words, both as to the meaning of the things ſignified, and to the time to which they pertain, and in which they ſhould have their completion.

The wonders and prodigious ſigns that he will here ſhew, ſhall be in בשמים ובארץ baſhamaim ubaaretz, in the heavens, and in the earth. St. Peter for explication in his citing them, ſaith, wonders in heaven above, and in the earth beneath, τέρατα ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἄνω, καὶ σημεῖα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κάτω, wonders in heaven above, and ſigns in the earth beneath. Although the Greek of the LXX. have barely, according to the Hebrew, τέρατα ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, Wonders in heaven and upon earth, which ſhews that he did not in citing the words out of the Old Teſtament, tie himſelf to the tranſlation of the LXX. but gave the meaning of them in ſuch expreſſions, as he ſaw beſt to make plain the meaning thereof. Among the wonders, that he ſaith he will ſhew, is reckoned in the firſt place blood, which ſeems to belong to thoſe that he will ſhew on earth. Though that be named after the heavens, yet things concerning it are placed before ſuch as concern them. Which method Aben Ezra notes to be uſual in the holy tongue, viz. where two things are mentioned, to begin in ſhewing ſuch things as belong unto them, with ſuch as belong to the ſecond, and then to return to ſuch as pertain to the firſt. Blood: Of Blood in way of wonder and prodigy ſeveral examples are out of heathen Authors cited by the learned Mr. Lively, as of bloody rain, bloody ſprings, and wells, and the ſea appearing like blood, which were reckoned as prodigies preſaging ſome great miſchief. In the holy Scriptures we read of the waters, both of the river and the wells in Egypt, for ſtriking fear into the hardned heart of Pharaoh, turned into blood, as an extraordinary ſign of God's wrath. Here that it is named as a reaſon of great calamity to follow, appears by what is ſaid that it ſhall be before the great and terrible day of the Lord come; [r] ſeveral Expoſitors interpret it of extraordinary effuſion of blood in wars, Others underſtand by it [s] imbres & colores ſanguineos, bloody ſhowers, [t] Others think to be underſtood by it, the ſame which is after meant, by ſaying the moon ſhall be turned into blood; but certainly that is put as a different ſign from this, and this, though it be not expreſſed in what manner that blood ſhall be given as a prodigy, ſeems rather to be ſuch as ſhall portend bloody wars, than the blood in them ſhed; yet bloody wars themſelves alſo doth our Saviour put as ſigns of greater evils to come, Mat. xxiv. 6, 7. Some extraordinary appearance of blood, to the wonder and great conſternation of the people, the words plainly import there ſhall be, though they do not particularly expreſs how it ſhall be, and perhaps it may be ſome other than that of bloodſhed in war. In the next place he nameth Fire. Several examples have we of God's making uſe of fire, in a wonderful and extraordinary manner, for executing his judgments on ſinners, and ſtriking terror into the hearts of men, and that in diverſe kinds. On Sodom and Gomorrah in a wonderful manner he rained brimſtone and fire from the Lord out of heaven, Gen. xix. 24. Among the wonderful plagues ſent on the Egyptians, we read of fire mingled with hail, Exod. ix. 23, 24. When the anger of the Lord was kindled againſt the murmuring Iſraelites, [r] Pet. à Fig. Ribera, Tar. Sa. Menoch. Grot. Acts ii. though he take it in other things alſo, as the ſea becoming blood, Ap. viii. 8. and the much blood to be ſhed under Antichriſt.

[s] Anon. Bibliotheca Jo. Ebor.

[t] Mercer, Tirin.

elites, the fire of the Lord burnt among them in that place, that was called in memory thereof Tabarah, Numb. xi. 3. and xvi. 35. where there came out a fire from the Lord and conſumed the two hundred and fifty men that burnt incenſe. At the requeſt of Elijah, 2 Kings i. 10. there came fire from heaven and conſumed the captain and his fifty that came to take him. In all theſe hiſtories the fire appeared as a miracle, there being no ordinary reaſon for it. Here it is alſo ſaid it ſhall be given as a wonder, but not expreſſed in what manner; different conjectures and opinions therefore are there concerning it. Abarbinel reckoning it among the wonders that ſhall be given from heaven, underſtands it, שימטיר השם עליהם ברד ואבני אלגביש אשר בתוכם האש, that God will rain upon them hail, and great hailſtones in the midſt of which ſhall be fire, referring, we may ſuppoſe, either to what was done in Egypt, or to what the Pſalmiſt ſaith of God's giving hailſtones and coals of fire, Pſalm xviii. 12, 13. or what is, Ezek. xxxviii. 22. where God threatens to rain on Gog and Magog (whom he with other Jews thinks in this prophecy to be concerned) hailſtones, fire and brimſtone. Others underſtand it of terrible [u] lightnings, or ſtrange fiery flaming meteors in [w] the heavens or air [x] (ſuch as have been among heathens named alſo to portend cruel deſtructions.) There be who think it a prophecy of [y] thoſe fiery tongues in which the Holy Ghoſt deſcended on the diſciples, Acts ii. 3. But [z] Others yet, of extraordinary great fires in burning of towns and cities in the cruel war alſo that ſhall be in the times ſpoken of. [a] Others yet think that by it may be meant that general conflagration, with which the whole world ſhall be ſet on fire at the laſt day: which of theſe opinions be moſt probable will be better judged when we ſhall have conſidered, to what times the things here ſpoken do belong, and likewiſe what is meant by the next ſign named, and pillars of ſmoke, by which [b] Some, according to their opinion of the meaning of the foregoing word, underſtand ſmoke, as ſhould ariſe from ſuch things as ſhould be ſtrucken and burnt by the lightning, by that name of fire by them underſtood. [c] Others, agreeably to their way, ſuch ſmoke as ſhould aſcend from towns by the enemy ſet on fire. [d] Others the ſmoke which ſhall ariſe from the burning of the whole world. [e] Some think denoted a ſmoke that together came with thoſe fiery tongues, Acts ii. Pillars of ſmoke] They ſeemed ſo called from their figure aſcending in a right line in faſhion of a pillar. The word in the original is תמרות Timroth from תמר which ſignifies a palm-tree, thence transferred to ſignify an high ſtraight pillar, and as here ſuch a body of ſmoke as towereth up in ſuch a form, it being in [f] ſenſe the ſame that עמוד עשן, as it is called, Jud. ii. 40. Both of theſe names ſignifying both a pillar, and palm, are appropriated to a body of ſmoke aſcending לשבהה בה from the likeneſs of it to each of them in figure. The LXX. conſidering more the matter than the figure of it, render ἀτμίδα καπνοῦ; the Syriack alſo, ܕܥܫܢܐ ܕܬܢܢܐ; and the Vulgar Latin, vaporem fumi. The printed Arabick alſo بخار الدخان; all of the vapour of ſmoke; but the MS. Arabick done out of the Hebrew, عدالات الدخان עראלאת אלדחאן, [g] which, if the word be right written, muſt needs ſound, right or ſtraight aſcendings of ſmoke. But R. Tanchum in more uſual words ſaith it is, اعمدة الدخان المرتفعة pillars of ſmoke aſcending high, الذي يشبه العود لتكاثفه وامتداده which reſembles a pillar from its thickneſs and extenſion. The Chaldee renders it יטורין yiturin, pillars. Some take to be meant dark and [h] thick clouds: whatever be underſtood in this place, it muſt be ſuch in its kind as is not uſual or ordinary, but which hath of wonder in it, as likewiſe in the following ſigns, viz.

Ver. 31. The ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſs, and the moon into blood.] An expreſſion much like this had we ver. 10. The ſun and the moon ſhall be dark, which what it is thought to mean we there ſaw. As for what is here ſaid we have alſo very different expoſitions, [i] many underſtanding thereby eclipſes of thoſe luminaries, by which they ſhall loſe their light, and change their colour; for eclipſes of them do uſually ſtrike fear into men, and have been accounted [k] to bode ill things even ſecundum naturam ſuam (as Arias Montanus ſpeaks) in their ordinary nature, and when from known and natural cauſes, nedum ſi præter naturæ ordinem hujuſmodi accidant, much more if ſuch things happen contrary to the order, or uſual courſe of nature, and if any thing happen extraordinary in them, as theſe here foretold, if underſtood of eclipſes, probably were, to have ſomething unuſual in them. By the moon's being turned into blood, Kimchi obſerves to be meant, the bloody aſpect of it in a partial eclipſe, whereas in a total it appears black, his words being, כשיהיה הקדרות שלם יהיה הירח שחור וכשלא יהיה הקדרות שלם יהיה ארום כדם, i. e. when the eclipſe is perfect (or total,) then the moon is black, but when it is not total, then the moon is red like blood. Which Aben Ezra notes to happen, when it is far from caput draconis, the Dragon's [u] Kimchi, Druſ. Rib. &c. [w] التي تنسب الي السما لعلو مكانها which are attributed to heaven by reaſon of the height of their place, R. Tanchum. [x] Lively. [y] Jerome, Mercer. [z] Grot. Ribera. [a] Lyra, Sa. Men. Tirin. Pet. à Fig. who thinks likewiſe it may be referred to the invention of great guns. [b] Kimchi, Druſ. [c] Grot. [d] Tirin. [e] Mercer. [f] R. Tanchum. Kimchi, becauſe a palm-tree is an high ſtraight tree, therefore they liken an high and ſtraight thing to it. [g] عدولي, from the ſame root, ſignifies a tall old tree, but it may be it ſhould be نخلات נכאלאת from نخلة a palm-tree, and ſo it would literally anſwer to the Hebrew תמרות. [h] Columnas nubis, Munſt. Tig. i. e. as Calvin explains it, obſcuras nubes, dark clouds. [i] Aben Ezra, Kimchi, Lively, Ar. Mont. Merc. [k] Præ Eclipſi, quæ calamitatum venientium prænuntia eſſe ſolet, ejus lumen deficit, &c. Lively.

Dragon's head, and nearer than ſix degrees to the tail, which he thinks always to portend wars. [l] Others by the ſun's being turned into darkneſs, will have to be meant the obſcuration thereof, by reaſon of the much ſmoke before mentioned, and by the moon's into blood, its appearing red through, or by reaſon of the much blood of the ſlain drawn up into the air from the earth.

Theſe all underſtand the words in a literal ſenſe, and that ſuch prodigious things ſhall really appear; and ſo Kimchi obſerves of ſeveral Jewiſh Interpreters, and notes that Aben Ezra doth expound theſe words במשמעו according to the ſound of the letter, and that in the time here deſigned ſuch wonderful ſigns ſhould really be; but that Moſes Maimonides was of another mind, and did interpret this and like expreſſions על דרך משל, by way of parable, or in a figurative ſenſe, ſo as to denote ſuch great calamities as ſhould befal people, and by the ſtrange ſigns mentioned to be denoted great afflictions and wars, ſo that they are allegorically or figuratively, not literally to be interpreted, as likewiſe what is before ſaid concerning what ſhould be by the coming of the great ſwarms of locuſts, ver. 10. The ſun and the moon ſhall be dark, &c. and alſo what is after ſaid, chap. iii. 15. of the time of the war of Gog and Magog, as he will have it meant, The ſun and the moon ſhall be darkened, &c. But this is not only, nor firſt, that Doctor's opinion; we have it among Chriſtians more ancient. Ruffinus ſo takes it, who would not have underſtood any ſuch diſturbance and ſtrange accidents to have really been either in the heavens or the earth, but only in the minds of the affrighted people, who ſhould be in ſuch great perplexity, as if the whole frame of things were changed, and the ſun ſeem dark, and the moon bloody to them, and all things full of fire and ſmoke before their eyes.

Among more [m] modern Expoſitors alſo are there of the ſame opinion, that the words are not literally, but metaphorically to be meant, and by the ſun's being turned into darkneſs, and the moon into blood, to be denoted ſuch calamities as ſhould deprive them of all ſight of comfort.

R. Tanchum obſerves here that, استعارة, by way of metaphor, or figurative language, kings and kingdoms are likened unto ſtars; and ſuch here do ſome modern Expoſitors think to be meant by the ſun and the moon; and by thoſe ſtrange accidents which it is here ſaid ſhall happen to them, to be denoted what calamities ſhall befal them: Perſonæ quæ affligentur hic ſummæ authoritatis fore proculdubio ſignificantur, ſaith Druſius, The perſons that ſhall be afflicted are without doubt here ſignified to be ſuch, as are of chief authority, nam eos ſolis & lunæ nomine deſignat Propheta, For the Prophet doth by the names of the ſun and moon deſign thoſe of ſuch condition; and ſo Tarnovius notes, [n] ſunt qui allegorice in hoc verſu per ſolem & lunam perſonas ſummæ authoritatis notari exiſtimant, There are who think by the ſun and moon in this verſe to be denoted perſons of chief authority, who for their rebellion againſt God, in ſerving whom they ought to have given example to others, ſhall be more ſignally puniſhed than others, by ſuch puniſhments befalling them, as ſhall quite eclipſe and obſcure their glory and luſtre.

Abarbinel would have by the ſun and moon [o] in this place to be meant ארום וישמעאל Edom and Iſmael, (i. e. in his language the Chriſtians and Mahometans) and to point at the wars which ſhall be between them about the holy land; and that by the ſun (by which Edom is figured out) being turned into darkneſs, and the moon (by which Iſmael) being turned into blood, is meant נקמתם the vengeance that ſhall be taken on them. But I think there is no reaſon here to depart from the literal meaning of the words, but that both ſun and moon ought to be taken in their proper ſignification, and by thoſe alterations in their aſpect here deſcribed, to be really meant ſuch ſigns as ſhould in that kind be ſhewed in the time by God deſigned, which in the following words is pointed out by his ſaying, before that great and terrible, (or as Acts ii. 20. notable) day of the Lord come. But here is a main difficulty, and not ſeeming eaſy to be determined, what time is thereby deſcribed, and when theſe things ſhould be.

It is a rule given by [p] Maimonides, that كل يوم تكون فيه نحرة عظيمة او فادحة عظيمة فانه يسمي יום יעל הגדול והנורא any day (or every day) in which ſhall fall out any great benefit (or proſperity) or any great misfortune (any thing greatly helpful, or hurtful) is called, the great and terrible or domeſday of the Lord, and that ſo above, ver. 11. he calleth the day in which the locuſts ſhould come upon them, a day of the Lord, great and very terrible, which none ſhould abide. It being therefore without doubt that one ſingle day or time is here by theſe epithets deſcribed, yet ſeeing there be more to which they may well agree, it has cauſed very great difference betwixt Expoſitors, which of them ſhould be that which is here particularly meant. The now mentioned Maimonides, would have to be underſtood by it the day of the [q] defeat of Sennacherib near Jeruſalem. The very ſame is the opinion of the above cited Ruffinus among Chriſtian Expoſitors. The objection which againſt this opinion may be made, becauſe at or before that day appeared no ſuch things as are here mentioned, they prevent by underſtanding them figuratively, of thoſe calamities and great conſternation, which ſhould be to the Jews from his invading them, till [r] God ſhould bring this great and terrible day of of deſtruction on his head. If this expoſition like not any, ſaith Maimonides, then יכון וצף הלאך גוג עלי ירושלם בימי המלך המשיח, will it be a deſcription of the deſtruction of Gog near Jeruſalem in the days of that King Meſſiah: and this opinion do others of the Jews follow in the expoſition of this prophecy; באנה, ſaith R. Tanchum, ישיר בהדה אלנבוה אלי מלחמת גוג ומגוג, he ſeems in this prophecy to point out the war of Gog and Magog, in as much as there is great agreement between it and what is ſaid concerning that, Ezek. xxxviii. 22, &c.) So Kimchi thinks it referred to that time of the deſtruction of Gog and Magog, and the people that ſhall accompany them; at which time ſhall be ſeen ſuch eclipſes of the heavenly lights as are here deſcribed, as tokens or preſages thereof. To the ſame time Abarbinel alſo will have it to have reſpect, in his ſaying that this here ſaid of theſe wonderful ſigns, אין ספק כי הוא מה שביאר יחזקיאל במלחמת גוג ומגוג שיהיה שם דם והרג העצים בארץ, &c. i. e. there is no doubt but it is the ſame which Ezekiel deſcribes in (or concerning) the war of Gog and Magog, for that there ſhall be the blood of great ſlaughter in the earth, and fire and pillars of ſmoke, God raining on them from heaven fire and brimſtone, and an horrible tempeſt, &c. The day therefore here called, the great and terrible day of the Lord, he thinks to be, יום גאולת עמו, the day of the redemption (or reſtauration) of his people, before which and nigh unto it that war ſhall be, that great day of the Lord ſhall be, great for the ſalvation of his people, and terrible for the vengeance taken on their enemies.

[l] Grot. [m] Calvin, Dan. Tarnov. [n] See Pelican. to much like purpoſe interpreting the firſt of the Roman Empire, and wiſdom of the world, the ſecond of the Jews pulling Chriſt's blood on their own heads. [o] For in other places as above, ver. 10. and chap. iii. 15. he thinks other things to be meant thereby, as in the firſt place the deſtruction of Iſrael, in the ſecond vengeance on other nations. [p] Moreh. chap. xxix. [q] Theſe words are wanting in the Hebrew tranſlations. [r] 2 Kings xix. 35, &c. [s] Ruffin.

This explication of the words, that we may rightly judge of it, puts us on a neceſſary digreſſion, briefly to enquire whom they mean by Gog and Magog, and on what time they fix that bloody war and deſtruction of them, which they think to be that great and terrible day of the Lord. And for this I know not whether we ſhall find plainer directions from any, than from R. Tanchum in his notes on Ezek. xxxviii. 2. where is more expreſs mention of Gog and Magog than any where elſe in the Old Teſtament, he there ſaith, הדא בלא שך קבאיל אלתרך ואלתתר ובלדהם, i. e. [t] Theſe without doubt are the tribes of Turks and Tartars, and their country, referring for their original to Gen. x. 2. where are reckoned among the ſons of Japhet, Gomer and Magog, &c. Theſe, he ſaith, many other nations ſhould follow in the war by Ezekiel ſpoken of, though Gog be named as chief and king over them. This for the perſons; as for the time of that war, and what ſhould then happen unto them, he ſaith again, הדה אלקצה בלא שך מן אלמואעיד אלמנתטרה, This deſcription without doubt is among thoſe promiſes, the completion of which is to be yet expected, in as much as for what is deſcribed in it, לם יכן אלי אלאן מתלה ולא קריב לה, there hath never hitherto any ſuch thing been, nor any near unto it beſides that, אנהא מבצצה בכונהא חכון עקיב אנתמאע ישראל אלי בלאדהם וקבל תחצין אלבלאד ותעמירהא, that it is particularly aſſigned for its event, to be after the gathering of Iſrael to their own country, and before the fortifying and inhabiting their cities, as he ſaith is ſhewed by what is ſaid, ver. 10, 11, &c. and he thinks it probable that it is the ſame war that is pointed at in Zechariah xiv. though the circumſtances and expreſſions betwixt them be different; but notwithſtanding both prophecies, he ſaith, point to the ſame time, which is to be, ואנהא תכון בעד אנתמאע ישראל אלי בלאדהם, after the gathering of Iſrael unto their own country, and that to be בעד טהור ארנינו המלך המשיח, after the appearance of our Lord the King Meſſiah, who he prays מחרה יגלה may ſpeedily be revealed. Theſe are his words, which I put down at large, becauſe the book is not printed: by them we perceive what he thinks meant by Gog and Magog, he referring the great and terrible day of the Lord to that of their deſtruction, and when, according to him and other Jews, that day is to be expected: and this is the only choice which Maimonides allows for the expoſition of theſe words to them, that cannot embrace his other concerning the deſtruction of Sennacherib. But Chriſtians who aſſuredly believe and confeſs the Meſſiah to be already long ſince come, cannot agree to this, though they neither do approve the other, and therefore find out other expoſitions, which they think more probable than either of them, and in them do they yet differ among themſelves. Some underſtand as here meant the time of the deſtruction of the city Jeruſalem and the temple by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, Others the deſtruction of the ſame rebuilt by the Romans, before which what dreadful ſigns appeared of like nature to thoſe here mentioned, is recorded by Joſephus in the ſeventh Book de Bello Judaico, as of the appearance of a fiery ſword, and ſtrange comet, to which alſo [u] Some refer thoſe ſigns by our Saviour mentioned, [w] Mat. xxiv. 29, &c. ſo [x] Grotius thinks the words as uttered by Joel to point at that deſtruction brought on the Jewiſh nation by the Chaldeans, and as cited by St. Peter, as that afterwards brought on them by the Romans, either of which times well deſerves to be called a great and terrible day of the Lord. Others refer the day here ſo deſcribed to the times of Chriſt, Some to one, Some to another; Some to the day of his [y] paſſion, and his reſurrection, at which times great ſigns anſwerable to theſe here named are ſaid to have appeared; amongſt which is named the [z] ſun's being darkened, which here is ſaid ſhould be turned into darkneſs, and as Some think probably [a] of the moon alſo, though not in the Evangeliſts as here named; the Evangeliſts, as St. John witneſſeth, [t] Here may be compared what the Arabians ſay of ياجوج and ماجوج, Jagog and Magog, of whom ſee Geogr. Arab. Clim. 5. part 9. 10. and Maginus. [u] Hammond. [w] And Mark xiii. 24. and Luke xxi. 11. [x] On Acts ii. [y] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. and Mercer from Jerome. [z] Luke xxiii 45. [a] Mercer.

neſſeth, not regarding particularly all things. Under it [b] they comprehend alſo the day of Pentecoſt, when the Holy Ghoſt was in ſuch miraculous manner ſent down, that St. Peter ſaith that by it was made good what is here ſpoken by the Prophet. But it being a difficult matter to adapt all theſe ſigns to any one time already paſt, he ſaying he will ſhew theſe wonders before that day deſcribed, not in, or after it, Others think it a more certain way to take that day near to be the laſt day, the day of judgment, at Chriſt's ſecond coming, at the end of the world, which day is confeſſedly a day deſerving to be ſignally called, the great and terrible day of the Lord, before which both all the ſigns here named, as thoſe alſo reported in the Evangeliſts ſhall have a ſure and certain completion. That day therefore is it by many thought here beſt to underſtand, yet by Some ſo as to take in other times alſo, yea [c] all the time betwixt Chriſt's firſt coming and his laſt, that whatſoever of theſe prodigies have appeared, or ſhall appear in any ſuch ſignal time in that interval, may be looked on as pertaining to the fulfilling of this prophecy, ſo as that it is not neceſſary that they ſhould all at one time be compleated, nor all till the coming of that laſt of them. Cæperunt hæc in paſſione Chriſti, creverunt in excidio Hieroſolymitano per Titum, ſed perfectè complebuntur ſub finem mundi, ante extremum Judicium, & excidium univerſi, ſaith a [d] learned Expoſitor, Theſe wonderful things began to be ſhewn at the paſſion of Chriſt, (and after it at the day of Pentecoſt, as St. Peter in the forementioned place, Acts ii. witneſſeth) and to that day Some refer it; they were farther ſhewn at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Titus, to which it is by Others referred; but they ſhall be fully perfected and completed near towards the end of the world, before the laſt judgment, and the deſtruction of this whole world, which time is by Others thought properly to be meant. And indeed, whatever may be objected againſt any other times, to that do the epithets here given to it, evidently agree. That certainly deſerves ſignally to be called the day of the Lord, and the great day, for the great things that ſhall be done in it, and a terrible day, for the judgments in it to be executed on all that have ever lived in the world, when the heavens ſhall paſs away with a great noiſe, and the elements ſhall melt with fervent heat, the earth alſo and the works that are therein ſhall be burnt up, 2 Pet. iii. 10. ἐπιφανὴς, ſignal certainly, and notable, for the greatneſs and the awfulneſs and terror of it, muſt that day needs be; which conſideration, I ſuppoſe, will be ſufficient to take away the neceſſity of ſuppoſing, as Some do here, a various reading, as if the ancient copies of the Hebrew had read otherwiſe, than thoſe, which we now have, do. The ground of their ſuppoſition is the laſt of the epithets given here to the day of the Lord, deſcribed and in our copies read הנורא Hannora, which ſignifies terrible, or awful, and is to that ſenſe rendred by all Interpreters, as from ירא to fear. They think therefore that the LXX. and St. Peter, who agrees with them, did of old in the copies that they uſed read otherwiſe, viz. [e] הנראה Hannireeh, ſignifying apparent, as if from the root ראה raah, to ſee and perceive, they rendring it, ἐπιφανὴς, which Ours, Acts ii. 20. (where we ſaid theſe words are cited by St. Peter) render notable; the Latin tranſlation of the LXX. illuſtris, illuſtrious: but I think this ſuppoſition of theirs to be neither neceſſary nor probable. 1. Becauſe the LXX. in ſeveral other places, where the ſame word occurs, and is in the Hebrew ſo read as it is here, נורא Nora, render, as here, ἐπιφανὴς; ſo that if the Hebrew rendring here be to altered, becauſe of their tranſlation, it muſt alſo in all thoſe other places be changed; and it is not probable that there ſhould be ſo often miſtakes in any approved Hebrew copies, or differences in one took from another. 2. Becauſe the word נראה Nireah, ſeems not to have that height or weight of expreſſion, which both the matter ſpoken of, or the Greek word ἐπιφανὴς ſeems to require, viz. ſomething extraordinary remarkable and notable for what is eminent in it, it ſignifying ſimply that which is ſeen and apparent, nor I ſuppoſe any where elſe uſed in ſcripture as having any greater emphaſis in it; and therefore I ſuppoſe cannot be here thought ſo proper for the deſcription of that day, eſpecially having the word הנדול that great, put before it, to which it is joined, as ſuperadding ſomething whereby that preceding epithet is illuſtrated, as where two epithets are put together for the ſetting forth the nature of a thing, is uſually obſerved; and for that end the word Nireeh, ſignifying only a thing that is ſeen, ſeems not much to make, though the Greek word ἐπιφανὴς will, as denoting it not only great, but notable, for ſomething wherein its greatneſs ſhall appear, above what is found in other great days; ſo that we may ſuppoſe that the forecited Interpreters did not read otherwiſe than נורא Nora, thereby denoting what is extraordinarily great for the impreſſion that it ſhall make on the beholders, and meant even the ſame that they do, when elſewhere they render the ſame word by μέγας, great, χαλεπὸς, difficult, θαυμάσιος, or θαυμαστὸς, wonderful, or κράταιος, ſtrong, or φοβερὸς, terrible, in which places the word is by Ours and Others rendred in the ſame ſenſe, as here, terrible, or fearful, which ſenſe I do not find obſerved to be given by the Greek to any form from the root ראה raah, to ſee, except to the word מוראה Moreah, Zephan. iii. 1. which is by Ours there rendred filthy, or (as in the margin) gluttonous or craw, as by Others to ſome ſuch ſenſe denoting ſome ill condition; but by the Greek ἐπιφανὴς, illuſtris, conſpicuous, I ſuppoſe for the ill condition taxed in her. The word word therefore ſo often occurring, where נורא Nora is ſtill in the Hebrew that we have, and נראה nireah being no where ſo tranſlated by them, how ſhall we go to alter the Hebrew, becauſe of their tranſlation, and not rather read as we do nora, and think it to ſignify what might well be expreſſed by ἐπιφανὴς? This certainly is a ſafer way, than to offer violence to the text, by a never before obſerved different reading; for that which we now follow is confirmed by the joint conſent, not only of modern, but alſo of more ancient Tranſlators, ſuch as lived before the invention of printing, at ſeveral places and ſeveral ages, ſo that they cannot be ſaid to have all followed one copy, who rendred all in the ſame ſenſe that we now take from the preſent ordinary reading of the Hebrew. So the Chaldee rendring it דחילא Dechila, as likewiſe the Syriack; the ancient Latin, terribilis. The MS. Arabick المخوف almochawaph, all ſounding terrible, or dreadful: nor do we think therefore the LXX. to have meant otherwiſe by their rendring it as they do, than ſuch as ſhould be ſignal and notable for the dreadfulneſs of it, it properly ſignifying ſupra apparens, Qui apparet ſupra alios, & conſpicuus eſt, appearing above all others, and conſpicuous for what ſhould appear in it, which from what is deſcribed in the preceding words, neceſſarily appears to be matter of great terror, though they leave that here to be underſtood.

[b] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [c] Gualter. and Jun. Trem. [d] Tirin. [e] Cappel. and ſo Schindler thinks them elſewhere to have read this for the other, but his quotation of Deut. i. 19. is not warranted by our ordinary copies, which have not ἐπιφανῆ but φοβερὰν.

But the word being granted ſo to be read, and ſo to mean, then may it be queſtioned how theſe words, in this and the preceding verſe, ſounding threats and terror, ſhould agree with thoſe before them, which are promiſes of good and comfort. This queſtion will be ſolved by conſidering the different ſort of perſons, to which reſpect is had, or which are ſpoken of. There are among them who are truly God's people, and whom he ſo owneth, ver. 26, 27. My people, and of whom he ſaith he never ſhall be aſhamed, ſuch who turn to him, and cleave unto him with all their hearts; and to theſe belong the good things promiſed, and they have ſtill aſſurance of ſafety and ſecurity, whatever ſhall happen, though never ſo dangerous or terrible, and there are thoſe who are not ſo, but run on and perſiſt in rebellion againſt him; and on them ſhall all the dreadful things mentioned or threatened ſeize, with greateſt terror, without hope of eſcaping, ſo that the promiſes of good, and threats of evil that we here have, are without any contradiction, or incongruity joined together: ſo our Saviour telling of great diſtreſs and perplexity to all nations, ſo that men's hearts ſhould fail them for fear, &c. yet even then bids his to look up, and lift up their heads, for that their redemption drew nigh, Luke xxi. 26. This reaſon of the context, as the foregoing words direct to, ſo do thoſe that follow evidently confirm, in which he ſaith.

32. And it ſhall come to paſs that whoſoever ſhall call on the name of the Lord, ſhall be delivered: for in Mount Zion, and in Jeruſalem ſhall be deliverance, as the Lord hath ſaid, and in the remnant, whom the Lord ſhall call.

והיה Vehaiah, yet notwithſtanding that day ſhall be ſo great and terrible, threatening a general deſtruction, that none can ſee in themſelves any way how to eſcape the evil thereof, yet is there a way here ſhewed by the Lord how men may be delivered from it, and aſſurance given that as many of them as ſhall take it, and make uſe of it, ſhall be delivered, viz. as many as ſhall call upon the name of the Lord, whoſoever (ſaith he) of whatſoever nation, ſex, or condition; for ſo this term ſeems to be of as great latitude, as that of all thoſe above, ver. 28. ſo that neither of theſe promiſes is to be reſtrained to the Jews only, to whom (but not of whom) the Prophet then, more particularly ſpoke; but whoſoever, whether Jew or Gentile, of what condition ſoever, ſhall rightly believe in God, and in faith call upon his name for help, ſhall even then, when there ſhould to Others ſeem no hope of, or place for it, ſurely find it. So St. Paul applying thoſe words to the condition as well of the Greeks, or Gentiles, as of the Jews, cites them, Rom. x. 13. This calling on the name of the Lord, though it more particularly denotes the act of earneſt praying for help, yet neceſſarily includes ſincere obedience to him, and a right acknowledgment of, and firmer belief in him, with the like properties of a true ſervant of God, otherwiſe how vain it ſhall be to cry, Lord, Lord, as if that were enough, we are ſhewed, Mat. vii. 21. This ſame way of prayer, accompanied with ſuch things as may make it acceptable, is by our Saviour preſcribed, where he ſpeaking, as is moſt probable, of the ſame great day that the Prophet here points out, as the only way to eſcape the terrible effects of it, Luke xxi. 36. ſays, Watch ye therefore and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhall come to paſs, and to ſtand before the ſon of man. The Chaldee Paraphraſt renders it, כל דצלי בשמא דיי, every one that prayeth, [f] in nomine Domini, as the Latin Tranſlator renders, or [g] per nomen Domini, in the name, or through the name of the Lord; by which, though perhaps no more was by him meant, than what other tranſlations expreſs, [h] nomen Dei orabit, ſhall pray the name of the Lord, yet according to the plain letter of the words, it gives us a neceſſary direction in calling on the name of the Lord, for the acceptable and effectual performance of that duty, viz. that theſe prayers be put up in the name of the Lord Chriſt, in whom, and with true faith in whom always they ſhall prevail, that they that ſo pray may be delivered.

This,

[f] Bib. Polyg. [g] So by Mercer's Latin Tranſlation. [h] Merc. Pet. à Fig.

This, I ſay, the Chaldee reading ſuggeſts; and indeed the original itſelf, as literally [i] by Some tranſlated, omnis qui invocaverit in nomine Domini, whoſoever ſhall invocate on the name of the Lord, may ſuggeſt the ſame. Mercer ſo looks on the prepoſition ב in, with שם ſhem, the name joined to it, as having that emphaſis in it as to import more than if he had ſimply ſaid invocaverit Dominum, ſhall call on the Lord, viz. to call upon him in that or by that, viz. the word by which he hath made himſelf known to us, which is called his name: and, to illuſtrate what he ſaith, he cites thoſe words of St. John. No man hath ſeen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared him, John i. 18. So as that invocare in nomine, ſeu nomen Domini, to invocate in the name (or the name) of the Lord, is Deum invocare fiducia promiſſionis quam Chriſtus de cœlo ad nos attulit, to call on God with confidence of (or in) that promiſe, which Chriſt hath brought from heaven to us; unde & λόγος dicitur & imago Dei, whence he is called the word and the image of God, quod in Chriſto Deus patefacit, quo in nos ſit animo, becauſe in Chriſt God hath revealed himſelf, how minded he is to uſward. What do the words, according to this explication, give us to underſtand, but the ſame that the Chaldee Paraphraſt (as we ſaid) ſuggeſts to us, as required in ſuch prayers, as are here ſaid ſhall be effectual for obtaining deliverance in that great and terrible day of the Lord, viz. that they be put up in the name of the Lord, i. e. of Chriſt, and with faith in him. I do not find fault with our or other Tranſlations, which render only, ſhall call on the name of the Lord, but only ſhew what (as we ſaid) may be looked on as ſuggeſted by the expreſſion in the original Hebrew and Chaldee, for the right framing and directing thoſe prayers, to which the promiſe is here made, that they may be effectual for that end, which is here ſaid they ſhall be; what that is the next word declares. The general efficacy of prayer rightly ordered, and duly put up to God, for obtaining all good, and averting all evils, is often in the Scripture ſet forth. Whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, he will give it you, ſaith our Saviour, John xvi. 23. That which is here ſaid ſhall be obtained is deliverance from the terror of the great day of the Lord. Whoſoever ſhall call on the name of the Lord ſhall be delivered, ימלט, Yimmalet. This word [k] Some look on as having in it great emphaſis, more than if he had uſed a word that had ſimply the notion of ſervandi, ſaving, as importing that though the face of things were now ſuch, as that there ſeemed no hope left to any of eſcaping the great evils, threatening to all inevitable deſtruction, ſo that all might ſeem to be in a deſperate condition, yet God's faithful ſervants, who, caſting themſelves on him with aſſured confidence in his power and mercy, ſhall call on him, ſhall ſurely be delivered from the terrors of that great and evil day, and find it to themſelves a day [l] of entring into the joy of their Lord, and of ſetting them in an eſtate free from all farther fear of evil. As an aſſurance or reaſon, convincing that it ſhall be ſo to them, follows in the next words. For in Mount Zion and in Jeruſalem ſhall be deliverance, as the Lord hath ſaid. The day here ſpoken of, is ſaid to be great and terrible, ſuch as may threaten a general deſtruction to all, yet it is the Lord's day, the affairs and tranſactions thereof are by him ordered, ſo as that the evils thereof ſhall not without diſtinction ſeize on all, but there ſhall be even in that day an aſylum or place of refuge for God's faithful ſervants, and ſuch as cleave faithfully to him, and [m] call upon him in truth in Mount Zion and Jeruſalem (the true church of God) ſhall be to them, to all the true members of it, deliverance. That ſhall be to them like the ark of Noah, to thoſe who betook themſelves into it, when God [n] brought in the flood upon the whole world of the ungodly, therein ſhall be to them, while Others that are out of it periſh, deliverance.

If Mount Zion and Jeruſalem ſhould be here literally taken, for the places by thoſe names properly meant, where, in thoſe days, was the temple of God, or houſe of prayer, and whither [o] the tribes went up, the tribes of the Lord unto the teſtimony of the Lord, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord and call upon it; it would then favour the expoſition of ſuch as would have the great day of the Lord to be ſome ſuch day of calamity, as ſhould be to them, while Zion and Jeruſalem and the temple ſhould be the chief or only places of the true worſhip of God, as either before it was deſtroyed at all, as in Sennacherib's time, or after its being again rebuilt, as we have ſeen according to the ſeveral opinions that we have mentioned, and ſo ſhould theſe words be referred to ſuch as were then delivered and preſerved. But it ſeems better to Others that thoſe names ſhould not be properly underſtood, but taken in a figurative ſenſe for the church of God. It having been [p] there firſt ſeated, and thence extended all the world over, carried the name thereof along with it. So that whereſoever it was ſpread, and the doctrine of the kingdom preached, was ſaid to be Mount Zion and Jeruſalem, even to the fartheſt parts of the earth: and in this notion taken will it agree with that expoſition, which we look on as the plaineſt and ſureſt, of underſtanding by the great and terrible day of the Lord, the day of the laſt judgment, and be an aſſurance of deliverance, even in that day, to the true members of the church, ſuch whom the Lord ſhall call into it, and which ſhall in it call on the name of the Lord, i. e. (ſaith Mercer) of Chriſt, and that in truth, and with an humble heart, for otherwiſe not every one that ſaith, Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the kingdom of heaven, Mat. vii. 21. For aſſurance of it to themſelves, they have the word and promiſe of the Lord: ſo ſaith he, as the Lord hath ſaid; which [i] Interlin. [k] Calvin. [l] Mark xxv. 13. [m] Pſalm cxlv. 12. [n] 2 Pet. ii. 5. [o] Pſalm cxxii. 4.

[p] Repentance and remiſſion of ſins was to be preached to all nations, beginning firſt at Jeruſalem, Luke xxiv. 47.

which I ſuppoſe may be well underſtood to denote, both [q] what is now by him, and elſewhere by the other Prophets ſpoken, rather than to aſſign any one place particularly pointed to, as Some would have to be, as R. Sol. Deut. xxviii. 10. as [r] Others, Deut. xxxii. 43. as Kimchi, Iſaiah iv. 3. which refer to the time of Sennacherib, of which (as we have ſeen) Some will have the day of the Lord here ſpoken of to be meant. The mentioning of ſuch ſeveral places, as many others may be mentioned, in which God may be ſaid to have ſaid what the Prophet here ſaith he did, may ſhew it to be ſufficient to underſtand that God had ſpoken it by the Prophets, without particularly referring to any one place, where he ſaid it: and if we look on what this Prophet himſelf [s] hath ſaid from what is from v. 22. to this place, we may ſee enough to make good that God had even by him promiſed ſuch deliverance to them. We may elſe with Others look upon, by, as the Lord hath ſaid, to be meant as the [t] Lord hath decreed and purpoſed. The import of all will be to ſhew the certainty of the deliverance ſpoken of, and promiſed to ſuch as ſhall be thought worthy to find it. They were before mentioned in the words, whoſoever ſhall call on the name of the Lord, and are in the following words farther expreſſed, in his ſaying, and in the remnant, whom the Lord ſhall call. The words in the Hebrew are ובשרידים אשר יהוה קרא Ubaſſeridim aſher Jehovah kore, of which our Engliſh is a very literal tranſlation, and agrees with moſt Others. Abarbinel obſerves that they are capable of being rendred otherwiſe, viz. and in the remnant who ſhall call on the name of the Lord: But beſides that this would be but a repetition of what is before ſaid, if it were ſo to be taken, the verb would then rather have been in the plural number, as the word ſeridim, which would be then the nominative caſe of it, is, whereas it is now ſingular, and ſo ſeems more properly referred to Jehovah. But however this might be ſolved, I find not any to take that other way, but all generally to take Jehovah, as Ours do, for the nominative caſe, and ſeridim to be governed of the verb, expreſſing whom the Lord ſhould call, and ſo will be, as we ſaid, farther here declared who ſhould be delivered, as in the firſt clauſe, for whom in Mount Zion and Jeruſalem ſhould be deliverance, as is in the ſecond, where is but a deſcription of the ſame perſons, though in different terms, in reſpect to different qualifications concurring in them, one that they ſhould call on the name of the Lord, and another that they ſhould be called of the Lord, or the Lord ſhould call them. It is therefore by [u] Some obſerved that the conjunction ו, u, and, is here, as in ſeveral other places, not ſo much a copulative to join other things to ſomewhat that had been before mentioned, as exegetical or declaratory of the fore-mentioned, and to ſignify as much as nempe, to wit, Nempe in reſiduum quos vocaverit Dominus. In Mount Zion and in Jeruſalem ſhall be deliverance, and in the remnant, &c. not as if the remnant were others, beſides thoſe that ſhould in Zion and Jeruſalem call on the name of the Lord, and find deliverance, but that thoſe for whom there ſhould be deliverance, ſhould be that remnant whom the Lord ſhall call; and that both of Jews and Gentiles, though [w] Some by them peculiarly underſtand the Gentiles, who ſhall embrace that goſpel which was preached firſt to the Jews; [x] Others of ſuch of the Jews that ſhould be united in Chriſt with the Gentiles, and gathered together into his flock and fold. Theſe may be well reconciled by underſtanding the true believers of both ſorts; they both take all in, though they differently think the word to refer more properly to the one than to the other; and though by joining them the number will be ſtill increaſed, yet may they all be properly called but [y] a remnant, in reſpect to the greater number of thoſe who are not concerned in any of the words here ſpoken, nor called by the Lord.

The word rendred remnant is in the Hebrew שרידים ſheridim, which ſignifies ſuch as remain, when others are taken away, or eſcape ſuch dangers or deſtruction which ſeize on Others. Which noun together with the root or verb from whence it comes, occurs, Joſhua x. 20. where is read והשרידים שרדו מהם Vehaſſeridim Saradu Mehem, which Ours render, the reſt which remained of them. The Interlineary, & ſuperſtites ſuperfuerunt ex eis: the LXX. καὶ διασωζόμενοι διεσώθησαν, & ſuperſtites evaſerunt, it is elſewhere joined with a word of near ſignification to it, שריד ופלט, Sarid upalit, Jer. xlii. 17. where Ours render (who) ſhall remain or eſcape; but the Greek looking on them as both ſignifying the ſame thing, puts but one word for them both, viz. σωζόμενοι that ſhall be ſaved. So that we ſee the LXX. as well as Others, acknowledge this as a known notion of the word Seridim, ſignifying ſuch as remain, or are ſaved from ſuch evils as fall on Others, which makes it juſtly queſtionable why in this place, to which this notion ſeems moſt aptly agreeable, they ſhould render it by a word of a far different ſound, viz. εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, evangelizati; which ſeems ſo little to agree with that other acknowledged ſignification of the word, that it makes diverſe to think that they did read otherwiſe in the Hebrew than is now read, viz. המבשרים, which taken paſſively, and read Mebuſſarim, will ſignify indeed εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, i. e. as it is in the Latin Verſion in the Polyglott Bibles, evangelizati, ſuch as have received good tidings (news or promiſes of good, or Goſpel) from בשר Biſſer, to report, (and more eſpecially [z] rem bonam & lætam, ſome good or glad thing, and in the paſſive voice, if it were uſed (as we do not find it in the Bible uſed) would ſignify to have ſuch tidings brought to him, as εὐαγγελίζομαι in the Greek, though that alſo be oftener uſed in the active ſignification, and ſo here alſo in Hierome out of the Greek tranſlated, annuncians, as in ſeveral Greek copies it is read alſo in the ſingular number εὐαγγελιζόμενος.) So L. Capell. after ſeveral Others, ſaith, legerunt מבשרים: but ſure the words Mebuſſarim and Seridim are ſo different both in ſound and writing, that it can ſcarce be imagined that any ſcribe would miſtake or change one for the other. And that very anciently it was read in the Hebrew, as now it is, Seridim, may appear from what is found in the fragments of [a] Theodotion's tranſlation, who retaining the Hebrew word untranſlated did read, ἐν σαριδείν, In Saridin, as likewiſe from what Jerome ſaith, that in the Hebrew is read שרידים Seridim, quod Judæi loci nomen exiſtimant, which the Jews think to be the name of a place, as if it were ſaid, in Mount Zion, and in Jeruſalem, and in Seridim, (what Jews he means I know not. I think it found in none of their Expoſitors, nor any mention of it, but in that fragment of Theodotion.) But then if the LXX. had not read it ſo, as they ſuppoſe they did, how came it to paſs that they tranſlated it in that notion, proper to the word which they ſubſtitute, and not to this that is now in the Hebrew found? for this I ſhall not preſume poſitively to give a reaſon, nor be bold in conjecturing; yet I think that without tranſgreſſing the bounds of modeſty, I may propoſe this as not improbable, viz. that taking the word שרידים Seridim, to be of the ſame notion of deliverance, or eſcaping (as we have ſeen them to do, Jer. xlii. 17. where therefore we ſee them to make one word ſerve for both) ſo neither here willing to repeat the ſame word, or Some from the ſame theme (as the Syriack Verſion doth, putting for the firſt, ܡܫܚܙܒܘܬܐ Meſhauzbutho, deliverance; for the ſecond, ܡܫܚܙܒ Meſhauzbe, the delivered) thought more convenient to put another word, though not literally anſwering to that in the Hebrew, which with reſpect to what was before, and what follows, would give a convenient meaning agreeable to the place, thus; and in Mount Zion and in Jeruſalem ἔσται ἀνασωζόμενος, there ſhall be who ſhall be ſaved, as the Lord hath ſaid, καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ὃς Κύριος προσκέκληται, and ſuch as ſhall receive the Goſpel (or good tidings, viz. deliverance) whom the Lord hath called. Inſtead of the Hebrew word, which ſeems to reſpect the number of thoſe, to whom deliverance is promiſed, they put a word that more ſeems to ſet forth their qualification; not, I ſuppoſe, that they thought the word which they tranſlated properly ſo to ſignify, but becauſe to all them, and only to them, whom the Lord ſhould call, ſhould pertain thoſe joyful tidings, that good promiſe of deliverance.

[q] Merc. [r] Piſc. Tarn. [s] Ribera. [t] Merc. Pet. à Fig. [u] Piſc. Grot. [w] Mercer. Tarnov. Jerome, Jun. Trem. Hall's Paraph. [y] The word remnant is uſed alſo in the New Teſtament, to expreſs the number of thoſe that ſhall obtain ſalvation, Rom. ix. 27. and xi. 5. [z] Schindl.

This, or ſome like, I ſuppoſe will be a plainer and ſafer way of reconciling the original and the Greek tranſlation of this word, than to change the Hebrew now read, that it may agree with the Greek. This I ſay, ſuppoſing that the Authors of that verſion did ſo at firſt write, as it is now read in them. For of that Druſius ſeems to doubt, when citing the Greek εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, he ſaith, Si vera hæc lectio, if this reading be true; but of that I ſhall not now raiſe any queſtion.

The following words declare how that remnant, to whom alone deliverance is here promiſed, obtain to be of that ſelect number, viz. only by the free grace of God, by his bringing them home unto himſelf, ſo ſaith he, whom the Lord ſhall call, אשר יהוה קרא aſher Jehovah Kore. The word Kore, being a participle, ſignifies by itſelf barely, calling, and is ſo rendred in the Interlineary, vocans. It is therefore neceſſarily in ſuch conſtruction to have a verb ſubſtantive underſtood and joined with it, to reſtrain it to ſome time, whether preſent, paſt, or future, and for either of theſe is a participle accordingly made to ſerve, as the verb underſtood with it ſhall be regulated, which may be ſo done as to give it the notion either of the preſent, præter, or future tenſe, and ſometimes therefore ſo uſed as to denote one of theſe, [b] ſometimes one, ſometimes another, as the ſenſe of the place ſhall require. This here is by Interpreters uſed for either of them, or the præter, being by [c] Some rendred vocat, doth call, in the preſent tenſe, [d] by Others vocavit in the præter, hath called, as the LXX. προσκέκληται, the Syriack ܩܪܐ kero, the printed Arabick دعا, the Chaldee in his Paraphraſe alſo, though in a different ſignification, in the ſame ſenſe; by Others in the future, as the Vulgar with ſeveral Others, vocaverit, Caſtalio vocabit, and [e] Ours ſhall call. The ſenſe in the matter ſpoken of, viz. God's calling of his, as here meant, will be all one, which ſoever of theſe be taken, it being at all times certain. It will be to be conſidered therefore what is here meant by his calling of them. The word Kore in its general acception ſignifies to call to, or on any, for any thing or purpoſe, but ſometimes more peculiarly in ſome particular caſe. So R. Solomon ſays, that it notes calling or inviting, לסעודה או לעבודת המלך, to a banquet or ſome ſervice under a king, and to be all one with הזמנה hazmanah, a preparing, deſtinating, or appointing for a thing, and ſo inviting to it, by which the Chaldee here renders it ומין, which [f] Some render, quos Dominus deſtinat, whom the Lord deſtinates; [g] Others prædeſtinavit, hath predeſtinated; [h] Others, invitat, doth invite. R. David Kimchi ſaith to be underſtood by it, either ſuch as God אותם עבדי ואוהבי ſhall call my ſervants and friends, or elſe קריאת הגדולה והכביד with a call of (or to) greatneſs and glory, ſuch as he ſhall chooſe to make great and glorious, as ſuch are elſewhere named קרואים keruim, and then rendred by Ours renowned, as both Numb. i. 16. and Ezek. xxiii. 23. in the Interlineary in one place, convocati, called together, in the other invitati invited.

[a] Bib. gr. Francofurti 1597. [b] Glaſſ. Gram. p. 415. or as in the margin 653. [c] Pet. à Fig. Munſt. [d] LXX. Syr. [e] And ſo the MS. Arab. الذي سيكون الله داعي بهم. [f] In Bibl. Polyg. [g] Pet. à Fig. [h] Mercer.

invited. Aben Ezra expounds it by נוזר, doth decree, (or hath decreed or ſhall decree.) Theſe expoſitions of theirs may be applied to the notion of God's being ſaid here to call them, that ſhall be that remnant, who ſhall be delivered, all of them, looking on it as a peculiar and more than ordinary calling.

To give the meaning in plain terms, I think we may thus do it. God's calling may be taken either, 1*ſt*, more largely for a general calling on all by the preaching or publiſhing of his word to them, therein making them to know the only way to ſalvation, and for finding deliverance, and inviting them to take it, which is not by many accepted, for in this kind many be called, but few choſen, Mat. xx. 16. or, 2*dly*, for a more peculiar call, ſuch as hath with it efficacy to work on them who are by it called, to hearken to it and obey him, and to take ſuch ways as he directs them to, that they may obtain the promiſed deliverance. The firſt of theſe is not the notion in which it appears here taken, for it is here limited to ſuch a ſelect remnant only who ſhall find deliverance; which remnant conſiſting of thoſe whom God ſhould call, it manifeſtly imports that all thoſe, whom God did or ſhould call, ſhould be of that remnant. Such are by St. Paul deſcribed to [i] be thoſe who are the called κατὰ πρόθεσιν, according to purpoſe (or, as Ours render, [k] his purpoſe) Rom. viii. 28. of whom he ſaith alſo that he did foreknow them, predeſtinate them, call them, juſtify them, and would glorify them, ver. 29, 30. So that the word call here appears to include and import more than a promiſcuous calling, viz. [l] election from before, and ſuch a calling in due time, which ſhall by his grace beſtowed on them be made effectual for bringing them home to him, and make them obedient to him, which all the הומנה Hazmanah, preparation, may include, and I think he well gives the meaning who expounds the words, [m] traxerit ad ſe, ſhall draw to himſelf, according as our Saviour ſaith, No man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him, John vi. 44.

By this deſcription of thoſe who are that remnant, to whom ſhall be deliverance, viz. that they are only ſuch as God ſhall call, he appears to exclude from that ſelect number, ſuch [n] hypocritical pretenders, who pretend to be of it, but do not approve themſelves ſo to be, and ordained to life, by rightly calling on his name, and walking worthy of him. It ſhews likewiſe their ſalvation not to be from their own power, and works, or merit in themſelves, but of the free grace of God, as St. Paul calleth them a remnant according to the election of grace, and if by grace, then not of works, Rom. xi. 5, 6. as he ſaith alſo, By grace ye are ſaved, through faith, and that not of yourſelves, it is the gift of God; not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt, Eph. ii. 8, 9. Beſides this notion of calling, the word קרא hath alſo another, viz. of reading, and this doth Ar. Montanus, look on as very proper to this place, as that the words may ſound, whom the Lord ſhall read, viz. in his book of life, ſtanding there written and not blotted out; as if it ſhould import that more, even all, had been there written, yet, à multis commiſſum eſt ut eorum nomina de libro illo delerentur, many have occaſioned by their own fault, that their names ſhould be blotted out of that book, and that remnant only, whom the Lord ſhould read, and find remaining there, ſhould find deliverance. That to be a notion well befitting the matter here ſpoken of, he thinks may be made apparent by ſuch expreſſions as are elſewhere uſed, as Exod. xxxii. 33. where the Lord ſaith, whoſoever hath ſinned againſt me, him will I blot out of my book, where by ſaying ſome ſhall be blotted out, appears that others may be ſaid to be ſtill read there, beſides other places out of the New Teſtament cited by him, as Rev. iii. 5. and xxii. 19. which ſeem to juſtify the taking the word here in that notion of reading, to which he might have added, Phil. iv. 3. There are two more out of the Old, which Abarbinel alſo cites as much agreeable to the expreſſion here uſed, viz. Iſaiah iv. 3. It ſhall come to paſs that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jeruſalem ſhall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jeruſalem, and Dan. xii. 1. there ſhall be a time of trouble, ſuch as never was ſince there was a nation, even to that ſame time, and at that time thy people ſhall be delivered, every one that ſhall be found written in the book.

How this expreſſion here, if the word be taken in the notion of reading, is illuſtrated by thoſe that we have laſt cited, and the like, is manifeſt. For by the ſame reaſon that they are ſaid to be written in the book of God, or life, may they be ſaid to be read therein; ſpeaking of the things of God in the language of men, or according as they uſe to do it, or ſpeak of things among them; as when they, who are deſigned to any places or privileges, are written in ſome book or roll, there to be publickly read, and, while they ſo remain, have right to thoſe offices or privileges; but if they be thence blotted out, it is a ſign that they are deprived thereof, and are not longer to enjoy them. So that if the word ſhould be here rendred in that notion of reading, the ſenſe will be plain, but then it will be but ſtill the ſame meaning, as if it be rendred by calling (as generally it is, and we have no reaſon to depart from it) both importing that thoſe ſpoken of are elected and deſtined by God to ſalvation, and ſhall find deliverance, whereas others ſhall periſh, and both are applicable to the deliverance ſpoken of, whether underſtood of that from the evils of the laſt day, which may ſeem the moſt genuine meaning of it in this place, or from thoſe national calamities, or deſtruction, which ſhould befal that people ſpoken to, as Others (as we have ſeen) underſtand it.

CHAP.

[i] Druſ. [k] Though Dr. Hammond gives another meaning alſo with leaving out, his. [l] Calv. [m] Vatab. [n] Calv. Gualt.

CHAP. III.

TO prevent ſuch confuſion as might otherwiſe happen in the expoſition of this chapter, it may be convenient to premiſe, that there is a very great difference betwixt Expoſitors concerning both the time and the perſons ſpoken of in the words, like that which we have already taken notice of on verſe 31. of the foregoing chapter; between the latter part of which chapter and theſe words ſeems to be ſuch connexion, that what in our ordinary diviſion is verſe 28. of that, is by Others made the firſt of this. To begin with the opinions of the Jews concerning theſe things; Aben Ezra ſaith that many of them think that this Prophecy is לעתיד, for the future, or concerns things yet to come, and he ſaith, אולי כן הוא, that perhaps it is ſo: but that one Rabbi Moſes refers it to the time of Jehoſhaphat, and that hiſtory recorded, 2 Chron. xx. concerning the great deſtruction of the children of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, who inſtead of fighting againſt Judah, the Lord ſo ordering it, ſlew and deſtroyed one another: for which great deliverance, Jehoſhaphat and his people, aſſembling themſelves in the valley of Beracha, bleſſed the Lord, and therefore the place was by him and them called the valley of Beracha, (i. e. of bleſſing) and that ſame valley here from that act of his called by his name, the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as they think, at which time likewiſe they think that ſuch, who had been taken captives in the days of their fathers, returned home. Thus Aben Ezra from that R. Moſes: [o] But that that cannot be the thing here ſpoken of appears (to omit other reaſons) in that that was moſt probably done before this was here ſpoken by the Prophet, [p] who doth not report an hiſtory of things paſt, but foretel things to come: Yet is it by [q] Others looked on as an alluſion to that hiſtory, for illuſtrating ſuch things as God would after do, by comparing them to ſuch as he had already done.

Kimchi thinks it to belong to the days of the Meſſiah; and to the war or battle of Gog and Magog, which ſhould be in the valley of Jehoſhaphat near Jeruſalem. R. Tanchum alſo by what we have already ſaid on ver. 31. of the foregoing chapter, appears to refer it to that time and thoſe tranſactions, but with what little certainty may appear by his own words, with which he concludes what he thought concerning Gog and Magog, in his notes on Ezek. xxxviii. with words cited out of Maimonides (yad c. ult.) هذه الامور وما يشبهها ليس بيد العلما فيها نقل محقق وانما تكلم فيها كل من تكلم بحسب ما يظهر من ترجيح النصوص وكلما ظهر منها شي انكشف الاخبار به علي حقيقته, i. e. As for theſe things and the like, there is not concerning them any certain tradition in the hands of learned men, but whoſoever ſpeaks any thing of them, ſpeaks according to what appears from the tendency of the words of the text (or what the words of the text ſeem moſt to incline to) and whenſoever any ſuch thing appears (in act) then is revealed (or made manifeſt) what is ſpoken of it, according to its true meaning.

Abarbinel, though he thinks Gog and Magog to be here had reſpect to, yet doth it in a different way from thoſe Others. His opinion concerning the matters here ſpoken of is, that both in theſe words, and thoſe above (chap. ii. 30, 31.) reſpect is had to the Chriſtians, whom he calls Edom (denoted by the ſun) and the Mahometans, whom he calls Iſmael (denoted by the moon) which both being as enemies to the Jews, ſo one to another, and have had much contention one with another concerning the poſſeſſion of the Holy Land, and many wars in and about it, ſometimes one for ſeveral years holding it, ſometimes the other, ſtill both keeping the Jews out of it; and that it is here propheſied that God will at the time here ſpoken of, take vengeance on them both, for the wrong by both of them done to the Jews; and his opinion is, that by the words of the Prophet here is plainly foretold, that though the Mahometans are now in poſſeſſion of it, yet the Chriſtians ſhall yet again another time invade it, and deſtroy the Mahometans there with a great deſtruction, on which occaſion the Mahometans ſhall gather themſelves together from Babylon, and Aſſyria, and the [r] eaſtern coaſts, and come to war againſt the Chriſtians, to revenge the blood of their brethren that was ſhed, and to take again the Holy Land out of their hands; and then ſhall be the vengeance of God both on the Chriſtians and Mahometans, for then ſhall the ſword of the one be againſt the other: and becauſe the Mahometans from Aſſyria and Babel did deſtroy the Holy Land the firſt time, and the Chriſtians the ſecond, therefore ſhall it be by the judgment of God, that in the place where they did evil, there ſhall be his judgment on them, and it is probable that Gog ſhall be then head or chief of the men of the eaſt in that war. But his ſtirring up himſelf (or intention) ſhall not then be to fight againſt Iſrael, as Expoſitors think, but againſt the Chriſtians their enemies, and by reaſon of God's ſtirring up thoſe people (ſo to do) is it that the Prophet ſaith here, I will gather all nations, &c. Thus gives he his opinion, in which he confeſſeth himſelf (we ſee) to be ſingular, and to differ from other Expoſitors: yet he thinks the [s] words are plainly for him. The truth, time will diſcover; mean while it hath nothing of certainty, and little of probability in it. Theſe are the chief opinions concerning the ſcope of this Prophecy among the Jews. Among the Chriſtians alſo there is much other variety; [t] Cyril takes the time, in which this Prophecy was to be fulfilled, to be after the return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh captivity by the permiſſion of Cyrus, and refers the fulfilling of it to thoſe tranſactions upon it, which are recorded of Ezra and Nehemias; ſo Others refer it to what ſhould be done [u] to the Aſſyrians and Chaldeans. Others refer it to ſome later times, the times after Chriſt's coming; yea [w] many to the laſt of times, his coming to judgment at the end of the world. But Others, though they take in that alſo, yet will not have it to be reſtrained to that, but ſo as to be extended to all the time after his firſt coming until his ſecond, and to that which ſhall then be done, [x] ad totum evangelii tempus, to the whole time under the Goſpel, in which God promiſeth defence to his church, and threatneth deſtruction to the enemies thereof, of which things though ſeveral examples appear in this world, yet a fuller and more manifeſt completion ſhall be at the laſt judgment. Theſe opinions the [y] Reverend Diodati joins together in his notes on the firſt words as all meant in them and in what follows. This in part and figuratively may be underſtood of God's vengeance upon the enemies of his people after the deliverance from Babylon; but chiefly and ſpiritually muſt be referred to Chriſt's judgments upon the enemies of his church by him redeemed, and eſpecially at the final and univerſal deliverance at his laſt coming; what grounds theſe and other Expoſitors, ſo different in their opinions, go upon, and what to judge of ſuch their ſeveral opinions, we ſhall the better perceive by going over the words in particular, as they lie in order, which, having premiſed this in general, we ſhall by God's help endeavour to do.

[o] For it ſeems but a groundleſs conjecture of Aben Ezra from that expoſition only of R. Moſes, that perhaps Joel lived in the time of Jehoſhaphat. He is by Others looked on as living later. [p] Chriſt. à Caſtro. Druſ. [q] Merc. Piſc. [r] מפאות המזרח The corners of the Eaſt. [s] הנה דברי הנבואות יורוני יזמרן לי. [t] And ſee Theodoret.

VERSE 1. For behold, in thoſe days and in that time, when I ſhall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jeruſalem,

2. I will alſo gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, and will plead with them there for my people, and for my heritage Iſrael, whom they have ſcattered among the nations, and parted my land.

כי הנה Ci hinneh, For behold. The participle כי by Ours rendred for, as generally it is in other tranſlations by a particle of that ſignification in their ſeveral languages, Grotius thinks better rendred by, verum, or ſed, but, (which [z] Others follow) as ſo better ſhewing the coherence of theſe words with thoſe that go before, chap. ii. but in which he thinks intimated, that ſome of them which eſcaped ſhould be carried away captives, and that here is a reſtauration promiſed to them. That the particle hath elſewhere that ſignification of, but, is no doubt, but why the ſignification of, for, ſhould not here be as proper to ſhew the connexion of theſe words with thoſe former, as ſhewing when and how the deliverance there promiſed to ſome, and deſtruction to others, ſhould be made good, I do not ſee.

הנה Hinneh, behold, this particle, being a [a] note of attention, ſtirs up to it, and gives withal aſſurance, that though the thing ſpoken of be ſuch as they might otherwiſe think ſtrange, and doubt of, yet ſhall certainly be. In thoſe days and in that time, when I ſhall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jeruſalem. Theſe words intimate, that there was a time when thoſe ſpoken of were made or led captives, though not before expreſſed, from which captivity here is a plain promiſe that they ſhall be reſtored. That Judah and Jeruſalem here named, and literally underſtood for the people of the Jews, were led into captivity, is manifeſt out of the hiſtory of them: they were led by Nebuchadnezzar unto Babylon, 2 Kings xxiv. 14, &c. From this captivity they were again reſtored under Cyrus King of Perſia, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22, 23. and Ezra i. which time therefore Some think to be here meant; but it is by Others denied, becauſe it cannot be ſhewed that the other things following, as of God's gathering all nations and bringing them down into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, [b] were then made good. They were again in after-times, after the coming of Chriſt, under Titus, and others, carried away captives by the Romans, from which captivity they were never yet reſtored, which yet the Jews expect [c] ſhall in due time be done, and then this Prophecy be made good. But there being no grounds to expect that, Others among Chriſtians think it more agreeable to the meaning of the place to interpret the words, not literally of bringing back any captivity of the Jews to their ancient ſeat, but of freeing them from the [d] captivity of ſin and the devil, and the yoke of the Moſaical Law, and Antichriſt. And the words being in this ſenſe expounded, by Judah and Jeruſalem may (as by many it is) be meant not only the Jewiſh nation, but God's whole church, or all that ſhall be gathered into it, conſiſting both of Jews, and all other nations: to all which being called into it by the Goſpel, will thoſe names, according to the ſcripture language and uſe of them therein, well agree, even to all that receive the truth, which was firſt preached in Judah and Jeruſalem, the names of thoſe places being thenceforth made common to all ſuch as are [e] fellow citizens of the [f] new (and true) and holy Jeruſalem, there being in Chriſt no longer difference betwixt [g] Greek or Jew, but all ſeems one in Chriſt Jeſus, all comprehended under the name of his church. So that inſtead of Judah and Jeruſalem, is that by Some here put as [h] ſignifying the ſame thing. So by the Right Reverend Biſhop Hall are the words paraphraſed. In the days of the Goſpel, wherein I ſhall reſtore my church, and deliver it from the ſpiritual captivity, wherein it hath been diſtreſſed.

[u] Druſ. [w] Ribera, Chriſt. à Caſtro, Pet. à Fig. who ſaith, Noſtri fere referunt ad diem univerſalis judicii. ſo moſt of them do. [x] Mercer, Tarnov. [y] Whoſe opinion ſeems to agree with Calvin's here. [z] Bren. Veil. [a] Ar. Mont. Tarnov. [b] Chr. à Caſtro. [c] Id. [d] Tirin. [e] Epheſ. ii. 19. [f] Rev. iii. 12. and xxi. 2. and x. [g] Gal. iii. 28. Coloſ. iii. 11. [h] His nominibus Eccleſia Dei ſignificatur, Pet. à Fig.

diſtreſſed. In this way there will be no neceſſity of, or place for that queſtion here by ſome Jews made, Why Iſrael, a name comprehending all the tribes, is not rather named than Judah or Jeruſalem proper only to one; as if the promiſe were to that ſingly, which no doubt was alſo belonging to the others. To which they give for anſwer, Some, becauſe Joel did [i] propheſy peculiarly to and of Judah and Jeruſalem, as ſent [k] particularly to them: Others (as Kimchi) becauſe though all Iſrael ſhould be reſtored, yet the Meſſias was to be of the tribe of Judah, and therefore he makes peculiar mention of that, as alſo of Jeruſalem, becauſe that was ראש Roſh, the head city of that kingdom, and becauſe there was to be the war of Gog and Magog (of which we had mention from him above, chap. i. 31.) But theſe names being taken in that latitude as we before ſaw, agreeably to the ſtile of the New Teſtament, there will, as I ſaid, be no place for any ſuch doubt or queſtion. Judah and Jeruſalem will comprehend or include Iſrael alſo, and that not only as it denotes that nation only according to the fleſh, but all the true Iſrael of God; all who are of the faith of Abraham, though not of his ſeed, all true believers of what nation ſoever, all members of that [l] heavenly, new Jeruſalem, the church of Chriſt, of which Judah and Jeruſalem of old were an image or type: of theſe all may it be now ſaid in this world, that they are as ſtrangers and pilgrims, yea captives, having it bent to exerciſe all acts of hoſtility againſt them. So that to theſe all may be well applied what he ſaith, When I ſhall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jeruſalem, as comprehending them all. His ſaying when I ſhall bring again, &c. includes plainly a promiſe, that in due time, the time appointed by him he will certainly effect what he hath promiſed to do for them. The time is not preciſely determined, ſo that to it, for ought that is expreſſed in the words, may be applied thoſe words of our Saviour, Mat. xxiv. 36. Of that day and hour knoweth no man, but my Father only, and ſo that it is no marvel that Expoſitors going to aſſign it, do ſo far differ betwixt themſelves, as we have before ſeen, amongſt whom it ſeems ſafeſt to follow thoſe [m] who do not limit it to any ſhort ſpace, but ſo extend it, as to comprehend both that wherein God delivered his then peculiar people the Jews, and all the days after Chriſt, who leading captivity captive hath delivered, and continues, and will continue to the end of the world to deliver his redeemed ones both of Jews and Gentiles [n] from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God, when death itſelf ſhall be [o] ſwallowed up in victory, and no enemies left which ſhall be able to detain them in bondage under their power, or, [p] ſeparate them from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus, and the conſtant enjoyment of his preſence, and favour; in reſpect to which ultimate completion of the good promiſes here made, and the day of the plenary redemption of God's Judah and Jeruſalem, [q] One interprets the expreſſion, when I ſhall bring again the captivity of Juda and Jeruſalem, by, cum completus fuerit prædeſtinatorum numerus, when the number of the predeſtinated ones, or ſuch as are ordained to ſalvation, ſhall be made up, or as we may give it in language agreeable to that of the Apoſtle, [r] when the fulneſs both of the Jews and Gentiles ſhall be come in. There ſhall therefore certainly be ſuch a time, when all theſe promiſes of good to thoſe his elect, ſhall be, though till then but in part, fully made good; and as certainly likewiſe, when that is made good to them, vengeance taken on thoſe, who have hitherto oppreſſed them: that do the next words poſitively denounce, I will alſo gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, &c. For the underſtanding of what God ſaith that he will here do, and better judging what Expoſitors ſay concerning it, it will be even neceſſary to enquire in the firſt place what is here meant by the valley of Jehoſhaphat, which is no where elſe mentioned but in this place, and again, ver. 12. of this chapter. It is by Some taken for the proper name of a place, but then it being no where elſe mentioned, nor here farther deſcribed, it will not be eaſy to determine where it was. Some, as we above ſaid, [s] will have it to be the ſame with that which, 2 Chron. xx. 26. is called the valley of Beracha, (or bleſſing) becauſe there Jehoſhaphat and his people bleſſed the Lord, for the great deſtruction by him there wrought on their enemies, and for that act of his to have had alſo this name. Kimchi thinks it to be a valley near Jeruſalem, ſo called becauſe of ſome building or monument erected there by Jehoſhaphat, or ſome notable work that he did there, for which his name was impoſed on it. That it was ſo called becauſe his Sepulchre was there, as is by Some thought, [t] ſeems not ſo probable, becauſe it is ſaid, 2 Chron. xxi. 1. that he was buried with his fathers in the city of David, which muſt then be in mount Sion within the city, except, as [u] ſome Others ſay, his bones might thither be removed and put in ſome monument there erected in memory of him. A valley [w] Others think it was between Jeruſalem and mount Olivet, the ſame which Some think was called Cedron.

However theſe may differ about the ſituation and reaſon of that name, yet they concur in this, that it was the proper name of a place. But Others are of a different mind, and that it is not here as ſo to be looked on farther than by alluſion perhaps to a place ſo called, and what was there done, but the ſignification of the word as it imports [x] the judgment of the Lord, and ſo to denote [y] any place where God ſhall ſhall execute his judgment on the enemies of the church. This difference in underſtanding this word neceſſarily cauſeth difference likewiſe in underſtanding what God ſaith he will there do, what judgment he will then execute, and on whom, they being here termed, all nations. Concerning theſe things there is that great difference which we have before mentioned on our entrance on this chapter, ariſing eſpecially from what they take here to be underſtood by the valley of Jehoſhaphat. From its being taken for the proper name of a place is it, that Some (as we have ſaid) think here meant the deſtruction of that great multitude of ſeveral nations, which invaded Judah in the time of Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. xx. which opinion appears not well to agree to the words here, [z] both becauſe thoſe nations there named, viz. Moabites and Amorites, and thoſe in mount Seir (or the Idumeans) cannot be properly called all nations: and becauſe that action (as we mentioned) cannot well agree with the time of this prophecy, which ſpeaks of ſomething to be done after, rather than referring to what was before done.

[i] Abarbinel. [k] Pet. à Fig. [l] Heb. xii. 22. See Dr. Hammond there; as likewiſe Rev. iii. 12. and xxi. 2. [m] As Calvin, Diodati, &c. [n] Rom. viii. 21. [o] Cor. xv. 54. [p] Rom. viii. 39. [q] Pet. à Fig. [r] Rom. xi. 25. and compare Eph. i. 9, 10. in the diſpenſation of the fulneſs of time he will bring certainly to paſs what he hath purpoſed in himſelf. [s] Calv. Jun. Trem. Lively. [t] Lively. [u] Ribera, Menoch. [w] Lyra, ſee Lively. [x] So Abarbinel among the Jews. [y] Mercer.

On the ſame acception of it for a place is grounded that opinion by Kimchi followed, that by all nations, are meant thoſe that ſhould come with Gog and Magog againſt Jeruſalem, and be overcome in the valley ſo called; an opinion as improbable that ever it ſhould by any thing hereafter to be done, be made good, as certain that it never yet was. On the ſame grounds is Cyril alſo his underſtanding it of the defeat of ſuch enemies of the Jews after their return from Babylon, who would have hindred them in rebuilding Jeruſalem; for though in that ſtory there be no mention of the valley of Jehoſhaphat, yet ſaith he that it was παραδόσεως λόγῳ, that which was by tradition delivered; but I know not how it will be made good, as neither what he ſaith, that it is manifeſt by the Scripture, that what is here ſpoken is already fulfilled. Another opinion that makes more noiſe is, that this being the proper name of a place, and as ſuch here put, is an argument that at the laſt day of the general judgment, all that ever lived being raiſed up, (as certainly they ſhall be) ſhall be gathered together in that place, viz. the valley of Jehoſhaphat, there to appear before God, and receive their doom from him. This opinion Cyril mentions as commonly received among the Jews, and cenſures it as that it is ὕθλῳ σαπρὸς καὶ γραώδης, a meer foppery, and frivolous old wives ſtory: of what ſtanding or credit it was among the Jews in his time or before, I find not; but that it was common among Chriſtians in later times [a] we find; and whereas it is by Some rejected [b] as figmentum a fiction, or ſpoken [c] pueriliter childiſhly, as, among other reaſons, [d] for that that valley muſt be too little to hold at once all that ever lived in the world, yet it is by [e] Others ſtill mentioned, who think that Chriſt ſhall really over it have his throne placed in the air, and that in it and about it all nations ſhall be gathered to be judged by him; which they think confirmed by what is ſaid, Acts i. 11. This ſame Jeſus, which is taken up into heaven, ſhall ſo come in like manner, as ye have ſeen him go into heaven. Which they think to import that in that place, from which he aſcended into heaven, he ſhould alſo again deſcend, and thither gather, and there judge all nations, which they think to be that [f] place called the valley of Jehoſhaphat. There, they ſay, [g] he taught, there he himſelf was judged, there therefore it is probable that he ſhall come again to judge. But all that is to this purpoſe by any ſaid, is by themſelves looked on only [h] as probable; and it being manifeſt that that place in the Acts reſpects and points out more the [i] manner, than the place of his coming, and there being no cogent argument by them brought to convince the truth of what they ſay, that Chriſt ſhall in that place come to ſit in judgment at the laſt day, as neither for the proof of what any others of thoſe other opinions, which we have mentioned of ſuch as take this for the proper name of a place, bring; it is by Others thought a plainer and ſecurer way, to take it rather appellatively, than as a proper name; at leaſt ſo as not to denote that any thing here ſpoken of ſhould be farther done in that place, but only to ſhew that what ſhould hereafter be done elſewhere, ſhould be like in ſome meaſure to what had been there done, and ſo the place where that ſhould be done is called by the name of that, which, in that reſpect, was a type of it, ſo as that it might juſtly communicate its name to it. And in theſe ways taking the words either appellatively, as ſignifying, God ſhall judge, or, the judgment of God, as the Chaldee renders, מישור פלוג דינא, the valley of diviſion (or diſtribution) of judgment, or elſe for a place that ſhould, for the things to be done in it, reſemble that place which was known by the name of the valley of Jehoſhaphat, will it not be neceſſary to reſtrain it to that place that was formerly ſo called, but to underſtand by it any ſuch [k] place, wherever it ſhould be, where God ſhould in ſuch manner, as he here deſcribes, execute judgment, and withal that in time and place by him appointed he would certainly ſo execute it. As for the time of it, there is that difference betwixt Expoſitors, which before we mentioned, Some taking it as more particularly referring to the day of the laſt judgment, [l] Others to all the time of the Goſpel from Chriſt's firſt coming to his ſecond. The difference between them, I ſuppoſe, is eaſily reconcileable; they that take it for that whole time looking on that laſt day as God's great day, (as [m] Some think the joining his name with judgment to import) that wherein what is ſaid ſhall moſt apparently be performed; and they, that therefore look on that day as chiefly meant, yet not excluding what ſhould be done at at any time before it by God's executing judgments on the enemies of his church. As for the place, though thoſe that go this laſt way think it not properly to be the name of any peculiar place particularly known by that name, yet do they think, as we ſaid, that alluſion may be here made to ſome ſuch, and ſome circumſtances appertaining thereto had reſpect to. If that valley be alluded to, wherein theſe enemies which came againſt Jehoſhaphat (2 Chron. xx.) were ſo wonderfully deſtroyed, in regard to that defeat of them, then Some think that the calling this place by its name is, by ſo putting God's church and people in mind of that deliverance at that time, to give them confidence and aſſurance of God's like dealing ſtill for the defence of his church, and taking vengeance of the enemies thereof. 2. If the place there deſigned by God for executing what he ſaith he will do, be ſet forth under the name of that valley in reſpect to its ſituation near Jeruſalem, and in ſight thereof, then Others think by his ſo calling it to be intimated, that as then God brought deſtruction on the enemies of his people openly in their ſight, ſo in his appointed time he will in [n] the ſight and preſence of his church execute openly judgment on their enemies, according to whom, in the valley of Jehoſhaphat is all one as in conſpectu eccleſiæ. Why the place where he will do this is called a valley, reaſons are alſo by Some given. Among the Jews Abarbinel thinks it ſo called from the depth of the judgments of God, of manifeſting which that is ſaid to be the place, לפי שמשפטיו עמקו קורא אותו עמק יהושפט, becauſe his judgments are deep, therefore he calls that place which is (as he ſaith, רמז למשפט השם, or by its ſignification intimates the judgment of God) the valley of Jehoſhaphat, which is the ſame that before him R. Sol. Jarchi gives in expounding the words, ארד עמם בעומק הדין, I will deſcend with them into the depth of judgment, by which words, [o] ſaith he, intelligit exactiſſimum judicium etiam de occultiſſimis, he underſtands a moſt exact judgment even of the hidden things.

[z] Druſius. [a] So in Lyra and many Others. [b] Calvin. [c] Mercer. [d] Tarnov. [e] Ribera and many Others following therein the chief Schoolmen. [f] Vatablus from Some, and Mariana in Tarnov. [g] Sa. Tirin. [h] Pet. à Fig. and Sa. [i] Tarnov. [k] Merc. [l] Calv. [m] Tarnov.

Among other Interpreters we have theſe reaſons (if I well conceive them) given, [p] 1. Becauſe they ſhall be there ſo ſhut up and ſurrounded, as that there ſhall be no way of eſcape for them. [q] 2. By reaſon of the great ſtreights they ſhall be in through anguiſh from the grief of conſcience for their ſins, like the trouble that a great multitude preſſed together in a narrow incommodious valley, where there is not room enough for them, are in. 3. Grotius thinks ſo to be deſcribed God's ſitting Judge in an high place, thoſe that are to be judged in a lower, which here vallis ob ſimilitudinem dicitur, is from its likeneſs thereto called a valley.

This being ſpoken of the name of the place here mentioned, in the other words we have declared what God will there do; he ſaith, I will gather all nations, and bring them down into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, and will plead with them there, &c. From that difference which we have ſeen to be betwixt Expoſitors, concerning the time and place deſigned by God for the doing what he ſaith here that he will do, and the perſons for whom he will do it, ariſeth neceſſarily a difference alſo betwixt them concerning the perſons towards whom he ſaith he will do it, who are here ſaid to be all nations, which cannot be in one and the ſame acception taken in all thoſe ſeveral expoſitions concerning the time and place. If it be underſtood of the time of any reſtoring of the Jews from captivity, or any deliverance wrought for them, then muſt it be underſtood of ſuch enemies as having done, or coming to do them miſchief, were by God deſtroyed. So that all nations will not ſignify all, univerſally, but a great multitude of ſeveral nations, as [r] Aſſyrians, Chaldeans, and Others that came up with them, out of hatred to the Jews and [s] their religion, the then true religion, for which they were [t] hated by all other idolatrous nations. If of the time of the Goſpel, all after Chriſt's firſt coming to his ſecond that ſhall be, then will it likewiſe ſignify not ſo much all nations and all of them, without exceptions of any, as, all among them, whether Jews or Gentiles, of what ſort ſoever, as are [u] enemies to God's church, and the true Chriſtian Religion, and have for their injuries done to his church, felt his ſevere judgments, as the Jews have done by the deſtruction of their city and commonwealth; and ſo will all nations here, agree with ſuch as, Mat. xiii. 41. are deſcribed by all things that offend, and them which do iniquity. If of the time of Chriſt's ſecond coming, and the laſt judgment, then if thoſe words, all nations, be taken in their greateſt latitude, and ſtrictneſs of ſignification, will the thing be true; For certain it is that then, when the Son of man ſhall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then ſhall he ſit upon the throne of his glory, and before him ſhall be gathered all nations, and he ſhall ſeparate them one from another, as a ſhepherd divideth his ſheep from the goats, &c. Mat. xxv. 31, 32, &c. All of all nations, good and bad, taking the terms in their wideſt latitude, ſhall then by him be gathered together. Yet that here, if it be underſtood of that time, the words are not ſo to taken [w] but reſtrained rather to the wicked among them, not to the true members of his church, but to the enemies thereof, may appear by the other words here joined with them, in which is declared for what end they ſhall be ſo gathered, and how he will deal with them. He will bring them down into that place of judgment, and will plead with them there for his people, &c. והורדתים and I will bring them down, or cauſe them to deſcend, a proper expreſſion, the place being called a valley, into which which they that come from other places go down or deſcend, yet ver. 12. it is ſaid to expreſs the ſame thing by a word of contrary ſignification, come up to the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as in its due place we ſhall (God willing) ſee: from which all that at preſent we ſhall obſerve, is, that the words here bring down, and there come up or aſcend, being in themſelves of contrary ſignification, yet uſed to expreſs the ſame thing, are not ſtrictly to be taken in their proper ſignification, as to denote different manners of coming to the place deſigned, but rather both of them to denote the certainty of his convening them there, whether on his ſummons they ſhall deſcend or aſcend thither: and they being come thither or convened there, He ſaith, he will plead with them there for his people, &c. ונשפטתי עמם שם Veniſhphatti immam ſham. And I will plead with them there. He will contend in juſtice againſt them, as one that hath been wronged, and requires juſtice againſt them that have done him wrong; not as an unconcerned Judge, who will upon complaint of the injured perſon pronounce ſentence againſt him that hath done the wrong, but as one who is by the wrong done to the wronged perſon, himſelf injured and concerned in the matter, and will plead as in his own right. So the word נשפטתי Niſhphatti in the form here uſed ſeems, as elſewhere, to import. It is by Others expounded in this, as in the firſt conjugation, שפטתי ſhaphatti, [x] Judicio publico damnatos puniam, I will puniſh them being openly condemned, as if it implied his acting as a Judge, as no queſtion he is, and will ſhew himſelf, as ver. 12. he ſaith, I will ſit to judge all the heathen. Yet doth it in the more uſual acceptation of it in that conjugation in which here it is, and by Ours and moſt Others rendred, [y] for pleading with and contending in judgment, as a wronged perſon, ſeem to have [z] greater emphaſis, as implying that communion and relation which is between God and his people. Such, as that he is concerned in whatſoever befalleth them, as if it were done to himſelf in perſon, and their cauſe were his, according to what he elſewhere ſaith, He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye, Zach. ii. 8. whatſoever is done to any of his, is done to him, Mat. xxv. 45. Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? ſaith Chriſt to Paul perſecuting his church, Acts ix. 4. This near relation to himſelf, in which he owneth and acknowledgeth thoſe that he ſaith he will plead for with all their enemies, is ſet forth by the titles which he here gives them, of My people, and my heritage Iſrael. How they were by all other nations deſpiſed, and uſed with the greateſt indignity, and contumely imaginable, as the very offſcouring of the earth, and ſuch as were by none had in regard, the next words ſhew; yet are they by him ſtiled, his people, and, his heritage, to whom he hath ſtill peculiar regard, though whether for chaſtiſement of their ſins, or trial of their ſincerity, or to make them know that the great reward they are to expect from him conſiſts not in the plentiful and quiet enjoyment of the temporal things of this preſent world, but in better things, ſpiritual things belonging to a better life, he ſuffers ſuch his children to be trampled upon by his and their enemies, and to be perſecuted by them, yet is not this a ſign that he hath caſt them off, he yet owneth them for his people, his heritage which he will not part with, and accounteth all wrong done to them as done to him, for which he will in due time ſee juſtice executed on them that have done it. Which conſideration, as it ought to keep them from fainting, and deſpair under their greateſt ſufferings, ſo is an argument that the wicked prevailing at any time in this world over God's people is not a ſign of their being more acceptable to God, or that their doings pleaſe him, however for the preſent he ſuffer them to prevail, and proſper for reaſons beſt known to himſelf, and ſuch as ſhall end in good for his now afflicted and perſecuted ones. It will certainly ſo appear in due time when he will plead with the one for the other. His calling them his heritage ſhews that he will not on any terms part with them, or ſuffer them to be loſt, but will vindicate them to himſelf for ever. How greatly this title prevails with him for taking care of them and ſeeking their good, appears by what above, chap. ii. 17. is declared to them, as a motive, by which they ſhould prevail with God in their prayer, that he would ſpare them, becauſe his people, and not give them, becauſe his heritage, to reproach.

[n] Jun. Trem. Piſc. Glaſſ. Biſhop Hall. [o] Pet. à Fig. [p] Tarn. [q] Merc. [r] Druſ. [s] Grot. [t] Tarn. [u] Hoſtes eccleſiæ intelligit vel Judæos vel gentes, &c. Mercer, of which the Jews, when their city and ſtate were deſtroyed, may be ſaid to have been brought into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as the other nations when they are at any time deſtroyed. [w] Pet. à Fig.

Thoſe to whom theſe titles are here beſtowed are called Iſrael, and indeed that nation ſo called, as diſtinguiſhed by that name from all others, that were before the times of the Goſpel, was by thoſe times alſo [a] peculiarly known; but ſince the preaching of that, both that name and thoſe titles are made common to all true believers of it, of what nation ſoever, whether of the ſtock of Iſrael or others, all ſuch being God's people, and God's [b] heritage, as all God's Iſrael, even the whole church of true believers, ſo that the expreſſion may equally be applied to both, for whatever God did or would do of old for Iſrael by virtue of that relation, for their Father's ſake, with whom he had made his firſt covenant, the ſame doth he, and will ſtill do by virtue of that relation into which in Chriſt they are received to him. And by Some are the words and things meant underſtood of the one of theſe, by Others of the other, or as comprehending both, and really verified of both, the cauſe of both, that Iſrael of old, and this Iſrael now, being alike, and equally eſpouſed by God, and his promiſe of avenging ſuch wrongs as are done to them, belonging to both, to all that ever were, or are, his people, his heritage, his Iſrael, his church. To this purpoſe are the words by [c] one expounded, Populum ſuum vocat electos omnes, quos etiam Iſraelis [x] Piſc. Judicabo, judicium exercebo Pet. à Fig. [y] אכנס במשפט, I will enter into judgment with, Kimchi. [z] See Calvin. [a] Deut. iv. 20. [b] 1 Pet. v. 3. [c] Ribera.

Iſraelis nomine comprehendit, &c. He calls all the elect, his people, whom he alſo comprehends under the name of Iſrael. So that he ſpeaks not only of that people, nor of their enemies alone, as the words ſeem literally to ſound, but of all the elect as well in that as in the church of the Gentiles, and of all the perſecuters of the elect. Populus enim ille figura erat Eccleſiæ, &c. For that people was a figure of the church, and the enemies thereof a type of all who perſecute the ſaints. He alludes (ſaith [d] another) to the Babyloniſh captivity and the deſtruction of Judea by the Chaldeans, which was a type of ſuch deſtructions, oppreſſions and miſeries, which were by the enemies of the church brought or wrought in the faithful; ſo by his people Iſrael taking to be underſtood, not only or not ſo much thoſe that were Iſraelites according to the fleſh, but according to the ſpirit, and the true worſhippers of God, who were by unbelievers and wicked people perſecuted and afflicted. [e] Another, Iſrael which he ſpeaks of, is not ille externus vel carnalis, ſed ſpiritualis, &c. thoſe that are outward or according to the fleſh, but ſpiritual Iſrael of whom he ſpeaks, chap. ii. 28, 29. and who, Gal. vi. 16. are called the Iſrael of God. So that it appears that thoſe things that follow are to be taken, viz. ſo as that by ſuch, as Iſrael according to the fleſh did formerly ſuffer, are metaphorically ſignified, quæ verus Dei Iſrael ſemper patitur, ſuch as the true Iſrael of God doth at any time ſuffer, or hath ſuffered. Having thus declared with whom he will plead and contend in judgment, he proceeds to inſtance in ſome particulars concerning what he will plead, or for what his quarrel is in the following words, whom they have ſcattered among the nations, and parted my land, &c. אשר פזרו בגוים Aſher pizzeru Baggoim [f] quos (vel, quem) diſperſerunt, whom they have ſcattered, &c. Others render, becauſe they have ſcattered them or him, the word Aſher being ſometimes ſo put for כי [g] quia or quod, becauſe; (and then, them, or him being ſupplied,) among the nations, viz. by carrying them captives from their own into other countries. The Syriack renders the word paſſively, ܕܐܬܒܕܪܘ, which have been ſcattered among the nations. This Kimchi thinks to be underſtoop of what Titus and his army did, שהחריבו ארץ ישראל ופזרו יושביה בין הגוים which deſtroyed the land of Iſrael, and ſcattered the inhabitants thereof among the nations; but againſt this his interpretation are exceptions made, as firſt, [h] becauſe thoſe that Titus brought with him cannot properly be ſtiled all nations, as they with whom God will plead are. Secondly, [i] becauſe the Jews at the time when he came againſt them, viz. after they had denied Chriſt crucified, and rejected him, could not be called his people, and heritage Iſrael; which exceptions will likewiſe lay againſt Abarbinel's underſtanding it of the Chriſtians and Mahometans at ſeveral times invading the land of the Jews, driving them out of it, and dividing it among themſelves. [k] Againſt thoſe alſo who take by them to be meant the Aſſyrians and Chaldeans, and other nations nearer to the Jews, who relied on their help, may be objected that yet they were not ſo many as to deſerve to be called all nations. Such objections ſeem to be taken out of the way by [l] thoſe who think here the Babyloniſh captivity, and the deſtruction of the land of Judea to be alluded to, but ſo as a type of thoſe devaſtations, ſpoils, and injurious dealings of the enemies of the church ever ſince; alſo againſt faithful believers, whom they have perſecuted and driven into baniſhment, dividing their land (which God calls his own, and their goods, and poſſeſſions) among themſeves. [m] Per ea quæ Iſrael ſecundum carnem paſſus eſt, metaphorice ſignificat quæ verus Iſrael Dei patitur, by thoſe things which Iſrael according to the fleſh ſuffered (while they were God's peculiar people) doth he metaphorically ſet forth ſuch things, which the true Iſrael of God, Chriſt's church, hath ſince ſuffered, and [n] doth ſtill ſuffer from the enemies thereof, by ſuch things as are here mentioned and other like, by their being ſcattered into ſeveral nations, by having their lands taken from them. Their lands, God calleth here, his land, ſo was of old peculiarly called the land of Iſrael, [o] becauſe Iſrael was his people: ſo ſtill whatſoever belonging to his, is, as they are, his alſo; their right, his, and by their being wronged in it, he looks on himſelf robbed and wronged.

By theſe words, and parted my land, Jerome looks on as underſtood their ſetting up ſeveral idols, and different ſorts of idolatry, in that land in which he was wont alone to be worſhipped, as ſo parting it among them; but the former way taking it for their parting it among themſelves, by taking poſſeſſion of it for their own uſe ſeems plainer.

The particulars for which he will plead againſt his enemies he proceeds to enumerate in the next verſe, ſaying,

3. And they have caſt lots for my people, and having given a boy for a harlot, and ſold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

Great contempt that they had his people in, and great indignities that they did offer to them, are here deſcribed, ſuch as they would offer to none that they had in any eſteem, or made even any ordinary account of at all. For ſuch as they had taken [p] captives, as if they were not worthy to be made choice of, they caſt lots ſo to put them among themſelves, without preferring one before another. Such a way of dividing thoſe whom [q] they had taken, taken, appears to have been in uſe of old among nations: we find it alluded to in other places, as Nahum iii. 10. They caſt lots for her honourable men; and Obadiah, ver. 11. and caſt lots upon Jeruſalem. It may be underſtood of ſo dividing, [r] either their goods, lands, and poſſeſſions, or perſons. Great indignity to their perſons, yea great inhumanity towards them, the greateſt imaginable is expreſſed in the next words, and have given a boy for a harlot. Concerning theſe words there are different opinions, both as to the ſignification in particular of the word זונה Zonah, rendred an harlot, and then as to the meaning of the words if it be ſo rendred. For, firſt, as to the ſignification, Some render it otherwiſe, viz. in the notion of meat, as if it were the ſame with זן zan, or מזון Mazon, from the root, זון to feed, which do [s] ſo ſignify; ſo might it well enough agree with what follows, that they ſold a girl for wine, a boy for victuals, and a girl for wine: but Others, and for the moſt part, look on it as more regularly derived from the root זנה Zanah, to commit whoredom, and to ſignify here, as it elſewhere uſually and commonly doth, an harlot; it being no where elſe found in the other notion. But then, it being ſo taken, there is difference concerning the meaning, what ſhall be meant by giving for an harlot, whether to be uſed by that abominable ſin of Sodom, as an harlot, or whether to be given as a reward to, or for, an harlot, or a price for the uſe of her body. Jerome and diverſe following him take it in the firſt way, but moſt Others think the latter the true meaning, which [t] likewiſe the following words ſeem to confirm, in which as it is ſaid they ſold a girl, ביין Beyain, for wine, i. e. for the price of wine; ſo here moſt probably בזונה Bazonah, for an harlot, with the ſame prefix ב Be, muſt be, for the price of an harlot. So the Chaldee באגר וניתא for the reward or price of a whore. The Syriack alſo in like words, ܒܐܓܪ ܙܢܝܘܬܐ Bagar Zanoyotho, for a reward of harlots: The MS. Arabick alſo, ويطوا الصبي في جعل الزانية, and give a boy for the price of an harlot. To the ſame ſenſe the LXX. ἔδωκαν τὰ παιδάρια πόρναις, and agreeably to them the printed Arabick, واعطوا الصبيان للزواني, and they gave boys for harlots: which ſoever of theſe ways be taken, باطلة, in ſum, as R. Tanchum ſpeaks, the meaning will be, انهم اباعوا اولاد ישראל الذي سبوهم واصرفوا اثمانهم في لذاتهم وشهواتهم البهيمية, that they ſold the children of (God's people or) Iſrael whom they took captives, and ſpent the price of them on their pleaſures, and beaſtly luſts, which argued certainly the greateſt contempt that they could have of them, and the greateſt indignity that they could ſhew to any, while they had them in no more eſteem than to ſell them for ſuch vile baſe uſes, as for maintaining their whoring and drinking, and at ſo low a rate as [u] Some think for no more than would ſerve for one drinking-bout. If hiſtories do not afford particular inſtances of ſuch uſage, whether of God's people Iſrael of old, or Chriſtians ſince, yet that ſuch hath been, or ſhall be known among them, theſe words whether referred to what had been, or ſhould be, are a certain proof.

[d] Menoch. [e] Tarn. [f] Druſ. [g] Quod diſperſerint eum per gentes. [h] Pet. à Fig. [i] Mercer. [k] Grot. [l] Menoch. Sa. [m] Ribera. [n] Or ſhall ſuffer, for we look on the words as in a prophetical ſtile under the form of the preter tenſe, comprehending not only what hath been, but alſo what ſhall be done, till God ſhall call all to judgment. [o] Menoch. Terram populi mei, atque adeo meam. [p] Sors jacitur ubi eſt contemptus, Calvin. [q] Druſ.

4. Yea, and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre, and Zidon, and all the coaſts of Paleſtine? will ye render me a recompence? and if ye recompence me, ſwiftly and ſpeedily will I return your recompence upon your own head.

Having in the foregoing words, ver. 2. threatned to plead with all nations for his people, to call them in queſtion for ſuch injuries as they had done unto his heritage, he here more particularly, and by name expreſſeth ſome of them, againſt whom he will proſecute that his quarrel, viz. Tyre and Zidon and all the coaſts of Paleſtine; his plea againſt them he begins with an interrogation, ſhewing that what wrong they had done, they had done altogether without cauſe, and that therefore they deſerved that he ſhould deal with them with ſuch ſeverity as he threatens to do. The people named are Tyre and Zidon, and all the coaſts of Paleſtine, i. e. the inhabitants of theſe places, which (as appears by what is often mentioned of them in the ſcriptures) were nigh or bordering on the land of Iſrael. For a full explication of theſe words here following, ver. 5, 6, 7, 8. would be required the hiſtory of what was by thoſe people done to the Jews, while they were God's Iſrael, and of what alſo afterwards befel them agreeable to what is here ſaid ſhould by God be done to them. Having not any ſuch any where elſe expreſly ſet down, it is left to us to look into the literal meaning of the Prophet's words in the preſent place, wherein we have a deſcription of both: both of what they did, and of what they ſhould ſuffer, whether it hath been already executed wholly on them, or remaining yet in whole or part to be executed on them, concerning which, for want of ſuch hiſtory, there is great difference betwixt Expoſitors. For ſuch expoſitions therefore of the words, that we may the better judge of the matter, it will be convenient to look into them, and for that end to take them in order, וגם מה אתם לי צר וצידון Vegam mah attem li Tzor vetzidon. Vegam, yea, and literally, and alſo, though the Vulgar Latin render it verùm: but, this particle ſhews that while other remoter nations are threatned, who brought a general deſtruction on God's people, theſe alſo, though they were not as chief in power among, yet inſtead of being friends and helpers as neighbours to them, had yet done great miſchief to them according to their power, and therefore, when God will on thoſe others execute judgment, ſhall not eſcape, but be alſo called in queſtion in particular for what they had done, and be accordingly rewarded for it, as having without any cauſe done, and been been guilty of great injury in it to God himſelf. So plainly ſaith he, what have you to do with me? לי, li, with me, taking as done to himſelf what was done to his people. So the MS. Arabick in his rendring gives the meaning, ואיצא איש כאן לכם מע אמתי אנתם יא אהל צור וצידא, and alſo what was to you (or what had you to do) with my nation (or people) O ye people (or inhabitants) of Tyre and Zidon. In the ſame manner appears likewiſe R. David Kimchi to have underſtood it in his expounding it, מה לי ולכם, &c. what is to me and you, (or what have (or had) you to do with me) שבאתם לארצי, &c. that you came into my land, for you being my neighbours, ought to have done good to my people, but ye have not ſo done, but when ye ſaw that the kings of the nations came upon them, ye joined with them in ſpoiling: by which it appears, that what they are ſaid to have had to do with God, is that which they did to, or with his people, whom what concerns he looks on himſelf as concerned in, as we have already ſeen on ver. 2. and that is it which by moſt is looked on as the import of the word לי, with me, in this place: the Chaldee gives ſomewhat a different meaning of the words by his rendring ואף מא אתון חשבין קדמי, and alſo of what eſteem are you before me (or with me;) with which the Syriack alſo agrees, ܐܦ ܡܐ ܐܢܬܘܢ ܚܫܒܝܢ ܩܕܡܝ, cujus momenti eſtis apud me, Tyre & Sidon, &c. The LXX. alſo may be looked on as ſo taking the meaning in [w] ſuch copies as read καὶ τί ὑμᾶς ἐμοὶ, which the printed Arabick alſo following hath, فماذا انتم لي, and what are you to me? (though other copies, agreeably to the more ordinary expoſition, have τί ἐμοὶ καὶ ὑμῖν (as Cyril reads it) quid mihi & vobis?) According to this way of the Chaldee, and thoſe that agree with it, the words by way of queſtion will be an upbraiding of their folly in that they ſhould think themſelves able to ſtand out againſt God, as if he were not able to avenge on them that deſpight done to him in injuring his people. But in the other way, which ſeems the more probable, may they well be an expoſtulation with them for the wrong that they without cauſe had done to his people, and in them to him, who eſpouſeth their cauſe as his own: why, or for what cauſe, have ye thus dealt with me, O Tyre and Zidon, and all the coaſts of Paleſtine? Who Tyre and Zidon, or the inhabitants thereof, if the names be properly taken, were, is, as we ſaid, manifeſt from what we read of them often in the ſcripture. As for the words rendred all the coaſts of Paleſtine, being in the Hebrew, וכל גלילות פלשת, vecol geliloth Peleſhet, we find them differently interpreted; Some taking Geliloth as a proper name of a place alſo, viz. of Galilee; ſo the LXX. rendring, καὶ πᾶσα Γαλιλαία ἀλλοφύλων, and all Galilee of foreigners; and the printed Arabick following them, وكل جليل القبايل الغريبة, and all Galilee of ſtrange nations. The Syriack alſo, ܘܟܠ ܓܠܝܠ ܐܦ ܗܠܝܢ ܕܥܡܡ, and all Galilee of Paleſtine: but there being no example of the word's, גלילות Geliloth, being in the plural form ſo uſed for a proper name, Others (all I think both ancient and modern) take it as an appellative ſignifying, coaſts, bounds, or confines. So anciently the Chaldee, rendring it, תחומי פלשתאי, all the bounds (or coaſts) of the Philiſtines. The Manuſcript Arabick accordingly renders, جميع نواحي فلسطين all the parts (or coaſts) of Paleſtine. So likewiſe Abu Walid and R. Tanchum obſerve the word here to ſignify, viz. اقوار coaſts, confines. And ſo the Latin, though putting the ſingular number for the plural, terminus; and that is by all more modern Interpreters generally followed, as well as by Ours. In the other word Paleſtine, the Greek (as the printed Arabick following them) go again in a contrary way from what Others do, by not taking it as a proper name, but tranſlating it as we have ſeen, foreigners, or ſtrange nations. They do indeed often, where the name of Paleſtine or Philiſtine occurs, ſo render it, but ſurely as it is the proper name of a country well known, ſo is it here more properly taken, and the other word Geliloth in that ſenſe which we have ſeen, and ſo by Ours and Others both well tranſlated, the coaſts of Paleſtine; and ſo all named denote countries and people then bordering on the Jews, and exerciſing cruelty and inhumanity towards them. The words ſo taken will ſeem to be a threat particularly to the inhabitants of thoſe places; yet are by Some, who take under the names of thoſe places to be comprehended yet others beſides them, as from their like dealing, deſerving to be called by, or included under, their name, viz. any other dealing ſo with God's church and people, as they did anciently with the Jews, whilſt they were more particularly ſo. So ſay [y] Some, that the Prophet under theſe names comprehends all wicked people, as under the name of Jews all true believers, all God's elect, of whatſoever nation. Others that he names thoſe for example ſake, that by what is ſaid ſhall befal the inhabitants of thoſe places, who perſecuted the faithful ſervants of God under the Old Teſtament, may be underſtood what ſhall befal other nations, who at any time ſhall be enemies to God and his people. To this purpoſe Dr. Stokes paraphraſeth the words, Ye that are as great and cloſe adverſaries to the Chriſtians as ever the Tyrians and Sidonians were to the Jews. So [z] Others take them to be uſed, as exemplum ſive typus hoſtium domeſticorum Eccleſiæ, a pattern or type of enemies to the church at home, who for ſome reaſons induced do for a time pietatis ſtudium ſimulare, make a ſhew of friendſhip to it, and piety, yet upon occaſion ſhew forth, latens animi venenum, the poiſon that laid hid in their heart. Whom by theſe names here to underſtand, or whom under them to comprehend, we ſhall the better judge by ſeeing what it is which he expoſtulates with them for, and how he will deal with them for it, which in the following words he declares, ſaying, הגמול אתם משלמים עלי, &c. Will ye render me a recompence? and if you recompenſe me, ſwiftly and ſpeedily will I return your recompence upon your own head. In which words there may ſeem to be ſome obſcurity, for removing of which we may obſerve, as to the word גמול Gemul, rendred a recompence, that it hath the ſignification either of good or bad, done by way of recompence to any, and ſo the verb likewiſe, from which we have here the participle, ואם גמלים אתם, rendred, and if ye recompenſe either to do good or bad; but here they are taken in the notion of bad. Again, that by theſe words is ſignified both what is done to any in recompence of what was by them done, and alſo what is done firſt to them without occaſion given by any thing that they had before done; and both theſe ſignifications ſeem to have here reſpect had to, as, firſt, in his ſaying, הגמול אתם משלמים לי haggemul attem Meſhallemim li, will you (or do you) render me a recompence? the noun joined with a word ſignifying rendring, ſeems to require that it be taken for השבת גמול the rendring of a recompence for ſomething done, but in the ſecond place being put by itſelf, ואם גומלים אתם עלי, which Ours render, and if you recompenſe me, to ſignify התחלת הרעה the beginning of doing evil (or doing in the firſt place) ſo Kimchi takes it, and ſo the meaning of both clauſes to be, "What is the "matter that ye do evil to me? Do ye think "to be revenged on me, becauſe I have done "evil to you? What did I evil to you? If "you ſay that you now do, of your own ac-"cord, evil to me (for he that doth evil to "Iſrael, his intention is to do the evil to me, "they being my ſons) then will I ſpeedily re-"turn your recompence on your own head." So is his expoſition of the words here, to which agrees what he [a] elſewhere ſpeaks of the ſignification of the root גמל. In much the ſame manner doth Abarbinel alſo expound, except he puts a double interrogation in them thus, Have I dealt ill with you (or done evil to you) that you come to render my recompence to me? or although you have not received ill from me, do you begin to do it to me? This ſeems a more perſpicuous meaning, and is by [b] Several (I think, with good reaſon) preferred. So Caſtalio in his tranſlation briefly expreſſeth it, utrum mihi vos refertis, an potius confertis? do you repay to me, or confer on me? or as [c] Others, utrum cogitatis mihi referre, an inferre injuriam? do ye think to recompenſe or to do me injury? yet do Ours in both places retain the ſame notion of recompence, will ye render me a recompence? and if ye recompenſe me: as if what they did were in both places referred to ſomething that God (or his people) had before done to them, and for which they pretended to revenge themſelves; ſo that in the firſt place there is a queſtion aſked, whether they pretend any ſuch thing, and in the ſecond, a declaration of what, if they pretend any ſuch thing, he will do to them; without putting an interrogation after it in the ſecond place (as by taking it in different ſignifications it is done) but taking the particle אם Im, if, as conditional, or by way of ſuppoſition, and ſo inferring what follows, that if, or ſuppoſing they pretended to do what he hath ſaid, he would do then what he farther ſaith; and in that way do [d] ſeveral Others alſo tranſlate the words. So the Chaldee, and the Vulgar Latin ſeem to expreſs it, rendring, Et ſi ulciſcimini vos contra me, cito velociter reddam viciſſitudinem vobis ſupra caput veſtrum, And if you do revenge againſt me, I will ſoon render you quickly recompence upon your head. But there are [e] thoſe who think that in this ſecond place is required an interrogation, and by ואם, and if, to be underſtood, An? or even by thoſe who render it by ſi, if, and that whether taking Gomelim in the notion of recompenſing, or of firſt doing. So Mercer, ואם, veim, and if, interrogative intelligo, I underſtand interrogatively; and Gamul, he renders by inferre, to do wrong. So Druſius, Hic ſi ſumitur pro an, If is uſed for, Or whether, and to recompenſe for, injuriam inferre, to do wrong to. Grotius likewiſe as to the particle ſi, if, ſaith it is put for an, or elſe whether? as he ſaith it is often uſed in the Vulgar Latin: ſo that it may continue an interrogation, and the ſenſe be, An hanc vicem mihi rependitis, & hoc mihi redditis? Do you return me this recompence, and do you thus repay me? nempe pro tot in vos collatis beneficiis, to wit, for ſo many benefits conferred on you; but in this differing from the other, that he takes the word גמלים, Gomelim, in the notion of recompenſing or repaying for what was done to them, and that of good, not of evil, as Others take it. This ſeems to agree with that of R. Solomon, who underſtands it of their recompenſing them for thoſe twenty cities, which Solomon gave to the King of Tyrus. The LXX. of old ſeem to have led the way, who read ſo the particle by an interrogation in the ſecond place, and take the following word in the notion of recompence, and ſo, as we have ſeen, diſtinguiſh the clauſes, rendring, ἢ μνησικακεῖτε ὑμεῖς ἐπ' ἐμοί; which the printed Arabick literally expreſſeth, او ذكرتم الشر علي, or do you remember (or retain in your heart) evil againſt me? Whereas the MS. Arabick doth otherwiſe as to both, and join the words in one clauſe with the following, (as Others whom we have before ſeen do) rendring them with the former words, הל מכאפאה אנתם מכאפיין לי ואד אנתם אול יתמוני אלקביח כפיף סרעה ארד מכאפאתכם פי רוסכם, Do ye render me a recompence, and if ye do evil in the firſt place to me, ſwiftly and ſpeedily will I return your recompence on your heads. The Syriack renders, ܗܠ ܡܦܘܪܥܢܐ ܐܢܬܘܢ ܠܝ ܦܘܪܥܢܐ ܘܐܢ ܒܝܫ ܐܢܬܘܢ ܥܒܕܝܢ ܠܝ ܒܪܫ ܐܦ ܐܢܐ ܐܦܪܥ ܥܠ ܪܫܟܘܢ, Do you render me a recompence? ... which the Latin Interpreter in the Polyglott

[r] Mercer. [s] The famous Grammarian Abu Walid thinks it conveniently ſo rendred. [t] R. Tanchum [u] Tarnov.

[w] So in the Polyglott. [x] See Grotius here and on Mat. 8. 26. [y] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [z] Gualterus.

[a] Lib. Radicum. [b] Mercer, Caſt. Druſ. Lively. Druſius and Mr. Lively. [d] Tig. Pagn. Munſt. [e] Druſius. The Arab. MS. likewiſe giveth thoſe diſtinct notions.

Polyglott Bible renders, quod ſi beneficiis me cumulatis. But if ye heap up benefits on me, which I think may rather be rendred, but if ye caſt (or confer on me) recompences due to me, the word, גמול, Chublo, as well, or better ſignifying recompence, or, حقوق واجبة, dues, that ought to be rendred, as on them benefits.

In all theſe interpretations hitherto mentioned, reſpect, we ſee, is had of the more uſual ſignification of the root גמל Gamal, viz. of repaying, or returning recompence to any, on ſome occaſion by them before given, or pretended, that notion being by Some given to it in one of the clauſes, by Others in both. But that great Grammarian Abu Walid is of another opinion, who thinks that in both places yet mentioned, it is to be taken in that other notion of doing firſt without provocation or occaſion before given. And leſt in the firſt place it might ſeem reſtrained to the ſignification of recompence, by having משלמים Meſhallemim, which ordinarily ſignifies, to repay, joined with it, he obſerves that root alſo to ſignify to give or do firſt, as well as to repay. His words in his explication of the root שלם ſhalem are, וקר תכון הדה אללגה לגיר אלמכפאה בל ללאילא כמא כאנת לגה גמול פי הדין אלמעניין איצא, i. e. This word is uſed alſo to ſignify not only to repay, but to do in the firſt place, as likewiſe the word Gamul is in both theſe ſignifications uſed; and for example in both he citeth theſe words here, הגמול אתם משלמים עלי ואם גמלים אתם עלי. In which he ſaith of the word, from the root גמל, Gamal, in both places, both haggemul and Gomelim, as likewiſe of משלמים Meſhallemim, that both צ יכון ו ובדאו do not denote other than a beginning, and that by both is ſignified איל ואבתדא באלפעל, a doing in the firſt place, and beginning to act. With him agreeth in this R. Tanchum, whoſe words likewiſe, becauſe neither book is printed, we ſhall ſet down, האתין אללגתין אעני גמל ושלם קד יכונאן במעני אלאילא אבתדא ובמעני אלמכאפאה עלי מא תקדם פקולה הגמול אתם משלמים עלי ואם גומלים מן אלמעני אלאול וקולה אשיב גמולכם מן אלמעני אלתאני והדא אלאסתפהאם מנה תע עלי סביל אלתהדיד, i. e. Theſe two words, viz. Gamul and Shillem, are ſometimes in the ſignification of doing a thing firſt, ſometimes in the ſignification of recompenſing for what went before. His ſaying therefore, Haggemul attem Meſhallemim alai veim gomelim attem alai, are of the firſt ſignification, but what he ſaith in the next words Aſhib gemulcem of the ſecond, viz. of recompence, and the interrogation from God is by way of threat. Of the root גמל Gamal doth Abu Walid likewiſe obſerve, that it denotes a doing in the firſt place, or beginning in doing, either באלאחסאן או באלאסאה, in doing good or evil. So that, according to him, we might think the words here to denote, Do ye of your own accord, or without provocation or occaſion given, do injurious things to me? were it not that R. Tanchum notes [f] elſewhere, that in this ſignification of doing firſt לא יכון אלא כיר it is not uſed but [g] of good, which yet, if there be not ſome miſtake in his words, I do not well underſtand how it can be ſaid, inaſmuch as among the examples brought for proof of that ſignification of the word, for doing in the firſt place, there are ſome in which it is apparently ſpoken of doing evil; as for inſtance, that of Gen. l. 15. והשב ישיב לנו את כל הרעה אשר גמלנו אתו, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him. There is גמל Gamal certainly ſpoken, as of doing in the firſt place, ſo of doing evil, and therefore do both Abu Walid, who was before him, and whom he in many things follows, as alſo Kimchi expreſly ſay, that the word doth denote a beginning to do, or doing firſt, as well in doing ill as in doing good; and ſo are [h] Abu Walid's words, having given ſome examples, as namely that which we have cited and others, הדא כלה אולא ואבתדי באלאחסאן או באלאסאה, all theſe ſignify to do firſt, and to begin either in doing good or doing evil. [i] Kimchi alſo, that it ſignifies התחלת הטובה או הרעה, a firſt doing, either good or evil. And ſo therefore, according to them, may it here be underſtood of doing ill or injury, where they had not received any. The obſerving of this, and reciting of the ſeveral rendrings of theſe words, to which perhaps more may be added, and the different diſtinction of them, by putting either once or twice an interrogation, ſhews that they are capable, according to the letter, of different interpretations, but the ſcope is ſtill the ſame, viz. that they are an expoſtulation from God with them, concerning injuries by them done to his people, which he looks on as in them done to himſelf, and for which he threatens in the next words to deal with them according to their deſerts, ſaying, קל מהרה Kal meherah, ſwiftly and ſpeedily will I return גמלכם Gemulcem, your recompence, upon your own head. The word גמול Gemul here repeated, is by all agreed on to be in the ſignification of recompenſing, or repaying them for, or returning on them what they had done; his ſaying that he would do it ſwiftly and ſpeedily, may denote, either with great celerity, whenſoever and as ſoon as he pleaſeth, they not being able to ſtop or hinder him, nor [k] having time to find out way to prevent it. Or that [l] he is ſuch, or of ſuch power, who can as ſoon as, or whenſoever he pleaſeth, without any ſtop or hindrance, ſo do; in that ſenſe ſeem to take it ſuch who look on the word קל Kal as a noun. So Munſter, leve eſt ut velociter reddam retributionem veſtram, &c. The Tig. Facile eſt ut & ego, &c. velociter rependam, &c. It is a light or eaſy thing to me that I ſhould, &c. Vatablus making it an epithet of God feſtinus cum cum celeritate, Calv. velox, &c. and ſo Piſcat. levis feſtinatione, being light or ſwift with ſpeed. Theſe take it all as a noun adjective, yet with difference between themſelves, the former making it as a deſcription of the action, the latter as an epithet of the agent, with whom the MS. Arabick ſeems to agree rendring כפפ סרעא, Being light ſpeedily. But I ſuppoſe, though as to the ſenſe it will be much one, yet that as to the literal conſtruction they do better, who take that firſt word קל Kal, as well as the following word מהרה Meherah, for an adverb, that ſo two words of like ſignification joined may give a greater emphaſis to, and aſſurance of what is ſaid ſhall be done; ſo is it taken by Ours who (as we ſee) render it, ſwiftly, in which they agree with many Others both ancient and modern in their ſeveral languages. For ſo ſounds the Chaldee קליל Kalil (which is much the ſame in letter with the Hebrew.) The LXX. rendring it ὀξέως, to which I ſuppoſe the printed Arabick ببحدة Beheddat may well anſwer, though the Latin Tranſlator render it cum ira, with anger, (it might rather perhaps be rendred cum impetu or celeritate, with preſent force.) The Syriack, ܒܪܝܫ, which the Latin renders Brevi ſhortly, the ancient Latin cito, and to the ſame purpoſe among modern Tranſlators many in ſeveral languages; ſo as that between it and the following מהרה, Meherah, both being adverbially taken, there is little or no difference in ſignification, only that one adds (as we ſaid) emphaſis or confirmation to the other, ſo that Some think it ſufficient to expreſs them by one word put in the ſuperlative degree, [m] velociſſime moſt ſwiftly (or moſt ſpeedily) which ſeems to import as much as the two words both of the ſame ſignification repeated do require; whether put without a conjunction between them as they are in the original, Kal Meherah, and ſome of the tranſlations put, as in the Vulgar, cito, velociter, or with one, for making the language plainer and ſmoother, as in Ours and [n] Others, ſwiftly and ſpeedily. Abarbinel thinks by this expreſſion to be meant that the puniſhment of Tyre and Sidon (thoſe places being properly and preciſely taken) ſhould not be deferred to be, בסוף הגלות בשאר האימות, at the end of the captivity of the Jews, as that of other nations ſhould, but be ſooner, and that which is here threatned, was made good on them, when Alexander the great did under the time of the ſecond temple deſtroy them. How or when Others think it was to be fulfilled, will after appear. He threatens that he will ſo in his due time return upon them, in full meaſure, and effectual manner, that which ſhall appear to be a juſt recompence for their evil behaviour towards him in their dealing as they did with his people, and ſuch things as belonged to him and his name was called upon, or were called his and by his name. Their doings to have been evil, and ſuch as he was highly provoked by, as it is in theſe former words, or expoſtulation, in general intimated, ſo more particularly what they were, is in thoſe that follow expreſſed.

[f] In his Lexicon Morſhed in גמל. [g] And accordingly he ſeems to give the meaning of the words here, Theſe doings which you do unto me firſt, i. e. פעלא מתקדמא as a preceding beneficence. I will ſpeedily recompenſe you. [h] In the root גמל. [i] In Rad. and Comment. on the place. [k] Ar. Mont. [l] Brenn.

5. Becauſe ye have taken my ſilver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly pleaſant things.

In determining what he means here by calling it my ſilver and my gold, and my goodly precious things, is between Expoſitors ſome difference. Among the Jews Aben Ezra expounds it, ſuch as the Kings of Judah had given them, either שוחד או לפדיון השבויים for a gift (or preſent) or for the redemption of captives. Whom Druſius ſeems to expreſs, ſaying, aurum populi mei, quod viri pro redemptionis pretio ſolverent, aut muneris loco inferrent ad vos. Kimchi takes the ſilver and gold which the Iſraelites had, to be ſo called and owned by God as his, becauſe he gave it to them. So likewiſe Abarbinel; ſo that in taking it from them, they robbed him, or took away what was his; his was the ſilver, his the gold of all Iſrael, as by him given to them, ſo that he might ſtill ſay of it, לי הכסף ולי הזהב כל ישראל, mine is the ſilver, mine the gold of all Iſrael.

This way take [o] Several alſo among chriſtian Expoſitors. Others both ancient and modern by it underſtand [p] that ſilver and gold, and precious veſſels which were in the temple dedicated to God, and ſo his. Grotius thinks not theſe but the former to be meant, non quæ templi erant, not ſuch precious things which belonged to the temple, and which were carried away to Babylon by the Chaldeans, but ea quæ populi erant, ſuch as were the peoples goods, and by the Chaldeans having taken and ſpoiled the city ſold to their neighbours. But I ſee no reaſon why both may not be underſtood and looked on as comprehended, [q] Argentum populi mei, vel argentum templi mei, either the ſilver, &c. of my people or of my temple, or both of my people and of my temple. So ſeems to be Calvin's mind, that there is no doubt that they did rob and ſpoil the people of their good, and that for that they were guilty, and for that are taxed; but in a more eſpecial manner for their taking away ſacra Templi vaſa, the holy veſſels of the temple. The ſilver and gold and deſirable precious things of his people were indeed his, and it was juſt reaſon that he ſhould call to account for it thoſe that took them away, they in ſo doing, doing manifeſtly wrong to him, who owned both the poſſeſſors, and what in that kind they poſſeſſed, but more apparent wrong was certainly done to him, in taking away ſuch things as none was looked on as owner of but himſelf, viz. the treaſures and ornaments of his peculiar houſe, ſeparated and conſecrated to him, which though he had not need of, nor could be properly ſaid to have pleaſure in or for any good that he reaped thereby, yet as tokens of his peoples gratitude, and honour, and obedience by them ſhewed to to him, he did delight in and accept of, as what was of his own by them given to him. The robbing of him of thoſe things was a great injury in itſelf, but much more yet heightened by the uſe that they put them to in carrying them into their own temples להיכליהם leheicelehem; the word ſignifies either [r] palaces or temples, and is ſo rendred by Some, palaces, but the rendring it temples ſeems to have more of emphaſis in it, as greatly aggravating their crime, in that they did not only take away thoſe things from God and convert them to their own private uſe, but to the greater diſhonour and contempt of God, as it were in triumph over him, place them openly in the temples of their idols, as if they had gotten the victory over God. Thoſe of Tyre and Sidon, and the coaſts of Paleſtine being ſaid to have done this, ſeems to intimate, that they by thoſe names called, [s] were aſſiſting to the Chaldeans and partakers with them in ſpoiling the city of Jeruſalem and the temple, and for ſuch they are in the firſt place taxed; and in the next words they are farther taxed for wrong done to them in reſpect to their perſons.

[m] Jun. Trem. [n] So the LXX. and Syriack. [o] Mercer, Pet. à Fig. Grotius, Dr. Stokes, &c. [p] Jerom. Cyril, Tarnov. [q] Piſcat.

6. The children alſo of Judah and the children of Jeruſalem have ye ſold unto the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border.

By what is ſaid that they ſold the children of Judah and of Jeruſalem, to the Grecians, Kimchi expounds ſo as either to be meant of ſuch young children as they ſtole from the Jews, while they were yet in their own country, or of ſuch as coming and ſiding with their enemies, when they carried them captive, they took and got into their hands, and whether meant of one or the other, ſold unto the Grecians who lived a great way from the land of Iſrael, that ſo they might not return again to their country, which is the ſame that Aben Ezra before him in briefer words expreſſed, שלקחתם במלחמה או בגניבה, whom ye took in war, or by theft. Some obſerve that by ſaying the children of Judah and the children of Jeruſalem, are not neceſſarily meant young children only, [t] but that it may be underſtood of ſuch as were of riper age alſo, any of the inhabitants of Judah or citizens of Jeruſalem, called the children thereof, and ſo Caſtalio renders Judæos & Hieroſolymitanos, Jews and Jeruſalemites; as likewiſe in the next place, that which literally ſounds the ſons of the Grecians; is by Ours and ſeveral Others rendred ſimply, the Grecians. For the words in the Hebrew are לבני היונים libne hayevanim, and ſo accordingly by the [u] ancient Tranſlators according to the letter rendred, as likewiſe by ſeveral more modern, the ſons of the Grecians, as Ours alſo note in the Margin, though in the Text putting what is thereby meant, viz. not children in reſpect of their age, but people of ſuch a nation, and by the name Javanim here put, are particularly denoted the Grecians, ſo called from their father Javan the ſon of Japhet, Gen. x. 2. from whom they are called in their own tongue Jones; yet is it by Some obſerved, that that name may be alſo ſo taken as not only to deſign them in particular, but ſo as to comprehend other Gentile nations alſo, they being of great note among them, and their language uſed by them, in that large acception, which St. Paul takes that name, when in his diſtinction of people into Jew and Greek, he ſeems under it, to comprehend all nations that could not be called Jews. So Rom. i. 16. ii. 9, 10. iii. 9. and 29. x. 10, 12. Gal. iii. 28. Coloſſ. iii. 11. Whether by Grecians here he mean ſuch as were properly called ſo (between whom and the people of Tyrus here named [w] appears to have been commerce of old, as in trading for other things, ſo alſo for the perſons of men, Ezek. xxvii. 13.) or others to whom that name was communicated; ſuch it appears are underſtood as were far remote from Judeah, and from which they ſhould not probably return thither, by ſaying, that ye might remove them far from their border, that is, their own country and the limits thereof.

God having thus deſcribed the injurious dealings of Tyre and Sidon, and thoſe of the coaſts of Paleſtine, or of ſuch as were under thoſe names comprehended, towards his people, he ſubjoins in the two next verſes a deſcription of what he himſelf will, thereby provoked, do, both for his people and to his and their enemies. Firſt, as for what he will do for his people, he ſaith,

7. Behold, I will raiſe them out of the place whither ye have ſold them, [then as for what he will do to or againſt their enemies.] I will return your recompence upon your head.

8. And I will ſell your ſons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they ſhall ſell them to the Sabeans, to a people far off: for the Lord hath ſpoken it.

Of which words according to the letter, Abarbinel gives this plain explication, I will reſtore them, and cauſe them to return from the place whither you ſold them, and by their hand will return your recompence on your own head, for that your ſons and daughters ſhall be ſold by them to the Sabeans, inaſmuch as they are a nation far remote from you. By his ſaying, הנני מעירם, &c. Behold, I will raiſe them out of the place, though the word [x] properly ſeem to ſignify to raiſe them from ſleep or the like, yet may alſo and here appears to import, as much as [y] reduces facio, to cauſe to return thoſe that ſeemed to be quite loſt and forgotten (like men aſleep or dead, not appearing among men) he will yet raiſe up again, and cauſe to appear in their countries, from which they had been ſo far and ſo long removed. So the Chaldee הא אנא

[r] Some copies of the LXX. read ὅιαις, Others ναοὺς. Syr. Arab. Vulg. Lat. [s] Druſius. [t] Druſius, Tarn. [u] Chald. LXX. [w] Grot. [x] Tarnov. [y] Druſ.

אנא מיתי להון בגלאי, I will bring them publickly. In his ſaying, I will ſell your ſons, &c. it is manifeſt that the word ſelling is not taken in its proper ſignification of paſſing over right to any thing for a price taken for it; this cannot be ſpoken of God, but ſo as to denote the giving over a thing to any, ſo as that he ſhall have juſt right to it and over it, and power to diſpoſe of it, as over a thing which he had bought with his money. In this ſenſe is the word ſelling alſo [z] elſewhere uſed. So is God ſaid to have ſold the Iſraelites into the hands of their enemies, Judges ii. 14. iii. 8. iv. 2. and x. 7. ſuch a deliverance the Pſalmiſt xlii. 12. calls, God's ſelling his people בלא הון ſine pretio, without price (as the Vulgar renders it) or as Ours, for nought, or as in the Margin, without riches. In the foregoing words, The children of Judah, &c. have ye ſold unto the Grecians, and thoſe that follow, and they ſhall ſell them to the Sabeans, it is plain that it is taken for ſelling for a price; but here ſpoken of God's dealing, it is not ſo, but meant of his giving or delivering up into their hands and power, ſo Kimchi expounds it אמסרם בידם, I will deliver them into their hand. The not obſerving this uſe of the word, Druſius thinks to have been occaſion to Some of rendring the words, ביד בני יהודה, Beyad Beni Jehudah, opera filiorum Judæ, by the means of the children of Judah, of whom his cenſure is that male exponunt, they do ill expound it. So indeed doth Caſtalio render it; ſo Vatablus expounds it, and ſo Mercer alſo, yea that expreſſion is ancienter. For ſo the MS. Arabick appears to have taken it, rendring עלי יד בני יהודה, alai yad bani yehudah, by the hand of the children of Judah, nor doth that of the Vulgar Latin, [a] in manibus filiorum Judah, differ, though the Doway render it, into the hands of the children of Judah. That ביד beyad may indifferently ſignify either by the hand, or into the hand, there is no doubt, nor do I ſee, though the conſtruction be different, what great difference there will be in the meaning; what will ſelling them by their hand be, but giving them up into their hand to ſell them, or diſpoſe of them, as they liſt?

As to the next words, And they ſhall ſell them to the Sabeans, to a people far off; the word rendred Sabeans being in the Hebrew שבאים Shebaim, there is difference from of old among Interpreters. The LXX. render them, καὶ ἀποδώσονται αὐτὸς εἰς αἰχμαλωσίαν, &c. and they ſhall ſell them into captivity to a nation far diſtant, &c. So the printed Arabick following them, ويسلمونهم للسبي الي امة بعيدة, and they ſhall deliver them up for captives to a nation that is far off, upon what grounds they went in ſo rendring the word is apparent, viz. becauſe the word שבה Shabah, whence they look on this as a noun derived, ſignifies in the Hebrew, as likewiſe in the Chaldee, Syriack, and Arabick, to make or lead captive, and ſo this to denote captivities or captives, as Jerome thinks they ſhould rather have rendred, and ſo we ſee the Arabick to render. But no ſuch form of a noun appellative elſewhere occurring, Others generally take it here as a proper name of a people, or nation ſo called, viz. Sabeans, as alſo their country which they inhabited, viz. Seba, or Sabah, ſo the other Greek Verſions τοῖς σεβαὴμ, or [b] τοῖς σαβαίοις; the Syriack, ܣܒܝܐ; the Vulgar Latin Sabæis, as generally all more modern tranſlations; the MS. Arabick ليمن Leahil yaman, to the people of Yaman, which is an explication of what people he thinks meant by thoſe, who are called or here meant by Sabeans, viz. the inhabitants of Yaman, or Arabia felix, and not any others, who, or their country, might be called by the like name, as it appears Others have thought to be here meant, as Jerome, who thinks them to have been a people trans Indiam, beyond India, of whom he thinks likewiſe the Queen of Sheba, who came to hear the wiſdom of Solomon, to have been, 1 Kings x. and whence he ſaith that frankincenſe alſo comes. But Druſius taxeth him, as being in this in an error, which he conceiveth to have been occaſioned, by his not diſtinguiſhing betwixt שבא ſheba with Schin ſh, and סבא Sabah with Samech S. which are diſtinct names of different perſons (who might be the fathers of different nations) and countries (which perhaps were from them called, as Pſalm lxxii. 10. מלכי שבא וסבא. The Kings of Sheba and Seba; wherever Seba be placed, whether in Æthiopia, or Arabia Chuſæa, of Sheba, it is more than [c] probable, and by moſt agreed, that it is in Arabia felix, and generally agreed that thence frankincenſe is brought, and moſt probable that thence the Queen of Sheba came, whom our Saviour, Mat. xii. 42. and Luke xi. 31. calls the Queen of the [d] South, which ſeems the interpretation of Yaman, and ſaith, ſhe came from the utmoſt parts of the earth, as her country being ſituate on the utmoſt ſhore of Arabia might be called; as the inhabitants are here called a people [e] far off, certainly if ſituate in that part of Arabia, they were ſo far remote from Tyre and Sidon, and the coaſts of Paleſtine, as that they might be well ſo called, although the words are capable of another interpretation, which will take away ſcruple concerning that; which is, that they ſhall ſell them to the Sabeans, [f] who ſhall carry them away and ſell them to nations very far off, but there is no need of any ſuch ſcruple. Theſe things being obſerved, as the literal interpretation of the words in theſe five laſt verſes, there is no great difficulty; but as to the farther meaning of them, and how, and when, and what is ſaid, ſhould be fulfilled, there is much, it being added, for the Lord hath ſpoken it, i. e. certainly [g] determined it: there is no doubt but certainly it ſhould in its due time, and in due manner be fulfilled: but no hiſtory plainly and certainly declaring when and and how it was ſo, hath made Expoſitors much to vary, Some adhering to a literal interpretation, Others preferring a figurative, which the words ſeem ſo much to incline to, that Calvin ſaith, ſtultum eſſet ac puerile, nimis inſiſtere in ipſa litera, it would be a fooliſh and childiſh thing too preciſely to inſiſt on the bare letter; although he will not ſay that the Prophet ſpeaks allegorically, and himſelf abſtains from ſuch expoſitions, as not having in them any thing that is firm and ſolid, yet he ſaith, aliquam figuram ſubeſſe in his verbis, that there is counted ſome figurative meaning in theſe words, viz. that the Tyrians and Sidonians ſhall be ſold and ſent up and down into far remote countries, Idque fiet in gratiam electi populi & eccleſiæ, ac ſi Judæi ipſi eſſent venditores, And that ſhall be done for the ſake of God's elect people and church, as if the Jews themſelves were the ſellers. From ſuch ambiguity or latent meaning, which he obſerves to be in the word, ſeems it to be alſo, that, as Ribera notes concerning the fulfilling of what is here ſaid, Divinant expoſitores & multa dicunt, ſed quæ nequeant comprobare, Expoſitors go by conjecture, and ſay many things, but ſuch as they cannot make good. That which he follows is (having underſtood by the Jews all God's elect people) to underſtand by thoſe of Tyre and Sidon and the coaſts of Paleſtine, [h] all thoſe nations that bordered on the Chriſtians of old, from whom they received much damage, and the time when this recompence here threatned ſhould be to them, the day of the laſt judgment, and that then he will raiſe up thoſe of his ſaints, whom they had ſold to foreigners, and who had died in ſtrange countries, to life again, that ſo they ſhould be preſent at the judgment, and ſee what puniſhment he would inflict on thoſe their enemies, by ſelling whom he thinks meant delivering them up to the ſaints, who ſitting on thrones with him to judge the wicked, ſhall deliver them up to eternal captivity. By the Sabeans, to whom it is ſaid they ſhall ſell them, he thinks meant the devils, to whom they ſhall be delivered up to be tormented. The ſame way of expoſition do Others alſo follow, who both go [i] before and follow him [k], and agree with him in it: yet though the words may be ſo applied, is it, I think, among thoſe which cannot be eaſily proved to have been the only or primary meaning of them, when, and as, ſpoken by the Prophet. We may well look for ſomething more literal in them, although when and how it was ever put, or to be put in execution, for want of plainer deſcription of the hiſtory of it in ſcripture, will be hard to determine.

[z] Druſ. [a] Or Pagn. in manu. [b] Theodot. [c] Mercer ſeems to think otherwiſe. [d] Kimchi ſaith of them, the Sabeans are the ſons of Saba, and lye eaſt and ſouth of Iſrael, and Tyre, and Sidon, and Paleſtine. [e] See Jer. vi. 20. [f] Druſius. [g] Abarbinel.

Among the Jews Kimchi ſeeming to think they are literally to be underſtood, yet in aſſigning the time when what is ſaid, ſhould be actually performed, he doth it ſo as to make all things uncertain and ambiguous, and indeed ſo as to ſignify nothing. That which is ſaid, Behold I will raiſe them out of the place whither ye have ſold them, he expounds by, כי עוד ישובו לארצם, &c. For they ſhall yet return to their own land; although the place of their captivity be far off, they ſhall return into their own land, הם או בניהם, either they or their children, or גם הם גם בניהם both they and their children, הם בתחיית המתים, they at the reſurrection of the dead, and their children, שיהיו בזמן הישועה, which ſhall be in the time of ſalvation. By his words it appears to be his opinion, that what is ſaid ſhould, according to the literal meaning of the words, be fulfilled, but that it is not yet fulfilled, nor ſhall be till the reſurrection of the dead, and the times of the Meſſiah, or Chriſt, who ſhall bring ſalvation to the Jews, and is not yet come. How his opinion agrees with what other Jews think, it will not concern us to enquire: that which we ſhall obſerve is, that it is not agreeable with the verity of the chriſtian religion, by which we are aſſured that Chriſt is already come to bring ſalvation to his people, and that his ſecond coming, at which the dead ſhall be raiſed, and both quick and dead be judged by him, is not a time of ſuch tranſactions as we here mentioned, of buying and ſelling themſelves from one nation to another, and trafficking for worldly matters, when [l] the earth, and the works that are therein ſhall be burnt up, when the wicked ſhall go into everlaſting puniſhment, but the righteous into life eternal, Mat. xxv. 46. ſo that if ought of what is here underſtood, be to be expected to be then done, it cannot be literally to be underſtood. As to ſuch a literal meaning Abarbinel ſpeaks more intelligibly, ſaying, that it was done in the time of the ſecond temple, when Alexander the Great deſtroyed thoſe places, viz. Tyre and Sidon. And there are among [m] Chriſtian Expoſitors who do in this way agree with him. As for what is ſaid, that the children of Judah and of Jeruſalem, whom they had ſold unto the Grecians, &c. he would raiſe them out of the place whither they had ſold them, Grotius thinks to be made good under Alexander the Great and his ſucceſſors, who in favour of the Jewiſh nation, reſtored to liberty many Jews who were captives, or in ſervitude in Greece; and as for what he threatens to thoſe of Tyre and Sidon, that he would ſell their ſons and daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they ſhould ſell them to the Sabeans, he thinks to have had its effect, when the ſame Alexander took Gaza, Sidon and Tyre. Others think the fulfilling of theſe things to be referred to the times of [n] Cyrus, and the [o] Maccabees. Others, that though there be no plain hiſtory which deſcribes the compleating of them, yet that without doubt all was fulfilled as the letter ſounds, God having ſaid it ſhould ſo be, certainly it will be the plaineſt way to underſtand it according to the letter. If any thing may be counted ſuch that hath not been fully accompliſhed, we may (I ſuppoſe) refer that (though not the whole whole matter, as we ſee Some do) to the day of judgment, when the places here named, ſhall with all others, be called to a farther account for what they at any time did in this world. As for their particular, we learn from our Saviour telling Chorazin and Bethſaida, that, it ſhall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for them, Mat. xi. 22.

[h] P. 211. [i] Rupertus. [k] Chr. à Caſtro, Sa. Menoch. [l] 2 Pet. iii. 10. [m] Grotius, Brennius. [n] Pet. à Fig. [o] Lyra.

That which from this paſſage will, according to theſe expoſitions mentioned, to be neceſſarily inferred is, that though God do ſuffer his people ſometimes to be trampled upon and to be contemptuouſly uſed, and injuriouſly dealt with by his and their enemies, yet he will in due time deliver them from the hand of their enemies, and to them render a juſt reward, proportionable to the wrong that they have done to his people. What God here promiſeth to do for the Jews, then his people, may all his people at all times look on as a promiſe of good iſſue to them under any ſufferings; and in what is threatned to Tyre and Sidon, &c. may other enemies to God's church and people read their own doom. This particular example will be a proof in all other like caſes, and we may be aſſured of it, for the Lord hath ſpoken it, whoſe truth is not limited to any particular, but hold in all like caſes alike. The words are by [p] Some far differently interpreted, as if by what he ſaith, he will ſell the children of the Tyrians, &c. to the Jews, and they ſhould ſell them to the Sabeans, were meant the Apoſtles, ſending ſuch as were converted to Chriſt into remote parts, for bringing others in to him by preaching the Goſpel to them, or ſuch like purpoſe: but this ſeems not ſo proper to the words, in which appears a manifeſt threat of evil, and not a promiſe of good, as that would be.

9. Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up.

10. Beat your plow-ſhares into ſwords, and your pruning-hooks into ſpears; let the weak ſay I am ſtrong.

11. Aſſemble yourſelves, and come, all ye heathens, and gather yourſelves together round about: thither cauſe thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord.

Having from the beginning of ver. 4. hitherto ſeemed to direct his ſpeech to ſome particular nations, as thoſe named, Tyre and Sidon, &c. he ſeems here again to return to ſpeak, [q] what may in general concern all nations of whom he had ſpoken, ver. 2. and commands it to be taken notice of by them, as if it were by an herald, or ſuch as he employed, proclaimed to them all. That which they are to be warned of, is that they prepare war, and that they muſter up all their forces, make all poſſible preparations, and uſe their joint and utmoſt endeavours, even all the enemies of God and his church, comprehended under the name of the Gentiles, for reſiſting his power, in inflicting on them what he hath determined in his appointed time to bring on them. His calling on them ſo to do, and to prepare to meet him in ſuch a manner, is a certain prediction, that however now they ſeem to prevail againſt his church, without any ſeeming able to reſiſt them, yet there ſhall be a time when he will appear to ſtop their violence, rage they never ſo furiouſly, and ſet themſelves together with never ſo great force, againſt him and his elect. His bidding them to prepare war, and make all the proviſions they can for it, is a plain warning that he is preparing war againſt them. So much will the words ſimply taken import; if they be taken by way of irony or ſcoff (as they are by many taken to be) then will they farther give to infer, that when they have made all theſe preparations that they are bid to make, yet all ſhall be in vain, they ſhall not be able to reſiſt, nor to ſtand out againſt thoſe judgments that he will execute on them. What time is here pointed out, and when the things here ſpoken of ſhould be fulfilled, and by and on whom, it being not expreſſed, nor by the hiſtory of ſcripture made plain, makes the meaning very ambiguous, and ſuch as Expoſitors do not conſent in. [r] Some think what was done by Nebuchadnezzar to be meant: [s] Others the battle of Arbela (between Alexander and Darius) to be eſpecially had reſpect to; [t] Others, ſuch things which ſhould be done under Antichriſt, toward the end of the world. [u] Others, to be underſtood as that God would ſtir up all nations, that were enemies to his people, one againſt another, to deſtroy one another. They ſeem not any of them to make things plain; I think therefore the plaineſt way, to be that which the learned Mr. Lively takes, who thinks that the day of the laſt judgment is here ſet forth, ſimilitudine ſumpta a bello, by a ſimilitude taken from war, in which powerful generals bring down and deſtroy their enemies; ſo taking thoſe here mentioned among the Gentiles for the enemies on whom God will take vengeance, and therefore calls upon them to aſſemble themſelves together, and ſo to do what he bids them, that he may ſo do. So Jerome ſaith to be the opinion of the Jews, which he himſelf alſo likes. So R. Solomon manifeſtly takes to be meant, while he puts for explication of the words, prepare war, אם תוכלון להלחם כנגדי, if ye can be able to fight againſt me. Others in a clean contrary way take them for thoſe, whom he will employ in taking vengeance on his enemies, and the enemies of his people. Such Jerome mentions to have been in his time, who did think, hæc ſanctis gentibus prædicari ut præparentur ad bellum, & pro populo Dei dimicent, that theſe things ſhould be proclaimed to holy people, that they ſhould prepare themſelves for war, that they might fight fight for his people. So ſeems Cyril alſo of old to have thought, that he doth in theſe words direct his ſpeech ἐπὶ τὸς ἰδίους προσκυνητὰς, to his own worſhippers, to give them confidence ὅτι καὶ τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἀμείνοι ἔσονται αὐτῷ προασπίζοντος, that they ſhall have the better of their enemies by the help of him taking their part. This way take alſo ſeveral modern Expoſitors, who look on the words ſo to ſound as if God did [w] colligere ſuos exercitus, & inſtruere ſuas copias, ut pœnas ſumat de hoſtibus Eccleſiæ ſuæ, muſter up, or gather together his armies, and draw up his troops, that he might inflict puniſhment on the enemies of his church, [x] ſo as to ſhew how great forces, how numerous armies he hath ready at his call for help to his church, and deſtruction to their enemies at ſuch time as he ſhall think fit; for as to the time deſigned, I do not ſee them to ſpeak any thing particularly.

[p] See Pelican. Mercer, Tarnov. out of Wincelm. [q] Lively. [r] Tirin. [s] Grot. [t] Lyra, Pet. à Fig. [u] Calv.

Theſe two ways St. Jerome, as we ſaid, mentioning, prefers that which we have put in the firſt place, as likewiſe [y] ſeveral Others do, whom I think we may well agree with in it, it ſeeming moſt agreeable to the import of the words. It was, as he obſerves, the opinion of the Jews in his time, or before him, with whom among ſuch as are later than him Abarbinel may alſo be reckoned in part, although as to the whole of his opinion, I ſuppoſe it may be looked on as ſingular to himſelf, and ſuch as we ſhall not find any other to agree with him in, nor find reaſon ourſelves to do it, and becauſe it is ſuch we ſhall give a brief account of it, that the reader may judge thereof. He ſaith, that though the words may be underſtood of a war, to which God ſhall ſtir up the hearts of the ſons of Edom and the ſons of Iſmael (which in his language are the Chriſtians and Mahometans) therein to go up to or invade the Holy Land, and there to fight one with another till they be all deſtroyed, yet that without doubt the Prophet doth in that declare what concerns the reſurrection of the dead, in that he ſaith, ver. 9. העירו הגבורים, wake up the mighty men, and ver. 12. יעורו ויעלו הגוים, let the heathen be wakened and come up, uſing the word of wakening, and ver. 14. המנים בעמק החרוץ, multitudes in the valley of deciſion. From theſe expreſſions he concludes the mind of the Prophet to be, that thoſe that ſleep in the duſt, ſhall awake and ariſe from their death, and that of them ſhall be ſingular or particular perſons both of the children of Iſrael (who ſhall ariſe that they may ſee the fall of their enemies who perſecuted them) and alſo particular perſons of other nations, as to ſay, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Titus, and ſuch other enemies, that they may be puniſhed together with their ſeed, and that they may ſee the deſtruction of their native countries, which he ſaith to be intimated by the words, proclaim ye this among the Gentiles, prepare war, &c. and ſo the meaning not to be, as R. Solomon would have it, Prepare war, if ye can war (or fight) againſt me; neither to be ſpoken concerning thoſe that came againſt Jehoſhaphat, according to what Aben Ezra cites from one R. Moſes Mordecai, but concerning that war which ſhall be באחרית הימים, in the laſt days, of which he ſpeaks, ſaying, Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles, and let them all prepare themſelves for the war; for though the matter be made publickly known among the Gentiles, they ſhall not be able to eſcape it, what God hath ſpoken being ſure always to ſtand; and becauſe many kings and princes, who had done evil to Iſrael in their deſtruction and captivity, yet died in their honour; of them he ſpeaks, ſaying, Wake up the mighty men, as much as to ſay, Awake, awake from your ſleep of death, draw near and come up. For there ſhall be gathered together all ſorts of nations to war, and of them alſo that dwell in the duſt, and ſhall come thither with them. But that he means not generally, all of them ſhall then live again, but ſuch as kings and counſellors of the earth, the mighty men which were of old, which fought againſt Iſrael, appears by the ſaying, אנשי מלחמה anſhe milchamah, the men of war, viz. ſuch as warred with God and with his people, as the people of the generation of the wilderneſs are called Anſhe milchamah (Deut. ii. 14.) becauſe they did, as it were, war againſt God, and believed not his word. And as for them that ſhall then (as he thinks) ariſe from the dead, and come to the valley of Jehoſhaphat, (ver. 12.) he ſaith that their riſing and coming thither ſhall be לא להלחם, not to fight, but to ſee that God will then ſit to judge all the heathens round about, and to behold the judgment and vengeance that he will there execute on them: and for making good his opinion he ſaith that there ſhall be (according to what ſome of their wiſe ſay) two reſurrections of the dead, the one for that remnant whom God ſhall call (chap. ii. 32.) in the time of redemption, viz. of יחידים מבני ישראל, choice particulars of the children of Iſrael, as likewiſe particulars of the Gentiles, who have done evil to Iſrael, whoſe reſurrection ſhall come before, that they may be at that time to ſee their fall, and that this reſurrection ſhall not be but in the Holy Land, in the valley of Jehoſhaphat; of whom he ſaith that Iſaiah propheſied in thoſe words, chap. lxvi. 24. And they ſhall go forth, and look upon the carcaſes of them that have tranſgreſſed againſt me. The ſecond, he ſaith, ſhall be after that, and that a more general one, viz. of all the righteous Iſraelites, which have been in all generations, and likewiſe of multitudes of other nations, who were true believers, who ſhall riſe in all the habitable parts of the world, and ſeveral regions thereof, to publiſh in the world the truth of the Lord, and of his law, that ſo men may be directed all of them to call on the name of God, and ſo ſerve him with one conſent. To this purpoſe will he have to tend the meaning of the Prophet, but mingling in his expoſition ſuch fancies of his own, that I ſuppoſe he will have not many to agree with him.

[w] Calvin. [x] Danæus. [y] Mercer, Ribera, Pet. à Figuer. Chriſt. à Caſtro. Jun. Trem. Piſcator, &c.

him. That he may ſeem himſelf to have ſuſpected, while he ſaith, that if any like not to interpret theſe words of the reſurrection of the dead, he may look on them as an excitement to go up to that war, which ſhall then be. But I look not on the referring the words to the time of the reſurrection of the dead, to be that which is to be found fault with, but his underſtanding it as he doth. If it be underſtood to import the ſame time with the day of judgment, as we take it to be, I think it to be that which among the ſeveral expoſitions of the words may ſeem moſt probable, as ſetting forth the great confuſion that all people ſhall be in at that time, which is the interpretation which Mr. Lively prefers.

Having thus premiſed concerning the different opinions of Interpreters, as to the ſcope of the words in general, the chief of my remaining buſineſs will be to give more particularly the literal meaning of ſome of them, that ſo the reader may judge how they are appliable to any of ſuch expoſitions as are given.

Prepare war.] So Ours read in the Text, but in the Margin put ſanctify, intimating that the word [z] קדשו Kaddeſhu in the Hebrew doth properly ſo ſignify. So it is manifeſt it doth, but withal, that it is uſed to ſignify the preparing for a thing in a ſolemn manner, as to which men were, as with a ſacred obligation, which ought not to be neglected or violated, bound, and is therefore by the word of preparing thought to be aptly rendred, as elſewhere, ſo here, as well by Jewiſh as Chriſtian Interpreters. So the Chaldee renders it, זמינו עברי קרבא, prepare ſuch as ſhall wage wars (or warriors), Aben Ezra alſo הכינו, Kimchi הזמינו, prepare. The MS. Arabick استعدوا للحرب prepare yourſelves, or be prepared, or ready, for war, as likewiſe R. Tanchum, who rendring it, אעדו אלחרב, اعدوا الحرب prepare war (or to war,) explaining it by, استعدوا له, be prepared, or prepare yourſelves for it. By which we may underſtand what both the Septuagint (as the printed Arabick following them) and the Syriack and Vulgar Latin, with ſome modern, meant, by their rendring, ſanctify a war, viz. that they ſhould wholly, as if by an holy league bound, ſet themſelves to it, or make preparations for it as for a ſacred thing, which [a] required ſolemn preparations. For this end (ſaith he) wake up the mighty men, &c. העירו Hairu, wake up (from the root עור, Ur, to awake.) The ſame word we have, ver. 7. though in another tenſe מעירם Meiram, and there by Ours rendred, will raiſe them. It appears in this conjugation to ſignify any raiſing up, as by waking from ſleep, or raiſing from death, or ſtirring up to a vigorous proſecution of any thing; and in which of theſe notions it is to be taken muſt be known by what is required by the words joined with it, and the ſenſe of the place, which is taken. So here by thoſe who take by the mighty men and men of war here mentioned to be meant ſuch of them, who having once lived had ſince been dead and laid aſleep in the duſt, is it (as by [b] Abarbinel) underſtood of wakening, or raiſing from the ſleep of death to life. By thoſe who take by them to be meant ſuch as were yet then alive, of ſtirring up or exciting them to proſecute with vigour the buſineſs here enjoined, viz. of preparing war, which whoever are underſtood are bid to do, and to draw near, and come up, viz. to come together in the preſence of God, to or at the place appointed by him. By that ſtirring them up the Chaldee looks on as denoted the cauſing them to come publickly, ſo rendring it ייתון בגלי, yetun bigli, let them come openly. So likewiſe he renders, הנני מעירם, ver. 7. Behold I will bring them openly. By יעלו yaalu, let them come up, Some [c] think alluſion to be had to the Situation of Judea, or Jeruſalem, whither they are called, as being higher than other regions about it. That the word יעלו (from עלה) doth properly ſignify to aſcend, or come or go up, is no doubt, yet I ſuppoſe it is not neceſſary that it ſhould be always ſtrictly ſo taken, as if the height of the place whither they ſhould come was thereby denoted. It may be that the place whither they are called is meant [d] of ſuch as was ſo, though not Judea or Jeruſalem; but it is not neceſſary that from this verb it ſhould neceſſarily be concluded ſo to be, for that it ſeems, in a larger ſignification, to ſignify much the ſame with the preceding verb יגשו, let them draw near, viz. let them come, [e] veniant, as to Some it ſeems, which uſe of it may be confirmed or illuſtrated by the like uſe of a word from the ſame root, and of the ſame ſignification in the Arabick Tongue, viz. تعال (from علا Ala) which, though it according to the ſignification of the root would properly ſignify, come up, and doth alſo ſo ſignify, yet in ordinary ſpeech is uſed for no more than ſimply Adeſdum, [f] come hither or draw near, without reſpect either to the height, or lowneſs of the place, whence or whither he is called, that is ſpoken to. The words are plainly an alarm to the people here called on, to make all poſſible preparations to the war that they are bid to make, which is continued in very emphatical expreſſions in the following words alſo, as ver. 10. Beat your plow-ſhares into ſwords, and your pruning-hooks into ſpears, let the weak ſay, I am ſtrong. As if all that they were to look after was to make proviſion for it, and there were nothing elſe that they ſhould need to look after, neither the managing of ſuch affairs which concerned their livelihood, as the culture of the ground, and tilling their fields, and dreſſing their vines and fruit-trees, that they might enjoy the neceſſary fruits thereof (which by that mention of the plow-ſhares and pruning-hooks, neceſſary inſtruments for thoſe ends, and bidding to beat them into ſwords ſwords and ſpears, inſtruments of war, is plainly intimated,) or even the looking after their own bodily health, or in any thing favouring their infirmities, though they were weak. This manifeſtly declares the extraordinary trouble of the times ſpoken of, the greatneſs and grievouſneſs of the war, which ſhould not give them leave or leiſure to look after thoſe things, by which men do ordinarily ſubſiſt, and therefore look more eſpecially in the firſt place after. That this is to be the meaning is plainly ſhewed, by thoſe contrary expreſſions of times of peace and ſecurity elſewhere uſed, viz. They ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares, and their ſpears into pruning-hooks, Iſaiah ii. 4. and Micah iv. 3. which [z] Kimchi thinks to be a deſcription of peace, which ſhall follow the war here ſpoken of: and as to the other words, and let the weak ſay I am ſtrong, viz. put himſelf forward in this war without conſideration of his weakneſs and inability, it tends to the ſame purpoſe, it being uſual for weak infirm men to favour their bodies, and not put themſelves on difficult matters, as war or the like; whereas here that is not allowed as an excuſe to them, but they muſt put on ſtrength, and to their uttermoſt, for joining in the employment here called to.

[z] See chap. i. 14. [a] Grot. [b] Who ſeems to look on that verb properly to import ſuch raiſing from death to life, as Ribera alſo doth. [c] Jun. Trem. [d] As the clouds, or the air, if it be underſtood of the reſurrection or day of judgment, as 1 Theſſ. iv. 17. [e] Druſ. Caſt. proficiſcantur. [f] Ver. 11. the word באו come, is rendred by the Arab. MS. تعالو.

As for ſome of the words in this verſe, how they are differently rendred by Interpreters, it will not be much material to obſerve, as particularly that אתים Ittim (in אתיכם Ittecem) is by Some rendred [h] aratra, plows, by Others vomeres, plow-ſhares, as the Syriack ܡܫܚܬ̈ܐ) by Others [i] Ligones, ſpades, by Others [k] Bidentes, forks, or any other word denoting any ſuch inſtrument of iron. [l] שחופרים בהם, with which they dig or break up the ground. And ſo מומרותיכם Mizmerotecem, is rendred, as in our Text, pruning-hooks, in the margin ſithes; for as to the ſcope it will be all one, viz. to ſhew that now there will be ſo much uſe of iron for inſtruments of war, as that whatſoever was before made of that metal for other uſe, ſhould now be converted to that.

Ver. 11. Aſſemble yourſelves and come all ye heathens, &c.] עושו, uſhu, Aſſemble yourſelves, The word is لغظة مفردة, ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, no where elſe uſed in ſcripture, and ſo is to be underſtood (as R. Tanchum ſpeaks) بحسب مجاورة الكلام, according to what ſhall ſuit with the context, or connexion of the words in the ſame ſentence joined with it, [m] and according to this rule he takes the ſignification of it to be, الانحباش والاجتماع, a being driven together, and gathering together. Which is the ſignification by [n] ſeveral Expoſitors both ancient and modern given it, who are by Ours alſo in it followed; whence Aben Ezra, and Kimchi, as Others, think the conſtellation עיש aiſh, or Arcturus named, Job xxxi. 32. as appearing together in a knot. Others, he ſaith, look on it as the [o] ſame with חושו which ſignifies, haſten (by change of the guttural letters ח, and ע, one with another) and ſo it is by Some rendred, as by R. Solomon, and among Chriſtians by Some [p] approved. The Vulgar Latin renders it erumpite, break out, which may ſeem to include the firſt meaning. So Ribera expounds it, Prodite magno cum impetu ex omnibus urbibus veſtris, & congregamini, come out with great force out of all your cities, and be gathered together. We may well adhere, according to the common conſent of all, to what Ours gives us, as a proper rendring, Aſſemble yourſelves. The following words are of more ordinary uſe and known ſignification, as by Ours rendred, and come all ye heathen and gather yourſelves together round about; although by thoſe that will look into the Hebrew Text, it may be obſerved that the word נקבצו, Nikbatzu, rendred, gather yourſelves together, be, as to the Grammar of it, of [q] a form not ſo uſual, the ſenſe requiring it to be in ſignification imperative, according to the regular form of which [r] mood it would be הקבצו hikkabetzu, as it is in other places not infrequently; but of it in this form one only example is, as by R. Tanchum, ſo I think [s] by any brought, viz. נלוו Nilvu, Jer. l. 5. for Hillavu, be ye joined, though by Some it be otherwiſe taken as in its proper form of the preter tenſe, as by Ours in that place of Jeremy, though rendred in the ſignification of the imperative, as appears by their putting it as the firſt perſon plural. The words of this verſe hitherto ſeem to be [t] part of what God bids to be proclaimed among the Gentiles, though [u] Some look on them as the words of the Prophet, but it ſeems plainer to take them otherwiſe, as we ſay, and then the [w] Prophet's words joining in his wiſh or deſire on what God had declared to be his deſign of calling or cauſing to come together all nations, to be the following only, viz. Thither cauſe thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord. In the rendring and expounding of which we ſhall find much difference. The beſt and plaineſt among them I take to be that, which Ours follow in the Text, according to which הנחת Hancheth, is taken for the imperative mood of the conjugation Hiphil, from נחת Nachath, [x] to deſcend or come down, as in the Hebrew ſometimes, and more frequently in the Chaldee, it ſignifies. So the MS. Arabick, and ſo Aben Ezra and Kimchi render it, as well as many modern Interpreters. It is by Others in the ſame form and from the ſame root taken to have the ſignification of breaking: which notion both that ancient Grammarian Abu Walid, and alſo R. Tanchum, rendring it break, (following therein the Chaldee Paraphraſt) ſeem to prefer, though mentioning without diſlike the former verſion. R. Solomon looks upon them both ſo indifferent, as that he confeſſeth he [g] Druſ. follows him therein. [h] LXX. Vulg. [i] Interlin. [k] Pagn. [l] Kimchi. [m] The Arab. MS. rendring it אחלמו (perhaps it ſhould be אלתמו). [n] Chald. Par. LXX. Syriack, printed Arabick. [o] See Note in MS. Arab. Verſion. [p] Tig. Mr. Lively. [q] See R. Tanchum. [r] In the conjug. Niphal from קבץ Kabats. [s] See Buxtorf's Gram. l. 1. cap. 14, &c. cap. 50. in note on the imper. mood. [t] See Piſcat. [u] Druſ. on the end of ver. 10. [w] Ab. Ezra. [x] Kimchi.

he knew not which to chooſe. For the latter we have indeed great authority, as of the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and the Syriack, who render it both by the word תבר, which ſignifies breaking. To which may be referred that of the Vulgar Latin alſo, occumbere faciet. Which the Doway renders, there will the Lord make all thy ſtrong ones to be ſlain. Although to the other notion of deſcending it may alſo have reſpect. But now in theſe there may be obſerved, beſides the difference of ſignification from the former, another alſo concerning the form, in which they take the verb to be, while they render it not in the ſecond perſon, and as of the imperative mood, but as in the third perſon, and future tenſe of the indicative mood. The Lord ſhall break, &c. It ſeems they looked on it as the [y] infinitive mood, which is after uſed for the future, which conſtruction alſo Ours look on as agreeable to the words, by their putting in the margin, or, the Lord ſhall bring down: and ſo the Geneva Engliſh, then ſhall the Lord caſt down the mighty men, and ſo our older Engliſh Bibles. According to this difference concerning the notion of the verb, are there different ſenſes given of the meaning of the word by it governed, viz. גבוריך, which is read thy mighty ones. Though there be no queſtion of the word גבורים Gibborim, but that it ſignifies ſtrong ones, or mighty ones; yet who are thereby meant, are according to the different ſenſes in which the verb is taken, different opinions. They who underſtand the verb ſo as to ſignify to cauſe to come down, by thoſe mighty do take to be meant God's holy angels, ſo doth Aben Ezra and Kimchi, הם המלאכים they are the angels. So Abu Walid and R. Tanchum ſay that if the verb be taken in the ſenſe of cauſing to come down, then by גבוריך Gibboreca, thy mighty ones, will be meant الملايكة, angels, who have the title given them alſo, Pſalm ciii. 20. that they are גבורי כח Gibbore Coach, mighty in ſtrength. So that the import of the words and the Prophet's deſire will be [z] اللهم انزل علينا بها ملايكتك وجبابرتك لغوثنا ونصرنا [a] O God, cauſe to come down in it (i. e. that place, or thither, where the heathen ſhall be gathered together,) thy angels and thy mighty ones for our ſuccour and help; or we may ſay, for the deſtruction of theſe enemies there bid to aſſemble themſelves, both being employments on which God uſeth to put thoſe his mighty ones, both the defence of his people and the deſtruction of his enemies. As for his people he giveth his angels charge over them to keep them in all their ways, Pſalm xci. 11. and how he maketh uſe of them for the deſtruction of his enemies appears by what we read, 2 Kings xix. 35. how the angel of the Lord went forth and ſmote in the camp of the Aſſyrians an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand. Of them here therefore dom any of [b] Chriſtian Interpreters, as well as thoſe of the Jews named, underſtand the word, agreeable to what they take the verb to ſignify, as we have ſeen, viz. to cauſe to come down. But if it be taken in the other notion, which we alſo mentioned, viz. of breaking, or beating, and bringing, or caſting, down, then will not this ſignification of the noun be proper for the place; but by mighty or ſtrong ones be underſtood ſuch as, preſuming on their might and ſtrength, proudly and rebelliouſly exalted and oppoſed themſelves againſt God and his people: and ſo doth R. Tanchum in that way expound it, يريد بگبوريך المتجبرين عليك, He means by Gibboreca, thy ſtrong and mighty ones, thoſe that proudly exalted themſelves againſt thee. (Such as are called thine, viz. God's, not becauſe they were for, but againſt, him.) In this ſenſe it is plain the Chaldee takes them, as by his rendring the verb by breaking, ſo by his changing the perſon in the affixe or pronoun, rendring, the ſtrength of his ſtrong ones, viz. of thoſe of the enemies aſſembled; and in the ſame is it plain that [c] all they who do in that or the like ſenſe render the verb, do or muſt of neceſſity underſtand the noun. And both being ſo underſtood, the particle שמה ſhammah muſt not be rendred, thither, but, [d] there, or [e] then. Theſe expoſitions, however differing between themſelves, yet are both ſo agreeable to the words according to the known ſignifications of them, that we ſee very learned Expoſitors in doubt, which of them ſhould be followed, and indeed one of them named will require the other to be underſtood. If it be ſaid God ſhall ſend or cauſe thither to come down his mighty ones, viz. his angels, it will be neceſſarily underſtood, to break the ſtrength of, or to caſt or beat down the mighty enemies there or then aſſembled againſt his people; and if it be ſo taken as that God will beat or caſt down his ſtrong enemies, it will at once eaſily be underſtood that he will do it by the hand of his inſtruments more mighty in ſtrength, his angels, who in ſuch, as in other caſes do his pleaſure. So in both theſe ways there is nothing irreconcileable either between themſelves or with the original, of which they are tranſlations, and ought to give the right meaning anſwerable to the ſignification that the words in it bear. But if we ſhall look to the Greek of the LXX. we ſhall find that, as not agreeing with either of theſe meanings which we have ſeen, ſo neither with the Hebrew original, as now read. Their tranſlation being πραὺς ἔσω μαχητὴς (or as ſome copies πολεμιστὴς) let the mild be a fighter or warrior; which no way agreeing (as we ſaid) with the ordinary Hebrew, [f] Some conceive that they read it otherwiſe than now it is, viz. הנחת יהיה גבור hannachat yihyeh gibbor, inſtead of Jehovah Gibboreca, and taking hannachat, as having the ſignification of נוח Nuach, or Nach, to be quiet, and changing the reading of the ſecond word, and in the laſt leaving out both the note of the plural number, and the the pronoun affixed. 'Tis hard to imagine that there ſhould be ſuch diverſity of reading in the Hebrew. Their rendring ſeems rather to be a repeated explication of the laſt clauſe of the foregoing verſe, Let the weak ſay I am ſtrong, than a proper tranſlation of the preſent words. The printed Arabick follows here all along the Greek, rendring, الوديع يكون مجبّرا, qui manſuetus eſt, bellator eſto, He that is mild, let him be a warrior. How it came to paſs that the Greek Interpreters ſhould ſo read it, I know not. There is not certainly thence to be concluded any thing againſt the antiquity, or verity of the Hebrew reading, which all copies agree in. What alteration may be ſuſpected muſt rather be from different copies of their tranſlation, if they were to be found.

[y] Mercer, Glaſſ. Gram. p. 361. [z] Abu Walid in נחת. [a] Or as R. Tanchum, ملايكتك الجبابرة, thy mighty angels. [b] Mercer, Tarnov. Diodati. [c] Jerome, Munſter. Caſtal. &c. [d] Munſt. Tig. [e] Druſ. Tarnov. [f] Druſ. cap. 18.

12. Let the heathen be awakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoſhaphat: for there will I ſit to judge all the heathen round about.

Theſe words ſeem to follow, as an anſwer to the prayer or deſire of the Prophet in the foregoing words, in which he declares that certainly he will bring to effect that which he had bidden before to be proclaimed, and which the Prophet deſired, and how and where it ſhould be effected, viz. by cauſing all the heathen to come together unto the place by him appointed, and there executing judgment on them, יעורו Yauru, Let be awakened. This word, though in a different form, we have above, ver. 7. where he ſaith, הנני מעירם Hinneni meiram, by Ours rendred, behold I will raiſe them, and again, ver. 9. העירו הגבורים, Hairu hagibborim, rendred, wake up the mighty men, on which place hath been ſpoken as much as may ſeem needful: There he bids ſuch as he employs to awaken, and thoſe here he himſelf calls to awake and riſe up. The verbs here both rendred imperatively, let them be awakened, let them come up, are in the future tenſe, and may as well be rendred in the ſignification of that as of the imperative mood, viz. [g] they ſhall be wakened, they ſhall come up, and ſo would the meaning alſo be proper, and well anſwer to what is ſaid in the foregoing words, where God bids his meſſengers, Proclaim war, and in order to it, to do what he bids them do, and the Prophets deſire that he would ſo cauſe it to be done; as if he ſhould here affirm that the things ſhould be ſurely brought to paſs. The heathens (or nations) ſhall be wakened (or raiſed up,) the word יעורו yauru, being applicable either to wakening from ſleep, or raiſing up from death, or otherwiſe ſtirring or being ſtirred up. So do [h] Some render the words in the future tenſe, excitabuntur, and, aſcendent, ſhall be ſtirred up, ſhall go up; though more generally they be rendred as they are by Ours in the imperative mood, Let them, &c. They are likewiſe in [i] the Chaldee put in the form of the future, יתון בנלי they ſhall come openly, &c. whence Ribera infers from the LXX. and Vulgar Latin, rendring them imperatively, imperativum pro futuro poni, that the imperative mood is put for the future; but this note ſeems of no great moment, the Chaldee with other eaſtern tongues, as the Syriack and Arabick, having no other way of expreſſing the third perſon imperative but by the future, as well as the Hebrew, ſo that by which of them words of that form are beſt rendred, muſt be judged by the ſenſe and ſcope of the place. Here it will be all one by which of the two it be rendred, whether God, whoſe purpoſe cannot be hindred or fail, commands a thing to be done, or ſays it ſhall be done, being a certain aſſurance that it ſhall ſo be. And let them come up, or, and they ſhall come up, to the valley of Jehoſhaphat.] Above, ver. 2. he ſaith, he will bring them down into the valley of Jehoſhaphat, according to which it would ſeem more proper to ſay come down, as indeed men are more properly ſaid to go down into a valley than to aſcend. This ſome ſolve by ſaying it is ſpoken in reſpect to the higher ſituation of Jeruſalem, or the country to which in coming up they went through that valley, or [k] towards it: But I know not what certainty there is in this; I ſuppoſe it to be a plainer way, to ſay, as before we obſerved on ver. 9. concerning the word יעלו yaulu, that though it ſtrictly and properly ſignify coming up, yet it may be ſufficient ſometimes to take it for a coming thither, whither they are called, without reſpect to the ſituation of the place, whether it be lower or higher, ſo that we ſhall not need for ſalving the ſtricter ſignification of the word to refer it (with Grotius) only to thoſe qui in ſubterraneis carceribus tenentur, are ſhut up in priſons under ground, they that are ſpoken to being heathen, or nations indefinitely, and ſo in general. Beſides, their coming to appear in the preſence of the moſt high God, may well be ſtiled a coming up, wherever it be. The place whither they are here ſummoned and bid to come, is called the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as likewiſe above, ver. 2. and no where elſe under that name in the ſcripture mentioned; what is by Expoſitors thought of it, and their different opinions concerning it, we have there ſaid what I ſuppoſe may ſuffice, except we ſhall add, or rather repeat, that the valley of Jehoſhaphat, though it were at firſt according to the opinion of moſt, a name properly belonging to a particular place, viz. that, where God ſhewed or executed his ſignal judgment on the enemies of Judah, in the time of Jehoſhaphat (who [l] prayed to God to judge them, ſeeing he and his people had no might againſt them, and upon God's hearkening to his prayer, and bringing deſtruction on thoſe enemies, called the place where it was done, the valley Beracha, becauſe there they bleſſed the Lord) yet, as Munſter ſpeaks, ob exertum Dei judicium in eo loco, in generale evaſit evaſit vocabulum, in alluſion to that judgment in that place wrought, the name therefore given to it (importing the Judgment of God) paſſed into a general name, common to [m] any place where he ſhould in like manner ſhew his power in vindicating his church and people, on his and their enemies, by minding them of what he then did, giving them aſſurance that he both could and would ſtill do the like for them, as occaſion ſhould require. It is therefore, as above we ſaid, by Others applied to the place and time, where and when, God hath executed or ſhall execute any ſignal judgment on the enemies of his church in their ſight, or for their ſakes. It is by Grotius applied to the deſtruction of the Perſians by the Grecians, the executors of his judgments; it is likewiſe well applicable to the place whither God will gather together at the day of the laſt general judgment, to which many, (as we have alſo ſaid) think it eſpecially to belong, yet not ſo as thence to conclude with Some that the valley of Jehoſhaphat, properly at firſt ſo called, ſhall be the particular place for the general aſſembling of all nations at that day, for the reaſons above mentioned; but to aſſure them that at the time by him determined, he will cauſe them all to come up to that, which, from what ſhall there be then done, may be called by that name, to the import of which (as denoting the judgment of God) reſpect here ſeems to be had; For (ſaith he) there will I ſit to judge all the Heathens round about. Were it not, whereſoever it ſhall be, ſo before called, yet for this act of God performed in it, may it now from henceforth take that name. That act is, that he will there ſit לשפט liſhpot, to judge, I will ſit (ſaith he) ſo ſpeaking of himſelf [n] humano more, according to the manner of men, or in ſuch language as men expreſs what is uſually done among them, where the cuſtom is for the judge examining matters and giving ſentence, to ſit; not as if ſitting or ſtanding were poſtures properly attributed to God. The Chaldee renders אתגלי Ithgele, I will manifeſt my ſelf, לשפט liſhpot, to judge; the word, of which the former word is in part compounded, having the name of God premiſed and joined with it. The ſame is above uſed ver. 2. in another form, נשפטת, niſhphatti, and there by Ours rendred, I will plead with them. It may well include his examining, or laying open matters, and accordingly paſſing ſentence on the perſons queſtioned and called to judgment, according to their deſerts. The perſons are here called כל הגוים מסביב, All the heathen (or nations) round about, which according to what is underſtood by the valley of Jehoſhaphat, may be differently, as Grotius, appliably to his way (as we have ſeen,) takes to be meant by it, [o] all the forces or people of Aſia, or others otherwiſe. The plaineſt way ſeems to underſtand by it, ſuch as ſhall come together, [p] ex cunctis terræ partibus, from all parts of the earth, or [q] all nations gathered together to be judged.

[g] Excitabuntur & aſcendent, Druſ. [h] Jun. Trem. Piſc. [i] As in the Syriack and Arabick. [k] Verſus vallem, Druſ. [l] 2 Chron. xx. 12.

If theſe words were [r] not primarily ſpoken of the laſt general judgment, yet the expreſſions are ſuch as may mind them, and give them a certain expectation of it, in the time by God appointed for it. And ſo alſo in the words following in the next verſe, wherein he commands the judgment that he will paſs, to be executed by thoſe whom he will uſe as his miniſters therein.

13. Put ye in the ſickle, for the harveſt is ripe; come, get you down, for the preſs is full, the fats overflow, for their wickedneſs is great.

If it be enquired who are theſe, the perſons here called upon, it may be anſwered, that they are the ſame, who are before called God's mighty ones, according to that rendring of thoſe words, ver. 11. Thither cauſe thy mighty ones to come down. That which theſe are called on to do for the executing of that judgment, which ſhall paſs on the heathen, is ſet forth in metaphorical expreſſions, taken from what is uſually done by huſband-men in reſpect to their corn, viz. of cutting it down when it is ripe, with the ſickle, and in reſpect to their vines, viz. of cutting off the grapes and caſting them into their preſſes and fats, that they may preſs and tread them, which applied to man and enemies, will denote the cutting off and deſtroying them. What is here ſaid may be illuſtrated by comparing it with like expreſſions which we have in the Scripture elſewhere. So Matt. xiii. 39. as to the firſt expreſſion here uſed, ſpeaking of the time when he ſhall deſtroy the wicked, compared there to tares growing among the corn, in the field of the world, he ſaith, the harveſt is the end of the world, and the reapers are the Angels, whom the Son of man ſhall ſend forth, and they ſhall gather out of his kingdom, all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and ſhall caſt them into a furnace of fire, ver. 41. and 42. Again, Rev. xiv. 15. where, according to the firſt expreſſion here uſed, an Angel cried to him that ſate on the cloud, Thruſt in thy ſickle and reap, for the time is come for thee to reap, for the harveſt of the earth is ripe. Then as to the ſecond, ver. 18. where an Angel is likewiſe ſaid to cry to another that had a ſharp ſickle, ſaying, Thruſt in thy ſharp ſickle, and gather the cluſters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe. And (ſaith he) the Angel thruſt his ſickle into the earth, and caſt it into the great wine-preſs of the wrath of God. From theſe places it is manifeſt that the cutting down that, מא שאנה יחצר אן, ma ſhaanah an yochtſad, the property or condition of [m] The MS. Arabick verſion done by a Jew, here renders مرج المحاكمة the Valley (or Meadow) of calling to judgment, though ver. 2. he renders the proper name of it יהושפט مرج the Valley of Jehoſhaphat, and there notes that this Valley had ſeveral names, viz. 1. עמק החרוץ. 2. עמק רפאים, 3. עמק המלך, 4. גיא ההרגה, 5. גיא בן הינם. 1. The Valley of Deciſion. 2. The Valley of Rephaim, or Giants. 3. The King's Dale (Gen. xiv. 17.) 4. The Valley of Slaughter. 5. The Valley of the Son of Hinnom, Jer. xix. 6. [n] Druſ. and ſee Grot. on ver. 2. [o] Omnis vis Aſiæ. [p] Calvin. [q] Pet. à Fig. [r] As ſome think they are nimis coacte, too much wreſted in ſo doing, Calvin, on ver. 12.

of which is to be reaped, or mowed, (as R. Tanchum interprets the word קציר Katzeir, by Ours rendred the harveſt, or as the MS. Arabick renders it, אלמסתחצר, that which is fit or meet to be mown or reaped;) and the treading or preſſing grapes cut off and caſt into the wine-preſſes or fats, there to be preſſed or trodden, is uſed as apt language to expreſs and deſcribe the execution of God's judgments on his wicked enemies, his cutting them off and bringing them down in his due time. If it be applied, as by many it is, and thought particularly to belong, to the great and general judgment at the laſt day, to be paſſed by the Lord, and by the miniſtry of his Angels to be executed, this ſeems to have confirmation by what is expreſly ſaid in St. Matthew, that the harveſt is the end of the world, and the reapers are the Angels. But the time of God's ſitting to judge all the heathen round about, and the harveſt being not ſo expreſly here ſet down, Others, as we ſaid, refer it rather to ſome great defeat, at ſome other time to be given to the enemies of God and his church, and deſtruction brought on them by the miniſtry of ſuch as he ſhall imploy, when he ſhall ſee moſt convenient, which time he expreſſeth by ſaying, for the harveſt is ripe, the preſs is full, by which he ſignifies what he in the following words more plainly expreſſeth, that their wickedneſs is great, i. e. that it is now come to a full height, and he will no longer ſuffer them; they are ripe for deſtruction, and it ſhall now certainly come upon them, and as it follows in the next verſe, the day of the Lord is near. What time is by the day of the Lord, and the harveſt being ripe, deſigned, it being not preciſely and particularly expreſſed, leaves a liberty of applying it to any ſignal judgment or deſtruction, which God hath already, ſince theſe words ſpoken, brought on any nation or people, who have been enemies to his people, and perſecuters of them, or ſhall yet at any time before the end of the world; but certainly to the [s] general judgment at the end of the world, they are in their greateſt latitude applicable, and ſhall have full completion of whatſoever they can be ſaid to ſignify. The ſaying, that the day ſpoken of is near, will not any way croſs, or obſtruct this meaning, what is by God certainly determined, being properly ſaid to be near at hand, and preſent, being as ſure to be done as if it were already done. Though the time may ſeem long to men, yet to God it is not ſo, with whom one day is as a thouſand years, and a thouſand years as one day (2 Pet. iii. 8.) and what is fartheſt off, as near at hand, what future, as preſent. Mean while, his intimating here by ſaying, that the harveſt is ripe, that he is withal long-ſuffering in the account of men, and doth not ſo ſoon execute judgment on the enemies of him, and his Church, as they ſeem to deſerve, yet is not ſlack as men count ſlackneſs, or neglectful of what is done on earth, but hath appointed a ſet time for all things, as he ſeeth moſt agreeable to his juſtice and mercy, which being come, he will ſo accompliſh them as to make both appear. God had devoted the Amorites and inhabitants of Canaan to deſtruction for their great wickedneſs, and promiſed to the ſeed of Abraham their land for a poſſeſſion, yet delayed for many years the executing of his judgments on them, even to the fourth generation; and why he ſo would do, he giveth for a reaſon, For the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full, Gen. xv. 16. Till it be ſo, he will ſpare them, and allow them time for repentance, but when, through their obſtinate perſiſting and running on therein, it is come to that meaſure, he will ſurely then put a ſtop to it, and cut them off. In ſuch manner it is manifeſt that he dealt with the old world in the days of Noah, when, though men were grown ſo wicked that he reſolved that his ſpirit ſhould not always ſtrive with them, yet allowed them an hundred and twenty years for filling up the meaſure of their ſins, Gen. vi. 3. but then ſeeing all fleſh to have corrupted his ways upon the earth, he ſaith, The end of all fleſh is come before me, for the earth is filled with violence through them; and behold I will deſtroy them with the earth, ver. 12, 13. The ſame method doth he plainly ſhew himſelf here to proceed in with them whom he now ſaith he will judge, the expreſſions uſed intimating that he had long forborne them, even till they were ripe in their ſins, fit for an harveſt, and as full of wickedneſs as ripe grapes, which preſſed fill the fats, ſet to take their liquor through the abundance of their juice, with which they ſwell: ſuch a ripeneſs and fulneſs of wickedneſs in thoſe ſpoken of to be denoted by theſe figurative expreſſions of the harveſts being ripe, and the preſſes being full, and the fats overflowing, appears by what follows in plain terms as the meaning of all, for their wickedneſs is great, ſo that they are now as ready for deſtruction, as the ripe harveſt for being reaped, or the grapes full of liquor for being caſt into the preſs, and trodden and emptied into the fats, which through the abundance thereof they will cauſe to overflow. Concerning the literal meaning and ſignification of the words in this verſe, there is a difference betwixt Interpreters, as firſt concerning the word רדו Redu, by ours rendred, get you down (as by moſt others to the ſame ſenſe) as if it were from ירד yarad, which ſignifies to deſcend, or go down. But R. Salomo Jarchi is of another mind, who takes it to be from the theme רדה radah, which ſignifies, dominari, to rule, or have power over, and expounds it here by לשון כבישות ורידוי, the ſignification of bringing under, and having power over, in that ſenſe which it is uſed in, in what is ſaid, Gen. i. 28. ורדו בדגת הים, and have dominion over the fiſh of the ſea. The Chaldee Paraphraſt expreſſeth it by רושישו conculcate, tread on (having rendred the former word באו come, by חיתו Chutu, deſcend) which may ſeem well enough to agree with that ſignification of bringing under, except we may rather think that the

[s] See Diodati on ver. 1. and Lively on ver. 9.

the word in that time was uſed in the notion of treading, it having that ſignification in the Arabick tongue, in which ردئ, Radah, ſignifies an hard treading, as of the trotting or prancing of an horſe, [t] calcavit terram ungulis ſuis equus, &c. and that the word Radu here, whether from ירד yarad, or ררה Rada (as from either it may be formed) was looked on as having this ſignification in the Hebrew, may alſo be well conjectured from the Greek rendring it, πατεῖτε, the Syriack ܪܕܘ &c. the printed Arabick دوسوا, all of them, Tread, which is a proper term, in ſpeaking of grapes in the wine-preſs, elſewhere uſed in Scripture, though expreſſed by another word in the Hebrew. So that if it be taken, as by moſt it is, in the ſignification of going down, even that will imply this to be the buſineſs for which they are to go, viz. to tread the full ripe grapes now ready for, or even already in, or filling the preſs, and ſo full of juice, that upon the treading they will fill the fats even to overflowing: ſo ſaith he השיקו היקבים, the fats overflow. The ſame words (though in another tenſe of the verb, viz. the future) we have above, chap. ii. 24. ישיקו yaſhiku, ſhall overflow: in which place we have at large ſpoken of the derivation and ſignification of it, ſo that we ſhall not need here again to add to it: that which will appear from what hath been there ſaid, and here may be obſerved, is, that from any different ſignifications given it, it denotes an abundance and great meaſure of that which is ſpoken of, as there and here alſo literally of the liquor or juice of the grapes, and ſo conſequently here of what is likened to ſuch grapes, which by what follows, for their wickedneſs is great, may well ſeem to be underſtood of the great meaſure and abounding of them, and ſo is by [u] Moſt underſtood, that they are as full of that as grapes of juice; yet is it by Others underſtood of the great effuſion of the blood of thoſe wicked nations ſpoken of, which ſhall be ſhed in ſuch deſtruction by war, as God, who had long forborn them, in his appointed time would bring upon them. So Kimchi, הוא משל לשפיכת הדם, It is a metaphorical, comparative expreſſion for the effuſion of blood, the time that they ſhall dye or be ſlain being come, becauſe great is the evil, which they and their forefathers have done to Iſrael. So Grotius, Let the fats overflow, i. e. multus fundatur ſanguis, qui cum vino comparari ſolet, "let "there be ſhed much blood, which uſeth to "be compared (or likened) to wine," the blood he means, of thoſe great armies, ex omni Aſia, out of all Aſia, the fields filled with which he thinks compared to, and meant by, a preſs full of grapes; and then the words, for their wickedneſs is great, to denote a reaſon why he bids that bloody ſlaughter and deſtruction to be executed upon them, ita meruere illæ gentes, thoſe nations have ſo deſerved by their great wickedneſs.

This Expoſition ſeems more ancient, being from the Chaldee Paraphraſt, who to this purpoſe explains the verſe, Draw out the ſword againſt them, for the time of their end is come, go down, tread upon the ſlain of their mighty ones, as that is trod on which is in the wine-preſs: ſhed out their blood, becauſe their wickedneſs is great. To either of theſe compariſons, viz. either of the greatneſs of their wickedneſs to the abundance of liquor in full ripe grapes, or elſe of effuſion of their blood to the wine in plenty preſſed out of ſuch grapes, the words may indifferently be applied, according as that to which they are applied will require. If it be thought that here is expreſſed ſuch deſtruction as by the ſword God would at any time be brought on any enemies of his church or people, while the world ſtandeth as it is, then will the compariſon between the juice of grapes and blood be proper to expreſs that meaning, the abundant flowing out of the one will denote the plentiful effuſion of the other (although the other alſo of expoſing the greatneſs of their wickedneſs by the fulneſs of the grapes, and the fats overflowing with liquor may alſo be looked on as not improper) and then the laſt words will be a reaſon why their blood ſhall be in ſuch plenty ſhed, as wine out of grapes trodden in the preſs and filling the fats, viz. becauſe their wickedneſs is great.

But if it be underſtood of that heavy judgment to which all wicked ſinners ſhall be doomed at the end of the world, then will the other way of underſtanding by the preſſes being full, and the fats overflowing, the greatneſs of the wickedneſs of the men of the world, be as a reaſon (together with thoſe preceding, for the harveſt is ripe) why God will now fit to judge them, and ſo the laſt words their wickedneſs is great, be, as we before ſaid, an expreſſion in plain words of what is in the other figuratively given to underſtand, matters being ſo with the enemies of God and his church, their wickedneſs being come to the greateſt height that God will ſuffer; he having now determined to execute his vengeance on them, to cut them as corn fit to be reaped, and tread them in the wine-preſs of his wrath, as grapes come to maturity and full of juice uſed to be preſſed and trodden, there ſhall be no way of eſcape for them, neither their might nor multitude by which they have hitherto prevailed, and might think ſtill to prevail, ſhall deliver them from his mighty ones, whom he will now ſend to execute his judgments on them. Be they never ſo great in ſtrength, never ſo many in number, they ſhall all be gathered together to that place in which he hath appointed to execute his ſentence denounced on them: So do the next words give us to underſtand by his ſaying.

14. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of deciſion: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of deciſion.

The repeating of the noun multitudes in the plural number makes plainly for expreſſing the greatneſs, or well nigh infiniteneſs of the number of thoſe ſpoken of, according to a rule of the Hebrew [x] Grammarians, confirmed by many examples. But then the two nouns being ſo put together without any verb or particle to to direct for the conſtruction, or for the underſtanding what is ſaid, either to, or of, them ſpoken of, or what they ſhould or ſhall do, or what be done to them, argues it a defective ſpeech neceſſarily requiring ſome ſupply to be made for directing to, and giving the meaning of them; and about that do Interpreters differ, according as they take the nouns, ſome in one caſe, ſome in another. Some taking them as in the nominative caſe ſupply, [y] cadent, ſhall fall, [z] concidentur, ſhall be cut off, [a] Others erunt, ſhall be, [b] Others congregati ſunt are gathered together. Others taking them in the vocative caſe ſupply [c] adeſte, come, or be preſent, Others, [d] ite, go into. In this way our ancienter Engliſh Tranſlation hath it, O people, people come into. And that from Geneva, O multitude, multitude come into, &c. Others do not ſupply any verb at all, but rather look upon the words as ſpoken by way of exclamation, and ſo underſtand only a particle of admiration, as if ſeeing and repreſenting as preſent what ſhould certainly be, he cried out by way of admiration, O how great a multitude do I ſee gathered together! or ſhall there be gathered together, [e] quantum turbæ, quantum tumultus. In which ſenſe the words as in the Original, and by the Vulgar tranſlated only populi, populi: and by the Authors of our laſt Tranſlation (as by diverſe Others) multitudes, multitudes, without any ſupply expreſſed, will well bear. And are ſo by ſome of our Engliſh Divines paraphraſed: So by Biſhop Hall, O what multitudes, what infinite multitudes of wicked ſinners ſhall then and there be adjudged, &c. and ſo by Dr. Stokes, O the multitude of hereticks, ſchiſmaticks, irreligious and prophane livers! O the vaſt company of atheiſts, idolaters, tyrants, and other malicious enemies of the true profeſſion, and ſervice of God, that methinks I now ſee making their appearance in the valley, &c. Inſtead of what Ours with ſo many Others render, multitudes, multitudes (or in ſome ſynonymous words) the Greek more differently read ἦχοι ἐξήχησαν, ſounds have ſounded forth (or, as ſome copies read, [f] ἠχήθησαν, are heard) whom the printed Arabick follows, الالحان لحنت, Concentus perſonuerunt; the Syriack likewiſe to the ſame purpoſe, ܩܠܐ ܕܩܠܐ, which the Latin Interpreter renders, ſenſus tumultus, the ſenſe (or noiſe) of a tumult: Barbahlul in his Lexicon rendring it by the Arabick word الضوضة, or rather الضوضا, which is الجلبة واصوات الناس [g] a ſhouting or mixed voices of men. The ſenſe will be much one with the former: ſuch a tumultuous noiſe arguing a great multitude of people to be met together. The difference in giving the literal ſignification of the word appears to be from the different ſignifications of the word המין Hamon, which ſignifies both a great noiſe, and alſo a multitude of people; Some taking one, Some the other. The cauſe of repeating the word is, as we have ſaid, to ſhew the greatneſs of the thing ſpoken of. Abarbinel gives here another reaſon, for the diverſe ſorts of thoſe of which theſe multitudes ſhould conſiſt, viz. of the dead then raiſed to life, and of others that were then living of the Edomites (which in his language are Chriſtians) and Iſmaelites (viz. Mahometans) which ſhall, according to his opinion, which we have before ſeen on ver. 9, &c. be aſſembled at that day of the reſurrection of the dead, which is the time that he ſuppoſeth theſe tranſactions to belong to, and therefore by המנים המנים, hamonim, hamonim, multitudes, multitudes, to be meant המון החיים והמון המתים, A multitude of living, and a multitude of dead. Which conceit and expreſſion of his may, if need were, be well enough applied to the opinion of thoſe, who look on what is here ſaid as belonging to the day of the general judgment, when both quick and dead, the whole world of men that ever were, ſhall be aſſembled before the judgment ſeat of God: but will not agree with that other opinion of thoſe, who take here to be meant not that day, but ſome ſuch wherein God ſhould cauſe to aſſemble together vaſt armies (as the MS. Arabick here renders the word by عساكر) of ſuch as had injured him in his Church, and people, and been enemies to them, that they might be cut off and deſtroyed; as the ſame Abarbinel alſo ſaith, that if the words be underſtood only of ſuch as ſhall be then living, then the meaning of the repeated word will be only המונים רבים hamonim rabbim, great multitudes. The place where they are repreſented as appearing by the [h] Prophet ſpeaking of what ſhould certainly be, as if at preſent being, or ſummoned to appear, is called עמק החרוץ, Emek hacharuts, the valley of deciſion, as it is in the text of our laſt Tranſlation; but in the margin are put two other, viz. of conciſion and of threſhing; which notes that the word hath all thoſe ſignifications, and that either of them gives a meaning ſo agreeable to the place, that the reader may take which he pleaſeth. That which they chooſe to put in the text, viz. of deciſion, gives us to look on it as ſo called, becauſe God will there decide all matters concerning thoſe there aſſembled before him, and paſs judgment on them according to their doings and deſervings, for which reaſon it was before called the valley of Jehoſhaphat, as we have ſeen; wherefore the Chaldee Paraphraſt renders them both by מישר פלוג דינא, the valley of the diſtribution of Judgment or paſſing judgment ſeverally on all, according to their deſerts. The LXX. alſo, ἐν τῇ κοιλάδι τῆς δίκης, in the valley of judgment, which the printed Arabick alſo follows, في وادية القضا. The Syriack alſo, ܒܡܥܪܥܐ ܕܕܝܢܐ, in valle deciſionum, in the valley of deciſions. The ſame notion [i] the Authors of our our more ancient Engliſh Tranſlation took, rendring it the valley of final judgment. R. Salomo to this meaning alſo expounds it, שׁשׁם חרוץ המשפט אמת, becauſe there is, or ſhall be, decided the judgment of truth; which expoſition alſo Kimchi mentions, as indifferently agreeing to the word with that other of conciſion, which, as by Ours put in the margin as ſecondary, is by Others preferred to be put in the text, as indeed in place of ſignification it ſeems to have priority, and that to be a ſecondary or by way of [k] metaphor taken from it; ſo is it by the Vulgar Latin which renders it, in valle conciſionis, in the valley of conciſion; ſo alſo by Others more modern, as Piſcator, Junius and Tremellius; and Kimchi (as we ſaid) in his expoſition puts it in the firſt place, giving as a reaſon of impoſition of that name on the valley ſpoken of, כי שׁם יהיו הגוים חרוצים וחתוכים becauſe the nations ſhall be cut off, or cut in pieces. Abarb. puts as the meaning of the word in this place, and the reaſon of the name, לפי שׁכלה ונחרצה תהיה בהם שׁחה (Iſaiah x. 23.) becauſe there ſhall be to them (or on them) the conſumption, even that which is determined. The MS. Arabick renders it مرغ القطع مرج القطع, the meadow (or plain valley) of cutting, or cutting off, (although it may be underſtood alſo of determining or deciding.) R. Tanchum ſaith that the expoſition of it is خندق الهلاك the trench (or valley) of deſtruction, and that it is ſo called, لما يقع فيه من القتل والهلاك في ذلك الوقت, from that ſlaughter and deſtruction, that ſhall in it fall out at that time, which is the notion that Abu Walid alſo (before him) [l] prefers before any other that is given of the word in this place, it being, he ſaith, the ſame valley, which before is called the valley of Jehoſhaphat, of which he ſaith, [m] There will I ſit to judge all the heathen round about Theſe what they give for the meaning of the word, according to what they think the place to require, look as taken from or coming under the ſignification of cutting, of which R. Tanchum in his [n] Dictionary ſaith that whereſoever חרץ, charats (the verb) or תריץ charits, or חרוץ charuts, nouns (from that verb) do occur معناه قطع وفرض the meaning thereof includes the notion of cutting or ſundring. That notion Munſter here taking (but ſeeming to look on that which others take as a noun for a participle) renders it, in valle interciſa, in the cut, or cleft, valley: obſcurely enough, as I conceive; but ſo (as we ſaid) as to ſhew that he looked on the word as having the ſignification of cutting. The third rendring, which Ours give choice of, is threſhing, which is alſo by divers taken. So reads our Engliſh Tranſlation done at Geneva, In the valley of [o] threſhing; with which agrees that which Piſcator would have to be put as the moſt appoſite rendring of the words. In valle triturationis, the Hebrew ſounding as he ſaith, in valle tribulæ, of threſhing inſtrument, which Calvin alſo thinks moſt agreeable to this place, having in the words before had expreſſions in terms known to huſbandmen, and belonging to what they uſually are verſed about, with which this will well agree, as ſetting forth the greatneſs of the wickedneſs of thoſe ſpoken of, and their readineſs for judgment, by ſaying the harveſt is ripe, the preſs is full, and bidding the workmen to put in the ſickle, after which the threſhing of the corn being cut down will properly follow, and the place where that ſhall be done, viz. that judgment, for which they are ripe, executed on them, may well be called the valley of threſhing. But then it will be neceſſary for the having the right meaning to obſerve, what muſt be meant by threſhing in this place, that it may anſwer to the word חרוץ charuts in the Hebrew, and which is in Latin by thoſe that we have named rendred tribula, viz. that it is not ſuch threſhing as we ordinarily call that, which is done by ſtriking with a flail, to beat out the corn, but we muſt underſtand ſuch as is done by ſuch an inſtrument, as did break and cut the ſtraw and huſks, and ſo force out the corn, in which the notion of cutting will ſtill have place. Of ſuch inſtruments they have yet to this day two ſorts, one of heavy planks of wood with ſharp ſtones or flints driven into them, which being by beaſts drawn over the corn laid in order, do at once (as we ſaid) force out the grain, and beat off the huſks, and cut, or break the ſtraw into little pieces like chaff, which they keep for meat for their cattle. Thus doth Kimchi deſcribe well this known inſtrument in his Dictionary of Hebrew roots, telling us that from this uſe of it, it is called Charuts (from the root Charats) in the notion of cutting; and that the ſame inſtrument is called alſo [p] מורג Moreg; ſo ſaith alſo Abu Walid, but then in explaining Moreg ſaith, that it is the ſame as נורג, Naurage in Arabick, which ſignifies any inſtrument يداس به الطعام حديد كان او خشب with which corn is trodden out, whether it be of iron or wood, which is the very ſame explication that in the Arabick Dictionary is given of نورج naurage, by which he renders it. And by this explication of theirs it appears that they had another ſort of inſtrument beſides that of wood, conſiſting more of iron, (as to this day they have in thoſe parts) viz. of two iron wheels dented, as I remember, with ſharp teeth like a ſaw, and coupled with an axle-tree or beam of wood, which being drawn about on the corn in the floor, in the like manner as the former, hath the ſame effect as that for bruiſing out the grain, and breaking or cutting the huſks and ſtraw. To which manner of beating or breaking out corn with either of theſe inſtruments, alluſion ſeems to be had, Iſa. xxviii. 27. and 28. and for ſuch acts or dealing with corn, muſt threſhing, if we will here uſe that word, as that which is with us ordinarily uſed for the beating out of corn, corn, which is the end of the one word and the other, be in a larger manner than we imagine, who know perhaps no other inſtrument than the flail for ſuch purpoſe, be underſtood; and that being ſo underſtood, then will the words here, the valley of threſhing, give us to conceive that God will execute on the wicked there aſſembled ſuch judgments, which may be reſembled to the acts of the huſbandman towards the ripe corn gathered into his floor. That executing ſharp judgments or puniſhments may be ſo expreſſed, I ſuppoſe may appear by what is ſaid, Prov. xx. 26. That a wiſe king ſcattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them. Amos i. 3. Thoſe of Damaſcus are ſaid to have threſhed Gilead בחרצות הברזל bacharutſoth habarzel, with threſhing inſtruments of iron. But perhaps in thoſe places that is to be literally underſtood of execution done by thoſe inſtruments, as that by David done on the inhabitants of Rabbah, 2 Sam. xii. 31. which is here only alluded to.

[t] Kamus. Gol. [u] Calv. Lively.

[x] Buxt. Theſ. l. 2. ch. 2. p. 351. Glaſſ. Gram. l. 3. Tract. 1. [y] Aben Ezra. [z] See Druſ. [a] Jun. Trem. Piſc. [b] Pet. a Fig. [c] See Druſ. Mercer. [d] Grot. [e] Tig. and Vat. 4to and 8vo. [f] See Druſ. and Bib. Græc. of Franckfort Edition in variis Lect. [g] Kam. [h] See Cyril. Gualter. [i] And ſo Diodati.

[k] Lively. [l] هذا عندي اولي ما يعتقد فيه ſeems to agree the Tigurine verſion, Excuſſionis. [m] Verſ. 12. [n] Called Morſhed. [o] With which [p] Both theſe come together, Iſa. xli. 15.

There is yet another ſignification of the word חרוץ charuts, viz. of Gold. This notion of it Jerome mentions, as if the name of the place, according as he ſaith to the expoſition of ſome of the Jews, did import a place, viz. the valley of judgment (which they ſuppoſe to be Hell) in which excoctis ſordibus peccatorum, purum aurum remaneat, the droſs of ſins (or ſinners) being purged away by fire, the pure gold ſhall remain, viz. the elect alone ſhall be left (as Mercer explains his meaning.)

The meaning of this Expoſition in ſum will be much the ſame with what the former give, as if the place had its name for the execution of God's judgment on his enemies, although the word Charuts in the other hath reſpect, or refers to the wicked, that ſhall be puniſhed or deſtroyed, but in this to the godly, which ſhall be freed and ſaved, both in the ſame place, and at the ſame time of Judicature, being to receive their doom. Whatever conteſt be about the proper literal ſignification of the word, and which ſhould be moſt agreeable to this place, they ſeem all well enough to agree in the meaning, which ſeems not unfitly given by Caſtalio rendring it, in valle ſeveritatis, in the valley of ſeverity. They all point at a ſevere proceeding of God in deciding the matters betwixt his friends and his enemies, for the freeing of the one and puniſhing the other in the time and place by him appointed for it. Both being by him certainly determined, the Prophet here repreſents them all as already aſſembled, or ſummons them to aſſemble themſelves there, and gives us a reaſon of his ſo doing, for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of deciſion. The day of the Lord] the day, wherein he will certainly execute judgment or vengeance on his enemies is near. So certainly is the time appointed for it by him, with whom all things are as already preſent, and with whom [q] a thouſand years are as one day, that it well may and ought to be looked on as near at hand, though according to mens way of reckoning it may ſeem otherwiſe. In reſpect to thoſe different reckonings it is ſaid by St. Paul, Phil. iv. 5. The Lord is at hand. Yet again by him, that they ſhould not be ſhaken in mind or be troubled, as if the day of the Lord were at hand, 2 Theſ. ii. 2. So of thoſe things that were to be done, or in doing, to the laſt of time in this world, St. John, by reaſon of the certainty of their being fulfilled in due time, ſaith that they ſhould be fulfilled, ἐν τάχει, or ſhortly come to paſs, Rev. i. 1. So that we may apply to that day the words of Habakkuk concerning his viſion, Though it tarry, wait for it, it will ſurely come, it will not tarry, Hab. ii. 3. For yet a little while, and he that ſhall come will come, and will not tarry, Heb. x. 37. So that it will concern all without delay to prepare to meet the Lord at that day, as if they were ſummoned preſently to do it. And this is a certain truth, whether in reſpect to any more particular judgment by God determined againſt any nation, or applied to the day of the laſt general judgment, which Some (as we have [r] formerly ſeen) take to be meant by it the one, ſome the other. And according as they differ as to the time, ſo do they alſo as to the place here deſigned by the name of the valley of charuts. However the name be thought to ſignify, according to the different opinions which we have ſeen concerning it, yet is it by all agreed on, that the ſame is meant which is above, ver. 2. and 12. called the valley of Jehoſhaphat, and therefore it will not be neceſſary to add much concerning the fixing of it to any certain place, more than what hath already been ſaid concerning it. Grotius according to his opinion of things here ſpoken, and his application of them particularly to the deſtruction of the Perſians by the Grecians under Alexander the Great, underſtands it of the valley or plain by Gaugamela, [s] where was the laſt battle between him and Darius, but this may be looked on as his ſingle opinion. Mercer by giving theſe two different names, viz. the valley of Jehoſhaphat, and the valley of Charuts to the place here mentioned, thinks to be argued, non certo loco concluſam hanc vallem, that this valley is not [t] limited to any one particular place, ſed eſſe eam ubicunque Dominus de impiis Eccleſiæ perſecutoribus pœnas ſumit & eos concidit, vel in eos certam ac definitam ſententiam fert, but may be underſtood of any whereſoever God ſhall execute puniſhment on the wicked perſecutors of his Church, and cut them off or deſtroy them, or decide and pronounce poſitive ſentence of judgment againſt them. And ſurely if that name, or what is ſaid ſhall be done in it, may be applied to any ſuch place, ſignally then may it point to the great general judgment, and the place whither all nations ſhall be ſummoned together for receiving their doom in it, to which therefore it ſeems for good reaſon to be by many more particularly referred; the ſenſe of whom is in the forecited Biſhop Hall's Paraphraſtical Expoſition thus aptly given. For that [q] 2 Pet. iii. 8. [r] Chap. i. 15. Chap. ii. 11. and 31. and this Chap. ver. 9. [s] Arian de expeditione Alexand.

[t] See Dan. on the place.

that great day of the Lord is near at hand, the terror whereof ſhall be unſpeakable in that dreadful place of Judicature. The epithet of great is not here expreſſed in the text (as elſewhere it is, as chap. ii. ver. 11. and 31.) but it is neceſſarily underſtood by its being appropriated to the Lord; and that it ſhould be a day of terror is manifeſt by the name, from what ſhould in it be done, given to the place, viz. the valley of Charuts, in which ſoever of thoſe ſignifications above mentioned, as of deciſion, conciſion, or threſhing ſo expounded, as we have ſeen, it be taken. But withal both the greatneſs and terror of it are more largely ſet forth by thoſe extraordinary ſtrange and fearful alterations of the ordinary courſe of things, which ſhall accompany the manifeſtation and tranſactions of it, in the following words expreſſed.

Ver. 15. The ſun and the moon ſhall be darkened, and the ſtars ſhall withdraw their ſhining.

The verbs קדרו kadaru, which ours render as in the future tenſe, ſhall be darkened, and אספו Aſephu, ſhall withdraw, are in the Original in the preterperfect tenſe, and as ſo by the Chaldee, by the Syriack and MS. Arabick alſo rendred, as by the Vulgar Latin Sol & Luna obtenebrati ſunt, & ſtellæ retraxerunt ſplendorem ſuum, The Sun and the Moon are darkened, and the Stars have withdrawn their ſhining, as thoſe of the Doway render it, [u] and Others alſo. But [x] ſeveral Others, with whom Ours agree, choſe rather to render them as in the future, denoting what ſhould be after, not what was either paſt or preſent. In which that they do well appears, it being manifeſt, that the words, when ſpoken by the Prophet, did concern what ſhould be, not what had been or at preſent was, and it is a [y] known and uſual thing in the Prophets, when they foretel things by God determined, to ſpeak of them as already paſt, or preſent, to denote the certainty of them, as great as if they already actually had been or were, as we have already obſerved on chap. ii. verſe 10. where we have the ſame words and in the ſame way and conſtruction; where alſo hath been ſpoken of ſuch expoſitions as by Interpreters are given of them. They do at the firſt ſound, and according to their literal meaning, repreſent to us what is great and terrible, things proper to ſuch a day as may ſignally be called the day of the Lord, not any ordinary day. But whether they be ſo to be here underſtood, or otherwiſe, is among Expoſitors great difference, as in that place we ſaw to be. Grotius thinks by the darkening of thoſe celeſtial bodies, to be meant, the intercepting of their light from men by the darkneſs and thickneſs of the air, cauſed by the great ſmoke aſcending from Perſepolis being ſet on fire, ſtill referring, as we have ſeen, all here ſpoken to the deſtruction by Alexander brought on the Perſians and their country. According to his way the words are not literally but figuratively to be underſtood, and both the day ſpoken of, and the great accidents or ſigns appearing in it, have long ſince had their accompliſhment. Others alſo look on the words as figuratively to be underſtood; but in a way far different from him, and with no ſmall difference betwixt themſelves, both as to the fixing of the day, and to the nature of the ſigns by which it is made ſignal and diſtinguiſhed from other ordinary days. Some by the Sun and Moon and Stars underſtand ſuch as were of [z] greateſt eminency and power among men, and by the darkening of thoſe celeſtial bodies and withdrawing their ſhining, their being deprived of all their glory, and the great confuſion that they ſhall be brought into. So Dr. Stokes paraphraſeth the words, At the approach of this terrible day, the world will ſeem to be all in confuſion. They that were the light and glory of their times, and as eminent and conſpicuous in the ſphere of their government, as the Sun and the Moon and the Stars are in the firmament of Heaven, ſhall be ſuddenly obſcured, and loſe their light. By that terrible day, he ſeems to underſtand the day of judgment particularly; but Danæus, who takes the other words as he doth, thinks to be meant by the day of the Lord, any ſuch time as either hath been, or ſhall be, wherein God hath executed, or ſhall execute judgment, and ſhall execute it on nations and the great ones thereof, unto the end of the world; and that at ſuch times what is by theſe expreſſions of the darkening of theſe heavenly bodies meant, hath been, and ſhall be verified according to ſuch figurative meaning thereof. This expoſition is found alſo more anciently among the Jews. Abarbinel mentions it as agreeable to the opinion of Moſes Maimonides, and himſelf ſeems well to approve of it, viz. לפרש השמש והירח והכוכבים על מלכי האומות, that the Sun and the Moon and Stars ſhould be interpreted of the Kings of nations, of men of great dignity and power. He alſo gives another interpretation, viz. that by the Sun's and Moon's being darkened, and the Stars withdrawing their ſhining, ſhould be meant that thoſe heavenly bodies, which did portend good and proſperity to nations, ſhould reſtrain their happy influence from deſcending on them. This ſeems not ſo far different from another Expoſition both of ſeveral among both Jews and Chriſtians, viz. that the ſaying the Sun and Moon ſhall be darkened, ſhould be an expreſſion of great [a] calamities, and conſternation brought thereby on men through God's terrible judgments; to men in ſuch condition all things ſeeming mere darkneſs, the Sun it ſelf not to ſhine, nothing affording light or comfort. St. Jerome thinks the words ſo to ſound, as if thoſe heavenly bodies, not able to behold the ſorrow of that day of God's judgments ſpoken of, and the cruel torments inflicted on them that ſhall then periſh, ſhould even out of fear to themſelves withdraw their preſence. He ſeems to refer it to the dreadful day of the laſt judgment, and ſo do others alſo, yet giving another reaſon reaſon for what is ſaid of the obſcuration of thoſe heavenly luminaries, viz. [b] that they ſhall be outſhined by the moſt glorious bright luſtre of Chriſt, then appearing in the brightneſs of his glory, which ſhall even obſcure the ſun it ſelf, as the light of the ſun doth that of the moon and ſtars in ordinary days, not by depriving them of the light that is in them, but by outdoing and exceeding it. But there is yet another plain and more literal expoſition of the words, taking them to denote [c] ſuch prodigies as ſhall precede or attend that laſt dreadful day, and among them a real alteration in the ſhining of the ſun, moon, and ſtars, not here as elſewhere uſed as comparative expreſſions by way of ſuppoſition only, but ſuch as ſignify what ſhall then really and actually be. Theſe I ſuppoſe we may well follow, although in aſſigning how, and by what means thoſe alterations ſhall then be effected in thoſe days mentioned, men may only go by conjecture, and not by certain knowledge, till the day it ſelf appearing with its ſigns and wonders ſhall make manifeſt the certain truth. This mean while we are certain of, that what God hath ſaid ſhall be, ſhall in its due time, according to his will and by his power, and in ſuch manner, and by ſuch means as he hath determined, be certainly brought to paſs.

[u] Munſter. Interlin. [x] Tig. Pag. Jun. Trem. Caſtalio. [y] Ar. Mont. [z] Danæus, Stokes. [a] Kimch. on chap. ii. ver 10. and 31. Mercer. Sa. Menoch. Tirin. and to the ſame purpoſe Cyril.

16. The Lord alſo ſhall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jeruſalem, and the heavens and the earth ſhall ſhake; but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the ſtrength of the children of Iſrael.

Theſe words are by many taken for a farther deſcription of ſuch tranſactions as God will manifeſt himſelf by, at the day of judgment. The Lord, יהוה Jehovah. [d] Here ſome obſerve that Chriſt is called by the name Jehovah, which is proper to God alone, and by his being ſaid to roar and utter his voice, many underſtand that terrible voice, which all that are in the graves (as well as thoſe that are living) ſhall hear, and by it awakened, come forth to judgment (John v. 28, 29.) and that dreadful ſentence, whereby he ſhall doom his enemies to everlaſting fire, Mat. xxv. 41. By Sion and Jeruſalem, out of which it is ſaid he ſhall roar and utter his voice, according to this, will be well underſtood heaven; ſo Biſhop Hall in his paraphraſe, Chriſt the Lord ſhall paſs a moſt fearful ſentence of judgment from heaven upon the ungodly; and Diodati in his note on that place, namely out of the ſeat of his glory, the repreſentation whereof was formerly in the ſanctuary, Heb. xii. 22. and to the ſame purpoſe others, è medio ſanctorum & angelorum, out of the midſt of the ſaints and angels, the holy ſociety of which may be called Sion and Jeruſalem. This, I ſuppoſe, will be ſafer and plainer, ſo to underſtand thoſe names figuratively, than by taking them more properly to ſay that the throne of Chriſt ſitting in judgment and thence giving ſentence in terrible manner, ſhall be placed over Sion and Jeruſalem, or near them, as it is by [e] many underſtood. That theſe words are thus to be underſtood of the terrible ſentence of judgment, then and there to be by Chriſt pronounced, Criſtoph. a Caſtro owns all to agree in. He may ſay, I ſuppoſe, all that refer what is here ſpoken to the day of the laſt judgment; but there are who do not refer it to that, and ſo neither underſtand it of that place, nor of that ſentence. For there are who, by Sion and Jeruſalem, underſtand God's [f] church here on earth, of which thoſe places were of old the peculiar ſeat, wherein only he was truly worſhipped, but ſince the preaching of the goſpel to all nations, give their names to it wherever ſpread over the face of the whole earth; and ſo by his roaring out of Sion, and uttering his voice from Jeruſalem, will be underſtood thoſe terrible judgments and tokens of his indignation, which he will [g] in due time ſhew in any place againſt the enemies of his church and faithful people, however for a while he may ſuffer them to be perſecuted and oppreſſed by ſuch enemies, as if he had not taken care of them. Grotius reſtrains what is here ſaid to the victories of the Jews over the captains of Antiochus, on whoſe ſoldiers God is ſaid to have rained fire and brimſtone, as he applies what is ſaid, Ezek. xxxviii. 22. which I ſuppoſe is his ſingle opinion, and not neceſſary to be followed. All theſe follow the ſame conſtruction that Ours do, out of Sion, and from Jeruſalem, as מציון Mitzion, and מירושלם Miruſhalem may well be rendred. But there is yet another given by Others, viz. for Sion, and for Jeruſalem, ſo R. Salomon Jarchi, ממה שעשו לציון, by reaſon of what they have done to Zion. So Abarbinel alſo ſaith the prefixed prepoſition מי, mi, is מם הסבה mem haſabbah, the letter mem denoting the cauſe; as if he ſaid, מסבת מה שעשו לציון, By reaſon of what they have done to Sion, and to Jeruſalem, God ſhall roar as a lion and utter his voice, which is alſo by ſome [h] Latin Expoſitors followed; but the former rendring ſeems the plainer. There are by Others, who differ not from the firſt in the conſtruction or literal ſignification of the words, yet other meanings of ſome of them given, viz. as that by God's voice, which he ſhall utter from Jeruſalem [i], are underſtood thoſe comfortable words of his to his children at the day of Judgment, Come ye bleſſed of my Father, &c. or elſe, as [k] Others will, miniſterium Evangelii, the miniſtry of preaching the goſpel. Againſt theſe are exceptions made, becauſe here it ſeems ſpoken [l] of only ſuch things which belong to or denote terror. Such certainly is the import of the word ישאג Yiſhag, ſhall roar, which properly belongs to the voice of a lion, which among creatures is looked on as moſt terrible. The [b] Lyra. and ſee Cr. à Caſtro. [c] Pet. à Fig. Ribera. Diodati. [d] Vat. 4°. 8°. [e] Vatab. in 4°. and 8°. Chriſtoph. à Caſtro. Menoch. Tirin. ſee above of that opinion on ver. 2. and ver. 12. [f] Mercer. Tarnov. D. Stokes. [g] Calv. [h] Ar. Mont. [i] Lyra. [k] See Mercer. and Bochart. de Animal. [l] Pet. à Fig.

lion hath roared, who will not hear? Amos iii. 8. and [m] the joining the other, ſhall utter his voice, as a repetition of it, or addition to it, though in a word of a more large, and not neceſſarily ſo harſh a ſignification, ſeems here to require ſomething of as great terror as the former doth, and that is by [n] Some thought to be terrible thunder, by which the voice of the Lord is elſewhere expreſſed, as well as by the former, as if the ſame thing were by both ſignified, it being called, the noiſe of his voice, and the ſound that goeth out of his mouth, Job xxxvii. 2. and ver. 4. it is ſaid, expreſſing the ſame thing, A voice roareth, he thundreth with the voice of his excellency, and ver. 5. God thundreth marvellouſly with his voice. Bochartus, who thinks theſe words appliable to the preaching of the goſpel (as we have ſaid others apply them) thinks theſe expreſſions of God's being ſaid to roar and utter his voice, well to agree to it, in as much as it is, tam clara & ſonora, ut per totum orbem audita fuerit, nec ſolum aures, ſed etiam auditorum animos vi ſua perculerit, & ſollicitos reddiderit de ſalute ſua cum metu & tremore procuranda, a voice ſo clear and ſhrill, that it hath been heard throughout the whole earth, and pierced not only the ears, but the hearts of the hearers by its force, and made them careful of procuring their ſalvation with fear and trembling. But the deſcription of the voice here ſeems not ſo much to ſet forth the ſhrilneſs or loudneſs and efficacy of it, which may well be applied to the goſpel, [o] the ſound whereof hath gone into all the earth, and its words unto the ends of the world, as the horror and terribleneſs of it, which ſeems more to agree to the denouncing of dreadful judgments; and with what terrors this ſhall be, appears not only by what hath been already ſpoken of the deſcription of it, but farther by the effects of it in the next words, And the heavens and the earth ſhall ſhake, which, however underſtood, whether literally or figuratively, argues certainly much terribleneſs in that, by which ſuch extraordinary effects, as thoſe expreſſions neceſſarily import, ſhall be produced. The heavens and the earth ſhall ſhake. A ſtrange alteration in the ordinary courſe of nature do theſe words denote, if they be literally underſtood, yet ſuch as by the power of the voice of God, to whom nothing is impoſſible, may be eaſily effected, whenſoever or on what occaſion ſoever he ſhall pleaſe; ſo that if we ſhould underſtand them literally, (as Some do) I know not what exception may be made, yet are they by Expoſitors differently underſtood; by ſome, of ſuch extraordinary commotions and tremblings, which are cauſed in the earth by earthquakes, and (as at leaſt [p] it may ſeem to men) in the heavens by thunder, Ut terra terræ motu, ita cælum tonitru concuti & tremere dicitur, ſaith Mr. Lively. As the earth by an earthquake, ſo the heaven by thunder is ſaid to be ſhaken: and this is language, in ſpeaking of ſuch thunder and earthquakes as are according to the ordinary courſe of nature, allowed of, but much more agreeable if it be underſtood of ſuch ſupernatural effects, as ſhall be by the terror of God's roaring voice at the day of Judgment, attended with ſo many wonderful ſigns [q] as are ſpoken of it, by which the powers of heaven, and the whole frame of nature ſhall be ſhaken. By it ſo applied we may well underſtand as literally meant, that, as Jerome ſpeaks, cælorum cardines & terrarum fundamenta quatientur, the poles of heaven and the foundations of the earth ſhall be really ſhaken. How ſhall this be thought ſtrange, when, as St. Peter [r] ſpeaks of the terror of that day, The heavens therein ſhall paſs away with a great noiſe, and the elements ſhall melt with fervent heat, the earth alſo and the works that are therein ſhall be burnt up. Others do not ſo literally and ſtrictly underſtand them of the frame of thoſe bodies the heaven and the earth themſelves, but of the inhabitants of both, angels and men ([s] as Some ſpeak) both moved by the great terror in which the Lord ſhall appear: or (as Others) tam [t] cæleſtes quam terreni cives, both the heavenly and earthly citizens, meaning the ſaints and the wicked; and Lyra interprets that, for the receiving of the one heaven ſhall be moved, and the earth for receiving the other, hell being ſaid to be under the earth. R. Salomon Jarchi expounds the meaning of, the heavens and earth ſhall ſhake and tremble, יפרע משרים של מעלה שרי האומות, he ſhall take [u] vengeance on the princes that are above, the princes of the nations, ואחר כך מן האומות, and after that on the nations. Abarbinel ſeems to like of this opinion, as agreeing with one of his own (for he ſaith it may be otherwiſe all interpreted literally) which is, that by the heavens and the earth are meant, המשפיעים העליונים והתחתונים המושפעים, The ſuperior bodies which do influence, and the inferior which are influenced, which then ſhall be made ineffectual, the one from giving, the other from receiving influence. Theſe expoſitions I find not in any Chriſtian Interpreters, except we comprehend them under the general notion of inhabitants, or [x] citizens of heaven and earth, which we have above had. Others look on the words as [y] by way of hyperbole ſpoken to denote ſo great a terror in the voice of God uttered againſt the wicked, as were enough to cauſe the whole frame of the world to ſhake, much more frail weak men. [z] Others to this ſenſe, that though all things in the world, heaven and earth itſelf, ſhould oppoſe God in his proceeding againſt the enemies of his church, they ſhould not be able to withſtand him, at the terror of his voice they ſhould all quake and tremble, and he prevail over them. In all theſe ways, to what time ſoever they refer the words, whether to the day of the laſt judgment, or to any other time wherein God hath hath brought, or ſhall bring, any ſignal deſtruction on the enemies of him and his church, it appears that though he do ſuffer thoſe his enemies for a while to proſper and prevail, yet he will in due time take vengeance on them, and appear with ſuch irreſiſtible power and terror, that they, though they had the whole world on their ſide, ſhall not be able to ſtand againſt, but fail and tremble under it, without knowing where to ſeek, or whither to fly for ſuccour from it: mean while, though ſo great be the terror with which he ſhall at any time appear, yet the effects thereof to thoſe to whom he ſo appears ſhall be much different, other to his enemies, other to his friends. All cannot but fear, but that fear, while it ſhall cauſe in his enemies deſpair, and end in their utter deſtruction, ſhall but awaken his children, and cauſe them to draw nearer, and fly to him for refuge, and adhere more cloſely to him. So the next words ſhew how it ſhall be with them in that great day of terror and confuſion to his enemies. But the Lord will be the hope of his people, &c. [a] But, for and, or, for the Lord will be, or ſhall be, erit, or as [b] Others, eſt is; for the verb being not expreſſed in the Hebrew is diverſly underſtood, by Some as in the future, by Others in the preſent tenſe; that in this place makes no great difference, being ſpoken of the Lord, who was, is, and will or ſhall be always the ſame, as in other caſes, ſo in what he is here ſaid to be, or that he will, or ſhall be, even in the time of the greateſt fear and terror to others, the hope of his people, &c. ſo that when others droop in deſpair, they may, as our Saviour bids them, look up, and lift up their head, as aſſured that their redemption draweth near, or is now come, Luke xxi. 28. For what is in the Text put, the hope, is in our Bibles of the laſt Tranſlation, put in the Margin, Heb. (i.e. in the Hebrew it is) place of repair, or harbour. Theſe make but the ſame ſenſe, which either of them be taken, and the Hebrew indifferently ſignifies either, being the word מחסה Machaſeh, which coming from the word חסה chaſah, which ſignifies both to repair, or betake one ſelf to, and alſo to hope, or truſt in, may be rendred by either of them, or other of like nature, and is to ſuch purpoſe by moſt rendred, as either, [c] ſpes, [d] receptus, [e] refugium; yet have we in ſome ancient tranſlations a more different ſignification: as namely in the LXX. who read the words, καὶ ὁ κύριος φείσεται τοῦ λαοῦ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐνισχύσει τοὺς υἱοὺς Ισραήλ, and the Lord ſhall ſpare his people, and ſhall ſtrengthen the ſons of Iſrael. So likewiſe in the printed Arabick which follows the Greek. So alſo in the Syriack ܘܢܬܪܚܡ ܠܥܡܗ ܘܢܬܬܩܦ ܠܒܢܝ ܐܝܣܪܝܠ, which gives to conjecture, that the word חסה chaſah was anciently uſed in the Hebrew, not only in that forementioned ſignification of repairing to, or hoping in, but alſo in the ſame that חום chus is, viz. to ſpare, or be propitious to, for which we have a probable argument, for as much as in the Syriack of nigh affinity with it, both thoſe roots, as well חשׂ or חשׂה Chaſo, or Chaſi, which anſwer to חסה chaſah in Hebrew, as חס chas, which anſwers to חום chus, ſignify to ſpare, to be merciful or propitious.

[m] Mercer. [n] Druſ. [o] Rom. x. 18. [p] Tirin. [q] 1 Theſ. iv. 16. Mat. xxiv. 29. Luc. 21. 25. [r] 2 Pet. iii. 10. [s] Pet. à Fig. Sa. Menoch. Ribera. [t] Chr. à Caſtro. [u] Shall make ineffectual. [x] Grotius by the Heavens underſtands the Angels. [y] Mercer, Menoch. [z] Calv.

Theſe whoſe hope God will be, are his people, thoſe whoſe ſtrength he will be, the children of Iſrael, both appellations denote the ſame perſons, viz. ſuch as rightly believe in him, and faithfully ſerve and obey him, they are his people, they only, his Iſrael, not they who are deſcended from Iſrael only according to the fleſh; thus we are taught to underſtand that title, where given to God's people; ſo by the Apoſtle telling us, Rom. ix. 7. That they are not all Iſrael, which are of Iſrael, neither all children, becauſe they are the ſeed of Abraham, but as many as walk according to the rule which Iſrael did, in true belief and ſincere obedience, and conſtant adherence to God, though they be not according to the fleſh of Iſrael's ſeed, they are the Iſrael of God, (Gal. vi. 16.) To ſuch only doth the promiſe here, and the like elſewhere made to the people of God under the name of Iſrael, or, of the children of Iſrael, properly belong; [f] it is their peculiar privilege to find God their hope and ſtrength, or a ſure refuge, when he proceedeth with the greateſt terror againſt his and their enemies, though they have perhaps ſeemed before moſt hopeleſs and helpleſs of any: what effect this dealing of God ſhall have with them, the words in the following verſe declare.

17. So ſhall ye know that I am the Lord your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then ſhall Jeruſalem be holy, and there ſhall no ſtrangers paſs through her any more.

By ſeeing what they now ſee effectually brought to paſs, they ſhall now indeed, and by certain experimental proofs aſſuredly know, what they did before only by faith and hope rely on, viz. that however hitherto things went with them, ſo as might tempt them to think that God had no regard of them, yet that he in truth was the Lord their God, who ſtill had an eye on them, and took eſpecial care of them, and ſo ordered things as that they ſhould prove in the iſſue for good to them. This ſeems the import of the words, by which God expreſſeth that relation, which he hitherto owneth them in, to himſelf, viz. that he is the Lord their God dwelling in Zion his holy mountain. They ſhall know that he the Lord, the God of the whole earth, of all fleſh, is ſo to them, not only as he is to all the reſt of the world, but by a peculiar right and relation their God, dwelling and reſiding in a more particular manner among them in Sion, as in his proper habitation and place of reſidence, conſecrated and made holy to himſelf above all other places, and ſo neceſſarily having greater privileges and tokens of his preſence and favour than any others. Of that expreſſion whereby he calleth himſelf their God, ſee above, chap. 2. ver. 27. of what may be meant by Zion there alſo, ver. 32. What peculiar ſigns of his preſence he did of old, till Chriſt's coming, ſhew in that place ſo properly called, and is therefore ſaid to dwell in his Temple there built, is well known; but it is ſince, beſides that, in a larger ſenſe uſed to denote the church, and that whether militant here on earth, and in any place thereof, or triumphant in heaven, and is here by Expoſitors of it underſtood, and by [g] Some in the one reſpect, by [h] Others in the other. God certainly dwelleth or ſheweth ſignal tokens of his care of it and preſence with it in both. The meaning of what God here ſays they ſhall know, by ſeeing what he hath done, Abarbinel thus gives. That when the children of Iſrael ſhall ſee that great vengeance (of God) on their enemies, and eſpecially when they ſhall ſee the dead raiſed up again on the earth, they ſhall know and believe in truth that the Lord he is their God, that continually looks after them (or hath care of them) and that the world is not guided in its courſe (as to them) by way of nature or by way of accident, but that the affairs אומתנו, of our nation (ſaith he) are all of them ordered by way of providence, which is that which he ſaith, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord your God; and alſo that they ſhall know that the Bleſſed one dwelleth in Zion, his holy mountain: as much as to ſay, that his glorious preſence and holineſs ſhould reſide there in greater meaſure than in former time, &c. His meaning expreſſed in terms agreeable to the opinion of the Jews, who challenge God and his eſpecial care and providence as their own peculiar, and reſtrain his church, the ſeat of which was anciently their Zion, to their nation alone, would, if put into ſuch as Chriſtians informed by the goſpel do underſtand and uſe, agree with that of thoſe ancient Expoſitors, who underſtand what is here ſpoken, of God's great goodneſs, and ſignal tokens of his favour, which he ſhall manifeſt in and to his church, eſpecially when he ſhall, after the reſurrection, make it triumphant in heaven, when all his ſaints, the members thereof, ſhall without any intermiſſion enjoy perpetually his glorious and gracious preſence, and be freed from all fear of enemies. Surely the great benefits and tokens of God's favour to his church will not till then have their full completion, and in their perfection be made good to it; yet hath it then always Chriſt in ſo good meaſure communicated to it, even while militant in this world, as to juſtify the applying the words (as by Others is done) even to that, as enjoying God's preſence and ſigns of his providence and protection, ſo as no other ſort or ſect of men, do or ever did; and [i] what they want of full enjoyment of them in act and preſent ſenſe of ſight, is ſupplied to them by the ſight of faith and certain hope. Which alſo will be to be underſtood in interpreting the next words. Then ſhall Jeruſalem be holy, &c. In which, Jeruſalem may be taken, and by many, yea by moſt is, and I ſuppoſe rightly, as Sion which was in it, not for the city properly ſo called, but for that of which it was a type, viz. the church of God, and that whether militant or triumphant, and by [k] Some it is here underſtood of that militant here on earth, by Others very many, of that triumphant in heaven, which is called the holy Jeruſalem deſcending out of heaven from God, Rev. xxi. 10. which of thoſe we ſhould rather join with, will be beſt judged by conſidering what is ſaid of it, that then it ſhall be holy, &c. Then, (or And) Jeruſalem, that place by that name meant, ſhall be holy, קדש Kodeſh, holineſs, as Ours in the margin note the Hebrew literally to ſound, the word being a ſubſtantive, and in the abſtract, not in the concrete or an adjective, which may well be looked on to denote a ſuperlative degree of holineſs more than what is given to underſtand, when a thing is called ſimply in the concrete holy, that it is all holy as holineſs itſelf, and ſo the place of which it is ſaid that it ſhould ſo be holy in a ſuperlative degree above what that of that name at that preſent was. Jeruſalem as then it was, was called the holy city, as Nehemiah xi. 1. and 18. Iſa. lii. 1. Mat. iv. 5, and xxvii. 53. and elſewhere. The ſaying here it ſhould be holineſs, ſeems to argue, that it ſhould now either obtain a greater perfection of holineſs, or that another Jeruſalem, than that which was then, is meant. Abarbinel thinks an alluſion to be here made to the ſeveral degrees of holineſs, which belonged to ſeveral places in Jeruſalem, when it was in its beauty. His words in his Commentary on this place, following thoſe already cited from him, thus ſound, "That whereas in the times of the "firſt Temple, the houſe of God was holy, "and no man might enter into the היכל he-"cal, the body of the Temple, except the "prieſts of the Lord, much leſs into the Ho-"ly of Holies, into which none entered but "only the High Prieſt once in the year, then "לעתיד לבוא in the time to come, the whole "city of Jeruſalem ſhall be in degree like to "the holy houſe, and the Temple of God, "ſo that no uncircumciſed or profane perſon "ſhall enter thereinto, by reaſon of the ma-"nifeſtation of the acts of the majeſtatick pre-"ſence in the midſt of it." And therefore he ſaith, Jeruſalem ſhall be holy (or holineſs,) and ſtrangers ſhall not paſs through there any more לקדשתה, by reaſon of her holineſs. Others, he ſaith, do otherwiſe interpret it, viz. that by ſaying, ſtrangers ſhall not paſs through it any more, is meant that they ſhall not paſs through Jeruſalem any more to war againſt it, when they ſee that great ruin, which ſhall be on thoſe nations, which went up againſt it to take it; which he ſaith is alſo a convenient expoſition. Much the like to both theſe expoſitions have we before him from Kimchi, whoſe words ſound. "And Jeruſalem ſhall be holineſs, i. "e. as an holy thing prohibited to ſtrangers, "(or unlawful for ſtrangers to meddle with) "and ſtrangers ſhall not paſs through it any "more,

[a] The copulative ו, v, is in any of theſe ſignifications, as the ſenſe requires. [b] Jun. Trem. [c] Vulg. [d] Jun. [e] Tig. Chald. סמך a prop. [f] Pet. à Fig.

[g] Mercer. [h] Pet. a Fig. [i] Quæ enim iſta habet in re, hæc latet in ſpe. Pet. a Fig. [k] Mercer. Hoc de eccleſia in terris intelligo.

" more, viz. to hurt it, as hitherto they have " done. It may, ſaith he, be alſo underſtood, " that ſtrangers ſhould not enter into Jeruſa- " lem, becauſe great ſhall be the holineſs there- " of לעתיד leatid, in the time to come: ſo " that as it was unlawful (formerly) for any, " even an Iſraelite, to enter into the Temple, " ſo then ſhould the whole city be holy, ſo " that no ſtrangers of the nations of the world " ſhould enter into it." In theſe expoſitions are obſervable two things, firſt, that by Jeruſalem they underſtand the city properly and literally ſo called. Secondly, that the great privileges of extraordinary holineſs and ſecurity promiſed here to it, belong לעתיד לבוא, to the time hereafter to come, by which Abarbinel expreſſeth himſelf to mean after [k] a reſurrection of the dead. Kimchi doth not name the time, but we may well think he means, [l] Somniant illam terrenam Jeruſalem, quam expectant per Meſſiam ædificandam, (as one expreſſeth,) in that earthly Jeruſalem which they dream of, which they expect ſhall be new built by the Meſſias. But this conceit of theirs, viz. that there ſhall hereafter be ſuch a glorious Jeruſalem on earth, to which ſhall be made good ſuch great privileges as are here mentioned, we look on as among thoſe things, which the Jews vainly and groundleſly expect to be done in and for their nation in time to come, conſequent on their opinion that Chriſt is not at all yet come. Among Chriſtian Expoſitors, who know and acknowledge him to be come, ſuch as will here by Jeruſalem underſtand that city properly ſo called, muſt neceſſarily look on theſe things as ſuch as referring to it have already had their completion, while that ſtood in its glory, but the aſſigning when they were made good is, I ſuppoſe, that which we ſhall not find any of them to ſatisfy us in; which is the cauſe, we may ſuppoſe, that Cyril and Theodoret look on the good things here promiſed, if referred to it, to be not an abſolute, but a conditional promiſe, that if, or when the inhabitants of that city ſhould purge themſelves from all iniquity and falſe worſhip, and ſerve God in purity and ſincerity, as they ought to do, then ſhould they be in ſuch an happy condition as is here deſcribed. If things were not ſo with them, it was, ſaith Theodoret, becauſe their evil doings hindred them from ſo being, God's promiſes to them requiring, that the conditions on their part required ſhould by them be made good and obſerved. The ſame ſaith Aben Ezra among the Jews, ſuppoſing to be underſtood אם ישמרו, &c. If they ſhall obſerve the law of the Lord, as it is expreſſed in Zech. By whom having promiſed many good things, as that he would dwell in the midſt of them, Chap. ii. 10. he after adds, Chap. vi. 15. And this ſhall come to paſs, if ye diligently obſerve the voice of the Lord your God.

Grotius hath no more on this verſe than to explain that which is ſaid, There ſhall no ſtranger paſs through her, by ſaying hereby to be meant hoſtili exercitu, with an enemy Army, not mentioning of what time it is meant; but by what he ſaith on the foregoing verſe it is manifeſt, that he underſtands it of ſuch time as was after the defeat of Antiochus. But as to the moſt part of Chriſtian Expoſitors, whom I have ſeen, I find them not to receive ſatisfaction from ſuch a ſecure condition as can be aſſigned to the earthly Sion or Jeruſalem, after the uttering of theſe words by the Prophet, and that therefore they look on thoſe names as here figuratively taken (as elſewhere oft they are) to ſignify the Church of God, and that either as militant here on earth, or triumphant in heaven, in both which reſpects that name agreeing, and being applied to it, by Some it is here looked on a denoting it in the one, by Others in the other. In both, the things here ſaid will well agree and be applied to it, though in the one, viz. of the Church militant, having a more evident completion, according to the utmoſt that the words can import, than in the other. Whereas if they be applied to the Church militant, though that may be ſaid to be holy, or holineſs, [m] being clad with the righteouſneſs of its Spouſe Chriſt imputed to it, [n] ſanctified by faith in him, [o] who gave himſelf for it, that he might ſanctify it, and cleanſe it by waſhing of water by the word, that he might preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinkle, &c. and, that there ſhall no ſtranger paſs through it, he having ſaid that the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it, Mat. xvi. 18. Yet there ſeems place for exceptions againſt this expoſition, as that the viſible Church hath never been ſo pure and holy, but that there have been many of impure and unholy converſation in it, who have yet profeſſed and pretended themſelves to be true members of it: again, that the pureſt and holieſt parts of the Church have been oppreſſed and even trampled upon and profaned by ſtrangers and enemies to it. According to Some, theſe objections are ſolved, firſt; by ſaying, that the profane hypocrites, though mingled with the true profeſſors in the pale of the Church, as tares growing in the ſame field with the wheat, yet are not members of the Church, and therefore do not make it unholy. Though to men, who are not able ſo well to diſtinguiſh one from the other, they may bring a ſcandal on it, yet in God's ſight they do not, who looks on as, and acknowledgeth for, his Church and members thereof, only ſuch as are pure and ſtill ſincere in heart, and labouring after holineſs, however liable to failings. [p] In vera enim Eccleſia, quæ Dei ſponſa eſt ſine ruga & macula, impiis etiam in hoc ſæculo locus non eſt, &c. For in the true Church, which is the ſpouſe of God without wrinkle or ſpot, profane and unholy perſons have not, even in this world, any place. However they may pretend to be part thereof, and deceive men, they cannot deceive God, qui illos ex Eccleſiæ ſuæ numero non habet, who reckons them not in the number of his Church, or citizens of the holy Jeruſalem, which in reſpect of the ſincere part thereof, is by God ſanctified, purged, and made, and called holineſs, and his promiſe to them ſhall not be void. Then, as for what may be ſaid, that even theſe are often overcome and oppreſſed by their enemies, is by [q] Some anſwered, that the reaſon of this is not from God's failing in his promiſe, and faithfulneſs to them, but from their own default in not making good in themſelves what is as a condition expected on their parts, viz. that they keep themſelves holy, as he hath afforded them means to do, and expects they ſhould do. Hoc debet imputari peccatis noſtris, nos enim facimus rupturas (ſaith Calvin), This is to be imputed to our ſins, for we are thoſe that make thoſe breaches, by which thoſe enemies of the Church enter in and trample on it. [r] Quoties illud fit, hoc noſtro vitio fieri certum eſt, ſaith Another, As oft as it is ſo with the Church, it is certain that it is by their own fault; ſo looking on the words including as well a condition in them required, that they ſhould keep themſelves ſuch, as God promiſeth he will make them, if they will have the other promiſe of his defence of them from their enemies breaking in on them, made good to them. This anſwer is agreeable to what we before ſaw to be the opinion of Theodoret, though taking perhaps Jeruſalem in another meaning than theſe do. [s] Another anſwer alſo we find given, viz. that ſuch afflictions and perſecutions which befal the Church, or the ſeeming of ſtrangers or profane enemies to prevail over it, do not contradict or make void this good promiſe here made to it. That no ſuch ſhall paſs through her, nocendi ſcilicet cauſa, ſo as to do her hurt. For though ſhe may be aſſaulted, yet God will never ſuffer her to be quite overcome or deſtroyed; ſo that ſhe hath ſtill wherewith to comfort and ſuſtain her in her afflictions, ſo that they ſhall not do her harm, but more ſtir her up in the ſtudy and ways of holineſs, and confirm her. Theſe conſiderations will be ſufficient to ſhew, that if by Jeruſalem here be underſtood the Church militant here on earth, theſe good promiſes do belong even ſo, and are ſo made always good to her. Yet do Others think it more ſafe and plain to refer it to that triumphant in heaven, to which the words will in their moſt comprehenſive ſignification agree. That ſhall be holy (holineſs to the Lord) in all reſpects that that Epithet may be thought to import it, 1. Holy, [t] as pura ab omni labe culpæ, the members thereof being pure and cleanſed from all ſpot and defilement of ſin. 2. Holy, [u] as a ſacred thing wholly conſecrated unto God, his peculiarly, and ſo [x] chara Deo, & ſub ejus cura, favore ac tutela, &c. dear unto him, and under his care, favour, and protection, ſafe and free from the dominion, ſpoil, and poſſeſſion of profane people, by which it might be profaned and polluted. 3. Holy, as not admitting or acknowledging for members of it any unholy or profane perſons. For there ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie, Rev. xxi. 27. which is plainly expreſſed here in the following words, and there ſhall no ſtranger paſs through her any more. No ſtranger] None that are without Chriſt [y] aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe; the word not being taken here as importing diſtinction of nations, ſo as to account them ſtrangers one to another in that regard. For in Chriſt and his Church is no ſuch diſtinction or difference betwixt [z] Greek and Jew, circumciſion or uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free, that becauſe of any ſuch carnal reſpect any ſhould be accounted ſtrangers to his Church, they being [a] all one in him, all the [b] Iſrael of God, [c] fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God. But the ſtrangers to his Church here are ſuch as are ſo in reſpect of their relation to God and his truth, ſtrangers [d] à fide, from the true faith in him, unbelievers, profane and wicked perſons, and enemies to his Church. Of ſuch it is ſaid they ſhall not paſs through his holy Jeruſalem, his Church, either to do violence to it, or to profane it, or we may ſay they ſhall have no intercourſe at all with it. The Syriack here (as it is in the copies that we have) renders it לא נדעבון lo neemerun, non inhabitabunt, ſhall not dwell in it. Which though the meaning be good, and may be comprehended under the other which the Hebrew literally ſignifies, and all other Interpreters generally take, viz. that of paſſing through, yet I cannot but doubt whether the Author of that Verſion did at firſt ſo render it, and not rather, לא נדעבון lo neeberun, which agrees as in the radical letters with the Hebrew, ſo in that ſignification which Others take it in, of larger extent than dwelling in, which ſeems to import a fixed reſting in a place, whereas the other notes any coming at all or having to do in it; which to be the condition of ſtrangers or profane perſons in reſpect of the heavenly Jeruſalem the Church triumphant, to which this laſt opinion mentioned reſtrains this promiſe or privilege, is given us to underſtand by what Abraham in the parable, Luke xvi. 26. ſaith as from heaven to the rich man in hell, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, ſo that there is no paſſing of the inhabitants of the one into the other. Such alteration that we conjecture to be in the Syriack copies that we have, both written and printed, from what the Author of that Tranſlation firſt gave, is but by an eaſy miſtake in ſome ancient Tranſcriber of the letter ב b for ם m, and ſo for Neebarun, ſhall paſs, writing Neemarun, ſhall dwell, which giving a good ſenſe might make neither him, nor any that wrote after him, to ſuſpect any error in the reading. But 'tis not impoſſible that the Author himſelf might ſo at firſt render it, and think by not paſſing through the place to be meant not dwelling or having having liberty of reſiding in it, as certainly no profane perſon or ſtrangers to the true faith ſhall have in the Church triumphant, to which that the words here chiefly refer, may ſeem alſo ſhewed by the adding the particle עוד od, any more, or at all, which takes away that exception, to which the other opinion of thoſe who refer them to the true Church even here on earth, and yet militant, ſeems liable, becauſe therein the wicked and profane mingle themſelves among the true members of it, though not being members of it, but meer ſtrangers to it. Yet ſeeing it cannot be doubted but to that, even on earth, the great and good promiſes of God do belong, it ſeems not amiſs with Others to join both theſe together, as both had reſpect to, as ſharers of theſe great privileges here mentioned, viz. that they ſhall be made good [e] in Eccleſia militante, quæ poſtea fiet triumphans, in the Church militant, which ſhall after become triumphant. Here on below, no ſtrangers ſhall prevail over it, there, above, none at all aſſault it or approach to it.

[k] For a double reſurrection he thinks ſhall be. v. 25, 26, 27. Tit. ii. 14. [l] Pet. a Fig. [m] Tarnov. [n] Acts xxvi. 18. [o] Eph. [p] See Mercer.

[q] Calv. Gualt. [r] Gualter. [s] Mercer. [t] Ribera. [u] Pet. a Fig. [x] Lively. [y] Eph. ii. 12. [z] Coloſ. iii. 11. [a] Gal. iii. 28. [b] Gal. vi. 16. [c] Eph. ii. 19. [d] Vat. in 8vo.

18. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that the mountains ſhall drop down new wine, and the hills ſhall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah ſhall flow with waters, and a fountain ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, and ſhall water the valley of Shittim.

Having in the foregoing verſe ſhewed what ſecurity the holy Jeruſalem ſhall be in from all profanation and violence by any enemies, he here farther proceeds to ſhew the great happineſs of the inhabitants thereof, by deſcribing the plentiful enjoyment that they then ſhall have of all ſuch good things as may conduce thereto. The words in which he expreſſeth himſelf, ſaying, the mountains ſhall drop down with wine, and the hills ſhall flow with milk, &c. appear at firſt reading to be, as R. Tanchum ſaith, استعارة للكثرة الخصب والبركات a metaphorical figurative ſpeech, denoting abundance of plenty and bleſſings. The mountains, ſaith he, ſhall drop down עסים aſis, new wine, as Ours with ſeveral Others render the word by muſtum, new wine. For there is difference betwixt Interpreters in rendring it both here and elſewhere, where it occurs, as [f] beſides others, it doth above chap. i. 5. and likewiſe Amos ix. 13. where much the ſame words that here occur, and Ours render the word עסים aſis, ſweet wine, though putting [g] in the Margin, new wine, as here in the text they put it. The Chaldee in all theſe places put חמר מרת Chamar merat, vinum merum, mere, pure wine, which Some render here [h] vinum inebrians, wine that maketh drunk (ſtrong heady wine) The LXX here, and Amos ix. 13. render it γλυκασμὸν; the Vulgar Latin, dulcedinem, ſweetneſs, the Tigurin Verſion here and above, chap. 1. ſuccum expreſſum, juice ſqueezed out, and in Amos, ſuccum dulcem, ſweet juice. Caſtalio here, as in the other two places, laticem, juice, without any epithet added to it. On theſe little differences we need not much to ſtand, in as much as (as hath been on chap. i. 5. noted) the word being from the root עסס aſas, which ſignifies to preſs or tread on, (as Mal. iv. 3.) will properly ſignify in general any juice or liquor that is by preſſing or treading ſqueezed out of any fruit or other things, without limiting it by any quality of ſweet, or ſower, or the like; and becauſe wine is ſo made, and was the moſt in uſe among other liquors ſo made, may it well, as the place where it occurs will require, be underſtood more peculiarly of that; as it is therefore here by ſo many done, and becauſe that, eſpecially when new, is uſually ſweet, therefore not unfitly with that epithet of new or ſweet, which the LXX and Vulgar Latin, putting ſweetneſs in the abſtract, do, yet we muſt ſuppoſe given to be underſtood wine, that abounds in ſweetneſs, the word properly ſignifying the ſubſtance rather than the quality. And ſo are the different Tranſlations eaſily reconcilable, as all meaning the ſame thing, viz. ſome ſuch ſweet and pleaſant liquor as was in eſteem, and of ordinary and eſpecial uſe, and that probably wine of grapes, though R. Tanchum, in his note on this place, ſay that it is by Some ſaid more peculiarly to ſignify شراب الرمان wine of pomegranates (becauſe I ſuppoſe that it ſeems Cant. viii. 2. ſo applied) although in his Rabbinical Dictionary called Morſhed, he ſaith that it may there be underſtood not of the juice of pomegranates, but of red wine in colour like the pomegranate (or grains of pomegranates). This word being ſo underſtood of ſome ſuch precious liquor, it is manifeſt that the other words, the mountains ſhall drop down, are not literally, but figuratively (as we ſaid) and hyperbolically to be underſtood to denote ſo great plenty of ſuch liquor, as ſhould without trouble or difficulty be had from the grapes or like fruits, which in abundance ſhould grow on thoſe mountains, as if the mountains themſelves did diſtil and iſſue it forth, not as though any ſhould think that they ſhould really and actually do ſo, a thing never ſeen or to be expected, a thing contrary to the nature of the creation. In like manner will the following words be underſtood, and the hills ſhall flow with milk, i. e. ſuch plenty of milk ſhall there be from the milk-cattle feeding on thoſe hills, as if they themſelves did iſſue forth fountains and ſtreams of milk, or were themſelves diſſolved into milk which ran down, for ſo the words תלכנה חלב telacnah chalab, would properly ſound, ſhall go or run milk; the act of running, which belongs to the milk, being as Kimchi notes, attributed to the hills themſelves, to ſet forth the wonderful plenty of that, שיוצא מהמרעה שיהיו בהם which proceeds from the paſture (or cattle feeding in the paſtures) which ſhall be on them, as Abarbinel explains it. Great abundance muſt that needs import of the things named, or of ſuch as are by them meant or under their names comprehended.

[e] Vat. edit. in 8vo and 4to. [f] Iſa. lix. 26. Cant. viii. 2. [g] As likewiſe in that place of Iſaiah. [h] Bib. Polyglot.

hended. For whether they are properly or literally to be underſtood, or otherwiſe, will be neceſſary to enquire, after we have viewed the following words alſo according to the letter, the next of which are, and all the rivers of Judah ſhall flow (or go, Marg.) with waters, of which Kimchi obſerves the like that he did of the former, viz. that the act of flowing, or going, which is of the water, is attributed to the place in which it runs, for אפיקי Aphike, which Ours interpret, rivers, ſeems according to him more properly here to ſignify the [i] channels, than the waters that run in them: ſtill here is expreſſion of great plenty of that which is named or meant. So alſo in the following words, and a fountain ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, and ſhall water (a fountain yielding ſuch plenty of water as to water) the Valley of Shittim. שטים Shittim is here by Ours taken as the proper name of a place, ſo it is by the Chaldee (written Sittin) and by the Syriack written ܣܛܝܡ Sotim) and ſo likewiſe by moſt modern Interpreters, and as ſo doth it occur in other places of Scripture, as Numb. xxv. 1. where it is ſaid that Iſrael abode in Shittim, and there committed whoredom with the daughters of Moab. Again, Joſh. ii. 1. and iii. 1. as alſo Mich. vi. 5. it is ſaid to have been in the land of Moab on the other ſide Jordan, and not far from it; ſo that by R. Saadias cited by Kimchi and Arbarbinel, it is taken for Jordan itſelf, againſt which Some except, becauſe dry places are ſaid to be watered, not rivers; (but perhaps by Jordan he might mean the country by Jordan.) The ſaying that it ſhall water, argues that the place was of itſelf dry, it being ſo far remote from Jeruſalem, that the fountain there iſſuing out of the houſe of the Lord muſt be a very plentiful ſtream, that ſhould ſend out ſo much water as to flow ſo far, and then water dry ground. R. Salomo alſo manifeſtly takes it for the proper name of that place mentioned, Numb. xxv. 1. ſaying that the words according to the literal ſound are, ſhall water the plain (or valley of Shittim) which do allegorically denote that it ſhall expiate the ſin of Peor.

But amongſt antient Interpreters there are, who do not ſo take it for a proper name, but appellatively, and as ſo tranſlate it, and that differently. The Greek LXX, though in thoſe other places of Numb. xxv. 1, &c. they take it as the name of a place, putting for it σατθαὶμ, Satteim, or σατθεῖν, Sattein, as Joſh. ii. 1. or σατθιεῖν, Sattiein, Joſh. iii. 1. yet here render it, τὸν χειμάῤῥεν τῶν χοίνων (or as Others χοινίων) which being rendred, torrentem funiculorum, the torrent of cords, Jerome would have that to denote ſuch meaſuring as the Egyptians numbred by the length of cords; but others by it underſtand juncos, bulruſhes, or ſome ſuch ſort of reeds, as the word alſo ſignifies, as Nazianzen in his 40th Oration, and [j] Nicetas in his Comment on it, who ſaith that the torrent, or valley here mentioned, is a place not far from Jeruſalem, aqua carens & juncos proferens, without water, bringing forth ruſhes or reeds. In which ſignification Cyril alſo takes it, viz. as a denomination χειμαῤῥους τινὸς, of a certain torrent or brook, by which grew many ruſhes, which he ſaith is ſaid to be the ſame that is called the brook Cedron (or of Cedais) mentioned John xviii. 1.

Theſe two interpretations of cords, and of ruſhes, however differing in ſound, are eaſily reconcileable, and may be looked on as a deſcription of one and the ſame place, in as much as the word χοῖνος ſignifies both a ruſh and alſo a cord, made of ruſhes, ſo that to ſay the brook of cords made of ruſhes, or of ruſhes of which ſuch cords are made, will be in effect the ſame thing. The Latin Interpreter of the Greek, though he here determine the word to the notion of cords, yet Micah. vi. 5. where it again occurs, leaves it ambiguous, rendring it Schœnis, (which we may almoſt think they put as a name of a place) in which place ſeems a manifeſt error in the printed Arabick (which ſeems in theſe Books of the Prophets done out of the Greek) there being in it put من جبال Men gebal, from the mountains, far different from the Greek; whereas here agreeable to it is read من حبال Men Hebal, from the cords, by an eaſy miſtake between the letter ح, and ج, betwixt which the difference conſiſts only in the adding of a point or omitting it. In that place Jerome notes alſo in his opinion to be an error in the Greek itſelf, which if it concern that place, may equally ſeem to concern this, viz. that whereas now is there read χοίνων, which by the Latin Interpreter is there rendred Schœnis, and here funiculorum, it was at firſt in the Greek rendred and written χίνων, which ſignifies lintiſk or maſtick trees, and by the error of the ſcribes turned into χοίνων, ropes. That would more agree with the Vulgar Latin, both taking it for the name of a tree, though of different kinds; for that ancient tranſlation, though in Micah taking it as a proper name, it is read de Setim, from Setim, yet here renders נחל השטים nachal haſhittim, torrentem ſpinarum, the torrent of thorns, as if the word ſhittim, ſignifies thorns: that Shittah is the name of a tree, we find Iſa. xli 19. and in other places is mention of Shittim wood, as a wood of eſpecial note, and therefore reckoned among the chiefeſt things, which the Iſraelites were to offer for making the tabernacle, Exod. xxv. 5. and of which things of greateſt eſteem therein were made, as the Ark, ver. 10. the ſtaves, ver. 13. the table, ver. 23. as likewiſe chap. xxvi. of the ſame Book is mention of boards of the wood ſo called, ver. 15. and of bars, ver. 26. and of pillars, ver. 32. and of the altar to burn incenſe upon, chap. xxx. 1. and ſo among the offerings, which were to be offered by the people for the tabernacle, is reckoned Shittim wood, Exod. xxxv. 7 and 24. and Deut. x. 3. it is ſaid that Moſes made an Ark of Shittim wood, in which he put the two tables of the Law, of all theſe places mentioned, only in the firſt, viz. that of Iſaiah, is the word as here rendred in that ancient Latin Verſion, ſpina, thorn, in the other the Hebrew word being being retained and written Setim, as if that were the known name of the tree of which that wood was; but by the uſes which in thoſe places that wood is ſaid to be put to, it is manifeſt that it cannot be thought meant an ordinary thorn; and ſo [m] Jerome himſelf therefore declares himſelf to think that it is not properly to be meant the thorn tree, but a tree ſo called becauſe it is like to the ſpina alba, or white thorn, viz. colore & foliis, in the colour and leaves, non magnitudine, not in bigneſs, as being a tree of ſuch great bigneſs that of it are cut very large boards, and that the wood thereof is, as very ſtrong, ſo exceeding light and beautiful, and withal ſuch as will not putrify and corrupt, and therefore by the LXX in the places out of the Law cited, rendred by ἄσηπτα imputribilia, wood that would not rot or putrify, which trees, he ſaith, grew not in any cultivated places, or in the Roman territories, but in the deſerts of Arabia. This he ſpeaks as of what he was an eye-witneſs to, and therefore Mr. Fuller thinks ought to be believed in the matter, yet [n] Kimchi ſaith it is a kind of the beſt ſort of cedar, and ſo Junius and Tremellius here render it, vallem cedrorum lectiſſimarum, the valley of the choiceſt cedars, as Iſa. xli. 19. They alſo ſo render שטה, which Ours render the Shittah-tree, by lectiſſimam cedrum, ſo diſtinguiſhing it from ארז Arez, the known common cedar there joined with it, as alſo in thoſe other places of Exodus and Deuteronomy before mentioned, ligna cedrorum lectiſſimarum, wood of the choiceſt cedars. Amongſt thoſe different acceptions of the word שטים Shittim, our Tranſlators chooſe to follow thoſe who take it for a proper name of a place, ſo called probably becauſe many trees ſo called [o] grow in or about it; though [p] Others think the trees there growing, and the wood thence brought, ſo called from the name of the valley where they did in abundance grow, [q] not the valley from them, but from ſome town there ſituated, or for ſome other reaſon. The word נחל nachal, here by Some rendred torrentem, by Others vallem, is by ſeveral examples manifeſtly proved to have both thoſe ſignifications, of a torrent and valley, ſome low place fit for water to run or be received in, בין יש בו מים בין אין בו מים, whether there be in it water or not, as Kimchi explains it; ſo that it may be by either of theſe indifferently rendred, as the place where it occurs requires, and ſhews to be moſt convenient. Here, as we have ſeen, it is by Some rendred one way, by Others the other, yet doth that which renders it by valley ſeem much more agreeable to the place: Some who follow the Vulgar, who renders it torrentem, think that word not to be reſtrained to its ſtrict and proper ſignification of a torrent, but to be more largly taken ſo as to denote a [s] valley or plain, like ſuch as brooks or torrents uſually run in, though there be no ſuch at preſent in them; in which larger notion the ſame word is obſerved to be uſed elſewhere alſo in that ancient Latin Verſion, as Gen. xxvi. 19. where it is ſaid that Iſaac's ſervants, foderunt in torrente, digged in the torrent, as thoſe of the Doway render it, noting in the margin, that it is, the channel where ſometimes a vehement ſtream runneth, ſometime none at all. And ſo 1 Sam. xv. 5. tetendit Saul inſidias ſuas in torrente, Saul laid ambuſhments in the torrent, which can ſignify no otherwiſe, than as it is by Others rendred, in the valley, & ſic in præſenti, ſaith Pet. a Figuiero, and ſo alſo in this preſent place, which Kimchi in his Dictionary cites as an example to prove that נחל nachal ſignifies a valley as well in which no water is, as a water-brook; if it had water in it, [t] there would be no need of its being watered.

[i] Kimchi העמקים שנגרים בהם המים [k] Pet. à Fig. [j] p. 1067.

What is ſaid, a fountain ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, and water the valley, ſeems to agree much with what is ſaid of thoſe holy waters, Ezek. xlvii. 1. &c. and thoſe living waters that are ſaid ſhall go out from Jeruſalem, Zech. xiv. 8. So obſerves R. Tanchum of it, הרא ממא ינאסב קול זכריה This is agreeable to what is ſaid in Zechariah, living waters ſhall go out from Jeruſalem, which is likewiſe the river mentioned by Ezekiel; and Mr. Lively thinks that for the right underſtanding of theſe words here, they ought to be compared with thoſe in thoſe places.

This being ſaid of the ſignification of the words, there remains to us queſtionable when and how what is here promiſed ſhould be made good and fulfilled, and whether what is here ſaid be literally or figuratively to be underſtood? Abarbinel obſerves, that Aben Ezra [u] ſaith only, שהיה וה משל, that the words here ſpoken are parabolical, or by way of ſimilitude, and that R. Salomo on the other hand ſaith, שהוא כפשוטו, that what is ſaid is to be underſtood according to its ſimple or literal meaning: And ſo doth Kimchi ſay, וזהוא כמשמעו, that this is to be underſtood as it ſounds; neither of them farther explaining what they think meant. Abarbinel himſelf gives a meaning according to either of theſe ways; according to that which will have the words literally underſtood, he thinks that here is a miracle promiſed, that whereas there was formerly great ſcarcity of waters in Jeruſalem, in ſo much that they uſed waters drawn out of wells, and put in pools and ciſterns, as it is ſaid in Iſaiah, The conduit of the upper pool, c. 7. 3. and c. 36. 2. he here mentions that in the time of ſalvation, that Jeruſalem might be in the earth a bleſſing intire in all things, and nothing ſhould be wanting in it, God ſhould [w] create a creation, ſo as that there ſhould be in it a fountain of living waters, the coming forth of which ſhould be under the houſe of the Lord, ſo that all the inhabitants of the world ſhould perceive and know, that the nature of that land was altered, and the hard rock, which was as dry as a ſtick, was by God turned into a fountain of water, and that this miracle ſhould be for the merits ſake of Jeruſalem.

[m] See him on his place, and on Iſa. xli. 19. [n] In Rad. [o] Schindler. Ribera. [p] Ferrar. Syr. Dictionary in אפיקים. [q] Non ab arbore illa, &c. ſed vel ab oppido, vel alia ratione ita dicta. Chriſt. à Caſtro. [r] And ſo in Rad. as alſo Abu Walid. [s] Pet. à Fig. [t] Id. [u] So indeed he ſaith at the beginning of the verſe. [w] Or make a new thing, Numb. xvi. 30.

Jeruſalem. This promiſe he ſaith is not to be wondred at, inaſmuch as other promiſes, greater than it, are here ſpoken of to us by the Prophet. This meaning he thinks the words, if literally underſtood, will require: but if היעוד הזה משל the expreſſions in which this promiſe is, be figurative, and by way of ſimilitude, which, ſaith he, is in my opinion, חיותר מתישב, the more ſolid and ſatisfactory, he then points at what [x] Iſaiah propheſied of, viz. that in the time of redemption, the mountain of the Lords houſe ſhould be eſtabliſhed on the top of the mountains, and many people ſhould go thither to receive his Law, and ſhould ſay, out of Sion ſhall go forth the Law, and the word of the Lord from Jeruſalem. For in as much as the Law and divine doctrines are compared to water, by reaſon of the likeneſs that is between them, therefore doth the Prophet in his promiſe that the divine truth (or true knowledge of God) ſhall go forth of Jeruſalem from the houſe of God into all the world, ſay, and a fountain ſhall come forth from the houſe of the Lord, and ſhall water the valley of Shittim, as if he ſhould ſay, the whole world, which is a valley of ſuch as err and decline from following the Lord; and according to this way Zechariah ſaith (c. 14. 8.) and it ſhall be in that day that living waters ſhall go out from Jeruſalem: half of them towards the former ſea, and half of them towards the hinder ſea: in ſummer and winter ſhall it be: For there alſo doth that expreſſion come after the threat of a great war, which ſhall be in the latter times, as it doth here, and is written after that promiſe: And the Lord ſhall be King over all the earth: and in that day ſhall there be one Lord, and his name one. This being the end of the fountain mentioned, and the neceſſity of it (or that for which it ſhould be neceſſary) and this is in truth a wonderfully excellent compariſon, and moſt apt and elegant expreſſion, that out of Jeruſalem, which was a dry land without water, ſhould go forth living waters which ſhould be poured out on the ſeas, to intimate that from Jeruſalem, which [y] was tributary, [z] burnt with fire and cut down from among men, ſhould go forth a Law, doctrine, and true belief, unto all the inhabitants of the world. Theſe expoſitions of Abarbinel I have at large ſet down in his words, becauſe I find them not ſo fully expreſſed in any other of the Jewiſh Expoſitors, that ſo we may compare them with ſuch as are by Chriſtians given; amongſt whom alſo we find Some who more adhere to a literal, Others to a figurative meaning of the words. Among them Grotius ſeems to take the literal, who having expounded theſe words, the rivers of Judah ſhall flow with water, that the people being freed from fear of enemies, and in ſecure peace ſhall cleanſe their ditches and water-courſes, ſo that the water ſhall have free paſſage in them, expounds this fountain that ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, and water the valley of Shittim, of an aqueduct, which he thinks the ſame which [a] Ezekiel deſcribes, which ſhall be drawn from the Temple to and beyond the mare mortuum, (or dead ſea.) But this expoſition of his ſeems to take to be deſcribed by the words a more ordinary matter than they ſeem to require, as is by Abarbinel noted, that ſomething extraordinary or miraculous is by them expreſſed and given to be expected. By them therefore more generally is this expreſſion looked on as a figurative deſcribing what great good things God will confer on the members of his Church. By the houſe of the Lord they take to be meant the Church of Chriſt; by the fountain that ſhall thence come forth [b] Some underſtand the font of baptiſm, that fountain opened to the houſe of David, and to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem [c] for ſin and for uncleanneſs, or ſeparation for (or from) uncleanneſs, Zech. xiii. 11. [d] Others fontem verbi Domini, the fountain of the word of God; both which we may well look on as underſtood, but I withal cannot but look on as comprehended under the word all other benefits and graces by God conferred on the members of his Church, taking by the fountain head to be meant [e] Chriſt himſelf, and by the waters from that fountain flowing, both God's holy ordinances, and all the good gifts and graces of his holy Spirit, and all his good benefits conducing to their happineſs, all things pertaining to grace and glory from Chriſt derived, and conferred on them in and through him; ſo as that the promiſe may belong to the whole eſtate of Chriſt's Church both militant and triumphant, aſſuring to them a plentiful ſupply of all good things pertaining to their real felicity in both. By what is ſaid that this fountain ſhall water the valley of Shittim, which was a place far diſtant from Jeruſalem, where the houſe of the Lord was, out of which it is ſaid it ſhould come forth, we may with Some obſerve to be noted in that regard the large extent of God's bleſſings and favours, viz. [f] Dei benedictionem longe lateque diffuſam iri, ita ut univerſam Eccleſiam perfundat, that the bleſſing of God ſhall be far and wide ſhed abroad, ſo as to water the whole Church, not now confined to the narrow compaſs of Jeruſalem, or the land of Iſrael, but conveyed to the moſt remote and barbarous nations by the preaching of the goſpel, the [g] ſound of which ſhould go forth into all the earth and the words thereof unto the ends of the world.

2. In another regard, that that place (the valley of Shittim) is looked on as a dry and barren place, apt only to bring forth thorns and ruſhes, may by the watering of it by that fountain which ſhall come forth of the houſe of the Lord, be looked on as denoted the efficaciouſneſs of the grace of God conveyed by the Goſpel, which ſhould make them, that were by nature barren and unfruitful, apt to bring forth good fruit. This efficaciouſneſs thereof do Others ſeem to look on as pointed at by the words, though other ways tranſlating them, as Junius and Tremellius, who tranſlating them, viz. ſhall water the valley of the moſt moſt choice cedars, note by that valley to be noted the Church, in qua juſti plantati creſcunt ut cedri lectiſſimi, in which the righteous being planted grow as moſt choice cedars, according as the compariſon is uſed. Pſal, xcii. 12. The righteous ſhall flouriſh like a palm-tree, he ſhall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

[x] Iſa. ii. 2. [y] למם. [z] Pſal. lxxx. 16. [a] Chap. xlvii. [b] See Merc. and Tarnov. [c] In expiationem peccati, Pagn. Pro ſeparatione ex immunditia. Jun. Trem. [d] Mercer. [e] Cyril. [f] Lively. [g] Rom. x. 18.

3. In regard that God's graces and bleſſings are compared to the continually running waters of a never failing fountain, will be underſtood both the plentiful communication and the conſtant and perpetual continuance of them to his ſervants. Waters that are conſtantly fed by a fountain are not ſo likely to fail as others, which have no ſuch conſtant ſupply. [h] Quod ſi alii fontes aliquando aruerint, hic nunquam areſcet, qui a domo Domini egreditur, But if other fountains do ſometimes dry up, yet will that which cometh out of the houſe of the Lord never be dried. And by that therefore may well be expreſſed that moſt perfect happineſs and fulneſs of joy, which in the life to come the bleſſed ſaints in the preſence, of God, drinking of the river [i] of his pleaſure and [k] by the Lamb lead unto living fountains of waters, ſhall perpetually without interruption enjoy. And that happy condition do [l] Several think here eſpecially pointed out, though to the bleſſings which the members of the Church militant even in this life alſo enjoy the words may be deſervedly applied.

All theſe meanings and conſiderations will the words ſuggeſt unto us, and may well comprehend them all; whichſoever of them ſhall be by any preferred, they are manifeſtly a promiſe of great and precious privileges to the people of God, which his and their enemies ſhall have no ſhare in. What different condition they ſhall be in he deſcribes in the following words.

19. Egypt ſhall be a deſolation, and Edom ſhall be a deſolate wilderneſs, for the violence againſt the children of Judah, becauſe they have ſhed innocent blood in their land.

We ſhall find amongſt Expoſitors both Jews and Chriſtians different opinions, as concerning the acception of the nations here mentioned; ſome taking them as particularly meant of thoſe that are properly by thoſe names known, others farther extending thoſe names ſo as to comprehend others, who did in that, which they appear here taxed of and threatened for, reſemble them. Among the Jews R. Salomo ſeems to take the names in their proper and literal ſignification, but without father explication of what is ſpoken concerning them, than that Egypt was formerly the cauſe [m] of the preſervation of Edom, and that now they are both joined in that vengeance which ſhall be taken on them. Aben Ezra likewiſe literally underſtanding thoſe people, ſaith that they were brought to diſolation in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, (and ſo this propheſy then fulfilled) and if it ſhould be objected that Egypt was then remaining, he ſeems to reſolve it by ſaying, that Egypt (or the chief city of it, as I ſuppoſe he means) was not that ancient former Egypt (or city.) But Abarbinel not approving this opinion of his, ſaith, that though the ſeat of the metropolis or chief city was changed, yet the nation was ſtill the ſame, and the people the poſterity of the ancient Egyptians; and ſo that is no proof that the fulfilling of the prophecy is not yet in due time to be expected. R. David Kimchi goes in another way, taking by the names Egypt and Edom not to be meant thoſe countries or people properly ſo called, but by them to be underſtood the Iſmaelites (or Mahometans) and the Romans, which two nations, ſaith he, have for theſe many years been prevalent, and ſhall ſo be עד עת הגאולה till the time of the Redemption. The Iſmaelites, he ſaith, are denoted by the name of Egypt, becauſe Hagar the mother of Iſmael was an Egyptian. The Roman Empire by Edom, becauſe that did moſt conſiſt of Edomites (as he fancies) and therefore though in it many other nations were mixed with them, as likewiſe ſuch a mixture was in the Empire of the Iſmaelites, yet the name of the major part was given to the whole. Cæſar, ſaith he, (the firſt of them he muſt mean) and ſo the Emperors in Rome after him: theſe two nations, ſaith he, did miſchief to the tribe of Judah and Benjamin, who were captives among them, and ſhed their blood as water in their lands. Edom which is the Empire of Rome, was it, ſaith he, that deſtroyed the ſecond Temple by Titus, and that ſhed their blood, and made them captives amongſt the nations, and that of this captivity of theirs is to be underſtood what is ſaid in this verſe, and therefore here is no mention made of any of the tribes but Judah, becauſe the ten tribes which the King of Aſſyria carried away captive, and who were never yet returned, were not under the power of theſe two nations. This is Kimchi's explication of theſe words at full; and Abarbinel ſeems to like well of it, although he himſelf in ſome things differ from it, as namely in that he will have Egypt particularly ſpoken of that people properly ſo called, and they here named becauſe their great wars above-mentioned ſhall be in the firſt place on them, inaſmuch as the Chriſtians in their going up to ſubdue the land of Iſrael ſhall deſtroy Egypt and ſmite it with a very great deſtruction, and ſhall take the land of Judah and Jeruſalem, which ſhould be then under the dominion of Egypt; for which cauſe, and upon which ſhall the people of the Eaſt and the North be raiſed up, to come and wage war with the Chriſtians, for revenging their brethren the Egyptians, and to take the holy land out of the hands of the Chriſtians, and then ſhall be a very great ruin of the kingdom of Edom, ſo that there ſhall be no remainder of them, ſo as hath not been done in other nations, &c. Theſe expoſitions of Kimchi and Abarbinel, ſeem [n] for ſeveral reaſons ſons both groundleſs and impertinent, but that which may ſuffice us, without farther examination, for rejecting them is, that they go upon a falſe principle of theirs, that the Meſſiah is not yet come, whoſe coming according to them theſe things are to forerun, and make way for his reſetling the Jews in a moſt flouriſhing ſtate above all nations. Which is ſo contrary to the truth of the Scripture as well of the old as new Teſtament, aſſuring his being long ſince come, that if we will have a true meaning of theſe words, we muſt ſeek for ſome other which will not contradict that article of our faith. We muſt ſee therefore what Chriſtians ſay of the meaning of them. Among them Grotius taking the names of Egypt and Edom in their proper ſignification, thinks what is threatned againſt Egypt made good in the ſpoiling thereof by [o] Antiochus, and what againſt Edom by the deſtruction of it by the [p] Maccabees. But others more generally take not theſe words as ſtrictly reſtrained to thoſe nations properly ſo called, but more largely to denote all others who are enemies to God's Church and people at any time, as the Egyptians and Edomites were to the Jews, then God's peculiar people, and by their being made deſolate underſtand that their condition ſhould be contrary to that happy condition of God's people in the former words deſcribed. Inſtead of thoſe good gifts and bleſſings promiſed to thoſe under the terms of the mountains diſtilling new wine, and the hills flowing with milk, and the rivers with waters, and the being continually watered with a fountain conſtantly coming forth of the houſe of the Lord, it is threatned to theſe their enemies, that they ſhould not at all be partakers, nor have any ſhare or part with them in what they enjoy, but while they flouriſh and proſper, ſhall be as deſolate as the moſt barren wilderneſs; as elſewhere it is threatned, that they that hate the righteous ſhall be deſolate, Pſal. xxxiv. 21. by which we cannot but underſtand that they ſhall be, as deſtitute of all good, ſo overwhelmed with all evil things. This different condition of God's children and his and their enemies, as it is in good meaſure made apparent in this life, ſo ſhall be much more in the world to come, and to that therefore are by [q] many theſe words looked on as having eſpecially reſpect. [r] Aſſeritur hujus promiſſionis veritas etiam in hoc ſæculo, quando Chriſtus in medio inimicorum ſuorum dominatur, ſuoſque inter quotidianas afflictiones protegit, exempla in hoſtes ſuos horrenda edit, plene tamen præſtabitur in cælis, &c, i. e. the truth of this promiſe is made good even in this world, whilſt Chriſt beareth rule in the midſt of his enemies, and protecteth his among their daily afflictions, and ſheweth forth fearful examples on his enemies, but it ſhall fully be performed in heaven [in the world to come] when his being placed out of all fear or danger, ſhall eternally reign with Chriſt, but his enemies ſhall be given up to perpetual deſtruction and perdition: [s] Another, that by their being threatned to be made deſolate, he means, æternæ damnationi eſſe addicendos, that they ſhall be condemned to eternal damnation: they ſhall be, ſaith One, [t] in deſerto perditionis, ſc. infernalis, a wilderneſs of deſtruction, viz. deſtruction in hell. The reaſon of their being threatned with ſuch deſolation is given in the next words, for the violence againſt the children of Judah, becauſe they have ſhed innocent blood in their land. The violence againſt the children of Judah; that appears plainly to be the meaning of the words מחמס, בני יהודה mechamas bene Jehudah, which literally ſounds, for the violence of the ſons of Judah, propter injuriam filiorum Judæ. The like conſtruction to which occurs Obadiah, ver. 10. מחמס אחיך יעקב mechamas achica yaacob, for the violence of thy brother Jacob, i. e. as Ours well tranſlate it, for thy violence againſt thy brother Jacob. The LXX. as likewiſe the Syriack and Arabick in their Tranſlations more preciſely following the letter (as ἐξ ἀδικιῶν υἱῶν Ἰούδα, ex iniquitatibus filiorum Judæ, from or for the wrongs of the children of Judah) leave the words more obſcure, though the meaning neceſſarily manifeſt itſelf. Concerning who are meant by the children of Judah is ſtill ſome difference. They who literally underſtand by Egypt and Edom thoſe people and places properly ſo called, here alſo will underſtand by the children of Judah particularly the inhabitants of that country properly known by that name; but they who ſo underſtand thoſe names as to comprehend more largely all the enemies of God's Church, do here by the ſons of Judah underſtand the [u] Church of God and the members thereof. Againſt which, however underſtood, the greatneſs of the violence of their enemies is farther expreſſed by ſaying, becauſe they have ſhed innocent blood in their land, ſuch it was as not only to ſpoil and rob them of their goods, which [x] Some by their violence in the former word take to be meant, but ſo far to proceed, as to the ſhedding of innocent blood in their land, the blood of thoſe who in any reſpect to them were innocent, and deſerved no ſuch cruel uſage at their hands. Some difference there is in rendring theſe words, though not to the cauſing any difference in the ſenſe, Some rendring them as ours do, quia, becauſe, &c. [y] Others & quod, &c. and becauſe, &c. Others [z] qui inſontem ſanguinem in terra ſua fuderint, which have ſhed innocent blood in their land. The vulgar Latin, & effuderunt, &c. and have ſhed, &c. [a] Others in quorum terra effuderunt ſanguinem innocentem, in whoſe land they have ſhed innocent blood. [b] Others quorum, &c. whoſe innocent blood, &c. Theſe, I ſay, make not much difference in the meaning; as to the former words, the chief difference will be in applying the affix in the laſt word בארצם in their land, to whoſe land it is to be referred, whether to the land of Egypt and Edom, [o] For which he cites, Dan. xi. 40. &c. ſee his notes there. [p] For which he cites Joſephus XII. 11. 12. and Iſa. LXIII. [q] See Lyr. [r] Gualter [s] See Veil. [t] Lyr, [u] i. e. in Eccleſiam Merc. in pios quoſvis Tarnov. [x] Pet. a Fig. [y] Pagn. Munſt. lxx. ſa. [z] The Chaldee. Caſtal. [a] Jun. Trem. See MS. Arab. [b] Vatab. his. edit. in 4to. and 8vo.

[h] Ribera. [i] Pſal. xxxvi. 6. [k] Rev. vii. 17. [l] Ribera. Chr. a Caſtro. [m] 1 Kings xi. 17, &c. [n] See Pet. a Figuiero's cenſure of Kimchi.

2

Edom, or of the Children of Judah; it ſeeming ſo doubtful to Kimchi, that he only ſaith it may be referred to either, but determins not the matter. Calvin ſaith it may be referred to either, if to the firſt, then to ſignify that they inhumanly murthered thoſe of them that betook themſelves into their land for refuge and protection; if to the ſecond, then to aggravate the crime, in that they polluted that land which God had conſecrated to himſelf, with unjuſt murthers. But this will ſeem to make the words particularly to be referred to the inhabitants of the land of Judah, and ſo not be in that larger ſenſe as it is by Others taken, to comprehend all the members of his Church in their own country, whatſoever it were, which will ſtill be a note of great and barbarous cruelty. Be it taken how any will as to the place, the ſhedding of innocent blood is ſuch an heinous ſin, as God will certainly avenge on ſuch as are guilty of it. In theſe words wherein God here threatneth ſo to do, is comprehended both what is comminatory, and what is conſolatory, according as reſpect ſhall be had to different perſons. Here is manifeſtly a threat to the enemies of God's people, who for their violence againſt them and cruelty towards them, though they now flouriſh and prevail over them, ſhall certainly be puniſhed with utter deſolation and deſtruction. There is together manifeſtly included matter of comfort of his people, in that their ſufferings for their adhereing to God are not an argument that they are neglected by God, but that their blood is precious in his ſight, and he will in due time revenge it on thoſe who have ſhed it and done violence to them, which will together neceſſarily include a repaying of good to them for the evils they have wrongfully ſuffered; and that for their being cut off from their ſhort fading enjoyments here, they ſhall be received into everlaſting habitations; which, though theſe words concerning eſpecially the doom of their enemies is only hinted here, we are given by the following words more fully to conceive.

20. But Judah ſhall dwell for ever, and Jeruſalem from generation to generation.

Contrary to the doom in the foregoing verſe denounced againſt thoſe comprehended under the names of Egypt and Edom, is promiſe of good here made to thoſe who are meant by Judah and Jeruſalem: Who are by thoſe former names, by Expoſitors of different ſorts and opinions underſtood, we have ſeen on thoſe words; who are meant by theſe we are for the like reaſon here to inquire, there being like variety of Interpretations between them, Some taking them as literally meant of the places properly ſo called, Others taking them figuratively in a larger acceptation; as meant not ſtrictly of them, but attributed to ſuch as are in ſuch regards as they of old were, peculiarly owned by God, as above all other places or perſons dear unto him, that ſo we may underſtand what by ſaying they ſhall dwell for ever, and from generation to generation, is here promiſed. This we ſhall make way for, by looking firſt on the words in order and according to the ſound of the letter. Judah ſhall dwell for ever, &c. By Judah, according to the known uſe of that name elſewhere in Scripture, may be underſtood that people or tribe deſcended from the Patriarch Judah, and bearing his name, inhabitants of that country from them ſo called, or that part of the country, which was by them poſſeſſed and inhabited, uſually known by the name of Judah: and ſo by Jeruſalem, either the city itſelf ſo called or the inhabitants of that city, as appears, as by ſeveral other places of Scripture, ſo by what is ſaid, Mat. iii. 5. Then went out to him all Jeruſalem and all Judea: of theſe it being here ſaid ישב Teſheb, if that verb be rendred, as it is by Ours in the Text, ſhall dwell, it will [c] ſeem to be underſtood of the people or inhabitants: if, ſhall abide, as by Many it is, it may indifferently be referred to either the people or the place. The Vulgar Latin refers it to the place changing the name into Judea, and rendring the verb paſſively, habitabitur, ſhall be dwelt in, as likewiſe the LXX before it. The ſenſe will be much the ſame which ſoever we follow, denoting that thoſe places ſhall perpetually (for ſo will import, for ever, and from generation to generation) remain habitable, and the race of the ancient inhabitants ſhall dwell in them. This will be the literal ſound of the words, according to which the Jews taking them, will have this to be a propheſy of a flouriſhing eſtate, to which Judah and Jeruſalem, now deſolate, ſhall hereafter be reſtored and perpetually be continued in, viz. בימות המשיח In the days of the Meſſiah, when the שכינה Shecinah, or majeſtatick preſence ſhall return thither, as Kimchi in his note on the next verſe ſpeaks, or a promiſe לעתיד לבוא for the time to come, by which God aſſures to the Iſraelitick nation, שלא תשוב עוד לכסלה ולא תגלה עוד בגלות אחר, that they ſhall no more afterwards return to folly, nor be led into any other captivity, (as Abarbinel on theſe words ſpeaks) but the kingdom of Judah and the houſe of David, to which ſhall be the dominion over all Iſrael and Jeruſalem, comprehending under that name all the cities of Iſrael, ſhall remain for ever בשובה ונחה וברבקוה האלהי [d] in returning and reſt, and in cleaving to God.

But this opinion of theirs is manifeſtly grounded on falſe principles and ſuppoſitions of theirs, viz. that the Meſſiah is not at all yet come, and that when he comes he ſhall eſtabliſh a flouriſhing temporal kingdom on them, the falſeneſs of which manifeſtly appears by comparing the prophecies concerning him and his kingdom in the Old Teſtament, and the hiſtory of him and his fulfilling of them in the New, the one directing us how what is ſaid of him was to be fulfilled, and the other how far it hath been fulfilled, and what remains yet, and how it is to be fulfilled, ſo that it is manfeſt that that he is both already come, and that what was to be expected from him in this world hath been already performed, and is in performing in ſuch manner as it ought to be, and that what is to be expected as not yet performed, belongs לעתיד לבוא leatid lebo (that we may make uſe of their language) in the future, i. e. to the world to come; and therefore if we will have the true meaning of theſe words, muſt we here alſo look for another meaning than what they give.

[c] So by the MS. Arab. تعمر and تعهد. [d] Iſa. xxx. 15.

Among Chriſtians Grotius ſeems to take it as a propheſy of ſuch a ſtate of the Jews, as was to be made good to them in their country, after the deſtruction of their enemies Egypt and Edom, and ſo hath been long ſince made good by that peaceable eſtate, which for ſeveral years they did enjoy in the interval between their return from the Babyloniſh captivity, and their deſtruction by the Romans. That no exception may be made againſt this from what is ſaid, they ſhall dwell or abide for ever, and from generation to generation, he thinks it ſufficient to interpret thoſe expreſſions, by per longum tempus in pace erit, ſhall be for a long time in peace, and per aliquot hominum ætates, for ſome ages of men: but ſure that ſeems to come ſhort of what is here ſaid, or muſt be meant by this high language. Others therefore [e] generally do think what is here promiſed not to have been yet ever fulfilled, and made good to the Jews in reſpect to their temporal ſtate, or to be expected ſo to be to Judah and Jeruſalem as properly and literally ſo called, but to be meant of the Church of God, borrowing the names of thoſe places, which anciently were the more peculiar ſeat of it, and that the promiſe here made will well agree, in reſpect to the militant, and (and that more properly) to the triumphant ſtate of it.

Not to trouble the reader with a particular enumeration of ſeveral Expoſitions tending to the ſame purpoſe, I ſuppoſe that, in which they concur, well expreſſed by Gualterus, whoſe words are (both in reſpect to the deſolation of God's enemies here threatned under the names of Egypt and Edom, and the good promiſes to his people under the names of Judah and Jeruſalem) Aſſeritur hujus promiſſionis veritas etiam in hoc ſæculo, quando Chriſtus in medio inimicorum ſuorum dominatur, ſuoſque inter quotidianas afflictiones protegit, & exempla in hoſtes ſuos horrenda edit: plene tamen præſtabitur in cœlis, quando extra omnem teli jactum conſtituti, cum Chriſto æternum regnabimus: The truth of this promiſe is made [f] good even in this world by Chriſt's ruling in the midſt of his enemies, and his protecting his amidſt their daily afflictions, and ſhewing terrible examples on his enemies; but it ſhall be fully performed in heaven, when being placed out of all fear of danger, we ſhall eternally reign with Chriſt. The perpetuity (ſaith he) here promiſed, ſufficiently ſheweth that this place ought to be underſtood not of the carnal Judah but the ſpiritual, viz. the Church; the nation of the Jews (carnal Judah) having been (long ſince) caſt out of the promiſed land, and loſt the form both of Church and Commonwealth. But as to the Church and the perpetual duration of it (Church militant here on earth) as long as the world ſhall laſt, Chriſt (when he was to withdraw his bodily preſence from them, and aſcend up to heaven) makes them this promiſe, Lo, I am with you alway even unto the end of the world, Mat. xxviii. 20. And that it ſhall never fail or be deſolate, appears by what is elſewhere ſaid, that at Chriſt's ſecond coming at the end of the world, there ſhall be ſuch of them ſerviving, as ſhall be tranſlated into the heavenly Jeruſalem, the Church triumphant in heaven, there to reign with him for ever, as Mat. xxiv. 31. where he ſaith that he ſhall ſend his angels, and they ſhall gather his elect from the four winds, from the one end of heaven to the other; and St. Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 51. tells of thoſe that being then alive ſhall be changed as well as others raiſed from the dead; and 1 Theſ. iv. 15, 17. of thoſe who being members of Chriſt's Church ſhall be alive (in this world) and remain unto the coming of the Lord, and ſhall then together with the dead be raiſed to life, be caught up into the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and ſo ſhall ever be with the Lord. So that in all reſpects to the utmoſt of the ſound and meaning of the words, for ever, and from generation to generation, as they denote perpetuity and eternity, will agree to the Church of Chriſt, and no other Judah and Jeruſalem.

This is the ſum of [g] his Expoſition, which we have more at large ſet down, becauſe it comprehends what is by moſt Chriſtians ſaid for giving of the meaning of this place, which to the ſame purpoſe is alſo briefly and perſpicuouſly given by Biſhop Hall, in his Paraphraſe of theſe words, thus; But the elect of God ſhall dwell for ever in his holy habitation, and after their tranſlation from the Church militant upon earth, ſhall reign everlaſtingly in the glory of heaven.

By what means God will declare his favour to, and care of his, beſides his pepetual preſervation of them, is farther ſhewed in the next words.

21. For I will cleanſe their blood that I have not cleanſed, for the Lord dwelleth in Zion.

Such variety and difference of Expoſitions is there of this verſe, as is not of any other in this Propheſy, or, we may ſay, is ſcarce in any other of the whole Scripture to be found. So that I know not how to do what may be more for the ſatisfaction of the Reader, than to give him a particular account of the chief of them which we find. The words in Hebrew are ונקיתי דמם לא-נקיתי, venikketi damam lo nikketi, which are literally rendred, & mundabo ſanguinem eorum, non mundavi, and I will cleanſe their blood I have not cleanſed: which words according to the different diſtinction diſtinction by way of conſtruction, and the different ſignification given to them by Expoſitors, and ſuch ſupplies which they make, ſeem to yield thoſe different meanings, which we are to give an account of. To begin with thoſe of the Jews: Rabbi Tanchum reckons up four, which they were thought capable of.

[e] See Chriſt. à Caſtro. [f] See alſo Danæus. [g] With which alſo may be compared that of Danæus.

1. So as to refer the affix in דמם damam, their blood, taken in its uſual ſignification of blood, to the Iſraelites, ſo as that the words ſhould ſound, ואם נקיתי דמם לא נקיתי, i. e. and or but if I ſhall cleanſe, I will not cleanſe from their blood, i. e. And although I ſhall cleanſe (or abſolve) their enemies from all other ſin, yet I will not abſolve them from their blood, viz. the Edomites and Egyptians before mentioned, that he will require from them (or avenge) on them, (viz. the blood of the Iſraelites ſhed by them) and not pardon it to them.

2. So as to refer the affix to the ſame (Iſraelites) but to take their blood in the ſignification of their ſin, as he takes it to be meant, Hoſ. xii. 14. and the verb נקיתי nikketi, twice repeated, which Ours render by the notion of cleanſing, to be in the firſt place in that notion of cleanſing, or making clean, as it is in thoſe words ונקתה ונורעה זרע (which Ours render) ſhe ſhall be free and conceive ſeed, Num. v. 28. ſo as to ſound, I will make them clean, or innocent from their ſin; but in the ſecond place in the ſignification of the word الاستيصال taking clean away, as he looks on it to ſignify in what is ſaid Jer. xxx. 11. ונקהך לא אנקך venakeh lo anakkecah, which Ours there render, and will not leave thee altogether unpuniſhed; but the Chaldee ושיצאה לא אשיצנך & perdendo te non perdam, I will not utterly deſtroy thee; and Pagnin. & ſuccidendo non ſuccidam te, and I will not utterly cut thee off, and ſome Others to like purpoſe: ſo he would have it here to ſignify, and the words to ſound, I will cleanſe away their ſin, and will not (in rigour) puniſh them to the utmoſt, to their deſtruction; ſo that there will be a ſupply of another affix in the laſt word required, as if it were ונקיתי דמם ולא אנקם, I will cleanſe (or take away) their blood, i. e. their ſin, and will not clean take away, or utterly deſtroy them.

3. So as to take again דמם damam, their blood, in the notion of دنبهم danbahom, their ſin, and to refer the affix ם m, their, to the enemies, and נקיתי in the firſt place to be in the ſignification of الاستيصال going to the root or, requiring to the uttermoſt; but in the ſecond place (wherein there is again to be ſupplied the affix, and נקיתי to be for אנקם) in the ſignification of cleanſimg, or, taking for clean and innocent, that ſo the meaning may be استاصل بطالبتهم بذنبهم ولا ابرئهم I will require to the uttermoſt puniſhment of them for their ſin, and will not clear them (or hold them guiltleſs.)

4. In the fourth place, he gives another Expoſition, which he ſaith ſeems to him more proper, and nearer to the words than any of the other, which is only by the ſupply of אשר aſher, which, often left out for brevity's ſake, as if he ſaid ונקיתי דמם אשר לא נקיתי, which (taking the word נקיתי nikketi in both places in the ſignification of [h] الاستيصال aleſtiſal (going to the root or uttermoſt) and refering the affix in דמם damam, their blood, to Judah and Jeruſalem, in the foregoing verſe mentioned, and looking on that word דמם damam, their blood, as ſignifying ديتهم diyatahom, the price of their blood, or mulct for their blood that was ſhed, as he ſaith it is taken in [i] אין לא רמים Ein lo Damim, Exod. xxii. 2. no price of blood ſhall be for him required, and רמים לו Damim lo, ibid. v. 3. there ſhall be blood for him) will give this meaning واستاصل طلب ديتهم التي لم استاصلها الي ذلك الوقت Waeſtaſelo talba diyatahom allati lam eſtaſelha ela dhaleca alwakt; And I will proceed to the uttermoſt, in requiring the price (or revenge) for their blood, which till that time I had not fully required.

Theſe four meanings he gives of theſe words known in his time, of which he (and I think deſervedly in reſpect of the plainneſs in the conſtruction) prefers the laſt. But the moſt known to us of the Jewiſh Expoſitors, R. Salomo Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and David Kimchi, follow the firſt without any account of the others, refering the word דמם their blood, to the latter clauſe, that the words ſo diſtinguiſhed may ſignify, Although I cleanſe (or acquit) thoſe nations from other ſins that they have committed, yet I will not cleanſe or acquit them from the blood of the Iſraelites. David Kimchi moſt largely among them thus expounds them, From their gold and ſilver which they have taken, I will cleanſe or acquit them, becauſe the Iſraelites ſhall take alſo as ſpoil from them the like in the time to come; but from the blood which they have ſpilt I will not clear them, but נפש תחת נפש ſoul ſhall be for ſoul (or life for life) either the ſoul or life of thoſe that ſhed that blood, or of their children after them, for if they ſhould give all the ſilver and gold in the world for the redemption of their ſouls, they ſhall not thereby be cleared from their blood (which they have ſhed.) Whilſt he with thoſe two Others before him thus refer their blood to the latter words, he obſerves the Chaldee to refer to the foregoing word, ונקיתי venekketi, and I will cleanſe, while he renders ודאתפרעית דמהון מן עממיא חיב אנא עתיד לאתפרע i.e. and whereas I have avenged their blood on the nations, I will again revenge them: but doth not give any farther explication or cenſure of the words. I wonder he did not ſeem to take notice of the particle לא lo, not, clean left out by him: the omiſſion of which, I ſuppoſe makes [k] Some to think his Interpretation not well to agree with the [h] This word from اصل root, ſeems to ſignify either to take away to the very root, clean to deſtroy, or to go to the very root, or to do the utmoſt in a thing. [i]. So Abu Walid in רם [k]. Mercer. Pet. à Fig.

the Hebrew, with which I think it may well be reconciled, and what he renders in affirmative words, to include that negative as to the ſenſe, leaving it out as to the words, while to ſay, I will again revenge them, is equivalent to ſay, I have not yet revenged as much as I mean to do.

Among thoſe alſo who in conſtruction refer the word דמם damam, to the preceding venikketi, is the Jewiſh Author of the Arabick Tranſlation out of the Hebrew, who renders the words, وابري من مطالبة دماهم الذي الي الان لم ابر And I will be clear, or clear me, from requiring their blood, from which I have not to this time been cleared: of which I ſuppoſe the meaning muſt be, that he will fully clear himſelf by fully requiring or revenging their blood, which he had not yet done. Abarbinel alſo having mentioned the Explication which we ſaw Kimchi and Others to follow, doth yet prefer another, in which Damam, their blood, is alſo refered to the foregoing verb, though making out the meaning in a different way from what we have ſeen Others to do, while he looks on the firſt words as interrogative, and thus explains the whole clauſe, האם נקיתי אני את חאומות מדם ישראל אשר שפכו על הארץ באמת לא נקיתי ולכן אפרע מהם i. e. Have I cleared (or cleanſed) the nations from the blood of Iſrael, which they have poured out upon the earth? In truth I have not cleanſed (them,) but (or and therefore) I will be revenged of them. That this way of ſo diſtinguiſhing the words, and placing them in conſtruction, as that דמם damam their blood, ſhould be governed by the preceding verb, is of all the rendrings we have the moſt antient, and that that verb, in the verſe twice put, was by ſome anciently taken in thoſe two places in different ſignifications, appears by the ancient Tranſlation that we have, viz. the Greek of the LXX, who thus render the words, καὶ ἐκζητήσω τὸ αἷμα αὐτῶν, καὶ ὃ μὴ ἀθῳώσω, and I will require, or avenge their blood, inultumque eſſe non patiar, and will not ſuffer it to be unrevenged.

This variety of Interpretations and Expoſitions of theſe words have we from the Jews, modern and ancient. If we look now to the Chriſtians, whether Tranſlators or Expoſitors, we ſhall find yet more, Some of them agreeing with Some of thoſe, which we have ſeen, Others differing from them all. As for Tranſlations, there is one [m] of good authority, though modern, who taketh the ſame way of diſtinction and conſtruction, as we have ſeen Kimchi and thoſe other Jews, which we mentioned with him, to do; he renders the words, mundabo quidem, ſed ſanguinem eorum non mundabo, I will cleanſe indeed, but their blood will I not cleanſe. Others more generally, whether ancient or modern, take as plainer the other way of conſtruction which we mentioned, referring the noun governed to the firſt clauſe, though as to the meaning that they give of the words ſo taken, much differing between themſelves. So the Syriack, rendring them, ואשפוך דמהון ולא אשפוך, And I will avenge their blood, and will not ſpare. The printed Arabick alſo following the Greek, وانتقم دمهم ولا اعفو, to the very ſame ſenſe. The Vulgar Latin, & mundabo ſanguinem eorum, quem non mundaveram, And I will cleanſe their blood that I had not cleanſed: which we ſee Ours agree with, only differing in that they render the conjunction ו ve by for, which that, according to its moſt uſual ſignification, renders by and; which likewiſe the Italian Verſion of Diodati doing, exactly agrees with it. The Tigurian Latin likewiſe, only inſtead of quem, which, ſupplying, quos, whom, ſo refering to the perſons what that refers to the blood.

Neither of theſe is indeed expreſſed in the Hebrew, and ſo are by [n] Some both left out in the Tranſlation, they putting only mundabo ſanguinem eorum, non mundavi; I will cleanſe their blood I have not cleanſed: but then if they go to give the meaning, one of them will be neceſſarily underſtood, either, which blood, or, whoſe blood, or, thoſe whom, as Caſtalio ſupplies it by quos, viz. the blood of them whom, &c. as he renders it, eorumque ſanguinem expiabo, quos non expiavero, and I will expiate the blood of them whom I ſhall as yet not have expiated; in giving the meaning of this, (viz. whichſoever of theſe be ſupplied) will not make great difference. Very great difference indeed there is betwixt Expoſitors, but that is from other occaſions, viz. the underſtanding of the words, blood, and cleanſing, and what is meant by them, and who are the perſons ſpoken of. From their diſagreement, as to theſe things, have we variety of Expoſitions, as chief of which we look on theſe firſt, that ſome taking the word נקה nikkeh in its ordinary ſignification of cleanſing, or purging; and blood, in a large notion, as comprehending all heinous ſins (as being like blood in its quality of polluting, or deſerving death, or that the blood of the ſinner ſhould be ſhed) make the meaning to be, that God promiſeth fully to cleanſe his Church, his elect ones, from the pollution of thoſe ſins, which hitherto they have been defiled with. This do the Authors of the Geneva Engliſh Tranſlation, which in this place altogether agrees with our newer, give in their note for the underſtanding of it, which is, he hath ſuffered his Church hitherto to lye in their filthineſs, but now he promiſeth to cleanſe them and make them pure unto him. With them doth Biſhop Hall alſo agree in his Paraphraſe, For I will cleanſe and purge away the ſins of thoſe mine elect, which I had not before done away, and will deliver the choſen of the Gentiles from thoſe iniquities wherewith they were polluted. Diodati likewiſe in his note on his Italian Tranſlation: I will perfectly ſanctify my Church from all imperfections and ſpots of ſin, which yet remained in her in this world. The ſame meaning of the words do ſeveral among Latin Expoſitors give, yet with difference between them concerning the time when this promiſe ſhould be made good, ſome looking on it as belonging to the time of the preaching of the Goſpel, wherein God would cleanſe, in Evangelio, under the Goſpel, quos in lege peccantes immundos reliquerat, thoſe whom ſinning under the Law he had left uncleanſed, as Jerome ſpeaks, when as [o] Others more largely give the meaning, that he would make clean the Gentiles received into his Sion, the Church which was before profane, [p] dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, without Chriſt, aliens from the common-wealth of Iſrael, ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, having no hope, or without God in the world, making them nigh by the blood of Chriſt which cleanſeth from all ſin; and purifying their hearts by faith (Acts xv. 9.) yet (as [q] Others add) the Jews alſo whom the law, with all its ceremonies, and rites of purification, could not ſo cleanſe but that they were ſtill [r] concluded under ſin; that the promiſe by faith of Jeſus Chriſt might be given to them, by believing in whom only, to them as well as to the Gentiles, is [s] opened a fountain for ſin and uncleanneſs, viz. for cleanſing them from their ſin. To both, both having need of it, is it only in Chriſt opened, and by faith in him the virtue of it made effectual to them, even in this life; yet becauſe they are not perfectly cleanſed, do Some which we have already ſeen, and ſeveral Others, rather underſtand this promiſe of what ſhall be made good to faithful believers in the other life, when having put off mortality together with the frailties and corruptions thereof, they ſhall be tranſlated into that heavenly Jeruſalem, into which [t] nothing that is defiled, none that is not cleanſed from his ſins, ſhall enter.

I when

[l]. Or as ſome Copies ἐκδικήσω. [m]. Pagnin. [n] Munſt. Calv.

If this way of interpreting the words be taken, viz. that by cleanſing their blood be meant the making them clean from their ſins, I ſuppoſe both of theſe may be underſtood, viz. both that purity which in this life here he will confer upon them, and that alſo with which in the life to come he will perfect them; both being his free gift, for receiving which they are only by faith in Chriſt made capable, but the [u] firſt conſiſting in the pardon of ſin to them repenting of it, the other in an abſolute aboliſhing it in them, and fully freeing them from it, in which perfect meaſure, though in this life he doth not fully cleanſe them from their ſins, though remitted to them, he will then do it, and make them perfectly clean, both pardoning thoſe their greateſt ſins, for their heinouſneſs called blood, and which might ſeem impardonable (as [x] Some think the words to imply) and alſo ſo ſanctifying them, that they ſhall no more commit any, but live pure from all. Theſe ways of expounding do the words afford, the verb being taken in the ſignification of cleanſing, and that being in the ordinary notion of it underſtood, and the noun blood being looked on as comprehending any heinous ſins: Not much differently from theſe, as to the ſignification of the words, doth Petrus a Figuero ſeem to render, when he propoſeth to be conſidered whether the meaning may not be, that the Jews toward the end of the world on their repentance, and turning to Chriſt, ſhall be cleanſed from the guilt of his blood which they pulled on themſelves, ſaying, His blood be upon us, &c. and do ſuffer for hitherto, and ſhall ſuffer for, till ſuch of them as then live, ſhall then upon their turning to him, be cleanſed from it. But, 2. The verb being taken by Others in a different ſignification, viz. of avenging, or revenging, and the noun blood, in its more ſtrict and proper meaning, will neceſſarily give another meaning, which is by Them taken, viz. [y] that the innocent blood of his elect people that had been ſhed by their enemies, which he had not yet revenged, he would yet, in his appointed time, revenge. This Expoſition the Greek, Syriack, and Arabick, as we have ſeen, direct to; Grotius taking it, ſaith that the verb נקה nikke, doth in this place ſignify ulciſci, to revenge; and ſaith that the ſenſe is very well expreſſed by the Chaldee, who, he ſaith, thus paraphraſeth on the words, ſi quis adhuc eſſet Judæorum ſanguis effuſus, quem ultus nondum fuero, etiam hunc ulciſcar, If there ſhall be any blood of the Jews ſhed, which I have not yet revenged, I will avenge this alſo. This though we may grant to be the meaning of the Chaldee, yet in giving his words, I know not what reading or copy he followed; none that I find ſo reading as he doth, but ſo as we have above given an account of. And this he thinks made good on the Ammonites and Moabites. But in this his Expoſition he ſeems too much to limit the words, in referring the blood ſhed only to that of the Jews, and thoſe on whom it ſhould be revenged, to the Ammonites and Moabites. We may ſuppoſe (if this way of expoſition be taken) that the blood is to be underſtood of the blood of God's people, wrongfully ſhed, and the perſons on whom for ſhedding it, vengeance ſhall be executed, of all the bloody enemies and perſecutors of God's Church: which Expoſition will be juſtified by that which we have ſeen of the foregoing verſe, wherein Egypt and Edom are taxed for the violence againſt the children of Judah, and their ſhedding innocent blood in their land; and illuſtrated by what we read, Rev. vi. 9, 10. where the ſouls of them that were ſlain for the word of God, and for the teſtimony which they held, are ſaid to cry with a loud voice, ſaying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, doſt thou not avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Yet here there is another by [z] Such as had, no doubt, conſidered this, prefered, who take by cleanſing here to be meant, manifeſting and declaring to be clean, and ſo the words to import, that he will then at the laſt judgment, wherein the truth in all things ſhall be made manifeſt, declare the blood of his people adhering to him and his truth, which in this world had been ſhed (and by their enemies thought juſtly and deſervedly, as of guilty perſons, ſo to have been) to have indeed indeed been innocent, by abſolving them from eternal deſtruction, to which he ſhall then adjudge their enemies for ſhedding of it. Theſe we look on as chief Expoſitions given of theſe words, and of them the two laſt ſeem moſt agreeable to the words and place. The two laſt, I ſay, becauſe as to the words they ſeem much different, yet as to the matter of ſuch expreſſed to be done, they ſeem coincident, and the one to require or infer the other, God avenging the blood of his Saints, being a manifeſt declaring of them to be clear and innocent; and there being no other way of declaring them ſo to have been, than by adjudging thoſe who had ſhed it, for that their ſin, to juſt puniſhment.

[o] Jun. Trem. [p] Eph. ii. 12. [q] Tarnov. Riber. Danæus. [r] Gal. iii. 22. [s] Zech. xiii. 1. [t] Rev. xxi. 27. [u] See Piſcator. [x] Munſter. and ſee Chriſt. à Caſtro. [y] Chriſt. à Caſtr. [z] Lyra, Mercer. Druſ. Lively.

According to all, here is a conſolatory promiſe to God's faithful people, of the certain performance of which, if not fully in this preſent world, yet in the next at the laſt judgment, the following words give aſſurance. For, ſaith he, The Lord dwelleth in Zion, his dwelling is Zion, i. e. his Church, his elect, which by that name may be well meant, and underſtood, as R. Tanchum explains it, دوام العناية بها وظهور نور السكينة فيها, the continuance of his providence over it, and the manifeſtation of his majeſtatick preſence in it. And certainly where they are, can be nothing hurtful to any remaining, nothing conducing to the good and happineſs of inhabitants thereof wanting. His preſence will neceſſarily diſpel all evil, and bring with it all good to them: as an aſſurance to them of what good he promiſeth to his, doth this rendring of our Tranſlators in rendring ו ve by, for, give us (as we ſaid) to underſtand thoſe words, and I ſuppoſe they do in ſo doing give us the right, and moſt proper meaning of them, though, for what I can find, that rendring be peculiar to them; they themſelves give another, in different words I I mean, though in ſenſe it will appear the ſame, viz. even I the Lord that dwelleth in Zion, for what doth that particle of emphaſis, even I, import other than that that, which he ſaith ſhall certainly be done, for, or becauſe he that ſaith it is the Lord that dwelleth in Zion.

It is generally by Others rendred by, and, the moſt uſual ſignification of it in Hebrew, but as in that it is often uſed for, nam, for, ſo I ſuppoſe, &, and, by which it is rendred, to be taken in the ſame ſenſe, as giving a reaſon of the truth and certainty of what is ſaid, and not as a meer copulative connecting what follows with what goes before. I know not who ſo make it, except Junius and Tremellius in their Verſion; but then for making the meaning they ſupply before it Ego, I, [a] rendring ego & Jehovah habitans Tzijone, I, and Jehovah (or the Lord) who dwelleth in Zion. So by, ego, which they ſupply underſtanding God the Father, and by Jehovah, God the Son, as in a [b] Note they explain their ſenſe. Which as to the matter it is a truth, and would likewiſe give aſſurance of the promiſed good, yet is a forcing of the words by adding to them, and the other literal Tranſlations ſeem more plain and ſimple. And that in the Text of our Tranſlation may well direct us in making out the meaning of them all, in the way which in the firſt place we gave, ſo as to look on them as a reaſon to aſcertain them, of the which the foregoing words give promiſe and expectation of. And as ſo, viz. as giving aſſurance of that promiſe, doth the Chaldee Paraphraſt appear to look on that particle, while inſtead of it he puts אמר amar, ait, ſaith, rendring, ſaith the Lord who hath placed (or made to dwell) his majeſty in Sion. What he, that [c] is, Jehovah, the Lord infinite in power, of eternal being, and giving neceſſary being to all his purpoſes and promiſes in their due time, hath made to thoſe whom he owns for his, and to whom he vouchſafes peculiar ſigns of his preſence and favour, cannot but be certainly made good, that will the ſaying, that the Lord who hath fixed the habitation of his Majeſty in peculiar manner in Sion, give certain aſſurance of to the members and inhabitants of that place. And as in ſuch relation to thoſe here ſpoken of doth he deſcribe himſelf, viz. he that is every where preſent, and whoſe majeſty filleth both heaven and earth, as yet in a peculiar manner, vouchſafing to dwell among them calling himſelf שכן בציון, he that dwelleth in, or the inhabiter of Sion.

The very ſame words occur in ver. 17. where we have ſpoken of them what might concern that place; that which we ſhall here add is, that the word שכן ſhocen, being the participle, and properly ſignifying habitans, dwelling, is applicable either to the preſent, preter, or future tenſe, ſo as to import either, which doth dwell, or, which hath dwelt, or, which ſhall dwell, and accordingly is by [d] Some rendred habitat, doth dwell, by [e] Others, ſhall dwell. If there be any difference in the ſenſe between Theſe, it muſt be diſcerned by the different underſtanding of the place, where it is ſaid he doth or ſhall dwell, viz. Zion. That we know is differently taken, either for the place properly ſo called, where the temple of old ſtood, or for the Church of God, and that again either militant or triumphant, of the one of which it is by Some underſtood, by Others of the other. For the place ſo properly called, and by that name literally underſtood, Kimchi, as I ſuppoſe all the Jews, taking it, ſo looks on the word as to refer not only to God's dwelling there at that preſent, when theſe words were ſpoken by the Prophet, but to his return thither, when after its deſolation it ſhould be again reſtored to its glory. For ſo found his words, and the Lord dwelling in Sion (שכן בציון ſhocen Betzion) and ſo alſo for ever, for for ever ſhall be שכינתו the habitation of his Majeſty in Zion, אחר שתשוב שם, after that it ſhall return thither in the days of the Meſſiah. R. Tanchum alſo takes it as importing ing the future, looking on it as to be ſupplied by the verb ויהיה, and ſhall be, that the words may ſound as if it were written ויהיה שוכן יוי בציון, and the Lord ſhall be inhabiting (or ſhall dwell) in Zion. But Abarbinel looks on it as rather denoting the preter tenſe, and what was or had been, taking the words in a clean different meaning, viz. not as a promiſe of what good God would for the future do, but as a narrative of what he had formerly done, and looking on them as a reaſon for which he would take vengeance on their enemies, viz. becauſe they ſhould deſtroy and burn up that holy place in which was his dwelling and his houſe.

[a] Tarnovius follows them in this rendring. [b] The note is, Verba ſunt Dei Patris loquentis Deo filio, Jehova qui manet in nobis & nos in illo, & in quo Pater nos purgat ut feramus fructum. [c] Of the name, ſee on Hoſea p. 650. [d] Pag. Tig. Munſt. &c. [e] LXX. printed Arab. Piſcator. Diodati and Caſtal.

Among Chriſtians alſo Grotius appears to underſtand Sion of that place properly and literally ſo called, while he gives for the meaning of the words, cultus Dei manebit Hieroſolymis, The worſhip of God ſhall remain or continue in Jeruſalem. But that then cannot be underſtood of longer continuance than that of Jeruſalem itſelf, and the Temple in which he there with ſignal manifeſtation of his preſence dwelt, and to which his worſhip was then reſtrained. And our Saviour Chriſt, John iv. 21. telleth the Samaritan woman, The hour cometh, when ye ſhall no longer worſhip the Father at Jeruſalem, yea, ver. 23. that the hour then was. Calvin alſo ſeems to underſtand this of the earthly Sion, looking on the words as a minding the Jews of God's favour to them, according to his covenant made in their favour with them, in that he choſe for an habitation among them, Sion (an houſe to himſelf in Mount Sion.) But it is more generally looked on as an aſſertion of God's perpetual dwelling with them ſpoken of, in that place of his reſiding called Sion, which being not to be affirmed of that Mount Sion at Jeruſalem properly ſo called, is by them underſtood of the Church, to which that name is manifeſtly elſewhere alſo attributed, [f] as, Heb. xii. 22. Rev. xiv. 1. and the Church being diſtinguiſhed into that militant (as 'tis called) on earth, and that triumphant in heaven, to both of them are the words here applicable, it being truly to be ſaid of both, that the Lord dwelleth in them, and that perpetually. Of the firſt will be verified what our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world, Mat. xxviii. 20. and of them of whom it conſiſts (ſaith St. Paul) that they are of the houſhold of God, Eph. ii. 19. that they are an holy Temple in the Lord, in whom they are builded together for an habitation of God through the ſpirit, ver, 21, 22. Of the ſecond there is no doubt both that he doth and would there dwell and manifeſt his glorious preſence for ever. Of this therefore do Many more eſpecially underſtand the words; and as ſo underſtood doth Biſhop Hall paraphraſe them, And the number of the elect being fully made up, the Lord ſhall dwell everlaſtingly with them in his heavenly Zion. Dr. Stokes ſeems to take in both in his paraphraſe, which is, And thus will God ever abide with his Church, and preſerve his ſervants in their greateſt dangers, or reward them with that which ſhall exceed a preſent delivery, and be a ſufficient vindication of their virtue and innocence. In any of theſe ways the words, as we ſaid, are an aſſurance that what good he hath promiſed to his Church, and the members thereof, and whatſoever may conduce to their happineſs, ſhall certainly be made good to them, both from the conſideration of what he is that hath promiſed, viz. יהוה Jehovah, which name being proper to him alone (to the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt) not communicable to any other, [g] denotes as his being in himſelf, ſo his giving (as we ſaid) neceſſary being to his word and promiſes; and ſo alſo from the conſideration of what relation he owneth them in to himſelf, in ſaying, that he dwelleth (or will dwell) in Sion:. Which imports his perpetual preſence with the inhabitants and members thereof, which is equivalent to a promiſe of making them fully and eternally happy; For in his preſence is fulneſs of joy, and at his right hand are pleaſures for evermore. Pſal. xvi. 12. For which beautiful fruition of his preſence, he of his infinite mercy prepare us, and make us in due time partakers of it, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, to whom with the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, three Perſons and that only Lord, be all honour and glory now and for ever. Amen.

[f] See Ainſworth on Pſal. ii. [g] See Ainſworth on Gen. ii. 4. and Exod. vi. 3.

A TABLE of Things or Matters illuſtrated in this Commentary.

A.

Æ Gypt and Edom in the prophets ſometime taken to denote in general any enemies of God's Church Pag. 355

B.

Blood and fire, what meant by them 308
Blood ſometime taken to denote any heinous ſins 360

C.

Calling on the name of the Lord, what it implies 312
The Lord's calling, what it implies 315
Chaſtiſements of love, what 279
Corn wine and oil the chief ſupport of mens life 231

D.

Day of the Lord, what it ſignifies 239,257,310
Darkneſs and light, what meant by them 257
Dreams appropriated to old men, Viſions to young 304

F.

Famines ſometimes mentioned in Scripture only for the illuſtrating ſome other thing that was then done 217
Fire uſed to denote any deſtructive thing 253
All Fleſh, what it ſignifies 302

G.

Græcians called Javanim from Javan 329
Gog and Magog, who meant by them 310
Gird yourſelves, what it implies 258
God's being in the midſt of any people, what it denotes 299

H.

Holineſs in the abſtract when ſpoken of any thing denotes the higheſt degree of holineſs 348

I.

Jehovah, the ſignification of that name 252
Joel, the time of his living and prophecying uncertain 213
Iſrael, a general name for God's people. 322, 347
Judgment often deferred till the iniquities of a people be full 339

L.

Land mourneth, how to be underſtood 229
Locuſts, ſeveral ſorts 215
Whether to be underſtood literally or not 216
Their ſpittle poiſon 233
Locuſts called God's army by Mahomet 297

N.

Near at hand may be ſaid in reſpect of God of things which to us ſeem afar off 339

P.

Paſſions and affections, how attributed to God 286
Pouring out of the ſpirit, what it denotes 306
Præter tenſe in propheſies often us'd in the ſignification of the future 218, 273

R.

Rain, former and latter 293
Rending the heart, what 276
Repent, how ſpoken of God ibid.

S.

Selling, what it implies 330
Shedding innocent blood a great crime 360

T.

Temple, its deſcription 283
What wanting under the ſecond which the firſt had 279
Threſhing inſtruments of what ſorts uſed in the Eaſt 342
Trumpets, ſeveral occaſions of uſing them among the Jews 256

Valley of Jehoſhaphat 319
Its ſeveral names 333
Valley of Shittim 352
Valley of Deciſion, why ſo called 341
Voice of God 345

Z.

Zion and Jeruſalem ſometime uſed to denote in general God's Church 313
Sometime heaven 345

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM